with Duplicate, and in many cases Triplicate, Classification under one General Alphabet, of every Book, instead of, as hitherto, Abbreviated Titles, consequently

The Bulk of the Catalogue is increased by over 80 Pages,

while the price (5s. net) remains the same.

It now contains over 7,000 Titles of New Books and New Editions, and over 6,000 duplicate Titles, forming the Index in one continuous alphabet.

 SPECIAL NOTE.—This is the ONLY CATALOGUE which in a Continuous Series for Sixty Years has recorded the Titles, Size, Price, and Date of Books published during that period. The Volumes in the aggregate embrace over 300,000 Titles, with corresponding Indices. Authors and Publishers of Works of a local character, or such as are not likely to find their way into the usual Trade Channels, will oblige by sending the Title, with Size, Pages, and Price thereof, direct to the Publishers, for entry in the 'PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR' and the 'ANNUAL CATALOGUE.'

NOW READY, price 3d.; or 3s. per annum, post free.

The JANUARY MONTHLY PART of

THE ENGLISH CATALOGUE OF BOOKS FOR 1897.

Giving FULL TITLES, classified under Author and Subject in one strict Alphabet, with particulars of the Size, Price, and Name of Publisher, of the Books issued in Great Britain and Ireland during the Month of January.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

DOD'S PEERAGE, BARONETAGE, and KNIGHTAGE of the UNITED KINGDOM for 1897. Fifty-seventh Year. The Cheapest and Handiest Book of Reference. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt edges, 10s. 6d.

The RUINED CITIES of CEYLON: being a Description of Anuradhapura and Polonaruwa. By HENRY W. CAVE, M.A., Queen's College, Oxford. Illustrated with 50 Full-Page Woodburygravures, from Photographs taken by the Author. 1 vol. small 4to. Roxburghe, gilt top, 38s. net.

SHORT STUDIES in PHYSICAL SCIENCE: Mineralogy, Chemistry, and Physics. By VAUGHAN CORNISH, M.Sc., Author of 'Practical Proofs of Chemical Laws.' With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

HEALTH and CONDITION in the ACTIVE and the SEDENTARY. By N. E. YORKE-DAVIES, Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians of London, M.R.C.S., Author of 'Foods for the Fat.' Fourth Edition (Sixth Thousand). 3s. 6d.

"Those who desire a long and healthy life will perhaps find their best means of attaining it in the study and observance of such rules as are laid down here.....The book is a rational and practical guide to 'Health and Condition.'" Morning Post.

NOW READY, PRICE ONE SHILLING.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

For FEBRUARY.

Contents.

ROWENA and REBECCA. Frontispiece. Drawn by E. A. Abbey. Scenes from the Great Novels. II.
A GREAT HOTEL: the Conduct of Great Businesses. Second Paper. By Jesse Lynch Williams. Illustrated.
SOLDIERS of FORTUNE. Chaps. 3, 4. By Richard Harding Davis. Illustrated.
The QUEST. By H. C. Bunner.
LONDON as SEEN by C. D. GIBSON. I. London Streets. Written and illustrated by Mr. Gibson.
PIAL AZON. By C. Grant La Farge.
GIUSEPPE SEGANTINI. Illustrated by Seven Reproductions from the Artist's Paintings. By Alfredo Melani.
The CITY MAGISTRATES' COURTS. With Sketches. By Robert C. Cornell, Magistrate, New York City.
The LAST PLANTAGENET. By Henry Cabot Lodge.
&c. &c. &c.

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Ltd.
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

FRANK BARRETT'S New Novel, A MISSING WITNESS, is now ready. With 8 Illustrations by W. H. MARGETSON. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

GEORGE R. SIMS'S Novel, ROGUES and VAGABONDS, is now ready in a NEW EDITION. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Mrs. HUNGERFORD'S New Volume of Stories, An ANXIOUS MOMENT, is now ready at all Booksellers'. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Teems with the same delightful qualities that have won for her previous volumes the warm admiration of pleasure-loving people."—Morning Leader.

"A slight, graceful plot, a few pleasant characters, some light and airy dialogue, and a satisfactory ending.....Bright and pleasant—the very thing to wile away an idle hour. These characteristics are well marked in Mrs. Hungerford's latest volume."—St. James's Gazette.

OTHER NOVELS BY MRS. HUNGERFORD ARE AS FOLLOWS:—

Post 8vo. illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

A MAIDEN ALL FORLORN.
MARVEL.
IN DURANCE VILE.
A MODERN CIRCE.
A MENTAL STRUGGLE.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo. illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

LADY VERNER'S FLIGHT. | THE RED-HOUSE MYSTERY.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

The THREE GRACES. With 6 Illustrations.
The PROFESSOR'S EXPERIMENT.
NORA CREINA.

Mrs. B. M. CROKER'S New Novel, BEYOND the PALE: an Irish Romance, is now ready at all Booksellers'. Crown 8vo. buckram, 6s.

"The Irish people, from peasant to patrician, in the story are all natural and fresh—which is as much as to say that the book is charming.....It will both please its readers and add to the reputation of its author."—Scotsman.

Mr. G. A. HENTY'S New Novel, The QUEEN'S CUP, is now ready in 3 vols. at every Circulating Library.

"A healthy and vigorous story of adventure, full of fighting and cruising, with a good dash of love-making thrown in, is a gift which one can always reckon upon from Mr. G. A. Henty. 'The Queen's Cup' thoroughly fulfils the description."—Scotsman.

WILLIAM WESTALL'S New Novel, WITH the RED EAGLE: a Romance of the Tyrol, is now ready at all Booksellers'. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s.

"A fine historical romance."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Full of exciting incidents.....It is a book that does the reader good, for it is sensational without being the least improbable, and those who take it up are hardly likely to lay it down again until the last line is reached."—Lloyd's News.

"One seldom comes upon a more successful or satisfactory essay in the department of historical romance."—Scotsman.

"It never lags or fails to entertain; is as full of hairbreadth escapes and perils by flood and field as the most jaded of romance-readers could desire."—Manchester Times.

"Mr. Westall made a choice singularly happy when he selected Tyrol as the scene of his new tale, and Hofer and his companions as the heroes of it.....We have read the story with great interest, and feel sure that no one who likes the stirring adventures of brave men will find one page of it dull."—Glasgow Herald.

CYNTHIA: a Daughter of the Philistines. By Leonard MERRICK, Author of 'Violet Moses,' &c. 2 vols. 10s. net; and at Smith's and Mudie's Libraries.

"The story of a novelist by a novelist is likely to prove interesting, because there must inevitably be something real and characteristic in it, and here we have that interest developed by genuine ability, humour, a good style, and a clever plot."—World.

The NARRATIVE of CAPTAIN COIGNET, Soldier of the Empire, 1776–1850. With 100 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"This is a long book, but every page of it is worth reading.....Although merely the literal record of a veteran soldier's experiences, the book is as fascinating as a romance." Daily Mail.

"It abounds in life and diversion, and as such we commend it to readers who like books that live."—British Review.

MRS. TREGASKISS: a Novel of Anglo-Australian Life. By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED. With 8 Illustrations by Robert Sauber. A New Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

MY FIRST BOOK. By Rudyard Kipling, Marie CORELLI, and Twenty other Popular Writers. With 185 Illustrations. A New Edition. Small demy 8vo. art linen, 3s. 6d.

"More entertaining utterances than most of these twenty-two papers it would be hard to conceive; but they are more than entertaining—they are valuable."—Daily Chronicle.

The CRUSADE of the "EXCELSIOR." By Bret Harte. With a Frontispiece by J. Bernard Partridge. A New Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"It is a story which deserves to be far more widely known than it is. Few of Mr. Harte's romances surpass it in humour, ingenuity, and that delicate treatment of difficult situations in which the author excels. Those who have never read it will be glad to have their attention called to a thoroughly characteristic example of this distinguished writer at his best." Speaker.

TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE; and other Stories. By MARK TWAIN. With a Photogravure Portrait of the Author. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

"The real merit of this story, in which the origin of a mysterious crime is triumphantly elucidated, is the skill with which the author has kept both Tom and his friend Huck Finn in the mental and moral atmosphere of boyhood. None but a very accomplished artist could have done this."—Speaker.

The STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT. By Mark Twain. A New Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [February 11.

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. Waller. With 9 Full-Page Illustrations by the Author. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, gilt top, 6s. [February 18.

LIBRARY EDITION of WILKIE COLLINS'S NOVELS.

Entirely New Editions, reset in a specially cast antique type, bound in new style, 3s. 6d. each.

The WOMAN in WHITE.
ANTONINA or, the Fall of Rome.
The MOONSTONE.
BASIL.
HIDE and SEEK. [Shortly.

NEW EDITIONS OF POPULAR NOVELS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

By Sir WALTER BESANT.
IN DEACON'S ORDERS.
The REVOLT of MAN.

By Mrs. ALEXANDER.
A LIFE INTEREST.
MONA'S CHOICE.

By ROBERT BUCHANAN.
LADY KILPATRICK.

By Mrs. OLIPHANT.
The SORCERESS.

By F. W. ROBINSON.
The WOMAN in the DARK.

By W. CLARK RUSSELL.
HEART of OAK.
The TALE of the TEN. With 12 Illustrations by G. Montbard. [Feb. 25.

By HAWLEY SMART.
LONG ODDS.
The MASTER of RATHKELLY. [Feb. 11.

PHIL MAY'S SKETCH-BOOK. Containing 54 Humorous Drawings by the Artist. Cheaper Edition. Crown folio, cloth, 2s. 6d. [Shortly.

DIARY of a CITIZEN of PARIS DURING "The TERROR." By EDMOND BIRÉ. Translated by JOHN DE VILLIERS. With Photogravure Frontispieces. 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth extra, 21s.

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY VIGNETTES. Third Series. By AUSTIN DOBSON. Crown 8vo. buckram, gilt top, 6s.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN: some Life Notes. By Dr. JOSEPH PARKER. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, gilt top, 6s.

TRAVEL and TALK, 1885–93–95. My Hundred Thou- sand Miles of Travel. By the Rev. H. R. HAWEIS, M.A. With 2 Photogravure Portraits. Cheaper Edition. 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 12s.

The GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE. One Shilling Monthly, or 14s. per year, post free. In addition to Stories and Articles upon Subjects in Literature, Science, and Art, 'TABLE TALK' by SYLVANUS URBAN appears monthly. Cases for binding, 2s. each.

WALFORD'S COMPLETE PEERAGE, BARONETAGE, KNIGHTAGE, HOUSE of COMMONS (1897). Considerably Enlarged. Royal 32mo. cloth, gilt edges, 5s.

WALFORD'S SHILLING PEERAGE (1897). Much Enlarged. 32mo. cloth, 1s.

WALFORD'S SHILLING BARONETAGE (1897). Much Enlarged. 32mo. cloth, 1s.

WALFORD'S SHILLING KNIGHTAGE (1897). Much Enlarged. 32mo cloth, 1s.

WALFORD'S SHILLING HOUSE of COMMONS (1897). 32mo. cloth, 1s.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

Monthly price Half-a-Crown

THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

Contents for FEBRUARY

RUSSIA and ENGLAND. "Down the Long Avenue." With Map of the New Manchurian Railways. By Henry Norman
SECRET HISTORY of the RUSSO-CHINESE TREATY
COVENTRY PATMORE: a Portrait. By Edmund Gosse.
POOR LAW CHILDREN. By E. S. Lidgett.
IRENÆUS on the FOURTH GOSPEL. By Professor Gwatkin
LORD ROSEBERY. By Norman Hapgood
The WATER SUPPLY of LONDON. By W. H. Dicksinson
ELEMENTARY EDUCATION and TAXATION. By Francis Peek
SHALL WE INVITE the RUSSIANS to CONSTANTINOPLE? By Sir R. K. Wilson, Bart.
RELIGIOUS STATISTICS of ENGLAND and WALES. By Howard Evans
The MUSULMANS of INDIA and the SULTAN. By Canon MacColl
MONEY and INVESTMENTS.

London: Isbister & Co., Limited, Covent-garden, W.C.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
No 240. FEBRUARY, 1897.

URGENT QUESTIONS for the COUNCIL of DEFENCE. By Capt. Lord Charles Beresford.
The PLAGUE. By Dr. Montagu Lubbock.
The ELIZABETHAN RELIGION (in correction of Mr. George Russell). By J. Horace Round.
The LONDON UNIVERSITY PROBLEM. By Sir Joshua Fitch, LL.D.
The TRUE NATURE of "FALSETTO." By E. Davidson Palmer.
LAW and the LAUNDRY:—
1. Commercial Laundries. By Mrs. Bernard Bosanquet, Mrs. Creighton, and Mrs. Sidney Webb
2. Laundries in Religious Houses. By Lady Frederick Cavendish.
TIMBER CREEPING in the CARPATHIANS. By E. N. Buxton.
RECENT SCIENCE. By Prince Kropotkin.
LIFE in POETRY: Poetical Expression. By Professor Courthope, C.B.
SKETCHES MADE in GERMANY. No. 3. By Mrs. Blyth.
GIBBON'S LIFE and LETTERS. By Herbert Paul.
INDIVIDUALISTS and SOCIALISTS. By the Hon. and Very Rev. the Dean of Ripon.
NURSES à la MODE: a Reply to Lady Priestley. By Mrs. Bedford Fenwick (formerly Matron of St. Bartholomew's Hospital).
NOTE on the DECLARATION of PARIS. By Thomas Gibson Bowles, M.P.

London: Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY.
DEVOTED TO LITERATURE, SCIENCE, ART, AND POLITICS.
FEBRUARY NUMBER NOW READY.
Price One Shilling net.

Contents.

DEMOCRATIC TENDENCIES. E. L. Godkin.
The PEABODY EDUCATION FUND. Pres. D. C. Gilman.
The STORY of an UNTOLD LOVE. 8-10. Paul Leicester Ford.
A STUDY of AMERICAN LIQUOR LAWS. Pres. C. W. Eliot.
The JUGGLER. V. Charles Egbert Craddock.
MY SIXTY DAYS in GREECE. Professor B. L. Gildersleeve.
EMERSON, SIXTY YEARS AFTER. II. John Jay Chapman
VILLAGE IMPROVEMENT SOCIETIES. Mary Caroline Robbins.
CHEERFUL YESTERDAYS: the Rearing of a Reformer. Thomas Wentworth Higginson.
An EXAMPLE of MONUMENTAL ART. Cecilia Waern.
TWO INTERPRETERS of NATIONAL ARCHITECTURE. Henry Van Brunt.
COMMENTS on NEW BOOKS.
The CONTRIBUTORS' CLUB.

London: Gay & Bird, 22, Bedford-street, W.C.

THE ATHENÆUM
Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, The Fine Arts, Music, and The Drama.

Last Week's ATHENÆUM contains Articles on

MR. LANG'S PICKLE the SPY.
TEN BRINK'S HISTORY of ENGLISH LITERATURE.
AN EARLY CHINESE TRAVELLER on INDIAN BUDDHISM.
The TUDOR TRANSLATIONS—Don Quixote.
A NEW SCHOOL HISTORY of ROME.
NEW NOVELS—Le Selve; A Golden Autumn; Kitty the Rag; Two Cousins and a Castle; A Doubtful Loss.
BOOKS of TRAVEL.
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.
The THACKERAYS in INDIA—PROF. MASPERO'S 'STRUGGLE of the NATIONS'—'The ROMANCE of a KING'S LIFE'—JOHN LAMB'S 'POETICAL PIECES.'

Also—

LITERARY GOSSIP.
SCIENCE—Bedell on the Transformer; Astronomical Notes; Mr. Horatio Hale, Societies, Meetings.
FINE ARTS—The Castles of England; The Society of Painters in Water Colours, Mr. Charles Parsons Knight, Gossip.
MUSIC—The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week.
DRAMA—Recent Plays, Gossip.

The ATHENÆUM, every SATURDAY, price THREEPENCE, of John C. Francis, Athenæum Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and of all Newsagents.

GRAY'S INN CHAPEL.—Interior View as Restored, and other Illustrations; also an Autobiography of an Art Critic, Advancement of Architecture, Professor Aitchison's first R.A. Lectures, London County Council Inquiry, &c.

See the BUILDER of February 6 (4*d*., by post, 4½*d*.).

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 24th, 1892, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.

Price of the Four Numbers, 1*s*. 4*d*., or free by post, 1*s*. 6*d*.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

"That delightful repository of forgotten lore, NOTES AND QUERIES."

Edinburgh Review, October, 1880.

"That useful resuscitant of dead knowledge, yclept NOTES AND QUERIES, the antiquaries' newspaper."

Quarterly Review.

"When found, make a note of."—CAPTAIN CUTTLE.

Every SATURDAY, 24 Pages, Price 4d., of all Booksellers,

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A Medium of Intercommunication for Literary Men, Artists, Antiquaries, Genealogists, &c.

CONTAINING EVERY WEEK AMUSING ARTICLES ON SOME OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH HISTORY,
Illustrated by Original Communications and Inedited Documents.

BIOGRAPHY,
Including unpublished Correspondence of eminent Men, and unrecorded Facts connected with them.

BIBLIOGRAPHY,
More especially of English Authors, with Notices of rare and unknown Editions of their Works, and Notes on Authorship of Anonymous Books.

POPULAR ANTIQUITIES and FOLK-LORE,
Preserving the fast-fading Relics of the old Mythologies.

BALLADS and OLD POETRY,
With Historical and Philological Illustrations.

POPULAR and PROVERBIAL SAYINGS,
Their Origin, Meaning, and Application.

PHILOLOGY,
Including Local Dialects, Archaisms, and Notes on our Old Poets.

GENEALOGY AND HERALDRY,
Including Histories of Old Families, completion of Pedigrees, &c.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES, QUERIES, and REPLIES,
On points of ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY, TOPOGRAPHY, FINE ARTS, NATURAL HISTORY, MISCELLANEOUS ANTIQUITIES, NUMISMATICS, PHOTOGRAPHY, &c.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS,
Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

And may be had, by order, of all Booksellers and Newsvendors.

Second Edition, price 6*d*.

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY.
By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Scottish Messenger.

G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

NOW READY, fcap. 8vo. cloth, price 6*d*.

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES: a Sketch of the most Interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

New and Cheaper Edition, price Two Shillings.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Eighth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Has we are glad to see, reached an eighth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

Fourth Edition, price Sixpence, cloth.

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."
Dr. B. A. Gould, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. with 2 Portraits, 21*s*.

JOHN FRANCIS AND THE 'ATHENÆUM.'

A LITERARY CHRONICLE OF HALF A CENTURY.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

"The thought of compiling these volumes was a happy one, and it has been ably carried out by Mr. John C. Francis, the son of the veteran publisher."
Literary World.

"The volumes abound with curious and interesting statements, and in bringing before the public the most notable features of a distinguished journal from its infancy almost to the present hour, Mr. Francis deserves the thanks of all readers interested in literature."—Spectator.

"It was a happy thought in this age of jubilees to associate with a literary chronicle of the last fifty years a biographical sketch of the life of John Francis.....As we glance through the contents there is scarcely a page which does not induce us to stop and read about the men and events that are summoned again before us."—Western Daily Mercury.

"The book is, in fact, as it is described, a literary chronicle of the period with which it deals, and a chronicle put together with as much skill as taste and discrimination. The information given about notable people of the past is always interesting and often piquant, while it rarely fails to throw some new light on the individuality of the person to whom it refers."—Liverpool Daily Post.

"It is in characters so sterling and admirable as this that the real strength of a nation lies.....The public will find in the book reading which, if light and easy, is also full of interest and suggestion..... We suspect that writers for the daily and weekly papers will find out that it is convenient to keep these volumes of handy size, and each having its own index, extending the one to 20 the other to 30 pages, at their elbow for reference."
Liverpool Mercury.

"No memoir of Mr. Francis would be complete without a corresponding history of the journal with which his name will for ever be identified.....The extraordinary variety of subjects and persons referred to, embracing as they do every event in literature, and referring to every person of distinction in science or letters, is a record of such magnitude that we can only indicate its outlines. To the literary historian the volumes will be of incalculable service."
Bookseller.

"Our survey has been unavoidably confined almost exclusively to the first volume; indeed, anything like an adequate account of the book is impossible, for it may be described as a history in notes of the literature of the period with which it deals. We confess that we have been able to find very few pages altogether barren of interest, and by far the larger portion of the book will be found irresistibly attractive by all who care anything for the history of literature in our own time."
Manchester Examiner.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street, W.,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

MR. FLINDERS PETRIE'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

PETRIE (W. M. FLINDERS).—KOPTOS. With a Chapter by D. G. HOGARTH, M.A. 1 vol. 4to. 35 pp. 28 Plates (4 Photographic), boards, 10*s.*

—— NAQADA and BALLAS. By W. M. FLINDERS PETRIE and QUIBELL. With a Chapter by F. C. J. SPURRELL. 4to. 79 pp. 87 Plates, boards, 25*s.*

The district treated in this work is about thirty miles North of Thebes and on the Western side of the Nile. Messrs. Flinders Petrie and Quibell give decisive evidence of an hitherto unknown invasion of Upper Egypt, which is linked with the prehistoric civilization of the Mediterranean. An ample index adds greatly to the value of the book.

Bernard Quaritch, 15, Piccadilly, London.

NOTES and QUERIES. (EIGHTH SERIES.)

THIS WEEK'S NUMBER contains—

NOTES:—Latin Prayer Book—Horne Tooke's Diary—Ophelia—Prof Nichol's Poems—Bishops' Wigs—Etymology of "Lane"—St. Distaff's Day—'Night and Morning'—"Baldacchino"—Letter of Lady Hervey—Flower Custom—"Layman"—'Oxford English Dictionary.'

QUERIES:—"Braal"—Dickens Quotation—Tapestries from Raphael's Cartoons—High Water at London Bridge—Coin—"Invultation"—'Privy Purse Expenses of Elizabeth of York'—"Non sine pulvere"—'Travels of True Godliness'—C. Whichcott—Quakers in Opera—"Li maisie hierlekin"—Oldest Parish Register—Hurling—Licences to Emigrate—Van Acker—Knightley Smith—"Dymocked"—Sir W. Ralegh's Library—Nonconformist Ministers—Hague and Osnaburgh—'History of Essex'—Stowe MSS.—'Middlemarch.'

REPLIES:—"Rarely"—Clementina Sobiesky Douglass—Sir H. St. Paul—Launceston as a Surname—Astrological Signatures—"God save the King"—Blessing Fisheries—"Picksome"—Old Arminghall—Beaumont College—"Feer and Flet"—Gog and Magog—Manx Dialect—Wyvill—Theatre at Tottenham Court Road—Earls of Halifax—Horseshoe Monuments—"To worsen"—W. Hiseland—'Prince Dorus'—Duke of Wellington—Scottish Clerical Dress—Louis Philippe—Burial-ground in 'Bleak House'—"She"—Gosforth—London Directories—"Nott Stag"—Authors Wanted.

NOTES on BOOKS:—Hazlitt's 'Four Generations of a Literary Family'—Beeching's 'Paradise of English Poetry'—'Book-Prices Current,' Vol. X.—'Scottish Poetry of the Eighteenth Century,' Vol. II.—Spence's 'Earl Rognvald'—Schroder's Carlyle's 'Abhandlung über Goethe's Faust'—Angot's 'Aurora Borealis.'

Notices to Correspondents.

Price 4*d.*; by post, 4½*d.*

Published by John C. Francis, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS
(TRAVELLING, RIDING, CYCLING, HUNTING, SHOOTING, &c.),
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY AND WORKMEN'S ACCIDENTS,
INSURED AGAINST BY THE
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.
Established 1849.
Capital £1,000,000. Claims paid £3,750 000.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing.

EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES are sold in Tins, 7½*d.* and 1*s.* 1½*d.*, labelled "James Epps & Co., Limited, Homœopathic Chemists, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street, London."

WM. & GEO. LAW.
COFFEE—
SUGAR—
TEA.
104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT,
and INDIGESTION,
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.
DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

15*s.* net.

TRANSCENDENTAL MAGIC, its Doctrine and RITUAL. By ÉLIPHAS LÉVI. A Complete Translation of 'Dogme et Rituel de la Haute Magie.' With a Biographical Preface by ARTHUR EDWARD WAITE, Author of 'Devil Worship in France,' &c. Including all the Original Engravings and a Portrait of the Author.

COL. OLCOTT in the Theosophist writes:—"A comparison of Mr. Waite's version with the original shows that the translation into English has been faithfully done, and thus one of the most famous magical works in the world is brought within the reach of students ignorant of the French language. Many of Éliphas Lévi's views were cited from this book in the writing of 'Isis Unveiled,' and I am in a position to know that H. P. B.'s private opinions of the man accorded in the main with those of Mr. Waite.....He is a most instructive helper to the student.....He was richly endowed in occult law. .....The searcher after truth who reads Lévi should confine himself to the 'Doctrine and Ritual'.....one of the most precious works on the divine science of the ages! Mr. Waite is to be complimented upon the perfection of his work, and Mr. Redway to be thanked for publishing this valuable book."

GEORGE REDWAY, Hart-street, Bloomsbury.

NEW NOVEL BY E. F. BENSON.
"A MODERN VERDANT GREEN."

The BABE, B.A. Being the Uneventful History of a Young Gentleman at Cambridge University. Illustrated. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6*s.*

BRITISH REVIEW.—"It is simply a series of sketches from the life of a Cambridge undergraduate, any one chapter of which is intelligible apart from the rest. And yet there is in them a certain underlying unity. They constitute, taken together, a humorous, pointed, and frequently brilliant criticism of contemporary university life and contemporary university education."

ACADEMY.—"It was written in high spirits, with the aim simply to amuse. We have found it amusing."

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"Mr. Benson's delightful book is rife with clever definitions as well as graphic character sketches."

SCOTSMAN.—"A bright and humorous picture of university life."

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"A brother to Dodo."

The BABE, B.A.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF LITERARY PROPERTY.

BOOKS and their MAKERS during the MIDDLE AGES. A Study of the Conditions of the Production and Distribution of Literature, from the Fall of the Roman Empire to the Close of the Seventeenth Century. By GEO. HAVEN PUTNAM, M.A., Author of 'Authors and their Public in Ancient Times.'

Vol. I. 476–1500. Demy 8vo. cloth extra, 10*s.* 6*d.*
Vol. II. 1500–1709 (the date of first Copyright Statute). Demy 8vo. cloth extra, 10*s.* 6*d.*

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS, Bedford-street, London, W.C.; and New York.

NOTICE.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

The VOLUME, JULY to DECEMBER, 1896,

With the Index, price 10*s.* 6*d.*, IS NOW READY.

 The Index separately, price 6*d.*; by post, 6½*d.* Also Cases for Binding, price 1*s.*; by post, 1*s.* 3*d.*

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

D. NUTT,
270-271, STRAND, LONDON.

THE CLASSICAL REVIEW.

Vol. XI. FEBRUARY, 1897. No. 1. 3*s.*

Contents.

R. M. BURROWS. Pylos and Sphacteria.
R. W. MACAN. The Date of Tyrtaeus.
E. W. FAY. Contested Etymologies.
W. G. RUTHERFORD. Conjectures in the Text of the 'Comici Graeci.'
H. RICHARDS. Critical Notes on the Minor Works of Xenophon—'Hiero,' 'Hipparchicus,' 'De Re Equest.' (Continued from Vol. X. p. 294.)
J. P. POSTGATE. On some Passages in Xenophon's 'Oeconomicus' and 'Hellenics.'
M. L. EARLE. Critical Notes on Cicero 'De Oratore I.'
Shorter Notes.
R. Y. TYRRELL and T. L. AGAR. On a Question of Homeric Metrical Rule.
A. SOUTER. Greek Metrical Inscriptions from Phrygia. (Continued from Vol. X. p. 420.)
Francken's Edition of Lucan. W. E. HEITLAND.
Treatises on Statius by Lafaye and by Klotz. ROBINSON ELLIS.
Grenfell's Edition of 'The Revenue Laws of Ptolemy Philadelphus.' W. WYSE.
Blaydes's 'Adversaria in Aeschylum.' W. HEADLAM.
Christ's Edition of Pindar. R. Y. TYRRELL.
Hirtzel's 'Der Dialog.' R. D. HICKS.
Shorter Reviews.
Collignon's 'Histoire de la Sculpture Grecque.' PERCY GARDNER.
Thomas's 'Rome et l'Empire.' LOUIS DYER.
C. TORR. 'Memphis and Mycenæ' (a Reply).
Monthly Record—Summaries—Bibliography.

Subscriptions are now due for Vol. XI. of the CLASSICAL REVIEW, 13*s.* 6*d.* post free.

A few copies of Vol. I.-X. of the CLASSICAL REVIEW are offered to New Subscribers at a reduced price. Particulars on application.

JUST OUT, AT ALL LIBRARIES.

CAOBA, the GUERILLA CHIEF. A Real Romance of the Cuban Rebellion. By P. H. EMERSON. 6*s.*

 Of equal interest as a story of exciting incident and as a faithful description of life on a Cuban plantation.

GARNETT and STUART GLENNIE. —GREEK FOLK POESY. 2 vols. demy 8vo. upwards of 500 pages each, 18*s.* net.

 The completest and most representative collection of modern Greek romance, legend, and popular literature in all its manifestations.

GOETHE'S 'FAUST.' The so-called First Part (1770–1808); together with the scenes 'Two Imps and Amor'; the variants of the Göchenhausen Transcript; and the complete Paralipomena of the Weimar Edition of 1887. In English, with Introduction and Notes by R. McCLINTOCK. Demy 8vo. xxxviii–373 pp. cloth, net 10*s.*

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.
Made in Three Sizes.
10*s.* 6*d.*, 16*s.* 6*d.*, and 25*s.* each.
Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen
A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce.
We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.
Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95*a*, Regent street, W.; and 21, High-street, Kensington, W., London.
And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

A FEW WORDS ABOUT THE BLICKENSDERFER TYPE-WRITER.

It is NOT a reproduction or hash-up of any existing machines on which the patents have run out.

It is NOT an IMPROVEMENT on them.

It is an entirely new departure in Type-writer mechanism. The root idea in its construction is simplicity; in place of 2 to 3,000 parts it has only about 200. As a result of this simplicity we have a machine which is PORTABLE (weight 6lb.), SPEEDY, DURABLE, and CHEAP.

It has a complete Key-board, with 84 Letters and Characters. It is fully warranted, and yet it is sold for £7 10*s.* NET CASH.

Send for Prospectus and Testimonials.

BLICKENSDERFER TYPE-WRITER CO.,
NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO. LIMITED.

NOW READY.

THE HISTORY OF THE LAST QUARTER-CENTURY IN THE UNITED STATES, 1870-95.

By E. BENJAMIN ANDREWS.

With more than 350 Illustrations. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 30*s.*

THE CRIMEAN DIARY OF THE LATE GENERAL SIR CHARLES A. WINDHAM, K.C.B.

With his Observations on the Indian Mutiny and an Introduction by Sir W. H. RUSSELL.

Edited by Major HUGH PEARSE. Post 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

"No one interested in the military history of the fifties could read it without profit, and without entertaining a higher respect than before for the name of 'Redan Windham.'" Scotsman.

UNIFORM WITH 'ENGLISH BOOKBINDINGS IN THE BRITISH MUSEUM.'

FOREIGN BOOKBINDINGS IN THE BRITISH MUSEUM.

Illustrations of more than 60 Examples, selected on account of their beauty or Historical Interest.

With an Introduction and Descriptions by W. Y. FLETCHER, F.S.A.
(late Assistant-Keeper, Department of Printed Books, British Museum).

The Plates printed in Facsimile by W. Griggs, Chromo-lithographer to Her Majesty the Queen. Folio, limited to 500 copies, 3*l.* 3*s.* net.

"The author and artist have combined to make this volume a veritable labour of love.....The pick of these, as far as the bindings are concerned, may now be said to have been made the intellectual property of any one who cares to spend a well-invested three guineas on Mr. Fletcher's book."—Times.

LIFE of LIEUT.-ADMIRAL DE RUYTER. By George GRINNELL-MILNE. With Portrait, Map, and Several Diagrams. Post 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.*

"Mr. Grinnell-Milne's accuracy and research make his work a valuable contribution to our knowledge of the history of the seventeenth century."—Pall Mall Gazette.

The LETTERS of DE BROSSES. Translated by Lord RONALD GOWER. Fcap. 4to. 10*s.* 6*d.*

"The humanity of the first president of the Burgundian parliament imparts a flavour to his letters that time cannot remove."—Black and White.

The FLORENTINE ILLUSTRATED BOOKS of the FIFTEENTH and SIXTEENTH CENTURIES and their WOODCUTS. By Dr. PAUL KRISTELLER, of Berlin, whose services the Italian Government has now secured for the Galleria Nazionale at Rome. Printed at the Chiswick Press. The Edition limited to not more than 350 copies. [Shortly.

PHILOSOPHICAL LIBRARY.—New Volume.

SCIENCE of ETHICS. By J. G. Fichte. [In the press.

The GARDEN of ROMANCE: being a Collection of the best Short Stories of all Ages and Countries. Edited by ERNEST RHYS. Fcap. 4to. 6*s.*

PARENTS and CHILDREN. By Charlotte M. Mason, Editor of the Parents' Review. Demy 8vo. 6*s.*

"They are written with a fluency which makes them always interesting to read." Scotsman.

READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

The EDGE of the ORIENT. By R. H. Russell. Large crown 8vo. 8*s.* 6*d.*

The MYSTERIES of MAGIC. A Digest of the Writings of Éliphas Lévi. With Biographical and Critical Essay by ARTHUR EDWARD WAITE. Second and Revised Edition. Demy 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.*

INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES.—New Volume.

WHAT IS ELECTRICITY? By John Trowbridge, S.D., Harvard University. Crown 8vo. 5*s.* [Immediately.

AGRICULTURAL SERIES.—New Volume.

CHEMISTRY. By R. H. Adie, M.A. B.Sc. 2 vols. small crown 8vo. [In preparation.

NEW FICTION.

THE FAULT OF ONE.

By EFFIE ADELAIDE ROWLANDS. Crown 8vo. [In the press.

THE WAY OF THE WIND.

By C. KENNETT BURROW, Author of 'Asteck's Madonna.' Crown 8vo. [Immediately.

BY SIR LEWIS MORRIS.

ELEVENTH THOUSAND.

POETICAL WORKS (including 'A Vision of Saints').

1 vol. with latest Portrait, Eleventh Thousand, crown 8vo. cloth, plain, 6*s.*; cloth extra, gilt edges, 7*s.* 6*d.*

ILLUSTRATED EDITION.

THE EPIC OF HADES.

With 16 Autotype Illustrations after the Drawings of the late GEORGE K. CHAPMAN.

4to. cloth extra, gilt edges, 21*s.*

JUST PUBLISHED.

COMPLETE POETICAL WORKS.

In 8 vols. fcap. 8vo. in neat cloth box, 32*s.*

40,000 COPIES.

THE EPIC OF HADES.

Fcap. 8vo. 5*s.*

PATERNOSTER HOUSE, CHARING CROSS-ROAD, LONDON.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by John Edward Francis, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by John C. Francis at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, February 6, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3616. SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL ACADEMY of ARTS.

LORD LEIGHTON'S WORKS.

EXHIBITION NOW OPEN from 9 A.M. to 6 P.M.

GEOLOGICAL SOCIETY of LONDON.

The ANNIVERSARY MEETING of this Society will be held at the Society's Apartments, BURLINGTON HOUSE, on FRIDAY, February 19, at 3 o'clock.

The Fellows and their Friends will DINE together at the CRITERION RESTAURANT, PICCADILLY, at 7.30 P.M. Tickets to be obtained at the Society's Apartments.

ROYAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY.
(Incorporated by Royal Charter.)

Patron—HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

President—The Right Hon. Sir M. E. GRANT-DUFF, G.C.S.I.

The ANNIVERSARY MEETING will be held at the MUSEUM of PRACTICAL GEOLOGY, Jermyn-street, W., on THURSDAY, February 18, at 5 o'clock P.M. Address by the President, Sir M. E. GRANT DUFF, G.C.S.I.

HUBERT HALL, Director and Hon Secretary.

TO PUBLISHERS.—LITERARY ADVISER to one of the oldest London Publishing Firms for the last 7½ years NOW AT LIBERTY.—Letters to S. G., care of C. B. Ward, Solicitor, 40, Bedford-row, W.C.

WANTED, EASY LITERARY WORK for spare hours.—CANTAB., care of A. J. Isard, Esq., Solicitor, 14, Queen-street, Cheapside, E.C.

SECRETARYSHIP or CLERKSHIP DESIRED by a LADY who has held similar post. University education. Mathematics (Tripos), Latin, French, German. Excellent testimonials.—D., 3, Goldsmith-square, Nottingham.

GENTLEMAN (27), with literary ability, desires PART-TIME ENGAGEMENT, SECRETARIALLY or otherwise. Experienced. Has been with men of highest standing, from whom references. Temporarily; permanently if future arrangement. Agreeable to reside in family, or with whom working. Very companionable; of good family.—H., Hill Side, Sutton Coldfield, Warwickshire.

RE-ENGAGEMENT as LIBRARIAN DESIRED by YOUNG MAN. Excellent knowledge of Latest Fiction and General Literature. Good references.—Address MR. WILFRID BROWNE, Hurst, Twyford, Berks.

GRADUATE, Classical Honours, TEACHES CLASSICS and GERMAN, and Prepares for Examinations. He would also be willing to accept Tutorial or Travelling Engagements for Easter or Summer Vacations.—E. C., 30, Lower Belgrave-street, Eaton-square.

REPLIES to ADVERTISEMENT of A. B. in Athenæum of January 30 are under consideration.

LITERARY.—To Young and other Authors, Members of Universities, &c.—A NEW MAGAZINE (Science, Fiction, &c.) REQUIRES CONTRIBUTORS. Names and particulars—not MS.—in first instance to Editor, HARRINGTON, Oxford Union Society.

EDITOR.—WANTED, a GENTLEMAN with political aspirations willing to invest 5,000*l.* to take the CONTROL of an old-established WEEKLY NEWSPAPER in the Liberal interest. A certain return upon the investment assured. Principals. Letters only.—N. O., care of LENN WALTER, Solicitor, 46, Chancery-lane.

GENTLEMAN WANTED as WORKING PARTNER and SECRETARY in Literary and Journalistic Institution. University Man preferred. Investment required about 1,000*l.*—Full control of capital.—Address JOURNALISM, care of Messrs. Ernest Salaman, Fort & Co., Solicitors, 12, Union-court, Old Broad-street, E.C.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.

A JUNIOR ASSISTANT CLERK is REQUIRED in the Office of this University.

The age of Candidates must not be less than 20 nor above 25 years; and, other things being equal, preference will be given to a Graduate of the University.

The salary will commence at 150*l.* per annum, and will increase by 10*l.* a year to 200*l.*

The selected Candidate will be required to pass an Examination by the Civil Service Commissioners.

Applications for the post must be addressed, prepaid, to the undersigned, and must reach the University, Burlington-gardens, London, W., not later than March 1.

The Candidate appointed may be required to enter on his duties on April 1.

Further particulars may be obtained on application to

F. VICTOR DICKINS, M.B., B.Sc., Registrar.

February 11, 1897.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.—Forthcoming Examination.—SECOND ASSISTANT to the LECTURER on ELECTRICITY at the ARTILLERY COLLEGE (20-25), FEBRUARY 24. Technical training and qualifications necessary. The date specified is the latest at which applications can be received. They must be made on forms to be obtained with particulars, from the SECRETARY, Civil Service Commission, London, S.W.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE of SOUTH WALES and MONMOUTHSHIRE.

FACULTY OF MEDICINE.

The Council invites applications for the PROFESSORSHIP of ANATOMY. Eighty copies of application, together with testimonials, must be in the hands of the undersigned on or before March 8, 1897.

Further particulars may be obtained on application to

J. AUSTIN JENKINS, B.A.,
Secretary and Registrar.

University College, Cardiff, February 8, 1897.

KARACHI, INDIA.—SIND MADRESSEH (MAHOMEDAN COLLEGE).

A PRINCIPAL WANTED for the above State-aided Institution. Must be a Graduate in Honours of a British University, and not more than 35 years of age. He will be required to teach English Literature, Mathematics, and Elementary Science. Salary Rs. 450 per mensem, rising by biennial increments of Rs. 50 to Rs. 700 per mensem. A house will shortly be provided rent free, and in the interim rent-free quarters will be provided. 60*l.* allowed for passage money.

Applications will be received up to March 10 by SIR JAMES PEILE, India Office, London, from whom further particulars as to the appointment may be obtained.

ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE, Cooper's Hill, Staines.—The Course of Study is arranged to fit an Engineer for Employment in Europe, India, and the Colonies. About 40 Students will be admitted in September, 1897. The Secretary of State will offer them for Competition Twelve Appointments as Assistant Engineers in the Public Works Department, and Three Appointments as Assistant Superintendents in the Telegraph Department.—For particulars apply to the SECRETARY, at the College.

WELL-KNOWN AUTHOR, successful Teacher, gives POSTAL LESSONS in the ART of WRITING FICTION.—Apply for terms, &c., to Box 1,133, Sell's Advertising Offices, Fleet-street, E.C.

THE SCHOOL of LITERARY ART. Conducted by FLORENCE MARRYAT. For instruction in Composing and Writing Fiction, Journalism, and the Drama.—Apply to SECRETARY, 26, Abercorn-place, N.W.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

TREBOVIR HOUSE SCHOOL,
1, Trebovir-road, South Kensington, S.W.

Principal—Mrs. W. R. COLE.

Special Courses of Lessons, on original lines, in Freehand Drawing, Designing, and Brush Work, will be given by Mr. EDWIN COOKE. Also Classes for Colour, Cast, and Figure Drawing, and Sketching from Nature, by Mr. ARTHUR FOORD HUGHES.

TUESDAYS and THURSDAYS throughout the Term.

 The PRESENT TERM COMMENCED MONDAY, January 18.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.—The Course of Instruction in ELEMENTARY BIOLOGY for Students preparing for the Prel. Sci. and Int. Sci. Examinations at the University of London BEGINS on FEBRUARY 16, 1897.

J. M. HORSBURGH, M.A., Secretary.

BEDFORD COLLEGE, LONDON (for WOMEN), York-place, Baker-street, W.

Principal—Miss EMILY PENROSE.

LENT TERM, SESSION 1896-7.

The HALF-TERM will BEGIN on MONDAY, February 22.

SPECIAL CLASSES for Students who Matriculated in January.

LUCY J. RUSSELL, Honorary Secretary.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

MR. GERALD MARSHALL UNDERTAKES GENEALOGICAL SEARCHES in Town and Country. Indices Searched and Abstracts of Records made at low inclusive rates.—Care of Greenberg & Co., 80, Chancery-lane, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Secretarial Work, Translating, Indexing, Stenographing, Duplicating in best style, and returned promptly. 1*s.* per 1,000 words. Searches made if required.—MISSES E. and J. FUZ, 11, Queen Victoria-street; 435, Mansion House Chambers, E.C.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS. of all kinds copied from 1*d.* per folio. Large quantities by arrangement. Work sent by post receives immediate attention. Testimonials. Duplicated. Translations.—ED. GRAHAM, Surrey Chambers, 172, Strand, London.

TYPE-WRITER.—AUTHORS' MSS., Plays, Reviews, Literary Articles, &c., COPIED with accuracy and despatch. 1*d.* per folio. Manifold or Duplicate Copies.—Address Miss E. TIGAR, 23, Maitland Park-villas, Haverstock-hill, N.W. Established 1884.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, 1*d.* per folio of 72 words. References to Authors.—Miss GLADDING, 28, Lansdowne-gardens, South Lambeth, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—1*s.* per 1,000 words. Large quantities by arrangement. Examination Questions Reduplicated. Dramatic Work advised upon (and arranged) by experienced S.M.—FAITH DAVIDSON, 88, Iverson-road, West Hampstead, N.W.

WELL-READ TYPIST DESIRES AUTHORS' MSS.—Accustomed to French and Spanish Documents. Good references to Authors. 10*d.* per 1,000, including paper.—J. IRWIN, 59, Selborne-street, Liverpool.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses E. B. & I. FERRAS, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

ANNUAL REGISTER, 1895.—APOLOGY.—The attention of the Editor has been called to a very serious error (occurring on page 408) respecting the proceedings arising out of the Dean poisoning case at Sydney, New South Wales. It was there stated that Mr. Crick—the junior partner in the firm of solicitors who were conducting Dean's case—had been tried for perjury and sentenced to fourteen years' penal servitude. Mr. Crick, on the contrary, was acquitted, and the Editor takes the first opportunity of expressing his sincere regret that this mis-statement—for which there were no grounds—should have appeared in the 'Annual Register.' The passage has been cancelled, and no more copies of the volume will be issued containing this serious—but wholly unintended—reflection upon Mr. Crick's reputation.

LIONEL ROBINSON, Editor 'Annual Register.'

MISS MATHILDE COHEN (otherwise MATHILDE BLIND) deceased. Pursuant to the Law of Property Amendment Act 1859. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that all Creditors and other persons having any claims or demands against the estate of Mathilde Cohen (otherwise Mathilde Blind) late of The Poplars, 20 Avenue-road, Regents Park, Middlesex, and of 96 Belgrave-road, Middlesex, deceased (who died on the 26th day of November 1896 and whose will was proved in the Principal Probate Registry of the High Court of Justice on the 28th day of January 1897 by Charles Rowley, Robert Singleton Garnett and Alfred Moritz Mond, the Executors therein named), are hereby required to send the particulars in writing of their claims or demands to me the undersigned, one of the said Executors, on or before the 22nd day of March 1897, after which date the said Executors will proceed to distribute the assets of the said deceased among the persons entitled thereto having regard only to the claims and demands of which they shall then have had notice and they will not be liable for the assets of the said deceased or any part thereof so distributed to any person or persons of whose claims and demands they shall not then have had notice.

Dated this 6th day of February 1897.

R. S. GARNETT,
27 West-hill, Highgate, London, N., Solicitor.

MS. TYPE-WRITTEN with care and precision by experienced Typist, and returned promptly, 10*d.* per 1,000 words. Translations made.—LITERATOR, 3, Rendlesham-road, London, N.E.

TYPE-WRITING.—Terms, 1*d.* per folio (72 words); or 5,000 words and over, 1*s.* per Thousand.—MISS NIGHTINGALL, Springfield, Walkern-road, Stevenage, Herts.

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing.

INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6690. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

AUTHORS of NOVELS and SHORT STORIES adapted for Serial Publication are invited to communicate with MR. J. F. SPRIGGS'S NEWSPAPER SERIAL AGENCY, 21, Paternoster-square, London, E.C.

9, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.

MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS. ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above.

AUTHORS should write for Prospectus of the LITERARY AGENCY, which offers special facilities for Publishing the Works of New Authors. Conducted by Mr. A. R. LEASH, late Manager of Tower Publishing Co., St. Paul's Chambers, 19, Ludgate-hill, London, E.C.

MESSRS. DIGBY, LONG & CO., PUBLISHERS,
18, Bouverie-street, London, E.C.,

Invite AUTHORS (Popular or otherwise) to submit their MSS. (Fiction, Travel, Poetry, &c.) for prompt consideration.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879. Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

SOCIETY of AUTHORS.—LITERARY PROPERTY.—The Public is urgently warned against answering advertisements inviting MSS., or offering to place MSS., without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society. By order, G. HERBERT THRING, Secretary.

4, Portugal-street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.

N.B.—The AUTHOR, the organ of the Society, is published monthly, price 6*d.*, by HORACE COX, Bream's-buildings, E.C.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MSS. in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

WILL all STUDENTS and ADMIRERS of CHARLES DICKENS'S WORKS kindly send their Names and Addresses to THE MANAGER, The Roxburghe Press, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster?

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.

12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14 COCKSPUR STREET CHARING CROSS S.W.
Insert Advertisements in all Papers Magazines &c at the lowest possible prices Special terms to Institutions Schools Publishers Manufacturers &c on application

Catalogues.

ELLIS & ELVEY, Dealers in Old and Rare Books.
Libraries Catalogued Arranged Valued and Purchased
CATALOGUES issued at frequent intervals
29 New Bond-street London W

NEW CATALOGUE (No. 19) now ready. Choice Engravings, Drawings, and Books—Constable's English Landscape—Turner's Liber Studiorum—Drawings by Turner, Prout, Hunt, Cotman &c—Works by Professor Ruskin Post free, Sixpence.—Wm Wards 2 Church-terrace Richmond, Surrey

FOREIGN BOOKS and PERIODICALS promptly supplied on moderate terms.
CATALOGUES on application
DULAU & CO 37, SOHO-SQUARE.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,
14, Henrietta street Covent-garden London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.
CATALOGUES on application.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth; Books illustrated by G and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. Catalogues issued and sent post free on application. Books bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

JOSEPH THORNTON & SON, 11, BROAD-STREET, OXFORD,
HAVE JUST ISSUED A
CATALOGUE of 1,600 SECOND-HAND THEOLOGICAL BOOKS,
Which will be sent post free on application.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

ALL OUT-OF-PRINT BOOKS speedily procured. Acknowledged the most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants to BAKER'S Great Bookshop, Birmingham.—Books Bought, Lent, or Exchanged.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD. (The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)
Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each. 5s. per dozen, ruled or plain.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
Books can be exchanged at the residences of Subscribers in London by the Library Messengers.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S FOREIGN LIBRARY.
All the Best Works in French, German, Italian, and Spanish are in circulation.

CATALOGUES of English or Foreign Books, 1s. 6d. each.

Prospectuses and Clearance Lists of Books on Sale, postage free.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, Limited,
30 to 34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, London.

BRANCH OFFICES:—
241, Brompton-road; and 48, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. (Mansion House End).

Also 10-12, Barton Arcade, Manchester.

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY.

FORD MADOX BROWN.
DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI.
FREDERIC J. SHIELDS.
A Series of AUTOTYPE REPRODUCTIONS of the Chief Works of these Masters is now ON VIEW at the GRAFTON GALLERIES They include the chief Cartoons made by Ford Madox Brown for stained glass, his 'Cordelia's Portion' 'English Boy' 'Shakespeare' Homer &c Rossetti's 'Beata Beatrix,' 'Lamp of Memory,' 'Monna Rosa,' 'Proserpine' 'The Annunciation,' 'The Blessed Damozel' 'Studies for the Oxford Frescoes,' &c
Particulars on application.

A NEW PORTRAIT OF ROBERT BROWNING.
Painted by D G ROSSETTI in 1855 REPRODUCED in AUTOGRAVURE from the Original in the possession of C Fairfax Murray, Esq Size of work 4¾ by 4¼ inches Proofs on Vellum, 21s; on Japanese, 10s 6d; Prints, 5s.

THE WEST FRONT OF PETERBOROUGH CATHEDRAL.
From a Negative specially taken before the erection of the scaffolding by R G SCRIVEN, F.S.I. Printed in Sepia or warm black, 18 by 15 inches, price 10s 6d.

G. F. WATTS, R.A.
A large Series of the Chief Works of this Master, including the great Allegorical Designs and many others.
Full particulars on application.

FRENCH PAINTERS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
PERMANENT CARBON REPRODUCTIONS of WORKS by JEAN FRANÇOIS MILLET, THÉODORE ROUSSEAU, JEAN BAPTISTE COROT, DAUBIGNY, JULES BRETON, DAGNAN BOUVERET, W. BOUGUEREAU, MEISSONIER, CAROLUS-DURAN, CABANEL, DEBAT-PONSAN, E. ADAN, &c., in various sizes.

THE ENGLISH SCHOOL OF LANDSCAPE PAINTING.
Including the Chief Works of JOHN CONSTABLE, R.A., J. M. W. TURNER, R.A., THOMAS GAINSBOROUGH, R.A., R. P. BONINGTON, OLD CROME, W. J. MÜLLER, DAVID COX, GIRTIN, SAMUEL PROUT, &c.

ABRIDGED CATALOGUES ON APPLICATION.

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,
74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

(nearly opposite the National Gallery).

Inspection invited.

REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7l. 10s.
[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5l. 5s.

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

BOOKS FOR SALE.

PAPWORTH'S BRITISH ARMORIALS 50s
HAMILTON'S MAN in ART 7s 6d 5s
BURTON'S ARABIAN NIGHTS 12 vols 5l
ILLUSTRATED SPORTING and DRAMATIC NEWS, 1875 25s 25 vols cloth gold cut 7l
PRITCHARD'S INFUSORIA 3 vols 50s
COL. CHESTER'S MARRIAGE LICENCES 63s 15s 6d
CATALOGUES FREE.
J. HALLIDAY & Co. 128 Barker's Pool, Sheffield.

TO LOVERS of SHAKESPEARE and ART CONNOISSEURS FOR SALE, BOYDELL'S ORIGINAL EDITION, with valuable Preface by Pope and Johnson in 9 vols handsomely bound in calf Copper Plate Engravings after Reynolds Hamilton Wheatley and many others. Mentioned in Cunningham's British Painters, p. 266, and being a choice and valuable acquisition to a Public or Private Library
Apply H M., Wyfold, Poplar-grove, West Kensington Park, W

TO COLLECTORS and ANTIQUARIANS.—The Executors of a Gentleman deceased are desirous of DISPOSING PRIVATELY of some very fine SPECIMENS of ANCIENT PERUVIAN ENGLISH and ROMAN POTTERY Roman Glass and Samian Ware Also a Collection of curious Old English Jugs and Tankards. The Collection may be viewed any time by appointment.—Address in first instance, Y Z., care of Mr Watere, Stationer, Westbourne-grove, Bayswater

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS giving full particulars and terms sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums &c; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr G B Stevens, 8 Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

Sales by Auction.

The Collection of Engravings, Drawings, and Pictures, the Property of the late Mr. J. HAINES.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House No 13 Wellington-street Strand, W.C., on MONDAY February 15 and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely (by order of the Executors) the COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS, DRAWINGS, and PICTURES the Property of the late Mr J. HAINES, comprising examples by and after Van Ostade, Bartolozzi, A Kauffman Bunbury Cosway G Morland Wheatley T. Burke, Hoppner and others—Oil Paintings ascribed to Sir J Reynolds, Sir G. Kneller, Armfield, and others—Water-Colour Drawings by D Cox, Cattermole, W Cruikshank, and others Also other Properties, comprising Publications of the Arundel Society—Works by the Old Masters—a capital Oil Painting by Palamedes—Drawings by Rowlandson, Westall, Cosway, and others.
May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

A Collection of Early Printed Books, the Property of a Gentleman, and Selections from other Libraries.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, February 17, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, PRINTED BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, including a small Collection of Books printed in the Fifteenth and Sixteenth Centuries, the Property of a Gentleman, and other Properties, comprising First Editions of Shelley, Keats, Lever, Andrew Lang, Surtees, and others—a large Collection of Works in Modern Literature—Novels by Popular Authors—Theological Treatises—Poetry, Topography and Archæology—Books illustrated by George Cruikshank, Leech, Phiz, and other celebrated artists—Tortoiseshell Snuff-Box, formerly the Property of W. Combe, author of Dr. Syntax, with Letters written by Combe to "Marianne" Brooke, &c.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The valuable Library of the late GEORGE SHAW, Esq., C.C., and Deputy Lieutenant for the County.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C. (by order of the Executors), on FRIDAY February 19, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable LIBRARY of the late GEORGE SHAW, Esq., C.C., and Deputy Lieutenant for the County, comprising First Editions of the Writings of G. A. A'Beckett, Bewick, Chas. Dickens, Leigh Hunt, A Lang, Lever, Ruskin, Surtees, Thackeray, &c.—an extensive Series of Works illustrated by George Cruikshank—Books Printed on Large Paper of which only limited numbers have been issued—Reviews and Periodicals—Archæological Works—Natural History—Sporting—Villon Society's Publications—Illustrated Books—and other valuable Works in most Classes of Literature.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Books and Manuscripts, including a Portion of the Library of Sir CHARLES STEWART FORBES, Bart.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, February 22, and Four Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, Valuable PRINTED BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, being a Portion of the Library of Sir CHARLES STEWART FORBES, Bart., comprising Works in most Classes of Literature, including Daniell's Picturesque Voyage round Great Britain—Galerie du Palais Pitti—Gould's Himalayan Birds—Manning and Bray's History of Surrey—Rubens et Vandyck, Œuvres, fine LIBRARY BOOKS in Handsome Bindings, the Property of the late Sir THOMAS W. McMAHON, Bart., a PORTION of the LIBRARY of H. C. HART, Esq., containing Modern Standard Works and others, including Scrope's Salmon Fishing, First Edition—Heures à l'usage de Rome, printed on Vellum—Horæ—French Manuscripts of the Fifteenth Century, the FIRST FIVE EDITIONS of WALTON'S COMPLEAT ANGLER, 1653 to 1676, and other Early Editions, the Property of a GENTLEMAN in Norfolk, also other Properties, consisting of County Histories, including Blomefield's Norfolk—Hasted's Kent—Atkyns's Gloucestershire—Nichols's Leicestershire—Piranesi Opere, 17 vols.—Rare Works relating to America—Early Bibles and Fifteenth Century Printed Books—Early English Literature—Robert Burns's Poems, First Edition, Kilmarnock, 1786, and Original MS. Letters by the Poet—and other Autographs—Bartolomei de Ii Sonneti, 1480—Blake's Songs of Innocence—a Horn-Book, temp. James I—Chap-Books—Original Letters by J. Ruskin—a number of Horæ on Vellum—Graduale ad Usum Ecclesiæ Sarisburiensis, 1502, magnificent copy—Florio's Montaigne, 1603—fine Specimens of Early Bookbinding—Dramatic Portraits—Sporting Prints—and Illustrated Books—and Works on Bibliography—Travels—Cruikshankiana—Rare French Books—and Works in nearly every Class of Literature.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had, if by post, on receipt of four stamps.

The SECOND PORTION of the Collection of Old Japanese Colour Prints, the Property of ERNEST HART, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on SATURDAY, February 27, at 1 o'clock precisely, the SECOND PORTION of the COLLECTION of OLD JAPANESE COLOUR PRINTS, the Property of ERNEST HART, Esq., including Specimens of the Work of the best known masters, from the earliest dates to recent times.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of two stamps.

The Collection of Decorative Porcelain, Enamels, Bijouterie, &c., of the late Mr. THOMAS HAINES.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 1, at 1 o'clock precisely (by order of the Executors), the COLLECTION of ENGLISH and ORIENTAL CHINA—Battersea Enamels—Cut Glass—Needlework—Bijouterie—Miniatures—Antique Furniture, &c., the Property of the late Mr. THOMAS HAINES.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Remaining Portion of the Collection of Works of Art, the Property of the late WILLIAM WEBB, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 2 and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely (by order of the Executor), the REMAINING PORTION of the COLLECTION of WORKS of ART of the late WILLIAM WEBB, Esq., comprising Decorative China, Bronzes, Ornamental Furniture, Bijouterie, Engravings, Pottery, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Library of the late Sir JOHN E. ERICHSEN, F.R.S., &c.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, March 4, and Two Following Days at 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Sir JOHN E. ERICHSEN, F.R.S., a SELECTED PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late Rev MICHAEL ANGELO ATKINSON, and other Properties; comprising fine Books of Prints—Books on Natural History and Science—Galleries—Modern Publications—Éditions de Luxe—Books on Sports, History, Poetry—Works illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A SELECTED PORTION of the Valuable Library of BERESFORD R. HEATON, Esq., and Valuable Books, the Property of Sir LEWIS MOLESWORTH, Bart.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 8, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising a Portion of the Library of BERESFORD R HEATON, Esq., of Cheniston-gardens, Kensington; a Selected Portion of the Valuable Library of a GENTLEMAN, deceased; a Small Collection of Illustrated French Books, the Property of O. W SELIGMAN, Esq.; a Selected Portion of the Library of Sir LEWIS MOLESWORTH, Bart., and other Properties, including Dibdin's Bibliographical Works—Valuable Topographical Works by Hunter, Thoresby, and Whitaker—Black-Letter Chronicles—Officium B. V. M. with Illuminations, Sæc. XV.—First Illustrated Edition of the Malermi Bible, 1490—First Editions of the Writings of Ruskin, Jesse, Swift, Matthew Arnold, Fielding, Pierce Egan, &c.—rare Sporting Books—an Unpublished Poem, &c., in the Autograph of W. M. Thackeray—Water-Colour Drawings, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Portion of the Library formed by the late R. CHOLMONDELEY, Esq., removed from Condover Hall.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, February 18, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a PORTION of the LIBRARY formed by the late R. CHOLMONDELEY, Esq., amongst which will be found Pinkerton's Voyages, 17 vols.—Hume's England, Bowyer's Edition—O'Halloran's History of Ireland—Houbraken's Heads, morocco—Wellesley's Despatches—British Poets, 109 vols.—Dart's Westminster Abbey, British Zoology, coloured plates—Hogarth, original impressions—MS. Astrological Charts, surrounded by beautifully executed Drawings—MS. Common-Place Books—Works on Freemasonry, &c.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

Musical Instruments.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, February 23, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS, comprising Grand and Cottage Pianofortes, Organs and Harmoniums—Harps—Violins, Violas, Violoncellos, and Double Basses—Brass and Wood-Wind Instruments, and a Small Collection of Ancient and Modern Music.

Catalogues on application.

Miscellaneous Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on FRIDAY, February 26, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY, comprising a Small Collection of Antique Silver, containing a few important pieces—rare Gold and Silver Coins—Old China and Cut Glass, and Antique Furniture, including Two fine Chippendale Sideboards—several Dressing Glasses—Inlaid Oak Chests, &c.

Catalogues in preparation.

SECOND PORTION of the well-known Biblical and Liturgical Library of HENRY JOHN FARMER ATKINSON, Esq., D.L. F.S.A., &c., removed from Osborne House, Ore, Hastings.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, March 1, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the SECOND PORTION of the BIBLICAL and LITURGICAL LIBRARY of H J FARMER ATKINSON Esq., D.L. F.S.A., &c., comprising Rare Editions of the Bible and Book of Common Prayer—Missals—Hymnals—Early Illustrated Books—Illuminated Manuscripts—Works on Topography—and Miscellaneous Books in all Branches of Literature.

Catalogues in preparation.

Autograph Letters.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., EARLY in MARCH, a small COLLECTION of AUTOGRAPH LETTERS and DOCUMENTS of Eminent Literary, Scientific, Political, Musicians, and Royal and Noble Personages, amongst which will be found Queen Elizabeth, William III., S. Pepys, Napoleon I., Lord Nelson, Lady Hamilton, Sir J. Franklin, Benjamin Franklin, F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, Madame Patti, C. Lamb, Lord Byron, T. Campbell, George Eliot, J. Ruskin, Lord Lytton, Robert Browning, Mrs. Browning, Sir W. Scott, and many others.

Catalogues in preparation.

Entire Stock of Mr. C. PALMER, of Southampton-row, who is changing the character of his business.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 3, and Two Following Days at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the ENTIRE STOCK of Mr. CLEMENT PALMER, of Southampton-row, comprising Works on History, Biography, Travel, Bibliography, Theology, Antiquities, Astrology, Specimens of Early Foreign Topography, valuable Editions of English Histories, Interesting Manuscripts, &c.

Catalogues may be had on receipt of two stamps.

Miscellaneous Engravings and Paintings.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 9, and One Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS, removed from Bournemouth, and other Private Sources, comprising Rare Mezzotints, some in proof states—Fancy Subjects after Cosway, Bartolozzi, Minasi, Kauffman, &c.—Sporting Subjects and Caricatures—Topographical and Architectural Prints—and Oil Paintings, both old and modern.

Catalogues in preparation.

FRIDAY NEXT,—400 Lots of Scientific, Photographic, and Miscellaneous Property.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, February 19, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

MONDAY, February 22.

General Collection of Natural History Specimens, Curios, China, &c.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY, February 22, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the Saturday prior 12 till 3 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

Miscellaneous Books, including the Library of the late Rev. W. H. BURNS, of Dacre Vicarage, Penrith, and of Clayton Hall, Manchester.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, February 17, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE BOOKS, including Coloured Caricatures by Rowlandson, Cruikshank, Woodward, Aiken, &c., 212 plates—Deighton's Caricatures, 68 plates—Original Pencil Sketches by Leech for Punch—Two Hundred and Two Etchings after the Old Masters—Galerie de Florence, 4 vols.—Penley on Water Colours—Westwood's Palæographia Sacra, &c., 2 vols. 4to.—Harding's Biographical Mirrour, 3 vols.—an Illustrated "Granger" in 5 vols.—Notes and Queries from 1849 to 1896, 92 vols.—Knight and Fisher's Portrait Galleries, 12 vols.—Strickland's Queens, 8 vols.—Couch's Fishes, 4 vols.—Morris's Birds, &c., 11 vols.—Yarrell's Birds, 3 vols.—Rawstorne's Gamonia—Jardine's Naturalists' Library, 40 vols.—Maund's Botanic Garden, 21 vols.—Scott's Novels, First Editions, 48 vols.—Watson's Wordsworth's Grave—Kipling's Allahabad Novels (6)—Hook's Archbishops, 12 vols.—Baring-Gould's Saints, 15 vols.—Cox's Expositor, 22 vols.—Preachers' Homiletic Commentary, 24 vols.—Lapide's Commentary, 10 vols., &c.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

"KEW BEE" ART SOCIETY.—Water Colours—Old Drawings and Paintings by Eminent European Masters—Engravings after Cosway, Pether, and Reynolds, and by Bartolozzi, Hogarth, Albert Durer, and others, Plain and in Colours—Mezzotints—Old Books—Play-Bills—National Portraits—Letters of Eminent Men and Women from A.D. 1799—Old Postage Stamps—Early Queen Victoria Portraits—Old Print Collections after Old Masters.—Nelson and other Prints and Items from the Blake and Nelson Galleries of the Royal Naval Exhibition—and numerous Art, Antiquarian, Topographic, and Literary Items of value, all guaranteed.

MR. JOHN PARNELL will SELL these by AUCTION (subject to reserve prices to be named at the Sale), at 12, Rockley-road, Shepherd's Bush-green, London, W., on WEDNESDAY NEXT, February 17, at 1 o'clock punctually.

On view Tuesday. Catalogues on the Premises, or by post, threepence each.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, February 15, ANCIENT and MODERN PICTURES from different sources

On TUESDAY, February 16, MEZZOTINT and other OLD ENGLISH ENGRAVINGS.

On WEDNESDAY, February 17, COLLECTION of ORIENTAL PORCELAIN and OBJECTS of ART, the Property of a GENTLEMAN; Old French Decorative Furniture, Italian and French Bronzes, &c., from various sources.

On WEDNESDAY, February 17, and Three Following Days, the REMAINING WORKS of the late R. BEAVIS, R.W.S.

On TUESDAY, February 23, DRAWINGS by T. Rowlandson and other English Humourists; WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS, the Property of a LADY.

On TUESDAY, February 23, and Following Day, the FINAL PORTION of the COLLECTION of OBJECTS of ART and VERTU and PICTURES of the late J. RAWCLIFFE, Esq., of Burnley.

On THURSDAY, February 25, PORCELAIN and DECORATIVE FURNITURE of R. B. ADDERLEY, Esq.

On FRIDAY, February 26, the COLLECTION of PORCELAIN and FAIENCE of the late WM. BROCKBANK, Esq.; OLD NANKIN PORCELAIN, the Property of a LADY, &c.

On SATURDAY, February 27, the COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of W. BROCKBANK, Esq., deceased, and important Modern Pictures and Drawings from Private Collections and different sources.

On MONDAY, March 1, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS from different sources.

On THURSDAY, March 4, and Following Day, the CONDOVER HALL COLLECTION of OBJECTS of ART, DECORATIVE FURNITURE and ARMOUR and ARMS of the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq.

On FRIDAY, March 5, OBJECTS of ART and DECORATIVE FURNITURE of the late BARON HIRSCH, the Rev. Sir ALGERNON COOTE, Bart., and from other private sources.

On SATURDAY, March 6, the CONDOVER HALL COLLECTION of PICTURES of the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq.

£50 for a STORY.

The Editor of the HOME COMPANION, the New Weekly Journal for the Home, offers £50 for the best SHORT STORY suitable for that Journal.

Full particulars appear in the HOME COMPANION, ready at all Newsagents and Bookstalls on TUESDAY NEXT. One Penny.

WORDSWORTH BUILDING, LADY MARGARET HALL, OXFORD, with other Illustrations, Modern Stained Glass, Advancement of Architecture: II. (R.A. Lecture), &c.—See the BUILDER of February 13 (4d., by post, 4½d.).

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

TWO NEW NOVELS.

A MAN OF HONOUR.

BY

H. C. IRWIN.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

"Much good and careful work marks 'A Man of Honour.' H. C. Irwin is a writer of thought and culture, who uses his experiences of foreign travel to admirable purpose in an interesting book."
Black and White.

"We have read many and many a story of the Indian Mutiny, but Mr. Irwin's tale has novelty all its own."—Glasgow Herald.

"The scenes are laid in the time of the Mutiny, and there are several graphic battle pieces. These, with the earlier Irish country scenes and those incidental to soldier life in India, supply a befitting background to the drama of love and battle."—Dundee Advertiser.

"Once fairly embarked on the story, it requires no slight moral effort to lay the book down before finishing it."
Literary World.

THE LIFEGUARDSMAN.

Adapted from SCHIMMEL'S

'De Kaptein van de Lijfgarde.'

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

"It is a work of remarkable power and sustained interest. Right to the end the interest is maintained, and it is not overestimating the work to say that few historical novels published within recent years are superior to this adaptation of the Dutchman's story."—Scotsman.

"We have no other novel giving so intimate an account of how things fell out, and what obscure events and persons helped and hindered the overthrow of James II. But the chief interest of the book turns round the private person, the Lifeguardsman, not all a hero, mistaken, erring, unfortunate, yet a brave man, and of the kind that stirs our sympathies more than do immaculate heroes."—Bookman.

"The historical portrait strikes us as very lifelike, and leaving on the whole a noble impression. The events of 1688–90 are faithfully followed, but receive a new light from the Dutch point of view in which they are regarded."—National Observer.

"'The Lifeguardsman' is a historical novel of very unusual power and fidelity."
Belfast Northern Whig.

A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, London.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

FRANK BARRETT'S New Novel, A MISSING WITNESS, is now ready, with 8 Illustrations by W. H. MARGETSON. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

SECOND EDITION JUST READY.

WITH the RED EAGLE: a Romance of the Tyrol. By WILLIAM WESTALL. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s.

"It never lags or fails to entertain; is as full of hairbreadth escapes and perils by flood and field as the most jaded of romance-readers could desire."—Manchester Times.

"Mr. Westall made a choice singularly happy when he selected Tyrol as the scene of his new tale, and Hofer and his companions as the heroes of it.....We have read the story with great interest, and feel sure that no one who likes the stirring adventures of brave men will find one page of it dull."—Glasgow Herald.

BEYOND the PALE: an Irish Romance. By B. M. CROKER, Author of 'Diana Barrington.' Crown 8vo. buckram, 6s.

"The Irish people, from peasant to patrician, in the story are all natural and fresh—which is as much as to say that the book is charming.....It will both please its readers and add to the reputation of its author."—Scotsman.

SECOND EDITION JUST READY.

An ANXIOUS MOMENT. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD, Author of 'Molly Bawn.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Teems with the same delightful qualities that have won for her previous volumes the warm admiration of pleasure-loving people."—Morning Leader.

"A slight, graceful plot, a few pleasant characters, some light and airy dialogue, and a satisfactory ending.....Bright and pleasant—the very thing to wile away an idle hour. These characteristics are well marked in Mrs. Hungerford's latest volume."—St. James's Gazette.

The QUEEN'S CUP. By G. A. HENTY. 3 vols. at every Circulating Library.

"A healthy and vigorous story of adventure, full of fighting and cruising, with a good dash of love-making thrown in, is a gift which one can always reckon upon from Mr. G. A. Henty. 'The Queen's Cup' thoroughly fulfils the description."—Scotsman.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

PHIL MAY'S SKETCH-BOOK. Containing 54 Humorous Drawings by the Artist. Cheaper Edition. Crown folio, cloth, 2s. 6d. [Shortly.

The NARRATIVE of CAPTAIN COIGNET, Soldier of the Empire, 1776-1850. With 100 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"It abounds with life and diversion, and as such we commend it to readers who like books that live."—British Review.

MY FIRST BOOK. By Twenty- two Popular Writers. With 185 Illustrations. A New Edition. Small demy 8vo. art linen, 3s. 6d.

"More entertaining utterances than most of these twenty-two papers it would be hard to conceive; but they are more than entertaining—they are valuable."—Daily Chronicle.

The CRUSADE of the "EXCEL- SIOR." By BRET HARTE. With a Frontispiece by J. Bernard Partridge. A New Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"It is a story which deserves to be far more widely known than it is. Few of Mr. Harte's romances surpass it in humour, ingenuity, and that delicate treatment of difficult situations in which the author excels. Those who have never read it will be glad to have their attention called to a thoroughly characteristic example of this distinguished writer at his best."—Speaker.

TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE; and other Stories. By MARK TWAIN. With a Photogravure Portrait of the Author. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

"The real merit of this story, in which the origin of a mysterious crime is triumphantly elucidated, is the skill with which the author has kept both Tom and his friend Huck Finn in the mental and moral atmosphere of boyhood. None but a very accomplished artist could have done this."
Speaker.

The STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT. By MARK TWAIN. A New Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

NEW EDITIONS OF POPULAR NOVELS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

By GEORGE R. SIMS.
ROGUES and VAGABONDS.

By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED.
Mrs. TREGASKISS.

By Mrs. OLIPHANT.
The SORCERESS

By W. CLARK RUSSELL.
HEART of OAK.

By Sir WALTER BESANT.
IN DEACON'S ORDERS.
The REVOLT of MAN.

By Mrs. ALEXANDER.
A LIFE INTEREST.
MONA'S CHOICE.

By HAWLEY SMART.
LONG ODDS
MASTER of RATHKELLY.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

JUST OUT, with Map, crown 8vo. 5s.

THE DEFENCE OF THE EMPIRE;

Or, the Protection of British Ships, Ports, and Commerce.

A Selection from the Letters and Speeches of

HENRY HOWARD MOLYNEUX, FOURTH EARL of CARNARVON.

Edited by Lieut.-Col. Sir GEO. SYDENHAM CLARKE, R.E. K.C.M.G, F.R.S.

2 vols. crown 8vo. 18s.

NOTES FROM A DIARY, 1851-1872.

Kept by the Right Hon. SIR MOUNTSTUART E. GRANT DUFF, G.C.S.I.,

Sometime Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies; Governor of Madras, 1881-86.

With Maps, 8vo. 14s.

THE NAVY AND THE NATION.

By JAMES R. THURSFIELD, M.A., and

Lieut.-Colonel Sir GEORGE SYDENHAM CLARKE, R.E. K.C.M.G. F.R.S.

With Maps and Plans, 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12s.

HERODOTUS. The Text of Canon Rawlinson's Translation, with the Notes Abridged for the Use of Students. By A. J. GRANT, M.A., of King's College, Cambridge, Professor of History, Yorkshire College, Leeds; Author of 'Greece in the Age of Pericles.'

This, which is recognized as the best translation of the "Father of History," has hitherto been published only in 4 vols. 8vo., with all the full notes and excursus, and has consequently not been within the reach of students of moderate means. The present edition is designed to make the work more generally accessible.

Crown 8vo. 9s.

EUROPE in the MIDDLE AGE. By Oliver J. Thatcher, Ph.D., and FERDINAND SCHWILL, Ph.D.

Existing histories of the Middle Age, upon which so much light has been thrown by the researches of recent years, are either general in their outline or devoted to certain phases of the subject at the expense of others. This work aims at completeness and comprehensiveness, at the same time studying conciseness in detail by a thorough system of classification.

JUST OUT, with Portrait, crown 8vo. 5s.

MERCY OTIS WARREN (Sister of James Otis). By Alice BROWN, Author of "Agnes Surriage" in 'Three Heroines of New England Romance,' and 'Meadow Grass: Tales of New England Life.' (Forming one of the Series of "Women of Colonial and Revolutionary Times.")

With Portraits, 3 vols. 8vo. 36s.

The UNPUBLISHED WORKS of EDWARD GIBBON. Including Six Autobiographies, Correspondence, &c., printed verbatim from MSS. in the possession of the Earl of Sheffield With an Introduction by the EARL of SHEFFIELD.

Vol. I. The SIX AUTOBIOGRAPHIES. Edited by JOHN MURRAY. 12s.

Vols. II. and III. GIBBON'S PRIVATE LETTERS to his FATHER, his STEPMOTHER, LORD SHEFFIELD, and others, from 1753 to 1794. Edited, with Notes, &c., by ROWLAND E. PROTHERO. 24s.

A NEW POEM BY AN ANONYMOUS WRITER.

The WATCH SONG of HEABANE the WITNESS: a Poem. Based on the Traditions of the Early History of the World. Royal 8vo. 10s. 6d.

With Portrait, fcap. 4to. 10s. 6d.

LORD BOWEN: a Biographical Sketch. With Selections from his Unpublished Poems. By Sir HENRY STEWART CUNNINGHAM, K.C.I.E.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The SERMON on the MOUNT: a Practical Explanation. By the Rev. CHARLES GORE, Canon of Westminster.

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

OUR SEVEN HOMES: Autobiographical Reminiscences of the late Mrs. Rundle Charles, Author of 'The Schönberg-Cotta Family.'

Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

EILEEN'S JOURNEY: a True History in Fairyland for Children and Young Readers. By ERNEST ARTHUR JELF. With Illustrations.

8vo. 16s.

A MEMOIR of the LATE SIR JOHN DRUMMOND HAY, P.C. K.C.B. G.C.M.G., sometime Minister at the Court of Morocco. Based on his Journals and Correspondence. With a Preface by General Sir FRANCIS DE WINTON, K.C.M.G. With Portrait and Illustrations.

Crown 8vo. 9s.

COMMON THOUGHTS on SERIOUS SUBJECTS: Addresses to the Elder Students of the Rajkumar College, Kattywar. By the late CHESTER MACNAGHTEN, M.A. Edited with an Introductory Memoir, by ROBERT WHITELAW, Master at Rugby School. With Portrait and Illustrations

With Portraits, 8vo. 14s.

The LIFE of BRIAN HODGSON. By Sir William W. Hunter, K.C.S.I.

With Maps and Illustrations, medium 8vo. 21s.

The JAPANESE ALPS: an Account of Climbing and Exploration in the Unfamiliar Mountain Regions of Japan. By the Rev. WALTER WESTON, M.A. F.S.A., Member of the Alpine Club, late British Chaplain, Kobe, Japan.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

CLARENDON PRESS LIST.

NOW READY, small 8vo. buckram, 10*s.* 6*d.* net.

A DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE of the MAIOLICA and KINDRED WARES in the ASHMOLEAN MUSEUM, OXFORD. With Introduction, Notice, and Illustrations by C. DRURY E. FORTNUM, Hon. D.C.L.

TIMES.—"We are glad to welcome this literary completion of a noble gift.....A charming book, with excellent photographic reproductions of the best pieces in the collection."

Small 4to. 2*l.* 2*s.* net.

MAIOLICA: a Historical Treatise on the Glazed and Enamelled Earthenwares of Italy, &c., with Plates, Marks, &c. By C. DRURY E. FORTNUM, D.C.L.

SACRED BOOKS OF THE EAST.

Edited by the Right Hon. F. MAX MÜLLER.

Vol. XLII. HYMNS of the ATHARVA-VEDA, together with Extracts from the Ritual Books and the Commentaries. Translated by MAURICE BLOOMFIELD. Cloth, demy 8vo. 21*s.*

Vol. XLVI. VEDIC HYMNS. Part II. HYMNS to AGNI (MANDALAS I.–V.). Translated by HERMAN OLDENBERG. Cloth, demy 8vo. 14*s.*

JUST PUBLISHED, pp. 560, demy 8vo. cloth, 16*s.*

A CRITICAL DISSERTATION on the ATHANASIAN CREED: its Original Language, Date, Authorship, Titles, Text, Reception, and Use. By G. D. W. OMMANNEY, M.A., Prebendary of Wells.

JUST PUBLISHED, with Two Facsimiles, demy 4to. 10*s.* 6*d.* net.

The ORIGINAL HEBREW of a PORTION of ECCLE- SIASTICUS (XXXIX. 15 to XLIX. 11), together with the Early Versions and an English Translation. Followed by the Quotations from Ben Sira in Rabbinical Literature. Edited by A. E. COWLEY, M.A., and AD. NEUBAUER, M.A.

JUST PUBLISHED, Part VI., completing the Work, 21*s.*

A CONCORDANCE to the SEPTUAGINT, and the other Greek Versions of the Old Testament (including the Apocryphal Books). By the late EDWIN HATCH, M.A., and HENRY A. REDPATH, M.A., assisted by other Scholars. Parts I.–V. (already published), 4to. 21*s.* each.

EXPOSITORY TIMES.—"This is, and will remain, the Concordance of the Septuagint, and not to the Septuagint only, but to all the Greek versions of the Old Testament and the Apocrypha."

PART IV. NOW READY, 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

HISTORICAL ATLAS of MODERN EUROPE, from the Decline of the Roman Empire, comprising also Maps of Parts of Asia and of the New World connected with European History. Edited by REGINALD LANE POOLE. Part IV. contains—Map 1, The Roman Empire c. 350, by Professor Bury, Litt.D.; Map 20, England and Wales under the House of Lancaster, by James Tait; and Map 30, Ireland under the Early Tudors, by Robert Dunlop.

Parts I.—III. already published, 3*s.* 6*d.* net each.

A suitable Portfolio to take the Monthly Parts as they appear is now ready, 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

READY on FEBRUARY 20, crown 4to. cloth, 8*s.* 6*d.* net.

A STUDENT'S DICTIONARY of ANGLO-SAXON. By HENRY SWEET, M.A. Brevity and conciseness have been aimed at throughout. The meanings are given in plain modern English. References have been omitted, irregular forms are noticed very briefly, and cognate words are given only in Old English itself.

NOW READY, Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged, with Portrait and Facsimile, crown 8vo. cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.*

STEELE, Selections from the 'Tatler,' 'Spectator,' and 'Guardian.' With Introduction and Notes by AUSTIN DOBSON.

IMMEDIATELY, in 2 Parts, with 8 or 9 Maps, being the Fourth Volume of Mr. C. P. LUCAS'S

HISTORICAL GEOGRAPHY of the BRITISH COLONIES. The volume will deal with South and East Africa, the First Part giving a History of South Africa down to the Present Day, the Second including Geographical Chapters on the British South African Colonies, together with an Account of British Central Africa and British East Africa.

Already published.

Vol. 1. The MEDITERRANEAN and EASTERN COLONIES (exclusive of India). With 11 Maps. 5*s.*

Vol. 2. The WEST INDIAN COLONIES. With 12 Maps. 7*s.* 6*d.*

Vol. 3. WEST AFRICA. With 5 Maps. 7*s.* 6*d.*

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

INTRODUCTION to a HISTORICAL GEOGRAPHY of the BRITISH COLONIES. With 8 Maps. Crown 8vo. 4*s.* 6*d.*

RULERS OF INDIA SERIES.

The History of the India Empire, in a Carefully Planned Succession of Political Biographies.

Edited by Sir WILLIAM WILSON HUNTER, K.C.S.I.

In crown 8vo. Half-Crown Volumes.

Akbar. By Colonel Malleson, C.S.I.
Albuquerque. By H. Morse Stephens.
Aurangzib. By Stanley Lane-Poole, B.A.
Madhava Rao Sindhia. By H. G. Keene, M.A. C.I.E.
Lord Clive. By Colonel Malleson, C.S.I.
Dupleix. By Colonel Malleson, C.S.I.
Warren Hastings. By Captain L. J. Trotter.
The Marquess of Cornwallis. By W. S. Seton-Karr.
Haidar Ali and Tipu Sultan. By L. B. Bowring, C.S.I.
The Marquess Wellesley, K.G. By W. H. Hutton, M.A.
Marquess of Hastings. By Major Ross-of-Bladensburg, C.B.
Mountstuart Elphinstone. By J. S. Cotton, M.A.
Sir Thomas Munro. By John Bradshaw, M.A. LL.D.
Earl Amherst. By Anne Thackeray Ritchie and Richardson Evans.
Lord William Bentinck. By Demetrius C. Boulger.
The Earl of Auckland. By Captain L. J. Trotter.
Viscount Hardinge. By his Son, Viscount Hardinge.
Ranjit Singh. By Sir Lepel Griffin, K.C.S.I.
The Marquess of Dalhousie. By Sir W. W. Hunter.
John Russell Colvin. By Sir Auckland Colvin, K.C.S.I., &c.
Clyde and Strathnairn. By Major-General Sir Owen Tudor Burne, K.C.S.I.
Earl Canning. By Sir H. S. Cunningham, K.C.I.E.
Lord Lawrence. By Sir C. Aitchison, K.C.S.I. LL.D.
The Earl of Mayo. By Sir W. W. Hunter, K.C.S.I.
James Thomason. By Sir Richard Temple, Bart. (Supplementary Volume, 3*s.* 6*d.*)

A N D

TWENTY-FIRST EDITION, EIGHTY-SECOND THOUSAND, 3*s.* 6*d.*

A BRIEF HISTORY of the INDIAN PEOPLES. By Sir WILLIAM WILSON HUNTER, K.C.S.I. M.A., a Vice-President of the Royal Asiatic Society.

TIMES of INDIA.—"By far the best manual of Indian history that has hitherto been published."

REIS and RAYYAT, Calcutta.—"The publication of Sir W. W. Hunter's History of India is an event in literary history."

LAND-SYSTEMS of BRITISH INDIA: being a Manual of the Land Tenures, and of the Systems of Land-Revenue Administration prevalent in the several Provinces. By B. H. BADEN-POWELL, C.I.E. F.R.S.E. M.R.A.S. 3 vols. 8vo. with Maps, 3*l.* 3*s.*

LAND-REVENUE and TENURE in BRITISH INDIA. By the SAME AUTHOR. With Map. Crown 8vo. 5*s.*

ALSO PUBLISHED BY HENRY FROWDE.

In artistic cloth binding, 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

The THACKERAYS in INDIA, and some Calcutta Graves. By Sir WILLIAM WILSON HUNTER, K.C.S.I. M.A. LL.D.

TIMES.—"The ease and simple polish of Sir William Hunter's style conceal all traces of the severe labour bestowed on the researches by which the vigorous and graphic pictures given in the volume of past men and past times in India have been evolved. It is a brilliant piece of literary work."

Small 4to. 4*s.* 6*d.* net.

The ECLOGUES of VIRGIL. Translated into English Hexameter Verse by the Right Hon. Sir G. OSBORNE MORGAN, Bart., Q.C. M.P.

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.—"It is a thoroughly scholarly production, exhibiting qualities of a quite unusual order—a masterly grasp of the Latin, a fine poetic diction. Sir O. Morgan has been singularly successful in his choice of a metre.....This is the best translation of the 'Eclogues' we have as yet seen."

FULL CLARENDON PRESS CATALOGUES WILL BE SENT POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

London: HENRY FROWDE, Clarendon Press Warehouse, Amen Corner, E.C.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

TWELFTH EDITION READY THIS DAY.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 30*s.*

FORTY-ONE YEARS IN INDIA.

From Subaltern to Commander-in-Chief.

By FIELD-MARSHAL

LORD ROBERTS of KANDAHAR, V.C.

Besides Maps and Plans, the Volumes are embellished with Portraits on Steel and Copper of Sir JAMES OUTRAM, General NICHOLSON, Sir HENRY LAWRENCE, Sir ABRAHAM ROBERTS, Sir COLIN CAMPBELL, Sir WILLIAM MANSFIELD, LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA, Sir DONALD STEWART, Sir SAMUEL BROWNE, the AMIR OF AFGHANISTAN, Sir ARTHUR HARDINGE, and Field-Marshal LORD ROBERTS.

"A vivid and simple narrative of things actually seen by a fighting man who, during forty-one years of Indian service, saw more hard fighting than almost any other Englishman of our time. It also records the experience of a military administrator who has conducted historical campaigns and been the presiding genius in the re-organization of a great army. But to the general reader perhaps its chief charm will be glimpses which it gives, with a certain Cervantes-like naiveté of the personality of the author. A hundred unconscious touches, in the camp, on the battlefield, and at the Council table, reveal to us the veritable hero of the British private, and the fearless leader of men whom every native soldier would follow to the death."—Times.

"It would be difficult to overstate the service which the author renders to the British nation by reminding it of the true temper and trustworthiness of one of its greatest weapons of security, the army.....The story of Lord Roberts's life should be studied by every young soldier.....The peculiar charm of the book is the modest and generous spirit which, like a golden thread, runs through it."—Athenæum.

"A book which should be read and studied by every Englishman who would see the Queen's rule in India upheld, or desires to know something of the soldiers and statesmen by whom her enemies, within and beyond its borders, have been vanquished."—Standard.

"It is truly wonderful how Lord Roberts has managed to tell so much about the stirring events in which he took an active part, and often a first place, without for a moment intruding his manifest wisdom in council and patent bravery in the field upon the reader."—Daily Telegraph.

"We heartily congratulate Lord Roberts on his book. He has often before written and spoken like the good soldier he is, but now he writes and reasons like a statesman, and shows himself as great in one rôle as in the other."—New Saturday.

"The volumes form an authentic and authoritative contribution to the history of India during its great transformation, and contain the opinions of a statesman peculiarly qualified to judge concerning the present condition and future prospects of the Indian Empire. They happily combine the fascination of romance with the enduring interest of truth."—Morning Post.

"It will be seen that, with characteristic modesty, Lord Roberts hangs these two big volumes not round his own heroic and tireless career, but round India; and no such book about India has ever been written. For in writing Lord Roberts gets straight to the heart of a matter with the same unerring instinct that taught him where and when to strike in his campaigns."—Queen.

"To those who love records of daring and adventure, or who have not yet learned or tired of learning anew what the British soldier is, this thrilling story may be commended as second to none."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"It is not every one who can be trusted to write his own life; but some great men have successfully accomplished the feat, and to their number must be added Lord Roberts. Nothing could well improve upon these volumes. The story is told with the modesty which is a part of the author's nature; it is of the highest interest from the first page to the last, and the style is admirably clear."—Guardian.

"Lord Roberts's narrative traverses all the critical periods of Indian war and politics during the last forty years. He writes of them as an eye-witness, as an expert, and latterly as the chief actor in the closing scenes of an eventful drama; his story produces the vivid impression which comes out of accurate knowledge and strange personal experiences."—Spectator.

"A book which is at once intensely interesting and exciting, and at the same time supplies a vast quantity of first-hand knowledge, invaluable alike to the statesman and the political student. And, last of all, it is a remarkable revelation of the type of character rare in all ages—that of a man at once great and fortunate who has remained simple, modest, and unspoiled by success."—World.

"To the statesman, the soldier, and the journalist these volumes have a special fascination; but the mere on-looker who wishes to learn as much of the game as circumstances permit will nowhere find a more prolific source of information. The style of the writer is admirable from its simplicity. There is scarcely a sentence that could be cavilled at; compared with the florid and artificial work of some historians it is perfection itself. It never tires one."
Literary World.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

THE PEOPLE'S EDITION.
PRICE SIXPENCE.

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

In medium 8vo. paper cover.

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN.

By Mrs. CRAIK.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6*s.*

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR SHIPS

and their COMMANDERS. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"Pleasantly written and readable as it is, it cannot but prove welcome to a large number of readers who have no access to the heavier naval literature from which it is drawn."—Scotsman.

In 1 vol. large crown 8vo. gilt top, price 6*s.*

BARRACK and BATTLEFIELD.

TALES of the SERVICE at HOME and ABROAD. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'A Captain in the Fusiliers,' &c.

"Mr. Wood never fails to make his tragic point with force, and he presents the spirit of sturdy Tommy Atkins with fidelity to his original. A volume like this is always welcomed by both old and young."—Dundee Advertiser.

"There is nothing melodramatic about these narratives, which are obviously true to the life they profess to depict."
Globe.

UNDER THE ESPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY.
NOW READY, SIXTY-SIXTH EDITION.

1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved, 31*s.* 6*d.* bound, gilt edges.

LODGE'S PEERAGE AND BARONETAGE FOR 1897.

CORRECTED BY THE NOBILITY.

"That compendious and admirably printed guide to the peerage and baronetage of the British Empire has reached its sixty-sixth edition with the volume for 1897. The usefulness of this concise and carefully-edited book is enhanced by the excellent and stout paper on which it is printed."
Pall Mall Gazette, December 29, 1896.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

The WOOING of a FAIRY. By GERTRUDE WARDEN, Author of 'The Sentimental Sex,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

An AUSTRALIAN DUCHESS. By AMYOT SAGON, Author of 'A Fair Palmist,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

GENTLEMAN GEORGE: a Story without a Heroine. By Mrs. HERBERT MARTIN, Author of 'Britomart,' 'Her Début,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"Mrs. Herbert Martin has produced an excellent story of country life which loses nothing in interest from the fact that it has no heroine."—Scotsman.

BLIND BATS. By Margaret B. CROSS, Author of 'Stolen Honey,' 'Newly Fashioned,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"Miss Cross has a delightful style, fresh, crisp, and witty, without straining after epigrams, and her portraiture is throughout lifelike without being photographic."
Pall Mall Gazette.

The YOKE of STEEL. By C. J. WILLS, Author of 'The Pit Town Coronet,' &c., and GODFREY BURCHETT, Author of 'Dominic Penterne,' &c.

"The dialogue throughout is spontaneous and natural without lapsing into trivial platitudes or idle chatter. On the whole a capital novel."—Daily Telegraph.

OF the DEEPEST DYE. By Col. CUTHBERT LARKING, Author of 'With Everything Against Her,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"The author writes of nothing that he does not know, and the thrilling interest of his narrative enchains the reader's attention from start to finish."—Daily Telegraph.

A LEDDY in her AIN RICHT. By Mrs. TOM KELLY, Author of 'Time and Chance.' 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, 6*s.*

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

ROMANTIC INDIA. By André CHEVRILLON. 1 vol. demy 8vo. 6*s.*
[Immediately.

SEVENTEENTH CENTURY STUDIES. By EDMUND GOSSE. A New Edition, uniform with 'Critical Kit-Kats,' &c. 1 vol. buckram, 7*s.* 6*d.*

TIMBUCTOO THE MYSTERIOUS. By FELIX DUBOIS. With 155 Illustrations and 11 Maps and Plans. 1 vol. 12*s.* 6*d.*

TIMES.—"One does not often meet with a book of travel so full of interest and novelty as this. An excellent picture of the present condition of things on the Niger."

LETTERS OF A COUNTRY VICAR. By YVES LE QUERDEC. 1 vol. 5*s.*

SPECTATOR.—"Every vicar in charge of an English parish should read this book."

EDWIN PUGH'S NEW NOVEL.

THE MAN OF STRAW. By Edwin PUGH, Author of 'A Street in Suburbia.' 1 vol. 6*s.* [Monday.

SOCIETY IN INDIA.

A PINCHBECK GODDESS. By Mrs. J. M. FLEMING (ALICE M. KIPLING). 1 vol. 3*s.* 6*d.*

HENRY JAMES'S NEW NOVEL.

THE SPOILS OF POYNTON. By HENRY JAMES, Author of 'The Other House.' 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

STEPHEN CRANE'S NEW BOOK.

THE LITTLE REGIMENT, and other Episodes of the American Civil War. By STEPHEN CRANE, Author of 'The Red Badge of Courage.' Cloth, 3*s.* net; paper, 2*s.* 6*d.* net. "Pioneer Series."

THE NOVEL OF THE MUTINY.

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS. By FLORA ANNIE STEEL, Author of 'The Potter's Thumb,' &c. 1 vol. 6*s.* Eighteenth Thousand.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"A triumph. Mrs. Steel has managed to set the Mutiny before us till it is more like a personal recollection than a tale told to us."

LIFE THE ACCUSER. By the AUTHOR of 'A SUPERFLUOUS WOMAN.' New Edition. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

McLEOD OF THE CAMERONS. By M. HAMILTON, Author of 'A Self-denying Ordinance.' 1 vol. 6*s.*

STANDARD.—"Not only more promise but more achievement than in any novel by a comparatively new writer that we have read for a long time. It is well constructed and well thought out."

MAGNHILD and DUST. By BJORNSTJERNE BJORNSON. 1 vol. 3*s.* net. (Uniform Edition of Björnson's Novels.)

London:
WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Capt. Hinde's Fall of the Congo Arabs	203
Dr. Caldwell on Schopenhauer	204
A Book on Kafiristan	205
The Tree in Mythology	206
New Novels (Lady Jean's Son; Blind Bats; L'Amour Dominateur; Sur les Ruines)	207
The Law of Commons and Rights of Way	208
Recent Verse	208
Scandinavian Novels	210
Local History	210
Classical School-books	211
Annuals	212
Our Library Table—List of New Books ...	212—213
The Coronation of the Conqueror; Melanchthon; Samuel Pepys's Will; Thomas Stapleton's Copy of the Works of Sir Thomas More; 'The Testament of Love'; "The Bookmaker's Bar"	214—215
Literary Gossip	216
Science — Harper's Alps of New Zealand; Societies; Meetings; Gossip	217—219
Fine Arts—Ford Madox Brown's Works; Mr. G. P. Boyce; Sales; Gossip	220—222
Music—The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week	222—223
Drama—The Week; Gossip	223
Miscellanea	224

LITERATURE

The Fall of the Congo Arabs. By Sidney Langford Hinde. (Methuen & Co.)

As Mr. Hinde has resumed his earlier profession and is now medical officer in the British East African Protectorate, he must not be held responsible for some faults in this account of his experiences as a warrior in the Congo Free State. Had he been within reach of proof-sheets he would probably have filled up gaps and corrected slips in the narrative, or seen, at any rate, that names were not misspelt. To call Dr. Parke, the friend who induced him to enter King Leopold's service, "Dr. Park" is a harmless error; but such mistakes as the writing of "Fivé" for Fiévez, the name of one of his most distinguished colleagues, are misleading. These, however, are small blemishes in a highly interesting and instructive book. Baron Dhanis's bald official report of his campaigning between 1892 and 1894, hitherto the only authentic source of information on the subject, is here amplified and supplemented by his English companion, and from the two accounts, read together, a clear notion can be obtained of the ugly business described in them.

Neither Baron Dhanis nor Mr. Hinde tells the story from its beginning. It would be interesting to know much more than has yet been published on the question how the Congo State's quarrel with Tippoo Tib and other so-called Arabs with whom it entered into partnership in 1887 arose and developed. The feud had grown desperate before the end of 1889, when Inspector Fiévez achieved what was supposed to be a great victory over Tippoo's followers near Stanley Falls; and only harm came to the Congo State from the numerous little expeditions, pacific or punitive, under MM. Delcommune, Le Marinel, and others, which ensued. Though State officials resided till they were killed off in the so-called Arab strongholds, they were unable, even if they tried, to check the slave-raiding propensities of the masters of the situation, and it is clear that all efforts to control or get profit out of the one-sided alliance merely added to the troubles of the State. It was not so much to open the way to Katanga in the south as to avert a threatened march on Leopoldville and the overthrow of all which was left of King Leopold's authority in his African dominions that Capt. (now Baron) Dhanis was sent on the expedition of 1892.

Mr. Hinde was one of the Europeans enlisted for this or similar work, but, being detained at Leopoldville, he was only in time to join Capt. Dhanis at Lusambo, on the Sankurru, when the first campaign was nearly over. Tippoo Tib's principal agent in this district, Gongo Lutete, had been repulsed in several encounters, and was preparing to transfer his allegiance from Tippoo to the State. Gongo Lutete, then about thirty years old, 5 ft. 9 in. in height—"a well-built intelligent-looking man, with a brown skin, large brown eyes with very long lashes, a small mouth with thin lips, and a straight, comparatively narrow nose," also with "extremely dignified manners" and "a way of never letting any one forget that he was a chief"—appears to have been a favourable specimen of the cannibal Bantus whom the Belgian invaders denounced as Arabs so long as they were at war with them, and welcomed as patriotic allies as soon as they came to terms with the State:—

"Gongo Lutete was born in Malela, and was by blood a Bakussu. He had himself been a slave, having as a child fallen into the hands of the Arabs. While still a youth, as a reward for his distinguished conduct and pluck on raiding expeditions, he was given his freedom. Starting with one gun, at eighteen years of age, he gradually collected a band of brigands round him, whom he ruled with a rod of iron, and before long became Tippu Tib's chief slave and ivory-hunter. He established himself at N'Gandu on the Lomami, holding part of Malela for Sefu, and by raiding gradually extended his influence to the westward, which brought him into conflict with the State. Capt. Descamps first, and Baron Dhanis afterwards, defeated him. After the defeat by Dhanis, in April, 1892, he came to the conclusion that it was no use fighting any longer against the State; and since the Arabs for some time past had paid him neither for his work nor for the ivory he sent them, he determined if possible to make peace with the State on his own account. This was a wise decision, as there is no doubt that the Arabs were both afraid and jealous of his power, and would probably before long have assassinated him."

Unfortunately for Gongo, his "wise decision" only staved off assassination for a year or so. Taking service under Capt. Dhanis in September, 1892, and placing at the State's disposal his own horde of five or six thousand fighting men, besides inducing other native chiefs and hordes to join the State army—which comprised but three or four hundred Hausas and other black troops from the West Coast, under perhaps half a dozen European officers—Gongo rendered loyal and efficient help to Capt. Dhanis. Without his help, or its equivalent, the whole expedition would probably have failed. "Gongo Lutete exceeded his compact with us," says Mr. Hinde, "and it is due in great measure to his care and pluck that we were successful during the first half of the campaign." But in September, 1893, on what appears to have been a trumped-up charge, based on a "rumour that Gongo was plotting to assassinate the Commandant," in which, according to Mr. Hinde, "we placed no faith whatever," he was made prisoner by the officer in charge at Ngandu. On receipt of this news at Nyangwe, Mr. Hinde was hurried off to investigate the matter. But he was too late. Three days before his arrival Gongo had been "tried" and sentenced.

"When, after the court-martial, poor Gongo was told that he would be shot the following morning at eight o'clock, he appointed Lupungu his successor, and when left in his cell hanged himself with a rope plaited from part of his clothing, to avoid the disgrace of a public execution. Unfortunately, he was discovered before life was extinct, and was cut down and resuscitated, and, as soon as he was sufficiently recovered, marched out and shot."

No mention of this treacherous treatment of "our brave and faithful ally" is made in Baron Dhanis's official narrative, nor does it seem that the executioners were so much as reprimanded. Lupungu, however, was allowed to succeed his father in the chieftainship, and Nzigi, Gongo's eldest son, was, in accordance with his wishes, sent to school in Belgium, "to undo the evil effects of his Arab teaching."

In language that is all the more picturesque because it lacks polish Mr. Hinde recounts the difficulties and the successes of Capt. Dhanis's advance—after he had gone from Lusambo to Ngandu and there secured Gongo's co-operation in September, 1892—against the forces collected by Tippoo Tib's son Sefu at Nyangwe, and, after Sefu had been defeated and Nyangwe had been occupied in March, 1893, against Kasongo, which was surprised and easily captured in April:—

"Kasongo was a much finer town than even the grand old slave capital Nyangwe. During the siege of Nyangwe, the taking of which was more or less expected, the inhabitants had time to carry off all valuables, and even furniture, to places of safety. At Kasongo, however, it was different. We rushed into the town so suddenly that everything was left in situ. Our whole force found new outfits, and even the common soldiers slept on silk and satin mattresses, in carved beds with silk mosquito curtains. The room I took possession of was eighty feet long and fifteen feet wide, with a door leading into an orange garden, beyond which was a view extending over five miles. It was hard, on waking, to realise that I was in Central Africa, but a glance at the bullet-holes in the doors and shutters, and a big dark red stain on the wall, soon brought back the reality. Here we found many European luxuries, the use of which we had almost forgotten: candles, sugar, matches, silver and glass goblets and decanters were in profusion. We also took about twenty-five tons of ivory; ten or eleven tons of powder; millions of caps; cartridges for every kind of rifle, gun, and revolver perhaps ever made; some shells; and a German flag, taken by the Arabs in German East Africa. The granaries throughout the town were stocked with enormous quantities of rice, coffee, maize, and other food; the gardens were luxurious and well planted; and oranges, both sweet and bitter, guava, pomegranates, pineapples, and bananas abounded at every turn."

The Oriental civilization that the conquerors found in Kasongo contrasts strangely with the barbarism they had passed through, and proves that, if the so-called Arabs did much harm to the natives by their slave-raiding, their rule was not altogether pernicious. It is noteworthy that the natives for the most part, instead of welcoming the conquerors as deliverers, resented their intrusion, and had to be freely shot down and otherwise severely handled before the new masters of the country were able to establish their authority. There were good reasons for the natives' distrust of the new-comers. Though the "Arabs" were ruthless slave-raiders and may have killed many natives for every one they caught, employed as a carrier of ivory to the eastern markets, and there disposed of, they were generous rulers of those whom they allowed to live and trade with them. Slave-raiding, indeed, seems to have been but one, and not the chief, means to the end they had in view. They were here engaged on more or less successful empire-making to the west and north of Lake Tanganyika, similar to that which earlier adventurers of the same mixed race and Moslem faith had achieved in what are now British and German East Africa, and in the districts around Lake Tchad and up to the Sahara, with whose occupants the English and the Germans, as well as the French, are now in contact. In breaking down—if they have broken down—the "Arab" dominion in Eastern and Southern Congoland, the Belgian intruders have substituted for it no new or better form of civilization. They have, rather, introduced fresh sorts of barbarism. Gongo Lutete, whatever may be said in his favour, and yet more his followers, were mainly induced to join forces with the Belgian intruders by the opportunity thus afforded for preying upon their neighbours and feasting on the abundant supply of human diet provided for them. One of the excuses put forward by Mr. Hinde for the cannibalism of his associates is that, by the prompt eating up of all the dead bodies left on a battle-field, the survivors were saved from pestilence. But this is hardly a satisfactory apology for the loathsome practice, which, on Mr. Hinde's showing, is greatly encouraged by such promiscuous and widespread warfare as he took part in. According to his account, the military and other operations of the Congo State have given a new taste to tribes not previously initiated in the delights of man-eating, and have quickened the appetites of others. In Mr. Hinde's book there are many passages like this, which follows his account of the capture of Nyangwe :—

"For three days we saw nothing of Lutete, and I learned afterwards, when talking over affairs with him, that during this time he had not left his own quarters; the sights in his camp were so appalling that even he did not care to put himself in the way of seeing them unnecessarily. He told us that every one of the cannibals who accompanied him had at least one body to eat. All the meat was cooked and smoke-dried, and formed provisions for the whole of his force and for all the camp followers for many days afterwards. A volunteer drummer who had been with us for some time disappeared, and we imagined had been killed. A day or two afterwards he was discovered dead in a hut by the side of a half-consumed corpse—he had apparently over-eaten himself, and had died in consequence."

Capt. Dhanis thought that he had crushed the power of the "Arabs" by his successes in March and April, 1893, and he spent some months in attempts to bring the natives into subjection; but several skirmishes and more serious engagements had to be fought near Stanley Falls and elsewhere, and when Rumaliza, who had assumed command of the "Arab" forces after the defeat of Sefu, attempted to recover Kasongo in October, all the available forces of the State were required to make head against him. The fresh campaign lasted till January, 1894, when a chance shot from a new Krupp, which had arrived and was being tested, reached a magazine in the "Arab" camp, and caused an explosion. In the turmoil that resulted vast numbers of the enemy were killed and the rest dispersed. Soon afterwards Capt. Dhanis considered himself justified in reporting that the whole country had been delivered from "Arab" tyranny, some 70,000 foemen having been killed in the process, in addition to the losses on his own side, and that the authority of the State had been finally established. What really happened is not recorded either by him or by Mr. Hinde.

Mr. Hinde's plain-spoken and gruesome narrative concludes with an account of an expedition on which, when the war was over, he was sent to explore the upper waters of the Lualaba. In the opening chapters he tells something about his earlier experiences between Boma and Lusambo, and especially at Leopoldville. Even in that would-be centre of Belgian civilization he found nothing to admire. "The station was badly supplied with provisions, and, as a consequence, both the white and black men were thoroughly out of health." The natives of the district who prowled about Leopoldville and its outskirts made up for lack of other diet by body-snatching in the cemetery, and such other cannibalism as was within their reach. The blacks in the service of the State, most of them brought from the West Coast, and many from the British possessions, were more squeamish or more under restraint; but the control over them appears to have been mainly exercised in compelling them to work, and punishing them for not working, whether they were ill and ill-fed or not.

"Prisons, in the present state of the country, are almost an impossibility, and the substitute used of chaining the men in gangs is not only detrimental to health, but is in every way pernicious and abominable in the extreme, and should certainly not be used for any but dangerous criminals. When half a dozen or a dozen men are chained in a row, and have to work, rest, eat, and sleep without being ever free of the chain for weeks and sometimes months together, their health naturally gives way. Commandant Dhanis was so convinced of the harm done by this treatment, which often incapacitated a man from work for months afterwards, that he practically abolished the chain in his district."

Baron Dhanis has the reputation of being more humane, as well as a better soldier, than some of his brother officers in the Congo Free State, and the general policy of the State is said to have been improved since Mr. Hinde was in its service. But Mr. Hinde's admissions and revelations disclose a condition of affairs in which there was certainly signal room and need for improvement, and his statements are all the more suggestive because he is evidently anxious to speak as well as he can of his former employers and companions.

Schopenhauer's System in its Philosophical Significance. By William Caldwell, M.A., D.Sc. (Blackwood & Sons.)

In the last few years the growth of Schopenhauer's fame has been rapid and extensive enough to fulfil even the most sanguine of his own prophecies. Never did any writer repeat the "Exegi monumentum" with a greater show of arrogance, and never, at any rate in the sober annals of philosophy, has such a confident prediction been more speedily realized. There is something in the boisterous common sense of certain of Schopenhauer's views which recommends him to the practical English mind, and therefore it is not strange that it was England which provided the earliest stimulus to the growth of his reputation in his own country. As long ago as 1853 John Oxenford's article in the Westminster Review, as everybody knows, first drew the attention of English readers to the misanthropic sage of Frankfort, who was railing equally at Hegelian transcendentalism and Anglican bigotry, denouncing Hegel as a charlatan, and suggesting that anti-clerical missionaries should be sent over to England with the works of Strauss in one hand and Kant's 'Critique' in the other. The article had the incidental effect of revealing to the Germans that they had a man of genius among them whom they were unduly neglecting. But although Schopenhauer's name was thus introduced to English readers in his lifetime, it was twenty or thirty years later, when he had passed away and his character and his writings had been the subject of violent discussion on the Continent, before English and American readers began to take more than a languid interest in him. It is only in the last ten years that that interest has become deep and general, thanks to translations, first of his chief treatise, and then of his more popular and brilliant minor writings, supplemented and enforced by a great number of expository and critical articles in reviews and magazines, and by one or two brief biographies. In Germany there have been several attempts at a formal estimate of his whole philosophical achievement; in France M. Th. Ribot published in 1885 an excellent little work on the main aspects of his theory; but no English writer has hitherto devoted himself to an exhaustive criticism of the value of his entire system. It has been reserved for Dr. Caldwell to undertake this work. A writer who has had a Scotch training and is Professor of Philosophy at an American university is in a position to gain a hearing on both sides of the Atlantic, and the present volume, the outcome of lectures delivered at Edinburgh three years ago, is certainly worth the close attention of all who are attracted by Schopenhauer. In its scope and treatment it offers a striking testimony to that philosopher's actual hold on the thought of the generation; and while it supplies an interesting view of the intrinsic value of his doctrines, it also indicates some prevalent misconceptions in regard to them.

Dr. Caldwell states in his preface that his aim has been, not to put together an exposition, or even an exposition and criticism, of Schopenhauer's philosophy, but rather to connect his teaching with some few broad lines of philosophic and general thought, and, as far as he can, with some few broad principles of human nature. It must be plain, however, that to test Schopenhauer's philosophy by any of the broad principles of human nature is, if the process be properly performed, to subject it at once to the severest and most practical of all criticisms. Dr. Caldwell has also gone a long way in the direction of effective exposition by drawing largely on translations from Schopenhauer's works, more particularly on certain little volumes of selections from the 'Parerga.' Of the criticism here offered it must be said that it is always acute and well informed, and often powerful and even eloquent. But the treatise as a whole would reveal its value far more readily and be far more interesting and readable if it were not so long. It is surely possible to test Schopenhauer's philosophy by the broad principles of human nature in fewer than five hundred large pages, even though they be swelled by a great number of quotations. Nor would the literary effect of the volume be otherwise than increased if Mr. Caldwell had retrenched the somewhat perplexing exuberance of his argument. "The half is more than the whole"; "le mieux est l'ennemi du bien": these familiar proverbs are nowhere more applicable than in the art of exposition and criticism, and above all in exposition and criticism devoted to philosophical subjects. The general defect of Dr. Caldwell's treatment is that he no sooner establishes a clear proposition in regard to some feature of Schopenhauer's thought than he obscures it again by writing round it. This is a defect that to some extent originates in the very acuteness which imparts a value to what he says, but it also argues a certain neglect of the truth that a man may be too thoughtful to be entirely lucid.

In making a protest against the foolish and superficial opinion that the exaggerations of Schopenhauer's philosophy are to be attributed to his character, and that his theories are to be explained by his own disposition, Dr. Caldwell strikes the right note at the outset. No philosophy deserves more serious and intelligent study, for Schopenhauer's system marks a turning-point and begins an era, in a sense not less real than that in which a similar assertion may be made of Kant. In proclaiming that the substance of being was not thought, but will—that will was the infinite and immanent source of all the phenomena of the world—Schopenhauer took a step in advance of all previous philosophers. Dr. Caldwell marks this significance of Schopenhauer's system by saying that it is his service to have reversed the whole process of German philosophy, and to have looked at man from the side of irrational action and passion, to which the Kantian ethics and the Hegelian dialectic had paid little attention. He also points, with entire justice, to the difficulty of reconciling Schopenhauer's view of passion and instinct as the fundamental reality with the glowing language in which he speaks of genius.

Dr. Caldwell makes frequent reference to what he describes succinctly as the philosopher's "illusionism," a term, however, to which he does not always appear to assign exactly the same meaning. At one moment it represents the tendency to regard knowledge, and even the subject which knows, as merely phenomenal—a tendency which comes in the end to make everything seem to be a phenomenon of everything else; at another it is used as equivalent to a negative attitude towards life and the world; at another moment, again, it is merely the baffling of desire, the unreality of all ideals, that seems to be covered by the word. Schopenhauer made great attempts to escape from this illusionism, and in so far, as Dr. Caldwell observes, he was an inconsistent idealist. Into all the bearings of the question on which Dr. Caldwell here touches it is impossible to enter. It is enough to say that he discusses not only Schopenhauer's, but all idealistic theory with really great ability. Nor is he less interesting in the way in which he indicates the steps by which Schopenhauer's philosophy practically became a metaphysic of the redemption of the individual will from its own misery and that of the world.

One of the best chapters in the book is that on the "Philosophy of Art," which, with especial clearness, brings out the fact that it was more of the insight which art affords than of the artistic sense for beauty that Schopenhauer treated. For the philosopher art was vision into the world of things and the life of men—a view which stands in very close connexion with his general theory of genius. Here, perhaps, more effectively than in any other part of his treatise does Dr. Caldwell indicate the conflict between the will and the idea in Schopenhauer's system.

In the passages in which he declares that Schopenhauer had a good deal of contempt for history and historical analysis, Dr. Caldwell indulges in some interesting reflections on the consequences of this defect on the part of the philosopher. In the first place, it made him, says Dr. Caldwell, fail to realize the historical antecedents of some of the elements in his own system. It would have been well if Dr. Caldwell had indicated the elements to which he alludes, as Schopenhauer's knowledge of the history of philosophy is commonly used for the very purpose of showing how well his theories agree with the teachings of the best of his predecessors. Secondly, the defect is alleged to have prevented him from properly appreciating the fact that thought as well as will is operative in the world, and that men have shown the greatest enthusiasm and self-denial, not merely for material, but also for intellectual and ideal wants. There are many passages scattered through Schopenhauer's writings in which he appreciates this fact to the full, but he has his own explanation and justification of it, neither of which is in any way invalidated by a contempt for that mere transition of events which was all he could perceive in history. That he looked upon history not as a progressive revolution, but only as a constant reshaping of old and permanent elements—like the groupings of the bits of glass in a kaleidoscope—cannot be advanced as a proof that he failed to recognize either the antecedents of some parts of his own system or the play of ideals in human society. Dr. Caldwell asserts that Schopenhauer was unable to regard history as the manifestation of rational will, and that this inability led him into certain difficulties. Schopenhauer, who denied that history in general could be so regarded with any real consistency, would probably have replied that to maintain the theory would lead to difficulties still worse.

Mingled with his discussion of Schopenhauer's views, particularly on the value of life, Dr. Caldwell advances many pleas and arguments which may be used in arrest of pessimism. He is of opinion, and rightly, that to employ this term as an adequate characterization of the philosopher's system is misleading. Schopenhauer himself undoubtedly attached as much importance to the positive aspects of his system as to the negative. Still, his pessimism remains, and it is part of Dr. Caldwell's duty to combat the extreme form which it takes. To approach the world, he says, in the proper spirit is to find it new and full of significance; and if Schopenhauer writes at times as if he held this comfortable doctrine, it is because he is wise in spite of himself. Of how many of us, philosophers and philistines, may not the same be said?

The Káfirs of the Hindu-Kush. By Sir George Scott Robertson, K.C.S.I., British Agent, Gilgit. Illustrated by A. D. McCormick. (Lawrence & Bullen.)

The country known as Kafiristan is specially interesting—to explorers and geographers because it is little known and difficult of access, and to others because what information we have points to a country wild, inhospitable, and mountainous, inhabited by a race who, in spite of the pressure of fanatical proselytizing Mohammedans greatly exceeding themselves in numbers and better armed, had till recently maintained their independence and secured the respect of their foes. In addition to this, whilst the men were brave, the women were said to be fair, and by tradition the people are of European descent, claiming a common origin with the warriors of Alexander the Great.

This remote country is mentioned in history from time to time. It was invaded by Timur in 1398 on his way to India. The Emperor Baber was on its borders in 1514. In 1604 or 1605 the Jesuit traveller Benedict de Goes went that way towards Cathay, and recorded that when between Peshawar and Jalalabad he heard of a country to the north called "Capperstam," whose people were hostile to Islam, wore black clothes, made and drank wine, and had temples. In 1809 Mountstuart Elphinstone procured information through a certain Mulla Najíb, and recorded that "the Kafirs were celebrated for their beauty and their European complexions. They worshipped idols, drank wine in silver cups or vases, and spoke a language unknown to their neighbours." In recent times some slender additions to our knowledge of the country and people have been made by various persons, amongst whom Major Biddulph, who was political officer at Gilgit, in an interesting book called 'Tribes of the Hindoo Koosh,' has devoted a few pages to the Kafirs. His remarks confirm generally what Elphinstone and others had recorded, and he mentions their gods, sacrifices, and dancing. But perhaps his most suggestive remark is that the Russian Terentieff "has confidently asserted that they [the Kafirs] are incontestably of Slav origin, and the natural subjects of the Czar"! Col. Tanner, who was for some time on the border of the country, observed a similarity between their speech and that of the people of Laghmán, Kohistan, and Dehgán; he described their dress, noticing specially the boots of markhor skin with a band of hair or fur below the calf. He further mentioned among their furniture kát, a cot or bedstead, and stá, a stool, a peculiarity of this race with which Europeans can sympathize being that they sit on a stool, instead of squatting on their heels in the manner common to the ordinary Indian. After hearing Col. Tanner's paper read Col. H. Yule remarked that when Kafiristan was explored the Geographical Society might close its doors. Mr. McNair, who was employed in the topographical survey of India, appeared next on the scene. He claimed to have entered the country on the Lutdeh side, though this has been denied by Sir George Robertson with somewhat scant courtesy as having "no other base than his bare assertion." In 1885–6 Col. (now Sir W.) Lockhart and his party entered the upper part of the Bashgul valley, but left after a very short stay; and he was followed some five years later by Dr. Robertson, whose interesting paper, read to the Royal Geographical Society in 1894, has been expanded into the portly but handsome volume under notice.

Its author joined the Indian medical service in 1878, and has seen field service in Afghanistan; he has also done duty with a mountain battery and as a civil surgeon. Whilst thus employed his opportunity occurred. A pioneer was wanted for the purposes of the frontier policy of the time, and for this class of work a doctor possesses special qualifications. To a knowledge of his profession, which is decidedly useful in conciliating semi-savages, he unites more or less scientific attainments with the power of making simple observations and recording information. Robertson was selected and sent to Kafiristan; he served also as surgeon to the Agency at Gilgit, and in 1892 was placed in charge of the Chitral mission, Capt. Frank Younghusband, well known as an explorer, being one of the members. At first all was quiet, the visit of the Hon. G. Curzon being, perhaps, the chief excitement; but early in 1895 troubles arose which involved the well-known defence. For his services during the operations Dr. Robertson was made K.C.S.I.

Having thus briefly sketched his career, we must return to Kafiristan. In 1889 he ascertained that the Kám tribe were on good terms with Chitral, whose chief exercised an acknowledged suzerainty. This influence was used to facilitate a short visit to Kámdesh, whence he returned accompanied by a Kafir. Sir George's idea—an excellent one—was to persuade some of the headmen to accompany him to India and see the wonders of that land, whilst at the same time he and they would learn to understand each other, and information useful for a second and longer stay might be acquired. But the headmen were suspicious, and deputed a man of no importance, for the sufficient reason that if he were killed or enslaved it would not matter much to the tribe. The party appears to have had a delightful journey through Kashmir to Calcutta, and Sher Malik, the Kafir, might have visited England, for Dr. Robertson came to London to refit. Returning thence, he met Sher Malik at Srinagar, and, apparently about the end of July, 1890, started for Kafiristan. Chitral was reached by the middle of September, after a lamentable accident when crossing the Indus at Bunji: a boat was swamped, several men were drowned, and many things brought from London were lost. The chief of Chitral opposed another visit to Kafiristan, and it seems, when he found Dr. Robertson determined to go, that he used many devices to frustrate the expedition. A good deal of trouble and some danger resulted, but both were surmounted by the judicious and resolute front which the doctor showed, of which several instances will be found in his book. We gather that this second visit lasted a little more than a year, and that he left Kámdesh on October 22nd, 1891.

It is admitted with regret that the work of exploration was incomplete and that the prospect of returning to finish it is now remote, but the result of the experience gained is thus recorded:—

"The first thing is to try and impress their [the Kafirs'] minds with the idea of a strong personality. Geniality and grave kindness of manner are as valuable as anything like buffoonery or 'chaff' is hurtful. The Káfirs would at times shout with laughter at good-tempered ironical remarks of a very simple kind. With an excitable people, such as they are, perfect coolness and command of the temper when they are effervescing or clamouring are indispensable. Ignorance of the language spoken has its advantages as well as its drawbacks. It is even necessary sometimes to assume a greater ignorance than you possess. On more than one occasion at Kámdesh, a furious conclave has been completely discomfited by my quietly bringing a chair, sitting down in a convenient position, watching the proceedings with a sympathetic interest for a few minutes, and then turning to my book.....Truthfulness is very important. The Káfirs used to test my word by coming back a week or two after they had been told stories of things which appeared marvellous to the verge of impossible in their eyes. They would with assumed ingenuousness revert to the former conversations, and would cross-examine me with great skill. I always took care that numbers and other facts never varied in my answers.....A greater mistake cannot be made than to strive unduly to win the affections of the people. The thing itself is practically an impossibility. If you retain their respect and confidence, and possibly their gratitude also, nothing more is necessary."

This is all excellent, and there is much interesting detail concerning the character of the people, their habits, and curious religious ceremonies; we are, however, bound to say that the greater part of the information about the Kafirs is rather a confirmation of what had already been gathered than an addition to our knowledge, and to the geographer the results of the expedition are somewhat disappointing. Many places mentioned in the text are not to be found in the map, which is, perhaps, on too small a scale. The volume is heavy to hold, and has no fewer than 658 pages, royal 8vo.; it would be much improved by judicious arrangement and compression. The common fault of not being precise in dates is committed throughout — thus the reader is constantly told that on the next day, or a few days after, or on the 7th, or on October 14th, certain events happened; but to find out in what year, or even in what month, involves provoking waste of time and unnecessary trouble. Again, whilst there is much comparatively unimportant detail, information on many points of interest is wanting. For example, were the routes followed surveyed, were observations useful for map-making taken, or are the villages merely placed by guess? Are the markhor similar to those of Kashmir, or do they resemble the variety found in the hills west of the Indus? Also a great deal has happened in Kafiristan since 1892 concerning which Sir George Robertson might surely have been able to tell us something of interest without violating a reasonable and praiseworthy reticence in respect to matters which are still the subject of negotiation. The illustrations are generally so clever that some detail concerning them would have been acceptable. Both portraits and landscapes have an air of fidelity not easily accounted for unless they were taken from nature; but as Mr. McCormick was never in Kafiristan he must, presumably, have worked from photographs, and it would be interesting to know whether the results are as faithful as they appear. The absence of an index is a great blemish in a book of this class, which has more than ephemeral interest, and it would be well, if another edition is required, to supply the defect. These remarks, however, are made in no carping spirit; author, artist, and publishers have successfully combined to produce an ornamental book, a notable addition to those concerning the countries in the decreasing zone between the English and Russian empires.

The Sacred Tree. By Mrs. J. H. Philpot. (Macmillan & Co.)

The author of 'The Sacred Tree' affords the reviewer an unfair advantage by the dangerous candour of her preface. She "lays no claim to scholarship, independent research, or originality of view." Indeed, her work is, more or less, a summary of Robertson Smith, Mannhardt, and Mr. Frazer's 'Golden Bough,' with references to Bötticher and others. While confining herself to the religious aspects of trees and vegetation, Mrs. Philpot warns her readers not to "undervalue the significance of the parallel facts from which" those of tree worship "are severed" in her volume.

As the book lays no claim to novelty, and is but a well-written, well-printed, and well-illustrated summary for the general reader, we may take the opportunity of asking whether the vegetable origins of religion are not being overdone. The idolon specus of the mythologist is to work with a single key where a bunch is necessary. We have seen the ark, the serpent, the ancestral ghost, the totem, the sun, the dawn, the stormcloud, the sky, the air, used and abused. Jehovah has been reduced, in origin, to an old gravestone. Now it is the turn of "the simple fruits of the earth," as Mr. Pumblechook says. Of course Mr. Frazer, like the lamented Mannhardt and Robertson Smith, knows well that "vegetation spirits" are not everything. Mrs. Philpot also knows it, but the general reader, finding "vegetation spirits" as prevalent with her as the sun and the dawn with Prof. Max Müller, or thunder with Schwartz, or lightning with Kuhn, or the crépuscule with Ploix, or the ark with Bryant, may think that here is the real key to all mythologies, the vegetable. Mrs. Philpot says, "According to Mr. Farnell, the latest writer on the subject, the chief gods of the Greeks were, in their origin, deities of vegetation." Alas! even the latest writer is not necessarily right. The gods are of unknowable origin. Zeus was not a turnip, nor Ares a corn-stalk. The gods, indeed, have arboreal attributes, "Dionysus in the tree," and so on; but they have also bestial, lunar, solar, aërial, and spiritual attributes. The origins no man knows; the gods are masses of accretions, the germ of the nucleus is a mystery. We can readily discern and disengage this or the other attribute in a god, but we have seen far too many theories of origins go where the roses go. The vegetation theory is overblown — it will follow the ark and the dawn.

Two points may be noted where Mrs. Philpot shows a deficient critical sense. The divining rod, she thinks, following "R. Smith," is "a superstition cognate to the belief in sacred trees," and she goes on to marvel that "people calling themselves educated" employ "dowsers." But they do it because they find it pay! Mrs. Philpot says, "It is not necessary to discuss the credibility of their assertions, or to formulate a theory to account for their success." Surely it is necessary. For if the dowser succeeds, as he does, in a sufficient percentage of cases to make people find it worth while to employ him, then the chances are that his empirical success, due to a traditional method accidentally discovered, and not connected with tree worship, is the origin of his process. Twigs are not the only things employed. The Tartars use a bench (Tylor), and if that be a relic of tree worship, so is table-turning. Indeed, the Thibetans are said to substitute tables for divining rods. Some English dowsers use nothing but their bare hands. Again, if the divining rod is "mentioned in the Vedas," the exact reference is surely worth giving. A Lady Noel is quoted as a successful amateur dowser (Quarterly Review, xliv. p. 373). The article might be Sir William Hamilton's if he ever wrote in a Tory journal. Lady Milbanke, Byron's wife's mother, also "dowsed." Dr. Hutton tested Lady Noel with success. The Chinese use peach-tree twigs in a kind of planchette. The wood chosen usually has some superstitions attached to it, but any wood will do as a vehicle of automatic action, real or feigned. The casual discovery of this fact, not tree worship, is the origin of the divining rod.

Once more we felt a presentiment that Robin Hood would appear as "originally a representative of the vegetation spirit," like Osiris and every one else. Our prediction is fulfilled. The evidence adduced by Mrs. Philpot is that Robin "is spoken of in an old book of 1576 as King of the May." What old book? And how can a casual remark of 1576 be proof as to the origin of a hero known, not as King of the May, two hundred years earlier? Prof. Child, in his essay on Robin in his great edition of the ballads, has surely exploded the attempts to mythologize the kindly outlaw of Sherwood Forest.

Mrs. Philpot's work gives the general reader, who "does not go very deep into these subjects," a glance at the conclusions of her masters. If the general reader only remembers the fugitive nature of all theories that are pushed too far, he will be entertained and even instructed. At more Mrs. Philpot does not aim.

NEW NOVELS.

Lady Jean's Son. By Sarah Tytler. (Jarrold & Sons.)

The defect in Sarah Tytler's eighteenth century romance is the unnecessary mystification of the famous "Douglas Cause" by the employment of fictitious names. Why, when in other details the facts are followed, should Archibald Stewart, the successful claimant, be called "John Drummond," or the Duke of Hamilton figure as "Andrew Douglas of Douglas Place"? This seems an unfortunate departure from the usual practice of "historical novelists." Yet in her main purpose, the presentment of Edinburgh society in the third quarter of last century, it must be admitted that the author has succeeded. We see the old town in its picturesque mixture of roughness and magnificence, and its close juxtaposition of classes, from which its native aristocracy is not yet eliminated. Here lived Mrs. Cantrips, of Kittlebasket, at the very top floor in the Covenant Close; and here we find the formal Mr. Simon Erskine, advocate, with his large family of noisy lads and lasses, on whom his nineteen-year-old daughter, gentle Jeanie, spends her care, subduing her simple inclinations for pleasure, even her hopes of marriage, for their sakes. And it is on the plain-stanes of this city that we find our friend Jeanie aforesaid, walking with her intimate, Lady Marget Elliot, of the "Teviotdale" family, on their way to the Parliament House, in which both have a personal interest. For Lady Marget, the beauty of her day, is as good as pledged to young Jock Douglas, the defender in the great succession case, and a certain red-haired masterful Davie Elphinstone, his junior counsel, is looking to success therein to bring him nearer to the hand of gentle Jeanie Erskine. Both girls are well drawn and well contrasted, both genuine and ardent in their love, and both held back, the one by her social instincts, which compel her to tear Jock from her heart if he is declared to be an impostor, the other by the filial duty which her easy-going, but imperious father takes for granted. There are several good scenes in the book: the farewell minuet which Jock and Marget dance with stifled passion at their hearts; Jock's interview in the kitchen of Jeanie Burnet, the cadie's wife, with the old Frenchwoman who claims to be his mother; and the dismission at his own instance of Marget's elderly suitor, so "sprush and wise-like for his age." It is also to be noted that the dialect is generally idiomatic, and handled with merciful discretion.

Blind Bats. By Margaret B. Cross. (Hurst & Blackett.)

The reader who is weary of social problems and the relations of the sexes as he mostly finds them in modern fiction may turn with relief to a pleasant, unemotional story such as 'Blind Bats.' The complications and misunderstandings that arise in the development of the romance might have found place in a novel fifty years ago; but they are told in so fresh and sprightly a manner that the reproach of dulness is inadmissible. Barbara Plowden, a little soured by the discovery that her first youth and her ballroom popularity are alike deserting her, seeks compensation in the care of her dead sister's child, and is outraged to find that the child has been left in other hands. Certainly at this period Miss Plowden is, as Kitty's guardian remarks, "hasty and uneven-tempered," and not a person at all suited to rear the young. But when once her quick wits and good heart have overcome a disposition to rudeness, it is impossible to withhold sympathy from so attractive a personality. How the difficulties in her path are finally surmounted the reader may discover for himself, and the fact that the solution is pretty obvious early in the book will not detract from the pleasure of its perusal. Miss Plowden, with her large and intelligent experience of life, forms an amusing contrast to the Girton girl who, from the platform of intellectual superiority and the depths of her enthusiastic stupidity, preaches morality to her "elegant senior." The characters, especially those of the women, stand out with commendable clearness, and there are touches in the story which prove that Miss Cross is a careful observer of human nature.

L'Amour Dominateur. Par Madame Hector Malot. (Paris, Flammarion.)

Madame Malot gives us a rare picture of a real woman. Her heroine is not at all a perfect woman. She is at bottom selfish, and accordingly not really good; but she is certainly not bad all round. Above all, she is a true woman, the best side of whose nature has never been called forth: a childless duchess of great wealth, never taught by life to learn to live for others. Irregular in her conduct in a second love at thirty, from a mistaken sense of dignity due to her married love at twenty for her dead husband; irregular in her conduct in a third love at forty, from yielding to the habit of letting herself be mastered by the desire for man's affection, she remains as a character throughout true to life, though not life of the best type. Of course, it will be seen from what has been said that this is not "a book for girls," but it is full of interest for those grown people who, without caring for a plot, seek for the truthful development of real character.

Sur les Ruines. Par Maurice Paléologue. (Paris, Calmann Lévy.)

M. Paléologue is a decidedly clever writer whose books are too strong for the ordinary taste, but who will probably increase his popularity among his special public by his present volume. It relates only the somewhat stale history of the relations of a sensual man and a sensual woman, where the man tires and the woman does not, and where the woman is more absorbed in the one object than the other partner. But the story, though a common one in French novels, is told in a fashion far above the average of these productions.

The Preservation of Open Spaces and of Footpaths, and other Rights of Way: a Practical Treatise on the Law of the Subject. By Sir Robert Hunter. (Eyre & Spottiswoode.)

From the widely interesting character of its subject this work calls for a longer notice than ordinary law books require in a lay journal. Its appearance is opportune, as, thanks to the labours of the Commons Preservation Society and other kindred associations and to the numerous cases relating to encroachments upon commons which have within the last thirty years been before the courts of law, the public now feels a deep interest in commons and their preservation. A reference to some recent statutes, such as the Commons Act, 1876, and the Law of Commons Amendment Act, 1893, shows that this interest has been strong enough to have already influenced legislation. Sir Robert Hunter's qualifications for handling the matter may be estimated from the fact that, as he says in the preface, he has for thirty years lent his aid in the direction of the movement for securing the preservation of open spaces,

"in the earlier days in a professional capacity, and more recently as a member of the various societies now existing to protect the public in this relation."

The author's aim, in his own words,

"has been to bring together the provisions of the law which bear especially upon the use of the rural districts for purposes of recreation. Owing to the constant growth of large towns and to the increasing facilities for escape from their smoke and noise, the importance of rural England as a recreation ground for all classes becomes more obvious and is more fully realized every day. So far as the author is aware, no attempt has yet been made to give an account of the principles upon which the enjoyment of the many and varied beauties of England is recognized by law. The present volume is an attempt to supply that deficiency."

The work is divided into two parts: Part I. treats of commons and other open spaces, and Part II. of footpaths and other rights of way. There are also lists of the statutes and of the reported cases referred to in the work, and eight appendices setting forth among other things provisional orders for the management of certain commons and other documents and memoranda germane to the subject of the book. Part I. comprises twenty-one chapters, the most important of which seem to be the second, treating of the enclosure of a manorial common by the lord of the manor, and the thirteenth, which is devoted to the enclosure of a manorial common by the authority of Parliament. In chap. ii. the power of the lord of a manor to appropriate to his own use waste lands of the manor over which his freehold tenants and other persons possess rights of common is considered. Before the Statute of Merton (20 Henry III., c. 4) the lord of a manor seems to have had no right to enclose any part of the waste land of the manor so as to deprive the commoners of their rights of common over it. But the statute just mentioned gave authority to the lord to enclose or "approve" part of the waste, provided the remainder was sufficient for the use of the freehold tenants of the manor and was conveniently accessible for them. The Statute of Westminster the Second (12 Edward I., c. 46) extended the privilege so bestowed so as to make it available against "neighbours" or other persons entitled to right of common, as well as against the freehold manorial tenants. Much litigation arose out of these enactments—litigation which has extended down to our own time. One of the best known of the modern cases is that of Smith v. Earl Brownlow. Possibly some of our readers may remember the rather sensational circumstances of that case. By virtue of the authority which he supposed he possessed under the Statute of Merton and the Statute of Westminster the Second Earl Brownlow, as lord of the manor of Berkhamstead, in the year 1866 enclosed a large part of Berkhamstead Common, by erecting iron fences which shut out the commoners from the part enclosed. Early one morning in March Mr. Augustus Smith, one of the persons entitled to rights of common, sent down from London by special train some two hundred men provided with implements for uprooting and removing the iron fences, and by seven o'clock the same morning the work was completed. Litigation followed. The Earl brought an action against Mr. Smith for trespass, and Mr. Smith instituted a suit in equity against the Earl, asking for an injunction to restrain him from interfering with the commoners' rights. The action, we believe, was abandoned. In 1867 the Earl died, and the suit was revived against his successor in the title and estates, and a perpetual injunction as asked for was granted against the defendant, who had failed to show that so much of the waste as had been left to the commoners was sufficient for their use. It is now, however, provided by the Law of Commons Amendment Act, 1893, that no enclosure by a lord of a manor shall be carried out under the ancient statutes above mentioned without the consent of the Board of Agriculture; and such consent is not to be given unless the Board are satisfied that the enclosure would be for the benefit of the public.

In some manors, where custom authorizes such a step, enclosure of parts of the manorial wastes may be effected by grants from the lord of land to be held as "copyhold." But now, under the Copyhold Act, 1894, such grants must be made with the approval of the Board of Agriculture, and their consent is only to be given on the condition we have mentioned.

The above modes of enclosure were of limited application, and were, of course, quite inappropriate when it was proposed to enclose a whole common. In this case the only mode of proceeding formerly was by private Act of Parliament, and by this means, during last century and the early part of the present century, a vast quantity of waste or common land passed into individual ownership. In the year 1845 a public general Act was passed, providing machinery for facilitating enclosures. In pursuance of that Act, commissioners, who were styled Enclosure Commissioners, were appointed, and under their auspices during the next five-and-twenty years many enclosures of commons were effected. During the same period, however, a change was silently taking place in the mind of the public with respect to the enclosure of commons, and in the year 1876 it had gone so far as to lead to the passing of the Commons Act, 1876, an Act which, without repealing the General Enclosure Act, provided an alternative method of dealing with commons—that of their retention and regulation as open spaces. The Enclosure Commissioners are now represented by the Board of Agriculture, and the consent of that Board, as well as the approval of Parliament, is necessary before an enclosure of a common can take place, the consent of the Board being granted only in case they shall be of opinion that the enclosure would be for the public benefit.

In Part I. there are also important chapters on the waste and commonable lands of a forest; on the powers of local authorities to prevent enclosures by the lord of the manor; and on village greens.

Part II. of Sir Robert Hunter's book treats of the nature of footpaths; of the obstruction of footpaths and the remedies for such obstruction; of the stoppage or diversion and of the repair of footpaths; of highways and roadside waste; of foreshore and cliffs; and of rivers and lakes.

Whilst this work will be a valuable addition to the library of the practising lawyer, it should prove of much use to members of county councils, district councils, &c.; and by intelligent laymen in general many of its chapters will be found of much interest.

On p. 9, in the quotation of the third section of the Law of Commons Amendment Act, 1893, we notice a small error, "assented" for acceded, and on p. 15, in the quotation of the same section, another small error, "and" for or.

RECENT VERSE.

The keen interest attaching to Songs of Travel (Chatto & Windus), the latest volume of Mr. R. L. Stevenson's verse, is less literary than biographical, more of the heart than of the intellect; and yet for that, too, it is full of a fine and rare charm. Though it teems with thought bearing in it the germs of a true philosophy, it is, above all things, a record of the heart and soul of one whom we love and have lost—a fit pendant to the cherished Vailima letters. In these poems the idea reigns supreme; form is matter of accident mainly—anyhow, a thing of small account. One turns the pages with the lingering tenderness of one who reads, in the autumn of life, old letters written in life's maytime. In spite of—or perhaps because of—the carelessness of form, the inmost thoughts of a great heart here lie bare before us. The man who, perhaps, more than any writer of our time has won not only critical admiration, but personal love, from thousands who never saw his face or held his hand, here sets forth for us the faith that was in him:—

IF THIS WERE FAITH.

God, if this were enough,
That I see things bare to the buff,
And up to the buttocks in mire;
That I ask nor hope nor hire,
Nut in the husk,
Nor dawn beyond the dusk,

Nor life beyond death:
God, if this were faith?

Having felt thy wind in my face
Spit sorrow and disgrace,
Having seen thine evil doom
In Golgotha and Khartoum,
And the brutes, the work of thine hands,
Fill with injustice lands
And stain with blood the sea:
If still in my veins the glee
Of the black night and the sun
And the lost battle run:
If, an adept,
The iniquitous lists I still accept
With joy, and joy to endure and be withstood,
And still to battle and perish for a dream of good:
God, if that were enough?

If to feel, in the ink of the slough,
And the sink of the mire,
Veins of glory and fire
Run through and transpierce and transpire,
And a secret purpose of glory in every part,
And the answering glory of battle fill my heart;
To thrill with the joy of girded men,
To go on for ever and fail and go on again,
And be mauled to the earth and arise,
And contend for the shade of a word and a thing not seen with the eyes:
With the half of a broken hope for a pillow at night
That somehow the right is the right
And the smooth shall bloom from the rough:
Lord, if that were enough?

Here is no careful sandpapering, no elaboration of epithet overlaying the utterance of the soul, no smooth perfection such as Tennyson wrought in his

—— far-off divine event
To which the whole creation moves.

It is the cry of a naked human soul, and to our soul it pierces straight. There are many noble thoughts to linger on in these pages, and much sadness of a kind that is noble too. Perhaps the finest poem that Stevenson ever wrote is this, which all who love Stevenson treasure as his last poetic utterance:—

Blows the wind today, and the sun and rain are flying,
Blows the wind on the moors today and now,
Where about the graves of the martyrs the whaups are crying,
My heart remembers how!

Gray recumbent tombs of the dead in desert places,
Standing stones on the vacant wine-red moor,
Hills of sheep, and the homes of the silent vanished races,
And winds, austere and pure.

Be it granted me to behold you again in dying,
Hills of home! and to hear again the call;
Hear about the graves of the martyrs the peewees crying,
And hear no more at all!

This again is no wrought work of "jewels five words long," but a human document "drenched in flesh and blood." With the brain of a genius Stevenson had the heart of a little child; like a child he showed his heart to the world, and the world, reverencing his genius, yet loves him best for the heart that was not afraid to trust its inmost secrets to his brother men.

At the first reading it seems as though 'Poems of Love and Death' would have been an apter title than Poems of Love and Life for Mrs. G. Colmore's little book (Gay & Bird), for the poems are as sad as they are sweet. But when one has read it again (and to a second reading it tempts irresistibly) one sees that those who mourn in Mrs. Colmore's verse sorrow not as those who have no hope, and that a passionate belief in immortality underlies her saddest poems. These seem, if we may say so without impertinence, to be mainly personal, and are written with a delicate charm and a lucid candour that go straight to the heart. Happy phrases are not infrequent; the general level of the verse is high, and here and there it rises to real poetic strength. 'On the Pavement' is a powerful poem on a miserable subject. The dirge entitled 'Three Weeks' has a poignant pathos all its own. The dedication of the book helps to explain the sadness of its tone, but it is no ignoble sadness, and no one can read this little volume without feeling that he has been permitted to draw very near to a soul full of high ideals and beautiful faith—probably the author herself would be the last to guess how near.

In his Ballads of Brave Deeds (Dent & Co.) the Rev. H. D. Rawnsley has produced a book which it is difficult to appraise justly; for the heroic deeds of which he writes are in themselves so moving that it is impossible not to be moved by the sympathetic record of them in verse. The real test, no doubt, is to compare Mr. Rawnsley's treatment with the bare newspaper narratives which he quotes at the end of the book. He does not always gain by the comparison; but, on the other hand, there is scarcely an instance in which he has spoilt the savour of a fine deed in his telling. Not to have done that is to have done much; for the prosaic accidents through which heroism becomes heroic are easily cheapened, easily made ridiculous, by an undue emphasis here, an undue wordiness there. Mr. Rawnsley's previous verse had not prepared us for the amount of skill which he has shown in such narratives as "Well done, 'Calliope'!" or 'In a Battery.' He has certainly written not merely with enthusiasm, but with taste; there are moments when his admiration of some grace or goodness of homely men, some half-ignorant heroism, gives him a touch of real fineness; and he is never guilty of the unpardonable error of writing coldly about matters which must appeal to the emotions or be without possible appeal.

Mr. A. E. Legge's Wind on the Harpstrings (Humphreys) has a pretty title, and the book has, moreover, a nice green cover with gold letters on it, and a title-page with black print quite large and legible, and after it a prefatory note that he who runs may read. Then follow the poems, which may be those of a second Dante—again, they may not; for Mr. Legge and his publisher have taken care that this point shall not be settled by any reader of normal vision. The poems are printed in type which is an insult to the eyesight even of a spectacled generation. We protest against this fine print, recalling as it does the Lord's Prayer written within the bounds of a sixpence; and we protest in the most vigorous and practical manner by declining to try our eyes over a problem which, after all, may not be worth the solving.

Miss Laura G. Ackroyd in Homer's Wine, and other Poems (Roxburghe Press), is unassuming, judges herself (as she shows by her final verses) quite justly, and is able to do really pretty work—too facile, indeed, but not without thought, observation, and a certain command of language. Her verses for and about children are charming; and she is always at her best when she is not trying to be passionate, or romantic, or elaborate. At times she finds a really original image, as in the last lines of 'A Twilight Etching':—

Across the gleaming Road three anchored ships
Sway to the tune of sucking waves, that o'er
Their keels with endless lappings murmur deep
Low secrets, kissing oft with baby's lips.

That is something observed; and ladies who write verse do not often observe anything with so attentive an ingenuity.

Sir Henry Parkes, too, like Miss Ackroyd, is unassuming. His Sonnets (Kegan Paul & Co.) are simple, serious, thoughtful, not always in the most poetic way, but without affectation, extravagance, or the prosaic folly of the epigram. They are the writing of a man who is not a poet, but who does not profess to be what he is not. Occasionally, as in the lyric written 'After Sickness,' there is a personal touch which gives almost more than a merely negative merit to this correct and measured verse:—

I almost bless the loss of strength
That curtains out the noisy world!

There we seem to find a sincerity to a precise mood, without which, at all events, we are not even on the way towards poetry.

How insoluble a problem is sincerity! The next book on our list is a work which, if sincerity could produce poetry, would certainly be poetry. Yet we read coldly what we are conscious has been written with deep emotion. Grief is monotonous, and plaintive reminiscence, without a vividness which only art can give to memory, becomes doubly monotonous. So Mr. E. J. Mills's book, My Only Child: Poems in her Memory (Constable & Co.), in which a father laments the loss of his daughter, becomes wearisome, sometimes unreal, though the writer is by no means without a certain touch of poetic fancy. The sestet of this sonnet really comes near to being good:—

GRASS OF PARNASSUS.

I clomb the hill and, in a nook of dew
(What time an early autumn touched the bay),
Found thee, a dweller dainty-sweet midway,
Where, on a sunny morn, the west wind blew.
Grass of Parnassus! Surely then I knew
Flowers are the site of tender Love's delay;
Hence by thy pure white petals did I stay,
And read thy crystal lines at closer view.
O, but thou wert so white! I could aver
That my lost child went thither soft and soon,
Alighting on the slope with holy feet;
So that there rose a little bud like her,
Left as a welcome to my quest at noon,—
That she and I, that love and Love, might meet.

All true originality is really nothing but sincerity acting upon a poetic nature; but sincerity acting upon a nature not really poetic can but produce verse which will seem to be insincere in motive as it is certain to be imitative in manner.

Ver Lyræ (Lawrence & Bullen) is a selection from three volumes published during the last fifteen years, and it is got up in an elegant manner. At times Mr. C. Newton-Robinson can write rather prettily, as in this little piece called 'Love Challenged':—

Look thou on me not lightly, Love!
Provoke but once, with herald eyes;
Then take all vantages of war,
—Trick, stratagem, surprise!

For so do I contemn and hate
The loveless ranks that I am in;
As liefest would I desert as fight,
And liefer lose than win!

I court an ambush, crave a hurt,
And beg no other, meeter doom,
Than donning fetters, Love! of thine!
Quick! find me prison-room!

But he is never more than rather pretty; he is vague and tentative; writes smoothly of Dulcibels and cathedrals and the battle of Crecy, and at times ventures, unwisely, upon the experiment of unrhymed lyrical verse. One of the sections of his book is called "Travel Notes." Did it occur to the writer to ask himself how these verses about Burgos, Toulouse, and the other delightful places which he has visited, would look if they were written down in prose? Has he not rather assumed that that may be sung which is not worth saying? And he really must not, even in a translation, rhyme "Lido" with "flow," and invent an accent for it in order to justify his mispronunciation.

"Sabrina" dedicates The Lilies, and other Poems (Digby, Long & Co.), to her aunt, and begs that relative:—

Do not deem them the fruits of misspent hours
Or them erase as things which should not be.

She explains, with a conscientiousness which does her credit:—

From sunny Riviera's shores,
Where lies a wealth of Flora's stores,
The lilies came to me,

I do not mean direct to me,
The lilies came from o'er the sea,
From Nice, Mentone, Cannes,
They come with many other flowers
Sent from the land of France to ours,
To bloom for a brief span.

"Sabrina" is right: her lilies did not come direct to her, and they are likely to bloom for a very brief span indeed.

"This low, ignoble strain," Mr. F. E. Ellis, the author of Sir Kenneth's Wanderings (Digby, Long & Co.), calls his book; not quite correctly, for it is a most polite production, inspired by 'Childe Harold,' treating of a pilgrimage, and containing at least one quite original epithet: "Yon tuftless rocks."

Life's Golden Age; or, Juvenile Congress (Digby, Long & Co.), by Mr. W. Cullingworth, is an amazing production. It is written mainly in heroic couplets, largely adorned with capital letters, and addresses to "dear finite youth" such counsel as this, and in such verse:—

A truthful childhood manhood's misrule shames.

At the end of the book the author assures his readers :—

> Throughout my task sensation to avoid—
> Romantic fiction I have lain aside; and, recurring to his "dear finite youth," he concludes :—

> Respectfully to you my feelings swell.

In a little book, nicely printed and nicely bound, Mr. Ernest Dowson presents to the world some forty or fifty sets of Verses (Smithers), almost all of them inscribed to big-little people, such as Mr. Arthur Symons, Mr. Lionel Johnson, Mr. Aubrey Beardsley, and Mr. Selwyn Image. Save in this last instance there is no exoteric appropriateness in these dedications, unless they are intended to please by contrast. The poem dedicated to Mr. Beardsley deals with curds and cream; the lines laid at the feet of Mr. Dowson's publisher deal with ladies' hands; and 'Beata Solitudo' is with singular infelicity dedicated to Mr. Sam Smith. We wonder how Mr. Henry Davray relishes the dedication to him of a sonnet 'To One in Bedlam.' Mr. Dowson's primary inspiration would seem to have been found in the work of Mr. Swinburne, and, indeed, he is faithful to his first master in so far that he cribs from him more than from any other poet. But the influence of Mr. Arthur Symons is also to be noted here, and Mr. Dowson follows him in every affectation of style. In two things, however, he differs from his exemplar—he has not Mr. Symons's audacity nor his spark of genius. These poems are not improper, but they are artificial, and there is from beginning to end no new idea, no phrase marked with the royal stamp. At the same time many of the verses are exceedingly pretty. Mr. Dowson knows the language fairly well: if only he had something to say!

SCANDINAVIAN NOVELS.

Siren Voices. By J. P. Jacobsen. Translated from the Danish by Ethel F. L. Robertson. (Heinemann.)—Mr. Gosse has done well to include a volume of the great Danish realist Jacobsen in his "International Series," but he would have done better still had 'Marie Grubbe,' instead of 'Nils Lyhne,' been the volume of his choice. The success of books like Mr. S. Weyman's points to a revival of the historical novel, and a more magnificent historical novel than 'Marie Grubbe' is not to be found in modern literature, unless we go all the way to Poland or Hungary for it. 'Nils Lyhne' is, indeed, a splendid exhibition of Jacobsen's marvellous style, and, as such, must captivate all lovers of superfine art; but we fear it will be scarcely so successful with that healthy philistine the general reader, for whom the series to which it belongs is primarily intended. The defects of the book are at least as obvious as its qualities. It lacks incident and movement; its characters are types and abstractions, the artificial creatures of a passing mood of the author's mind rather than living men and women; and, above all, it is painfully, irremediably depressing, as a book about Decadents by a Decadent must almost necessarily be. The hero, for all his brilliant gifts, is essentially a poor, weak-willed creature, utterly unable to realize the least of his vaguely noble ambitions. Beginning his career with the consciousness of a power to which nothing seems impossible, he slowly but surely drifts towards moral shipwreck, toys with life instead of using it, deliberately debauches the wife of his bosom friend while waiting for the inspiration which never comes, and is only saved from a miserable old age by the bullet which strikes him down on the battle-field. The other characters are all cast in the same mould, and the whole story is pervaded by a morbid atmosphere of failure, disillusionment, and death. The translation is, on the whole, excellent. Here and there, indeed, there are slight errors which a little care would have prevented, e. g., "aanded ud i dem" should have been rendered "breathed her soul out in them," not "breathed into them" (p. 168); "knogler der knuses i kjod" is, of course, "bones crushed into the flesh," not "crushed to powder," and the meaning of the metaphor is lost by this blunder; and "unchaste" is too strong a rendering of ublufærdigt: "immodest" would be much better. Still these are but trivialities. On the whole, the translator has done her work admirably, and we congratulate the editor and publisher on having placed such an exceptionally difficult book in such thoroughly competent hands.

The Fisher Lass, by Björnstjerne Björnson (Heinemann), marks the transition between Björnson's earlier and later manner—between Björnson the teller of irreproachable peasant tales and Björnson the preacher and teacher of startling ideas and aggressive theories. The first part of the story is altogether admirable. The description of the little fishing town is in the master's most attractive manner, and he has put into the story two of his best-drawn characters: the finely strung, emotional heroine Petra and her grim, masterful, explosive mother Gunlaug, one of those strong natures in whom Björnson has always delighted. The latter portion of the book, however, is given over to interminable discussions between all and sundry as to the possibility of a young woman, with a genius for the stage, being a good actress and a good Christian at the same time, so that what promised to be a fine analysis of character degenerates into a mere Tendenzschrift. The inevitable prig, usually a pastor or a pastor's son, who always plays a leading part in Björnson's moralities, as his later novels may well be called, is here also well to the front in the person of Hans Oedegaard, a terribly virtuous young man. The translation is meritorious, and quite free from the sort of blunders which disfigured 'Synnöve Solbakken,' an earlier volume of this "International Series." We would, however, point out to the translator that ax means an ear of corn, not a grain; that "curate," not "assistant in the parish," is a better version of hælpepræst; while to render Draug by "bogies" is an offence which lovers of Northern folk-lore will find it difficult to forgive. Can it be possible that this translator of a Norse story has never heard of the untranslatable Draug, the terrible demon of the North Sea, who rides upon the stormy billow in a half-boat to lure mariners to their destruction?

The Promised Land. From the Danish of Henrik Pontoppidan by Mrs. Edgar Lucas. (Dent & Co.)—We are glad to notice that Henrik Pontoppidan is gradually becoming known among us. It is now six years since the publication of 'The Apothecary's Daughters,' the first of his works, we believe, that was ever translated into English, and Messrs. Dent have just brought out adequate English versions of 'Muld' and its sequel, now before us, 'Det Forjættede Land.' Pontoppidan possesses many of the qualities which should make him popular with all classes of the English public. His art is cheerful, sane, and healthy; he is a genuine humourist, with a keen eye, but also an indulgent smile, for the foibles of his fellows; and his simple, concise, and pregnant style, pointed with light irony and graceful satire, reminding one occasionally of Guy de Maupassant, especially in his shorter stories, is that of the true raconteur. The present novel, as already mentioned, is the sequel to 'Muld,' also translated by Mrs. Edgar Lucas under the title of 'Emanuel; or, Children of the Soil.' The "children of the soil" are, of course, the peasants, and Emanuel is an enthusiastic young parson who, in order to realize his Socialistic ideals, deliberately turns his back on all that wealth and culture can offer him, takes a peasant girl to wife, and settles down among the country-folk as one of themselves. 'The Promised Land' is the pathetic story of his gradual disenchantment and somewhat shamefaced return to civilization, sacrificing in the process the noble wife of whom he is not worthy. It is an exceedingly clever study of the most diverse types of character, standing out against a vivid and convincing background of Danish village life and village politics. The parson himself, his much-enduring wife, his children, his self-seeking and unstable flock, to whom he sacrifices in vain seven of the best years of his life, and his aristocratic friends, who ultimately reclaim him, supply excellent entertainment. The translator has, on the whole, done her work well. Downright blunders are creditably few, but her sentences are occasionally (e. g., on pp. 151 and 195) clumsy and involved, faults of style which Herr Pontoppidan himself is absolutely incapable of committing. The book is prettily illustrated by Nelly Erichsen.

LOCAL HISTORY.

Mr. Spence Watson has done commendable service in writing The History of the Literary and Philosophical Society of Newcastle-upon-Tyne (Scott), which locally is affectionately called the "Lit and Phil." It was the indirect offspring of an older Philosophical Society founded in 1775, in the origin of which Marat, then practising in Newcastle as a veterinary surgeon, is by some believed to have had a share. In this belief we do not participate. Taking into account that one of the rules of the society in question was that on each night of its meeting the members should "discuss some Question, or Elucidate some Proposition with all the Freedom of Debate that is consistent with a decent Attention to those established Opinions, on the Belief of which the Welfare of Society in a great measure depends," it seems extremely improbable that Marat had anything to do with it. This first Philosophical Society speedily died. The "Lit and Phil" was founded in 1793, at a time when there was, as Mr. Spence Watson says, "only one other such Society in provincial England (in Manchester), and only three learned Societies even in London." It was founded principally as "a conversational Society," and had not all discussion of religion or politics at home or abroad been prohibited there would have been exciting matter for discussion at its first meeting, for sixteen days before that took place Louis XVI. had been guillotined. At first no attempt was made to form a library, but "an arrangement was made for the systematic borrowing of books by the members from one another." All the arrangements were humble. Meetings took place in a room for which six guineas a year were paid; but the society progressed from room to room at an increased rent and better fittings until, in 1798, it was equipped with a "lanthorn to light the entry and a pair of snuffers for the use of members," besides books and valuable fossils. In 1801 there was one lady reader; in 1804, two. They obtained admission with difficulty, spinning then being considered a better occupation for a woman than reading; but before long women were not only allowed to become members, but "it was considered that some mode of election must be found less revolting to their delicacy than the usual nomination." The society has manifestly always had in it the principle of life; it has survived great mismanagement and misfortune. In February, 1893, on the morning after a conversazione in celebration of its centenary, the larger part of its building was burnt, and yet the "Lit and Phil" is now stronger than ever. It well deserves its success: it has always treated its members liberally; it has always devoted money, energy, and thought to the great questions which affect the lives and prosperity of the workers in the important manufacturing district of which Newcastle is the centre. From the very foundation of the society scientific men have had every facility for making known and testing the value of any discovery they may have made. In 1805 a lecture was given or paper read 'On the Propriety of introducing Roads on the Principle of Coal Waggonways for the General Conveyance of Goods, with a Particular Reference to shewing the Practicability of a Road on this Principle from Newcastle to Hexham.' This was one of the many schemes for railway making which appeared and disappeared before the great invention obtained full attention. There were lectures 'On Fire and Choke Damp in Coal Mines,' 'On the Natural History of Coal,' &c.; and nearly every eminent man in almost every branch of science and art has had the society for his audience. Mr. Spence Watson has performed his task well and genially; but it is to be feared that he has not a proper horror of the havoc wrought by Mr. Richard Grainger under the guise of improving the town of Newcastle.

Gloucestershire Notes and Queries. Edited by W. P. W. Phillimore, M.A. Vol. VI. (London, Simpkin, Marshall & Co.; Gloucester, Davies & Son.)—This is a most useful county publication, which has now been issued for upwards of eighteen years, and has gone on steadily improving. The most valuable part of the periodical is the account of such monumental brasses as are now remaining. This work has not been undertaken a day too soon, for several of them have suffered mutilation in what we are compelled to regard as modern times. The careful descriptions here supplied may, it is to be hoped, hinder future losses. If this be not so, we shall at least possess accurate descriptions of the Gloucestershire brasses as they existed towards the end of the nineteenth century. It is a pity Mr. Phillimore has not been able to give engravings of all of them. This, we imagine, has been found impossible, but illustrations of such parts of them as are especially interesting are supplied. We have a little engraving of a purse or "gipser," such as Chaucer's Frankelein wore. It occurs on the effigy of Thomas Rowley, merchant and sheriff of Bristol, who died in 1478, and was buried in St. John's Church in that city. Attached to this purse is a rosary of, as it seems, sixteen beads, but it is possible that some others may be meant to be understood as hidden. In any case, it seems unlikely that a rosary such as those now in use among Roman Catholics here and elsewhere can be intended, as they are commonly divided into decades. We have seen several old portraits where the beads which the ladies wear are not divided into tens. The subject requires investigation. It is possible that in days previous to the Reformation the number of beads may at times have depended very much on the fancy of the wearer. Another "gipser," which the writer regards as of about 1480, is figured from a brass in the church of St. Mary, Redcliffe. Here it is also accompanied by a rosary, but in this instance there is nothing to remark upon: the beads are divided into two sections, each containing ten. The interesting notes on Hanham Court are accompanied by well-executed illustrations. The building seems to be still in good repair, therefore it is to be hoped that it may continue to be preserved from decay and restoration. Readers will wish the writer had told them more about it and accompanied his remarks by a plan. Adjoining the Court is an Early English church, consisting of a nave, choir, and south aisle. There is too, we hear, an interesting Norman font. We do not understand whether the church is still in use or not. The writer conjectures that it was dedicated to St. George because one of the bells in the tower is inscribed to him. This cannot be admitted as evidence; in fact, it rather favours the idea that the church's dedication was to some one else. The accounts of bell inscriptions which have already been issued seem to prove, so far as they go, that the bells were rarely dedicated to the patron of the church. If the fabric has ever been a place of burial, its dedication is almost sure to be mentioned in pre-Reformation wills. Old barns are much rarer than old churches; there is, however, one here, which is thus spoken of:—

"Situate a few yards to the north of this western wing there is a large barn, whose massive walls and buttresses and rounded arch on the eastern side seem to point to its being of the late Norman period."

If this be so it should be tenderly cared for. An engraving is given, but it is not very instructive. Upton St. Leonards, near Gloucester, has a common field—if it has not already been enclosed—which is a relic of an early form of culture by no means uncommon in the last century, but now almost entirely swept away. There are between five and six hundred acres, thus described:—

"It is all common land, held in severalty by the various owners during part of the year until the crops are removed, and after harvest subject to be depastured in common by the stock of the freeholders. Each tract is made up of a number of unfenced strips, of which there are in all about 1,130, of the average size of half-an-acre, belonging to more than 80 owners."

The dog-whipper has become a thing of the past; the last instance we can call to mind of that functionary being paid a salary for his work occurred somewhere about eighty years ago, but in some places dogs were accustomed to follow their masters and mistresses to church at a much later period. Pattens, at least of the old kind, are never seen nowadays, but there must be among our readers not a few who can remember the clatter of the pattens as the old women thronged into church on a Sunday. The following inscription, painted on a board, is still to be seen in the north porch of Hawkesbury Church:—

"It is desired that all Persons that do come to this Church would be careful to leave their Dogs at home & that the Women would not walk in with their Pattens."

The will of Robert Ingram, executed in 1543, is curious as marking a time of transition. He leaves his soul to God, but the saints are not mentioned; had it been executed ten years earlier it is almost certain that they would not have been omitted.

Bygone Sussex, by W. E. A. Axon (Andrews & Co.), is, on the whole, a creditable specimen of the "Bygone" series. Although written in a popular style, it avoids the snare of sentimental weakness, and keeps clear of serious errors. The best, however, that can be said for these books of gossip about the past is that they may awaken in their readers an interest in the history of their district. The longest paper, 'In Denis Duval's Country,' is a pleasant enough sketch of Rye, which is evidently a favourite spot with the author. 'Pardon Brasses' is perhaps the most ambitious essay in the volume. Sussex ballads and chapbooks have been ransacked, but a good deal of feeble modern poetry, which also appears, might have been omitted. The legend of the 'Merchant of Chichester,' rescued abroad from the gallows by a maiden offering to marry him, is widespread, as the author observes; but he is not aware that the practice was legally recognized in France, as is proved by the "Établissemens de Rouen." The illustrations, which are from photographs, are successful, and the book is provided with an index.

In his reissue of Rambles in Galloway (Dalbeattie, Fraser; London, Fisher Unwin) Mr. Malcolm McL. Harper has revised the first edition of his work, published twenty years ago and long out of print, and added much to it in the shape both of new materials and of fresh illustrations. Since the book came out the district has leapt into an unexpected popularity through the stories of Mr. Crockett, and doubtless many of those who have been fascinated by 'The Raiders,' 'The Lilac Sunbonnet,' and other Galloway tales, will be glad to consult Mr. Harper's pages for a more detailed account of their favourite scenes. A good index enhances the value of the volume, which is dedicated to Sir Mark Stewart, Bart., M.P. for the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright. The pictures, by numerous hands, are adequate, but the older woodblocks, which are a good deal the worse for wear, might well have been discarded.

Annals of Garelochside, by William Charles Maughan (Paisley, Gardner), is a commendable expansion of 'Rosneath Past and Present,' reviewed by us three years ago as "one of the best parish histories that Scotland has produced." It takes in, besides Rosneath on the western side of the Gareloch, the opposite parishes of Cardross and Row, the latter containing the watering-place of Helensburgh and the well-known Shandon Hydropathic. Rosneath has certainly the more interesting history; still, in Cardross Castle died Robert the Bruce; Tobias Smollett was born in the old mansion-house of Dalquhurn; and Row has its memories of the bloody clan-battle of Glenfruin (1603), of the great heresy-hunt of Dr. McLeod Campbell, of the "father of steam navigation," Henry Bell, and of Madeleine Smith, Mr. Bradlaugh, and the "Terror of the Clyde." We still notice the same strong natural bias to the house of Campbell; and we still hold that Huntly was no rebel in 1644, but that Argyll was one in 1685.

CLASSICAL SCHOOL-BOOKS.

Pitt Press Series.—The Alcestis of Euripides. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by W. S. Hadley, M.A. (Cambridge, University Press.)—Mr. Hadley's commentary is, on the whole, good, but he halts between teaching Greek in general and the Greek of the 'Alcestis' in particular, so that Mr. Sherlock Holmes would probably infer that he had vamped up college lecture notes into an edition. We notice a suspicion of that facility of assertion which Mr. Hadley should allow others to monopolize. For instance, it would take a bulky volume to defend the statement made on v. 17 that "an indefinite relative may not refer to a definite antecedent." The best feature of the book is the trenchant criticism in the introduction of Dr. Verrall's view of the 'Alcestis.'

Pitt Press Series.—M. Annaei Lucani de Bello Ciuili Liber VII. With Introduction, Notes, and Critical Appendix by J. P. Postgate, Litt.D. (Cambridge, University Press.)—Any publication by Dr. Postgate on Latin poetry must be welcome to scholars, and an instalment of a fresh edition of Lucan's 'Pharsalia' is particularly acceptable, as the labours of previous editors, however meritorious, have left much to be desired. Perhaps textual criticism will be regarded as the most important feature of the work. The correction of erigitur (v. 141) to corrigitur is convincing in the light of the editor's explanation and illustrations. The transfer of the comma to the end of v. 216 is a slight change of excellent effect. The exhaustive treatment of vv. 462 f. is worthy of special attention. Our editor reads:—

Quo sua pila cadant, aut quam sibi fata minentur
Inde manum, spectant; uultusque ac noscere tempus.

In v. 43 for the verb of "quorum gemitus edere (vv. ll. sedere, odere) dolorem" we prefer soluere to our editor's clausere, as nearer to the MSS. and a more satisfactory meaning. The text "is based in the main on the critical materials collected in the Teubner edition of Dr. C. Hosius," an acknowledgment which scarcely does justice to Dr. Postgate's industry and accuracy. The historical introduction is exhaustive and full of spirit. In a future edition Dr. Postgate might occasionally pay more attention to the needs of immature or rusty students.

Pitt Press Series.—Tacitus, Histories, Book I. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and Index, by G. A. Davies, M.A. (Cambridge, University Press.)—Notwithstanding duly acknowledged indebtedness to Halm for text and Karl Heraus for notes, this edition is only partly "made in Germany." It appears on the Pitt Press list of "Books suitable for Various Examinations, 1897–8." There is a full and useful commentary and a creditable historical introduction. The remarks on "corrupta castra" (chap. xxviii.) afford a good example of sound and independent work. The construction is explained as accusative or infinitive dependent on a participle supplied from "metuens" by zeugma.

The Gallic War of Julius Cæsar, Book VI. With Introduction, Notes, and Appendices by J. Brown, B.A. (Blackie & Son.)—The notes and exercises, forty-four in number, of this elementary reader are good, but the vocabulary is carelessly prepared. Many marks of quantity are left out, as in "detrimentum" for "dētrimentum"; and the adj. aliqui (chap. xiii.) is omitted.

The Plutus of Aristophanes. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by M. T. Quinn, M.A. (Bell & Sons.)—This edition is not devoid of merit, but still its publication is scarcely justified either by freshness of treatment or exhaustiveness. The καὶ of vv. 8, 17, 44, ought to have notes; the MS. reading of vv. 119, 120, ought to be retained, as εἰ πύθοιτο is not a contradiction of εἰδώς, but a parenthetical variation dramatically appropriate to the perturbation of the speaker; ὑπειπεῖν, v. 997, is not "to add," but to hint; while just before the order τἀπὶ τοῦ πίνακος τραγήματα ἐπόντα requires a note. Surely ὅτῳ ξυναντήσαιμι πρῶτον ἐξιών, v. 41, is a gird at Euripides, 'Ion,' 787 ff.; compare also v. 10 with 'Ion,' 435 ff.

Demosthenes against Conon and Callicles. Edited, with Notes, Appendices, and Vocabulary, by F. Darwin Swift, M.A. (Methuen & Co.)—This elementary edition of two well-selected speeches seems about up to the average of such productions. However, ἐπάγεσθαι is hardly "undertake," and the editor seems a little weak as to the idiom of ἄρα, "after all," with a past tense (p. 38). The translation of ὅλος as "while" in the vocabulary appears to be a misprint.

Masters who are too lazy or incompetent to consult the special needs of their classes will find Easy Greek Grammar Papers, by F. Ritchie, M.A. (Longmans), 140 in number, useful, and of course examiners can pick out any number of papers from them with very little trouble.

Upon A First Greek Reading Book (Rivington, Percival & Co.) Mr. A. Sidgwick has bestowed immense pains in making practicable and attractive the method of beginning the study of Greek—after learning the letters and mastering a little elementary grammar (seven short pages in this case)—by reading continuous narratives containing easy compound sentences. We recommend teachers and scholars to give this method, as ably developed by Mr. Sidgwick, a fair trial.

The Student's Companion to Latin Authors, by G. Middleton and J. R. Mills (Macmillan), furnishes in a brief and convenient form all the important facts relating to the principal Latin authors. The chief authorities are quoted in the original, and there is a useful appendix containing a select list of editions. The book is really well arranged, and, as there is a distinct want of some such brief account in view of the University and Civil Service examinations, it will no doubt be widely used. In the section on Horace some notes on his philosophy might be added, and Pollio should be mentioned as a poet-friend of his and Virgil's. The absence of critical appreciation means a great saving of space, but the addition of the verdicts of well-known authorities like Quintilian would not take up much room and might be considered for a future edition.

Epigraphy is a study which no modern classical scholar can neglect, and Prof. Egbert, of Columbia College, in his Introduction to the Study of Latin Inscriptions (Longmans) has filled a distinct gap. Though his work makes no claim to be original, it gathers up satisfactorily the labours of the best continental scholars. Examples of all sorts are fully and lucidly treated with many illustrations. We note as especially well done the inscriptions which treat of the emperors and the very useful table of abbreviations (pp. 416–460). Difficulties such as the use of "imperator" are adequately explained, but occasionally, as in the case of the "Fratres Arvales," compression has concealed debatable ground. The use of exclamation marks to indicate letters hopelessly erased gives a very startling look to some pages. There is some awkward writing about the signs for the dead on p. 231, but the style as a whole is clear and easy. A protest against Americanisms would probably nowadays be insular, if not nugatory.

Messrs. Rivington, Percival & Co. have sent us several copies of their "Single-Term Latin Readers," all by Mr. W. Greenstock. The idea of a book for each term seems a good one, and is here well carried out. We have seen a better Latin version of Herodotus for boys than that of Second Term—Book I.; but his stories are quite the right thing to attract young learners. Livy (Third Term—Book I.) is too hard for elementary work, although the notes and vocabularies are both very full.

ANNUALS.

Politics in 1896: an Annual, edited by Mr. Frederick Whelan, and published by Mr. Grant Richards, is an excellent book, as most competent writers have been chosen for the various subjects. We almost doubt, however, whether it is likely to be a success as a book of reference and as an annual publication. The articles are of the kind which we expect to find in the best magazines, and are like many others by first-rate writers which appear from month to month. They are not specially designed for future reference. There is a Conservative view of the year by Mr. Traill; a Liberal view by Mr. Massingham; a so-called Socialist view (but more properly Fabian view) of remarkable ability by Mr. Bernard Shaw, who is as brilliant and as full of ideas as usual, but who will be sniffed at by the strict Socialist, who will probably, on the whole, dislike his article more than he will either that of Mr. Traill or that of Mr. Massingham. Mr. G. W. Steevens writes most competently on foreign affairs, and Mr. H. W. Wilson excellently upon the navy. There is a thoughtful and clever article by Capt. Maude upon the army, but it is a little provoking, as it does not really give Capt. Maude's view of what should be done. His criticisms on what exists and on what is being done are powerful, but he does not frankly adhere to either the newer naval or the newer military school, and he tantalizes his readers by stopping a little short of a conclusion.

The Literary Year-Book, 1897 (G. Allen), edited by Mr. Aflalo, is a new enterprise, and is, therefore, not to be judged harshly, although it contains some startling pronouncements couched in language not usual in a book of reference; for instance:—

> "The strong and liberal atmosphere breathed and exhaled by Walt Whitman seems, on the other hand, to belong to some huge and billowy epic scented from his [?] peak in the hollows of some adjacent era, wherein the innumerable intellectual tendencies of the present age shall discharge themselves finally and peacefully."

Mr. Aflalo would do well to remember that a year-book is intended to provide information, and not flowery writing of this sort.—Greenwood's Library Year-Book, 1897 (Cassell), is much less ambitious and more useful. Mr. Greenwood is an enthusiast, and is inclined to attribute more virtues to public libraries than other people see in them; but he has collected his matter with diligence, and arranged it carefully, so that his volume is full of information.—We have praised before now The Public Schools Year-Book (Sonnenschein), but it has still some defects. What does the mysterious sentence mean regarding Loretto, which can hardly be called a public school in the ordinary sense of the word: "Loretto School belongs to its present Head Master, but it is his wish and purpose to found it"? Why is that excellent school Llandovery not mentioned? and, as we once asked before, on what principle is Felsted included and Bury St. Edmunds omitted?

That most welcome annual The English Catalogue of Books has reached us from Messrs. Sampson Low & Co. The titles are now printed in full—a decided improvement.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Mr. Murray publishes The Navy and the Nation, by Lieut.-Col. Sir George Clarke and Mr. James R. Thursfield, writers of high authority, who reprint valuable articles from the Times, the Quarterly Review, and some of the magazines, and prefix a short introduction. The introduction lays down excellent principles in clear language to the effect that if the seas are held, territorial security, both at home and abroad, is thus provided, and that if they are not so held, no army and no fortifications which we are likely to possess can avert national ruin. The authors, perhaps, push their principles a little far when they ask of what use were declamation and diplomatic warfare, estranging the United Kingdom and Russia, over the inevitable advance of Russia towards India; for their language upon this point, and also with regard to a Russian occupation of Constantinople, seems to suggest that the advance of Russia towards India, and the fortification by her of the Dardanelles, with the perfect naval base of the immense Black Sea behind, would constitute no danger, no menace, no evil even, to the policy of this country. There are other considerations which enter into the account. The military defence of India becomes more difficult and more costly, and the holding of the Mediterranean is affected in like manner. Sir George Clarke in his first essay, a paper which was read in February, 1896, speaks of the naval and military expenditure of the Empire as being fifty-three millions in the year, but sixty-three millions would have been a more accurate figure; for Sir George Clarke can hardly have included loan moneys in his account, and there is no possible reason for drawing a distinction between moneys spent in the year out of loan and moneys spent out of taxes. He must also, we think, have neglected the heavy supplementary estimates of February last. Mr. Thursfield's most valuable essay on 'Naval Manœuvres and their Lessons' sums up the principles of the authors in another set of words from that used in the preface, which is also worthy of recollection, to the effect that we must make our defence an active one; and he points out (as Admiral P. Colomb, expanding the same idea, has also lately done) that we have spent, and are still spending, far too much money upon fixed defence of various kinds, compared with what we spend upon our mobile resources, military and naval. One of the most useful papers in the volume is that called 'England and the Mediterranean,' by Sir George Clarke, in which he has shown the danger of a policy which has been advocated by such high authorities as Mr. Arnold-Forster and Mr. Laird Clowes, and supported by Mr. Shaw-Lefevre and some other Liberal politicians, who desire that we should abandon the Mediterranean, and mask it from without. Mr. Arnold-Forster and "Nauticus" have done such good work that their names naturally carry the greatest weight, but Capt. Mahan has well shown, and Sir George Clarke proves, that we cannot divide the seas and retire from such a sea as the Mediterranean with the effect of increasing the cheapness of our defence. Sir George Clarke, however, goes too far, for he seems to imply that it would be possible to use the Mediterranean and Suez Canal as a trade route in time of dangerous war—a contention in which the best sailors fail to follow him. The statements of Sir George Clarke in this paper are, perhaps, slightly at variance with the suggestions of the introduction to which he has set his name. In the introduction he seems to discourage the military occupation of Egypt and the military tenancy of Cyprus, while in the paper 'England and the Mediterranean' he shows that he thinks that the occupation of Egypt is of some military value, and he uses the phrase "Cyprus reverts to the Porte" (of the policy of Mr. Laird Clowes) as though he disliked to contemplate its loss. There is no absolute contradiction, but there is a difference of tone which will mislead the ordinary reader. On the whole, we can highly commend this valuable republication.

Some Unconventional People. By Mrs. Gladwyn Jebb. (Blackwood & Sons.)—Readers of 'The Life and Adventures of John Gladwyn Jebb,' which we noticed rather more than two years ago, will remember that that romantic book was written by his widow, who had passed some years in Mexico, and had enjoyed many strange experiences. Miners, prospectors, concession hunters, frontiersmen, and, of course, Mexicans, were the "unconventional people" who entered largely into the life of the Jebbs, and these are now characteristically described in just a dozen chapters. It can hardly be expected that readers who have never met with such persons will enjoy this little book as much as we have done; but the stories are told so briskly and with so much humour that they appeal to many tastes. Some are rather pathetic and in the style with which Bret Harte has familiarized us, but the majority are amusing throughout; amongst these 'Concerning a Mine,' describing how a swindling Mexican mine-owner was outwitted by his expected victim, in whom the reader is fairly entitled to recognize Jebb himself. But we will give an extract from 'The Ways of Guadaloupé' (adopting Mrs. Jebb's orthography for the name) and let the reader judge. The heroine came to the house as if to pay a call, but inquiry showed that she wished for a place "on the staff," and having been appointed to the post of parlour-maid, she proceeded to perform her duties in truly Mexican fashion. Under conciliatory admonition her improvement was so rapid that her employers ventured upon a dinner-party, and Guadaloupé dressed the table—likewise herself—most becomingly: after which she disappeared, not only for one but for forty psychological minutes, and was found calmly flirting with the postman, her chief admirer. Then she remarked that, "after all, men were foolish creatures, and she intended having no more to do with them," kept her word for five months, went away for a week's holiday, and returned at the end of a fortnight wreathed in dimples and smiles:—

"'What have you been doing, Guadaloupé?' she was asked, with an attempt at severity which failed lamentably in view of the truant's futile efforts to put on a suitable expression.

"'Nothing but this, Señora,' replied Guadaloupé, proceeding carefully to unroll a bundle which had been tucked away beneath her rebozo.

"'Good Heavens! Why, it's a baby,' exclaimed the Señora in horrified accents.

"'Yes,' said Guadaloupé calmly; 'isn't it a pretty one?'

"'But, what—why—you can't bring it here, you know,' expostulated the scandalized mistress.

"'Oh, yes, I can,' said the baby's unabashed mamma. 'It is very quiet, and I won't let it disturb the Señor.'

"'But you don't seem to understand,' said the Señora; 'it's wrong—wicked—it isn't respectable. We must do something about it. Who—Who—?'

"'The postman,' Guadaloupé replied, with equanimity; 'but he has heard nothing of it, and I shan't tell him.'

"'Oh, but you must, and your master shall speak seriously to him. We must see if we can't get him to marry you.'

"'If the Señora does not object,' said the culprit, 'I don't want to marry him.'

"'Why not?' almost gasped her listener.

"'Because I don't like him well enough!' said Guadaloupé."

Mr. Murray has sent us a new and revised edition of Sophocles in English Verse, by Prof. Campbell, which we reviewed on its appearance in 1883. A more regular correspondence between strophe and antistrophe is the chief alteration since then; and the execution of the lyric portions in rhymed verse, a task of extreme difficulty, is as good as anything we have seen of the sort. We still prefer Mr. Whitelaw's version in the dialogue, and remark that some weak places which we noted have not received attention, but the rendering is not devoid of spirit, and was quite worth reprinting.

In Lyrics in Prose by De Quincey (George Allen) Mr. R. B. Johnson has made some good selections from the highly coloured prose of the Opium-Eater. The little volume is a pretty one, and, though small enough to go into the pocket, clearly printed.

The Comte de Saint-Aulaire, who has previously written some books that we have praised, now publishes, through M. Calmann Lévy, Lettres de Vieillards: Études Contemporaines—a series of imaginary letters from a cardinal archbishop to another French bishop, from a former French ambassador to a former French judge, and between men of science, painters, critics, and so forth. We are unable to say much that is good of them, although they are well written, and not open to any serious attack, except on the ground that the archbishop and bishop, writing against the present policy of the Pope, write as ecclesiastics talk to one another, but not in the form in which they trust their opinions upon paper. The rather nice old people who fill M. de Saint-Aulaire's pages with their views write otherwise very like real people, but rather tiresome people, so that it was not necessary to make a volume of their views.

Messrs. Chapman & Hall have sent us another instalment of their handsome "Centenary Edition" of Carlyle's works. It contains Heroes and Hero-Worship, and is enriched with photogravures of Shakspeare (the Stratford bust), Rousseau from a contemporary mezzotint, and Napoleon. Mr. Traill's introduction furnishes judicious and acute criticism of the celebrated lectures.—Volumes XVII. and XVIII. of the excellent edition of "The Novels of Capt. Marryat," which Messrs. Dent are publishing and Mr. Brimley Johnson edits, contain that admirable story for boys Masterman Ready and The Settlers in Canada. Mr. Symington's etchings in the latter tale are excellent.—In their collection of the prose writings of Mr. John Davidson, Messrs. Ward & Downey have issued a volume (the fourth) containing Ninian Jamieson and A Practical Novelist. — Messrs. Newnes have been well advised to reprint Curzon's delightful book Visits to the Monasteries of the Levant, but they should have added an index, suppressed the frontispiece, and perhaps added two or three foot-notes correcting the slight mistakes which Curzon let pass untouched in his sixth edition.

We have received the catalogues of Mr. Baker, Mr. Edwards (good), Messrs. Karslake & Co. (interesting), Messrs. Luzac & Co. (Oriental and African literature), Messrs. Maurice & Co., Mr. Menken (two), Mr. Myers, Mr. Nutt (good), Mr. Spencer, and Messrs. Suckling & Galloway, and from the Theosophical Publishing Society a catalogue of theosophical books. We have also catalogues from Mr. Thistlewood and Mr. Wilson of Birmingham, Mr. Murray of Derby (good), Mr. Brown, Messrs. Douglas & Foulis, and Mr. Grant (two, interesting) of Edinburgh, Mr. Young of Liverpool, Messrs. Slatter & Rose of Oxford, Messrs. Hitchman & Co. of Sheffield, and Messrs. Gilbert & Sons of Southampton.

We have on our table Selections from Auerbach's Schwarzwälder Dorfgeschichten, edited by J. F. Davis and A. Weiss (Whittaker),—Single-Term Greek Readers: Second Term, Book III. (Rivington),—Light as the Interpretation of the Law of Gravity, by A. M. Cameron (Sydney, Angus & Robertson),—Advanced Mechanics: Vol. II. Statics, by W. Briggs and G. H. Bryan (Clive),—Transformers for Single and Multiphase Currents, by G. Kapp (Whittaker),—Hygiene for Beginners, by E. S. Reynolds (Macmillan),—Cycling as a Cause of Heart Disease, by G. Herschell, M.D. (Baillière, Tindall & Cox),—The Education of the Central Nervous System, by R. P. Hallack (Macmillan),—The Economy of Temperance, by J. J. Baker (C.E.T.S.),—Intaglio Engraving, Past and Present, by E. Renton (Bell),—Table Mountain: Pictures with Pen and Camera, by A. V. Hall (Juta & Co.),—Rich and Poor, by Mrs. B. Bosanquet (Macmillan),—A Little Lass and Lad, by S. Tytler (S.P.C.K.),—Three Little Wise Men, by W. E. Cule (S.S.U.),—Men who Win, or Making Things Happen, by W. M. Thayer (Nelson),—Shod with Silence, by E. S. Ellis (Cassell),—The Sentimental Vikings, by R. V. Risley (Lane),—Harold the Norseman, by F. Whishaw (Nelson),—The Chest of Opium, by Mr. M— (Neville Beeman),—Rada, by H. Vacaresco and G. Sarmento (Fisher Unwin),—Who Can Say? by E. E. Smyth (C.E.T.S.),—Armenosa of Egypt: a Romance of the Arab Conquest, by C. H. Butcher (Blackwood),—Molly Melville, by E. Everett-Green (Nelson),—The Dowager's Determination, by F. Severne (Digby & Long),—The Sermon on the Mount, by C. Gore, D.D. (Murray),—Life after Death, by Bishop Lars Nielson Dale, translated from the Norse by the Rev. J. Beveridge (Edinburgh, T. & T. Clark),—God and the Soul, by R. A. Armstrong (Green),—Archbishop Benson in Ireland, edited by J. H. Bernard, D.D. (Macmillan),—The Battle of the Bays, by O. Seaman (Lane),—Poems of a Naturalist, by M. S. C. Rickards (Chiswick Press),—L'Idée Spiritualiste, by Roisel (Paris, Alcan),—L'Hiver en Méditation, ou les Passe-temps de Clarisse, by Saint-Georges de Bouhélier (Paris, 'Mercure de France'),—Die Syntax in den Werken Alfreds des Grossen, by Dr. J. E. Wülfing (Bonn, Hanstein),—Gotisches Elementarbuch, by Dr. W. Streitberg (Heidelberg, Winter),—Pages Choisies des Auteurs Contemporains: E. et J. de Goncourt (Paris, Colin),—and Le Mystère de la Rue Carême-Prenant, by A. Robida (Paris, Colin).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Barnes-Lawrence's (Rev. A. E.) Secrets of Sanctity, a Series of Addresses, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Brooks's (Right Rev. P.) The More Abundant Life, Lenten Readings, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Cobbett's (W.) History of the Protestant Reformation, edited by F. A. Gasquet, cr. 8vo. 2/ net.
Humphrey's (W.) His Divine Majesty, or the Living God, cr. 8vo. 6/6 net.
Lias's (J. J.) The Nicene Creed, a Manual for Use of Candidates for Holy Orders, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Luckock's (H. M.) Footprints of the Apostles as traced by St. Luke in the Acts, 2 vols. cr. 8vo. 12/ cl.

Law.

Maude's (W. C.) Property Law for General Readers, 3/6 cl.

Fine Art.

Brown's (C.) The Horse in Art and Nature, Part 3, 2/6 bds.
Cosway, Richard, R.A., and his Wife and Pupils, by G. C. Williamson, royal 8vo. 25/ net.
May's (Phil) A B C, 52 Original Designs, 4to. 6/ net.

Poetry.

Goethe's Faust (the So-called First Part, 1770-1808) in English, with Introduction by R. McLintock, 8vo. 10/ net.
Gosse's (E.) Seventeenth Century Studies, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.

Music.

Reid's (A. and M. C.) Mirth and Music, a New Collection of Gallery and Action Songs, 4to. 2/6 cl.

Philosophy.

Fitzgerald's (P. F.) The Rational or Scientific Ideal of Morality, royal 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Schopenhauer's (A.) On Human Nature, Essays in Ethics and Politics, selected by T. B. Saunders, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.

History and Biography.

Brown's (A.) Mercy Warren, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl. (Women of Colonial and Revolutionary Times in America.)

Krasinska (Françoise, Countess), Great grandmother of Victor Emmanuel, Journal of, 18mo. 5/ net.
Lisle, Laura de, a Sketch of her Life, &c., by A. P. F. Cruikshank, 8vo. 2/ net.
Nansen, Fridtjof, Scientist and Explorer, Life of, by J. A. Bain, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

Geography and Travel.

In the Land of the Bora, or Camp Life and Sport in Dalmatia and the Herzegovina, by Stuffle, 8vo. 15/ cl.
Knight's (E. F.) Letters from the Soudan, reprinted from the 'Times,' 8vo. 8/6 net.
Lodge's (G. T.) Coloured Handbook to Kindergarten Geography, 4to. 2/ cl.
Madden's (J.) The Wilderness and its Tenants, a Series of Geographical and other Essays, 8vo. 12/ cl.
Muller's (Mrs. Max) Letters from Constantinople, cr. 8vo. 6/
Nansen's (Fridtjof) Farthest North, the Voyage of the Fram, by Dr. Nansen and Lieut. Johansen, 2 vols. 8vo. 42/ net.

Philology.

Hardman (W. M.) and Walpole's (Rev. A. S.) Latin Exercises for Lower School Forms, 12mo. 2/ cl.

Science.

Adams's (G.) Transformer Design, cr. 8vo. 4/ cl.
Everitt's (W. S.) Practical Notes on Grasses, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Paget's (C. E.) Wasted Records of Disease, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Smith's (J. B.) Economic Entomology for the Farmer and Fruit Grower, cr. 8vo. 12/ cl.

General Literature.

Adams's (Mrs. L.) Colour-Sergeant, No. 1 Company, 6/ cl.
Carnarvon's (Earl of) The Defence of the Empire, edited by Lieut.-Col. Sir G. S. Clarke, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Crane's (S.) The Little Regiment, and other Episodes of the American Civil War, 12mo. 3/6 cl. (Pioneer Series.)
Dickens's (C.) Works, Gadshill Edition: Oliver Twist, 6/ cl.
Fothergill's (C.) A Matter of Temperament, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Hooley's (E. T.) Tarragal, or Bush Life in Australia, 3/6 cl.
James's (H.) The Spoils of Poynton, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Johnstone's (T. B.) The Land o' Cakes and Brither Scots, 6/
Kipling's (A. M.) A Pinchbeck Goddess, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Lear's (Mrs. H. L. S.) Joy, a Fragment, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Ley's (J. K.) The Lawyer's Secret, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Library Year-Book, 1897, by T. Greenwood, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Life the Accuser, by Author of 'A Superfluous Woman,' 6/
Literary Year-Book, 1897, ed. by F. G. Aflalo, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Maude's (Capt. F. N.) Voluntary versus Compulsory Service, an Essay, 8vo. 5/ cl.
Milman's (C.) Through London Spectacles, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Norris's (W. E.) Clarissa Furiosa, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Pugh's (E.) The Man of Straw, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Read's (O.) The Jucklins, a Novel, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Schreiner's (Olive) Trooper Peter Halket of Mashonaland, 6/
Segon's (A.) An Australian Duchess, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Twain's (Mark) The Stolen White Elephant, cheaper ed. 3/6
Warden's (G.) The Wooing of a Fairy, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Charbonnel (Abbé V.): Congrès Universel des Religions en 1900, 3fr. 50.
Gegout (E.): Jésus. 3fr. 50.
Stockmeyer (I.): Exegetische u. praktische Erklärung ausgewählter Gleichnisse Jesu, 8m.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Bouchot (H.): Les Ex-Libris d'Art, 50fr.
Mordtmann (J. H.): Beiträge zur minäischen Epigraphik, 12m.
Schneidewin (M.): Die antike Humanität, 12m.

Poetry and the Drama.

Cadol (É.): Théâtre Inédit, 3fr. 50.
Lacaussade (A.): Les Épaves, 6fr.

Bibliography.

Serrurier (L.): Bibliothèque Japonaise, Catalogue des Livres et des Manuscrits Japonais de l'Université de Leyde, 15m.

History and Biography.

Benedetti (Comte): Essais Diplomatiques, 7fr. 50.
Haussez (Baron d'): Mémoires, Vol. 2, 7fr. 50.
Monumenta Germaniæ Historica: Scriptorum Tomi XXX. Pars 1, 37m.
Politische Correspondenz Friedrich's des Grossen, Part 23, 14m.
Ruble (Baron A. de): Jeanne d'Albret et la Guerre Civile, Vol. 1, 8fr.
Sauvage (Lieut.): La Guerre Sino-Japonaise, 10fr.
Souvenirs d'une Bleue, 1638-91, 3fr. 50.

Geography and Travel.

Christol (P.): Au Sud de l'Afrique, 3fr. 50.
Hirsch (L.): Reisen in Süd-Arabien, Mahra-Land u. Hadramût, 9m.
Sierra (Madame A.): Contes Exotiques, 3fr.

Philology.

Planta (R. v.): Grammatik der oskisch-umbrischen Dialekte, Vol. 2, 20m.

Science.

Bon Jardinier (Le), Almanach Horticole pour 1897, 7fr.
Schniewind-Thies (J.): Beiträge zur Kenntnis der Septalnectarien, 15m.

General Literature.

Adam (P.): L'Année de Clarisse, 3fr. 50.
Aigremont (P. d'): Mère Inconnue, 3fr. 50.
Annunzio (G. d'): Les Vierges aux Rochers, 3fr. 50.
Auriol (G.): Le Chapeau sur l'Oreille, 3fr. 50.
Bièvre (G. M. de): Angette, 3fr. 50.
Chenevière (A.): L'Indulgente, 3fr. 50.
Dumaine (C. B.): Essai sur la Vie et les Œuvres de Cervantès, 3fr. 50.
Goethe's Gespräche: Vol. 10, Nachträge, 1755-1832, 5m.
Guiraud (P.): La Conversion de Gaston Ferney, 3fr. 50.
Lazare (B.): Les Porteurs de Torches, 3fr. 50.
Lewal (Général): La Chimère du Désarmement, 4fr.
Malot (Madame H.): L'Amour Dominateur, 3fr. 50.
Rodenbach (G.): Le Carillonneur, 3fr. 50.
Sageret (J.): Touillard Électricien, 3fr. 50.
Vergniol (C.): L'Enlisement, 3fr. 50.
Xanrof: L'Œil du Voisin, 3fr. 50.

THE CORONATION OF THE CONQUEROR.

The current number of the English Historical Review contains a valuable note by Mr. W. H. Stevenson on the important and peculiar charter of the Conqueror for the London house of St. Martin-le-Grand, of which he had already edited the text with his wonted skill and learning. But it is startling, I confess, to learn that one of the greatest events in our history, the coronation of the Conqueror, took place at Christmas, 1067, and not, as every historian has believed, at Christmas, 1066. Mr. Stevenson, whose authority on these subjects is certainly unsurpassed, shows that this remarkable charter, though dated 1068, was executed on Christmas Day, 1067, and that, consequently, "the witnesses were the spectators of William's coronation, which gives the charter its greatest historical importance." Among them is Hugh, Bishop of Lisieux, who as "a kinsman of William's" was "not unlikely to be present at his coronation," while the influence of the still mysterious Ingelric is proved by his obtaining the execution of the charter "at so important a ceremony as the king's coronation and a confirmation of it at the queen's coronation" (Whitsuntide, 1068). According, indeed, to Mr. Stevenson, "Freeman says that the date of the charter, Christmas, 1068, evidently means 1067, the date of William's coronation." But Mr. Freeman only speaks of the usual "Christmas Feast" of 1067: he assigned the coronation, like the rest of the world, to Christmas, 1066.

When Mr. Stevenson gives us the proofs for a discovery the credit of which is due to himself alone, he will, I hope, also deal with the real stumbling-block in this charter, Cardinal John's emphatic words, "huic constitutioni interfui," which he has not yet done. It was on the ground of the cardinals' presence that Mr. Freeman very naturally doubted its authenticity; but it may, no doubt, be capable of proof, by those more learned in such matters than myself, that the above words do not imply the witness's presence at the time. This, of course, is quite independent of the question of "supplementary confirmations," the existence of which is as familiar to me as to all students, I presume, of mediæval diplomatique.

J. H. Round.

MELANCHTHON.

The fourth centenary of Melanchthon's birth occurs on the 16th inst. Although it is an event which will be duly observed all over Protestant Germany and elsewhere in Northern Europe, it might easily pass without notice in England, especially at a moment when an anti-scientific reaction, in the guise of a spurious Catholicism, appears to have gained a hold on the lettered classes. At no time has the man who, in a unique way, combined the efforts of the Humanists with the teaching of the Reformers, attracted so much attention as he deserves at the hands of Englishmen. And yet he possessed an aggregate of qualities which ought to recommend him in this country; for he was not only a foe to the tyranny of Rome, but also an apostle of culture and a guardian of public order. He was imbued with that spirit of compromise which has done much to mould our own institutions; like some of the best of our writers he gave an ethical tendency to many of his theological theories; and he was full of zeal and activity in the cause of education.

Melanchthon was eminently the child of his time. He represented and developed its movements rather than created them. His early training fell within the years in which Humanism reached its height — the first fifteen or twenty years of the sixteenth century—when Erasmus was publishing his best writings, and Reuchlin was battling with the monks. Under the personal guidance of Reuchlin, who was his great-uncle, he eagerly learned all that Humanism could teach him. He entered the University of Heidelberg at the age of twelve, spent three years there, and six at Tübingen, and in both places he devoted all his energies to the work which the older men had begun. Even in his youth he acquired a great reputation as a scholar, and at the age of twenty-one he was chosen on Reuchlin's recommendation to be the first professor of Greek at Wittenberg. There he passed at once under Luther's influence, placed all his learning and eloquence at the service of the Reformers, reduced their doctrines to a system, defended them with tongue and pen, drew up or inspired many of their important documents, and became, in a word, the general secretary of the movement in which they were engaged.

But he was never wholly or merely a theologian. From time to time he wearied of controversy, and bewailed the fate which had drawn him aside from other pursuits. He found his chief solace in lectures on classical authors; he attracted students, often to the number of two thousand, from all parts of Europe; and, as was still possible for an industrious worker in those days, he took an active and productive interest in the entire range of human knowledge, writing assiduously on history, philosophy, and natural science of every kind. Thus it was that he earned and received the title of tutor of his country, "Præceptor Germaniæ."

In his theology he made no secret of the fact that he was dependent on Luther, and the close friendship between the two men was a highly important element in their personal history. It was a friendship, however, which was not equal or similar on both sides. It admitted of much diversity of opinion. With a profound belief in all that Protestantism had won for the world by fighting a superstitious tyranny, Melanchthon always entertained a great respect for tradition, and a strong sense of order and continuity; and so he persisted in hoping for a final reconciliation with the Roman Church long after more ardent Lutherans had assumed an attitude of aggressive hostility. He also showed an increasing tendency, as life wore on, to soften the rigour of Luther's views; to emphasize, for instance, the ethical element in the doctrine of grace and to empty the theory of predestination of much of its meaning. These and other features of his thought aroused great suspicion and antagonism in his last years, and so greatly was his existence embittered that he longed for death as a release from the rabies theologorum. Possibly he exercised a more potent influence in the domain of learning than in that of religion. Whenever, as often happened, the Humanist cause was attacked by the philistinism of the Reformers, Melanchthon defended it with zeal and energy, and in the Protestant universities and schools his system of teaching long remained in force.

T. B. S.

SAMUEL PEPYS'S WILL.

It is curious that, so far as I know, Pepys's will has never been printed, though some of its principal provisions have been mentioned, and directions respecting the library have been printed from the Harleian MSS. The will is of great length, but perhaps Mr. Wheatley will be able to include it in his supplementary volume of the 'Diary.' Here I propose to give an abstract of the document with some interesting quotations.

The will (Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 97 Degg) is dated August 2nd, 1701, when Pepys is described as in his sixty-ninth year, and of sound mind and memory. "I do with all humility and thankfulness and with a satisfaction inexpressible," says Pepys, resign the soul to its Creator, "in sure reliance.....for a happy resurrection with the just to an everlasting state of rest and bliss in the world to come." As to such worldly goods as he possessed after twenty-four years' "public and painful service faithfully performed to the Crown," he devised all lands, &c., in Brampton, Hunts, and all other real property, to his nephew Samuel Jackson, of Brampton, eldest son of his late sister Paulina Jackson, for life, and then to his sons successively. In default of such issue the property was to go to his nephew John Jackson, of Westminster, youngest son of Paulina, and to his sons successively; and in default of such sons to his cousin Charles Pepys, second son of his late uncle Thomas Pepys. An annuity of 15*l.* to his old servant Jane Penny was to be paid during her life; and 500*l.* legacy was left to the executor.

There was due to Pepys from the Crown 28,007*l.* 2*s.* 1¼*d.* on a balance of two accounts, first, as Clerk of the Acts of the Navy and Secretary of the Admiralty, and second, as Treasurer for Tangier to Charles II. and James II. This money, when paid, was to be laid out in land for the benefit of his heirs. The residue of his estate was also to be invested in land and held in trust for his heirs. Pepys urged his nephews

"to join with me in not repining at any disappointment they may by the late public providences of Almighty God meet with in what they might otherwise have reasonably hoped for from me at my death, but to receive with thankfulness from God's hands whatever it shall prove, remembering it to be more than what either myself or they were born to, and therefore endeavouring on their part by all humble and honest industry to improve the same."

The sole executor was "my most approved and most dear friend William Hewer," of Clapham. Pepys speaks of Hewer's "more than filial affection and tenderness expressed towards me through all the occurrences of my life for forty years past."

On the 12th of May, 1703, Pepys made a codicil to his will, owing to his nephew Samuel Jackson having disposed of himself in marriage "against my positive advice and injunction, and to his own irreparable prejudice and dishonour." This nephew was now to have only an annuity of 40*l.* a year. At the same time Pepys left 200*l.* a year to "the most excellent lady" Mrs. Mary Skynner, in memory of "her steady friendship and assistances during the whole course of my life," for thirty-three years. The use of his library for life was left to John Jackson, who was to see to its completion according to a scheme in his hands; the library was to be kept entire, and bestowed for the benefit of posterity. The arrangements for its disposal have been already published.

On the following day (May 13th, 1703) Pepys executed a second codicil, bequeathing 9,000*l.* 2*s.* 1¼*d.* of what was owing to him. Mrs. Skynner was to have 5,000*l.*; Hewer, 2,000*l.*; and the children of Charles Pepys, now deceased, 1,000*l.* There are also directions as to the residue of the debt, which, however, was never paid. Pepys died a fortnight later, and the will was proved on the 25th of June.

G. A. Aitken.

THOMAS STAPLETON'S COPY OF THE WORKS OF SIR THOMAS MORE.

The loving care with which Thomas Stapleton wrote his biography of Sir Thomas More has been unanimously acknowledged. The last historian of Henry's Chancellor, Father Bridgett, does not hesitate to declare that "by far the best life of More is that of Thomas Stapleton, published at Douai in 1588." It is in Latin, and was part of the series entitled "Tres Thomæ," written by the English theologian. In his preface Stapleton gives an account of his sources of information. Many autograph letters were lent to him by More's widow, "propria ejus manu conscriptæ, quæ mihi omnia defuncti vidua adhuc nobiscum superstes communicavit." He conversed with other exiles who had known More (e. g., the witty dramatist and jest-maker John Heywood), "qui.....hoc Belgio aliisque orbis partibus pro fide nobiscum exularunt." He leaves the impression that he was indeed a careful biographer, and took much trouble in order to present a fair account of the late "martyr."

That impression will be entirely borne out by an inspection of the copy of Sir Thomas More's works which Stapleton used while preparing his biography. This copy, I recently ascertained, after having belonged to the English Jesuits' College at Liège, became at an early date the property of the Royal, now the National Library in Paris, where it is preserved at this day. The volume, which has an old binding (not, however, the original one, as many manuscript notes on the margin have been clipped by the binder), contains the first edition of "The Workes of Sir Thomas More, Knyght.....printed at London at the costes and charges of Iohn Cawod, Iohn VValy and Richarde Tottell, Anno 1557." The title-page bears the MS. inscription, "Thome Stapletoni liber."

The book bears innumerable proofs of having been read pen in hand by its former owners; passage after passage is underlined; the contents of paragraphs are often summarized or commented on in the margin. Not all the notes, it is true, are due to Stapleton, but many are certainly in his handwriting. They show the care and attention with which he read the 'Workes' from a biographical point of view; he marks especially facts, "traits de caractère," and evidences of the wit and temper of his hero. The letters printed at the end of the volume attracted, naturally enough, much attention from the biographer, and their margins swarm with laudatory epithets and exclamations: "charitas—a goode minde—Humilyte—Integritas et Innocentia—Pietas," &c., the first note being opposite a passage where More says to Margaret Roper: "And I thanke our Lorde I knowe no person liuing that I woulde had one philippe for my sake."

Long before the days of Father Bridgett, the "wisdom and wit" of Thomas More were the subject of studies. This same copy of the 'Workes' contains, on a fly-leaf at the end of the volume, a manuscript table of "Mery tales to bee found in Sr Thomas Moore, as alsoe other notes." It is not in the handwriting of Stapleton and seems to be of a somewhat more recent date; additions were made to it by successive owners. The list refers the reader to "Two mery tales," to "An argument for the worshipping of Images," to the story of "Grime the mustard-maker's prayer," and to a number of "mery disputations," "mery saings," and "proper stories." Some of them have found place in Father Bridgett's book; some have not; among the former figures, e. g., the story of Grim, who, unwilling to pray for all, used to offer prayers only for those nearest his heart—Grim, the "musterde maker in Cambridge, y' was wont to pray for hymselfe and his wife and hys childe, and grace to make good musterde and no more" (in the 'Debellacyon of Salem and Bizance').

Reference is also made in the list to a rather lengthy story which is one of the most curious in the Chancellor's works. It is a story of the 'Wolf and Fox';* it proves once more the wide and lasting popularity of Reynard in England, and shows that Sir Thomas was well acquainted not only with Roman heroes, but with this mediæval one also. It ends, in a fashion quite characteristic of More, by a comparison of the misdeeds of the wolf with those of the good woman, who, coming home after confession, said to her husband:—

"'Be merye manne, for thys day I thanke God was I wel shriuen. And I purpose now therefore to leaue of al myne old shreudnes, and begyn euen a fresh.'.....In dede it semed she spake it half in sporte, for that she sayd she wold cast a way al her old shreudnes, therein I trow she sported. But in that she said she wold begyn it al a fresh her housband founde that good ernest."

This was written in the Tower to while away the time, not many months before execution.

Though the list is not in the handwriting of Stapleton, yet he also had read the 'Workes' with care from the same particular point of view, noting in the margin or underlining many passages which contained examples of the wit and wisdom of More. He dedicated, in fact, two chapters in his biography of Sir Thomas to that subject, that is chap. xii., "Apophthegma sapienter et pie dicta Thomæ Mori," and chap. xiii., "Acute vel facete dicta vel responsa." Many of the sayings and stories thus quoted will be considered good stories even at the present day; a few are curious for an exactly opposite reason, as showing once more how, in the course of time, the standard of wit has altered. Some of the witticisms quoted admiringly by Stapleton for their sharpness and brilliancy will seem now remarkably heavy and laborious. "Hæreticorum," says, for example, Stapleton, "dissentientes sententias nihil aliud esse quam improborum omnium conspirationem quandam qua toti orbi illudatur, hac festiua comparatione expressit." And here he quotes in Latin the following passage from the 'Workes':—

"As if a man walking in a wildernesse that fain would find the right wai toward the town that he entended, should meet with a mainy of leud mocking knaues, which when the poore man hadde prayed them to tel him the waye woulde gette them into a roundell turnynge theym backe to backe and then speake all at ones, and eche of them tell him, thys waye, eche of them pointinge foorth wyth hys hande the way that his face standeth."

This struck Stapleton as being particularly "festive" and "pretty." The margin of his copy of the 'Workes' bears the note in his handwriting: "A prety similitude of the heretikes dissensyons." Such examples, however, are not frequent; with the majority of his judgments and appreciations most readers will agree.

J. J. Jusserand.

* The author of the original list had referred to that tale only by the word "Item," that is, "a propre tale"; a later owner, interested by that particular story, added, 'The Wolf and Fox.'

'THE TESTAMENT OF LOVE.'

We ought all to be grateful to Mr. Bradley for his very interesting discovery. There cannot be the least doubt as to the correctness of his statements, notwithstanding the complexities of the original text I have for some time been aware that the name, as it seems to stand, is not T.S.K.N.V.I, but T.H.S.K.N.V.I.; so that I might have got the true result T.H.I N.V S K. by transposition (and must have had it before me several times), only it never occurred to me that THIN VSK really represented two words. I had always dismissed such a solution as THINVSK, because there is no such name.

I shall be glad to be allowed to announce that, in consequence of Mr. Bradley's discovery, I have somewhat delayed the appearance of my book entitled 'Chaucerian and other Pieces,' intended as a supplementary volume to my edition of Chaucer in six volumes. I have cancelled two sheets of the text of 'The Testament of Love' in order to show how the text should be rearranged. The improvement in the text is considerable; and our knowledge of the author's name gives a fresh interest to the piece. I believe, with Mr. Bradley, that Thynne acquired the very copy which Usk sent to Chaucer. I wish he had preserved his MSS. after printing them.

Walter W. Skeat.

"THE BOOKMAKER'S BAR."

8, Gibson Place, St. Andrews, Feb. 8, 1897.

In a recent review of a novel called 'Miriam Cromwell, Royalist,' the critic (in I forget what journal) objected to the "bookmaker's bar" in the mouth of a Cavalier: thus, "All Puritans are rogues bar Cromwell," or the like. When does the phrase first occur? I find it in a letter of the Chevalier de St. George in 1718: "I never much admired Mr. Steel's proceedings,"

i. e., the peddling intrigues of hangers-on at St. Germain's, "and, barr Andrew [his mother], I do not desire to have any more to do with them." The note is in Atterbury's 'Letters,' edited by Glover, p. 24.

Perhaps I may be permitted to add that since the publication of the second edition of 'Pickle the Spy' (reviewed in Athenæum, January 30th) I have found his favourite misspelling how for who used several times by Malcolm Macleod of Brea in a letter of 1752 ('Lyon in Mourning,' iii. pp. 123–125). The spelling, therefore, is not "unique," though in MS. letters read by me I never observed it except from the pen of Pickle and Glengarry. But "puish" for push is unlikely to be found outside of these two authors.

Andrew Lang.

 Bar occurs in 'The Merchant of Venice,' II. ii. 208, and barring in 1481–90. See the 'Oxford English Dictionary.'

Literary Gossip.

Messrs. Downey & Co. announce the publication of a new and copyright edition of Lever's novels in thirty-six volumes. During his last visit to England, Charles Lever intended to revise his novels (with the aid of his daughter, Mrs. Neville), a task which was interrupted by his death. The text throughout is now being most carefully seen to. The publishers have secured the original plates, six hundred in number, etched by "Phiz" and George Cruikshank for the first edition. In addition, several of the later volumes are illustrated with wood engravings by Mr. Luke Fildes and other artists, all of which will be included in this edition. A few of the volumes were originally published without illustrations, and for these arrangements have been made under which Mr. Gordon Browne will contribute a series of illustrations. The interesting prefaces written by Lever shortly before his death will be included. The printing of the edition has been entrusted to Messrs. T. & A. Constable, of Edinburgh, who have had a new bold, clear type specially cast for the work.

It may not be generally known that the father of Dr. Jameson was one of the early preachers of the heresy regarding Shakspeare. On August 7th, 1852, in Chambers's Edinburgh Journal, he published an anonymous article entitled 'Who wrote Shakspeare?' In this he suggested that Shakspeare kept a poet; that when the poet died the plays ceased to appear, but Shakspeare, as manager, retired rich. Farmer in 1789 had shown anti-Shakspearean tendencies, and Horace Walpole's 'Historic Doubts' have been cited in support of these. Hart, in 'The Romance of Yachting,' 1848, broached the subject in a gossipy style, but Jameson first discussed it in a formal essay.

Mr. E. F. Benson has a novel in hand, the scene of which is laid in Greece during the struggle between the Greeks and the Turks seventy years ago. It will appear serially in the Graphic, and be illustrated by Mr. G. P. Jacomb Hood.

Olive Schreiner's new book, which Mr. Fisher Unwin will publish next week, will only make one rather small volume. It will, it is said, set forth the writer's views concerning South African politics by a method that is not only daring, but somewhat startling. It will form part of the "Green Cloth Library," and will be issued simultaneously in the United States by Messrs. Roberts Brothers. A feature of the book will be a photogravure reproduction of a photograph of the irregular execution of native spies in the recent war. Mr. Unwin has also in preparation a volume on 'South Africa as It Is,' by the author of 'Mr. Magnus.'

Mr. G. W. Steevens, whose book on the United States we reviewed last week, will proceed to Spain very shortly for the Daily Mail.

The Historical Manuscripts Commission having now presented its Fifteenth Report to Parliament, two volumes of appendices will be issued almost immediately, containing the reports of the commissioners upon the manuscript collections of Mr. J. Eliot Hodgkin, F.S.A., of Richmond, and Mr. Charles Haliday, of Dublin. One peculiarity about the collection of Mr. Hodgkin is that, unlike most private collections, it has been brought together by the owner himself, and is therefore unusually select. It includes papers of Pepys, Ormonde, Danby, and some Royalist and Jacobite specimens, together with a number of interesting papers relating to the Chevalier D'Eon. The report on this collection has been prepared by Mr. J. Cordy Jeaffreson.

The second collection above referred to really comprises, for the purpose of the present report, a single volume of the original 'Acts of the Privy Council in Ireland,' which, after having been completely lost for 200 years, was discovered and purchased by the late Mr. Charles Haliday, and presented by him to the Royal Irish Academy. The period covered by this volume of Acts is that for the years 1556 to 1571. It also contains some curious remains of Sir William Usher. It is edited for the Commission by Sir J. T. Gilbert.

The Honourable Society of Cymmrodorion will shortly publish a new edition of Nennius's 'Historia Britonum,' based on a British Museum manuscript which is believed to be the oldest extant complete copy of the work. The text will be annotated by Mr. Alfred Nutt, who will also write an introduction, while an English translation will be contributed by Mr. Henry Owen.

The exhaustive Calendar of the Laing Charters left to Edinburgh University, and noticed in the Athenæum some months ago, has now been sent to press. The collection numbers about 3,300, mainly Scottish, and will be published in abridged translations with full indexes of personal and place names. In revising the manuscript for the press large and important additions have been made, and the volume will now be one of about 800 pages super-royal 8vo. The price to subscribers after the 1st of March will be considerably raised, and the edition will be a limited one.

The attempt to acclimatize the feuilleton to English daily newspapers does not seem to make much headway. The Daily Chronicle, when it inaugurated its new literary departure a few years ago, made, we think, the first serious attempt in this direction; it was followed by the Star, with a serial by Mr. Zangwill. The fact that these two papers did not continue the experiment may be taken as a proof of its failure. Quite lately there has been a revived effort — the Evening News reprinting Angus B. Reach's 'Clement Lorimer' in instalments, while the Sun is now running a serial by Helen Mathers as its feuilleton. For some months past the Daily Mail has been publishing short serial stories. What is a necessity in a French paper is distinctly a luxury on this side of the water; but we apprehend that the real difficulty in England is more a matter of pounds, shillings, and pence. The English author, with his shilling per word expectations, would scorn the modest payments which the average French novelist receives for his feuilletons.

The deaths are announced of the Rev. Dr. Walter Gregor, Secretary to the Scottish Text Society, and of the Rev. F. Jacox. Mr. Gregor, who was for several years parish minister of Pitsligo, in Aberdeenshire, published a monograph on the dialect of Banffshire, and was engaged at the time of his decease on a work on the folk-lore of Galloway. Mr. Jacox, who had long retired from parochial work, was the author of 'Secular Annotations on Scripture Texts,' 'Aspects of Authorship,' 'At Nightfall and Midnight,' and 'Shakespeare's Diversions,' and was noted for his liberal gifts to the Printers' Pension Corporation and other charities.

'Mr. Blake of Newmarket,' the racing novel which has been appearing in the pages of the Daily Mail, is to be issued early next month by Mr. Heinemann. The author, Mr. E. H. Cooper, is already at work on a new story, the scene of which is laid almost entirely in Paris.

Firth College, Sheffield, is to be incorporated by royal charter this year, and it is proposed to commemorate the visit of the Queen in May and the "Diamond Jubilee" of Her Majesty by increasing the endowment of the College and affiliating it with the Victoria University.

Mr. Martin MacDermott has prepared for publication a new edition of Moore's 'Memoirs of Lord Edward Fitzgerald.' Mr. MacDermott has added to the memoirs many particulars concerning Lord Edward's career which were not available when the work was originally published.

The Selden Society is going to issue Vol. X. of its publications, 'Select Cases in Chancery, A.D. 1364–1471,' edited by Mr. W. Paley Baildon, who writes an introduction on the growth, early history, and procedure of the Court of Chancery. This volume represents the publication for the year 1896. Volume XI., for 1897, a second volume of 'Select Pleas in the Court of Admiralty,' edited by Mr. R. G. Marsden, is expected to follow shortly.

Maxwell Gray writes:—

"When Christina Rossetti died, more than two years ago, there was a chorus of appreciation of her work from the press. Not only great, but the greatest woman poet of the age, she was called. It may not be generally known that a memorial has long been planned, in the shape of a reredos in Christchurch, Woburn Square, the church she regularly attended. Sir Edward Burne-Jones has kindly consented to design a series of paintings for this when the necessary funds for its erection in the church are found, viz. 150*l*. Of this I believe only about 70*l*. or 80*l*. has been subscribed. In the printed list I have before me I find only eight names known in literature, including that of Mr. Swinburne. Of the thousands who delight in Christina Rossetti's poems, both in England and America, there must at least be hundreds who would be glad to contribute some small sum to this modest and beautiful memorial of one of the greatest poets and writers of the age; while her brothers and sisters in letters, poor though the majority must be, should feel it a stigma upon them that the work is still waiting for want of so pitiful a sum. I therefore beg of your courtesy space for this letter calling attention to the proposed memorial. It has the sanction of Mr. Rossetti, whose subscription heads the list. Donations may be sent to the 'Rossetti Memorial Account' in the Bank of England, or to Mr. W. M. Rossetti, 3, St. Edmund's Terrace, N.W.; Mr. R. W. Dibdin, 17, Russell Square, W.C.; Mr. G. A. A. Nelson, 11, Colville Houses, W.; or the Rev. J. J. Glendinning Nash, 92, Gower Street, W.C."

In Archdeacon Perry has passed away a clergyman of an old-fashioned type, moderate, well read, shrewd, and sensible, if somewhat limited in his outlook. His main labours were devoted to the annals of the Anglican Church. Between 1861 and 1864 he published his 'History of the Church of England from the Death of Elizabeth to the Present Time.' Fourteen years later he brought out an abridgment of this work, stopping with the suppression of Convocation in the reign of George I. He also published in the same year a 'Manual of the History of the Christian Church during the First Ten Centuries' in Mr. Murray's series. Besides doing some editing for the Early English Text Society, he published a biography of St. Hugh of Avalon in 1879. In the present state of the diocese of Lincoln the loss of so learned an ecclesiastic is almost irreparable.

An English translation and revision of Prof. Sophus Bugge's work on 'The Home of the Eddic Poems, with Especial Reference to the Helgi Lays,' is now being prepared, under the personal supervision of the author, by Dr. William Henry Schofield, Travelling Fellow of Harvard University, for the time being resident in Christiania. This translation, which will be the only one issued in any foreign tongue, will be published in the course of a few months by Mr. David Nutt.

Mr. Pellatt writes to us to complain that in noticing his tale 'The Witch-Finder' we have called a document he has introduced an "imaginary document." He says his document is derived from 'The Parish History of Swyncombe.' We have not the history before us; but our point was not that the terms of the document were such as could not have been used at any period of English, but that at the date to which in the story it is made to refer—viz., about the later years of Elizabeth—it would have been somewhat difficult to find "a close house of nuns" in England. Mr. Pellatt thinks that because he took this period for his special subject, and got a First Class, he cannot have made mistakes in his story. Unluckily, we lighted on a good many more historical inaccuracies than those we noted. As for these, can he quote a case of an Englishman bearing two Christian names, and one of them a family name, in the first half of the seventeenth century?

The first noteworthy book sale at Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge's will occupy five days, beginning with the 22nd inst. One of the anonymous properties comprises an unusually long series of the first editions of American authors. Other properties include a copy of Thackeray's 'Second Funeral of Napoleon,' 1841, in the original illustrated wrapper; a copy of Burns's 'Poems,' Kilmarnock, 1786, in red morocco; a fine copy of 'Bartolomeo de Li Sonnetti,' printed at Venice about 1480 (with forty-nine woodcut maps), and described by Dibdin as one of the rarest volumes of early Italian poetry; a broadside with a poem of twelve stanzas by Hayley, and two coloured engravings by W. Blake, the subject being 'Little Tom the Sailor'; some interesting and uncommon first editions of Bunyan and Dryden; an exceedingly interesting Stevensonian item in the shape of the Australian Star of May 24th, 1890, containing the first issue of the novelist's celebrated defence of Father Damien; a copy of the excessively rare Froissart printed at Paris for A. Verard, circa 1495; and the first five editions of Walton's 'Angler,' uniformly bound in dark green morocco extra; the first and the most valuable edition of this set has unfortunately been much "shaved" by some ignorant binder.

The decease is announced of the Rev. S. H. Reynolds, for many years rector of East Ham, and long an active contributor to the Times. He had previously been a Fellow and Tutor of Brasenose, and had a reputation at Oxford as a conversationalist. His talk was somewhat bitter and cynical, but showed him to be a man of more than average powers. He edited for Rivington's "Catena Classicorum" the first twelve books of the Iliad, and he defended the perfunctory character of his notes by saying they were as good as the publisher deserved to get at the price he paid for them. Mr. Reynolds was seen to much greater advantage in his learned commentaries on Bacon's 'Essays' and Selden's 'Table Talk.' The latter he published after his retirement from East Ham. In them his singular knowledge of out-of-the-way literature was conspicuously evident.

In commemoration of the birthday of the late J. R. Lowell, a meeting will be held in Berlin of American students on the evening of next Friday. Prof. J. T. Hatfield will deliver an "oration."

The Vienna Academy of Sciences has commissioned Prof. Hitzig, of the University of Zurich, to compile a special 'Darstellung des attisches Civilprozesses.' By his earlier work, 'Das altgriechische Pfandrecht,' Dr. Hitzig proved himself equally expert in the studies needed for this field of research.

The Parliamentary Papers of the week include the Report of a Departmental Committee upon the Laws relating to Dogs (2*d.*), and a Return of the Charities in another West Riding Parish (3*d.*).

SCIENCE

Pioneer Work in the Alps of New Zealand. By Arthur P. Harper, B.A. (Fisher Unwin.)

There are certain regions of the earth's surface, not always the most remote, which preserve in a peculiar degree the charm and mystery of the Beyond. Such were once the valleys of California and the cañons of Colorado; such are still the highlands east of the Jordan, the mountains of Morocco, and the western slope of the New Zealand Alps. In the country last named the ingenious author of 'Erewhon' found not so many years ago a fitting site for his Utopia. The mountain climbers Mr. Green and Mr. Mannering, even the geologist Von Haast, to whom are due some of our best descriptions of the New Zealand ranges, devoted most, if not all, of their attention to the eastern glaciers. Mr. Fitzgerald, it is true, varied his recent story of his scrambles by an account of a double crossing of the Tasman group; but he afforded a glimpse and no more of what lies between its snowfields and the western sea. The golddiggers who push along the seabeaches bring back no trustworthy information as to the upland glens. Their recesses have never been inhabited by the native tribes, and the only record of glacier exploration by Maoris is a legend that some twenty years ago a party of them punted a "dug-out" canoe into the ice cave of the Franz Josef Glacier in the belief that through its "dusky doors" they might penetrate beyond the silver heights to the land of gold which supplied the particles sought out by the white men. "The younger generation of golddiggers," Mr. Harper tells us, "have a strong dislike—I may say fear—of the hard work and life entailed by journeys into the Ranges." Such is the benighted condition of the population of "Gillespie's Beach," the centre of Southern Westland, that they mistook iceaxes for eel-spears.

During the years 1893–5 the New Zealand Government, which had already mapped the great glaciers of Mount Cook, undertook the thorough exploration of the western glens and ridges, and the results of the surveyors' labours are duly recorded in its Survey Reports. But these records are necessarily disconnected in form, and accessible in this country only to diligent students in public libraries. It is not the least of the results of Mr. Fitzgerald's journey that it has helped to instigate one of the surveyors employed, Mr. A. P. Harper, to do justice to his own and his comrades' share in New Zealand exploration by putting together in a book some of their adventures and experiences. Mr. Harper's volume fills a notable gap in the literature of the colony.

In order to realize the field and extent of the journeys here recorded, it may be well to establish definitely certain preliminary points as to the New Zealand Alps. Colonists and climbers have used the term Southern Alps with very various meanings. There seem to be only two which have much claim to general acceptance, and it would appear most natural and convenient to include under the title all the glacier-clad ranges south of the conspicuous gap of Harper's Pass—that is, not only the central crest or unbroken line of snow and ice, one hundred miles long, from near Haast's Pass to Whitcombe's Pass, but also its two wings, dominated by Mount Arrowsmith and Mount Earnslaw, where the peaks are clustered in companies rather than drawn up in columns. By the grassy gaps through these wings the central crest—sometimes called the "Southern Alps proper"—has long since been turned, but its hundred-mile barrier remained untraversed (no surveyor even had crossed the snows to the sea) until 1892. The glacier pass then opened over the Godley Glacier was not the practicable horse-track from the Hermitage to the west coast which the colony had been long wanting and seeking. Quadrupeds had still to cross by the coach-road to the north, and take the chance of a coast track, the service on which is liable to be interrupted "two times in five" by floods or storms.

To discover this comparatively easy and direct pass was one of the main objects of the surveyors' labour, and the search for it led them into all the glens of Southern Westland. How the pass was found and crossed by Mr. Fitzgerald, just as Mr. Harper had realized the right place in which to look for it, readers may find told in their respective pages. It is a pity that any heat should have arisen out of this chance collision between men who have both, on different lines, done good work. Mr. Harper writes under the impression that too much has been made in this country of the young climber's work as an explorer, and that his indebtedness in the matter of maps to his colonial predecessors has been inadequately recorded. What foundation there may be for this feeling there is no need to inquire here. It is more to the purpose to recommend to the consideration of the rivals some sentences in which Mr. Ruskin, à propos of a once famous Alpine controversy, denounced with even more than his customary eloquence those who "find Apotheosis in the accident of a Discovery."

There was the less need for Mr. Harper to force this personal matter into the foreground, since his narrative is in itself an ample vindication of his comrades' and his own work as pioneers. The sojourner whom duty compels to spend successive summers in the mountains has many advantages over the passing traveller or climber. He learns to know nature by living with her, and finds it less difficult to mingle in due proportion description with personal adventure. Mr. Harper apologizes, not without some reason, for the roughness of his style. He makes no pretence to literary graces, and he is not afraid to mix camp jokes and slang with the stock quotations natural to an Oxonian. But these blemishes will hardly discourage the serious reader, who will find his curiosity in great part satisfied. Mr. Harper has made good use of his opportunities. He possesses the intelligence and eyes of a natural observer. Whether it is the geological structure of the ridges, or the characteristics of the glaciers and forests, or the habits of the quaint wingless birds who are the explorer's most intimate camp companions until they serve as his dinner, the author is interested in his subject, and conveys his interest to his readers. And of adventures he has plenty to tell, none the less thrilling for not being above the snow level. For a description—too long to quote—of travel in a virgin valley, readers should turn to the account of the exploration of the Cook river (chap. ix.). The concluding sentence is significant: "We were four days traversing four miles and a half in the narrowest part of the valley, climbing, crawling, sliding, scrambling, and track-cutting most of the time."

The contrast between the two slopes of the New Zealand Alps is described as singularly complete. On the east glaciers rivalling the largest in the Alps roll their slow level floods for miles along troughs parallel with the chain and under crags of prodigious height and steepness, that are constantly breaking away into fragments, which the ice carries with it to deposit on the broad, treeless expanse of the Mackenzie Plains. To the west the overflow of brimming bowls of névé pours down in continuous icefalls or tumbles over precipices until it almost meets the waves of the Pacific. The Fox and Franz Josef glaciers terminate only 700 to 900 feet above the sea level. The torrents from the lesser ice streams flow through valleys which are an alternation of flats and gorges, and are everywhere clad in dense scrub and forest. The explorer finds in the tangled vegetation his greatest difficulty; to the tourists who will succeed him the varied foliage, the tree-ferns, the rich undergrowth, which provide a semi-tropical foreground for the Arctic heights of the central range, will prove one of the great attractions of this Switzerland of the South.

Now that a practicable pass has been found over the Mount Cook range the central district is likely to be speedily developed. The distances are short; the hardships and difficulties of the first explorers have been mainly due to incomplete outfit, insufficient transport, and the absence of paths and blazed tracks. The Government has sent its surveyors into the wilderness to fare as best they could without provisions or porters. The Messrs. Cook will look after their successors better. A comparatively modest sum would throw open the chief glaciers to the visitors for whom nature has provided not only attractions, but luxuries. Close to the Franz Josef Glacier are hot springs:—

"It was a new and pleasing sensation to lie in a hot spring under the shade of tree-ferns and enjoy the glorious view of a glacier within a mile and a half, ploughing its way down between steep hills clothed in luxuriant forest and backed by high snow and iceclad peaks.....If the bath proves uncomfortably hot it is easy to let in a little icewater from the river a yard or two away, or even catch a piece of floating ice and place it in the pond."

Mr. Harper has something to urge against the claim of Aorangi to be considered as the native name of Mount Cook. What he says amounts, we think, to no more than this, that the Maoris gave the name to a range rather than to any particular peak. It is curious how slow, with the example of the Monts Maudits and Monte Rosa before their eyes, surveyors are to admit that this is the rule with primitive people in all parts of the world. It is a late refinement of civilization to ascertain the culminating summit and distinguish it from its neighbours. The glaciers, Mr. Harper says, are not receding, as a whole, "to any appreciable extent." In some of the larger ones, however, some retreat has been observed in the last twenty years. "There is greater activity," he adds,

"in the Southern Alps than in the European, and therefore the effects of ice and snow are more marked and more easily recorded. The avalanches are more frequent—falling night and day—than in Europe; the glaciers descend to a lower level, and the country is more shattered." Climbers who in other ranges have had their ears filled with the incessant roar of ice avalanches, the hissing of snow-slides, and the ominous hum of the stones that pass, like bullets, unseen, can appreciate the sense of security there is in a return to the silence of the Alps.

We must condole with Mr. Harper on the treatment of his illustrations. The subjects are in many cases fascinating—the execution is throughout slovenly. The process employed is bad, and its results are uniformly disagreeable, inartistic, and blurred in detail. The map, on the contrary, is excellent, and shows how much work on the west side of the chain has been carried out, in the teeth of great obstacles and needless hardships, in a comparatively short space of time, by the energy and devotion of two men, Mr. Douglas and the author. Of his comrade Mr. Harper writes as "a great explorer," and he adds:—

"Had I time to look over his diaries and reports I could, with help, produce a very thorough and valuable record of this southern country; but I am not a man of leisure, and the diaries are in the safe of a Government department."

The New Zealand Government might do well to instruct Mr. Harper to carry out this suggestion. Such a step would be entirely in accord with the liberal attitude towards any steps for the encouragement of visitors to the Southern Alps taken up by the colonial authorities.

SOCIETIES.

Royal.—Feb. 4.—The President in the chair.—The President stated that a paper had been received from Dr. A. Willey, Balfour Student, to the effect that he had discovered the ova of Nautilus.—The following papers were read: 'On the Condition in which Fats are absorbed from the Intestine,' by Messrs. B. Moore and D. P. Rockwood,—'The Gaseous Constituents of certain Mineral Substances and Natural Waters,' by Prof. W. Ramsay and Mr. M. W. Travers,—'Some Experiments on Helium,' by Mr. M. Travers,—'On the Gases enclosed in Crystalline Rocks and Minerals,' by Prof. Tilden,—and 'On Lunar Periodicities in Earthquake Frequency,' by Prof. Knott.

Society of Antiquaries.—Feb. 4.—Sir H. H. Howorth, M.P., V.P., in the chair.—Mr. James Harrison exhibited and presented a photograph of a stone shaft surmounted by a small bowl, evidently a mediæval holy-water stock, lately rescued by him from the churchyard and placed in the vestry of St. Andrew's Church, Charmouth.—Canon Church exhibited a remarkable thirteenth century wooden pix canopy or cover from Wells Cathedral Church, upon which Mr. W. H. St. John Hope read some descriptive remarks. The canopy is in form of a cylindrical lantern of open tracery work, and is about four feet in height. Though much "restored," it retains considerable traces of its original decoration, the body having been painted red with gold flowers, and the angle shafts blue. The top is surmounted by a bold cresting of leafwork, once painted white and red, and retains the curiously arranged ironwork by which the whole was suspended, with a swivel hook from which the pix depended.—Mr. C. Lynam exhibited a cast of, and communicated a note on, a fragment of a pre-Norman cross-shaft lately discovered at Leek, Staffordshire.—Prof. T. M'K. Hughes read a paper on the derivation of the four characteristic implements of the South Pacific, namely, the battle-axe, the throwing-stick, the boomerang, and the patoo-patoo, from the bones of Cetacea. He exhibited a selection of bone objects illustrating the view that among all races and at all times the bones of animals were employed as instruments of every-day use—sometimes just as they were picked up, sometimes modified by cutting or grinding. Many of the forms suggested by the bone would be produced in other material when the supply of bone was not equal to the demand. He pointed out that it was the habit of uncivilized man when copying any object to reproduce unimportant details. He then drew attention to the patoo-patoo which he exhibited, and which was made of the jaw of a cetacean, whereas this implement was commonly made of wood or stone. The battle-axe or bâton de commandement of Fiji had been seen made of a cetacean rib, but was commonly made of wood. In the wooden specimens, however, there was always a prominence on the upper margin of the curved head which exactly corresponded to the transverse process in the proximal end of a cetacean rib, and often a mark like an eye was placed on the side just where the lateral prominence occurs in the head of the rib. In the ribs near the middle part of the animal—in the case of the ca'ing whale, for instance—the process which passed below the vertebral column was much elongated, and the whole form almost exactly resembled that of the "throwing-stick." This instrument, when made of wood, had a flattened head, as in the rib, and was thrown so as to cut more easily through the air in one plane. The boomerang proper was flattened along its whole length with a concavo-convex section; but it had also a twist, giving it the form of two vanes of a windmill; so that, when the force of propulsion given it by the thrower was dying out, the rotation of the instrument lifted it into a higher region, from which it could glide along an air-slope back to the thrower or in some other direction. Now the front rib of the Cetacea lies in a plane nearly at right angles to the direction of the animal's body, and, owing to the tendency to accommodate itself to the flat barrel of the animal, has a slight twist. The form, in fact, approaches that of a boomerang, and when imitated in lighter material, and used as a throwing-stick, some specimens would show the characteristic flight, and thus accident might suggest the boomerang.

Archæological Institute. — Feb. 3. — Judge Baylis, V.P., in the chair.—The Chairman announced that the Annual Meeting of the Institute will be held this year at Dorchester, Dorset, at the end of July or the beginning of August, under the presidency of General Pitt-Rivers.—Canon Raven exhibited three coins: two of the Constantine period, and one consular, of C. Memmius, from Gariannonum (Burgh Castle).—Mr. R. G. Rice exhibited a small unfinished miniature portrait of a man, painted on ivory, supposed to be that of Crossfield, who, with others, was accused of a conspiracy to assassinate George III. The portrait was formerly wrapped in a piece of old paper, to which it is securely attached, and it was apparently so from the first, for, besides the following endorsement on the paper, there are marks indicating a trial of the colours: "Committed to the Tower 18 Sept^{r}, 1795, Came to town, 11 D^{o}., 2 at Bodmin." From a paragraph under "British and Foreign History," on p. 164 of the 'New Annual Register' for the year 1795, which was quoted in extenso by Mr. Rice, it appeared that "a man of the name of Crossfield, a surgeon, had been implicated on the evidence of the infamous informer Upton.....he engaged himself as surgeon on board the Pomona, bound to the southern whale fishery. In the course of her voyage, the Pomona was taken and carried into Brest, where (probably to ingratiate himself with the French, in the hope of obtaining favourable treatment) he openly professed himself to be one of those who had been accused of a conspiracy to assassinate the King of Great Britain.....On his return to England, conscious, probably, of the imprudence of his language while in France, he assumed the name of Wilson. An information, however, being lodged against him by some of the sailors with whom he had been confined in France, he was apprehended in the month of September, and with much solemnity committed by the Privy Council to the Tower." The writer, after characterizing the matter as "this frivolous and almost ridiculous affair," concludes by saying, "We shall so far venture to anticipate, as to add that Crossfield and the rest were, after a trial only remarkable for the absurdity and inconsistency of the evidence for the Crown, acquitted."—Mr. G. E. Fox read the second and concluding part of his paper on Uriconium, the Roman city at Wroxeter, near Shrewsbury. Referring to the first part of the paper, read last November, he mentioned that the general aspect of the site had then been treated of, that the line of the city walls had been traced, and the various discoveries described which had been made within the walls from the beginning of the last century to the middle of the present one. He then proceeded to explain in detail the remains of the buildings found in the excavations made from the year 1859 to 1861, and again in 1867, during which years the principal public buildings of the Roman city were uncovered. These formed a group in the centre of the site, and comprised the basilica and the baths, with various adjuncts. Mr. Fox urged the desirability of further excavations on the site, which might be expected to yield even better results for archæology than those achieved in the excavations at Silchester, though these had been considerable.—Plans and photographs of the remains and drawings of architectural details from Wroxeter were exhibited in illustration of the paper, together with examples of tesseræ from the floor of the basilica to show the materials used in the mosaics of Uriconium.

Zoological.—Feb. 2.—Prof. G. B. Howes in the chair.—The Secretary read a report on the additions made to the menagerie during January, and exhibited a collection of bird-skins that had been formed by Mr. W. A. Churchill during various shooting excursions along the shores within twenty miles of the island of Mozambique. There were no novelties in the collection, but it was interesting as coming from a locality which, zoologically, had not been well explored.—Mr. R. E. Holding, on behalf of Sir D. Brooke, exhibited a head and two pair of shed horns of a fallow deer. The latter showed curious deformities in consequence of disease of the frontal bone.—Mr. G. E. H. Barrett-Hamilton gave a short general account of his expedition to the Fur-Seal Islands of the North Pacific during the summer of 1896, in company with Prof. D'Arcy Thompson. This journey had been undertaken on behalf of the Foreign and Colonial Offices, with a view to the investigation of the natural history of the Northern fur-seal (Otaria ursina), with special reference to certain disputed points which had a distinct bearing on the industry connected with the skins of the animal. A detailed report of Mr. Barrett-Hamilton's investigations would be issued as a Parliamentary Blue-book.—Mr. G. A. Boulenger read a paper on 'A Catalogue of the Reptiles and Batrachians of Celebes, with Special Reference to the Collections made by Drs. P. and F. Sarasin in 1893-1896.' This memoir gave a complete list (with descriptions) of all the reptiles and batrachians, with the exception of the marine species, known to occur in the Celebes. The number of species of reptiles enumerated was 83, and of batrachians 21.—Mr. M. Jacoby described 43 species of phytophagous Coleoptera, 37 of which were new, based on specimens contained in collections sent home to him from Natal and Mashonaland by Mr. G. Marshall, and from Madagascar by M. Alluand, of Paris.

Entomological.—Feb. 3.—Mr. R. Trimen, President, in the chair.—Mr. F. Bates, Mr. D. D'A. Wright, and Mrs. E. Brightwen were elected Fellows.—Mr. Champion exhibited an extensive series of Coleoptera collected by Mr. R. W. Lloyd and himself in the Austrian Tyrol, containing about 450 species, and including 35 of Longicornia and about 20 of Otiorrhynchus. He also exhibited about 85 species of Coleoptera from Cintra, Portugal, collected by Col. Yerbury, the most interesting of these being Carabus lusitanicus, F.; also two specimens of the rare Zeugophora flavicollis, Marsh., from Colchester.—Mr. Tutt showed for Mr. W. H. B. Fletcher typical Zygæna ochsenheimeri, Zell., from Piedmont, and hybrids between a female of that species and Z. filipendulæ. The progeny was fertile inter se, the males closely approaching Z. ochsenheimeri, the females Z. filipendulæ in character. For Mr. J. B. Hodgkinson he exhibited a number of obscure British Microlepidoptera, some of which had been described as new species.—The determinations were criticized by Lord Walsingham, Mr. Bower, and Mr. Barrett, and the first-named speaker strongly deprecated the practice of positively recognizing or describing such obscure species from single or worn specimens, particularly when British.—Mr. Barrett showed specimens of the true Platyptilia tesseradactyla, L. (= P. fischeri, Zell.), new to the United Kingdom, and taken in Co. Galway.—Mr. McLachlan exhibited cooked locusts (Schistocerca peregrina) sold in the market of Biskra, Algeria. They were cooked whole, but the abdomen only was eaten.—The President, Mr. Barrett, and Mr. Blandford made some remarks on the subject.—A paper was communicated by Dr. A. G. Butler 'On Seasonal Dimorphism in African Butterflies,' which led to a long discussion, chiefly on the so called "dry-season" and "wet-season" forms.—Mr. Merrifield stated that he had been unable to modify experimentally the colour and markings of Lepidoptera by variations in humidity.—Mr. Tutt believed that Mr. Doherty had obtained "wet-season forms" of Oriental species by keeping the pupæ in a moist atmosphere.

Institution of Civil Engineers. — Feb. 9. — Mr. J. W. Barry, President, in the chair.—The paper read was 'On Cold Storage at the London and India Docks,' by Mr. H. F. Donaldson.

Society of Arts. — Feb. 4. — Prof. Ewing delivered the second lecture of his course of Howard Lectures 'On the Mechanical Production of Cold.'

Feb. 8.—Mr. J. S. Neville in the chair.—Mr. W. Burton delivered the fourth and concluding lecture 'On Material and Design in Pottery,' dealing more especially with porcelain, and showing how it formed a sort of connecting link between stoneware and glass, and required special treatment, both as regards design of form and colouring, owing to the constituents of the materials employed. A number of examples from the South Kensington Museum were exhibited.

Feb. 9.—Mr. J. Pennell in the chair.—A paper 'On Lithography as a Mode of Artistic Expression' was read before the Applied Art Section by Mr. G. McCulloch.—A discussion followed, in which Mr. Whistler and others took part.

Feb. 10.—Sir S. C. Bayley in the chair.—A paper 'On the Chemistry of Tea' was read by Mr. D. Crole, and was followed by a discussion.

Aristotelian.—Jan. 25.—Mr. T. H. Hodgson, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. C. T. Davis was elected a Member.—Mr. A. Boutwood read a paper 'On the Fundamental Nature of the Religious Consciousness.'

Feb. 8.—Prof. J. Sully and Miss Meyer were elected Members.—Mr. H. Sturt read a paper 'On Duty.' Duty implies (1) service. The service of duty is a kind of homage to excellence; in its most developed form a homage to an ideal. We appreciate excellence because (a) we should, without it, perish in the struggle for existence; (b) the soul in all departments of activity naturally works towards perfection. Duty implies (2) effort, because it is the service of an imperfect being.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

Mon. Victoria Institute, 4½.—'Inherited and Hereditary Characters'
— London Institution, 5.—'The Fauna of the High Seas,' Prof. S J Hickson
— Hellenic, 5.—'A Stone Tripod at Oxford' and 'The Mantinean Basis,' Prof. P Gardner
— Institute of British Architects, 8.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Industrial Uses of Celluloid,' Lecture I., Mr. C F. Cross (Cantor Lecture)
Tues. Royal Institution, 3.—'Animal Electricity,' Prof. A. D. Waller.
— Statistical, 5½.—'English Vaccination and Small-pox Statistics, with Special Reference to the Report of the Royal Commission and to Recent Small-pox Epidemics,' Mr. Noel A. Humphreys — Society of Arts, 8.—'The Progress of Canada during the Past Sixty Years of Her Majesty's Reign,' Mr J G Colmer.
— Folk-lore, 8.—'The Story of Orendel,' Prof W P Ker.
— Civil Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'Cold Storage at the London and India Docks.'
— Zoological, 8½.—'Echidnocephalus, a Halosauroid Fish from the Upper Cretaceous Formation of Westphalia,' Mr A S. Woodward; 'Specimen of Acanthocybium solandri from the Arabian Sea,' Mr G A. Boulenger; 'Remarks on the Existing Forms of Giraffe,' Mr W E de Winton
Wed. United Service Institution, 3.—'The Dongola Expedition of 1896,' Lieut A. Hilliard-Atteridge
— Microscopical, 7.—'On a Simple Method of Microphotography,' Mr G M Giles
— Meteorological, 7½.—'Report on the Phenological Observations for 1896,' Mr. E Mawley; 'Results of Observations on Haze and Transparency near Haslemere, Surrey,' Hon. F. A. R. Russell — Society of Arts, 8.—'Light Railways,' Mr. E. R. Calthrop.
— Entomological, 8.
Thurs. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Problems of Arctic Geology,' Dr. J. W. Gregory.
— Royal, 4½
— Historical, 5.—Anniversary: Address by the President
— London Institution, 6.—'The Arctic Record,' Mr. J. Scott Keltie
— Numismatic, 7.
— Linnean, 8.—'Certain Points in the Anatomy and Morphology of the Nymphæaceæ,' Mr D T G Vaughan; 'The Adhesive Discs of Eucilla spicata, Moq.,' Mr T H Burrage
— Chemical, 8.—'The Oxidation of Sulphurous Acid by Potassium Permanganate,' Messrs T. S Dymond and F Hughes; 'Sodamide and some of its Substitution Derivatives,' and 'Rubidamide,' Dr. A W Titherley
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Mechanical Production of Cold,' Lecture IV., Prof. J A Ewing (Howard Lecture)
— Antiquaries, 8½.—'Note on Ancient Burial Customs,' Rev. E. B. Savage. 'Mediæval Surnames and their Spellings,' Mr. G. Grazebrook.
Fri. Geological, 8.—Annual Meeting.
— United Service Institution, 3.—'The Health of the British Troops in India and other Foreign Stations,' Major-General R. Dashwood
— Royal Institution, 9.—'The Approaching Return of the Great Swarm of November Meteors,' Dr G. J. Stoney
Sat. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Growth of the Mediterranean Route to the East,' Mr. W. F. Lord.

Science Gossip.

The annual meeting of the Society for the Protection of Birds will take place on the afternoon of Tuesday week, at the Westminster Palace Hotel. The chair will be taken by the Earl of Stamford.

The Royal Meteorological Society will hold at the Institution of Civil Engineers, in Great George Street, from March 16th to 19th, in commemoration of the "Diamond Jubilee," an exhibition of meteorological instruments in use in 1837 and 1897, and of diagrams, drawings, and photographs illustrative thereof.

At the meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society held yesterday (February 12th) the Gold Medal, which had been awarded to Prof. Barnard for his discovery of the fifth satellite of Jupiter and other discoveries, was presented to him in person, the address being delivered by the retiring president, Dr. Common. The latter is succeeded by Prof. Sir Robert Ball.

Dr. Paul Harzer, Director of the Gotha Observatory, has been appointed to succeed the late Prof. Kruger in the directorship of that at Kiel. He becomes also Professor of Astronomy in the University.

Dr. Wilhelm Valentiner, Director of the Karlsruhe Observatory, has been appointed Professor of Astronomy in the University of Heidelberg, and the observatory is to be transferred to the latter place, where a building is being erected for the purpose.

The small planets Nos. 412, 413, 420, and 421 have received the names Elisabetha, Edburga, Bertholda, and Zähringia respectively. They were all discovered by Prof. Max Wolf at Heidelberg, the former two on January 7th, 1896, and the latter two on September 3rd, 1896. Two of the discoveries more recent than the last must be excluded from the numbering, as only one photographic position of each is available.

FINE ARTS

EXHIBITION OF WORKS OF FORD MADOX BROWN AT THE GRAFTON GALLERY.

This is one of the most important of that now numerous class, the "one-man" exhibition. It comprises nearly two hundred pictures and cartoons, some of them unusually large and crowded with figures. Yet it is far from being complete, and therefore it is not altogether just to Madox Brown. The great cartoon of 'The Body of Harold brought to the Conqueror,' which established Brown's reputation with artists in 1845, is in the South London Gallery and not on these walls, while 'Chaucer at the Court of Edward III.' is at Sydney. Neither of Brown's two masterpieces, 'The Last of England' and 'Christ washes Peter's Feet,' is here. The former is in the public gallery at Birmingham and the latter in the National Gallery. Work (No. 54), too, which he mistakenly took to be his best work, is so badly hung that it might as well not have been borrowed from the Corporation Gallery at Manchester. 'Romeo and Juliet' is in America, while the best 'Entombment' is not here. To be sure, smaller copies and several nondescript versions of these absent examples do something towards making the collection adequately representative of a masculine artist and admirable colourist. Of course, as the series of large paintings in the Town Hall at Manchester are not removable from the walls, they are perforce represented, more or less imperfectly, by the copies and versions to which we have referred. There is, on the other hand, it must be acknowledged, a superabundance of inferior works which had better not have been hung. Altogether the visitor will be wise if he does not expect too much from the collection; and yet there is so much that is really fine in it that he will be forced to concede to Brown an extremely high place among modern English painters.

As for nearly forty years the Athenæum has been Brown's constant advocate and expositor, it is not necessary for us to say much about the leading paintings in the exhibition. The late Mr. Solomon Hart, R.A., who contributed to this journal in the forties, was among the first to praise with any degree of warmth Brown's Wickliffe reading his Translation of the Bible to John of Gaunt (42) when it was at the Free Exhibition in 1848. Its architectonic composition and the conventions that mark the design, the absence of passion, the motionless figures and pervading grace, the light tonality and brilliant coloration, make it quite different from anything Brown painted before or after. Yet it was this work that attracted to him the Pre-Raphaelite Brethren. Dante Rossetti, in fact, fell violently in love with it, and based upon it his earliest artistic principles, technical as well as pictorial. That the painter of 'Wickliffe' should likewise be the author of a piece so intensely dramatic and so thoroughly human and moving as No. 60, which represents the parting of Romeo and Juliet, is a marvel not to be ignored because the version before us is decidedly inferior to the absent original. On the other hand, Mr. Bibby's replica in oil of the very original Elijah and the Widow's Son (15, the water-colour drawing of which is at South Kensington, is the finest and most animated version that exists of the design, and Leighton was never tired of admiring and praising it. We mention this because many prejudiced supporters of Brown believe that Academicians—the eclectics especially—constantly depreciated him. It may surprise some of them to know that Armitage was a large subscriber to the fund which secured 'Christ washes Peter's Feet' for the National Gallery, while Leighton was equally zealous in securing 'Harold' for South London. Nor was Mr. Watts less active in the matter. Chaucer at the Court of Edward III. (16), Mr. Bibby's small version of the enormous picture now at Sydney, is a distinct improvement on a picture which, when it was in Trafalgar Square in 1851, occupied a leading place and a great deal of space in the Middle Room. As the Catalogue does not condescend to such trivialities, we may say that the work contains an excellent portrait of Walter H. Deverell, the P-R.B.'s much-beloved friend, as the page who is flirting with the lady in front; D. G. Rossetti is Chaucer; John Marshall, the famous surgeon, figures as the jester; Mr. W. M. Rossetti sat for the troubadour; and we believe Miss Siddal is the lady on our right who clasps her hands together. Deverell's is much the best of these likenesses.

Cordelia and Lear (20) represents the moment immediately preceding the death of the king. It is a prodigious improvement upon 'Wickliffe,' which it followed at Hyde Park Corner in 1849. Except in 'Christ washes Peter's Feet' and 'The Last of England,' Brown never surpassed this great work; the effect of it is strikingly concentrated, and the pathos is intense. In "The Private Collections of England," No. II., September 13th, 1873, we called it "one of the most nearly perfect pictures of the English School." King René's Honeymoon (27) is an expressive version of one of Brown's sweetest designs in what he was wont to call "the amorous class," what Millais used to style "cuddling pictures." As the Catalogue affords no explanation of the subject, we may repeat what we said on October 10th, 1885, in "The Private Collections," No. LXXXII.:—

> "The young king and his fair bride sit side by side in a sort of throne set up in a bower while they discuss the plan of the 'Chastlet du Roy René,' a diagram of which lies at their feet. A soft, golden light flushes the roseate air. René holds a pair of compasses in one hand and with a soft smile abandons himself to the charm of the situation, while he leans towards his spouse and receives her caress. Lightly touching his arm with one hand, she puts the other about his neck, drawing his willing face to her, and plants a kiss upon his cheek. Tender passion was never more admirably or ardently delineated than in this beautiful romance. The style, no less than the sentiment, the costumes, lighting, and chiaroscuro (a broad, soft, ruddy, and nearly shadowless tone pervades the scene), is excellently adapted to the passion of the subject."

This delightful comedy illustrates Brown's power of dealing with subjects of the class almost as well as the 'Romeo and Juliet' shows how he could handle similar, but more passionate motives and incidents. These pictures are the true complements to the artist's tragic works, like the 'Cordelia and Lear' and the not less touching 'Last of England,' of which Mr. Rae's reduced version, No. 64, is a good duplicate.

Our readers who compare it with any of the best works here may judge how inadequate Juan and Haidee (48)—the picture which is to represent Brown in the Louvre, as we lately stated—is to figure as a specimen either of Brown's art or the English School. It is not quite his worst picture, but it is among his worst. Work (54) we described when reviewing the artist's own exhibition in 1865, and again when it was at Manchester in 1887. Though full of fine painting and showing plenty of power, it is, in our opinion, a great mistake, at once complicated, didactic, and full of crudities of thought. It is woefully confused; in fact, it is rather a lecture in paint than a picture, and it possesses none of the incisiveness of Hogarth nor of Hogarth's homogeneity and simplicity. The gentleman on horseback in the middle of the straggling composition, or rather no-composition, is a good likeness of R. B. Martineau, whose 'Last Day in the Old Home' has lately gone to the National Gallery, but the portraits of Carlyle and Kingsley in the foreground are caricatures. This picture has darkened considerably since we saw it at Manchester. The Entombment (55) is an inferior version of one of Brown's happiest designs, which is better represented by No. 132, and still better by the photograph, No. 249, from a really fine cartoon.

Cordelia's Portion (56) we described at length in "The Private Collections," No. LXXXIV. Brown etched the subject in No. 4 of the Germ, 1850. We also mentioned Mr. Rae's large landscape, An English Autumn Afternoon, in No. XVIII. of the same series. Wilhelmus Conquistator (61) is the large version in oil of the cartoon of 1845, and was exhibited along with the cartoon at Westminster. Recently, when chronicling the gift of the cartoon to South London, we described its design, which does not differ materially from that of No. 61. The picture deserves close examination if the observer is to enter into the spirit of so magnificent a work. Brown's superabundant vitality is manifest in it, and his intense sympathy with the furious passions of his battle scene is evidenced by the group of combatants in the foreground, where, locked in a death grapple, lie the bodies of a Norman and a Saxon, one of whom has stabbed the other in the back, while he, in turn, has bitten his adversary's throat like a dog. The composition, though at once difficult and complex, and consisting of a crowd of figures compactly grouped, is a masterpiece of its kind, and, like the expressions of the faces, it is worthy of the highest praise. How fine a draughtsman Brown was at the time he drew the cartoon may be noticed in the Original Cartoon of the Spirit of Justice (36), which, with the cartoon now at the South London Gallery, was at Westminster in 1845. The design of No. 36 is a little stilted and its composition is jejune and awkward, but as a specimen of drawing on the scale of life and an illustration of stateliness in style it is extremely fine; indeed, it can hardly be overpraised. No. 43 is a very fair replica of Jesus washes Peter's Feet. In announcing the gift of the original to the National Gallery, we gave the history and mentioned the names of the persons who sat to Brown for the chief figures, except Mr. F. G. Stephens, who sat for the face of Christ (it is said to be an excellent likeness of the model); Mr. W. Hunt, senior (or Mr. W. B. Scott); Mr. C. B. Cayley, the translator of Dante; and the original of St. John, whom we supposed to be Christina Rossetti. She, however, had no recollection of having sat to Brown for this head. It is, therefore, more probable that her brother William did so. Mr. Coltart's Jacob and Joseph's Coat (63), a strikingly original design, at once picturesque and expressive, aptly illustrates Brown's powers, and is admirably painted. The heads of the truculent Judah, the asinine Issachar, the brooding Benjamin, and the cruel Simeon are first rate. On the other hand, it furnishes a curious illustration of Brown's inability to put himself in the place of the observing student of his conceptions. For instance, he intended to express part of the motive of his subject by a sheep-dog in the foreground, which, according to the artist, demonstrates the falsity of the rascally sons of Jacob when they exhibit to their father the blood-stained coat of Joseph. The dog sniffs the blood on this garment, and refuses to recognize it as human blood. Such was Brown's account of his design, but he forgot to tell the public how they were to know what is passing in the dog's mind!

There is a good deal that is interesting about William Shakespear (58), a powerfully painted "collation from various portraits, intended to supply the want of a credible likeness of our national poet," and, as such, proposed to be engraved for sale. It is, in fact, a compilation, and nothing else. In that respect it is really fine; but it is hardly to be wondered at that purists in portraiture like the Selecting Committee of the Academy declined to exhibit it as a likeness of Shakspeare, when it was submitted to them in 1850. Had it been engraved, goodness knows what confusion would have arisen among the cognoscenti, the more so because it really is a remarkably successful compilation, such as, when one has familiarized oneself with it, it becomes extremely difficult not to believe in. The Portrait of Ford Madox Brown (22) is, for a man's representation of himself, fairly faithful, but it is not nearly so good nor so true as No. 50, which, though melodramatic in its motives, is a veritable likeness and splendidly painted.

Among the works to which we need not refer at any length are At the Opera (66); "Take your Son, Sir!" (70) a young matron offering her first-born babe to its father; Parisina's Sleep (74), a vigorous and competent painting in Brown's Belgian style of 1842 or a little later; several pastel portraits (82, 83, and 84); Sardanapalus's Dream (115), the latest of the artist's first-rate designs, of which there is a good etching by Mr. Rhead; and a large number of cartoons for stained glass, comprising figures of bishops, saints, heroes, kings, queens, poets, and philosophers, noble works in their way, the conception of which is generally much above their by no means invariably vigorous draughtsmanship. To conclude, we must complain of the badness of the Catalogue, which should have supplied notes on the history, dates, dimensions, and subjects of the works, and contains no index to their names. Such notes as there are have been borrowed from Brown's catalogue of his own exhibition in Piccadilly; they ought to have been supplemented.

MR. GEORGE PRICE BOYCE.

The first hour of Tuesday afternoon last took from amongst us the amiable, accomplished, and extremely original painter in water colours who, until 1893, when he entered the "Retired" grade, had been an eminent member of the "Old Society," in which he worthily filled the place of his model, David Cox. He was the eldest child of George J. Boyce and his wife, Anne Price, and was born in Bloomsbury on the 24th of September, 1826; he went to school at Chipping Ongar, and afterwards stayed for a considerable time in Paris. Proposing to become an architect, he was articled to the late Mr. Little. In 1846, while still with Mr. Little, he travelled in South Germany and Flanders, making sketches of the town architecture of those countries, and later in France. He continued in Mr. Little's office till October in that year, when, as an "improver," he entered the employment of Messrs. Wyatt & Brandon. With them he remained till the middle of 1849, when, having failed in a competition, and probably despairing of success as an architect, or rather, perhaps, becoming convinced that his vocation lay elsewhere, he made a lengthened tour in North Wales, and encountered David Cox at the Royal Oak at Bettws-y-Coed.

This meeting seems to have led to Boyce's giving up architecture and taking to painting with characteristic single-mindedness and thoroughness. Already an excellent and swift draughtsman, and gifted with an exquisitely sensitive eye for the harmonies of nature's colours and tones, Boyce made exceptionally rapid progress in his newly chosen studies, although an accident while skating, in the winter of 1849, which injured his hip and lamed him slightly for life, compelled him to lay up for some months. In 1851 he was again in Wales, where he made several of those beautiful studies upon which his reputation in after life was founded.

Before this he had become intimate with several artists, such as Mr. H. T. Wells, who married his sister Joanna, herself an accomplished painter, and he found himself drawn into a distinguished circle. A second meeting with Cox at Bettws confirmed him in his new departure, and on returning to London in the winter of 1852, he took a studio in Great Russell Street, and, joining the long-renowned Clipstone Street Academy, studied much from the life and tried his hand at oil painting. Some time before this Boyce, probably by means of Mr. Wells, was, we believe, brought in contact with Rossetti while he was finishing the 'Mary, Virgin,' picture, or that 'Ecce Ancilla Domini!' now in the National Gallery. The date of this introduction is doubtful—it may have been 1849, or even later; but the effect upon Boyce was such that he became an enthusiastic friend of the great artist, although their characters were entirely different, bought some of his pictures, and always regarded him with a most unusual affection. On Boyce's style of painting, on the other hand, Rossetti had no influence. In 1853 Boyce was at Dinant, and visited the Pyrenees and Babbicombe Bay, where he produced some charming water colours. In this year, too, he made his first appearance at London exhibitions, sending to Suffolk Street 'The Royal Oak, Bettws-y-Coed' (a reminiscence of Cox), and 'Beeches,' and to the Academy 'Timber Yard, Chiddingstone,' and 'East End of Edward the Confessor's Chapel, Westminster.' He repeated the last subject more than once, and his drawings of it will long show the beauty of the interior of the Abbey, before it was degraded by Sir Gilbert Scott.

In 1854 Boyce was studying in Switzerland, at Ticino, Milan, Venice, and Verona, where he made a fine drawing of the tombs of the Can Grande and Mastino. In 1855 he was again in London, drawing at the Langham Chambers School, and again visited North Wales. In 1856 he moved from Great Russell Street to 15, Buckingham Street, Strand, and had William Burges for his fellow lodger. Later in the same year we find him painting at Airolo and Giornico, and again suffering greatly in the injured hip, which troubled him during succeeding years, when he was studying at Lindfield, Brighton, Lynmouth, Berry Pomeroy, Glastonbury, and Wells. Each visit is signalized by more than one fine drawing.

In 1858 Boyce became a founder member of the original Hogarth Club, whose rooms were in Piccadilly and Waterloo Place. Among the members were Street, W. Burges, Madox Brown, A. D. Fripp, Lord Leighton, D. G. Rossetti, and Woolner; and of men still living Sir E. Burne-Jones, Sir F. Burton, and Mr. Wallis. To the private exhibitions of this society Boyce contributed, as he had previously done to the collection of Pre-Raphaelite pictures held in Russell Place, Fitzroy Square. In successive years we find him busily painting at Streatley, of which he was one of the discoverers, long before F. Walker and his friends drew attention to it; at Whitby, where he made drawings before Alfred Hunt went there; at Rievaulx and Whitwell. Some of the results of these visits were exhibited at the Academy and enhanced his reputation. In the autumn of 1861 he went to Egypt, with Mr. F. Dillon as his companion, and remained six months.

Boyce removed from Buckingham Street to the chambers Rossetti had vacated in Chatham Place, because his wife had died there, and remained in Blackfriars till October, 1868, when, having determined to build himself a house near Rossetti's in Cheyne Walk, he engaged Mr. Philip Webb to design it. During its erection he resided in the neighbourhood, and in 1870 the very characteristic mansion in Glebe Place in which he died on Tuesday was ready for occupation. He filled it with pictures, drawings, porcelain, and all sorts of objects which attracted him by their beauty. "West House," as Boyce called it, became henceforward his headquarters, while in his excursions he visited Ludlow, Dunster, Dovedale, and Wales at home, and in France, Auvergne, Dauphiné, and Burgundy. He continued to do so until his health, enfeebled by repeated attacks of typhoid fever and a severe accident to one of his wrists, began to break up.

In 1864 he was elected an Associate of the Old Society, and to its exhibitions he was thenceforth an almost constant contributor of drawings, always beautiful, delicate, and unobtrusive, which were conspicuous for their fidelity and unaffected sincerity. The simple "Englishness" of their technique was almost demure in its graceful modesty. A less unassuming man would have held a place among the leaders of the "Old Society," and it was hardly to their credit that so fine and sound an artist remained an Associate until 1878.

Personally Boyce was like his pictures: modest almost to a fault, undemonstrative and sincere, endowed with sentiment that was not to be understood by those who judge men by the first glance, and least of all by those who, infected with the vulgarities of our time, "confound the bigger with the greater." Highly cultivated, he found in art his chief occupation and resource. He was also an excellent amateur musician, and at one time a good oarsman.

SALES.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 6th inst. the following pictures, from the collection of the late Baron de Hirsch: E. W. Cooke, Fishing Boats Ashore, and Market Figures, 136*l*. P. Rousseau, ten illustrations to La Fontaine's 'Fables': The Jay and the Peacock; The Fox and the Stork, and companion; The Rabbit and the Duck; The Rabbits and the Mole; The Heron and the Snail; The Hare and the Grasshopper; The Pigeons; The Hare and the Tortoise; Portrait of La Fontaine, 320*l*. F. Ziem, A View of Constantinople, 252*l*. A. Cuyp, The Kicking Horse, 141*l*. J. L. David, The Parting of Telemachus and Eucharis, 220*l*. T. Gainsborough, Portrait of Lord Mulgrave, 735*l*. H. H., Portrait of Hans Balthazar Bodmer, 136*l*. A. Kauffmann, The Judgment of Paris, 162*l*. Largillière, Portrait of Duchesse de Villars, 315*l*. C. Van Loo, Portrait of Henriette Reunetain, 294*l*. Frans Mieris, The Interior of an Apartment, with a lady seated by a table, 189*l*. J. F. Nollekens, Pierrot and other Figures; and Figures Dancing (a pair), 315*l*. A. Ostade, Les Musiciens Ambulans, 115*l*. G. Terburg, Portrait of a Lady and Portrait of a Gentleman, 225*l*.; An Interior of a Room, with a lady in white satin dress and black cape, 483*l*. Van Dyck, Portrait of a Boy, 1,680*l*.

The same auctioneers sold on the same day the following pictures, the property of a gentleman: Hondekoeter, A Landscape, with cocks fighting and other birds, 162*l*. N. Maes, Interior, with a servant in red and green dress seated by a table plucking a duck, 630*l*.

Messrs. Robinson & Fisher sold on the 4th inst. the following pictures: Whistler, Portraits, a pair, sketches, 97*l.*; The Thames by Night, sketch, 136*l.* Sir J. Reynolds, A Portrait of a Lady, in ermine-trimmed dress, 78*l.* P. Bordoni, A Portrait of a Venetian Lady, in black and brown dress, 278*l.*

On Monday and Tuesday of last week there were sold at the gallery of M. G. Petit, Paris, the following pictures from the collection of M. H. Vever: Corot, Eurydice Blessée, 26,000 francs; Abreuvoir, 82,000; Chemin Montant, 27,800; Nymphe couchée au Bord de la Mer, 30,000; Le Lac, 16,000; Matinée, 16,000; Jeune Mère, 15,800; Route Ensoleillée, 12,000; Ville d'Avray, 35,000; Le Pêcheur, 8,500. Daubigny, Les Bords de l'Oise, 78,000 (this is said to be the highest sum ever paid for a work of Daubigny's). Diaz, La Châtelaine, 13,200. Harpignies, Le Crépuscule, 11,500. Millet, Femme au Puits, pastel, 27,000; La Plaine, pastel, 16,200; Les Puiseuses d'Eau, pastel 20,300. Meissonier, Le Déjeuner, 72,000; Officier d'État-Major en Observation, 94,100. C. Monet, Pont d'Argenteuil, 21,500; L'Église de Vernon, 12,000; L'Église de Varangeville, 10,800; Les Glaçons, 12,500. Puvis de Chavannes, "Ludus pro Patria," sketch for the picture at Amiens, 22,500. The total amount realized at this sale was 967,970 francs.

Fine-Art Gossip.

Messrs. Boussod, Valadon & Co. have on view a number of water-colour drawings by Mr. C. E. Holloway.—Messrs. T. Agnew & Sons have formed in the Old Bond Street Galleries an exhibition of water-colour drawings.—The Fine-Art Society has appointed to-day (Saturday) for the private view of Mr. A. W. Rimington's drawings entitled "Wanderings in Italy," to see which the public will be admitted on Monday next.—The same date applies to an exhibition at Messrs. Dowdeswell's of water-colour drawings by Mr. J. Aumonier of the old Chain Pier, Brighton, and pictures in oil painted in Lincolnshire and Sussex by the same.

The annual meeting of the Royal Archæological Institute will be held at Dorchester from August 3rd to August 10th, under the presidency of Lieut.-General Pitt-Rivers. Prof. Boyd Dawkins will preside over the Antiquarian Section, and Sir Henry Howorth over the Historical.

Mr. Watts, being now a Retired Royal Academician, will, we hear, not contribute more than one picture to the next exhibition. He is in the country, and in good health.

A large 'Italian Landscape,' by Prof. Costa, has been hung in the National Gallery, the first work of that admirable artist which has found its way into an English public collection.

All lovers of water-colour painting will be sorry to hear that the Special Exhibition of members' works in the gallery of the Old Society, which we criticized recently, shut last Saturday. The Burlington Club's exhibition of Alfred Hunt's works will close on the 28th inst.

An exhibition of portraits of fair women and beautiful children is, following recent English precedent, being organized for benevolent purposes at the École des Beaux-Arts, Paris, and will be open from the 26th of April till the 23rd of May next. We may hope to find at the École, as in similar exhibitions held in Paris since the "Alsaciens-Lorrains" gallery, 1874, numerous rarities from private collections.

Messrs. Clifford & Co. exhibit until the end of this month, at 21, Haymarket, what they call "A Dog Show on Paper and Canvas, including some Royal Pets," the works of Miss F. C. Fairman.

Another of the monumental volumes which excite the wonder rather than the admiration of those who concern themselves with the doings of the Department of Science and Art has been issued from the Stationery Office in the form of an octavo Blue-book of nearly three hundred closely printed pages. The title sufficiently indicates its nature, and that is 'Calendar, History, and General Summary of Regulations of the Department.' Seemingly, the only fact that is new in it is that the South Kensington Schools are, in so far as they teach decorative drawing and design, now officially described as the Royal College of Art. We have failed to discover the record of an intention on the part of the authorities to correct their recent blunder of removing from a well-lighted hall to a dull corridor the unrivalled collection of casts of the finest sculptures.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

St. James's Hall.—Henschel Concerts.
Queen's Hall.—Symphony Concerts. Promenade Concerts. Stock Exchange Orchestral Society. Royal Amateur Orchestral Society.

There have been few greater choral works produced by living composers of late years than Brahms's 'German Requiem,' originally written as a filial tribute to the memory of the master's dead mother. So much has been uttered concerning this beautiful and original work, with its combination of musical science and pathos, that nothing more remains to be written, and we have only to chronicle a generally commendable performance of it at St. James's Hall on Thursday last week. Mr. Henschel had his orchestra and chorus well in hand, and much, if not perfect justice was done to the principal parts for soprano and baritone by Miss Evangeline Florence and Mr. George Holmes. Praise absolutely unqualified must be bestowed on Miss Fanny Davies for her interpretation of Brahms's Pianoforte Concerto in D minor, Op. 15. Technically and intellectually it was a noteworthy achievement. A slip inserted in the programme book was calculated to astonish the audience. The Philharmonic Society announces that for the first time some concerts will be given this year in the autumn as well as in the spring and summer. We have, therefore, this curious pronouncement:—

"Mr. Henschel, whose orchestra consists to the greater part of members of that of the Philharmonic Society, begs to announce that, after the termination of the present series, his orchestral and choral concerts will, for a time at least, be discontinued."

Of course Mr. Henschel has every right to discontinue his concerts, especially if they do not pay their way; but the excuse he gives is somewhat insufficient, for there are plenty of good orchestral players who would be glad to accept service under him if called upon.

Apart from Dvorâk's Symphony in E minor, 'From the New World,' the second of Mr. Robert Newman's Symphony Concerts last Saturday afternoon consisted entirely of Wagnerian extracts. We had the new Venusberg music from 'Tannhäuser,' the Prelude and Death Song from 'Tristan und Isolde,' Tannhäuser's Pilgrimage, the Trauermarsch from 'Götterdämmerung,' the Overture to 'Die Meistersinger,' and last, but not least, a lengthy selection from the first act of 'Parsifal,' given without the vocal parts. Most of these were superlatively well played under Mr. Henry J. Wood's direction; but the 'Parsifal' selection seemed rather in the nature of a sacrilege, for the music is, comparatively speaking, ineffective without the voices and the scenic accessories.

The novelty at last Saturday evening's Promenade Concert was an orchestral legend, entitled 'Undine,' by Miss Amy Horrocks. There are many versions of this antique fairy story, and Miss Horrocks, a young composer of no mean talents, has dealt with it in her own way, handling her materials with melodic inspiration and plenty of vigour. The orchestration is strenuous, and, we might say, masculine rather than feminine. The piece was received with much favour, and Miss Amy Horrocks may be warmly encouraged to persevere. The rest of the programme consisted of familiar materials, and scarcely calls for notice.

The most admirably equipped of our numerous amateur orchestral and choral societies, that known by the name of the Stock Exchange, gave an exceedingly creditable concert on Tuesday, though the Society's conductor, Mr. George Kitchin, was absent on account of ill health. His place was admirably filled by Mr. Arthur W. Payne, and the performance of one of Haydn's Symphonies in D, from the Salomon set, and three movements from Schubert's 'Rosamunde' music would not have reflected discredit on a professional orchestra. A novelty was an elegiac overture, entitled 'Les Ténèbres,' by Miss Swepstone. The clever young composer has prefaced her score by a few words from Tennyson's 'In Memoriam.' The piece is, therefore, in the tragic vein so fashionable at present, but it is well scored, and the themes, if not particularly original, are put together with a musicianly hand. Miss Irma Sethe played some violin solos with pure tone and intonation; and Prof. Bridge was, of course, unexceptionable in Handel's spirited Organ Concerto in B flat, No. 2, from the first set, with a cadenza from his own pen. The male-voice choir, under the direction of Mr. S. J. Edwards, gave some glees and part-songs with delightful refinement.

The Royal Amateur Orchestral Society's Concert on Wednesday evening commenced with a series of items by Wagner. This was rather an innovation, but it was, on the whole, successful, Mr. George Mount's band giving effective performances of the Vorspiel to 'Tristan und Isolde' (concert version), the Overture and March from 'Tannhäuser,' and a sort of pasticcio from the third act of 'Die Meistersinger.' Vocal pieces were contributed in commendable fashion by Madame Alva and Mr. George Holmes, but they should have been sung in German. There was nothing in the second part to call for notice.

Musical Gossip.

Mr. Lamond again showed himself a master of the key-board at his fourth and last pianoforte recital in St. James's Hall on Tuesday afternoon. His rendering of Beethoven's final Sonata in C minor, Op. 111, was perhaps a trifle cold; but from a technical point of view it was a remarkably fine performance, and the same may be said of his interpretation of Schubert's Fantasia in C, Op. 15. Minor pieces by several composers were included in a programme that should have drawn a larger audience.

Tschaïkowsky's Symphony in B minor, 'Pathétique,' was announced for repetition at Sir Charles Halle's Manchester concerts on Thursday this week. The work seems to grow in popularity at every musical centre.

Mr. Alfred Schulz-Curtius informs us that, owing to the strong recommendation of Frau Cosima Wagner, Herr Carl Pohlig, of Bayreuth, has been secured by the Covent Garden Syndicate to advise and assist their stage manager in the mounting and general production of the Wagner performances during the summer season. It is, therefore, reasonable to look forward to some excellent representations of the Bayreuth master's works.

A Pianoforte Trio in A, by the Russian composer Paul Pabst, will be performed for the first time in London at the Walenn chamber concert in the Queen's Hall next Tuesday evening.

Mlle. Aimée Ferdinand will give her first evening concert, under the direction of Mr. Ernest Cavour, at St. James's Hall on March 9th, assisted by Mr. Ben Davies, Miss Florence Leoni, Miss Bonavia, Signor Panzani, and Herr Emil Steger, who will make his first appearance on the London concert platform.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Percy Betts, the wife of one of the most esteemed musical critics on the London press. Mrs. Betts, though not a professional, was an excellent musician and the eldest of three sisters, the second being the well-known vocalist Miss Giulia Warwick, who happily still survives. The youngest, Miss Alexandra Ehrenberg, also an admirable vocalist and a very successful teacher, passed away a few months ago.

Mr. Eugen d'Albert has completed a new opera entitled 'Gernot,' which is to be produced at Mannheim in April.

Miss Muriel Elliot seems to have won golden opinions as a pianist in Berlin, and when she returns to London she will doubtless reappear as an executant at the earliest opportunity.

The death is announced of Joseph W. von Wasielewski, who will best be remembered by his excellent literary works on Schumann. He was leader of the orchestra at Düsseldorf at the time when Schumann was Kapellmeister in that town.

The composer C. Grammann, born in 1844 at Lübeck, died at Dresden on the 31st ult. His best-known work is the romantic opera 'Melusine,' first performed at Wiesbaden in 1875. Grammann was an enthusiastic admirer of Wagner, traces of whose influence are to be found in his compositions.—We also hear of the death, in his fifty-seventh year, of the popular concert singer Felice Mancio. He was a native of Turin, and took part in the Italian revolutionary wars of liberation.

The hundredth anniversary of the birth of Donizetti will be celebrated on September 25th at Bergamo, his native town, on which occasion a monument to his memory will be unveiled. The idea of a Donizetti exhibition on a large scale at the same time is contemplated.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK

Sun	Orchestral Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall
—	National Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
—	Queen's Hall String Quartet Concert, 7.30
Mon	Orchestral Concert 7.45, Royal College of Music
—	Popular Concert, 8, St. James's Hall
Tues.	Miss E. A. Atkinson's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Steinway Hall
—	Walenn Quartet Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	St. Cuthbert's Hall Choral Society, 8, Gade's 'Erl King's Daughter,' Schubert's 'Song of Miriam,' &c
—	Royal Amateur Orchestral Society's Concert, 9, Queen's Hall.
Wed	Ballad Concert, 3, St. James's Hall
—	Miss M. Shaw's Recital, 8, Queen's Hall
Thurs.	Herr Werner's Violin Recital, 3, St. James's Hall
—	Mr. Henschel's Symphony Concert, 8, St. James's Hall
Fri.	Messrs. Plunket Greene and Leonard Borwick's Recital, 3, St. James's Hall
—	Bohemian String Quartet Concert, 3, Queen's Hall
—	Mr. Dolmetsch's Concert on Old Instruments, 9, No. 6, Keppel Street, Bloomsbury
Sat	Popular Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Queen's Hall Symphony Concert, 3
—	Mrs. Stanton's Concert, 3, Queen's Hall
—	Orchestral Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Promenade Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

Lyric.—'The Daughters of Babylon,' a Play in Four Acts. By Wilson Barrett.

More scholarship than most dramatists or, for the matter of that, scholars possess is requisite to put before us in dramatic guise life in Babylonia during the Jewish captivity. Such few indications as are afforded by inspired writers or the fragments of Berosus, backed up by recent excavations, supply possibly materials for an animated panorama. Genius such as that displayed by Byron, say in 'Cain,' is indispensable if the figures of the antique world are to be endowed with vitality. Mr. Wilson Barrett is not a Byron. He has gone back to the Babylonian Talmud for a motive, and he has discovered one which is doubtless appropriate. To this he has given what claims to be a dramatic exposition in front of a floridly coloured picture of Oriental buildings and characters. His Rabbinical "Mishna" is, however, interpreted in action by men of to-day; the Oriental atmosphere is confined to that supplied by the scene-painter; and the motives by which the characters are animated are wholly inappropriate and inconceivable. One must not, of course, tie down the dramatist too closely. The mere fact that the characters, Babylonian or Hebrew, speak our language, shows how much that is conventional is indispensable to the represented drama. Shakspeare even puts English country gentlemen, the predecessors of the squires of Fielding and Smollett, in Illyria or elsewhere. He is not, however, false in essentials. You may not present people animated by virtues undreamt of in their time. The inducements to action of many of Mr. Barrett's characters, and the atmosphere of much of his play, are Christian at a time when the very form the Redeemer was to take had not been anticipated. Love is, of course, immortal. Had Mr. Barrett, on the lines of the notion he has adopted, but not shapen, given us a story of passion, fatefulness, and death, or of ripe, brief enjoyment, he might with no great difficulty have achieved a work that would, for a time at least, have lasted. He had, however, given us previously 'The Sign of the Cross,' and the Church has bestowed its benediction upon the picture of pagan licentiousness and Christian sentiment. He must accordingly do the same again. When his hero is followed to Babylon by a Jewish maiden masquerading in boyish gear, who forfeits her life in so doing, he delivers to her long and edifying speeches. When a second woman, a courtesan, enamoured of his fatal beauty, approaches him with solicitation, he lectures her on the virtues of self-effacement in behalf of the beloved object in a manner that convinces her, makes her ashamed of her profession, and induces her to place another woman in her lover's arms, a thing scarcely to be dreamed of in these Christian days. The result is that the play is foolish, unconvincing, and dull. It was found so by Mr. Barrett's partisans, numerous and enthusiastic as these are. At the close of the piece a battle royal was fought between the contents and the non-contents, but the contents, even though they were in a majority, were unmoved during the performance. Not a solitary touch, indeed, is there of genuine passion in the whole. All is frigid, artificial, unreal, uninspired. The scenery is excellent, and may very possibly convey to us an idea as good as we are likely to get of Babylon, with its hanging gardens and its exuberant life. Martin scarcely suggests in his paintings a better notion of immeasurable distance lighted by fiery cressets than does Mr. Hann. We are not, however, speaking now from a standpoint of scholarship, nor demanding of Mr. Barrett what no man, possibly, can give. We are accepting his own position—that of trying to produce a popular and an edifying play. He has given us instead an address with musical additions and a picturesque background, but without action, sympathy, or interest. We are rather tired of quoting the French maxim—

Tous les gens sont bons hors le genre ennuyeux.

To "le genre ennuyeux" 'The Daughters of Babylon' belongs. Mr. Wilson can be, and is frequently, but not always, picturesque; he has a fine voice and good delivery. These gifts he displayed. Miss Maud Jeffries played agreeably a species of Rosalind part, and Miss Lily Hanbury looked superb as a courtesan ashamed of her occupation.

Dramatic Gossip.

The revival of 'Sweet Nancy' at the Court Theatre proves satisfactory in all respects. Miss Annie Hughes's performance of the heroine is one of the pleasantest exhibitions of comedy the modern stage affords. Mr. Martin Harvey is excellent as Algernon, and Mr. Maurice as Sir Roger Tempest adds weight to the cast. Miss Beatrice Ferrar and the other interpreters of the children are all lifelike. The only thing to be resisted is a tendency to overdo the horseplay. This is not at present objectionable, but a very little more would make it so.

'A Bit of Old Chelsea,' by Mrs. Oscar Beringer, presents pleasantly enough a curiously feminine reading of supposed masculine temptations. A young sculptor, on the eve of getting married, shelters in pure benevolence a female waif, who has fainted in the street from cold and destitution. She is a comely, vulgar, good-hearted flower-girl, and her behaviour under trying circumstances is generous and womanly. We hesitate, however, from a masculine standpoint, to put much faith in the temptations the hero is supposed to resist. A man has no right to hug himself on his virtue for sparing the woman he has sheltered and fed, especially when her dress and surroundings cannot possibly be appetizing or provocative. The piece, which precedes 'Sweet Nancy,' is pretty in a way, and is capitally played by Mr. Maurice and Miss Annie Hughes.

This evening at the Garrick Theatre witnesses the production of 'My Friend the Prince,' Mr. Justin Huntly McCarthy's alteration of 'My Friend from India.'

The same evening will be marked by the reappearance at the Criterion of Mr. Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.

The title of the new piece of Messrs. Jerome K. Jerome and Eden Phillpotts, to be played at the Globe on the 25th inst., is 'The McHaggis.'

The first performance of 'Mariana,' by José Echegaray, will take place at the Court on the afternoon of the 22nd inst., Miss Elizabeth Robins playing the heroine, and Messrs. Hermann Vezin, H. B. Irving, James Welch, Martin Harvey, and G. Bancroft being included in the cast.

IBSEN'S latest play, 'John Gabriel Borkman,' is to be given by Miss Robins immediately after Easter.

MR. HARE'S success on the second visit to America seems to have been more conspicuous than on the first. The announcement is accordingly made that a third trip will begin next autumn under the management of Mr. Charles Frohman. Eccles in 'Caste' is the character in which Mr. Hare has made his most conspicuous triumph. We in this country can point to other characters in which we think even higher triumphs have been achieved.

DR. EDUARD JACOBSON, one of the most popular of German humorous playwrights, died at Berlin on January 29th. He was born in 1833 at Gross-Strelitz in Upper Silesia, and studied medicine at Berlin, but after taking his degree devoted himself to writing for the stage. His farce of '500,000 Teufel' had a run of three hundred successive performances in Berlin alone.

MISCELLANEA

Southey's Three Bears.—If your correspondent Dr. R. du Bois-Reymond will look at 'More English Fairy Tales,' edited by Mr. Joseph Jacobs (London, 1894), he will find in 'Scrapefoot' (text, pp. 85–90; notes, pp. 228–29) what I am convinced is the only surviving example of the story in its original form. The problems connected with this version are so numerous and so far-reaching in character as to make it the most interesting folk-tale that has been collected in England during the past half-century, which is doubtless the reason why it has been almost entirely overlooked by folk-lorists.

Will you allow me to demur to your reviewer's censure (in your last issue) of Mrs. Clark for "fine writing" in her retelling of Maori legends? If he will look at White or Tregear he will find that the Maori rhapsodists were masters of an extremely florid and imaginative style. Mrs. Clark has rather simplified than accentuated the rhetorical, poetic character of her originals. ALFRED NUTT.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—V. W.—A. H. G.—W. E. & C. H.—C. V. C.—F. H. P. C.—S. P.—received.

G. F.—We cannot undertake to answer such questions.

THE MILITARY and NAVAL MEDAL MAGAZINE and BRIC-À-BRAC JOURNAL. Vol. II.

Contents of JANUARY Number, 1897.

The LOYAL LONDON VOLUNTEERS, 1798–1814.
BRITISH SOUTH AFRICA CO.'S MEDAL for OPERATIONS in MATABELELAND, 1893
The PENINSULAR WAR MEDAL.
SALE of LORD DAVID KENNEDY'S COLLECTION, with PRICES REALIZED.
LIST of OFFICERS who RECEIVED GOLD MEDALS.
MINIATURE PAINTING: its Early History and Development.
LEGENDS of ENGLISH SILVER COINS.
AUTOGRAPH COLLECTING.

Published Monthly. Subscription, 10*s.* per annum, post free.
66, Colfe-road, Forest-hill, S.E.

IMPORTANT WORK RELATING TO GLAMORGANSHIRE.

HISTORY of MARGAM ABBEY.
From the Original Documents in the British Museum, H.M. Record Office, the Margam Muniments, &c.
With numerous Illustrations and Reproductions.
By W. DE GRAY BIRCH, LL.D. F.S.A., of the British Museum.
Nearly ready, in 1 vol. large 8vo.
Price to Subscribers before issue, One Guinea.

PUBLICATIONS NOUVELLES de la LIBRAIRIE HACHETTE et CIE.
Paris: 79, Boulevard Saint-Germain.

LE ROI DAVID. Par M. MARCEL DIEULAFOY, membre de l'Institut. 1 vol. in-16, broché, 3fr. 50.

L'ANNÉE CARTOGRAPHIQUE de F. SCHRADER. Contenant les modifications géographiques et politiques de l'année 1895. Trois feuilles de cartes, avec texte explicatif au dos. Prix 3 fr.

NOUVEAU DICTIONNAIRE de GÉOGRAPHIE UNIVERSELLE. Par MM. VIVIEN de SAINT-MARTIN et ROUSSELET (Louis).
Mise en vente des 5e et 6e fascicules du SUPPLÉMENT (Berlin-Caroline). Chaque fascicule in 4, broché, 2fr. 50.

DICTIONNAIRE de CHIMIE PURE et APPLIQUÉE. Par M. AD. WURTZ. DEUXIÈME SUPPLÉMENT publié sous la direction de M. CH. FRIEDEL, membre de l'Institut (Académie des sciences). 2e fascicule (Ethylidène-Explosifs). Chaque fascicule in-8, broché, 2fr.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

FIRST EDITION EXHAUSTED. SECOND EDITION ON MONDAY, the 15th inst.

BOOKS OF THE YEAR 1896.
Royal 8vo. over 220 pp. cloth limp, 5*s.* net; or half-roan limp, 6*s.* 6*d.* net.

THE ANNUAL VOLUME OF THE ENGLISH CATALOGUE FOR 1896
differs from its predecessors in this respect, that it gives the FULL TITLE
with Duplicate, and in many cases Triplicate, Classification under one General Alphabet, of every Book, instead of, as hitherto, Abbreviated Titles, consequently
The Bulk of the Catalogue is increased by over 80 Pages,
while the price (5*s.* net) remains the same.
It now contains over 7,000 Titles of New Books and New Editions, and over 6,000 duplicate Titles, forming the Index in one continuous alphabet.

 SPECIAL NOTE.—This is the ONLY CATALOGUE which in a Continuous Series for Sixty Years has recorded the Titles, Size, Price, and Date of Books published during that period. The Volumes in the aggregate embrace over 300,000 Titles, with corresponding Indices. Authors and Publishers of Works of a local character, or such as are not likely to find their way into the usual Trade Channels, will oblige by sending the Title, with Size, Pages, and Price thereof, direct to the Publishers, for entry in the 'PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR' and the 'ANNUAL CATALOGUE.'

NOW READY, price 3*d.*; or 3*s.* per annum, post free.
A SECOND EDITION OF
The JANUARY MONTHLY PART of
THE ENGLISH CATALOGUE OF BOOKS FOR 1897.
Giving FULL TITLES, classified under Author and Subject in one strict Alphabet, with particulars of the Size, Price, and Name of Publisher, of the Books issued in Great Britain and Ireland during the Month of January.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.
DOD'S PEERAGE, BARONETAGE, and KNIGHTAGE of the UNITED KINGDOM for 1897. Fifty-seventh Year. The Cheapest and Handiest Book of Reference. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt edges, 10*s.* 6*d.*

The RUINED CITIES of CEYLON: being a Description of Anuradhapura and Polonaruwa. By HENRY W. CAVE, M.A., Queen's College, Oxford. Illustrated with 50 Full-Page Woodburygravures, from Photographs taken by the Author. 1 vol. small 4to. Roxburghe, gilt top, 38*s.* net.

SHORT STUDIES in PHYSICAL SCIENCE: Mineralogy, Chemistry, and Physics. By VAUGHAN CORNISH, M.Sc., Author of 'Practical Proofs of Chemical Laws.' With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5*s.*

HEALTH and CONDITION in the ACTIVE and the SEDENTARY. By N. E. YORKE-DAVIES, Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians of London, M.R.C.S., Author of 'Foods for the Fat.' Fourth Edition (Sixth Thousand). 3*s.* 6*d.*

NOW READY, PRICE ONE SHILLING.
SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE
For FEBRUARY.
Contents.
ROWENA and REBECCA. Frontispiece. Drawn by E. A. Abbey. Scenes from the Great Novels. II.
A GREAT HOTEL: the Conduct of Great Businesses. Second Paper. By Jesse Lynch Williams. Illustrated.
SOLDIERS of FORTUNE. Chaps. 3, 4. By Richard Harding Davis. Illustrated.
The QUEST. By H. C. Bunner.
LONDON as SEEN by C. D. GIBSON. I. London Streets. Written and illustrated by Mr. Gibson.
PIAL AZON. By C. Grant La Farge.
GIUSEPPE SEGANTINI. Illustrated by Seven Reproductions from the Artist's Paintings. By Alfredo Melani.
The CITY MAGISTRATES' COURTS. With Sketches. By Robert C. Cornell, Magistrate, New York City.
The LAST PLANTAGENET. By Henry Cabot Lodge. &c. &c. &c.
London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD. St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

THE DONGOLA EXPEDITION.
LETTERS FROM THE SUDAN.
By the Special Correspondent of the Times,
E. F. KNIGHT.
Reprinted from the Times of April to October, 1896.
With Illustrations and Plans.
Demy 8vo. 8*s.* 6*d.* net.

THIRD THOUSAND.
MISS KINGSLEY'S TRAVELS.
DAILY CHRONICLE.—"The book of travel of the season for nearly everybody."
TRAVELS IN WEST AFRICA
(Congo Français, Corisco, and Cameroons).
By Miss MARY H. KINGSLEY.
With 16 Full-Page and numerous Text Illustrations.
Demy 8vo. 21*s.* net.
ACADEMY.—"A very interesting and singularly instructive book."
ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—"The brightest and sprightliest narrative of travel that has appeared for many a day."

BY EDWIN A. ABBOTT.
8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.* net.
The SPIRIT on the WATERS.
The Evolution of the Divine from the Human. By EDWIN A. ABBOTT, Author of 'Philochristus,' &c.

BY THE LATE R. W. CHURCH.
OCCASIONAL PAPERS, selected from the Guardian, the Times, and the Saturday Review, 1846–1890. By the late R. W. CHURCH, M.A. D.C.L., sometime Rector of Whatley, Dean of St. Paul's, Honorary Fellow of Oriel College. 2 vols. Globe 8vo. 10*s.*
[Eversley Series.

NEW ILLUSTRATED EDITIONS OF CHARLES KINGSLEY'S
WESTWARD HO!
The PEOPLE'S EDITION. With 8 Illustrations by Charles E. Brock. Medium 8vo. cloth, 1*s.*
The "PEACOCK" EDITION. With 50 Illustrations by Charles E. Brock. Crown 8vo. cloth elegant, 5*s.*
The "ILLUSTRATED STANDARD NOVELS" EDITION. With 50 Illustrations by Charles E. Brock. Cloth, uncut edges, 3*s.* 6*d.*

BY GOLDWIN SMITH.
Crown 8vo. 6*s.*
GUESSES at the RIDDLE of EXISTENCE, and other Essays on Kindred Subjects. By GOLDWIN SMITH, D.C.L., Author of 'Canada and the Canadian Question,' &c.

8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.* net.
ELEMENTS of THEORETICAL PHYSICS. By Dr. C. CHRISTIANSEN, Professor of Physics in the University of Copenhagen. Translated by Prof. W. F. MAGIE, Ph.D.

Globe 8vo. 5*s.* net.
A KEY to DR. GOW'S METHOD of ENGLISH for SECONDARY SCHOOLS. By T. B. HARDY, B.A., Assistant Master in the High School, Nottingham.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO.

BOSWELL'S LIFE of JOHNSON. Edited by AUGUSTINE BIRRELL. With Frontispieces by Alex. Ansted, a Reproduction of Sir Joshua Reynolds's Portrait. 6 vols. fcap. 8vo. cloth, paper label, or gilt extra, 2*s.* net per vol. Also half-morocco, 3*s.* net per vol. Sold in sets only.

"Far and away the best Boswell, I should say, for the ordinary book-lover now on the market."—Illustrated London News.

"We have good reason to be thankful for an edition of a very useful and attractive kind."—Spectator.

CONSTABLE'S REPRINT of the WAVERLEY NOVELS. The favourite edition of SIR WALTER SCOTT. With all the original Plates and Vignettes (Re-engraved). In 48 vols. fcap. 8vo. cloth, paper label title, 1*s.* 6*d.* net per vol., or 3*l.* 12*s.* net the set. Also cloth gilt, gilt top, 2*s.* net per vol., or 4*l.* 16*s.* net the set; and half-leather gilt, 2*s.* 6*d.* net per vol., or 6*l.* net the set.

"A delightful reprint. The price is lower than that of many inferior editions."—Athenæum.

"This is one of the many charming editions of the Waverley Novels that we know, as well as one of the cheapest in the market."—Glasgow Herald.

PROBLEMS of MODERN DEMOCRACY. By EDWIN LAURENCE GODKIN. Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

"The writer, as editor of the New York Nation, has a large circle of European readers, who will enjoy this incisive, vigorous, and scholarly contribution from his pen. The book ranks with Mr. Lecky's recent volumes."
National Review.

REFLECTIONS and COMMENTS. By Edwin LAURENCE GODKIN. Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

"Mr. Godkin's book forms an excellent example of the best periodical literature of his country and time."—Daily News.

The PASTON LETTERS, 1422–1509. A New Edition, containing upwards of 400 Letters, &c., hitherto unpublished. Edited by JAMES GAIRDNER, of the Public Record Office. 3 vols. fcap. 8vo. cloth extra, 15*s.* net.

"Unquestionably the standard edition of these curious literary relics of an age so long ago that the writers speak of the battles between the contending forces of York and Lancaster as occurrences of the moment."—Daily News.

Messrs. ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO. have pleasure in announcing a very important book on the recent

JAMESON RAID,

By Mr. F. E. GARRETT,

The Editor of the Cape Times, the leading paper in S. Africa.

In order that his story of the Jameson Raid and Johannesburg Revolt should be thoroughly accurate, Mr. Garrett has secured the co-operation of all the chief actors in the drama, and has thus produced a highly valuable and authentic history of the stirring episodes which took place in the Transvaal at the beginning of the year 1896; but what will be looked for with the keenest curiosity is a special Chapter, for which Mr. Garrett has come to England to complete the materials, dealing with the points on which the world had been led to expect startling disclosures in the near future.

Illustrated with numerous Portraits of Personages concerned, Plans, &c., 3s. 6d.

MADGE o' the POOL. By William Sharp. Fcap. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

"It would be hard to point to anything more brilliant or more satisfactory amongst the writers of Mr. Sharp's generation."—Glasgow Herald.

An ESSAY on COMEDY. By George Meredith. 5*s.* net.

WHITMAN: a Study. By John Burroughs. 12mo. cloth gilt, 6*s.* net.

A BOOK FOR DANTE STUDENTS.

The CHRONICLE of VILLANI. Translated by ROSE E. SELFE. Edited by Rev. P. H. WICKSTEED. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"The book, picturesque and instructive reading as it is, is not less interesting and still more valuable for readers of Italy's greatest poet."
"Sure to have a warm welcome."—Globe. Scotsman.
"A thoughtful introduction gives a general outline of the Florentine problems of the period."—Western Morning News.

SPENSER'S FAERIE QUEENE. Book I. Edited by KATE M. WARREN. Fcap. 8vo. 1*s.* 6*d.* net.

ENGLISH SCHOOLS, 1546–1548. By A. F. LEACH, M.A. F.S.A., late Fellow of All Souls', Oxford, Assistant Charity Commissioner. Demy 8vo. 12*s.* net.

"A very remarkable contribution to the history of secondary education in England, not less novel in its conclusions than important in the documentary evidence adduced to sustain them."—Times.

The PREACHING of ISLAM. By T. W. Arnold, B.A. With Two Maps. Demy 8vo. 12*s.*

"One of the most elaborate and careful accounts of the spread of Mahomedanism that we remember to have seen in any language. As Prof. Arnold rightly says, his subject is a vast one. The writer has condensed into less than 400 pages a mass of material that might have alarmed a German professor, let alone an English one."—Times.

NEW EDITION. Profusely illustrated, 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

The WESTERN AVERNUS. Toil and Travel in Further North America. By MORLEY ROBERTS. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, with Illustrations by A. D. M'Cormick, and from Photographs, 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

"Interesting to all.....Capitally illustrated."—St. James's Budget.
"Will hold the reader thrallbound."—Publishers' Circular.

The NATION'S AWAKENING. By Spenser WILKINSON. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

"A large part of the present book has already appeared in the columns of one of your contemporaries, but some of the most interesting chapters..... appear for the first time in this volume. He deals reasonably and sensibly with our relations with the United States. Mr. Wilkinson.....leads up to a proposed system of alliances, in which, taken as a whole.....I accept all the steps by which he arrives at it."—Sir Charles Dilke in the Daily Chronicle, July 1, 1896.

"It will be seen that Mr. Wilkinson's programme is not lacking in ambition.....His pages contain many pregnant suggestions, and much food for reflection."—Times.

The KNOWLEDGE of LIFE. By H. J. Harald. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"Mr. Harald has set himself up as a breaker of the many of the social images which most of us worship as blindly and devoutly as the Hindoos worship their gods, and no one who reads his arguments without prejudice can deny that he has common sense and justice on his side."—Daily Mail.

2, WHITEHALL-GARDENS, S.W.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

WASTED RECORDS of DISEASE. By CHARLES E. PAGET, Lecturer on Public Health in the Owens College, Medical Officer of Health for the County Borough of Salford. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

The BEGGARS of PARIS (PARIS QUI MENDIE). Translated from the French of M. LOUIS PAULIAN by LADY HERSCHELL. Paper boards, 1s.

Times.—"Not only contains a great many amusing and instructive anecdotes, but formulates a definite scheme for the entire suppression of begging as a trade. Lady Herschell's excellent translation should be read by all who are interested in the vexed question of charity-giving, and even to those who read but for amusement it will prove vastly entertaining."

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

STUDIES in EARLY VICTORIAN LITERATURE. By FREDERIC HARRISON, M.A., Author of 'The Choice of Books,' &c. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

NEW AND BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED EDITION.

The PLANT-LORE and GARDEN CRAFT of SHAKESPEARE. By the Rev. Canon ELLACOMBE, Author of 'In a Gloucestershire Garden.' With 80 Illustrations. Handsomely bound, 10s. 6d.

BY MR. J. CHURTON COLLINS.

A TREASURY of MINOR BRITISH POETRY. Selected and Arranged, with Notes, by J. CHURTON COLLINS, M.A. Handsomely bound, crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Saturday Review.—"A most interesting compilation."
Yorkshire Post.—"A volume far more interesting than any poetic anthology which makes its selections from the great and well-known poets."

HABIT and INSTINCT: a Study in Heredity. By Prof. C. LLOYD MORGAN, Author of 'Animal Life and Intelligence.' Based on the Author's 'Lowell Lectures' in 1895–96. Demy 8vo. 16s.

Times.—"A valuable book on a fascinating subject."

POPULAR EDITION.

ENGLAND in EGYPT. By Sir Alfred MILNER, K.C.B. Popular Edition. Large crown 8vo. with Map, cloth, 7s. 6d.

The EARLY CHARTERED COMPANIES. Being a Record of Six Hundred Years of Trade and Colonization. By GEORGE CAWSTON, Barrister-at-Law, a Director of the British South Africa Company, and A. H. KEANE, F.R.G.S. With Engraved Frontispiece. Cloth, 8vo. 10s. 6d.

EIGHTH THOUSAND.

FIRE and SWORD in the SUDAN. By SLATIN PASHA, C.B. Translated by Lieut.-Col. WINGATE, R.A. D.S.O., Chief of the Intelligence Department, Egyptian Army. Fifth Edition. 21s. net.

Spectator.—"Slatin Pasha's book is absolutely unique."

NEW BOOKS of SPORT and TRAVEL.

IN and BEYOND the HIMALAYAS: a Record of Sport and Travel. By S. J. STONE, late Deputy Inspector-General of the Punjab Police. With 16 Full-Page Illustrations by Charles Whymper. Demy 8vo. 16s.

Daily Chronicle.—"Of all the works on Indian sport which come in one year with another this is the handsomest, and one of the most thoroughly interesting."

FIFTY YEARS' REMINISCENCES of INDIA. By Lieut.-Col. POLLOK, Author of 'Sport in Burmah.' Illustrated by A. C. Corbould. Demy 8vo. 16s.

Daily Telegraph.—"An exciting and delightful book of sport. Certainly it is among the best books of the kind ever published, both in material and treatment."

THROUGH the SUB-ARCTIC FOREST. A Record of 4,000 Miles' Exploration in British Columbia and Alaska. By WARBURTON PIKE, Author of 'Barren Grounds of Canada.' With numerous Illustrations and Maps. Demy 8vo. 16s.

THE SPORTSMAN'S LIBRARY.

Edited by Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P.

VOL. II. NOW READY.

THORNTON'S SPORTING TOUR in the NORTH. By Col. T. THORNTON, of Thornville Royal. With the Original Illustrations by Garrard, Coloured Plates by G. Lodge, and other Illustrations. Large 8vo. handsomely bound, 15s. Also a limited Large-Paper Edition, 2l. 2s. net.

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street, New York: 70, Fifth-avenue.

JARROLD & SONS' LIST.

FOUR POPULAR NOVELS.

BY MAURUS JOKAI.

The GREEN BOOK; or, Freedom under the Snow. By Dr. MAURUS JOKAI. Translated by Mrs. WAUGH (ELLIS WRIGHT). With Engraved Portrait of Dr. Jókai (Authorized Edition). Cr. 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

[First Two Editions exhausted on publication.

"'The Green Book' is an historical romance of the early part of the century, and depicts in a graphic and sometimes lurid manner the political life of Russia during the conspiracies of 1824 and 1825. Pushkin, the well-known Russian poet, is the hero of the book, and the majority of male characters, at least, are personages who figured in the stirring events of the time. At a moment when Russia and things Russian figure so largely in the public press, and exercise so powerful a sway over the national imagination, the publication of this brilliant picture of Russian Society will be specially opportune."

BY SARAH TYTLER.

LADY JEAN'S SON. By Sarah TYTLER, Author of 'Lady Jean's Vagaries,' 'The Bride's Pass,' 'Lady Bell,' 'Buried Diamonds,' &c. Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

"The glimpses of Edinburgh Society, while the Northern Athens was still the seat of fashion, are lifelike and clever. 'Lady Jean's Son' is from first to last a delightful story."
Pall Mall Gazette.

BY MAURUS JOKAI.

BLACK DIAMONDS. By Maurus JOKAI. THIRD EDITION. Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

"It is so well written, so abounding in all sorts of special knowledge, and displays so much real literary power, that we never feel tempted to leave any of its pages unread. There are some extremely fine descriptive passages in the book.....Maurus Jókai is absolutely original in thought and treatment."—Daily Chronicle.

BY MRS. LEITH ADAMS.

COLOUR SERGEANT No. 1 COMPANY. By Mrs. LEITH ADAMS, Author of 'Bonnie Kate,' 'Louis Draycott,' 'Geoffrey Stirling,' &c.

"In this story Mrs. Leith Adams deals with materials which she has treated with distinguished success. The scenes of barrack life in Ireland during the Fenian scare are good, and it would be difficult to conceive anything of the kind that is better."—Saturday Review.

London: JARROLD & SONS, 10 and 11, Warwick-lane, E.C. Of all Booksellers and at the Libraries.

ROBERT BUCHANAN'S NOTE FOR BOOKBUYERS.

FEBRUARY, 1897.

I have already, in my January address to Bookbuyers, given particulars of my new and forthcoming publications. The only work among them not written by myself is the new story by "CHARLES MARLOWE," entitled which was issued a few days ago in long octavo, price 3s. 6d. The well-known farcical comedy, produced in 1895 and still running, was founded on this tale, which is an unpretentious and amusing bit of tomfoolery, full of funny incidents and amusing situations.

THE STRANGE ADVENTURES OF MISS BROWN,

The first CHEAP EDITIONS of

ST. ABE AND HIS SEVEN WIVES (price 2s. 6d. net) and

THE OUTCAST (price 4s. 6d. net)

will be on the market next week. ST. ABE will contain a bibliographical note and Houghton's fine Frontispiece, and THE OUTCAST will contain most of the original illustrations. Orders can now be received for these works, and also for my shortly forthcoming new Poem,

THE BALLAD OF MARY THE MOTHER: A Christmas Carol,

which will be issued, with Frontispiece, at 4s. 6d. net.

A Full List of my Publications can be had on application.

In answer to many inquiries, I wish to inform Book-buyers that the

COMPLETE POETICAL WORKS AND THE SELECTED POEMS,

at present entirely out of print, will be reprinted as speedily as possible.

I have nothing more to add this week, except a word of thanks to the Wholesale and Retail Booksellers, from whom I have received the utmost help and sympathy. If the public really wants a book, the good Booksellers are only too eager to supply it, even if it be manufactured by the Devil, or by his poet laureate.

ROBERT BUCHANAN.

London: 36, Gerrard-street, Shaftesbury-avenue, W.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER.

FAMOUS SCOTS.—New Volumes.

THE TRUTH ABOUT BOSWELL.

This Day, 1s. 6d. cloth; 2s. 6d. cloth extra, gilt top.

JAMES BOSWELL. By W. Keith LEASK.

The Scotsman says:—"Within its compass there could not well be a more complete and carefully wrought picture of Boswell."

The Morning Leader says:—"The defence of Boswell in his delightful study is one of the finest and most convincing passages that have recently appeared in the field of British biography."

In the same Series, 1s. 6d. and 2s. 6d.

SIR JAMES Y. SIMPSON. By his Daughter, EVE BLANTYRE-SIMPSON.

The Daily Chronicle says:—"It is indeed long since we have read such a charmingly written biography. There is not a dull, irrelevant, or superfluous page."

THOMAS CHALMERS. By Prof. W. GARDEN BLAIKIE, D.D.

The Bookseller says:—"Dr Blaikie gives us a very complete view of Chalmers's wonderful career."

TWO NEW NOVELS.

FOR STARK LOVE and KINDNESS. A Story of Flodden. By N. ALLAN MACDONALD. 6s.

The British Weekly says:—"A romantic tale of Flodden, boldly conceived, with plenty of love, villainy, and adventure."

MRS. L. T. MEADE'S NEW STORY.

A GIRL in TEN THOUSAND. By L. T. MEADE. Cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

THE FAR EAST.

The Times says of 'A Cycle of Cathay':—"It is, perhaps, the most valuable contribution that has been made to our knowledge of China in recent years."

A CYCLE of CATHAY: China, South and North. With Personal Reminiscences. By the Rev. W. A. P. MARTIN, D.D. LL.D., Ex-President Emeritus of the Imperial Tungwen College, Pekin. With Map and numerous Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

FROM FAR FORMOSA: its Island, its People, and Missions. By GEORGE LESLIE MACKAY, D.D., twenty-three years a Missionary in Formosa. Edited by Rev. J. A. MACDONALD. Third Edition. With Portraits, Illustrations, and Maps, 7s. 6d.

PERSIAN LIFE and CUSTOMS. With Scenes and Incidents of Residence and Travel in the Land of the Lion and the Sun. By S. G. WILSON, M.A., fifteen years a Missionary in Persia. Second Edition. Demy 8vo. gilt top, with Map and Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER, 21, Paternoster-square, E.C.; and Edinburgh.

ON WEDNESDAY NEXT WILL BE PUBLISHED.

THE NEWSPAPER PRESS DIRECTORY for 1897 (FIFTY-SECOND ANNUAL ISSUE.)

Price 2s.; or post free, 30 stamps.

Messrs C. Mitchell & Co. 12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Just published, profusely illustrated, post 8vo price 6s

THE LIFE of FRIDTJOF NANSEN, SCIENTIST and EXPLORER. By J. ARTHUR RAIN, Bookseller, Sheffield, Author of 'The Nansens' (Idler, March, 1896), 'Fru Nansen' (Strand Magazine, November, 1896), and 'A Talk with Dr. Nansen' (Strand Magazine, Christmas, 1896)

London: Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Limited. Sheffield: J. Arthur Rain.

Just published, 3 vols 8vo price 2l. 2s

THE WILDERNESS and its TENANTS: a Series of Geographical and other Essays illustrative of Life in a Wild Country. By JOHN MADDEN.

London Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Limited.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.
Made in Three Sizes.
10s. 6d., 16s. 6d., and 25s. each.
Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen
A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce
We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.
Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W.; and 21, High-street, Kensington, W., London.
And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS.
ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.
ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.
ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.
West Strand, London. Discount 10 per cent.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Mr. T. FISHER UNWIN has pleasure in announcing that he will publish on WEDNESDAY NEXT, the 17th inst., a NEW NOVEL by OLIVE SCHREINER, the Author of 'Dreams,' 'The Story of an African Farm,' &c., entitled TROOPER PETER HALKET of MASHONALAND, with a Photogravure Frontispiece, and bound in green cloth, price 6s.

London: T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

READY IMMEDIATELY, 404 pp. demy 8vo. buckram, top edge gilt, price 27*s.*

TRADE PROSPECTUS on application.

THE SALE PRICES OF 1896.

An Annual Report of Sales held by Auction of Pictures, Drawings, Manuscripts, Autographs, Book-Plates, Arms and Armour, Prints, Pottery, Plate, and general objects of Artistic and Antiquarian interest, with the Prices realized, the Purchaser's Names, and a Preface.

Edited by J. H. SLATER, Editor of 'Book-Prices Current.'

 The Sales reported in this Volume number about one hundred, and consist of all the more important disposals that have taken place during the year 1896, including the Boyne, Bunbury, and Montagu Collections of Greek and other Coins—Relics of Lord Nelson and Shakespeare—the Collection of Prints formed by Mr. J. Chaloner Smith, Sir Charles Oakeley, Dr. Medwin, and others—all the important Sales of Pictures that have been held during the year; and a large variety of Naval and Military Medals—Autograph Letters, including the unpublished Pope and Swift Correspondence—the Original Paston Letters—Tapestries—Lace and Fans—Bronzes—Antique Furniture—Playing and Tarot Cards—China—Drawings—Arms and Armour—Violins—and many other descriptions of Property.

The INDEX is very full and complete, and has been compiled with the greatest care.

Vol. II., 'The SALE PRICES of 1897,' is now in course of preparation, and will be issued to Subscribers in Four Quarterly Parts at 21*s.* net for the year.

HENRY GRANT, 47, Essex-street, Strand, London.

Published at 7*l.* 7*s.*, and as the stock got low the price was raised to 10*l.* 10*s.*

Now offered for 3*l.* 3*s.* cash.

THE ROYAL HOUSE OF STUART.

SKELTON'S SUPERBLY ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF THE ROYAL HOUSE OF STUART.

A Series of 40 Plates in Colours by W. GIBB.

With Descriptive Notes and Introduction by JOHN SKELTON and ST. JOHN HOPE.

Folio, 40 fine Colour-Prints of the Stuart Regalia in Scotland and England, half-bound morocco, gilt edges.

(Macmillan, 1890.)

This was the forerunner of Skelton's 'Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots.' A special Prospectus will be sent on demand.

An extra set of the 40 Colour-Prints may be had separately, for framing or illustrating, for 1*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*

BERNARD QUARITCH, 15, Piccadilly, London.

NEW NOVEL BY E. F. BENSON,

AUTHOR OF 'DODO,' &c.

The BABE, B.A. Being the Uneventful History of a Young Gentleman at Cambridge University. Illustrated. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6*s.*

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"Mr. Benson's delightful book is rife with clever definitions as well as graphic character sketches."

SCOTSMAN.—"A bright and humorous picture of university life."

The BABE, B.A.

DAILY MAIL.—"Mr Benson's wit and easy delineation of character fully atone for lack of plot. The lightsome chronicle goes gaily on, sufficiently rich in incident and unfailingly rich in bright ideas, and in happy turns of expression, which provoke the reader to smiles."

DAILY NEWS.—"Mr. Benson's novel is a photograph of every-day life at Cambridge. His undergraduates play football and cricket, act in the Greek Play, converse on intimate terms with Dons, and occasionally manage to get through a little reading."

The MAKER of MOONS. By Robert W.

CHAMBERS, Author of 'The Red Republic,' 'King and a few Dukes,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, illustrated, 6*s.*

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"We cannot for the moment call to mind any latter-day collection of short tales in which vivacious fancy and subtle wit are so happily combined with constructive dexterity and descriptive force.....Everybody should read these delightful stories."

BOOKS and their MAKERS during the MIDDLE

AGES. By G. H. PUTNAM, M.A., Author of 'The Question of Copyright,' 'Authors and their Public,' &c. 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth, gilt tops, 10*s.* 6*d.* each.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS, 24, Bedford-street, London, W.C.; and New York.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

THE RED SCAUR:

A Story of Rustic Life in Northumberland.

By P. ANDERSON GRAHAM.

"Mr. Graham has achieved a distinct success. The book makes delightful reading; for besides being admirably written, it is so racy of the soil, so near to nature, that one feels in the open air all the time."—National Observer.

"We do not remember to have encountered anywhere of late a better antidote to the lurid pessimism of the novel of rural life so much in vogue at present than this fine and invigorating tale of 'the loves, the ways of simple swains.'"—Spectator.

"The manners are admirably depicted, the book has a style, and Billy White is a great character."—Academy.

LETTERS FROM CONSTANTINOPLE.

By Mrs. MAX MÜLLER. With 12 Views of Constantinople and the Neighbourhood. Crown 8vo. 6*s.* [On Monday next.

INDUSTRIES and WEALTH of NATIONS.

By MICHAEL G. MULHALL, F.S.S., Member of the Committee of the British Association, Author of 'The Dictionary of Statistics' and 'The History of Prices.' With 32 Full-Page Diagrams. Crown 8vo. 8*s.* 6*d.*

"Mr. Mulhall's volume will prove of great value to the student of political economy and of the comparative history of the industries of the world."—Dundee Advertiser.

NEW BOOK BY THE DEAN OF LICHFIELD.

FOOTPRINTS of the APOSTLES

as TRACED by ST. LUKE in the ACTS: being Sixty Portions for Private Study, Family Reading, and Instruction in Church. By HERBERT MORTIMER LUCKOCK, D.D., Dean of Lichfield. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12*s.* [On Monday next.

JOY: a Fragment. By the late Mrs.

SIDNEY LEAR, Author of 'For Days and Years,' 'Weariness,' &c. Prefaced by a slight Sketch of the Author's Life. Fcap. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.* [On Monday next.

LATIN EXERCISES for LOWER SCHOOL FORMS.

By W. M. HARDMAN, M.A., formerly Scholar of St. John's College, Cambridge; and the Rev. ARTHUR S. WALPOLE, M.A., formerly Scholar of Worcester College, Oxford. Crown 8vo. 2*s.*

FOR the WHITE ROSE of ARNO:

a Story of the Jacobite Rising of 1745. By OWEN RHOSCOMYL, Author of 'Battlement and Tower,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"The White Rose of Arno is Prince Charlie himself, and the story sheds considerable light upon many of the dramatic scenes and incidents of the Jacobite movement."

Daily Mail.

THE SILVER LIBRARY.

NEW VOLUME.

The PEOPLE of the MIST. By H.

RIDER HAGGARD. New Edition. With 16 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
London, New York, and Bombay.

EPPS'S COCOA.
THE MOST NUTRITIOUS.
EPPS'S COCOA.
GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.

WM. & GEO. LAW.

COFFEE—

SUGAR—

TEA.

104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEADACHE, HEARTBURN, GOUT, and INDIGESTION.

And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

POPULAR NOVELS.

Each Work complete in One Volume, crown 8vo. 6s.

RODNEY STONE. With 8 Full-Page Illustrations By A. CONAN DOYLE.

The WHITE COMPANY. By A. CONAN DOYLE. Seventeenth Edition.

CLEG KELLY, Arab of the City. By S. R. CROCKETT. Thirty-second Thousand.

The SOWERS. By Henry Seton MERRIMAN. Thirteenth Edition.

SIR GEORGE TRESSADY. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD. Second Edition.

MARCELLA. By Mrs. Humphry WARD. Fifteenth Edition.

ROBERT ELSMERE. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD. Twenty-seventh Edition.

The HISTORY of DAVID GRIEVE. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD. Ninth Edition.

The BORDERER. By Adam LILBURN.

GERALD EVERSLEY'S FRIENDSHIP: a Study in Real Life. By the Rev. J. E. C. WELLDON, Head Master of Harrow School. Fourth Edition.

The WARDLAWS. By E. Rentoul ESLER.

KATE GRENVILLE. By Lord MONKSWELL.

DISTURBING ELEMENTS. By MABEL C. BIRCHENOUGH.

IN SEARCH of QUIET: a Country Journal. By WALTER FRITH.

The MARTYRED FOOL. By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY.

NEW WORK BY THE HON. A. S. G. CANNING.

JUST PUBLISHED, crown 8vo. 6s.

HISTORY in FACT and FICTION. By the Hon. A. S. G. CANNING, Author of 'Lord Macaulay: Essayist and Historian,' 'The Philosophy of Charles Dickens,' &c.

"An intensely interesting book.....I do not think that I ever saw the difficulties of the Eastern question in so clear a light as I did after reading the short chapter which Mr. Canning devotes to it."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"The work will be read with interest and profit."—Scotsman.

"The work is interesting from beginning to end, and it will add to Mr. Canning's fame as an able, thoughtful, and impartial writer."—Belfast News-Letter.

THREE NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

UNDER the CIRCUMSTANCES. By Archie ARMSTRONG. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Distinguished by quite unusual vivacity and freshness."—Glasgow Herald.

GILBERT MURRAY. By A. E. Houghton. Crown 8vo. 6s.

OUT of the DARKNESS. By Percy Fendall and FOX RUSSELL. Crown 8vo. 6s. [In a few days.

THROUGH LONDON SPECTACLES. By CONSTANCE MILMAN. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The AGE of the DESPOTS. By the late John ADDINGTON SYMONDS. Large crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. [Shortly.

 This is Volume I. of a NEW and CHEAPER EDITION of "The RENAISSANCE in ITALY," in 7 vols. large crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. each. The remaining Volumes will be published at intervals.

FROM GRAVE to GAY: being Essays and Studies concerned with Certain Subjects of Serious Interest, with the Puritans, with Literature, and with the Humours of Life, now for the first time Collected and Arranged. By J. ST. LOE STRACHEY. Crown 8vo. 6s. [Shortly.

The HAWARDEN HORACE. By Charles L. GRAVES, Author of 'The Blarney Ballads,' 'The Green Above the Red,' 'More Hawarden Horace,' &c. FOURTH EDITION. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

CHEAP EDITIONS OF STANDARD WORKS.

Handy Volumes, printed in clear, bold type, on good paper.

Each work complete in One Volume.

Fcap. 8vo. picture boards, 2s. each; or limp red cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN.

WITH EDGED TOOLS | FROM ONE CAUSE TO ANOTHER
The SLAVE of the LAMP

By the Author of 'MOLLY BAWN.'

MOLLY BAWN. | PHYLLIS.
MRS. GEOFFREY. | POPPY.
AIRY FAIRY LILIAN. | ROSSMOYNE.
DORIS. | BEAUTY'S DAUGHTERS.
GREEN PLEASURE and GREY GRIEF.
FAITH and UNFAITH. | LADY LEANSMERE.
LOYS, LORD BERESFORD, and other Tales.
UNDERCURRENTS.

By GEORGE GISSING.

DEMOS: a Story of Socialist Life in England.
A LIFE'S MORNING. | THYRZA.
The NETHER WORLD. | NEW GRUB STREET.

By the Author of 'MEHALAH.'

MEHALAH: a Story of the Salt Marshes.
COURT ROYAL. | The GAVEROCKS.
JOHN HERRING. | RICHARD CABLE.

By W. E. NORRIS.

HEAPS of MONEY. | MATRIMONY.
MADEMOISELLE DE MERSAC.
NO NEW THING. | ADRIAN VIDAL.

By HAMILTON AIDÉ.

IN THAT STATE of LIFE. | PENRUDDOCKE.
MORALS and MYSTERIES.
MR. and MRS. FAULCONBRIDGE.

By the Author of 'JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN.'

ROMANTIC TALES. | DOMESTIC STORIES.

By HOLME LEE.

AGAINST WIND and TIDE.
SYLVAN HOLT'S DAUGHTER.
KATHIE BRANDE. | WARP and WOOF.
ANNIS WARLEIGH'S FORTUNES.
The WORTLEBANK DIARY.
BASIL GODFREY'S CAPRICE.
MAUDE TALBOT. | COUNTRY STORIES.
KATHERINE'S TRIAL. | MR. WYNYARD'S WARD.
The BEAUTIFUL MISS BARRINGTON.
BEN MILNER'S WOOING.

The COMPLETE WORKS of ROBERT BROWNING. Edited and Annotated by Augustine BIRRELL, Q.C. M.P., and FREDERIC G. KENYON. In 2 vols. large crown 8vo. bound in cloth, gilt top, with a Portrait-Frontispiece to each Volume, 7s. 6d. per Volume.

 Also the UNIFORM EDITION of ROBERT BROWNING'S WORKS, in 17 vols. crown 8vo. bound in sets, 4l. 5s.; or the Volumes bound separately, 5s. each.

MRS. E. B. BROWNING'S POETICAL WORKS.

UNIFORM EDITION.

6 vols. small crown 8vo. 5s. each.

This Edition is uniform with the Seventeen-Volume Edition of Mr. Robert Browning's Works. It contains the following Portraits and Illustrations:—Portrait of Elizabeth Barrett Moulton-Barrett at the Age of Nine—Coxhoe Hall, County of Durham—Portrait of Elizabeth Barrett Moulton-Barrett in Early Youth—Portrait of Mrs. Browning, Rome, February, 1859—Hope End, Herefordshire—Sitting-room in Casa Guidi, Florence—'May's Love.' Facsimile of Mrs. Browning's Handwriting—Portrait of Mrs. Browning, Rome, March, 1859—Portrait of Mrs. Browning, Rome, 1861—The Tomb of Mrs. Browning in the Cemetery at Florence.

 Vol. VI.—Aurora Leigh—can also be had bound and lettered as a separate volume.

A Selection from the Poetry of ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING. First and Second Series. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. each.

Poems by Elizabeth Barrett BROWNING. Fcap. 8vo. half-cloth, cut or uncut edges, 1s.

LIFE AND WORKS OF CHARLOTTE, EMILY, AND ANNE BRONTE.

LIBRARY EDITION.

7 vols. each containing 5 Illustrations, large crown 8vo. 5s. each.

Jane Eyre. | Shirley.
Villette.
Tenant of Wildfell Hall.
Wuthering Heights.
The Professor; and Poems.
Life of Charlotte Bronte.

 Also the POPULAR EDITION, in 7 vols. small post 8vo. limp cloth, or cloth boards, gilt top, 2s. 6d. each. And the POCKET EDITION, in 7 vols. small fcap. 8vo. each with a Frontispiece, bound in half-cloth, with cut or uncut edges, 1s. 6d. per Volume; or the set bound in cloth, with gilt top, in gold-lettered cloth case, 12s. 6d.

MISS THACKERAY'S WORKS.

UNIFORM EDITION.

Each volume illustrated by a Vignette Title-page. 10 vols. large crown 8vo. 6s. each.

1. Old Kensington.
2. The Village on the Cliff.
3. Five Old Friends and a Young PRINCE.
4. To Esther, and other Sketches.
5. Bluebeard's Keys, and other Stories.
6. The Story of Elizabeth; Two HOURS; FROM an ISLAND.
7. Toilers and Spinsters, and other Essays.
8. Miss Angel; Fulham Lawn.
9. Miss Williamson's Divagations.
10. Mrs. Dymond.

MRS. GASKELL'S WORKS.

ILLUSTRATED EDITION.

7 vols. each containing 4 Illustrations, crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. each, bound in cloth.

Wives and Daughters.
North and South.
Sylvia's Lovers.
Cranford, and other Tales.
Mary Barton, and other Tales.
Ruth, and other Tales.
Lizzie Leigh, and other Tales.

 Also the POPULAR EDITION, in 7 vols. small post 8vo. limp cloth or cloth boards, gilt top, 2s. 6d. each. And the POCKET EDITION in 8 vols. small fcap. 8vo. bound in half-cloth with cut or uncut edges, 1s. 6d. per Volume; or the set bound in cloth, with gilt top, in gold-lettered cloth case, 14s.

W. M. THACKERAY'S WORKS.

THE POPULAR EDITION.

In 13 vols. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece to each volume, 5s. each. Sets handsomely bound in scarlet cloth, gilt top, 3l. 5s.; or in half-morocco, gilt, 5l. 10s.

CONTENTS OF THE VOLUMES.

1. VANITY FAIR.
2. The HISTORY of PENDENNIS.
3. The NEWCOMES.
4. ESMOND and BARRY LYNDON.
5. The VIRGINIANS.
6. The ADVENTURES of PHILIP, to which is prefixed a Shabby Genteel Story.
7. PARIS, IRISH, and EASTERN SKETCHES—Paris Sketch-Book; Irish Sketch-Book, Cornhill to Cairo.
8. HOGGARTY DIAMOND, YELLOWPLUSH PAPERS, and BURLESQUES—The Great Hoggarty Diamond; Yellowplush Papers; Novels by Eminent Hands; Jeames's Diary, Adventures of Major Gahagan; A Legend of the Rhine, Rebecca and Rowena; The History of the Next French Revolution; Cox's Diary; The Fatal Boots.
9. The BOOK of SNOBS and SKETCHES of LIFE and CHARACTER—The Book of Snobs; Sketches and Travels in London; Character Sketches; Men's Wives; The Fitzboodle Papers, The Bedford Row Conspiracy, A Little Dinner at Timmins's.
10. ROUNDABOUT PAPERS and LECTURES—Roundabout Papers; The Four Georges, The English Humourists of the Eighteenth Century; The Second Funeral of Napoleon.
11. CATHERINE, &c.—Catherine; Lovell the Widower, Denis Duval, Ballads; The Wolves and the Lamb, Critical Reviews, Little Travels and Roadside Sketches.
12. CHRISTMAS BOOKS—Mrs. Perkins's Ball; Dr. Birch, Our Street, The Kickleburys on the Rhine, The Rose and the Ring.
13. MISCELLANEOUS ESSAYS; Sketches and Reviews, Contributions to Punch.

The STANDARD EDITION.

Twenty-six Volumes, large 8vo. 10s. 6d. each. This Edition contains some of Mr. Thackeray's Writings which had not previously been collected, with many additional Illustrations.

The LIBRARY EDITION.

Twenty-four Volumes, large crown 8vo. handsomely bound in cloth, 9l.; or half-russia, marbled edges, 13l. 13s. With Illustrations by the Author, Richard Doyle, and Frederic Walker.

 The Volumes are sold separately, in cloth, 7s. 6d. each.

The CHEAPER ILLUSTRATED EDITION.

Twenty-six Volumes, bound in cloth, 4l. 11s.; or handsomely bound in half-morocco, 8l. 8s.  The Volumes are sold separately, in cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

The POCKET EDITION.

Twenty-seven Volumes, small fcap. 8vo. bound in cloth, with gilt top, 1s. 6d. each.

The Volumes are also supplied as follows:—

The NOVELS. 13 vols. in gold-lettered cloth case, 21s.

The MISCELLANIES. 14 vols. in gold-lettered cloth case, 21s.

 Messrs. SMITH, ELDER & CO. will be happy to forward a Copy of their CATALOGUE post free on application.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, February 13, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3617. SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

GERMAN, YOUNG, wants to GIVE LESSONS in his Language. Very moderate terms. Excellent references.—Address B. W., 5, Hasker-street, Walton-street, Chelsea.

GRADUATE, Classical Honours, TEACHES CLASSICS and GERMAN, and Prepares for Examinations He would also be willing to accept Tutorial or Travelling Engagements for Easter or Summer Vacations.—E. C., 30, Lower Belgrave-street, Eaton-square.

WANTED, EASY LITERARY WORK for spare hours.—CANTAB, care of A. J. Isard, Esq, Solicitor, 14, Queen-street, Cheapside, E.C.

A GENTLEMAN, with some literary and business experience and small capital, wishes to JOIN PUBLISHING FIRM.—Address No. R. 4, Keith & Co., Advertising Agents, Edinburgh.

LITERARY.—To Young and other Authors, Members of Universities, &c.—A NEW MAGAZINE (Science, Fiction, &c.) REQUIRES CONTRIBUTORS. Names and particulars—not MS.—in first instance to Editor, HARRINGTON, Oxford Union Society.

RE-ENGAGEMENT as ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN WANTED by YOUNG MAN. Knowledge of Dewey System. Excellent testimonials.—DAVY, 24, Bethune-road, London, N.

LLANGEFNI COUNTY SCHOOL.

WANTED, a HEAD MASTER for the above School. Candidates must be Graduates, and must not be over 35 years of age.—Applications and testimonials (25 copies of each) to be in the hands of the undersigned from whom further particulars may be obtained, on or before March 13. R. H. WILLIAMS,
Clerk to the Anglesey County Governing Body.
4, Stanley-crescent, Holyhead, February 16, 1897.

KARACHI, INDIA.—SIND MADRESSEH (MAHOMEDAN COLLEGE).

A PRINCIPAL WANTED for the above State-aided Institution. Must be a Graduate in Honours of a British University, and not more than 35 years of age He will be required to teach English Literature, Mathematics, and Elementary Science. Salary Rs. 450 per mensem, rising by biennial increments of Rs. 50 to Rs 700 per mensem. A house will shortly be provided rent free, and in the interim rent-free quarters will be provided. 60*l.* allowed for passage money.

Applications will be received up to March 10 by SIR JAMES PEILE, India Office, London, from whom further particulars as to the appointment may be obtained.

UNIVERSITY COURT of ST. ANDREWS.

The Court propose to appoint a PROFESSOR to the BERRY CHAIR of ENGLISH LITERATURE, recently instituted by the Scottish Universities Commission. The salary will be 500*l.* per annum, and the Professor shall have such claim on the Fee Fund as if his normal salary had been fixed at 600*l.*

Applications, with twenty copies of testimonials, will be received by MR. STUART GRACE, Secretary of the University Court, until March 10 next.

St. Andrews, February 11, 1897.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE of SOUTH WALES and MONMOUTHSHIRE.

FACULTY OF MEDICINE.

The Council invites applications for the PROFESSORSHIP of ANATOMY. Eighty copies of application, together with testimonials, must be in the hands of the undersigned on or before March 8, 1897.

Further paaticulars may be obtained on application to

J. AUSTIN JENKINS, B.A.,
Secretary and Registrar.

University College, Cardiff, February 8, 1897.

CITY and GUILDS of LONDON INSTITUTE.

There is a VACANCY for a JUNIOR CLERK in the EXAMINATIONS DEPARTMENT of the Institute Candidates must be under 24 years of age, they must have some knowledge of Elementary Science, and be capable of Drafting in good English a Letter from Notes Commencing salary 80*l.* a year.—Apply by letter, stating references, to the SECRETARY, City and Guilds of London Institute, Examinations Department, Exhibition-road, S.W.

THE COUNCIL of the ROYAL INSTITUTE of BRITISH ARCHITECTS are prepared to receive applications for the appointment of SECRETARY. Applicants must be gentlemen of culture and literary attainments, with a knowledge of Architecture, but not necessarily Architects. Proficiency in French essential and German desirable. Age not less than about 30 or more than 45. The Secretary will be required to devote his whole time to his official duties Salary 400*l.* per annum Full particulars can be obtained at the Offices of the Institute, No. 9, Conduit-street, Hanover-square, London W Any canvassing will disqualify.—Applications, addressed to "The Hon Secretary, R I B A.," No. 9, Conduit-street, W., must be delivered not later than March 20.

BOROUGH of NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYNE.

LIBRARIAN.

The FREE LIBRARY COMMITTEE are prepared to receive applications for the post of LIBRARIAN, about to become vacant. Salary 60*l.* per annum

The Office is open to Male or Female Candidates.

The person appointed will be required to devote the whole of his or her time to the duties.

Applications, endorsed "Librarian," with not more than three recent testimonials to be forwarded to the undersigned on or before 25th February instant.

Candidates canvassing the Committee will disqualify

JOSEPH GRIFFITH, Town Clerk.

ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE, Cooper's Hill, Staines.—The Course of Study is arranged to fit an Engineer for Employment in Europe, India, and the Colonies About 40 Students will be admitted in September, 1897. The Secretary of State will offer them for Competition Twelve Appointments as Assistant Engineers in the Public Works Department, and Three Appointments as Assistant Superintendents in the Telegraph Department.—For particulars apply to the SECRETARY, at the College.

BOYS' STORIES.—Any number of the above required; about twenty thousand words in length; plenty of dash and fun, though sound in tone. Payment on approval. Declined MSS. returned.—Address BOYS' STORIES, Hart's Advertising Offices, Maltravers House, Arundel-street, Strand, W.C.

PARTNER WANTED.—A Gentleman, carrying on an EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION in CENTRAL LONDON, steadily growing and capable of wide extension, REQUIRES a PARTNER to take charge of financial and business management. Must have had a good business training. Capital required to purchase share about 700*l.* References must be first-rate.—Apply A, care of C. Mitchell & Co., Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

THE SCHOOL of LITERARY ART. Conducted by FLORENCE MARRYAT. For instruction in Composing and Writing Fiction, Journalism, and the Drama.—Apply to SECRETARY, 26, Abercorn-place, N.W.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

THE ORIENTAL ACADEMY.—ARABIC, SANSCRIT, and other EASTERN LANGUAGES TAUGHT, and guaranteed Translations into and from made by efficient Native Professors.—Write to MR. M. B. MAULAVIE, The Principal, 5, Bloomsbury-square, W.C.

GUY'S HOSPITAL.—ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS in SEPTEMBER, 1897.—FIVE OPEN SCHOLARSHIPS. Two (150*l.* and 60*l.*) in Science and Three (100*l.*, 50*l.*, and 30*l.*) in Arts.—Particulars and copies of Examination Papers on application to the DEAN, Guy's Hospital, London Bridge, S.E.

GUY'S HOSPITAL.—PRELIMINARY SCIENTIFIC (M.B. Lond.).—Classes are held throughout the year. Special instruction is given for the July Examination. Fee, 16 Guineas.

GOVERNESSES for PRIVATE FAMILIES.—Miss LOUISA BROUGH can RECOMMEND several highly qualified English and Foreign GOVERNESSES for Resident and Daily Engagements.—Central Registry for Teachers, 25, Craven-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

MR. GERALD MARSHALL UNDERTAKES GENEALOGICAL SEARCHES in Town and Country. Indices Searched and Abstracts of Records made at low inclusive rates.—Care of Greenberg & Co., 80, Chancery-lane, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING.—Terms, 1*d.* per folio (72 words); or 5,000 words and over, 1*s.* per Thousand.—MISS NIGHTINGALL, Springfield, Walkern-road, Stevenage, Herts

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses E B. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

MS. TYPE-WRITTEN with care and precision by experienced Typist, and returned promptly, 10*d.* per 1,000 words. Translations made.—LITERATOR, 3, Rendlesham-road, London, N.E

WELL-READ TYPIST DESIRES AUTHORS' MSS.—Accustomed to French and Spanish Documents. Good references to Authors. 10*d.* per 1,000, including paper.—J. IRWIN, 59, Selborne-street, Liverpool.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, 1*d.* per folio of 72 words. References to Authors.—Miss GLADDING, 23, Lansdowne-gardens, South Lambeth, S.W.

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing

INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers Speciality—Medical Indexing.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS copied from 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6690. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W., Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.

12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

TOURS IN GREECE,

INCLUDING

EXCURSIONS IN AND AROUND ATHENS.

The TEMPLE of ATHENA (ÆGINA), ELEUSIS, POROS, HYDRA, SPETSAI, NAUPLIA, TIRYNS, ARGOS, MYCENÆ, CORINTH MARATHON, SALAMIS, PENTELIKON, FORTRESS of PHYLE, TRIPOLITZA, MEGALOPOLIS, VOLO, MONASTERIES of METENA, VALE of TEMPE, PASS of THERMOPYLÆ, MOUNT PARNASSUS, DELPHI, OLYMPIA, PATRAS, &c.

Programme of Fares, Rates, and Routes free on application.

THOS. COOK & SON,
LUDGATE-CIRCUS, LONDON; and Branches.

Athens Office: PLACE DE LA CONSTITUTION.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.

And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879. Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

EDITORS in SEARCH of good FICTION should write for J. F. SPRIGGS'S LIST of OVER ONE HUNDRED WORKS offered for SERIAL PUBLICATION. The Authors include the most Popular Novelists of the Day.—J. F. SPRIGGS'S NEWSPAPER SERIAL AGENCY, 21, Paternoster-square, London, E.C.

9, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.

MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co, Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MSS. in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

WILL all STUDENTS and ADMIRERS of CHARLES DICKENS'S WORKS kindly send their Names and Addresses to THE MANAGER, The Roxburghe Press, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster?

Catalogues.

NEW CATALOGUE (No. 19) now ready. Choice Engravings, Drawings, and Books—Constable's English Landscape—Turner's Liber Studiorum—Drawings by Turner, Prout, Hunt, Cotman, &c.—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

Now ready,

CATALOGUE of FRENCH BOOKS, at greatly reduced prices I. PHILOSOPHY. II. RELIGION. III. HISTORY. IV. POETRY, DRAMA, MUSIC. V. BEAUX-ARTS.

DULAU & CO. 37, Soho-square, London, W.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,

14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.

CATALOGUES on application.

"THE CHEAP BOOKSTALL," vide Athenæum, 1861.

BARGAIN LIST, No. 2. PREVIOUS TO EXTENSIVE ALTERATIONS.

Valuable Collection of Theatrical Autographs—fine Series of Ackermann's Coloured Plate Books—the fine Picture Galleries of Europe—Old Books on Gardening, Angling, Metal Work, Bookbinding, Pageants, Costume, Tapestries, Textile Fabrics, Pottery, Coins, Heraldry, Architecture, Stained Glass, Ornament, Decoration, Carved Woodwork—rare Sporting, Fencing, Naval and Military Works—Illustrated Books by Cruikshank, Leech, Rowlandson, Caldecott, Hogarth, Callot, Turner, Claude, Cosway, Cipriani, Bartolozzi, Eisen, &c.—a fine Collection of Etchings, Ancient and Modern, Portraits, Engravings, Scrap-Books, Caricatures, &c.

EDWIN PARSONS & SONS,

45, BROMPTON-ROAD, LONDON, S.W.

All CASH ORDERS CARRIAGE FREE to any Railway Station in the United Kingdom.

Bookbuyers on sending Name and Address receive CATALOGUES regularly GRATIS

LIBRARIES PURCHASED.—To Executors, Administrators, and Others Books, Engravings, Portraits, Old Paintings, Drawings, Miniatures, Bronzes, &c., Purchased in Town or Country for their UTMOST VALUE IN CASH. Removals without trouble or expense to the Vendors.

ELLIS & ELVEY,
Dealers in Old and Rare Books
Libraries Catalogued, Arranged, Valued, and Purchased
CATALOGUES issued at frequent Intervals
29, New Bond-street, London, W.

BOOKS and PORTRAITS WANTED to PURCHASE
Collectors having Copies of any of the under mentioned, in good condition, which they are willing to dispose of, please report
HIGH PRICES GIVEN
HARDING'S BIOGRAPHICAL MIRROR, 3 vols., 1795-8
WALDRON'S SHAKSPERIAN MISCELLANY
KIT CAT CLUB India Proofs
LIFE of MRS. OLDFIELD, with Portrait.
CAULFIELDS GUNPOWDER PLOT
A SET of LOYALISTS
THOMAS DEKKER'S HIS DREAM. 1620
BULLART'S ACADEMIE des SCIENCES, folio, 1682.
BRIDGE'S HISTORY of PERIS
TARLETON'S JESTS, 1611
SIR THEODORE MAYERNE'S WORKS.
PAGITT'S HERESIOGRAPHY
LONDON MAGAZINE, a Set
GENERAL MAGAZINE, a Set
PORTRAIT of MRS. ANNA WILLIAMS, Two or Three PORTRAIT of THOMAS KIRGATE
PORTRAIT of LADY MARY COKE } No Reprints
PORTRAIT of DANIEL ELZEVIR.
PORTRAIT of MRS. CENTLIVRE
AEDES WALPOLIANAE, with Portraits
EXCENTRIC CHARACTERS, published by Wessel of Oxford
TRUE EFFIGIES of OUR MOST ILLUSTRIOUS SOVEREIGN LORD KING CHARLES I., QUEEN MARY, &c., 1641.
ALKEN'S NATIONAL SPORTS, folio.
ALKEN'S WORKS, any good Coloured Oblongs.
PORTRAIT of ANDREW MILLAR, Publisher.
PORTRAIT of KERRICK, Engraver
LYTTON'S HAROLD, Blackwood's Library Edition
LYTTON'S RIENZI, Blackwood's Library Edition.
LETTERS of TOBY MATTHEW, with Portrait
LIFE of ROBERT CAREY, EARL of MONMOUTH.
CASTLEMAINE'S EMBASSY to the POPE.
PORTRAIT of JOSEPH STRUTT.
PEARCE'S LAST LEGACY
JAPHET in SEARCH of a FATHER. Coloured Plates, 3 vols.
BORROW'S CELEBRATED TRIALS, Frontispiece to Vol. 5.
GARDINER'S HISTORY, 1603, Vol. I., or 2 vols. cloth.
PINKERTON'S HISTORY of SCOTLAND, with Portraits.
JOHNSON'S HERO SCOTIAE
COUSIN'S HISTORY of TRANSUBSTANTIATION.
CAULFIELD'S GALLERY of BRITISH PORTRAITS.
CAULFIELD'S COURT of KING JAMES I.
CATALOGUE of PORTRAITS of FOREIGNERS MENTIONED by CLARENDON, HEATH, and THURLOE.
CAULFIELD'S PORTRAITS, India Proofs, 3 vols.
FROUDE'S SHORT STUDIES, 4 vols. 8vo.
CHISWICK EDITION of SHAKESPEARE, 10 vols., 1826.
PORTRAIT of DR. ARBUTHNOT.
BOOKS ILLUSTRATED in COLOURS by GEORGE and ROBERT CRUIKSHANK, ROBERT SEYMOUR, EGERTON, THEODORE LANE, &c.
PORTRAIT of DR. BENJAMIN CALAMY.
ALKEN'S NOTIONS.
HOWETT'S BRITISH FIELD SPORTS, 20 Coloured Plates.
Report lowest prices for cash to
JAMES ROCHE, Bookseller, 38, New Oxford-street, London.
Catalogues gratis and post free.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
FOR THE CIRCULATION AND SALE OF ALL THE BEST
ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.
TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.
LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.
COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.
N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE in ONE SUBSCRIPTION and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.
Town and Village Clubs supplied on Liberal Terms.
Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books gratis and post free.
SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS
NOW OFFERED AT
GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.
A NEW CLEARANCE LIST
(100 PAGES)
Sent gratis and post free to any address.
The List contains POPULAR WORKS in TRAVEL, SPORT, HISTORY, BIOGRAPHY, SCIENCE, and FICTION.
Also NEW and SURPLUS COPIES of FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.
Books Shipped to all parts of the World at Lowest Rates.
MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,
30-34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.;
241, BROMPTON-ROAD, S.W.;
48, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C.; and at
BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,
16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.
(nearly opposite the National Gallery).
Inspection invited.
REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.
PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7*l.* 10*s.*
[Part III. now ready.
The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5*l.* 5*s.*
The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.
LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.
CATALOGUES POST FREE.

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY.
FORD MADOX BROWN.
DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI.
FREDERIC J. SHIELDS.
A Series of AUTOTYPE REPRODUCTIONS of the Chief Works of these Masters is now ON VIEW at the GRAFTON GALLERIES. They include the chief Cartoons made by Ford Madox Brown for stained glass, his 'Cordelia's Portion,' 'English Boy,' 'Shakespeare,' 'Homer,' &c.; Rossetti's 'Beata Beatrix,' 'Lamp of Memory,' 'Monna Rosa,' 'Proserpine,' 'The Annunciation,' 'The Blessed Damozel,' 'Studies for the Oxford Frescoes,' &c.
Particulars on application.
A NEW PORTRAIT OF ROBERT BROWNING.
Painted by D. G. ROSSETTI in 1855. REPRODUCED in AUTOGRAVURE from the Original in the possession of C. Fairfax Murray, Esq. Size of work, 4¾ by 4¼ inches. Proofs on Vellum, 21*s.*; on Japanese, 10*s.* 6*d.*; Prints, 5*s.*
THE WEST FRONT OF PETERBOROUGH CATHEDRAL.
From a Negative specially taken before the erection of the scaffolding by R. G. SCRIVEN, F.S.I. Printed in Sepia or warm black, 18 by 15 inches, price 10*s.* 6*d.*
G. F. WATTS, R.A.
A large Series of the Chief Works of this Master, including the great Allegorical Designs and many others.
Full particulars on application.
FRENCH PAINTERS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
PERMANENT CARBON REPRODUCTIONS of WORKS by JEAN FRANÇOIS MILLET, THÉODORE ROUSSEAU, JEAN BAPTISTE COROT, DAUBIGNY, JULES BRETON, DAGNAN BOUVERET, W. BOUGUEREAU, MEISSONIER, CAROLUS-DURAN, CABANEL, DEBAT-PONSAN, E. ADAN, &c., in various sizes.
THE ENGLISH SCHOOL OF LANDSCAPE PAINTING.
Including the Chief Works of JOHN CONSTABLE, R.A., J. M. W. TURNER, R.A., THOMAS GAINSBOROUGH, R.A., R. P. BONINGTON, OLD CROME, W. J. MÜLLER, DAVID COX, GIRTIN, SAMUEL PROUT, &c.
ABRIDGED CATALOGUES ON APPLICATION
THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,
74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

LONDON LIBRARY,
ST. JAMES'S SQUARE, S.W.
Patron—H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
President—LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.
Vice-Presidents—Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, The Very Rev. the Dean of Llandaff, Herbert Spencer, Esq., Sir Henry Barkly, K.C.B.
Trustees—Right Hon. Sir M. Grant Duff, Right Hon. Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P., Right Hon. Earl of Rosebery.
The Library contains about 170,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in various Languages. Subscription, 3*l.* a year; Life Membership, according to age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country and Ten to Town Members. Reading Room open from Ten to half-past Six. Catalogue, Fifth Edition, 2 vols. royal 8vo, price 21*s.*; to Members, 16*s.* C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.
CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.
BOOKS WANTED by T. B. BUMPUS, 2, George-yard, Lombard-street.—LETTERS and PAPERS FOREIGN and DOMESTIC, of the REIGN of HENRY VIII.,' Vols. VI. to XIV. inclusive. Please report as above.
THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD.
(The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)
Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each. 5*s.* per dozen, ruled or plain.
TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c., Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. E. STORRAR, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.
FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS. South aspect, good view, three minutes walk from the town and common. Suitable for winter months.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

Sales by Auction.

MONDAY NEXT.

An Importation of Curiosities from a new district of New Guinea—two fine New Zealand Jade Meri Meris—Marble Sarcophagus—Oil Paintings—Engravings—Miniatures—Antiquities—Postage Stamps—Books—and a General Collection of Natural History Specimens, including Skulls, Birds' Eggs and Skins—Horns—Insects, &c.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY NEXT, February 22, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the Saturday prior 12 till 3 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

FRIDAY NEXT.—Miscellaneous Property.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, February 26, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely a LARGE QUANTITY of TELEGRAPHIC INSTRUMENTS and APPARATUS by order of the Postmaster-General—Scientific and Photographic Apparatus—Furniture—Books—Jewellery—Pictures—Electricals—Lanterns—Microscopes, &c.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

MONDAY, March 15.

The Valuable Collection of Shells formed by the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq., removed from Condover Hall, Shrewsbury, including many Fine and Rare Species, especially in Murex, Conus, Voluta, Pecten, and Spondylus, &c.; also the Beautiful Ebonized Plate-Glass Cases in which they are contained.

MR. J. C. STEVENS has received instructions to SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38 King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY, March 15, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the Saturday prior 12 till 3 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

Miscellaneous Books and Works on Natural History, including the Library of a Collector.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., on THURSDAY, February 25, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS (English and Foreign), including Bonaparte, Faunz Italica, 4 vols.—Histoire des Oiseaux, 1,000 Coloured Plates, 15 vols.—Turner's Herbal, 1551—Latham's Birds, 10 vols. 4to.—Moore's Lepidoptera, 3 vols.—Von Siebold, Nippon, 4 vols.—Naumann die Vogel—Sharpe's Birds of the Philippines—Buller's Birds of New Zealand, and others on Ornithology—Harvey's Phycologia, 9 vols.—Curtis's Entomology, 16 vols.—Gentleman's Magazine, 198 vols.—Almon's Register, 110 vols.—Annual Register, 98 vols.—Gardiner's England, 1624-57, 4 vols.—Buckingham's Courts of England, 10 vols.—Works on Africa, also Classical and Historical Books from an old Country Library, many with interesting Book-Plates.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

Valuable Books and Manuscripts, including a Portion of the Library of Sir CHARLES STEWART FORBES, Bart.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, February 22, and Four Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, Valuable PRINTED BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, being a Portion of the Library of Sir CHARLES STEWART FORBES, Bart., comprising Works in most Classes of Literature, including Daniell's Picturesque Voyage round Great Britain—Gould's Himalayan Birds—Manning and Bray's History of Surrey, fine LIBRARY BOOKS in Handsome Bindings, the Property of the late Sir THOMAS W. M'MAHON, Bart.; a PORTION of the LIBRARY of H. C. HART, Esq., containing Modern Standard Works and others, including Scrope's Salmon Fishing, First Edition—Heures à l'usage de Rome, printed on Vellum—Horæ—French Manuscripts of the Fifteenth Century, the FIRST FIVE EDITIONS of WALTON'S COMPLEAT ANGLER, 1653 to 1676, the Property of a GENTLEMAN in Norfolk, also other Properties, consisting of County Histories, including Blomefield's Norfolk—Hasted's Kent—Atkyns's Gloucestershire—Nichols's Leicestershire—Rare Works relating to America—Early Bibles and Fifteenth Century Printed Books—Early English Literature—Robert Burns's Poems, First Edition, Kilmarnock, 1786, and Original MS. Letters by the Poet—and other Autographs—Blake's Songs of Innocence—a Horn-Book, temp. James I.—Chap-Books—a number of Rare on Vellum—Graduale ad Usum Ecclesiæ Sarisburiensis, 1502, magnificent copy—fine Specimens of Early Bookbinding—Dramatic Portraits—Sporting Prints—and Illustrated Books—Cruikshankiana—Rare French Books—and Works in nearly every Class of Literature.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of four stamps.

The SECOND PORTION of the Collection of Old Japanese Colour Prints, the Property of ERNEST HART, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on SATURDAY, February 27, at 1 o'clock precisely, the SECOND PORTION of the COLLECTION of OLD JAPANESE COLOUR PRINTS, the Property of ERNEST HART, Esq., including Specimens of the Work of the best known masters, from the earliest dates to recent times.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Decorative Porcelain, Enamels, Bijouterie, &c., of the late Mr. THOMAS HAINES.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 1, at 1 o'clock precisely (by order of the Executors), the COLLECTION of ENGLISH and ORIENTAL CHINA—Battersea Enamels—Cut Glass—Needlework—Bijouterie—Miniatures—Antique Furniture, &c., the Property of the late Mr. THOMAS HAINES.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Remaining Portion of the Collection of Works of Art, the Property of the late WILLIAM WEBB, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 2, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely (by order of the Executor), the REMAINING PORTION of the COLLECTION of WORKS of ART of the late WILLIAM WEBB, Esq., comprising Decorative China, Bronzes, Ornamental Furniture, Bijouterie, Engravings, Pottery, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Library of the late Sir JOHN E. ERICHSEN, F.R.S., &c.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, March 4, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Sir JOHN E. ERICHSEN, F.R.S., a SELECTED PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late Rev. MICHAEL ANGELO ATKINSON, and other Properties; comprising fine Books of Prints—Books on Natural History and Science—Galleries—Modern Publications—Éditions de Luxe—Books on Sports, History, Poetry—Works illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A SELECTED PORTION of the Valuable Library of BERESFORD R. HEATON, Esq., and Valuable Books, the Property of Sir LEWIS MOLESWORTH, Bart.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 8, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising a Portion of the Library of BERESFORD R. HEATON, Esq., of Cheniston-gardens, Kensington; a Selected Portion of the Valuable Library of a GENTLEMAN, deceased; a Small Collection of Illustrated French Books, the Property of O. W. SELIGMAN, Esq.; a Selected Portion of the Library of Sir LEWIS MOLESWORTH, Bart., and other Properties, including Dibdin's Bibliographical Works—Valuable Topographical Works by Hunter, Thoresby, and Whitaker—Black-Letter Chronicles—Officium B. V. M. with Illuminations, Sæc. XV.—First Illustrated Edition of the Malermi Bible, 1490—First Editions of the Writings of Ruskin, Jesse, Swift, Matthew Arnold, Fielding, Pierce Egan, &c.—rare Sporting Books—Water-Colour Drawings, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Original Manuscripts of Keats's Endymion and Lamia, entirely in the Autograph of the Poet.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 10, the ORIGINAL MANUSCRIPTS of KEATS'S ENDYMION and LAMIA, entirely in the Autograph of the Poet. These MSS. have never before been sold, and are in the exact condition in which they left the Printer. They are the Property of a relative of John Taylor, who published the Poems. Also TWO AUTOGRAPH MANUSCRIPTS of the late WILLIAM MORRIS, 'Mine and Thine,' a Poem, and 'An Old Story Retold'—an Unpublished Poem in the Autograph of W. M. Thackeray—and other Manuscripts.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of four stamps.

THE MONTAGU COLLECTION OF COINS.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 15, and Four Following Days, the SECOND and FINAL PORTION of the GREEK SERIES, together with a Small Series of Roman, Silver, and Bronze Coins and Medallions of the late H. MONTAGU, Esq.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had. Illustrated Catalogues, price 3*s.*

Musical Instruments.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, February 23, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS, comprising Grand and Cottage Pianofortes, by J. Brinsmead & Son, Kirkman, Cramer, Kaiser, Hirsch, Robinson, &c.—Violins, Violas, Violoncellos, and Double Basses, by Italian and other Masters—Guitars, Mandolines, and Banjos—Brass and Wood-Wind Instruments—and a few Lots of Music.

Scarce Engravings, principally in Colours.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, February 24, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a fine COLLECTION of SCARCE ENGRAVINGS, principally in colours, containing some very Rare Portraits, including Emma Lady Hamilton, after Romney—Lady Elizabeth Foster, after Reynolds, and Lady Sm[illegible]the, after the same—the scarce pair of Prints known as Courtship and Matrimony, after Williams, by Jukes, all the above being finely printed in colours.

On view two days prior. Catalogues on application.

Miscellaneous Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on FRIDAY, February 26, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY, comprising Modern and Antique Silver—Sheffield and other Plate—Old China and Cut Glass—Gold and Silver Coins—and Antique Furniture, including Two fine Chippendale Sideboards—Rosewood and other Card Tables—Chairs—Bookcases—Inlaid Oak Chests, and several Dressing Glasses.

Catalogues on application.

SECOND PORTION of the well-known Biblical and Liturgical Library of HENRY JOHN FARMER ATKINSON, Esq., D.L. F.S.A., &c., removed from Osborne House, Ore, Hastings.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, March 1, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the SECOND PORTION of the BIBLICAL and LITURGICAL LIBRARY of H. J. FARMER ATKINSON, Esq., D.L. F.S.A., &c., comprising Rare Editions of the Bible in German, Latin, Islandic, French, Dutch and English—Antiphonarium, on vellum—Horæ, with Miniatures—Early German Block Book—Dibdin's Typographical Antiquities, Bibliographical Tour, and Bibliotheca Spenceriana—Huth Library Catalogue, &c.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

Autograph Letters.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 2, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of AUTOGRAPH LETTERS and DOCUMENTS of Eminent Literary, Scientific, Poets, Musicians, and Royal and Noble Personages, amongst which will be found Queen Elizabeth, Charles II., William III., Napoleon I., Oliver Cromwell, S. Pepys, John Evelyn, Horace Walpole, Lord Nelson, Lady Hamilton, Sir J. Franklin, Benjamin Franklin, Dr. Johnson, W. Cowper, C. Lamb, Lord Byron, T. Campbell, George Eliot, Madame Patti, F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, Sir W. Scott, Robert Browning, Mrs. Browning, General Lafayette, and many others.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

Entire Stock of Mr. CLEMENT S. PALMER, of Southampton-row, who is changing the character of his business.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 3, and Two Following Days, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, an EXTENSIVE COLLECTION of ANTIQUARIAN BOOKS, being the Entire Stock of Mr. CLEMENT S. PALMER, of 12, Southampton-row, who is changing the character of his business, and comprising Works on History, Biography, Travel, Bibliography, the Fine Arts, Theology, Antiquities, Poetry, Medicine, Astrology, and other Branches of Literature, both English and Foreign—Specimens of Early Foreign Typography, valuable Editions of English Histories, interesting Manuscripts, &c.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of two stamps.

OLD ENGLISH and FOREIGN ENGRAVINGS, Drawings, Paintings, Art-Books—Old Historic Newspapers—China—Play-Bills—Maps—Letters—Early Queen Victoria Items—Coronation Tickets and Prints. On view.

MR. JOHN PARNELL will SELL by AUCTION, at the highest biddings above the reserve prices (which can be ascertained before the Sale), on WEDNESDAY NEXT, at 1 o'clock, at 12, Rockley-road, near Uxbridge-road Station, London, W. (Gentlemen in Town and Country and Abroad, unable to attend the Sale, can register their bids with the AUCTIONEER.)

Catalogues ready.

WILLIS'S ROOMS, KING-STREET, ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE.

A valuable Consignment of Oriental Carpets and Rugs direct from Constantinople.

MESSRS. ROBINSON & FISHER will SELL, at their Rooms, as above, on FRIDAY, February 26, at 1 o'clock precisely, the above valuable CONSIGNMENT of ORIENTAL CARPETS and RUGS, in great variety, from the well-known Looms of Geordez, Shiraz, Kurdistan, Daghistan—several beautiful Specimens of antique Kirman Carpets—Bokhara and other Carpets—Silk Rugs in rich colours and fancy patterns, in sizes suitable for Dining and Drawing Rooms, Libraries, &c.

May be viewed, and Catalogues had.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On TUESDAY, February 23, DRAWINGS by T. Rowlandson and other English Humourists; WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS, the Property of a LADY.

On TUESDAY, February 23, and Following Day, the FINAL PORTION of the COLLECTION of OBJECTS of ART and VERTU and PICTURES of the late J. RAWCLIFFE, Esq., of Burnley.

On THURSDAY, February 25, PORCELAIN and DECORATIVE FURNITURE of R. B. ADDERLEY, Esq.

On FRIDAY, February 26, the COLLECTION of PORCELAIN and FAIENCE of the late WM. BROCKBANK, Esq.; OLD NANKIN PORCELAIN, the Property of a LADY, &c.

On SATURDAY, February 27, the COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of W. BROCKBANK, Esq., deceased, and important Modern Pictures and Drawings from Private Collections and different sources.

On MONDAY, March 1, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS from different sources.

On TUESDAY, March 2, BRONZES and WORKS of ART relating to Napoleon I., the Collection of a GENTLEMAN.

On THURSDAY, March 4, and Following Day, the CONDOVER HALL COLLECTION of OBJECTS of ART, DECORATIVE FURNITURE, ARMS, and ARMOUR.

On FRIDAY, March 5, OBJECTS of ART and DECORATION of the late BARON HIRSCH, the Rev. Sir ALGERNON COOTE, Bart., and other private sources.

On SATURDAY, March 6, the CONDOVER HALL COLLECTION of PICTURES of the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq., and Pictures from other Celebrated Collections.

On SATURDAY, March 13, the COLLECTIONS of PICTURES of the late Sir CHARLES BOOTH, Bart., and of the late SNOWDON HENRY, Esq.

On MONDAY, March 15, the COLLECTION of PORCELAIN, PLATE, and DECORATIVE OBJECTS of the late Sir CHARLES BOOTH, Bart.

CONDOVER HALL, SHREWSBURY.

SALE of the APPOINTMENTS to this Ancient Elizabethan Mansion, including Pictures, Engravings, Old Japan China, Bronzes, Antique English Furniture, French, Italian, and Dutch Marqueterie, and numerous important Effects worthy the attention of Collectors and others, being the Property of the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq.

MESSRS. WM. HALL, WATERIDGE & OWEN are favoured with instructions from the Rev. R. H. CHOLMONDELEY, who has disposed of the Condover Hall Estate, to hold the above SALE by AUCTION, commencing on TUESDAY, March 9, and Following Days.

Book Catalogues (6*d.* each) forwarded on application to the AUCTIONEERS, High-street, Shrewsbury. Sale each day at 12 o'clock to the minute.

At BIRMINGHAM, on MONDAY, March 1.

A most interesting and unreserved Sale of a Valuable Collection of Rare War Medals, by direction of a well-known Collector in the South of England (who has been collecting for upwards of thirty-five years, and is now relinquishing the pursuit); also a few Lots the Property of a Lady.

MESSRS. CLEMENT WELLER & LOCKER will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, No. 18, NEW STREET, BIRMINGHAM, on MONDAY, March 1, commencing at 2 o'clock punctually, a valuable COLLECTION of WAR MEDALS, including many very rare Specimens, in all numbering upwards of 160 Lots.

Catalogues post free from the AUCTIONEERS, No. 18, New-street, Birmingham.

SKETCHES of WROUGHT IRON WORK, also Analysis of Mortar from Peterborough Cathedral; the Advancement of Architecture (Royal Academy Lectures); the Oglander Monument, Brading Church; Insulation Resistance of an Electric Installation, &c.

See the BUILDER of February 20 (4*d.*; by post, 4½*d.*).

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

Just published, price 2*s.* 6*d.* post free,

GOUT and its CURE. By J. COMPTON BURNETT, M.D. "The author has had a wide experience in gout, and presents us with a very readable little book."—County Gentleman.

London: James Epps & Co., Limited, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street.

This day is published, in 1 vol. price 4*s.*

THE DUBLIN UNIVERSITY CALENDAR for 1897.

Also, price 4*s.*

DUBLIN EXAMINATION PAPERS. Being a Supplement to the University Calendar for 1897.

Hodges, Figgis & Co., Limited, Dublin. Longmans & Co. London.

MR. FLINDERS PETRIE'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

PETRIE (W. M. FLINDERS).—KOPTOS. With a Chapter by D. G. HOGARTH, M.A. 1 vol. 4to. 35 pp. 28 Plates (4 Photographic), boards, 10*s.*

—— NAQADA and BALLAS. By W. M. FLINDERS PETRIE and QUIBELL. With a Chapter by F. C. J. SPURRELL. 4to. 79 pp. 87 Plates, boards, 25*s.*

The district treated in this work is about thirty miles North of Thebes and on the Western side of the Nile. Messrs. Flinders Petrie and Quibell give decisive evidence of an hitherto unknown invasion of Upper Egypt, which is linked with the prehistoric civilization of the Mediterranean. An ample index adds greatly to the value of the book.

Bernard Quaritch, 15, Piccadilly, London.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 27th, JUNE 10th, 24th, and JULY 8th, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'CONINGSBY,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'

Price of the Six Numbers, 2*s.*; or free by post, 2*s.* 3*d.*

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

NOW READY.

THE MARCH NUMBER OF THE

PALL MALL MAGAZINE.

Price ONE SHILLING net.

Contents.

"ONE PINCH." Frontispiece.
After a Painting by C. Pippich.

The ARCHER. Henry Tyrrell.
With Illustrations by Abbey Altson.

The STORY of GLAMIS CASTLE. Lady Glamis.
Richly illustrated from Photographs.

BUDGE CROCKETT of HELL CORNER. John Foster Fraser.
With Illustrations by M. Barstow.

VICTORIA R. and I. George Edgar Montgomery.
Illustrated by E. F. Skinner.

A REVIVAL of OLD LONDON BRIDGE. H. W. Brewer.
Illustrated by the Author.

MARCH. A. L. Budden (Ada Bartrick Baker).
Illustrated by Will B. Robinso

SPORT of the MONTH: Beagling. W. H. Grenf
With Full-Page Illustration by Geor

FAITH. Rev. Edward Simms, M.A.

WITH NEVER a CHANCE. Ethel A. Fenwick.
With Illustrations by J. S. Crompton.

MODERN EXPRESS PASSENGER ENGINES. Herbert Russell.
With Illustrations showing Latest Types on Principal Railways, &c.

The CASE of the REVEREND MR. TOOMEY. S. B. T.

The STORY of 1812. Part III. Being an Account of Napoleon's Disastrous Campaign in Russia. With Plan. Colonel H. D. Hutchinson, Director of Military Education in India.

The BANKSIDE, SOUTHWARK. Edward Tyrrell Jacques.
Illustrated and Engraved by M. Stainforth

A ROUMANIAN LOVE SONG.
Illustrated by Miss M. L. Bowley

ST. IVES. Chaps. 13–15. The late Robert Louis Stevenson.
With Illustrations by G. Grenville Manton.

The MAJOR TACTICS of CHESS. Part I. Franklin K. Young.
With Diagrams.

MARIE'S STORY. John Le Breton.
With Illustrations by Montagu Barstow.

FROM a CORNISH WINDOW. A. T. Quiller-Couch.
With Thumb-nail Sketches by Mark Zangwill.

The HUMOURS of the MONTH.

Offices: 18, Charing Cross-road, London, W.C.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

THE DONGOLA EXPEDITION.

Demy 8vo. 8s. 6d. net.

LETTERS FROM THE SUDAN.

By the Special Correspondent of the Times,
E. F. KNIGHT.

Reprinted from the Times of April to October, 1896.
With Illustrations and Plans.

DAILY MAIL.—"These letters are marked by an uncommon vigour, an intimate knowledge of political affairs in Egypt, and very considerable power of graphically presenting the movements and engagements of the contending forces."

THIRD THOUSAND NOW READY.

Demy 8vo. 21s. net.

MISS KINGSLEY'S TRAVELS IN WEST AFRICA.

By Miss MARY H. KINGSLEY.

With 16 Full-Page and numerous Text Illustrations.

BLACK and WHITE.—"By far the most important and most vivacious book of adventure published for many a day."

BY GOLDWIN SMITH.
Crown 8vo. 5s.

GUESSES at the RIDDLE of EXISTENCE, and other Essays on Kindred Subjects. By GOLDWIN SMITH, D.C.L., Author of 'Canada and the Canadian Question,' &c.

With Portrait, 8vo. 12s. net.

ESSAYS and ADDRESSES by SIR J. RUSSELL REYNOLDS, Bart. F.R.S. M.D. Lond., LL.D. Edin., LL.D. Aberd., President of the Royal College of Physicians of London, &c.

LANCET.—"We have rarely, if ever, read a volume with greater pleasure than this, and in publishing it Lady Reynolds should earn the gratitude not only of the medical profession, but of all, whatever their rank or calling, who love noble thoughts nobly expressed."

Royal 16mo. 6s.

The MORE ABUNDANT LIFE. Lenten Readings selected chiefly from Unpublished Manuscripts of the Rt. Rev. PHILLIPS BROOKS, D.D., late Bishop of the Diocese of Massachusetts. By W. M. L. JAY.

BY EDWIN A. ABBOTT.
8vo. 12s. 6d. net.

The SPIRIT on the WATERS. The Evolution of the Divine from the Human. By EDWIN A. ABBOTT, Author of 'Philochristus,' &c.

BY THE LATE DEAN CHURCH.

OCCASIONAL PAPERS, selected from the Guardian, the Times, and the Saturday Review, 1846-1890. By the late R. W. CHURCH, M.A. D.C.L., sometime Rector of Whatley, Dean of St. Paul's, Honorary Fellow of Oriel College. 2 vols. Globe 8vo. 10s.
[Eversley Series.

Extra crown 8vo. 6s.

The GROWTH of the FRENCH NATION. By GEORGE B. ADAMS, Professor of History in Yale University.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"A very lucid and concise constitutional history of France."

SECOND EDITION, REVISED THROUGHOUT.
Medium 8vo. 14s. net.

The ELEMENTS of POLITICS. By HENRY SIDGWICK, Author of 'The Methods of Ethics,' &c.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

THIRD EDITION, REVISED.
With 314 Illustrations, 8vo. 18s.

AN INTRODUCTION TO HUMAN PHYSIOLOGY.

By AUGUSTUS D. WALLER, M.D. F.R.S., Lecturer in Physiology at St. Mary's Hospital Medical School, London, late External Examiner at the Victoria University.

NEW BOOK BY PROF. MAX MÜLLER.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE SCIENCE OF MYTHOLOGY.

By the Right Hon. Prof. F. MAX MÜLLER, K.M., Member of the French Institute.

2 vols. 8vo. 32s.

COMPLETING THE ENGLISH EDITION OF ZELLER'S 'PHILOSOPHY OF THE GREEKS.'

ARISTOTLE AND THE EARLIER PERIPATETICS:

Being a Translation from Zeller's 'Philosophy of the Greeks.'

By B. F. C. COSTELLOE, M.A., and J. H. MUIRHEAD, M.A.

2 vols. crown 8vo. 24s.

CABINET EDITION OF BISHOP CREIGHTON'S 'PAPACY.'

A HISTORY OF THE PAPACY FROM THE GREAT SCHISM TO THE SACK OF ROME (1378-1527).

By M. CREIGHTON, D.D. Oxon. and Camb., Lord Bishop of London.

New and Cheaper Edition. In 6 vols.

Vol. I. crown 8vo. 6s.

LETTERS FROM CONSTANTINOPLE.

By Mrs. MAX MÜLLER.

With 12 Views of Constantinople and the Neighbourhood. Crown 8vo. 6s.

NEW BOOK BY THE DEAN OF LICHFIELD.

FOOTPRINTS OF THE APOSTLES AS TRACED BY ST. LUKE IN THE ACTS:

Being Sixty Portions for Private Study, Family Reading, and Instruction in Church.

By HERBERT MORTIMER LUCKOCK, D.D., Dean of Lichfield.

2 vols. crown 8vo. 12s.

FOR THE WHITE ROSE OF ARNO:

A Story of the Jacobite Rising of 1745.

By OWEN RHOSCOMYL, Author of 'Battlement and Tower,' &c.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

"A romance of more than ordinary merit."
Pall Mall Gazette.

"A very creditable performance, of use to the student of Jacobite history, and of genuine interest to every reader who retains a partiality for the chief actor in the drama on which the curtain fell at Culloden."—Dundee Advertiser.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
London, New York, and Bombay.

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN'S LIST.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

OLIVE SCHREINER'S NEW NOVEL.

TROOPER PETER HALKET OF MASHONALAND.

Photogravure Frontispiece. Cloth, 6s.

"The story is one that is certain to be widely read, and it is well that it should be so, especially at this moment; it grips the heart and haunts the imagination. To have written such a book is to render a supreme service, for it is as well to know what the rough work means of subjugating inferior races."—Daily News.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MR. MAGNUS.'

SOUTH AFRICA AS IT IS. By F. REGINALD STATHAM, Author of 'Mr. Magnus,' &c. Demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

WITH INTRODUCTION BY RIGHT HON. A. J. MUNDELLA.

A VILLAGE POLITICIAN: the Life-Story of John Buckley. Edited by J. C. BUCKMASTER. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

NEW VOLUMES OF "THE STORY OF THE NATIONS."

BRITISH INDIA. By R. W. Frazer, LL.B.

CANADA. By J. G. Bourinot, C.M.G. LL.D., Clerk to the Canadian House of Commons.

Each with Maps, Illustrations, and Index, cloth, 5s.

THIRD EDITION.

IN BOHEMIA with DU MAURIER. By FELIX MOSCHELES. 60 Original Illustrations by the late G. du Maurier. Third Edition. Cloth, 10s. 6d.

PIONEER WORK in the ALPS of NEW ZEALAND: a Record of the First Exploration of the Chief Glaciers and Ranges of the Southern Alps. By ARTHUR P. HARPER, B.A. Maps and Illustrations. Cloth, 21s. net.

"Mr. Harper has written a book about this picturesque corner of the Empire well worth reading. The work is profusely illustrated."—Times.

NEW VOLUME OF "THE PSEUDONYM LIBRARY."

ANTHONY JASPER. By Ben Bolt.
Paper, 1s. 6d.; cloth, 2s.
"Will be read with unflagging interest from first to last."
Observer.

SUN and MIST. Poems by E. St. G. BETTS. Cloth, 3s. 6d. net.

NEW NUMBER OF "LITTLE NOVELS."

PASSPORTS. By I. J. Armstrong.
Paper covers, 6d.; cloth, 1s.

RECENTLY ISSUED IN SAME SERIES.

A SLIGHT INDISCRETION. By Mrs. EDW. CARTWRIGHT.

A COMEDY of THREE. By Newton SANDERS.

OUIDA'S NEW NOVEL. SECOND EDITION.

LE SELVE. By Ouida. Second Edition. Demy 12mo. cloth, 2s. 6d.
"A very excellent story."—Pall Mall Gazette.

CATALOGUES ON APPLICATION.

London:
T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

"THERE IS NO NOVEL BETTER WORTH READING JUST NOW THAN 'PHROSO.'"
DAILY CHRONICLE.

PHROSO: a Romance.

By ANTHONY HOPE.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"Mr. Anthony Hope has produced his latest novel in a happy hour. At a time when the chief theme of conversation is Crete and the islands of the Archipelago, the lawlessness of Eastern races, and the inveteracy of old racial grudges, he has issued a book with all the elements of romance, recounting the fortunes of an eccentric Englishman, who, because he is tired of ordinary travel, purchases an island belonging to Turkey and inhabited by Greeks."—Daily Telegraph.

"A mediæval drama so managed as to find a corner in the life we live now, without seeming remote from the most up-to-date interests and sympathies. This combination, which has always been among the most effective characteristics of its author's fiction, has never been more conspicuous than in 'Phroso.'"—Graphic.

PHROSO.

By ANTHONY HOPE.

"Mr. Anthony Hope takes us into the realm of pure romance in 'Phroso.' The story is one of as surprising adventure, as full of love and light as was 'The Prisoner of Zenda.' In the style there is the same 'fizz'—we cannot find another word to express its sparkle and buoyancy. The dialogue, it is needless to say, is admirable in its spontaneity, and in the dramatic quality of its fine play. It is a captivating romance that from the first appeals to the emotions, and keeps the attention alert and wakeful to the last."—Daily News.

PHROSO.

By ANTHONY HOPE.

"This fascinating story..... Few people having once taken it up will lay it down until they have reached its last page. Mr. Hope is nothing if not original. His stories of romance and adventure are like those of no other author. 'Phroso' in point of interest is on a level with his best achievement, even with 'The Prisoner of Zenda.'"
Freeman's Journal.

PHROSO.

By ANTHONY HOPE.

"The interest of 'Phroso' lies in the element of astonishment, in the rapid succession of unexpected (but not too improbable) incidents. This excellent specimen of the novel of adventure is distinguished by a quiet irony, lively but unpretentious dialogue, and the presence of a charming heroine."—Manchester Guardian.

"He who begins to follow the thread of Lord Wheatley's adventures in Neopalia will not let it go until he has explored the whole labyrinth, and in the end he is like to be almost as much in love with the lady of the enchanted island as Lord Wheatley himself."—Scotsman.

PHROSO.

By ANTHONY HOPE.

"Mr. Anthony Hope's latest novel, 'Phroso,' shows a return to his earlier and more romantic mood. We think on that account alone it will not disappoint his admirers; but the story has other and independent claims. It is full of sense and sensibility, and quick with human interest and dramatic surprise."—Leeds Mercury.

GENERAL LITERATURE.

An INTRODUCTION to the HISTORY of RELIGION. By F. B. JEVONS, M.A. Litt.D., Tutor at the University of Durham. Demy 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.*

The XXXIX. ARTICLES of the CHURCH of ENGLAND. Edited, with an Introduction, by E. C. S. GIBSON, D.D., Vicar of Leeds, late Principal of Wells Theological College. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* each. Vol. II. Articles IX.–XXXIX.

ECONOMIC SCIENCE and PRACTICE. By L. L. PRICE, M.A., Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The LIFE of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. By S. BARING-GOULD. With over 450 Illustrations in the Text and 13 Photogravure Plates. Large 4to. 36*s.*

"A brilliant and attractive volume.....Within, it is remarkable, to begin with, for the considerable number and unusual excellence of its illustrations. Never before, it is safe to say, have so many pictures relating to Napoleon been brought together within the limits of an English book.....Altogether this is a table-book of the first class. It embodies a 'study of the character and opinions of Napoleon,' on which Mr. Baring-Gould can be freely congratulated."
Globe.

NAVAL POLICY: with a Description of English and Foreign Navies. By G. W. STEEVENS. Demy 8vo. 6*s.*

"An extremely able and interesting work."
Daily Chronicle.

FICTION.

SIX SHILLINGS EACH.

PHROSO. Anthony Hope.

WORMWOOD. Marie Corelli.

The CARISSIMA. Lucas Malet.

A CHILD of the JAGO. Arthur MORRISON.

CLARISSA FURIOSA. W. E. NORRIS.

The VILLAGE and the DOCTOR. JAMES GORDON.

The SPECULATORS. J. F. Brewer.

The SPIRIT of STORM. Ronald ROSS.

DENOUNCED. J. Bloundelle Burton.

CAPTAIN JACOBUS. L. Cope CORNFORD.

DARTMOOR IDYLLS. S. Baring-GOULD.

IN the GREAT DEEP. J. A. Barry.

THREE AND SIXPENCE EACH.

The SIGN of the SPIDER. Bertram MITFORD.

The SUPPLANTER. B. P. Neuman.

A HANDFUL of EXOTICS. S. GORDON.

The SIN of ANGELS.

"TOLD WITH ADMIRABLE SIMPLICITY AND DIRECTNESS."—TIMES.

THE FALL OF THE CONGO ARABS.

By Capt. SIDNEY L. HINDE.

WITH MAP, PORTRAITS, AND PLANS.

Demy 8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.*

"A graphic sketch of one of the most exciting and important episodes in the struggle for the supremacy in Central Africa between the Arabs and their European rivals. Many of the instances of cannibalism which came under Captain Hinde's own notice are too gruesome for quotation. The details given may repel some readers, but for the rest Captain Hinde's book has a distinct and genuine interest for every one who cares, however slightly, for Central African affairs. It is, indeed, the only connected narrative—in English, at any rate—which has been published of this particular episode in African history."—Times.

THE FALL OF THE CONGO ARABS.

"Captain Hinde gives us valuable information regarding African ethnology, agricultural and other resources, and native customs, especially cannibalism, which he treats with a comprehensiveness and a horribly graphic detail not to be found in any other work on Central Africa.....In a word, Captain Hinde's book is one of the most interesting and valuable contributions yet made to the literature of modern Africa."—Daily News.

THE FALL OF THE CONGO ARABS.

"Captain Hinde's book covers nearly three years of African experience—from December, 1891, to September, 1894. It is, so far as we know, the only connected history of the struggle that crushed the Arab power, and decided that the commerce of the central interior should go, not by Zanzibar, but by the Congo, to Europe. An introduction, by another hand, explains concisely the rise of Arab domination in the interior, and the general situation at the outbreak of the conflict. He (Captain Hinde) is to be heartily congratulated on his literary as well as his military labours."—New Saturday.

THE FALL OF THE CONGO ARABS.

"A highly interesting and instructive book. Baron Dhanis's bald official report of his campaigning between 1892 and 1894, hitherto the only authentic source of information on the subject, is here amplified and supplemented by his English companion, and from the two accounts, read together, a clear notion can be obtained of the ugly business described in them."—Athenæum.

"An interesting, unpretentious, manly book. Captain Hinde's narrative is so painstaking and modest that we venture to hope that 'The Fall of the Congo Arabs' will not be his last work on Central Africa."—Westminster Gazette.

THE FALL OF THE CONGO ARABS.

"His narrative is rife with thrilling interest, and abounds in descriptive matter throwing much new light on native life in Central Africa.....On the whole, there is not a page in the book which is not thoroughly readable. If merit be a criterion of success, 'The Fall of the Congo Arabs' should achieve a widespread popularity."
Daily Telegraph.

METHUEN & CO. 36, Essex-street, Strand.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

TWELFTH EDITION READY THIS DAY.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 36*s*.

FORTY-ONE YEARS IN INDIA.

From Subaltern to Commander-in-Chief.

By FIELD-MARSHAL

LORD ROBERTS of KANDAHAR, V.C.

Besides Maps and Plans, the Volumes are embellished with Portraits on Steel and Copper of Sir James Outram, General Nicholson, Sir Henry Lawrence, Sir Abraham Roberts, Sir Colin Campbell, Sir William Mansfield, Lord Napier of Magdala, Sir Donald Stewart, Sir Samuel Browne, the Amir of Afghanistan, Sir Arthur Hardinge, and Field-Marshal Lord Roberts.

"A vivid and simple narrative of things actually seen by a fighting man who, during forty-one years of Indian service, saw more hard fighting than almost any other Englishman of our time. It also records the experience of a military administrator who has conducted historical campaigns and been the presiding genius in the re-organization of a great army. But to the general reader perhaps its chief charm will be glimpses which it gives, with a certain Cervantes-like naïveté, of the personality of the author. A hundred unconscious touches, in the camp, on the battlefield, and at the Council table, reveal to us the veritable hero of the British private, and the fearless leader of men whom every native soldier would follow to the death."—Times.

"It would be difficult to overstate the service which the author renders to the British nation by reminding it of the true temper and trustworthiness of one of its greatest weapons of security, the army.....The story of Lord Roberts's life should be studied by every young soldier.....The peculiar charm of the book is the modest and generous spirit which, like a golden thread, runs through it."—Athenæum.

STANDARD WORKS.

The HISTORY of the FRENCH REVOLUTION. By ADOLPHE THIERS. Translated by FREDERICK SHOBERL. With 50 Engravings. 5 vols. demy 8vo. 45*s*.

The LIFE of JOHN CHURCHILL, DUKE of MARLBOROUGH, to the ACCESSION of QUEEN ANNE. By Field-Marshal VISCOUNT WOLSELEY, K.P. Fourth Edition. 2 vols. demy 8vo. with Portraits and Plans, 32*s*.

MEMOIRS of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. By FAUVELET DE BOURRIENNE. Edited by Colonel PHIPPS. 4 vols. crown 8vo. with Illustrations, 36*s*.

The LIFE of MARY, QUEEN of SCOTS. From the French of M. MIGNET by Sir ANDREW SCOBLE, Q.C. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. with 2 Portraits, 6*s*.

The HISTORY of ROME. By Prof. THEODOR MOMMSEN. Translated (with the Author's sanction, and Additions) by Dr. P. W. DICKSON. In 5 vols. crown 8vo. 37*s*. 6*d*.

The HISTORY of the RISE and PROGRESS of the ENGLISH CONSTITUTION. By Sir EDWARD CREASY, late Chief Justice of Ceylon. Fourteenth Edition. Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The HEAVENS. By Amédée Guillemin. In demy 8vo. with over 200 Illustrations, 12*s*.

CURIOSITIES of NATURAL HISTORY. By FRANCIS TREVELYAN BUCKLAND. Popular Edition, in Four Series, with a few Illustrations. Each Series separately, in small 8vo. 2*s*. 6*d*.

The PRIVATE LIFE of MARIE ANTOINETTE. By HENRIETTE FÉLICITÉ CAMPAN, First Lady-in-Waiting to the Queen. With 2 Portraits. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The HISTORY of the THIRTY YEARS' WAR. By ANTON GINDELY. Translated by Professor ANDREW TEN BROOK. 2 vols. large crown 8vo. with Maps and Illustrations, 24*s*.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

THE PEOPLE'S EDITION.
PRICE SIXPENCE.
NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.
In medium 8vo. paper cover.

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN.

By Mrs. CRAIK.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.
Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6*s*.

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR SHIPS

and their COMMANDERS. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"Pleasantly written and readable as it is, it cannot but prove welcome to a large number of readers who have no access to the heavier naval literature from which it is drawn."—Scotsman.

In 1 vol. large crown 8vo. gilt top, price 6*s*.

BARRACK and BATTLEFIELD.

TALES of the SERVICE at HOME and ABROAD. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'A Captain in the Fusiliers,' &c.

"Mr. Wood never fails to make his tragic point with force, and he presents the spirit of sturdy Tommy Atkins with fidelity to his original. A volume like this is always welcomed by both old and young."—Dundee Advertiser.

"There is nothing melodramatic about these narratives, which are obviously true to the life they profess to depict."
Globe.

UNDER THE ESPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY.
NOW READY, SIXTY-SIXTH EDITION.
1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved, 31*s*. 6*d*. bound, gilt edges.

LODGE'S PEERAGE AND BARONETAGE FOR 1897.

CORRECTED BY THE NOBILITY.

"That compendious and admirably printed guide to the peerage and baronetage of the British Empire has reached its sixty-sixth edition with the volume for 1897. The usefulness of this concise and carefully-edited book is enhanced by the excellent and stout paper on which it is printed."
Pall Mall Gazette, December 29, 1896.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

The SOUND of a VOICE. By Linda GARDINER, Author of 'His Heritage,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, 6*s*.

The WOOING of a FAIRY. By GERTRUDE WARDEN, Author of 'The Sentimental Sex,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

An AUSTRALIAN DUCHESS. By AMYOT SAGON, Author of 'A Fair Palmist,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"Mr. Sagon's brightly written romance."—Daily Telegraph.

GENTLEMAN GEORGE: a Story without a Heroine. By Mrs. HERBERT MARTIN, Author of 'Britomart,' 'Her Début,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"Mrs. Herbert Martin has produced an excellent story of country life which loses nothing in interest from the fact that it has no heroine."—Scotsman.

BLIND BATS. By Margaret B. CROSS, Author of 'Stolen Honey,' 'Newly Fashioned,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"Miss Cross has a delightful style, fresh, crisp, and witty, without straining after epigrams, and her portraiture is throughout lifelike without being photographic."
Pall Mall Gazette.

The YOKE of STEEL. By C. J. WILLS, Author of 'The Pit Town Coronet,' &c., and GODFREY BURCHETT, Author of 'Dominic Penterne,' &c.

"The dialogue throughout is spontaneous and natural without lapsing into trivial platitudes or idle chatter. On the whole a capital novel."—Daily Telegraph.

OF the DEEPEST DYE. By Col. CUTHBERT LARKING, Author of 'With Everything Against Her,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"The author writes of nothing that he does not know, and the thrilling interest of his narrative enchains the reader's attention from start to finish."—Daily Telegraph.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, Limited,
13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NOW READY.

THE JUCKLINS.

BY

OPIE READ,

Author of 'A Kentucky Colonel.'

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s*. 6*d*.

NOW READY.

A MATTER OF TEMPERAMENT.

BY

CAROLINE FOTHERGILL,

Author of 'The Comedy of Cecilia' and 'A Question of Degree.'

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s*.

NOW READY.

VOLUME XVII.

STANDARD EDITION

OF THE

WAVERLEY NOVELS.

Now being issued in Twenty-five Monthly Volumes, crown 8vo. containing Photogravure Frontispieces printed on Japanese paper, bound in art canvas, gilt top, price 2*s*. 6*d*.; or in full limp leather, gilt edges, price 3*s*. 6*d*. per Volume.

NOW READY.

VOLUME V.

STANDARD EDITION

OF THE

COLLECTED WRITINGS

OF

THOMAS DE QUINCEY.

Now being issued in Fourteen Monthly Volumes, small crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, price 2*s*. 6*d*. each.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Nansen's Farthest North	235
Angling Literature	236
William Morris's Well at the World's End ...	237
Sir M. E. Grant Duff's Notes from a Diary ...	239
New Novels (The Scholar of Bygate; Lying Prophets; The Mystery of Dudley Horne; The Idol Maker; A Bit of a Fool; Tatterley; Wide Asunder as the Poles; Marie-Magdeleine)	241—242
Dante Literature	242
Short Stories	244
Our Library Table—List of New Books ...	244—245
The Spring Publishing Season; Sale; John Lamb's 'Poetical Pieces'	246
Literary Gossip	246
Science — Light Railways; Library Table; Astronomical Notes; Societies; Meetings; Gossip	248—250
Fine Arts—Sculptured Tombs of Hellas; Library Table; The Royal Academy; Gossip ...	250—253
Music—The Week; Obituary; Gossip; Performances Next Week	253—254
Drama—The Week; Library Table; The Elizabethan Drama; Gossip	254—256

LITERATURE

Fridtjof Nansen's 'Farthest North.' Maps and Numerous Illustrations. 2 vols. (Constable & Co.)

Dr. Nansen will ever occupy a conspicuous place in the record of those gallant struggles which have been made by man for generations past to reveal the mysteries of the ice-bound Polar regions. There have been expeditions the members of which have suffered greater hardships, others whose geographical discoveries and scientific observations have proved of equal importance, but none so boldly conceived and so successfully carried out.

No doubt Dr. Nansen has been favoured by that fortune which so often attends the brave, but his success is primarily due to the care with which he planned his great enterprise. It was an article by Prof. Mohn on the drift of the Jeanette which first aroused in him a desire to entrust his fortunes to that current which it was conjectured would carry him from the New Siberian Islands to the coast of Eastern Greenland, just as it had carried thither some of the wreckage of the doomed American vessel and much driftwood from Siberia. He brooded over this hypothesis, examined it in all its bearings, and the more he did so the more fully did he become convinced of its truth. At length, in 1890, he placed a matured scheme before the public. Arctic authorities, with few exceptions, looked upon his proposals as quite impracticable, if not foolhardy, and these adverse opinions he now quotes with evident satisfaction in a rapid survey of the methods of preceding Arctic expeditions, which forms an introduction to the two bulky volumes of his narrative. In his native country, fortunately, his proposals were hailed with enthusiasm. The Storthing voted 11,000*l.*, subsequently increased to 15,400*l.*, the remainder of the cost (9,500*l.*) being covered by private subscriptions, Dr. Nansen himself being one of the contributors.

The preparations for the voyage were made with exceptional foresight, and nothing seems to have been forgotten that could contribute to the success of the expedition or the comfort of the crew—unless it was that no insect powder was included among the ship's various stores. The Fram, upon which a vast amount of thought and labour had been expended, did credit to its builder, Mr. Colin Archer, and successfully withstood the vicissitudes of nearly three years' imprisonment within the Arctic ice.

The crew was the most select that had ever started upon an expedition of the kind. The leader himself may fairly be described as a landsman, and in the first gale encountered he stood seasick upon the bridge, "occupying himself in alternately making libations to Neptune and trembling for the safety of the boats and the men." The crew only numbered twelve, all told, and among these there were a lieutenant in the royal navy; four captains in the mercantile marine, of whom one acted as cook; a university graduate, who was rated as stoker; and the "keeper" of a lunatic asylum, a concession, possibly, to those critics who looked upon our modern Argonaut as "a shippe of fools." These thirteen men lived together in the miniature saloon of the Fram on a footing of perfect social equality; they all took their share in the duties of the ship, not even the commander claiming exemption, so that the Russians and Samoyeds who saw him at Khabarova working in his shirt sleeves maintained that he could not possibly be the "great person" which he had been represented to be, and yet strict discipline was maintained, and all orders were obeyed implicitly and with alacrity.

The progress of the Fram along the coast of Norway resembled a triumphal procession, for was not this the first great national naval expedition with a bold programme which had ever been undertaken? Passing vessels dipped their flags, old people and young cheered the Fram from points of vantage on the coast, bands of music awaited the vessel at the piers, and sumptuous banquets were offered to its occupants. The ubiquitous British tourist naturally put in an appearance. At Bergen

"I could hear a whole company of them besiege my cabin door while I was dressing, declaring 'they must shake hands with the doctor!' One of them actually peeped in through the ventilator at me, my secretary told me afterwards. A nice sight she must have had, the lovely creature! Report says she drew her head back very quickly. Indeed, at every place where we put in we were looked on somewhat as wild animals in a menagerie, for they peeped unceremoniously at us in our berths as if we had been bears and lions in a den, and we could hear them loudly disputing among themselves as to who was who, and whether those nearest and dearest to us, whose portraits hung on the walls, could be called pretty or not. When I had finished my toilette I opened the door cautiously, and made a rush through the gaping company. 'There he is, there he is!' they called to each other as they tumbled up the steps after me. It was no use, I was on the quay and in the carriage long before they had reached the deck."

Having taken on board the dogs supplied him by Baron Toll at Khabarova, Dr. Nansen left that place on August 4th, 1893, and from that time was lost to the world until August 13th last, when the news of his safe return was flashed by telegraph wires to all parts of the civilized world.

Fortune at first favoured the enterprise. The Kara Sea was crossed, and then Dr. Nansen crept along the coast of Siberia, adding very materially to the knowledge previously acquired by Nordenskjöld and his Russian predecessors. The season was getting late, and Dr. Nansen had almost reconciled himself to winter to the west of Cape Chelyuskin and devote this premature delay to an exploration of the Taimir peninsula. But on the 6th of September, the anniversary of his wedding-day, luck attended him once more. The dreaded cape was doubled, and a welcome excuse afforded for distributing punch and cigars and listening to the strains of a barrel-organ, the possibilities of which had become almost unlimited since the ingenious leader of the expedition had set about manufacturing zinc music-sheets, which could be substituted for those furnished by the maker of the instrument. The season was getting late, but

"the weather was still beautiful, and we were thoroughly enjoying the sunshine. It was such an unusual thing that Nordahl, when he was working among the coals in the hold in the afternoon, mistook a sunbeam falling through the hatch on the coal dust for a plank, and leaned hard on it. He was not a little surprised when he fell right through it on to some iron lumber."

As a dark edge to the northward indicated the presence of open water, Dr. Nansen thought it best to push ahead and not to lose time in calling for the dogs which were awaiting him at the mouth of the river Olenek. He already dreamed of reaching a high latitude in his first season when the unwelcome appearance of the edge of the ice, "long and compact, shining through the fog," roughly recalled him to the realities of his position. On September 25th, 1893, the Fram was frozen in, not to be released again until June 3rd, 1896.

Everything on board was made snug: a windmill was erected to drive the dynamo which supplied the electric light, and a snow hut was built upon the ice for the magnetic instruments. The crew being small, every one was kept usefully employed, whilst the doctor, who had "little else to do than doctoring the dogs," employed his leisure in editing the Framsjaa, a serio-comic illustrated newspaper, of which specimens are given to the reader. Cards proved a great resource, and there was an excellent library. The tediousness of the winter was, moreover, relieved by taking advantage of every opportunity for celebrating birthdays and other anniversaries, on which occasions the cook furnished banquets consisting of five courses. Even Constitution Day was not forgotten, and demonstrative banners claiming a "Normal Working Day" and "Universal Suffrage" were carried in solemn procession around the Fram and saluted by the ship's guns. In addition to all this there were bear hunts (for bears were met with on the ice far beyond the eighty-second parallel), sleigh drives, and foot races. One of these races was to have come off on November 5th, 1894 (a Sunday):—

"The expectation was great, but it turned out that, from excessive training during the few last days, the whole crew were so stiff in the legs that they were not able to move. We got our prizes all the same. One man was blindfolded, and he decided who was to have each cake as it was pointed at. This just arrangement met with general approbation, and we all thought it a pleasanter way of getting the prizes than running half a mile for them."

Yet, in spite of all these distractions and the general buoyancy of his spirits, there were times when the leader became despondent, and this happened more especially when the Fram, instead of progressing in the direction desired, was drifting to the south. On one of these occasions Dr. Nansen cries out:—

"My plan has come to nothing. That palace of theory which I reared in pride and self-confidence, high above all silly objections, has fallen like a house of cards at the first breath of wind. Build up the most ingenious theories, and you may be sure of one thing—that fact will defy them all. Was I so very sure? Yes, at times; but that was self-deception, intoxication. A secret doubt lurked behind all the reasoning. It seemed as though the longer I defended my theory, the nearer I came to doubting it. But no, there is no getting over the evidence of that Siberian driftwood."

There were times, too, when visions of the solemn pine forests, "the only confidants of his childhood," rose before his thoughts, and when every night he was at home in spirit:—

"The sun mounts up and bathes the ice-plains with its radiance. Spring is coming, but brings no joys with it. Here it is as lonely and cold as ever. One's soul freezes. Seven more years of such life—or say only four—how will the soul appear then? And she.....? If I dared to let my longings loose—to let my soul thaw. Ah! I long more than I dare confess."

All this while the Fram fully realized the high expectations which her designer and builder had formed of her qualities. After having already had some experience of her behaviour, Dr. Nansen writes:—

"The Fram has borne the ice-pressure splendidly, and allows herself to be lifted by it without so much as creaking, in spite of being more heavily loaded with coal and drawing more water than we reckoned on when we made our calculations; and this after her certain destruction and ours was prophesied by those most experienced in such matters."

Even the terrific pressure of January, 1895, when a ridge of ice advanced upon the Fram, and, creeping over the bulwarks, invaded the ship, so that everything was got ready—for the first time!—to abandon her, was a trial out of which she came triumphantly.

When once the Fram had taken a decided course towards the west, Dr. Nansen determined to leave her to her fate, and to travel over the ice towards the Pole. He has been blamed for "deliberately quitting his comrades on the ice-beset ship, when hundreds of miles away from any land"; but surely those on board were comparatively safe, while their leader risked his life in an ice journey of an extent never before attempted. The Fram, moreover, remained under the command of its experienced navigator, Capt. Sverdrup, whose report forms not the least interesting section of the second volume. The hardships of such a journey as Dr. Nansen and Lieut. Johansen undertook must be experienced to be appreciated. The surface as the pair advanced north grew worse and worse, and crossing ridge after ridge was terrific work. At last they found that the ice upon which they were travelling was slowly drifting southwards, as it had done in the case of Parry's expedition to the north of Spitzbergen. This discovery rendered their efforts hopeless. They had attained a latitude of 86° 14′ N., and were at least four hundred miles from the nearest land. Months were to pass before they came within sight of it:

"It has long haunted our dreams this land, and now it comes like a vision, like fairyland. Drift-white, it arches above the horizon like distant clouds which one is afraid will disappear every minute."

This was written on July 24th, 1895, but anxious days passed before they came close up to it, and only on August 14th "for the first time for two years [Dr. Nansen] had bare land under foot." The terrors and hardships of travelling over the drift-ice had been surmounted, but there awaited them a dreary winter, in a remote corner of Franz Josef Land, far away from the comforts of the Fram, isolated and solely dependent upon themselves. Yet Dr. Nansen tells us that on the whole they had quite a comfortable time in the hut which they had built themselves of stone and moss, and covered with walrus hides. The only thing they longed for was books! "How delightful our life on board the Fram appeared, when we had the whole library to fall back upon." Fortunately bears were numerous, and the explorers lived almost luxuriously upon bears' flesh and blubber.

At length, on May 19th, 1896, they turned their faces southward. A month afterwards the bark of a dog revealed the proximity of human beings, and a few hours later they found shelter under the hospitable roof of Mr. Jackson.

It might be imagined that the account of a voyage through a region of ice and snow, affording no opportunity for those descriptions of scenery, of towns and peoples, which constitute the charm of many of our books of travel, would prove tedious reading. And so it would, no doubt, in many instances. But Dr. Nansen is a writer of singular capacity; he enlists the sympathies of his readers, and makes their hearts go out to him. He imparts a charm to everything, whether he is speaking of the cheery life on board the Fram, the perils passed through, the beauties of nature, or his inmost reflections on things that are and are to be. The following description of an Arctic night breathes the spirit of poetry, and there are many passages equally striking:—

"Nothing more wonderfully beautiful can exist than an Arctic night. It is dreamland, painted in the imagination's most delicate tints; it is colour etherealized. One shade melts into the other, so that you cannot tell where one ends and the other begins, and yet they are all there. No forms—it is all faint, dreamy colour music, a far-away, long-drawn-out melody, on muted strings. Is not all life's beauty high and delicate and pure, like this night? Give it brighter colours and it is no longer so beautiful. The sky is like an enormous cupola, blue at the zenith, shading down into green, and then into lilac and violet at the edges. Over the ice-fields there are cold violet-blue shadows with lighter pink tints where a ridge here and there catches the last reflection of the vanished day. Up in the blue of the cupola shine the stars, speaking peace, as they always do, those unchanging friends. In the south stands a large red-yellow moon, encircled by a yellow ring and light golden clouds floating in the blue background. Presently the aurora borealis shakes over the vault of heaven its veil of glittering silver—changing now to yellow, now to green, now to red. It spreads, it contracts again, in restless change, next it breaks into waving, many-folded bands of shining silver, over which shoot billows of glittering rays, and then the glory vanishes. Presently it shimmers in tongues of flame over the very zenith; and then again it shoots a bright ray right up from the horizon, until the whole melts away in the moonlight, and it is as though one heard the sigh of a departing spirit. Here and there are left a few waving streamers of light, vague as a foreboding—they are the dust from the aurora's glittering cloak. But now it is growing again; new lightnings shoot up; and the endless game begins afresh. And all the time this utter stillness, impressive as the symphonies of infinitude."

The Athenæum was a supporter of earlier Arctic expeditions, and more especially of the search for Sir John Franklin—a search which it advocated at times when further effort seemed likely to be abandoned—and consequently it has peculiar pleasure in welcoming Dr. Nansen's volumes. The illustrations are numerous and well executed, and the translator has earned the thanks of all readers of the English edition. His name—or is the work by more than one hand?—should have been mentioned.

ANGLING LITERATURE.

The Compleat Angler. Edited, with an Introduction, by Andrew Lang. (Dent & Co.)
The Compleat Angler. Edited by Richard Le Gallienne. Parts I.–IX. (Lane.)
Musa Piscatrix. By John Buchan. (Lane.)
The Complete Angler. Being a Facsimile Reprint of the First Edition published in 1653. With a Preface by Richard Le Gallienne. (Stock.)

Ever since 1750, when Moses Browne, at the instigation of Johnson, edited 'The Compleat Angler,' which had been unnoticed since the last edition during the writer's lifetime in 1676, a stream of editions, varying in notes and engravings, had issued from the press, until in 1887 appeared "The Lea and Dove Illustrated Edition," being the hundredth, under the auspices of Mr. R. B. Marston. Since that year several more editions have been published at a rate which seems to show that before another fifty years have passed Walton will be in his two hundredth edition. Literary men and naturalists have not unreasonably liked to associate their names on the title-page with Walton and Cotton. Thus Sir J. Hawkins, Bagster, Major, Rennie, Sir H. Nicolas, Jesse, and if last, certainly not least as an angler, "Ephemera," have paid homage to 'The Compleat Angler.' Even an American, Dr. G. W. Bethune, has edited the book and brought his garland from the New World to lay on Walton's tomb. The homespun wisdom, the quick sympathy with nature, the air of sanctified content which Walton has breathed over angling, have naturally endeared his book to all anglers.

Ever since the much-lamented Thomas Westwood drew up his 'Chronicle of "The Compleat Angler"' the principle has been accepted that Walton's rough hodden-grey should not be overlaid with too many notes and illustrations. It must not be "overdressed," as Westwood says. Too often "Maudlin, the milkmaid, is tricked out in a gown of brocade with a mantle of cloth of gold." Mr. Lang with native good sense has borne this hint in mind. He has reprinted in beautiful form and type Walton's fifth edition, the last that was revised by the author. The reader is not annoyed with an apparatus of notes. A couple of pages of them—and they were hardly needed, as they merely give dates of the authors for the most part from whom Walton quoted—will be found at the end of the book. Mr. Lang has written some sixty characteristic pages of an introduction. Here will be found that love for nature and angling, that wise irony and playful humour which have endeared him to many readers. In a word, he has successfully caught the key-note of an editor of Walton which was sounded by Westwood. It is hopeless for the most keen-eyed searcher to expect to discover fresh facts about Walton. Sir H. Nicolas and many other investigators preclude this; but Mr. Lang pleasantly runs over the chief events of his life. There is the flavour of a tradition, but no more, that he was "a very sweet poet in his youth, and more than all in matters of love"; time, however, has made away with his verses, if they ever existed. What would we not give for a sonnet or two by Walton on Rachel Floud's eyebrow!

As is his wont, Mr. Lang waxes eloquent on the original edition of 'The Compleat Angler':—

"The book is one which only the wealthy collector can hope, with luck, to call his own. A small octavo, sold at eighteenpence, 'The Compleat Angler' was certain to be thumbed into nothingness, after enduring much from May showers, July suns, and fishy companionship. It is almost a wonder that any examples of Walton's and Bunyan's first editions have survived into our day. The little volume was meant to find a place in the bulging pockets of anglers, and was well adapted to that end. The work should be reprinted in a similar format; quarto editions are out of place."

As he sums up the life and character of Walton during the many years of his pious life, Mr. Lang has omitted to correct an amusing misprint: "Circumstances and inclination combined to make Walpole [sic] choose the fallentis semita vitæ." He accords Walton much praise for his biographies: if he cannot always away with the good old man's unquestioning faith, at least he can appreciate Walton's love of innocent quiet and contented goodness. From these 'Lives' of the angler he naturally considers 'The Compleat Angler' as a practical manual for fishing, contrasts it with other fishing literature, and compares the style of fishing of to-day with the methods recommended by 'The Compleat Angler.' Here Mr. Lang is naturally at his best; here he expatiates in pastures dear to his heart, which might be dappled with the birches of Tweedside and bounded by Border castles, while old-world ballads suggest themselves at every turn. Anglers must see what a treat awaits them in Mr. Lang's introduction, what need of patience have "honest Nat and R. Roe" when they go a-fishing:—

"O the tangles, more than Gordian, of gut on a windy day! O bitter east wind that bloweth down stream! O the young ducks that, swimming between us and the trout, contend with him for the blue duns in their season! O the hay grass behind us that entangles the hook! O the rocky wall that breaks it, the boughs that catch it, the drought that leaves the salmon stream dry, the floods that fill it with turbid impossible waters! Alas for the knot that breaks and for the iron that bends; for the lost landing-net and the gillie with the gaff that scrapes the fish! Izaak believed that fish could hear; if they can, their vocabulary must be full of strange oaths, for all anglers are not patient men. A malison on the trout that 'bulge' and 'tail,' on the salmon that 'jiggers' or sulks, or lightly gambols over and under the line. These things and many more we anglers endure meekly, being patient men, and a light world fleers at us for our very virtue."

The illustrations to this edition by Mr. E. J. Sullivan are quaint and numerous, and show the dress of the period in particular. On the other hand, Mr. E. H. New, in the parts of Mr. Le Gallienne's edition already published, has confined himself to fish, and especially to the topography of the book. Old houses in the Lea district have greatly caught his fancy, and are worthily translated into black and white. Beyond giving a calendar of fishing operations month by month, Mr. Le Gallienne does not seem to have touched his author, but the edition is charmingly printed on thick paper with rough edges in small quarto. This and the characteristic engravings will render it a favourite edition. It is pleasant to read in such a book of the great eel that was caught at Peterborough, a yard and three-quarters long, or of "the trout that is near an ell long which had his picture drawn and is now to be seen at mine host Rickabie's at the George in Ware," together with other of Walton's marvels.

Mr. Buchan has hit upon a happy idea in collecting together some of the most noteworthy angling poetry. The book is dedicated to Mr. Lang, and contains several of his neatest angling lyrics. John Dennys might have been more largely drawn upon. He has often been termed the laureate of the craft. Gay's verses and Sir J. Wootton's are well known to all lovers of the riverside. Several other "choice verses" are included, but more modern pieces might have been inserted with advantage. One more criticism and we have done. It would be wiser to print such an anthology in a much smaller form. Then the angler could have thrust it into his pocket or basket, and enjoyed these poems where they ought to be read, under Walton's "broad beech tree," or by the "honeysuckle hedge" at the side of the trout stream.

It is scarcely wonderful, when on the 2nd of December, 1896, a copy of the first edition of Walton sold for no less than 415*l*., that reprints of the book are also in continual request. Mr. Stock published a so-called facsimile reprint in 1876, which two years ago was rather scarce. The present facsimile, which is no more a real facsimile than its predecessor, is printed in a most convenient form for the pocket, while the print and paper are beautiful. Mr. Le Gallienne scarcely ventures to be glad that Cotton's second part is here absent; a good many readers will unfeignedly rejoice at it. No prettier edition can be desired; but a lover of the book might well grumble that on the cover it is lettered "The Complete Angler," instead of 'The Compleat Angler.' "I have neither a willingness nor leisure to say more," writes the author in his address to the reader, "then wish thee a rainy evening to read this book in and that the east wind may never blow when thou goest a fishing." Each of these editions will bring joy to the literary angler.

The Well at the World's End: a Tale. By William Morris. 2 vols. (Longmans & Co.)

Far away, at the verge of the "Ocean-sea," beyond the "Wood Perilous," beyond "Swevenham" and "Goldburg" and the "Castle of Abundance" and the "Thirsty Desert"—nay, even on the other side of "Utterness" itself—there lies at the World's End a well over which are written these words:—

"Ye who have come a long way to look at me, drink of me, if ye think that ye be strong enough in desire to bear length of days: or else drink not; but tell your friends and the kindreds of the earth how ye have seen a great marvel."

Though for ages upon ages men and women, thinking themselves "strong enough in desire to bear length of days," have been yearning to reach this well (which is none other than that famous "Fountain of Youth" that man has been dreaming of ever since his eyes were first opened to the busy wonder of life and the mysterious peace of death), few have been those who knew the taste of its waters. We, for our part, doubt whether any person ever did really succeed in drinking a full draught from that fountain save one, the writer of this beautiful story, William Morris himself, the illustrious poet whom we have lately lost, and, with him, lost how much of the romance and the colour of life?

But it was hardly by seeking it that Morris lit upon the well. It was by the workings of the natural instincts within him. No child that in its half-conscious gambols ever came more easily, more instinctively, upon the beautiful things that could please its eyes than William Morris came upon the waters of the Fountain of Youth. Nay, it seemed as though the Well at the World's End was brought to him. No need to travel (except in imagination) across the "Wood Perilous" and the "Thirsty Desert" in quest of the Fountain of Youth if the Well at the World's End comes bubbling up at your very feet as you design your wall-papers at Queen's Square or Hammersmith, or superintend your tapestry-looms at Merton, or examine your upholsteries in Oxford Street, or write your poems wherever and whensoever you can find half-an-hour's breathing space from a score of different kinds of the work that is your only sport.

Always finds and never seeks

This is why Morris's position among the poets of the world is unique. He (though a poet) stands for all time as the very type of youth. Though a poet, we say; for, as a rule, few people age more quickly than does your poet. And no wonder; for, like the nightingale of the Romanies, the more he is pricked by the thorn on which it is his fate to sit, the louder and the longer does he sing. Shakspeare lamented the forty winters that had besieged his brow; Coleridge called himself old at the same age; Byron was old at thirty. But no other poet of whom we have any record was ever at any period of his life so young that he could have written this story. Compare Morris's delight in the beauty of the earth, in the birds of the wild-wood, with that of any other poet's delight in these things; compare the talk of the lovers beneath the trees in this story with anything to be found in any of the poems of such venerable bards as Chatterton, Shelley, and Keats. If Morris at sixty had not reached the mature age when he could have written thus:—

> There was a listening fear in her regard,
> As if calamity had but begun;
> As if the vanward clouds of evil days
> Had spent their malice, and the sullen rear
> Was with its stored thunder labouring up, assuredly at twenty-four Keats was too old to have been able to write as Morris writes in this volume of the beauty of earth and the joy of life. What was called the "melancholy tone" of 'The Earthly Paradise' was but the expression of his regret that even the waters from the Well at the World's End were not powerful enough to enable the drinker to enjoy for ever the beauty of Earth and the witchery of Woman.

Matthew Arnold, in a noble prosaic line which is often called poetical, says of Sophocles that he > Saw Life steadily and saw it whole.

This steadiness and wholeness of vision is the very opposite of the youthful way of seeing life. It is in brilliant little pictures coloured with beauty that youth sees the world; and it is thus that Morris always saw it. Indeed, there is not a weakness in his work and not a beauty which does not spring from that ebullience of youth which he drank and was always drinking from the Well at the World's End.

When Keats wrote,

> Beauty is truth, truth beauty; that is all
> Ye know on earth and all ye need to know, the words did not really comprise his philosophy of life, as a score of passages in his letters will show; but of Morris's law of life these lines are a full expression. Upon this axiom that "beauty is truth, truth beauty," his social theories, no less than his artistic, were based. That generous heart of his became after middle age deeply touched with pity for the people—touched because he saw how cruelly the "folk" were shut out from the Palace Beautiful which nature intended them to enjoy; and he ran his head against the closed gates of the palace (though to him they had been thrown wide open), and beat them with his hands, and cried, "Let the folk in—'Arry and 'Arriet and all!" Whether his preachings from the Socialistic tub of Hammersmith Broadway did good or ill—whether they opened the eyes of the East-End to the iniquities of the middle-class patrons of Tottenham Court Road chairs, tables, and wall-papers, as some think they did, or merely turned good-humoured vulgarians into sour, morose, and insolent ones, as others affirm—is a question altogether beyond our scope here. The nobility and the beauty of his intentions and his aspirations none has ever challenged, and every word he uttered was that of a generous-hearted youth who saw life not steadily and whole, but unsteadily and partially and in little pictures. The artistic self-indulgence—the self-pleasing whim—which is the characteristic of youth is the basis of all Morris's work as poet, as artist, and as doctrinaire. Though with the full conviction that if the world did not join him in his tastes it was so much the worse for the world, he worked always to please himself. Most other poets, after youth is gone, arrange a compromise, a modus vivendi between themselves and the taste of the time. "A man must needs be more like the age in which he lives than he is like his father and mother," says the Chinese sage. It is youth that knows not the word "compromise," nor did Morris know that word. Whatsoever work pleased himself he did, and if the public liked it, so much the better for the public. At one time, when Browning was his hero in poetry, it gave him pleasure to write rugged and more or less obscure dramatic idyls. These he produced, heedless as to whether he would or would not please anybody but himself and his friends. Afterwards he found a new pleasure in writing in the very opposite style to that of his first volume, long narrative poems in smooth Chaucerian measures, but without securing Chaucer's nearness of atmosphere. The public might or might not care for such a return to old forms; that was their matter. After this, having become fascinated by the Northern sagas, he found a still newer pleasure in writing a kind of prose poetry, bristling with archaic locutions and archaic words. Taking no heed of newspaper gibes about "Wardour Street English," &c., he continued to write them till death stayed his hand.

The step from this fancy of writing in obsolete English to printing books in an obsolete type was not a wide one; and soon no printing gave him pleasure that was not either in black-letter or in some type akin to black-letter. At the root of all his beautiful work, in a word, there lies the whim of pleasing himself which is the chief characteristic of youth—of extreme youth. Whether this self-indulgence will or will not prevent his work from being accepted, as it would otherwise have been, by posterity is one of the questions which time alone can answer. Black-letter we know can never be revived. Man has already awakened to the fact that, wonderful as have been the few thousand years of his past, his future of a million years is going to be more wonderful still. Posterity will be far more likely to favour some kind of phonetic symbol that saves time than the type which Morris loved. And what about the archaic diction and locutions in which he delighted? Beautiful, to our minds at least, as is this "Wardour Street English," it is after all an artifice, and, as such, does not strengthen, but weakens the full illusion which the worker in imaginative prose is supposed to seek. The moment that in any imaginative picture artifice is obtruded where even art is weak unless she disguises herself, illusion (which must be always born of the artist's sincerity) begins to grow dim. Had the verbal texture of these stories not been imitated from books, but been the natural and inevitable expression of the writer's mood, the combined beauties of the old literary temper and the new, of which the stories are so full, would have made them surpass in charm most other things in imaginative literature. But not even the movement of Morris's splendid imagination can prevent us from feeling as we read that the raconteur is a modern man whose natural speech is modern English, and who is indulging here the self-pleasing whim of a marvellous boy. The truth seems to be, as the present writer more than once remarked to Morris, that if he really wished to throw around the reader the veil of full illusion which most imaginative artists in prose endeavour to throw around him, he should have written these stories not in the epic, but in the autobiographic form. Then the archaisms that are interspersed in the narrative would not have seemed to the reader more artificial, and therefore more insincere, than those in the dialogue of Scott's novels. The accent, though strange, would have appeared the natural accent of a dramatic character. This is easily seen if we contrast the beautiful realism of the dialogue between the characters who live in the story before us with the movement, trammelled if fascinating, of the narrative portions surrounding them. Here is an example of an admirable dialogue between the hero and Bull Shockhead, one of the wandering band of brigands who, judging from their use of the patterin, would seem to be gipsies:—

"Early next morning Ralph arose and called Bull Shockhead to him, and said: 'So it is, Bull, that thou art my war-taken thrall.' Bull nodded his head, but frowned therewithal. Said Ralph: 'If I bid thee aught that is not beyond reason, thou wilt do it, wilt thou not?' 'Yea,' said Bull, surlily. 'Well,' quoth Ralph, 'I am going a journey east-away, and I may not have thee with me, therefore I bid thee take this gold and go free with my good will.' Bull's face lighted up, and the eyes glittered in his face; but he said: 'Yea, king's son, but why wilt thou not take me with thee?' Said Ralph: 'It is a perilous journey, and thy being with me will cast thee into peril and make mine more. Moreover, I have an errand, as thou wottest, which is all mine own.' Bull pondered a little, and then said: 'King's son, I was thinking at first that our errands lay together, and it is so; but belike thou sayest true that there will be less peril to each of us if we sunder at this time. But now I will say this to thee, that henceforth thou shalt be as a brother to me, if thou wilt have it so, and if ever thou comest amongst our people, thou wilt be in no danger of them: nay, they shall do all the good they may to thee.' Then he took him by the hand and kissed him, and he set his hand to his gear and drew forth a little purse of some small beast's skin that was broidered in front with a pair of bull's horns: then he stooped down and plucked a long and tough bent from the grass at his feet (for they were talking in the garden of the hostel) and twisted it swiftly into a strange knot of many plies, and, opening the purse, laid it therein, and said: 'King's son, this is the token whereby it shall be known amongst our folk that I have made thee my brother: were the flames roaring about thee, or the swords clashing over thine head, if thou cry out, I am the brother of Bull Shockhead, all those of my kindred who are near will be thy friends and thy helpers. And now I say to thee farewell; but it is not altogether unlike that thou mayst hear of me again in the furthest East.'"

But then comes the question, What kind of illusion did Morris really seek in these stories—stories which, notwithstanding a certain affinity with the methods of the Sagamen, must be characterized as a new form of imaginative art? In judging of the success or non-success of anything in imaginative literature the first question to ask and the first to answer is this, What is the nature of the imaginative belief that the writer asks of the reader? Does he endeavour to compass the full illusion which is effected by the modern novel, or only that partial illusion which the poet seeks? While nearness is the quest of the worker in prose fiction, remoteness may be, and often is, the legitimate quest of the poet. These stories are in atmosphere far more remote than the 'Canterbury Tales.' Chaucer's quest was nearness of suggestion, and this is what makes him so much more modern than a prose-writer like Malory, so much more modern than a poet like Spenser. Even when Morris modelled his work in some measure upon Chaucer's, he never achieved Chaucer's nearness of atmosphere: perhaps he never tried to do so. It would almost seem that, in order to find a substitute for that aid which metre can give to the poet whose object is to produce a sense of remoteness, Morris in these stories goes out of his way to surround the dramatic action with all kinds of improbabilities. When Shakspeare introduced lions into the forest of Arden, it was not done in order to produce remoteness; for the acted drama of the modern world, whether written in verse or prose, is unlike the acted drama of Greece in this, that it takes a place between prose fiction, whose quest is full illusion, and unadulterated poetry, whose quest is partial illusion. Shakspeare introduced his lions because the audience of his time would scarcely have felt that a forest in foreign lands would be complete without them. But why does Morris introduce lions (and apparently the entire fauna of Africa) into European forests, unless it is to secure remoteness, and so give a reason for the archaic nature of his form? If, however, it was Morris's desire, as we are suggesting, to achieve the partial illusion of poetry, another question arises in connexion with 'The Well at the World's End': Is there any proper length for a narrative? and if so, what is it? Although very much longer than 'The Roots of the Mountains,' 'The Well at the World's End' is entirely without the grand pathetic motive of that story. After the assassination of the hero's first mistress, the Lady of the Castle of Abundance, when it has become evident what the peripeteia is going to be, the story becomes a mere string of incidents which could have been shortened at almost any point. And here one of the most noticeable of all Morris's artistic gifts, his fecundity of invention of incident, leads him astray.

In judging of the proper length of any work in imaginative literature, it seems necessary to illustrate our meaning by examples taken from the two opposite kinds of prose fiction. Two of the greatest masterpieces in the prose fiction of the nineteenth century are very likely 'Vanity Fair' on the one hand and 'Undine' on the other. Long as is 'Vanity Fair,' it is not by a single sentence too long; and short as is 'Undine,' it is not by a single sentence too short. With regard to 'Vanity Fair,' so complete has been the illusion achieved by the writer, so entirely has the reader accepted the characters as real, that he reads the last lines with a feeling of regret that they are the last; he wants to follow still further the adventures of that wonderful Becky Sharp round whom the other characters cluster. And in the same way, short as is 'Undine,' the reader feels on reading the last lines that to have said more would have tended to weaken rather than to strengthen the reader's imaginative belief. Now in the story before us Morris's method is as entirely that of poetry of the remote kind as in the stories of 'The Earthly Paradise.' He seems, as we have said, to go out of his way to show that his quest is the partial illusion which the poet alone is, except in the case of Chaucer, expected to secure. And yet, after having taken all this trouble to make the reader feel that he is in fairyland, Morris spins out his story into a poem as long as a realistic novel of modern life. He seems to forget that, howsoever lovely a fairy story may be, human life is much too short for readers to want to read it at such length as this. A mere string of adventures such as these would have had far more effect had they been told at a third of the length.

That nothing can possibly be simpler than the main thread of the story we can show in a few words. Rumours of the Well at the World's End and stories concerning the many people who have perished in trying to find it, and of the few who have drunk of its waters, reached Ralph, the younger son of King Peter of Upmeads, and fired him with the wish to drink of it. And one day he stole away from his father and mother in quest of the well. Scarcely had he left home when Chance or Providence or Fate threw him across a maiden of the yeoman class, Ursula, who also had a desire to seek the well. This maiden attracted Ralph, and no wonder, for she was as fascinating as any of the women to be found in any of Mr. Morris's poems:—

"And she went hither and thither about the hall and into the buttery and back, putting away the victual and vessels from the board and making as if she heeded him not: and Ralph looked on her, and deemed that each way she moved was better than the last, so shapely of fashion she was; and again he bethought him of the Even-song of the High House at Upmeads, and how it befitted her; for she went barefoot after the manner of maidens who work afield, and her feet were tanned with the sun of hay harvest, but as shapely as might be; but she was clad goodly withal, in a green gown wrought with flowers."

But if Ursula made an impression upon Ralph, he made upon her a deeper impression still; for although she felt her passion for him to be hopeless, she straightway abandoned the lover she then had in order to find the Well at the World's End and so become worthy of Ralph. For the waters of this well have the power of transfiguring the drinker both body and soul, and give him the power of dominating over mankind by force of wisdom as well as youth and beauty.

After leaving Ursula, Ralph remembered for a time her charms; but he passed through many adventures, and at length encountered a siren who completely drove out of his mind all memory of Ursula. This was the famous Lady of the Castle of Abundance, one of the few who had found the Well at the World's End and drunk of it, and become in consequence irresistible to all human kind of the male sex, but extremely disliked by the female. In Ralph, however, she encountered her match, for if she conquered the men through the magical power she had imbibed at the well, he conquered all the women through his natural endowments of beauty, strength, and chivalry, and especially by his freedom from any desire to conquer them. And these two lived together as lovers in the wild-wood, and she undertook to conduct him to the well. The descriptions of their life during this period are extremely beautiful. Their bliss, however, soon came to an end, for one day, after Ralph had left her to shoot deer for their dinner, the husband and tyrant from whom she had fled found her and slew her. Notwithstanding his grief, Ralph after a while pursued his quest of the well; and now that the siren was dead, his thoughts would again recur to Ursula, who, as was pretty broadly indicated during his travels, was on the same road as himself, and was very likely to cross his path, as in fact she does. After many adventures and escapes from many perils, they reached the Well at the World's End and drank the waters, ending their days as King and Queen of Upmeads.

But whether or not these beautiful stories are apt sometimes to become over-long, the reader will say, "Would that the beloved storyteller were with us still to tell new stories—tell them by the score, nay, by the hundred, if it pleased him to do so: would that William Morris were with us still!"

Notes from a Diary, 1851–1872. By the Right Hon. Sir Mountstuart E. Grant Duff. 2 vols. (Murray.)

Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff has compiled these two volumes of extracts from his diary on the principle of leaving behind him one of the most good-natured books of its kind ever printed. That end he has certainly fulfilled, though there is enough salt to redeem the production from insipidity. Many of his stories are old; some of them are more than a little inaccurate—for example, he places President Lincoln's assassination before, not after, the conclusion of the Civil War; but as stories they quite pass muster. Besides, he has known almost as many people of celebrity as Lord Houghton, and witnessed many memorable scenes. The book would have been improved had there been a little less botany, and fewer entries of purely domestic interest. We fear, too, that this degenerate age does not altogether share Sir Mountstuart's ingenuous belief that no gentleman's library can be considered complete without the 'Elgin Speeches.' Still dulness is commendably absent from his pages, and wit and wisdom are reasonably plentiful. It is exactly the book to pick up at the club for an hour before dinner.

We may pass over the diarist's visit, as a young man full of Balliol, to Italy and Eastern Europe. The following estimate by that sagacious person Mountstuart Elphinstone is, however, worth quoting:—

"We talked about conversation. He put Luttrell's above that of all whom he had known.

Talleyrand's was very rich in anecdote, but by no means witty. Of Sydney Smith he spoke with very great regard, treating his wit as merely the flower of his wisdom."

Hayward, on the other hand, used to consider Sydney Smith's table-talk much superior to Luttrell's, and the specimens that survive certainly bear him out.

Sir Mountstuart had a happy power of picking up friends on the Continent. The following conversation with Ranke, the historian, whose sympathies were with Russia in the Crimean struggle, is dated 1854 :—

"After dinner I had a long and somewhat lively conversation with Ranke. He said that Germany had nothing to fear from Russia—more from England ; and that if we succeeded, all we should do would be to destroy an infant civilisation. 'Ah ! we love you,' he said, 'and feel with you far more than with Russia, but we cannot agree in all things. There are some differences between our interests.' Later he added : 'To me the chief interest of England is, that she is Old England.'"

Sir Mountstuart's criticism of Maurice's preaching is absurdly pragmatic :—

"Went, as usual about this time, to hear F. D. Maurice preach at Lincoln's Inn. I suppose I must have heard him, first and last, some thirty or forty times, and never carried away one clear idea, or even the impression that he had more than the faintest conception of what he himself meant. Aubrey de Vere was quite right when he said, that listening to him was like eating pea-soup with a fork, and Jowett's answer was not less to the purpose, when I asked him what a sermon, which Maurice had just preached before the University, was about, and he replied—'Well ! all that I could make out was that to-day was yesterday, and this world the same as the next.' John Stuart Mill, who had known him early in life, said to me about this time, 'Frederick Maurice has philosophical powers of the highest order, but he spoils them all by torturing everything into the Thirty-nine Articles.' The fact that he should have exerted a distinctly stimulating and liberalising influence over many more or less remarkable people, is sufficiently strange ; but it must be remembered that he was a noble fellow, with immense power of sympathy, and an ardent, passionate nature, which often led him to right conclusions in spite of his hopelessly confused reasoning. To listen to him was to drink spiritual champagne."

In February, 1858, he entered the House as member for the Elgin Burghs, and had a strange confidence from a disappointed candidate :—

"Had a curious conversation with Thackeray at the Cosmopolitan about a French invasion, à propos of the fiery Colonels, with regard to whom there was a good deal of talk at this time. He said, alluding to his recent candidature at Oxford :—'The chief reason why I wished to be in Parliament was, that I might stand up once a year, and tell my countrymen what will happen when the French invade us.'"

Next year we find him in Paris, frequenting Madame de Circourt's receptions, meeting Falloux, and on terms of intimacy with Émile Ollivier, at that time furiously hostile to the Emperor ; but he made little of Cousin :—

"It was M. de Falloux who said of Louis Napoleon, with great truth, 'Il ne sait pas la différence entre rêver et penser.' He asked much about England, and was afraid of the smallness of our majorities, and the difficulty of forming a strong government. Dined with Madame Mohl, meeting, amongst others, Cousin, who was very angry with England, because, he said, she was thwarting French policy in Italy, and insulting France, 'Et nous n'insultons personne.' This sort of foolish talk seemed to me habitual with him, and I have never been able to understand on what foundation his great social fame rested."

An amusing anecdote of Cousin is the following :—

"At night Taine, dining with us, told a story of Cousin's enlarging to Jules Simon upon the frightful difficulty of the Timaeus, with which he imagined himself to have been struggling, then suddenly exclaiming,—as the real state of the case flashed into his mind—'Ah ! I recollect, it was you who translated it.'"

Quite ten years before the Franco-Prussian war he heard Prévost Paradol's prediction :—

"Long talk in Paris with Prévost Paradol. He said, amongst other things, 'Well, France seems to me between two great fortunes ; either we shall have peace and improved government at home, or we shall have war and the Rhine.' 'Improved government at home,' I said, 'by all means, but what do you want with the Rhine?' 'Oh,' he rejoined, 'our present frontier is a very bad one.' 'We in England,' said I, 'are not accustomed to think very highly of the advantages of a river frontier.' 'I daresay not,' he said, 'for God has given you the best of all frontiers, the sea ; but if France had the Rhine, even without the fortresses on its banks, Europe united could not get across it.'"

In the same year the diarist was at Chambéry :—

"At Chambéry, where saw the grotesque monument to the famous adventurer De Boigne, who disciplined Scindiah's battalions. Many years ago, I think in 1823, my father stopped at this place to visit him. In the course of conversation De Boigne said, 'Financial difficulty ! The Company can never have any financial difficulty ; they have always one certain resource open to them.' 'What is that?' asked my father eagerly. 'Plonder China,' was the characteristic reply."

Here are some characteristic outputs of Bulwer Lytton's fancy :—

"Introduced at the Athenaeum by Hayward to Bulwer Lytton, and very curious conversation. He talked of Foster, the Medium, in whom he seems to believe. He thinks that his feats are not juggling, but that his brain has some power of putting itself en rapport with other brains. The markings on the arm he compared to the Middle Age Stigmata received by Saints, and Sigillationes received by sinners. He had thought of his old housekeeper, Sophy Tate, and Foster had guessed her name. We talked of Stanhope's 'Life of Pitt,' and Hayward remarked that no man wrote so above himself as Stanhope. Lytton said 'No man writes above himself, but most men are very unequal. Campbell the poet, for instance, always struck me as very tiresome, till one night when he met me at the door of this Club, and asked me to go home and sup. I had only just dined, and at first refused, but seeing that he was hurt, I agreed to go. We were tête-à-tête, and from ten to half-past one he poured out a stream of conversation of the most surpassingly brilliant kind.'"

We have no wish to discount the pleasure of these volumes by undue quotation, and feel bound, therefore, to omit some capital talks with Carlyle, Dickens, Sainte-Beuve, and many other remarkable men. Let us rejoin Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff in Poland, whither he went to study that eternal question, just when the last rebellion was drawing to a close. Readers of his 'Studies in European Politics' need hardly be reminded how sane was his Liberalism, and his diary proves him to have been untiring in his quest for information. The same sobriety of judgment characterizes his forecast of Free Italy's future, which is here reprinted from the North British Review.

This pleasing little retort by Fuad Pasha is, so far as we are aware, a treasure trove of Sir Mountstuart's own :—

"It was Fuad who some years ago said in Arthur Russell's hearing to Lord Palmerston, when the latter expressed the opinion that nothing would go right in Turkey till they got rid of polygamy, 'Ah ! milord, nous ferons comme vous, nous présenterons l'une et nous cacherons les autres.'"

The diarist rates Lord Strangford a little above his deserts it seems to us :—

"At Strangford's funeral. He is buried at Kensal Green, under the same monument as his brother, who, although very unlike him, was in a different way as gifted. I have heard that Disraeli once said—'George Smythe is more like Bolingbroke than any Englishman who has lived since his times.' In his own line the last Lord Strangford was unique, and up to this date the place which he left vacant in European journalism has never been filled."

The book abounds with Houghton anecdotes, but most of them, or their twin brothers, have already appeared in print. This sneer of Kinglake's at his old aversion, however, is fresh and hideously clever :—

"Amongst others, Kinglake dined with us. Speaking of the narrative of Sédan by Napoleon the Third, which lately appeared in the newspapers, he said to me, 'It read like nothing but an account of the 1st of September by an escaped partridge.'"

We have not said much about Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff's own reflections, because he is content, for the most part, to record. The following passage will show that his notes on travel are marked by knowledge and sensibility :—

"The sun had risen over the hills on the Asiatic shore before we ran between Sestos and Abydos, and drew near to the town which Europeans call the Dardanelles, but which the Turks, with their genius for the commonplace in names, call Tchanak Kalessi, or Pottery Castle, from the flourishing manufacture of earthenware which exists there. Presently a boat came alongside, bringing one of the English residents of the town, to whose kind keeping we had been consigned by friends. Here, after a visit to the Governor, a friendly and hale old man who commanded the Turkish fleet when the Allies engaged the seaward batteries of Sebastopol, we spent half an hour in inspecting the far-famed Castle of Asia, whose monster guns still bear the marks of the balls which struck them when Duckworth, not too wisely, ran up past them to Constantinople. .....The military Pasha gave us a large boat with fourteen rowers, and we were soon afloat. After a row of about two hours and a half, we approached a quiet little bay with a shelving shore, white cliffs to the left, and a sandy hill to the right. We touched land and stood upon the soil of the Troad, for the sandy hill to the right was the eastern face of the Rhaetian promontory. It was curious to think, as we drew near the beach, how many and how different were the travellers in whose wake we were following. Hither turned aside Xerxes on his way to attack Athens, and Alexander on his way to conquer Persia ; so did Mindarus, the Spartan, the hero of the famous and characteristically laconic despatch ; Ovid came also as a youth with his tutor Macer, and Germanicus, and Julia, the daughter of Augustus, who, by the bye, was all but drowned in the Scamander. These are a few, and only a few, of the famous personages of antiquity whom we know to have visited the Troad for the same purpose for which we were now landing on its shores."

Within the limits which he deliberately set himself, Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff has put together a most agreeable piece of work.

NEW NOVELS.

The Scholar of Bygate. By Algernon Gissing. 3 vols. (Hutchinson & Co.)

Bygate was one of those dark mysterious houses that are haunted (especially in novels) by the evil reputations of their owners. Sibbald Crozier, vaguely called a Scholar because he possessed a number of books, some of which he was supposed to read, was a stilted and supercilious nondescript, or so his cousin Adelina described him; but his father, according to the same authority, was "a positively ferocious savage." As Sibbald says, however, "her eye never saw a true thing, and her mind never conceived one." They gave each other queer characters at Bygate. Adelina was an orphan, or thought herself an orphan; and when she came to live with the Croziers she certainly had a most discouraging reception. This is all preliminary to the real plot, which is worked out with considerable skill. Some parts are more natural and human than others. Sibbald, for instance, changes his opinion of his cousin, perhaps without much reason, but their relations are of the most romantic and pathetic sort; and the character of old Crozier is well conceived and drawn. There are sundry North-Country sketches sufficiently true to life; and it is unnecessary to say that his readers may usually count on Mr. Algernon Gissing for an attractive story.

Lying Prophets. By Eden Phillpotts. (Innes & Co.)

This book comes as an agreeable surprise. Hitherto Mr. Phillpotts has appeared chiefly as an exponent either of "the new humour" or of so-called "realism"—brutal stories crudely told. It seemed as if his undoubted power of story-telling was hopelessly enthralled by the influences of the less estimable productions of America and France; but to the satisfaction of all who desire the wholesome development of English fiction, he has in his present book shown a grasp of the truth that violence is not strength nor paradox originality. He has devised a story which would have afforded ample opportunities for a writer of the pornographic school to show his mettle, and has treated it with a tenderness and reticence that deserve all praise. With a full disposition to allow to nature all her rights, he has shown no mercy to the claim often put forward on her behalf to override man's duty to his fellows, whether men or women; and he has contrived to do this in the mere development of his narrative without a suggestion of the parenthetic pulpit. The scene of the story is laid at Newlyn, a place where the finest flower of modern culture, or what is apt to hold itself for such, is brought into contact with a local population still in many respects at a pretty primitive stage, living much as its forefathers have done for centuries, feeling the same wants, pondering the same thoughts. Religion is a strong influence in the lives of these people; but though it has adopted Christian phraseology, it is in many cases a fetishism which, but for the restraints of the law, would be hardly less ferocious than that of their supposed Phœnician ancestors. In this creed, as expounded by the "Luke Gospellers," among whom her father is a tower of strength, the heroine, Joan Tregenza, has been brought up; but it has never taken possession of her, and she turns readily enough to the æsthetic pantheism propounded by John Barron the artist. The association between them begins harmlessly enough, by Joan's consenting to stand as the figure in an outdoor picture which Barron is painting. Of anything like love the man has not a grain in his composition. "You know my rule of life," he says to a friend, "to sacrifice all things to mood." In other words, he is a selfish animal, feeble mentally, and, as it happens, physically also. Novel-readers may have noticed how this type has superseded the muscular hero of twenty or thirty years ago. There is a parable herein, but we do not propose to develope it now. We should like to say a word in praise of Uncle Chirgwin, the kindly optimist, who makes an admirable foil to the bitter Calvinist, Michael Tregenza; and of Michael's wife Thomasin, a very subtly-studied character, rough-tongued, avaricious, but with a heart of a kind beneath all. But the book has so many points that it is impossible to do more than touch on one or two. Nothing so powerful has appeared in this line since 'Esther Waters'; and curiously enough, in spite of its tragic ending, the reader lays down Mr. Phillpotts's book with less of gloom in his heart than Mr. Moore's story inspired. If Mr. Phillpotts can keep up to this level he will do.

The Mystery of Dudley Horne. By Florence Warden. (White & Co.)

If the incidents of Miss Florence Warden's "mystery" were run off the reel in five minutes, without phrase or fashion, they would not appear to promise a sober or substantial story. There is a murder, almost followed by another; the mystery is concocted out of a variety of foolish acts and notions, for which cerebral disease has to account; Mrs. Higgs turns out to be a man; and there are other things equally difficult to swallow if taken in an uncompromising lump. But Miss Warden does not ask her readers to swallow them in a lump. The tissue of the veil on which these spots are stuck at intervals is pretty enough; and looking at the tissue rather than at the spots, one may spend half an hour in pleasant anticipation, and be rewarded at last by the explanation of the mystery.

The Idol Maker. By Adeline Sergeant. (Hutchinson & Co.)

Miss Sergeant has certainly made a bold venture in selecting for the hero of her new story an insignificant, ill-bred youth, a physical coward and a moral fanatic, such as Perry Wilson. And in the first part of the book she lays such unsparing stress upon his disadvantages of mind and person that it is as difficult for the reader as for the young man's own relations to realize the beautiful if distorted nature that lies beneath his unprepossessing exterior. Perry Wilson—or Sir Francis Dysart, as he should be called—obstinately believes that his vocation is to be a missionary. Certainly the rôle of successful claimant to the Dysart title and estates is less to his tastes and very elementary capacities than the hewing to pieces of the images of the heathen. But by the irony of fate his uncle and guardian is surreptitiously a manufacturer of these same images, and the complications induced by such a situation go far in themselves to fill a volume. Miss Sergeant, however, prefers a well-covered canvas, and there are two quite separate romances in the Dysart family at the Towers, which are bent out of their natural course to revolve round the figure of the young martyr. This at least seems the most obvious explanation of the misunderstanding between Nora Dysart and her lover, as foolish and unnecessary as Nora's subsequent conduct. Neither is Lady Dysart a convincing woman, nor good enough for Lydiard, the quiet, strong type of man that Miss Sergeant knows how to paint. The story is long-winded, but it contains pleasant reading, and in the difficult and pathetic personality of Perry Wilson the author has achieved something of a success.

A Bit of a Fool. By Sir Robert Peel, Bart. (Downey & Co.)

Sir Robert Peel tells with much vigour the story of a young man of fortune who goes to the bad and comes back again. The tempters, male and female, who lead the young man the way he should not go are all described with complete frankness, and the fact that their victim is very willing and even eager to be led only adds to the truthfulness of the picture of real life which the author lays before his readers. It is a picture into which a good deal of vice is introduced, but in a way that is not vicious. The charms and vices of Nellies and Mrs. St. John-Elliots are vivaciously presented, perhaps with an excess of detail, but there is no sickly gloating over these things. The standard of morality is not high; it is the easy standard of what is called a man of the world, one who is apt to say he likes to have no nonsense, to take things as he finds them, and to wish not to be different from others in his position. Every one knows what this means. The merits of Sir Robert Peel's book are that he has succeeded in keeping the same tone throughout, that all his characters are given to the life, and that his tale is written in a vivacious style, with no small amount of literary skill.

Tatterley: the Story of a Dead Man. By Tom Gallon. (Hutchinson & Co.)

Tatterley was Caleb Fry's man, and so like his master in bodily presence, except that he wore a patch over one useless eye, that it was easy for Caleb, when Tatterley died, to take to his shoes, his patch, and his shabby clothes, and pass amongst his old acquaintance for his servant. At least Mr. Tom Gallon tells us so, and for the sake of his lively and interesting story it is quite worth our while to believe it. Caleb was a rich old curmudgeon who had cheated many, but never made a friend. Amongst others he had cheated his nephew, appropriating his money and allowing him to grow up in poverty. On the night of Tatterley's death he had made a will, leaving his money to a selfish cousin, Hector Kindon: and it was under these circumstances that he suddenly resolved to bury his servant as Caleb Fry, and to watch at leisure the development of events. Such is the basis of the story told by this youngest recruit of the still surviving school of Dickens—a somewhat improbable, melodramatic situation, which leads to a strong contrast of selfish and unselfish characters under extraordinary conditions, and an excessive display of pathos and humour. The reader can argue out for himself what happens to the selfish Hector, to the unselfish nephew and his devoted sweetheart, and to the mock Tatterley, who, of course, lays aside his old self and acts with all the judgment and patience of Martin Chuzzlewit the elder.

Wide Asunder as the Poles. By Arthur Crump. (Longmans & Co.)

It is unwise to state a universal negative, so it would be imprudent to say that no worse novel than this ever appeared; but it has most of the faults that a novel can have. The narrative is confused, the incidents are irrelevant, and the characters are caricatures. Mr. Crump seems to have resolved to get in all his own experiences—not, we should judge, as yet a very long series—somehow or other, and to work them into the story of as ill-bred a family as we ever remember to have met. Indeed, the persons in the book seem to be both ill-natured and ill-mannered, unless we may except a curious half-witted being who talks a dialect blended of conventional Scotch and Irish.

Marie-Magdeleine: Récit de Jeunesse. Par Émile Ollivier. (Paris, Garnier Frères.)

Although it has the form of a novel and a simple story runs through it, the volume by which M. Ollivier brightened his convalescence from an illness before he returned to the serious work of his history is, as its second title shows, a series of sketches of memories of youth—his own youth in some degree. Its chief interest lies in passages describing his mission to Marseilles and Toulon as delegate of the Republic in February, 1848, and the birth then of his oratory; in a couple of pages on Parliamentary ambitions; and in descriptions of Florence and its pictures and of the Antwerp Rubens. Musicians will also find in it a good deal about Liszt, Berlioz, Meyerbeer, and Wagner. M. Ollivier tells us that the face of Rossini "recalled both the Olympian Jove and Mr. Punch." In his later days the very wiggish wig negatived the former suggestion, and few now living can recall the curls of Rossini's youth.

DANTE LITERATURE.

Enciclopedia Dantesca. Da G. A. Scartazzini. (Milan, Hoepli.)

Studies in Dante. By E. Moore. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)

Pensieri sull' Allegoria della Vita Nuova di Dante. Opera Postuma di Francesco Pasqualigo. (Venice, Olschki.)

Selections from the First Nine Books of the Croniche Fiorentine of Giovanni Villani. Translated by Rose E. Selfe. Edited by P. H. Wicksteed. (Constable & Co.)

The four works whose titles are given above afford an illustrative and interesting example of the various ways in which the study of a great writer may be approached. All belong to the explanatory rather than to the appreciative branch of commentary, so that their comparative value to the student can be estimated without any confusion of the issue by æsthetic questions. The object of each writer is equally to do something towards helping readers of Dante to understand his meaning—often a matter, as we know, of some difficulty.

Dr. Scartazzini's 'Enciclopedia'—of which the first half, to the end of the letter L, now before us, consists of 1,168 closely printed pages—is executed in the fashion familiar to all who have used his edition of Dante. In fact, it amounts to little more than a rearrangement of the notes to that edition under alphabetical catchwords, with such additions as the author's subsequent reading has led him to make, and occasional, though by no means complete references to Dante's minor works, especially the 'Convito.' His method, as we say, is well known. It consists in a laborious and conscientious study of commentaries ancient and modern, dictionaries, all conceivable works in the "literature" of his subject, and the reproduction, often at great length, of extracts from these. Of general acquaintance with literature or of original critical faculty we find very little. In some matters, such as philology, Dr. Scartazzini's knowledge is still at a very elementary stage. He still believes, for instance, that deus "comes from" θεὸς; he is quite content to derive andare from anditus (quasi aditus), accismare from κοσμεῖν (!), and adonare from domare, or to assume the possibility of alternative derivations for the same word, and so on. On the other hand, he favours us with a good deal of doubtless correct, but totally superfluous learning. One does not quite see how the study of Dante is advanced by giving names like Gabriel or Jerusalem in their Hebrew forms, or by such information as that a flower is a "product of the vegetation of phanerogamous plants which precedes the fruit," while fruit is a similar product "which succeeds the flower in consequence of the fecundation of the ovary"! It would have been better, for instance, if Dr. Scartazzini had devoted the time spent in copying this abstruse lore from some school-book on botany to the study of one of the passages in which Dante mentions fruit. He would then, perhaps, have avoided the blunder of saying that frutta in 'Inf.,' xxxiii. 119, is used figuratively.

We have sometimes been tempted to wonder whether Dr. Scartazzini ever reads anything except "books about" Dante. He certainly shows very little sign of having gone beyond them, either to the books whence Dante drew his lore, or to other literature which might help him to understand the main currents of thought which formed Dante's mental "environment," except in cases where these have been quoted by other commentators. Take, for instance, his treatment (s.v. "Accidia") of the question whereabouts in hell Dante intended those who had lost their souls through this sin to be found. All the older commentators assume them to be represented by the sinners who lie submerged in the marsh of Styx (in which the iracondi also are punished), and whose existence is only indicated by the words of lamentation (in which the sin is actually named) that come gurgling up with the bubbles through the slimy water. This view, which is plainly suggested by the words, seems to have been unquestioned until the middle of the sixteenth century, when Daniello of Lucca, a painstaking and intelligent, but rather hair-splitting commentator, boggled over the apparent difficulty that accidia is not obviously a sin of incontinence, and had therefore no business to be found in this quarter of the infernal regions. It must be remembered that the age in which Daniello lived was not precisely steeped in theology, and that that estimable person, as likely as not, had never looked into the 'Summa Theologica.' If he had done so, he would have found his difficulties entirely removed. Accidia, as understood by a mediæval theologian, was a spiritual state of which Aristotle could hardly have formed any notion, so that he may be excused for omitting it from his classification of "things to be avoided from a moral point of view." Dante was therefore free to treat it as he liked, and as we have said, the words of his teacher Aquinas gave him ample warrant for grouping it with the sins of ἀκρασία, even if his own knowledge of the human heart had not led him to see how closely akin the temper implied by accidia is to that which makes a man break out in raging anger. But into this Dr. Scartazzini does not go. He gives a list of commentators, "Bocc., Benv., Barg., Dol., Tom.," and so forth, on one side, and another, as "Port., Pogg., Corn.," on the other side, calls the difficulty "little less than insoluble," and passes on to the next word without any attempt to settle the previous question whether there be any difficulty at all.

Another passage to which Dr. Scartazzini has devoted nearly a whole page, and which might have been dealt with in a few lines, is that near the beginning of 'Inf.' xv., in which it is implied that the head waters of the Brenta are in a district called "Chiarentana," a name which in the Italian of the time means Carinthia, and nothing but Carinthia. No difficulty was felt about this (though one or two commentators, among them our friend Daniello, took it for the name of a mountain, perhaps somewhat as the undergraduate explained Gamaliel as "an exceeding high mountain in Samaria") until some wiseacre in the present century discovered that Val Sugana, in which the Brenta rises, is some way from the modern Carinthia. A dozen pamphlets and articles seem to have been the result, and all sorts of wild interpretations were suggested. Even the learned Witte, it appears, was led astray. Dr. Scartazzini takes the right view; but it would surely have been enough to have referred to any chronicler or historian of the period, or even to an historical atlas, to show that the Duchy of Carinthia had once extended almost to Trent, and that even in Dante's time the dukes still claimed the lordship of the Brenta valley.

With all his superfluity of borrowed lore Dr. Scartazzini sometimes contrives to miss a very obvious illustration. Thus the curious use of gemere in the sense of "to trickle" or "drip" (not improbably an earlier sense than that of "groan"), occurring twice in the 'Commedia,' is to be found again in the Latin of 'De Vulg. El.,' to which a reference should certainly have been given.

It is needless to go through every instance of the cumbersome fashion of exegesis which seems to meet the wants of Italian students, but one other case may be cited, as affording, when taken with Dr. Moore's treatment of the same passage, a good contrast between the businesslike and the unbusinesslike method of comment. In 'Par.,' xxvii. 137, after a passage dealing with the tendency of all things left to themselves to degenerate, comes the following: "So at the first look grows dark the white skin of the daughter of him who brings morning and leaves evening," i.e., of the sun. Now who is "the daughter of the sun"? "Human nature" or "the human race," say most of the old commentators, from whom Dr. Scartazzini quotes long screeds. He also quotes "Com. Lips.," under which modest alias he is believed to disguise himself, in favour of interpreting the phrase as denoting the Church; as thus: He who brings morning, &c.=the sun; but Dante sometimes calls God "the Sun"; and the Church is the daughter of God; ergo. He does not see that though A may be metaphorically applied to B, it does not follow that every phrase descriptive of A may also be so applied. This was the error of the boy who rendered "The Lord is a man of war" by "Namque Deus noster bellica navis erat."

(It is odd how often Dr. Scartazzini's reasonings remind us of the schoolboy and the undergraduate!) It will be observed that he has altogether omitted to consider (though here Dr. Poletto's dictionary might have shown him the way) whether any parallel phrase could be traced in any of the authors whom Dante is known to have studied; and yet it must be abundantly manifest — indeed, it has been pointed out in these columns—that researches in this direction offer the best chance of clearing up the surviving obscurities in the "Minerva oscura" of Dante. "Hic est aut nusquam quod quærimus."

Which brings us to Dr. Moore. So impressed is he with the importance of the method just indicated that he has been at the pains of noting more than 1,500 passages—and these only from authors not later than Boethius—which may with more or less certainty be assumed to have influenced Dante's expression in as many passages of his works. He divides them methodically into three classes: "(a) direct citations; (b) obvious references or imitations; (c) allusions and reminiscences," and gives the result in two indexes, first in the order of authors quoted, secondly in the order of Dante's works, the whole occupying some seventy-five pages of his volume. The bulk of the volume contains, besides an essay on the general subject, discussions of a large number of selected passages, showing how the recognition of their parentage aids in the solution of questions of interpretation or reading. Thus, referring to the "bella figlia" passage mentioned above, he points out that it is "almost unintelligible unless familiarity with certain passages of Aristotle be supposed." In about a quarter of the number of words employed by Dr. Scartazzini to leave the passage rather more obscure than he found it, Dr. Moore gives the dictum of Aristotle which Dante no doubt had in mind, shows that it was familiar to him, and makes the obscurity clear to any reasonable mind.

It will not, of course, be supposed that Dr. Moore has found the key to all the unsolved difficulties in Dante. There is, for instance, the famous passage in which Virgil mentions, at the gate of the inner Hell, that he has been there once already at the bidding of the witch Erichtho, who had sent his spirit down just after his death—Erichtho, as we know from Lucan, operated by preference with "fresh" ghosts—to bring up some other spirit "from the circle of Judas." The whole thing is so detailed as to leave no doubt that Dante had some special legend in his mind, but so far no other allusion to it has been found. All that Dr. Moore can do is to criticize the various suggestions that have been offered, and show that none of them will hold water for a moment.

Here and there, perhaps, some readers will think that the principle has been pushed rather too far, and that either the suggested allusion is a little fanciful, or the interpretation based on it not quite sound. Thus, in 'Inf.,' i. 61, rovinava can surely mean nothing but "was descending headlong." It is the only meaning ever found in Dante, or, it may be said, consistent with the derivation of the word. There is very likely an allusion to the "nesciunt ubi corruunt" of the Vulgate in Prov. iv. 19, where our version has "They know not at what they stumble"; but it does not follow from this that corruere, still less rovinare, may be rendered by "to stumble." Dante had, as we know, mounted a little way up the hill, and at the sight of the three wild beasts he fled precipitately down. Again, in 'Purg.,' x. 120, if the use of the word "picchia" contains an allusion to the publican "smiting upon his breast," one can only say that Dante did not clearly see his own picture; for it is hard to imagine any attitude in which it would be more difficult to beat the breast than that in which the shades are imagined, viz., with knees and chin almost touching. Between these two references, by the way, comes a very convincing and (in a small way) illustrative one. The expression in 'Purg.,' vi. 109, "la pressura de' tuoi gentili," is traced to the "pressura gentium" of St. Luke xxi. 25. The connexion can hardly be doubted; but did Dante really think that his "gentili" was in any way a representative of "gentium"? Did he so entirely identify the feudal nobility with the nation? "Der Mensch fängt von den Baronen an," said a great Austrian lady once on a time.

One cannot often charge Dr. Moore with an obvious oversight, but we think that he has been guilty of one in dealing with the obscure line, 'Par.,' ix. 123, "Che s'acquistò con l'una e l'altra palma." Whatever the victory so won may have been, it can hardly be doubted that Dante had in mind the verse "in montem quem acquisivit dextera ejus"—in our versions Psalm lxxviii. 54 or 55.

It is, however, impossible here to do much more than heartily commend this book to all students of Dante who wish to be put on the right road of study. Dr. Scartazzini, with all his undoubted learning, represents a method of comment which has been worked for all that it is worth. Read the old commentators and the newer by all means. You will find much that is entertaining in them, and, in the case of the very old ones, much that is instructive. But an editor ought to use his judgment upon them and leave alone those whom he judges to be in error, or at most send his readers to them to judge for themselves. To those who really wish to help forward the study we say, Read your Dante till you know him well, and then read anything you please. It will be odd if you do not find at every turn something which will illuminate him for you as no commentary will ever do.

A third way of dealing with Dante which appears to enjoy some popularity in Italy is exemplified in the work of the late Signor Pasqualigo. This consists, it would seem, in taking a sentence and writing down every conceivable bit either of information or of reflection that can be suggested by it. For example, at the end of chap. iii. of the 'Vita Nuova' Dante makes the apparently innocent remark that something "is now manifest to the simplest." For the better understanding of this Signor Pasqualigo proceeds as follows:—

> "It is now manifest to the most simple, taking 'simple' to mean uncultured, material, ignorant, and the like. Because, as it has been said, if a thing is clear and open to the most ignorant or gross, it follows of logical necessity that it is also clear and open to those who are learned and of keen understanding."

Then he informs us that "simple" is opposed to "multiple," and a number of passages where Dante, Horace, and Cicero use the word are cited at length. Then it is stated what St. Basil says is the Greek for "simple," and St. Bonaventura is quoted to prove that spirit is simple and matter is multiple. Next a page is filled with two extracts from the 'De Monarchia,' in one of which the word moltiplicati occurs, while in the other it does not. In this way nearly ten pages are easily filled up, and by this time, a similar treatment having been applied to what goes before, we have completed three chapters of the text and 438 octavo pages of comment. Now the 'Vita Nuova' contains forty-three chapters. The reader can hardly feel either surprise or regret that the MS. left by Signor Pasqualigo ends here. Out of all the waste of words the most original suggestion that one carries away is that the writer believed the "sin against nature" for which Dante condemned his old friend Brunetto to eternal torment was—the having written his chief work in French! Signor Pasqualigo seems also to have held that Beatrice is purely symbolical, and denotes Christian piety. Some English students have, we regret to say, been of late bitten with the same fad, and not long ago we saw an attempt to depict Dante as a kind of early Tractarian on that basis. One only wonders where such people can have lived, and what they can have read. Surely any one who was ever himself in love, "ciascun' alma presa," must, as Dante says, "recognize the traces of the ancient flame," while no one who has read mediæval literature ever so slightly will find anything to puzzle him in the mystical language and setting. If Beatrice was a real woman, the 'Vita Nuova' is intelligible enough, if a little fantastic to our notions; if she was not, it is little better than the 'Book of Mormon.'

Perhaps no one book is so important to the student of Dante as the 'Chronicle' of his contemporary Villani. The two men were almost certainly acquainted, and though the historian contrived to avoid giving offence to the faction which banished the poet, it is easy to see that he had no great sympathy with its methods. It would seem highly probable that communications went on between them after the great disruption of 1302; and though most of the direct quotations from Dante found in modern editions of Villani are most likely later interpolations, there are too many correspondences of phrase to allow us to doubt that he was thoroughly familiar with Dante's work. His history may, indeed, almost be regarded as the first commentary on the 'Commedia.' This being so, it is amazing to see the neglect with which it has been treated in Italy. There is not a single edition of any critical value—not even one in which any serious attempt has been made to put straight the many difficulties of the extremely unsatisfactory text. Yet Italian scholars have time enough to spend on futilities such as those to which we have more than once called attention. A good edition of Villani well annotated would be worth all the Giornale Dantesco, with a good many recent works thrown in. Will not Prof. Villari think of it? He, if any one, is the man for the work. Meanwhile Miss Selfe and Mr. Wicksteed have deserved well of English readers by producing a translation of such parts of Villani as serve more directly to illustrate Dante, with marginal references to the appropriate passages of his works, untranslated intervals being indicated by the insertion of all the chapter-headings. The rendering, so far as we have tested it, seems very accurate, the simple, naïve style of the original being well preserved. It is perhaps a pity that Miss Selfe has thought it necessary to impart an archaic air by writing "which" for who, and translating verbatim such expressions as "per la qual cosa." What would she do, we wonder, with conciossiacosache? French and other foreign names have, as a rule, been correctly extracted from the disguise, often most perplexing, under which Villani presents them, though "Monsimpeveri," where the French beat the Flemings, should be Mons-en-Puelle, not "en-Sevèle"; but the restoration to the native form is not always consistently done. Thus we find on two consecutive pages "Jean de Cléry," "Alardo di Valleri," and "Guy of Montfort." A similar inconsistency is observable in the rendering of the Italian di. Thus "Guglielmino of the Ubertini" rubs shoulders with "Guglielmino de' Pazzi," and "Pope Nicholas d'Ascoli" with "Brother Peter of Morrone." Mr. Wicksteed's introduction is much to the purpose. He briefly explains the principle on which the selections have been made, pointing out how, especially from Book IV. to Book VIII., "chapter after chapter reads like a continuous commentary on 'Purg.,' vi. 127–151," while "there is hardly a sentence that does not lighten and is not lightened by some passage" in the poem. This "continuous commentary" is indeed, as he says, far more instructive than passages strewn through notes. Incidentally he has an interesting observation bearing on the importance of the seldom read 'Eclogues' as affording a clue to the date of the production of the 'Paradise,' and fixing it in the very last year of Dante's life; though we are not certain that, because Dante was still at work upon that division of the poem, no part of it had as yet appeared. Then follows a short estimate of the historical value of Villani's work, taking the reasonable view that while we may accept him as excellent evidence for his own time and locality, in regard to past history he has not (nor, indeed, does he claim to have) any more trustworthy information than any other mediæval chronicler. The most important section of the introduction is that headed "On the Rationale of the Revolutions of Florence." Avowedly based on Prof. Villari's recent work, it forms the clearest and most accurate view of that complicated story that has been printed in English; and the estimate of Dante's own position is equally good. As Mr. Wicksteed asks that his attention may be called to any important reference omitted, we may point out that on p. 165 we miss any notice that the murder of the Abbot of Vallombrosa is spoken of in 'Inf.,' xxxii. 119–20.

SHORT STORIES.

The heroine of Mrs. Lynn Linton's first story, 'Twixt Cup and Lip (Digby, Long & Co.), is described with zest:—

"Tall, well-proportioned, frank, free, and English to the backbone, she was a girl with more strength of character than intellect, pure and simple, and as free from sophistry as from affectation. She was free indeed from every form of humbug and superstition. She thought life eminently worth living—especially when Beltrain's love was superadded, but she held honour as the highest thing in life, and would not have bought either safety or happiness by bartering away the smallest fringe of this supreme possession."

Her brave qualities stand her in stead when Beltrain's birth is proved unlawful and she is urged to resign a love no longer gilded with worldly estimation and prosperity. She sets her persecutors at defiance in the old idyllic fashion:

"Softly she came down the stairs, her feet falling like snowflakes on the steps; softly she went through the noiselessly opened door on to the lawn where her young lover stood; and softly, hand in hand, they passed into the safety of the perfumed night, their sorrows left behind them, and the wine-cup of love's delight fairly at their lips."

This tale of true love is contrasted with the tragic fate of 'The Hermit of Lone Head,' the poor mad murderer, who breathes his last in presence of the daughter whom he takes for the love of his youth. 'A Contest of Wits' is a clever study of an ambitious coquette; but we cannot agree with the author's legal opinion on the validity of Rosa's matrimonial coup in Scotland. "Oxter," for oxer, is a curious verbal slip. Some slighter stories conclude the volume.

Tom Sawyer, Detective, and other Tales. By Mark Twain. (Chatto & Windus.)—With grateful recollections of the first book in which Tom Sawyer appeared, one is ready to accept anything further that Mark Twain is willing to tell about him. If, as in the case of some other boys, he grows less attractive as he grows older, it must be remembered that he has become a hero suffering from the difficulty of living up to his position. He does, in fact, in his experiences as an amateur detective exhibit the characteristic sign of one striving with past fame—a tendency to dulness. Huck Finn, who tells the story, seems to be less weighted with responsibility, and is very vivacious for a hero-worshipper. It must, however, be regretted that he had not a better story to tell. In a chapter headed "How to tell a Story" the author dogmatizes upon the characteristics of humorous, comic, and witty stories. The humorous story is claimed as an essentially American development. Naturally it is praised as the highest of these kinds of story. But then, unfortunately, the writer gives a sample of the comic story and of the humorous story. To English readers Mark Twain proves the case against himself. The comic story (possibly a Joe Miller) is good, the humorous story poor. To convert a comic story into a humorous story it appears that the narrator should spin it out with "tedious details that don't belong in the tale and only retard it," and should give these details with all sorts of incongruities and absurdities. The truth is that Mark Twain is making fun of his readers, and is really laughing at what is known as American humour. In the two chapters about M. Paul Bourget's views on America the author is, however, in earnest. These chapters hardly seem worth reprinting. Mark Twain has not succeeded in inflicting any particularly severe chastisement on M. Bourget or on Max O'Rell, who supported M. Bourget not altogether wisely.

The Tuttlebury Tales of W. Carter Platts (Digby, Long & Co.) originally entranced the guileless readers of the Yorkshire Evening Post. Their wit is of the most elementary description, and will not, we fear, raise the sickliest of smiles in the more sophisticated literary circles of the metropolis.

Many Cargoes, by W. W. Jacobs (Lawrence & Bullen), is a collection of stories most of which appeared in To-day and the Idler. They deal almost exclusively with the humour of barge life on the lower reaches of the Thames and the coast of the Eastern Counties, and are excellent reading. Mr. Jacobs's "ancient mariners" remind one of the immortal Dan Peggotty himself, and the wilful and winsome young damsels, who are always creating for themselves, or having created for them, the most embarrassing situations ashore and afloat, are quite a revelation. There is not a dull line in the book, and if any fault is to be found with it, it is merely that there is a slight sameness in the incidents described. 'The Skipper of the "Osprey,"' 'Mated,' and 'Mrs. Bunker's Chaperon' are, perhaps, as good samples of Mr. Jacobs's wares as any we can mention; but there is really very little to choose, in point of merit, between these breezy and diverting yarns.

The late Mr. Charles Grant, author of Stories of Naples and the Camorra (Macmillan), seems to have had a somewhat curious taste in human nature. "I love no people like the Neapolitans," he is reported to have said to the friend who writes the sketch of his life prefixed to these 'Stories of Naples'; and then he depicts these people as murderers, liars of a particularly mean type, profligate, superstitious to a degree which the most fetish-ridden African could not match. The Camorra, with its world-wide notoriety and claim of political principles, seems to be primarily a cross between a trade union and an association for the alternate encouragement and blackmailing of criminals. Thus the atmosphere of Mr. Grant's four stories—which are practically episodes in the history of the same set of personages, one group or another becoming in turn the protagonists of the drama—is not precisely attractive, nor does the reader find himself much in sympathy with any of the characters in them. At the same time it cannot be denied that they are obviously told from a thorough acquaintance with the life that is described. Perhaps the good-natured or generous fisherman Gabriele is the personage who most attracts us; and he is a Calabrian. Even he, kindly as he is, commits one murder in the course of the story; but it must be owned that the colonel whom he knifed in the back deserved all he got. On the whole, the community which Mr. Grant loved appears, seen even by the favourable light in which he views its members, to stand in the scale of civilization about on a level with Bechuanas, and far below Polynesians. The book is quite worth reading, in spite of a certain want of liveliness in the style and rather old-fashioned methods in the construction of sentences and paragraphs, which now and again prevent the perusal of it from being an absolute relaxation.

Turnpike Tales, by Charles L. Marson (Mathews), are short stories of a rather ambitious kind, and are not without literary merit. 'Mr. Lavender and his Legacy' is a pathetic account of a strangely ill-assorted couple—the old rector of Hareby-on-the-Wold and his inconvenient little mulatto grandson. 'The Bishop' presents an interesting study of character, though its central incident is absurdly melodramatic, not to say impossible. Mr. Marson should avoid a certain tendency to over-smartness, which occasionally lands him perilously near vulgarity; but in other respects the little book, if it is a first attempt, is by no means unpromising.

Ghostly Tales. By the Countess of Munster. (Hutchinson & Co.)—The average mind at this end of the century has, perhaps, a tendency to scepticism. But this consideration apart, it is hard to believe that the Countess of Munster's tales will carry much conviction. Moreover, in vouching for the truth of one or two of them she has unconsciously cast a slur upon the others. It must, however, be admitted that the title is misleading. At least three of the stories, including the longest, most important, and least probable, 'The Leather Box,' deal more decidedly with madness and murder than anything less canny. There is also a little tale of feline instinct—'Only a Cat'—so prettily told that we are tempted to wish the author had given us more of these peaceful domestic scenes and less of such unlikely horrors as 'The Tyburn Ghost.' Taking the book as a whole, it would be difficult to find a collection of more unpleasant stories told in a less harmful and effective manner. The illustrations, it is true, do their utmost to make up for what the letterpress lacks in vividness, and were they not grotesque to childishness they would be still more alarming. As it is, they provide a reason, and the only one, for not placing the book in the hands of very young people or of those possessed of weak nerves.

In the Land of the Harp and Feathers, by Mr. Alfred Thomas (Allenson), contains eighteen sketches of men and manners in a Welsh village some sixty years since. Though all the papers are carefully written, they do not merit the expression "Idylls," which the author applies to them. The picture of life contained in the book is interesting, and shows that no little labour has been expended on it. The author would willingly do for the Welsh villagers of 1835–40 what clever pens have done for various localities in Scotland.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Messrs. Macmillan & Co. publish the Letters from the Sudan of Mr. E. F. Knight, the special correspondent of the Times, which are reprinted from that paper, with excellent maps, plans, and some of the best illustrations that we have seen. One representing the camp at night is admirable for the manner in which it brings before the reader the moonlight of the desert. The letters are so well known that it is unnecessary to say more about their excellence.

In the preface to The Story of Australia (Osgood, McIlvaine & Co.) the author, Mr. J. S. Laurie, bespeaks indulgent consideration for pages written in the "monotonous bush," and therefore composed under many disadvantages. From internal evidence, and from the accuracy of his local knowledge, we imagine that he was a resident in Tasmania, and that his visits to the mainland were few and far between. For nearly all his facts he is indebted to former writers, whose works he diligently studied during his seclusion in the bush. We need scarcely say that he has added but little to our information, but what he has compiled is written in a lively, scholarly manner, and many of the most striking points are brought out in bold relief. It is unnecessary to discuss afresh the academic question as to who was the discoverer of the southern continent, whether De Gonneville or De Quiros is entitled to that honour. All admit that the practical pioneer who gave to the world the "Great South Land" was Capt. Cook, who landed on it on April 19th, 1770. Mr. Laurie admits this, and justly remarks that the marvellous development which has since taken place must not be taken as the result of one hundred and twenty-five years ; that the real history of Australia dates from 1820, when the young colony received its first great impulse from the activity of Governor Macquarie, whom he unduly extols, or even from a later date, 1854, when the introduction of constitutional government first gave to the colonists a full opportunity for self-development. In this we cannot agree with him. New South Wales need not be ashamed of its origin. The same reproach that is levelled against her may be urged against the United States of America, to whose shore more convicts were transported than ever were sent to New South Wales. It is still a sore subject with some Australians descended from this class, and the less allusion made to it the better. Mr. Laurie also dilates on the horrors of Port Arthur, and is eloquent on the wrongs of the aborigines ; we cannot controvert his statements, but we doubt the wisdom and the taste which give them prominence. The most instructive chapters of this volume are those which describe Fiji and New Guinea, of which countries less has been written. This affords our author a better chance of saying something original and new, and of bringing the knowledge of his readers up to date.

Messrs. Innes & Co. publish an excellent account of the Dongola Expedition by Mr. Hilliard Atteridge, the special correspondent of the Daily Chronicle, under the title Towards Khartoum. The book is bright, readable, excellently illustrated, supplied with admirable plans of the engagements, and forms a complete and valuable record of the expedition.

Gray Days and Gold in England and Scotland. By William Winter. (Macmillan & Co.)—Mr. Winter is a sentimentalist, an enthusiast, and what some of his countrymen would call an Anglomaniac. His veneration for English shrines approaches idolatry. To Englishmen at least his books are pleasant reading, and we should be glad, after reading the homage he pays to Canterbury, York, and Lincoln, if he would visit such less renowned, but not less delightful spots as Peterborough, Ely, Christchurch, and Wells. His delight in picturesque and historical pastoral England is genuine, and if it is a trifle rhapsodical, that is an offence we are not indisposed to condone. His book—of which the illustrations only are new, three editions of it having already seen the light—bears strong witness to its writer's connexion with the stage. It is dedicated to Mr. Augustin Daly. Sir Henry Irving, Mr. Ernest Bendall, and the late Frank Marshall were its author's companions in one at least of the excursions depicted. Stratford and its surroundings are the places that interest the writer most, and references to actors, from Quin to Miss Ellen Terry, abound in its pages. Some slips there are: "Polly Peachem" for Polly Peachum is a curious blunder, and "Dr. Joseph Wharton" inflicts on an amiable and accomplished critic, or on his ghost, what John Philip Kemble would have called a superfluous "ache." The illustrations are numerous and well executed, and are likely to add to the popularity of the book. They include a view from a photogravure of Peterborough, but the cathedral itself is unvisited, or at least undescribed.

Mr. Heinemann prints in his "Pioneer Series" The Little Regiment and other Episodes of the American Civil War from the pen of Mr. Stephen Crane, who on this occasion equals his 'Red Badge of Courage' and excels his 'Maggie.' The extraordinary power of imagination which transports the reader into the very firing line of the Northern troops of 1863 is displayed by a writer born, if we mistake not, many years after the close of the scenes which he describes, and is, for this reason, more wonderful than that of Defoe. Mr. Crane's English, when he writes in his own person, is his own, and follows no known rule as to the use and even the meaning of words. It is in dialogue that he is at his strongest, for in this the words are used as the soldiers would have used them.

In Ancient Ideals, 2 vols. (Putnam's Sons), Mr. H. O. Taylor has attempted "a new historical survey of the mental and spiritual growth of mankind." So large and important a subject demands a compression of matter and an extent of knowledge which are beyond Mr. Taylor. His book is deficient in critical power, and, whether dealing with Euripides or Koheleth, inadequate and unjust. The number of misprints gives it, too, a most slovenly appearance.

Messrs. P. S. King & Son publish a most interesting paper-covered volume, entitled Employers' Liability: What Ought It To Be? by Mr. Henry Wolff, of People's Banks celebrity. As will be expected by those who have read the author's previous articles, he is favourable to the principle, although not to all the details, of the German scheme of accident insurance.

The Rivieras (G. Allen), by Mr. Hare, detached from his well-known guide-books, will prove useful to tourists.

Mr. H. S. C. Everard has added to the large literature of golf a useful little volume on Golf in Theory and Practice (Bell & Sons), illustrated by excellent photographs. His directions to the beginner are simple and sensible, and his remarks on the etiquette of the game are particularly appropriate at a time when a number of those who have of late years taken up the game appear to think that there are no courtesies to be observed.

Messrs. Chapman & Hall have sent us shilling editions of David Copperfield and Little Dorrit well bound in cloth. They are wonderfully cheap, but we wish a little better paper could have been afforded.—Editions at threepence each of Peter Simple, Notre Dame, Hard Times, and Ainsworth's Old St. Paul's have been sent to us by Messrs. Routledge, but in these double columns are used.

In Prose Tales by Edgar Allan Poe Messrs. Routledge have reprinted in a handy form twelve examples of the American classic, with an introduction by Mr. Lowell. The selection is good, and we miss only 'The Cask of Amontillado.'

That excellent work The Newspaper Press Directory has just reached us from Messrs. C. Mitchell & Co. An article on 'Women's Work in the Press' adds to the attractiveness of the volume.

We have on our table Essays and Addresses, by Sir J. Russell Reynolds, Bart., M.D. (Macmillan),—The History of the Last Quarter-Century in the United States, 1870–1895, by E. Benjamin Andrews, 2 vols. (Kegan Paul),—The Balkans, by W. Miller (Fisher Unwin),—The Growth of the French Nation, by G. B. Adams (Macmillan),—Chronologies and Calendars, by J. C. Macdonald (Andrews & Co.),—The Hidden Lives of Shakespeare and Bacon, by W. G. Thorpe (Chiswick Press),—Enfranchisement and Citizenship: Addresses and Papers, by E. L. Pierce, edited by A. W. Stevens (Boston, U.S., Roberts Brothers),—Transactions of the Royal Society of Literature, Second Series, Vol. XVIII. Part II. (Asher),—Exercises in Practical Chemistry, by R. L. Taylor (Low),—Selections from the Works of Sir Richard Steele, edited by G. R. Carpenter (Ginn),—American Orations, edited by A. Johnston and J. A. Woodburn, Vol. II. (Putnam),—The Growth of the Idylls of the King, by R. Jones (Lippincott),—The Sense of Beauty, by G. Santayana (Black),—The Sources of Spenser's Classical Mythology, by A. E. Sawtelle (New York, Silver, Burdett & Co.),—Continental Chit-Chat, by Mabel Humbert (White & Co.),—The Beggars of Paris, translated from the French of M. Louis Paulian by Lady Herschell (Arnold),—Parents and Children, a Sequel to 'Home Education,' by Charlotte M. Mason (Kegan Paul),—A Note on the Ancient Geography of Asia, by N. Chandra Das (Calcutta, Buddhist Text Society of India),—Magnetic Fields of Force, by H. Ebert, translated by C. V. Burton, Part I. (Longmans),—The Story of the Weather, by G. F. Chambers (Newnes),—Hymns for "Diamond Jubilee" of Queen Victoria (Skeffington),—Patent Law and Practice, by A. V. Newton (Cox),—Legal Law: Curiosities of Law and Lawyers, edited by W. Andrews (Andrews & Co.),—Caricatures of Twenty-five Gentlemen, by Max Beerbohm (Smithers),—Boarding-House Reminiscences, by Juloc (Fisher Unwin),—The Blackguard, by R. Pocock (Beeman),—An Oak of Chivalry, by Mrs. J. Procter (Digby & Long),—For the White Rose of Arno, by O. Rhoscomyl (Longmans),—The Three Daughters of Night, by D. Vane (Hutchinson),—and The History of a Soul, by K. Behenna (Digby & Long).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Creighton's (Bp.) History of the Papacy from the Great Schism to the Sack of Rome, Vol. I, cr 8vo. 6/ cl.
Eras of the Christian Church : Vol. 1, The Age of Hildebrand, by M. R. Vincent; Vol. 2, The Age of the Great Western Schism, by C. Locke; Vol. 3, The Age of the Crusades, by J. M. Ludlow, cr. 8vo. 6/ each.
Keith's (G. S.) Plea for a Simpler Faith, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Maturin's (B. W.) Practical Studies on the Parables of our Lord, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Nevius's (Rev. J. L.) Demon Possession and Allied Themes, 8vo. 7/6 net.
Salmon's (G.) Some Thoughts on the Textual Criticism of the New Testament, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Wenley's (R. M.) Contemporary Theology and Theism, 4/6

Law.

Encyclopædia of the Laws of England, edited by A. W. Renton, Vol. 1, royal 8vo. 20/ net.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Perkins's (T.) Handbook to Gothic Architecture, 3/6 cl.

Poetry and the Drama.

Ballads, Collection of, edited by Andrew Lang, 18mo. 2/ cl.
Betts's (E. St. G.) Sun and Mist, Poems, 12mo. 3/6 net.
Brewer's (J. F.) The Speculators, a Comedy, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Hill's (A. E.) Elfinn's Luck, and other Poems, 4/6 net.
Lefroy, Edward Cracroft, his Life and Poems, with Critical Estimate of the Sonnets by J. Symonds, 5/ net.
Palgrave's (F. T.) Landscape in Poetry from Homer to Tennyson, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Smith's (F. J. J.) The Captain of the Dolphin, and other Poems of the Sea, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net.
Thorpe's (W. G.) The Hidden Lives of Shakespeare and Bacon and their Business Connexion, 8vo. 5/ net.

Philosophy.

Scripture's (E. W.) Thinking, Feeling, Doing, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

Political Economy.

Wright's (C. D.) The Industrial Evolution of the United States, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

History and Biography.

Buckley, John, Life Story of, a Village Politician, edited by J. C. Buckmaster, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Frazer's (R. W.) British India, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl. (Story of the Nations.)
Judson's (H. P.) Growth of the American Nation; Europe in the Nineteenth Century, cr. 8vo. 6/ each, cl.
Macdonald's (J. C.) Chronologies and Calendars, cr. 8vo. 7/6
Maitland's (F. W.) Domesday-Book and Beyond, Three Essays in the Early History of England, royal 8vo. 15/ cl.
Smollett, Tobias, by O. Smeaton, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl. (Famous Scots Series.)
Starr's (F.) Some First Steps in Human Progress, 6/ cl.
Statham's (F. R.) South Africa as It Is, cr. 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Tryon, Vice-Admiral Sir G., Life of, by Rear-Admiral C. C. P. Fitzgerald, 8vo. 21/ cl.
Woodward's (W. H.) Vittorino da Feltre and other Humanist Educators, Essays, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.

Geography and Travel.

Beazley's (C. R.) Dawn of Modern Geography, 18/ cl.
Jaccaci's (A. F.) On the Trail of Don Quixote, Rambles in La Mancha, 8vo. 8/6 net.

Philology.

Aristophanes' Wasps, literally translated by J. W. Rundall, cr. 8vo. 2/ swd.

Science.

American Text-Book of Prosthetic Dentistry, edited by C. J. Essig, 8vo. 26/ net.
Dawson's (Sir J. W.) Relics of Primæval Life, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Garcke's (E.) Manual of Electrical Undertakings, 1896, 5/ cl.
Gould (G. M.) and Pyle's (W. L.) Anomalies and Curiosities of Medicine, royal 8vo. 34/ cl.
Howard's (W. W.) The Evolution of the Universe, 8vo. 12/6
Howe's (H. A.) A Study of the Sky, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Imperial Health Manual, ed. by A. Roche, cr. 8vo. 2/6 net.
Kirby's (W. F.) Handbook to the Order Lepidoptera : Vol. 4, Moths, Part 2, 6/ (Allen's Naturalists' Library.)

Knott's (C. G.) Physics, an Elementary Text-Book for University Classes, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Page's (F. W.) Clinical Papers on Surgical Subjects, 5/ cl.
Ross's (F. W. F.) Septic Conditions of the Infantile Alimentary Canal and their Treatment, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Stoney's (E. A. M.) Practical Points in Nursing, 7/6 net.
Thomas's (H.) Cornish Mining Interviews, cr. 8vo. 3/ net.
Yearsley's (M.) Injuries and Diseases of the Ear, 12mo. 2/ cl.

General Literature.

Bacon's Essays, edited, with Introduction and Notes, by A. S. West, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
Beer's (H. A.) Initial Studies in American Letters, cr. 8vo. 6/
Burrows's (C. K.) The Way of the Wind, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Causton's (J. F.) A Modern Judas, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Corelli's (Marie) Ziska, the Problem of a Wicked Soul, 6/ cl.
Directory of Titled Persons for 1897, designed as a Companion to Whitaker's Almanack, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Fenoall (P.) and Russell's (F.) Out of the Darkness, 6/ cl.
Fielding's (H.) The History of Tom Jones, 8vo. 2/ cl.
Glyn's (A. L.) A Pearl of the Realm, a Story of Nonsuch Place, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Gordon's (S.) A Handful of Exotics, Scenes and Incidents, chiefly of Russo-Jewish Life, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Griffith's (G.) Briton or Boer? a Tale of the Fight for Africa, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Hill (J.) and Bacon's (G. F.) Dinah Fleet, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Hindle's (G.) Tales of the Brun, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net.
Hunt's (L.) The Months, Successive Beauties of the Year, Biographical Introduction by W. Andrews, 2/ cl.
Ingatherings, by Elier, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Ker's (W. P.) Epic and Romance, Essays on Mediæval Literature, 8vo. 10/ net.
Le Gallienne's (R.) The Quest of the Golden Girl, 5/ net.
Lytton's (Lord) The Last of the Barons, illustrated by F. Pegram, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Mathers's (H.) Sam's Sweetheart, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Molloy's (J. F.) A Justified Sinner, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Moulton's (L. C.) In Childhood's Country, imp. 16mo. 6/ net.
Muller's (Prof. F. Max) Contributions to the Science of Mythology, 2 vols. 8vo. 32/ cl.
My Favourite Recipes for Dainty Dishes, Cakes, and Confections, cr. 8vo. 3/ net.
Pemberton's (Max) Christine of the Hills, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Raymond's (W.) Charity Chance, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Russell's (Dora) A Man's Privilege, cheaper edition, 2/6 cl.
Russell's (W. Clark) The Tale of the Ten, a Salt-Water Romance, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Sergeant's (A.) Told in the Twilight, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Sykes's (A. A.) Without Permission, a Book of Dedications, 3/6
Walford's (L. B.) A Question of Penmanship, Stories, cheaper edition, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Waller's (S. E.) Sebastiani's Secret, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Walton and Cotton's Compleat Angler, edited, with Introduction, by R. Le Gallienne, royal 8vo. 15/ net.
Westall's (W.) With the Red Eagle, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Wolff's (H. W.) Employers' Liability, What Ought It To Be? 8vo. 2/6 sewed.
Yorke's (C.) A Flirtation with Truth, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Gregorii Abulfaragii Bar-Hebræi Scholia in Libros Samuelis, ed. E. Schlesinger, 2m.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Larfeld (W.): Bericht üb. die griechische Epigraphik f. 1888-1894, 12m.

Poetry.

Richepin (J.): Le Chemineau, 4fr.
Roger-Milès (L.): Cent Pièces à dire, 3fr. 50.
Zola (É.): Messidor, 1fr.

Philosophy.

Brochard (V.): De l'Erreur, 5fr.
Ferrière (É.): La Cause Première, d'après les Données Expérimentales, 3fr. 50.
Récéjac (E.): Essai sur les Fondements de la Connaissance Mystique, 5fr.

History and Biography.

Crousaz-Crétet (L. de): Le Duc de Richelieu en Russie et en France, 1766-1822, 10fr.
Fontane (M.): Les Barbares, 7fr. 50.
Lemaître (A.): Musulmans et Chrétiens, 3fr. 50.
Maillard (É.): Le Président Félix Faure, 3fr. 50.
Sciout (L.): Le Directoire, Part 2, Vols. 3 and 4, 16fr.
Zevort (E.): Histoire de la Troisième République: La Présidence du Maréchal, 7fr.

Geography and Travel.

Seippel (P.): Terres Lointaines, Voyage autour du Monde, 15fr.
Toutée (Commandant): Dahomé, Niger, Touareg, 4fr.

Science.

Hesse's (L. O.) gesammelte Werke, 24m.

General Literature.

Bérard (V.): La Politique du Sultan, 3fr. 50.
Buet (C.): Acquitté, 3fr. 50.
Cahu (T.): La Rançon de l'Honneur, 3fr. 50.
Jolain (M.): La Plaidoirie dans la Langue Française, 6fr.
Kermor (J.): La Vipère au Nid, 3fr. 50.
Le Fèvre-Deumier (J.): Études Politiques, 5fr.
Oudinot (C.): Noël Savare, 3fr. 50.
Pagat (H.): Les Funérailles de l'Argent, 3fr. 50.
Sarrazin (G.): Le Roi de la Mer, 3fr. 50.
Scheffer (R.): Le Prince Narcisse, 3fr. 50.
Tarrasch (S.) u. Schröder (C.): Das internationale Schachturnier des Schachclubs Nürnberg in 1896, Sammlung samtl. Partien, 7m.
Ullmo (L.): Le Problème Social, 3fr.
Velloni (C.): Maitre Dolon, 3fr. 50.
Verly (H.): Le Triomphe du Socialisme, 2fr. 50.
Vogüé (Vicomte E. M. de): Jean d'Agrève, 3fr. 50.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

Mr. T. Fisher Unwin proposes to publish the following books in the coming season. Belles-lettres and Travel: 'Travelling Notes in Southern France,' by Hippolyte Adolphe Taine, being the authorized translation, by Mr. Lewis Sergeant, B.A., of 'Carnets de Voyage,'—'Sketches a-Wheel in Fin-de-Siècle Iberia,' by Mr. and Mrs. Workman, illustrated,—and 'The Printers of Basle: being the Autobiographies of Thomas and Felix Platter,' edited by Mr. C. W. Heckethorn, illustrated. History: 'The Inner Life of the House of Commons,' selected from the writings of William White, with a prefatory note by his son and an introduction by Mr. Justin McCarthy, M.P.,—'Communism in Middle Europe in the Time of the Reformation,' by Karl Kautsky, editor of Die Neue Zeit, translated from the German by Mr. J. L. and Mrs. E. J. Mulliken,—a volume of "The Story of the Nations," illustrated, viz., 'Modern France,' by M. André Le Bon,—and two volumes of "The Children's Study," viz., 'Old Tales from Greece,' by Miss Alice Zimmern, and 'France,' by Miss Mary Rowsell. Theology: 'The Shadow Christ: an Introduction to Christ Himself,' by Mr. Gerald Stanley Lee,—and 'St. Mark's Indebtedness to St. Matthew,' by Mr. F. P. Badham. Natural Science: 'Glimpses into Plant Life,' by Mrs. Brightwen, illustrated,—and 'Mother, Baby, and Nursery: a Manual for Mothers,' by Mrs. Genevieve Tucker, M.D. Biography: 'Twelve Bad Women,' a companion volume to 'Twelve Bad Men,' edited by Mr. Arthur Vincent, illustrated,—and 'Life of Sir Henry Parkes, G.C.M.G.,' by Mr. C. E. Lyne, formerly editor of the Sydney Morning Herald. Essays: 'The Burden of Life,' essays by the late J. Hain Friswell, author of 'The Gentle Life,' edited, with a memoir, by his daughter, Laura Hain Friswell (Mrs. Myall). Manuals: 'Quotations for Occasions,' compiled by Mrs. Katherine B. Wood. Poetry: 'Bards of the Gael and Gaul,' a volume of verse, collected and edited by Mr. George Sigerson, with a photogravure portrait of the blind Irish bard Carolan,—and 'Aphroessa, and other Poems,' by the Hon. George Horton. Fiction: two "Little Novels," viz., 'A Noble Haul,' by Mr. Clark Russell, and 'On the Gogmagogs,' by Mrs. Alice Dumillo,—'Sinbad Smith & Co.,' by Mr. A. Stearns, illustrated,—'A Pot of Honey,' by Miss Susan Christian,—'The Twilight Reef, and other Stories,' by Mr. H. C. McIlwaine,—'The Temple of Folly: a Novel,' by Mr. Paul Creswick,—'Brer Mortal,' by Mr. Ben Marlas, illustrated by Mr. Mark Zangwill,—'In an Ancient Mirror,' a satire by Mr. Herbert Flowerdew,—'Ivan Alexandrovitch,' by Andrée Hope (Mrs. Harvey of Ickwell-Bury),—'Craiktrees,' by Mr. Watson Dyke,—'Those Dreadful Twins: Middy and Bosun,' by Themselves, illustrated,—'Behind the Stars,' by E. L. Dames,—and 'A Great Lie,' by Mr. Wilfrid Hugh Chesson.

Messrs. Skeffington & Son announce a new work by the Rev. T. Moore, author of 'The Englishman's Brief,' &c., entitled 'The Beginnings of the English Church and Kingdom explained to the People,'—and three novels: 'As a Roaring Lion,' by R. Penderel, the author of 'Wilfred Waide,' &c.; 'Sweet Irish Eyes,' a story of society life, by Mrs. Cuthell; and 'God, Man, and the Devil,' a novel dealing with the marriage question, divorce, &c., by E. G. Henham.

SALE.

Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge sold the following books on the 5th inst.: G. Buchanan, Psalmorum Davidis Paraphrasis Poetica, Paris, in ornamental binding, and probably the dedication copy to Mary, Queen of Scots, 22*l.* Dorat, Les Baisers, La Haye, 1770, 20*l.* 10*s.* Comte, English Dance of Death and Dance of Life, 1815–17 (imperfect), 16*l.* 10*s.* Favole di Esopo ridocte in Lingua Toscana, imperfect, but containing all the woodcuts printed before 1490, 71*l.* Blake, Poetical Sketches, 1783, 33*l.* Skelton, Mary Stuart, on Japanese paper, 1893, 18*l.* A volume of theatrical portraits, 18*l.* 10*s.* Cruikshank, The Progress of a Midshipman, 1821, 12*l.* 5*s.* Cardinal Pole, Pro Ecclesiasticæ Unitatis Defensione, Lib. IV., Romæ, 1539, 15*l.* 15*s.* Sir T. More, Workes, 1557 (imperfect), 13*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*

JOHN LAMB'S 'POETICAL PIECES.'

11, Guildford Road, Tunbridge Wells, Feb. 8, 1897.

My attention has just been called to a letter from Mr. Bertram Dobell in the Athenæum of January 30th, entitled "John Lamb's 'Poetical Pieces.'" From that letter it appears that Mr. Dobell thinks that the copy of poems by the father of Charles Lamb sold by Mrs. Dykes and myself on December 18th last is the only one known to be extant. I therefore write to say that I possess another copy of the same work, the one which was given to my husband by Canon Ainger. M. S. Campbell.

Literary Gossip.

The life of the late Lord Tennyson by his son, the present lord, has now gone to the press, and will be published on October 6th. It is in two volumes of good size, and is full of concentrated material.

Canon Liddon's 'Life of Dr. Pusey' will be completed in the autumn by the publication of the fourth volume by Messrs. Longman. It is due, of course, to Mr. Johnston, of Cuddesdon, and Dr. Wilson, of Keble.

An unpublished work by the late Sir Richard Burton, entitled 'Human Sacrifice among the Sephardím, or Eastern Jews; or, the Murder of Padre Tomaso,' will be issued immediately by Messrs. Hutchinson. The book was written from material which Sir Richard collected when Consul at Damascus, but the publication was delayed on account of its strong anti-Semitic tendencies. The first part of the book is devoted to a general study of the Jew in England, Palestine, and elsewhere; the second deals with the alleged rite of human sacrifice amongst the Sephardím. The MS. will be published practically as it left the author's hands, only the slightest corrections having been made in the original text. It will be edited, with an introduction and brief notes, by Mr. W. H. Wilkins, and will have as a frontispiece a portrait of the author after the picture by Lord Leighton.

Mr. Gilkes, the Head Master of Dulwich College, has made a new venture in the way of storytelling, under the title of 'The Autobiography of Kallistratus: a Story of the Time of the Second Punic War.' Messrs. Longman are to bring it out.

The Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, late Fellow and Dean of Magdalen College, Oxford, and now Vicar of Portsea, has written a romance of the '45, called 'The Young Clanroy,' which will be published by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. on the 26th. It is a story of adventure which was told by the writer to the boys of an Oxford class.

Mr. G. A. Aitken, who recently wrote an excellent 'Life of Steele,' has undertaken to edit for Mr. Nimmo a new edition of the Spectator, with voluminous notes, in eight volumes, to be issued monthly. There will be numerous engraved portraits and other illustrations throughout the work. Mr. Nimmo has also in preparation a new work by Dr. Gasquet and Mr. E. Bishop, entitled 'English Monks and Friars: a Chapter in the Religious Life of the Thirteenth Century.'

Mr. Spencer Blackett, who is leaving to-day for the United States on a business tour, has been offered and has accepted a seat on the Board of Directors of Kegan Paul & Co.

Blackwood's Magazine for March will contain an article on 'Gordon's Staff-Officer at Khartum,' with excerpts from the portion of Col. Stuart's diary which was recovered after his murder.

The Anniversary Study in the forthcoming number of the Cornhill Magazine is from the pen of Mr. Sidney Lee. Its subject is 'The Death of Queen Elizabeth.' The Bishop of London's recent lecture on 'Picturesqueness in History' is reprinted in extenso, and a further instalment is given from the diaries of the late Sir Charles Murray, dealing with the visit to Windsor in the year 1844 of the Tsar Nicholas, whose frank and unconventional manners are illustrated by several curious anecdotes. Signor Giovanni Costa, the well-known Italian artist, gives his reminiscences of the late Lord Leighton, with whom he was more or less associated for upwards of forty years. Mr. J. F. Taylor, Q.C., contributes an article on 'Irish Oratory,' with special reference to Grattan, Curran, Plunket, O'Connell, and Sheil; and Miss Kingsley supplies in 'Two African Days' Entertainments' a humorous account of her adventures with a native patient and a supposed mad dog.

It is said that the report of the syndicate appointed by the Cambridge Senate on the question of degrees for women is nearly completed, and will probably be issued in two or three weeks.

The second annual general meeting of the donors and subscribers to the Booksellers' Seaside Holiday Home will take place at the Sunday School Union, in the Old Bailey, at six o'clock on Monday evening next. It is pleasant to see from the report to be presented that the home has proved successful. The number of visitors has exceeded five hundred, and there is a balance in hand of 265*l.* 19*s.* 11*d.*, after providing for all liabilities, besides the furniture, which has cost 296*l.* The library consists of 166 volumes of modern books, and would be the better for additions.

Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge's first important book sale in March is to include a few articles of note in the shape of manuscripts. At the head of these come the original autograph MSS. of Keats's 'Endymion' and 'Lamia,' the property of a relative of Mr. John Taylor, who, with his partner Mr. Hessey, published the poems; the former MS. extends to 181 post 4to. leaves, and the latter to 26 leaves on foolscap folio paper. Both have been collated by Mr. Buxton Forman for his four-volume edition of Keats's works. The other articles include an original unpublished poem of two verses by Thackeray; two original MSS. of William Morris, one a story and the other a poem, both of which appeared in the Commonweal; and the original MS. of what seems to be an earlier form of Thomas Hobbes's 'Leviathan' than that in print. The first editions in this sale include one of Swift's 'Tale of a Tub,' 1704, a fine copy; one of Goldsmith's 'Vicar of Wakefield,' 1766, in the original calf; and the excessively rare first edition of Mr. George Meredith's 'Poems,' published by J. W. Parker & Son in 1851. There is also a small selection of very tastefully extra-illustrated books on sporting subjects.

It is not improbable that Sir Rowland Blennerhassett will become President of Queen's College, Cork, as Dr. Slattery is retiring from ill health.

We much regret to hear of the death at an advanced age of an old correspondent, Dr. C. Tomlinson, F.R.S., who was for many years a teacher in King's College School and the chief compiler of 'Tomlinson's Cyclopædia of the Useful Arts,' a well-known work in its day. He was a large contributor to the Saturday Magazine, and some of his books were republished from it—his 'Amusements in Chess,' 'Introduction to Natural Philosophy,' &c. He also published some biographies of scientific discoverers. In later life he turned more to literature, wrote a book in two volumes on the sonnet, and translated the 'Inferno' and also 'Hermann und Dorothea.' He was for a time Barlow Lecturer.

Following his 'Gutter-Snipes,' Mr. Phil May has completed a humorously treated pictorial alphabet of large and small letters. The whole of the limited and numbered edition, entitled 'Phil May's A B C,' which the Leadenhall Press will shortly have ready, has been absorbed by the booksellers in advance.

It is proposed to found a Pestalozzi Translation Society, for the purpose of publishing English versions of the principal works of the Swiss pedagogue.

It is understood that an appeal has been made to the head masters by the Oxford Teachers' Training Syndicate, in the hope of inducing them to grant facilities for special study to their younger assistants.

Dr. Stokes, of Dublin, has discovered, or rather recovered, in Marsh's Library an uncatalogued collection of nearly forty thousand volumes, containing the greater part of Bishop Stillingfleet's library.

The University Court of St. Andrews has resolved, on the advice of its Chancellor, the Duke of Argyll, to resist the recent decision of the Privy Council, and to promote an "action of reduction"—this in spite of the fact that the Universities Commissioners had expressed an opinion that the most important of the ordinances affecting St. Andrews and Dundee, as confirmed by the Privy Council, could no longer be postponed, unless on financial grounds.

The Welsh Central Board have selected seven out of fifty-five candidates for the Chief Inspectorship of Intermediate Schools. Amongst the seven selected are Mr. Huckwell, Mr. O. M. Edwards of Oxford, and Mr. Roberts of Bath College.

The Chartulary of the Abbey of St. John's, Colchester, is being printed by Earl Cowper for distribution amongst the members of the Roxburghe Club. The work, which will be in two volumes, has been edited by Mr. Stuart Moore, from the original chartulary which is preserved at Wrest Park.

Messrs. Service & Paton have arranged to issue an edition of Nathaniel Hawthorne's romances, with introductions by Dr. Moncure D. Conway, one of the few still living who were intimate with him. 'The Scarlet Letter' will be published shortly. The edition will be illustrated.

The Topographical Section of the "Gentleman's Magazine Library" is gradually drawing to a close, under the editorship of Messrs. G. L. Gomme and F. A. Milne. The next volume, which will be issued very shortly, will contain the counties of Nottingham, Oxford, and Rutland.

Lord Glenesk has consented to preside at the Readers' Dinner, to take place on Saturday, the 6th of March, at the Holborn Restaurant.

The recent sale by auction of ex-libris at Messrs. Puttick & Simpson's appears to have created a considerable stir, and not only do they intend to repeat the experiment, but two important collections will come under the hammer in another place before very long. Those who collected these "unconsidered trifles" when they were to be had for the asking are beginning to realize that their small investments are turning out well; and Mr. J. H. Slater, who seems to keep an eye on the book market, is coming forward with a work on 'Book-plates and their Value,' which Mr. Grant is to publish. After all, the taste is not much less absurd than the postage-stamp mania.

The decease is announced of Dr. W. Scott Dalgleish, the literary adviser of Messrs. T. Nelson & Sons. Having been a schoolmaster in early life, he paid especial attention to the firm's school-books, and wrote several of them himself. For many years past he had acted as one of the principal correspondents of the Times in Scotland.

Mr. John Beattie Crozier, author of 'Civilization and Progress,' has a new work in the press: 'History of Intellectual Development.' Vol. i. contains a history of the evolution of Greek and Hindoo thought, of Græco-Roman paganism, of Judaism, and of Christianity down to the closing of the schools of Athens by Justinian.

The erudite historian Dr. Theodor Wiedemann, born in 1833 in East Prussia, died on the 5th inst. at Berlin. In the fifties he studied history under Ranke, and soon became one of his most active assistants and collaborators. In conjunction with the learned archivist Dr. G. Winter, he edited, from Ranke's literary remains, the last volume of his 'Weltgeschichte,' for which task he was eminently qualified. Dr. Wiedemann was a good specimen of the German Privatgelehrte of a type nearly extinct—unassuming, industrious, and unselfishly devoted to his studies.

The Parliamentary Papers of the week include a Report on Extension of Newspaper Post by a Committee of the Post Office (2*d.*), and Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1877, Statutes made by the following Colleges: Caius, Corpus Christi (Oxford), Hertford, Jesus (Oxford), Lincoln, and Oriel; and also Statutes made by the University of Oxford on June 9th and 23rd, 1896.

SCIENCE

Light Railways for the United Kingdom, India, and the Colonies. By J. C. Mackay. (Crosby Lockwood & Son.)

Light railways have been remarkably little developed in Great Britain, though an Act was passed many years ago authorizing their construction under certain conditions as to limit of speed and maximum weight on a pair of wheels; and Mr. Mackay is only able to furnish a list of nine light railways which have been constructed in England and Wales, the best known of which are those of Festiniog and Southwold. Several light railways of an expensive type were constructed in Ireland under the Tramways Acts of 1860 to 1883 by the aid of large subsidies from Government, and a contribution of over a million pounds has been allotted from the public funds for the construction of 236 miles of Irish light railways authorized under the Acts of 1889 and 1890. A stimulus has been recently given to the extension of light railways in England by the views expressed in many quarters that an increase in cheap railway facilities in country districts would promote the disposal of home produce and aid the farmer in coping with foreign competition, which resulted in the passing of an Act in 1896 to facilitate the construction of light railways in Great Britain. The effect of this Act in the development of light railways will depend largely upon the extent to which the facilities afforded under the Act enable such railways to be constructed at so moderate a cost as to secure a reasonable interest on the capital expended, the manner in which the earlier lines may be laid down, and how far the farmers may be in a position to avai themselves of the new opportunities presented to them. If it can once be demonstrated that light lines can be economically constructed in agricultural districts, and that the traffic on them can give a fair return on the capital cost, ample money will be forthcoming in these times of low interest for the extension of such railways. Railways are termed light when they are constructed either with light rails to the ordinary gauge of 4 ft. 8½ in., and with comparatively light bridges for carrying the railway over roads or rivers, owing to the moderate speed adopted and the reduction in the weights of the locomotives and the loads carried, or with a narrow gauge of 3½ ft. to 2 ft., and a corresponding reduction in the formation width of the cuttings and embankments, and in the sizes of the bridges, other structures, and rolling stock. Some of the light railways hitherto constructed in England and Ireland have been laid to the standard gauges, namely, the Easingwold, Golden Valley, Manchester and Milford, and Liskeard and Caradon railways to the ordinary 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge; and the Cork and Macroom, the Dundalk, Newry, and Greenore, and the Waterford, Dungarvan, and Lismore railways to the standard Irish gauge of 5 ft. 3 in. Six Irish light railways and the Southwold Railway have been given a gauge of 3 ft., the Glyn Valley Railway 2⅜ ft., the Corris Railway 2¼ ft., and the Festiniog and North Wales railways 1 ft. 11½ in.; whilst the Listowel and Ballybunion Railway, ten miles long, has been built on the single-rail Lartigue system. Narrow-gauge railways possess the great advantage of being adapted for much sharper curves than the ordinary gauge, so that the contour of the ground can be much more closely followed in hilly districts, with the result of a considerable reduction in the earthworks, and the line may be laid along the side of ordinary roads if desired. Moreover, these railways, with their smaller trucks, are better suited for the smaller loads and greater variety of goods requiring conveyance in agricultural districts. Lines in mountainous districts, like the Festiniog and Darjeeling railways, with a 2 ft. gauge, and several narrow-gauge railways in Switzerland, could not have been constructed to the ordinary gauge; whilst ordinary branch lines subject to the onerous regulations imposed by the Board of Trade, and obliged by railway managers to carry the locomotives and rolling stock of the main lines which they join, could hardly defray their working expenses with the small traffic of purely agricultural districts.

The reason of the limited development of light railways in the United Kingdom is readily explained by consulting the tables drawn up by Mr. Mackay, for only two of the light railways in Great Britain pay any interest on their ordinary shares, namely, the Corris Railway in Wales, which, with a length of 11 miles, cost, with its rolling stock, only 1,814*l.* per mile, and the Festiniog Railway, which cost, with its rolling stock, the large sum of 10,727*l.* per mile, but derives its main revenue from the slate traffic for which it was originally constructed. The Golden Valley and the Manchester and Milford railways, both passing through agricultural districts, 19 and 41 miles long, and costing with their rolling stock 17,617*l.* and 17,489*l.* per mile respectively, have naturally been financial failures; whilst the Southwold Railway, 9 miles long, having cost 8,500*l.* per mile, in spite of a considerable development of traffic, has only made net earnings of 0·8 per cent. on its capital, which is swallowed up by interest on loans. The light railways in Ireland—costing between 3,200*l.* and 8,700*l.* per mile, with the exception of the Dundalk, Newry, and Greenore Railway, which cost 13,688*l.* per mile—in only three instances give a net return of between 2 and 3 per cent. on the capital cost; in one case the working expenses equal the receipts; and in two instances the expenses exceed the receipts, the Dundalk line being one of the two. Under these circumstances it is evident that a radical change must be introduced in the construction and working of light railways for their development in country districts by the aid of private capital in the United Kingdom. The undue opposition of engineers in general to a break of gauge, the insistence of railway managers on the necessity of being able to run the heaviest locomotives over any part of their system, the costly requirements of the Board of Trade, and the financing generally needed in Great Britain for raising the capital for these light railways, have naturally proved fatal checks to the extension of these enterprises. The author advocates the adoption of a gauge of 2 ft. 6 in; the dispensing with bridges, level-crossing gates with their signals, fencing, station buildings, and goods sheds; great modifications as to interlocking, signals, and brakes; and a considerable reduction in the cost of the land required and the proceedings for obtaining Parliamentary sanction. The recent Act, indeed, aims at diminishing the restrictions imposed upon ordinary railways, and facilitating the advance of loans by the Treasury for the construction of light railways.

The book contains particulars of the extent, gauge, cost, rolling stock, method of working, and returns of light railways, not merely in India and the colonies, but also in France, Belgium, Prussia, Saxony, Italy, Austria, and Hungary, and in some instances in North and South America. A comprehensive view is, accordingly, furnished of the general progress and condition of light railways in various parts of the world, which should prove very valuable in assisting promoters of such undertakings to determine under what conditions light railways can be carried out with good prospects of an adequate return on their capital cost. In Belgium the 730 miles of light railways, laid to a mètre gauge, cost, with rolling stock and land, 2,688*l.* per mile, and afford a net return of slightly over 3 per cent. In Italy the 1,875 miles of light railways laid alongside the main roads, to gauges of from 4 ft. 8½ in. to 2 ft. 5½ in., cost on the average 2,600*l.* per mile, and give a return of nearly 4 per cent. on the capital expended. In France the light railways constructed by the Government to the standard gauge, without adequate regard to economy, have not proved financially successful; but they have served as very valuable feeders to the main lines, and have provided an indirect return by the increased prosperity of the districts they traverse. In India the mètre gauge has greatly developed the means of communication; for there are now 7,637 miles of railway of this narrow gauge open, almost wholly constructed since 1873, as compared with 10,596 miles of the standard 5 ft. 6 in. gauge, on the average costing less than half the expenditure per mile on the standard gauge railways.

The appearance of Mr. Mackay's useful book has been very well timed, when an effort has been made by legislation to infuse fresh life into projects for extending suitable railway facilities to outlying country districts, and when the future of light railways in this country will depend upon the extent to which their construction and working can be assimilated to the conditions which have had satisfactory financial results in some other countries. It would be quite as reasonable to expect a costermonger to make a good profit if he used a cart-horse to draw his barrow instead of a donkey, or urban district councils to keep the rates low if they laid down wooden pavements on country roads, as to anticipate fair returns from light railways in agricultural districts so long as they are constructed and worked in the expensive manner hitherto, in most instances, adopted in this country.

The Zoological Record, 1895. (Gurney & Jackson.) — The record of the zoological literature of 1895 appeared in good time in the autumn of 1896, and is a bulky volume, containing reports on several subjects which were not noticed in the preceding one. Among the recruits whom the editor has been able to enlist we note with great satisfaction the name of a son of the eminent zoologist who conceived the idea of the 'Zoological Record,' and did so much for it in its infancy. Mr. R. T. Günther has prepared an excellent report on the Cœlenterata, which we prefer to call the Cœlentera, a group of animals to which he is specially devoting himself. If Mr. Günther is right, and we are wrong in our Greek, the editor was wrong in allowing the Echinodermata to be called the "Echinoderma." In matters of this kind—not, indeed, of very great importance—it is the business of the editor to ensure common treatment of a language to which zoologists have too often shown the scantiest of courtesy. We are reminded by what we have said of one point in the full title of this work which amuses us; it is called a "record of zoological literature": the word might be as fitly applied to the prospectus of a bubble company or the 'Nautical Almanac.' It is, indeed, just because so much of what is written about zoology is not literature that no zoologist reads that much unless he is compelled, and it is this, perhaps, more than anything else, that makes the work of the "recorders" so useful and so necessary. That the younger members may improve on their first attempts as much as Mr. J. A. Thomson has done, and that all will imitate the care and accuracy of their doyen, Mr. Boulenger, and the laboriousness of the recorder of insects, is our earnest wish. So long as the present recorder of Echinoderma continues his work, the zoologist with any sense of humour will not be without entertainment.

Francis Orpen Morris: a Memoir. By his Son, the Rev. M. C. F. Morris. (Nimmo.)—The late Rector of Nunburnholme was the grandson of Capt. Roger Morris, who is said to have been the successful rival of Washington for the hand of the charming Mary Philipse; and the accounts of the ancestry and early life of the Rev. F. O. Morris form the most agreeable portion of the present work. The sketches of life and character as observed in the Yorkshire Wolds are by no means devoid of interest, and there can be no doubt that the Rev. F. O. Morris was a man of the most kindly disposition, with a sincere love for all living creatures—except those who disagreed with his opinions. His son, and successor in the rectory, has done his best, and to him the reviewer may say, in the words addressed by the Comte de Gormas to the young Cid:—

> Viens, tu fais ton devoir; et le fils dégénère
> Qui survit un moment à l'honneur de son père.

We fully appreciate his obvious desire to show his father in the light of an amiable enthusiast: a well-meaning opponent of Darwinism and a furious hater of vivisection. "It was impossible," remarks his son, "to say on what subject Mr. Morris might not be found writing to any periodical or paper in the land on any day in the year!" Also, as his old friend Canon Wilton says in a quoted letter:—

> "He [Mr. Morris] told me that there was nothing he enjoyed more than to hear one of his own papers read aloud to him by a sympathetic friend! Of course, we often discussed interesting points; in fact, between us we quite demolished that heterodox philosopher (Darwin)."

Here we have the key-note to the character of the man. One of the papers upon which he most prided himself was 'All the Articles of the Darwinian Faith,' published as recently as 1875, upon which we charitably decline to express an opinion. With regard to vivisection his biographer claims that his father "simply set forth facts," and we are not anxious to controvert the pious statement; but, if so, his example has not been widely followed by his fellow opponents. He disliked hunting because it was "cruel"; but in an imaginary conversation, in which he figures as Mr. de Bracy, he expresses the opinion that, with regard to birds wounded in shooting, "there is suffering—I do not call it cruelty—to some"; while with regard to hooked fish he says, "Even then the mouth is a sort of bone, which can have no feeling." How about fish which are hooked "foul"? but that, of course, is their look-out, and it is entirely the fault of the fish if they suffer. He was a violent advocate of the house-sparrow, and to-day the Yorkshire farmers are invoking State aid to reduce the numbers of this pest! But this he had, that he hated the pole-trap, which thing we also hate, and with this good word we close our notice of the life—and, alas! the works—of a well-meaning enthusiast who for years did his best to set back the clock.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES.

Dr. T. J. J. See is publishing an important and elaborate work, Researches on the Evolution of the Stellar Systems (Lynn, Mass., the Nichols Press), of which the first part has appeared. It treats of the universality of the law of gravitation, and the orbits and general characteristics of double stars, the author having calculated the orbits of forty binaries from the best observations. The author points out the near equality of the masses of most of the binaries which have hitherto been investigated, and the difference thus indicated between such stellar systems and our own solar system. It is much to be hoped that he will be able to complete the work he has so well begun.

Mr. Lynn has in the press (Stanford) new editions of his 'Celestial Motions' (ninth), 'Remarkable Comets' (fifth), and 'Remarkable Eclipses' (second), all revised and brought up to date.

The Berliner Astronomisches Jahrbuch for 1899 has recently been published. The contents and arrangement are similar to those in preceding years, whilst but little alteration has been made in the data. Elements of all the small planets up to No. 421 are given, and ephemerides for twenty-eight of those which come into opposition in 1897.

Vol. X. Part I. of the Publications of the Washburn Observatory of the University of Wisconsin (Director, Prof. G. C. Comstock) has recently appeared. It contains the results of the observations of double stars which have been made with the 16-ft. Clark equatorial of that observatory between the years 1892 and 1896. Most of the stars observed are well-known binaries in rapid motion, but a certain number of others have been added to the list from time to time for special reasons, eleven being stars of very slow relative motion, taken from those selected by Otto Struve for observation by different astronomers as comparison stars.

We have received the number of the Memorie della Società degli Spettroscopisti Italiani for October, 1896. Besides Prof. Tacchini's account of his observations of the solar phenomena seen at Rome during the third quarter of that year, and of the distribution of the protuberances in latitude, it contains M. Sykora's description of the solar eclipse of August 9th, as observed on the mountain Siiakawaara in Lapland, where the party sent out by the Russian Astronomical Society were favoured by a clear sky at the critical moment and obtained some good photographs of the phenomenon. It is remarked that the corona showed a characteristic extension on the line of the sun's equator, approximating to that seen at an epoch of solar-spot minimum. The height of the place of observation above the level of the sea was 471 mètres; the hill in question is near the right or Swedish bank of the river Muonio.

SOCIETIES.

Royal.—Feb. 11.—The President in the chair.—It was announced that Prof. O. J. Lodge had repeated and verified the observation of Dr. Zeeman that the ordinary lines of the sodium spectrum are widened when the flame is placed in a strong magnetic field whose direction is perpendicular to that in which the light travels to the eye.—A note by Dr. Larmor on the theory of the phenomenon, as elaborated by Dr. Zeeman and Prof. Lorentz, and on the relation between it and the Faraday effect, was also read.—The following papers were read: 'The Oviposition of Nautilus macromphalus,' by Dr. A. Willey,—'Report to the Committee of the Royal Society appointed to investigate the Structure of a Coral Reef by Boring,' by Prof. Sollas,—'The Artificial Insemination of Mammalia and subsequent Possible Fertilization or Impregnation of their Ova,' by Mr. W. Heape,—and 'On the Regeneration of Nerves,' by Dr. R. Kennedy.

Geological.—Feb. 3.—Dr. H. Hicks, President, in the chair.—Rev. H. B. Foster, Messrs. C. V. Bellamy, J. Bisset, J. R. Hosken, J. E. Hughes, and H. W. Lake were elected Fellows.—The following communications were read: 'The Subgenera Petalograptus and Cephalograptus,' by Miss G. L. Elles, communicated by Mr. J. E. Marr,—and 'On some Superficial Deposits in Cutch,' by the Rev. J. F. Blake.

Society of Antiquaries.—Feb. 11.—The Bishop of Stepney, V.P., in the chair.—The following resolution was proposed by the Rev. G. W. Minns, seconded by Sir S. Montagu, and carried unanimously: "The Society of Antiquaries of London, having heard that the sanitary welfare of the borough of Southampton demands the removal of some ancient and dilapidated dwellings, respectfully urges upon the Mayor and Corporation the importance of preserving ancient landmarks of historic interest. It hopes that an ancient vault of the fourteenth century in Simnel Street may be carefully preserved, connected as it is with the commercial history of the town and the privileges it enjoyed in olden time."—Mr. A. Wyon exhibited and presented casts of a fifth Great Seal of Charles II., and impressions and casts of some modern episcopal seals.—Sir J. C. Robinson exhibited a double mazer mounted in silver-gilt, probably German work of the end of the fifteenth century.—Chancellor Ferguson, as local secretary for Cumberland, reported the discovery (1) at Gosforth of a coped tombstone of the "hog-back" type, decorated on one side with knotwork and interlacing ornament, on the other with two groups of warriors; (2) of a cinerary urn at Carlisle; and (3) a mutilated and defaced Roman altar at Baldwinholme, near Carlisle. The Chancellor further reported briefly on the excavations made on the line of the Roman wall during the past summer.—Prof. J. Ferguson read the first section of a paper 'On the Secrets of Alexis,' a sixteenth century collection of medical and technical receipts. In this division of the paper an attempt was made to examine the difficulties connected with the authorship of the collection. These arise from there being two irreconcilable statements respecting it. The first, nominally by Alexis himself, is contained in an introductory address to the reader. According to it, Alexis, after unwearied study and practice and travelling about the world for upwards of half a century, finally in his eighty-third year wrote down the receipts he had collected and proved, out of remorse for having allowed a man to die when he could have helped him with a secret medicine which he possessed. The other story is that Hieronymo Ruscelli compiled and published the secrets under the pseudonym of Alexis. Both accounts were discussed at some length, but, from the contradictory and insufficient data available, the only conclusion possible was that the authorship cannot at present be definitely settled, and that of the two versions of the origin of the book the balance of probability is in favour of Alexis's, and not of Ruscelli's. Both, however, may be fabrications. The subsequent divisions of the paper will deal with the editions of the book and its contents.

British Archæological Association.—Jan. 20.—Mr. C. H. Compton, V.P., in the chair.—A paper by Dr. Fairbank 'On Portable Altars' was read, in the author's absence, by Mr. Patrick, illustrated by sketches made by the author.—A lengthy discussion followed, in which Mr. Dobson, the Rev. J. Cave-Browne, and others, took part.

Feb. 3.—Mr. T. Blashill, Hon. Treasurer, in the chair.—An exhibition of prehistoric implements was made by Mr. G. F. Lawrence, including a unique specimen of a weapon of stag's horn still retaining its wooden handle, thought to be of blackthorn, which was recently found in the Thames at Hammer-smith. This must have been a very effective weapon, from the toughness of the horn and the pliancy of the handle, in a fierce hand-to-hand combat. In the course of his observations Mr. Lawrence remarked that in the Yorkshire pile dwellings and in a few instances in the Thames the leg bones of oxen and other large animals had been found which had been used in a similar manner, but the difficulty of boring an ox bone in order to secure it to the handle must have made the use of the stag's horn more general. This example is supposed to be about three thousand years old.—Mr. Earle Way exhibited two specimens of Cyprian pottery and a whistle, together with a pretty little model of a quern in soapstone and a bronze bracelet from Egypt.—Mr. Hoyle exhibited a translucent jade earring from New Zealand, about ten miles from Christ Church, the hole in which had been made by a stone instrument close to the edge, but yet without in any way injuring the jade.—Mr. Patrick read a short paper descriptive of the discovery of a Roman house at Burham, in Kent, upon the property of the Burham Brick, Lime, and Cement Company, which Mr. G. Payne and himself had recently had the opportunity of disinterring. The house is a small one, measuring about 60 ft. by 34 ft., but possesses a very perfect and unusual form of hypocaust. This consists of a system of horizontal flues cut in the chalk subsoil and running round all four sides of an apartment measuring about 18 ft. by 16 ft. These flues connect with a central and two radiating flues from the mouth of the furnace, the central flue being large enough for a boy to crawl through, the others varying in diameter from about 13 in. to 8 in. or 9 in. where they joined the wall flue. At intervals round the walls were eight or nine recesses in which vertical wall flues ranged in pairs carried the hot air and smoke to the roof. Some of these were found in situ, the remains of others lying in the bottom of the shaft. Remains of pottery tiles, bones of animals, portions of coloured plaster decoration, and one small bronze fibula were found. The house appears to have been one of the smaller and less pretentious kind frequently met with along the line or in the immediate neighbourhood of the principal Roman roads in the south of Britain. The paper was illustrated by plans and drawings from sketches made and measured on the spot by the author, and by numerous photographs taken by Mr. Payne of the various features and phases of the excavations.

STATISTICAL.—Feb. 16.—Mr. A. E. Bateman, V.P., in the chair.—A paper 'On English Vaccination and Small-pox Statistics, with Special Reference to the Report of the Royal Commission and to Recent Small-pox Epidemics,' by Mr. Noel A. Humphreys, was read.

METEOROLOGICAL.—Feb. 17.—Mr. E. Mawley, President, read a report on the phenological observations during the past year. He showed that throughout the flowering season wild plants came into bloom much in advance of their usual time, and were, as a rule, earlier than in any year since 1893. The wealth of blossom on nearly all kinds of trees and shrubs was a noteworthy feature of the spring and early summer, while the abundance of wild fruits in the autumn was even more exceptional. From an agricultural and horticultural point of view the one great drawback of the year, which must otherwise have proved one of the most bountiful on record, was a drought that lasted almost without break—at all events as far as vegetation is concerned—from March to September. The wheat crop proved the largest and best for many years, while there was a good yield of barley and potatoes. The small fruits were also good. With these exceptions all the farm and garden crops were more or less indifferent, the crop of hay being especially scanty.—The Hon. Rollo Russell gave the results of some observations on haze and transparency which he had made at Haslemere. The clearest hours at a good distance from towns are from about noon to 3 P.M. The clearest winds are those from south to north-west inclusive, and especially west-south-west, west, and west-north-west; the haziest are those between north and east. On bright mornings, with a gentle breeze or calm, from autumn to spring, the haze or fog which has lain on the low ground frequently covers the hills in the course of its ascent a few hours after sunrise. At any distance within a hundred miles of London or of the Black Country observations requiring clear views are likely to be interfered with when the wind blows from their direction, and should therefore be taken early.

SOCIETY OF ARTS.—Feb. 11.—Sir F. Bramwell in the chair.—Prof. Ewing delivered the third lecture of his course of Howard Lectures 'On the Mechanical Production of Cold.'

Feb. 15.—Mr. F. Cobb in the chair.—Mr. C. F. Cross delivered the opening lecture of his course of Cantor Lectures 'On the Industrial Uses of Cellulose.'

Feb. 16.—The Marquis of Lorne in the chair.—A paper 'On the Progress of the Dominion of Canada during the Sixty Years of Her Majesty's Reign' was read by Mr. J. G. Colmer.

Feb. 17.—The Attorney-General in the chair.—A paper 'On Light Railways' was read by Mr. E. R. Calthrop.—A discussion followed.

MATHEMATICAL.—Feb. 11.—Prof. Elliott, President, in the chair.—Mr. F. S. Macaulay read a paper on a theorem in non-Euclidean geometry.—An animated discussion followed, in which the President, Mr. Kempe, Mr. Love, and Lieut.-Col. Cunningham joined with the author.—Mr. Kempe made an impromptu communication on Prof. Sylvester's partition theorem, and the President and Major MacMahon also spoke on the subject.—The President (Major MacMahon, V.P., in the chair) gave a short account of Mr. Segar's theorem that the product of the differences of n unequal numbers is divisible by the product of the differences of 0, 1, 2, 3, . . . $(n-1)$, and showed also that the product of the differences of n unequal square numbers is divisible by the product of the differences of $0^2, 1^2, 2^2, 3^2, \ldots (n-1)^2$.—Lieut.-Col. Cunningham brought forward some high primes, the highest and lowest being respectively 25,621,901 and 9,170,881 (forty-three primes in all).—A paper by Mr. H. M. Taylor on the degeneration of a cubic curve was communicated by reading its title.

PHYSICAL.—Feb. 12.—The chair was taken by Capt. Abney, who, as retiring President, referred to some of the changes which had occurred in the Society during the past year. The annual subscription had been raised, but a satisfactory number of new Fellows had been enrolled. The Society had lost two by death. A good deal of work had been done in the direction suggested by the discoveries of Röntgen.—The Treasurer, Dr. Atkinson, then presented his report and balance-sheet for the year 1896.—The following were the Council and officers for the year 1897-8:—President, Mr. S. Bidwell; Vice-Presidents who have filled the office of President, Dr. Gladstone, Prof. G. C. Foster, Prof. Adams, Lord Kelvin, Prof. Clifton, Prof. Reinold, Prof. Ayrton, Prof. Fitzgerald, Prof. Rücker, Capt. Abney; Vice-Presidents, Major-General E. R. Festing, Mr. L. Fletcher, Prof. Perry, and Mr. G. J. Stoney; Secretaries, Mr. T. H. Blakesley and Mr. H. M. Elder; Foreign Secretary (new office), Prof. S. P. Thompson; Treasurer, Dr. Atkinson; Librarian, Mr. C. Vernon Boys; Other Members of the Council, Walter Baily, L. Clark, A. H. Fison, Prof. Fleming, R. T. Glazebrook, Prof. A. Gray, G. Griffith, Prof. Minchin, Prof. Ramsay, and J. Walker.—The newly elected President, Mr. S. Bidwell, then took the chair, and an ordinary meeting was held.—Mr. Blakesley read a paper by Mr. H. H. Hoffert 'On the Use of Very Small Mirrors with Paraffin Lamp and Scale.'

HELLENIC.—Feb. 15.—Mr. Talfourd Ely in the chair.—Prof. P. Gardner read two papers: (1) 'On a Stone Tripod at Oxford.' The tripod was given to All Souls' College by A. Lefroy in 1771. It was found at Corinth. It consists of a basis intended for the support of a large basin, probably meant to hold lustral water. There is a central column, around which stand back to back three draped female figures, each on a recumbent lion, and holding in one hand the tail of the lion. From a comparison with a very similar tripod of which fragments were found at Olympia, it appears that this was a fixed type for vessels of the class. The date of the Oxford tripod was fixed by Prof. Gardner, from considerations of style, as the earlier half of the fifth century.—A discussion followed, in which Prof. Waldstein, Prof. E. Gardner, and Miss Harrison took part.—(2) 'On the Mantinean Basis.' This basis, bearing reliefs by a pupil of Praxiteles, was submitted by Prof. Gardner to a close examination. He maintained: (a) That the phrase in which Pausanias describes the basis should be read Μοῦσα καὶ Μαρσύας αὐλῶν, and must be regarded as referring only to one slab of the reliefs, which represents the conflict of Apollo and Marsyas. (b) That the three slabs which we possess were the whole of the relief. We need not suppose a slab to have been lost, and it is quite possible that six Muses rather than nine were represented. The group of Apollo and Marsyas would be in the midst, three Muses on each side as spectators, the whole occupying the front of the pedestals. (c) That the figures of Apollo, Leto, and Artemis which stood on the pedestal were not arranged as a group, but stood side by side, as they appear in the Praxitelean group copied on a late coin of Megara.—In the discussion which followed, Prof. Waldstein argued that the proposed arrangement of slabs was too asymmetrical for Greek art, and dwelt upon the difficulty of departing from the number of nine Muses, which was supported both by monumental and literary evidence. The practice of vase painters in varying the number was to be explained by artistic convenience, without regard to mythological considerations. Prof. Waldstein preferred to adhere to the arrangement of the slabs which he had himself publicly advocated, and which assumed that they had originally been four in number.—Prof. E. Gardner, though pointing out some difficulties in detail, was on the whole inclined to accept the rearrangement proposed by Prof. Percy Gardner.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

MON. London Institution, 6.—'Robert Burns,' Mr. W. E. Henley.
— Institute of Actuaries, 7.—'Governmental Supervision of Life Insurance in the United States of America,' Mr. S. Homans.
— Aristotelian, 8.—'Some Problems of Conception,' Mr. L. T. Hobhouse.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Industrial Uses of Cellulose. Lecture II.,' Mr. C. F. Cross. (Cantor Lecture.)
— Surveyors' Institution, 5.—Adjourned Discussion on 'Allotments and Small Holdings.'
— Geographical, 8½.
TUES. Royal Institution, 3.—'Animal Electricity,' Prof. A. D. Waller.
— Civil Engineers, 8.—'The Main Drainage of London,' Messrs. J. E. Worth and W. Santo Crimp. 'The Purification of the Thames,' Mr. W. J. Dibdin.
WED. Geological, 8.—'Nature and Origin of the Rauenthal Serpentine,' Miss C. A. Raisin. 'On Two Boulders of Granite from the Middle Chalk of Betchworth, Surrey,' Mr. W. P. D. Stebbing. 'Coal, a New Explanation of its Formation, or the Phenomena of a New Fossil Plant considered with Reference to the Origin, Composition, and Formation of Coal Beds,' Mr. W. S. Gresley.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Reproduction of Colour by Photographic Methods,' Sir H. Trueman Wood.
— Literature, 8½.—'The Scottish and the English "Macbeth",' Mrs. C. C. Stopes.
THURS. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Problems of Arctic Geology,' Dr. J. W. Gregory.
— Royal, 4½.
— London Institution, 6.—'Peeps into Nature's Secrets,' Mr. R. Kearton.
— Electrical Engineers, 8.—'Electric Interlocking the Block and Mechanical Signals on Railways. Reply of Mr. F. T. Hollins to the Discussion. "Relative Size, Weight, and Price of Dynamo Electric Machines",' Mr. E. Wilson.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Mechanical Production of Cold,' Lecture V., Prof. J. A. Ewing. (Howard Lecture.)
— Antiquaries, 8½.—'Inscribed Roman Prow found in London,' Mr. C. H. Read; 'Antiquities found in British Honduras,' Mr. F. Gann; 'Figures of Saints found on Devonshire Screens,' Mr. C. E. Keyser.
FRI. Physical, 5.—'Photography of Ripples,' Mr. J. H. Vincent.
— Civil Engineers, 8.—'Rockers and Expansion-Bearings as applied to Girders of Short Span,' Messrs. A. F. Baynham and F. B. H. Dobree. (Students Meeting.)
— Royal Institution, 9.—'Palestine Exploration,' Lieut.-Col. C. R. Conder.
SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Growth of the Mediterranean Route to the East,' Mr. W. F. Lord.

Science Gossip.

IN his lecture on 'Sixty Years of Submarine Telegraphy' at the Imperial Institute on Monday last, Prof. Ayrton referred to the controversy which occurred during 1856 as to the speed which would be obtainable on the proposed Atlantic cable of that time. This was first conducted in the columns of the Athenæum during October and November of that year, between Prof. William Thomson (now Lord Kelvin) and Dr. Wildman Whitehouse, following on the latter's British Association paper on the subject. Dr. Whitehouse was responsible for the electrical components of the cable, and not Sir Charles Bright in any way, who, indeed (as the engineer), recommended a much larger conductor and insulator than that selected—larger, indeed, than was made for a long time. In his mistaken views Whitehouse had the entire support of Faraday, though it is not often remembered.

MR. SQUIRE SPRIGGE is writing a life of Thomas Wakley, member for Finsbury in the thirties, but better known as founder of the Lancet. The book, which relates his quarrels with the hospitals and surgeons of the day, is a description of the development of the medical profession between the years 1820 and 1860 rather than a biography of Thomas Wakley.

FINE ARTS

Sculptured Tombs of Hellas. By Percy Gardner, Litt.D. (Macmillan & Co.)

CULTS are more venerable and more conservative than doctrine, hence, as Prof. Gardner well puts it, "the monuments erected to the dead belong in every country, like funeral customs generally, to a deeper stratum of the national consciousness than do openly expressed beliefs." A creed, in our sense, the Greeks never possessed, but certain beliefs were formulated by their most enlightened, least conservative spirits, and these beliefs found expression in their literature, epic and Attic; but if we want to know what the "man in the street," "l'homme sensuel moyen," thought and felt in the presence of death we must add to our study of aristocratic convictions, of poets, orators, and philosophers, some knowledge of folk-beliefs, as uttered in ritual, burial customs, funeral monuments of any kind. Hence the material of Prof. Gardner's book falls under three heads, considered in succession: first, the burial customs of the Greeks; next, the ideas as to the future life which prevailed among them; last, but foremost, the monuments to their dead. Through this tangled web of hope and conviction, of primitive sentiment and philosophic reflection, Prof. Gardner is a sure and sympathetic guide. There is little that is new to archæologists in his book, but there is everywhere evidence of that first-hand knowledge, that personal point of view, that critical freshness, which is as rare as, and perhaps not less valuable than, originality in theory; the author's mind delights in the balancing of opinion, and in one matter only—that of art criticism—do the scales topple to the wrong side. Prof. Gardner's admiration of the Sidon sarcophagi seems to us excessive. Of the Alexander sarcophagus he says, "Its beauty and preservation are alike overpowering"; we suspect it is the "preservation" rather than the "beauty." "Altogether it is one of the world's masterpieces." We cannot agree. Still more are we at issue with his estimate of the Tomb of the Mourning Women. "Never," says Prof. Gardner, "was there a work of art in which death and mourning were represented in so sacred and so exquisitely subdued a fashion." His critical faculty seems overpowered by the tour de force accomplished by the artist, who has produced "eighteen figures of women, all young and of the same type, all standing in poses both in themselves elegant yet suggestive of grief." Yes, that is just what they are, "all elegant yet suggestive of grief" (why "yet"?); but to us they are rather tiresome clichés.

Something of the same over-estimate pervades Prof. Gardner's discussion of the Attic stelæ. The reason of their wide popularity is not far to seek, and it is a popularity so wide as to be in itself "suspect." Compared with the vulgarities of our own sculptured tombs, the Attic stelæ are marvels of beauty and good taste; moreover, they touch an unexpected domestic note. The British tourist learns, to his sudden surprise, that the Greek was human—that, Turkish though his habits always were, he yet loved his wife and child. He learns also, to his still greater surprise, that it is possible to be pathetic without lapsing, as his own stonemasons habitually have lapsed, into emotional indecency. The Greek, who shed on the slightest excuse "abundance of salt tears" in real life, held reserve in art to be imperative; the Englishman, who at his mother's funeral weeps, if at all, with difficulty, delights in overt lamentation on her tombstone.

All this has led, we think, to an overestimate of the artistic merit of the Attic stelæ. Beautiful they are, and stamped with the hall-mark of a fine tradition; but many of the most admired—e.g., the Dexileos monument—are not exempt from the cliché reproach; which, after all, is only to say that every Greek stonemason is not an artist, and that some of us are touched more by domestic association than by actual artistic utterance.

One of the most interesting and able chapters is on the "heroizing reliefs" of Sparta. On the vexed question of the mysterious horse that appears so often, Prof. Gardner suggests a simple solution, that > "a chief accustomed all his life to riding would scarcely be supposed to lack a horse in the fields of Hades. We have ancient evidence that the presence of a sculptured horse beside a sculptured man showed his knightly rank in the 'Athenian Constitution' of Aristotle (c. vii. p. 95), where we are told that a statue of one Diphilas in the Athenian Acropolis, which was set up to mark his rise to the knightly rank, had a horse standing beside it."

This is in part true. But what a type came to mean is not on all fours with its original meaning. We believe the horse to be the old symbol and later attribute of the primitive (perhaps Pelasgian) horse-god Hippios, later identified with Asklepios and Poseidon, worshipped in Thessaly—where his coin type prevails—by the horse tribe of the Centaurs, and in Arcadia in the female form as the horse-headed Demeter. Like most primitive tribal gods, he was a god-of-all-work, ruling in the under as in the upper world; and trusting in the god's aid the hero faced the dangers and disabilities of life after death. One other detail, and we have done with criticism. In discussing the well-known Lower Italy vases with "Orphic" representations of Hades, Prof. Gardner says (p. 37), "Orpheus is evidently using his art to persuade Hades to restore Eurydice"; but Eurydice in this, as in most of the vase-paintings, is wanting, "a curious fact, which may indicate that the motive of the quest of Orpheus was originally something different." A very curious fact indeed. If the vase painter had meant to indicate the quest of Eurydice, surely, in the name of common sense, Eurydice would have been present. There is a limit to the stupidity of which even a Greek vase painter is capable. But the vase painter no more intended to depict the quest of Eurydice than did Polygnotus in his great Hades fresco in the Delphian Lesche. There Orpheus is represented seated holding his lyre, but no Eurydice, for Orpheus is present as priest and hierophant of his own mysteries, not as lover; indeed, the love story of Eurydice, dear to the modern romantic mind, was of very secondary import to the initiated Greek. Eurydice was primarily the wide ruler, Queen of the shades, and Orpheus in those days was never doomed to sing "che faro senza te," &c.

The chapter on "Inscriptions" is full of human charm. Every one knows the austere fashion of the fifth and fourth centuries B.C., which confined the epitaph to name, patronymic, and deme. Many think that the simple χαῖρε was a frequent addition. This form, common in late epitaphs, never occurs on the grave of an Athenian citizen. But such austerity was not for long. In the decadence of feeling, taste and ingenuity develope, and tombs are hung with flowers from the garland of the anthology, βαιὰ μὲν ἀλλὰ ῥόδα. Poets write dainty epigrams for ladies' pets; a long-eared hare, who died of over-feeding, is celebrated in elegiacs of some elegance. On the stele of Leon a lion is engraved, and Simonides writes punning pentameters. We are not far removed from the Cheshire worthy who hopes hereafter to rest in "Wilbraham's bosom." The last chapter of ancestor worship remains to be written.

Prof. Gardner's new book is only second in merit to his 'New Chapters in Greek History,' and this is high praise. The beautiful phototype plates will appeal to an even wider public.

Oxford Characters. Twenty-four Lithographs by Will Rothenstein. With Text by F. York Powell and Others. (Lane.)—Mr. Rothenstein has added to the collection of portraits which he made two or three years ago, and has bound up the whole in a handsome volume. Here we may see learned and famous professors assorted in an odd company of possibly even more famous athletes, in whose delineament the brain is dexterously diminished in order to emphasize the brawn, and of other undergraduates who, for one reason or another, have been notable among their kind. We think the combination an unfortunate one, for in years to come the portraits of men like Sir Henry Acland, Burdon Sanderson, and Robinson Ellis will retain their interest, while some of the others will be prized only by the student of fashion, as showing the extreme exiguity of nether garments permitted by the police. At the first glance many of Mr. Rothenstein's drawings strike one as caricatures; but this, except perhaps in one or two instances, is not really the case. The artist has a remarkable gift for seizing characteristic expressions and attitudes, and though the element of exaggeration is not altogether absent, the portraits, on the whole, are wonderfully faithful and full of humour, and there are but few failures. To comment on the latter would lead us into personalities; but we may signalize among Mr. Rothenstein's successes the portraits of Mr. Morfill and Prof. York Powell. The Professor, we may add, occupies a peculiar position in the book. Here is his portrait and the volume is dedicated to him, while at the same time he is the principal author of the notices prefixed. These aim at epigram, but the epigram is not good, and the style is cumbrous and archaic. The book would have been better without them.

The Classical Sculpture Gallery, 1896, Parts I. and II. (Grevel & Co.), ranks itself with L'Art Pratique, and contains more than, strictly speaking, its title indicates. It consists of rather heavy and blackish photographic copies from sculptures of various schools, dates, and materials—marble, stone, bronze, and brass. 'The Seated Hermes,' from Naples; the clumsy and exaggerated head of 'The Dying Alexander,' so called, from Florence; reliefs by A. Pisano from the Campanile, Florence; statues from the Palais de Justice, Poitiers; Verrocchio's 'Boy with a Dolphin,' from the Palazzo Vecchio, Florence; and 'King Arthur,' from the famous group of tomb-statues in the Hofkirche at Innsbruck, are all to be found in one number. The fault lies in the process employed for the prints, but the cost—only sixpence a number—is to be noted. The Print Gallery (same publishers) is of small folio size, large enough for the reproduction in a satisfactory way of such woodcuts and engravings as Dürer's 'Nativity of Christ,' Stimmer's

'Child and the Maiden,' Hollar's etching of Van Dyck's 'Countess of Portland' (why not one of the 'Centum Icones'?), Delaunay's 'Le Petit Jour,' after S. Freudenberg, as well as works of Zasinger, L. Cranach, Burgkmair, Rembrandt, and Tocqué.

La Galerie Comique du Dix-neuvième Siècle. (Paris, Strauss.)—Nos. 1–6 of this very decidedly "free" and daring collection of caricatures contemporaines by various audacious and skilful satirical draughtsmen contain some gems which are "broad" and bold enough to please even jaded palates. Few of the caricatures are lacking in spirit.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY.—WINTER EXHIBITION.
LORD LEIGHTON'S PICTURES.

(Third and Concluding Notice.)

From the David (No. 18), which was intended to depict Leighton's interpretation of the lamentation of the king as he sat on the roof of his palace, "Oh that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away, and be at rest," the visitor will do well, if he desires to know how wide was the range of the late President's sympathies, to turn to the beautiful idyl which Mr. Ashton has lent under the title Pastoral (21), a work of the year 1867—the master's prime. It followed 'David' on his easel, and it was at the Academy with 'Venus disrobing for the Bath,' No. 56, to which we shall come presently, and the 'Roman Mother,' on which we have already commented. The composition is so graceful and pure that it might have been developed from a Greek vase, while the sentiment which inspires this charming group of a shepherd and a girl whom he is teaching to play on the double pipes is quite Hellenic. So likewise are the passion and the graceful restraint of the damsel as she leans against her lover's breast. The design has much of the elegance discoverable in those lovely statuettes of Tanagra, the first of which came to light about the time 'A Pastoral' was painted. The chief fault of 'A Pastoral' is that the girl is somewhat more French than classical, but all the rest of the picture, the draperies throughout, the man's face and demeanour, his stalwart figure, the sheep that linger in the shadows of the trees, the gleam of light that strikes along the sward, and the hills of the background that darken in the coming night are in harmony with each other, and also with the style and tenor of the picture. In short, there is no straining of the sentiment of this excellent design.

Leighton's exemplary care about details could hardly be better illustrated than in the embroidery painted in the half-length figure of A Noble Lady of Venice (23), a picture not exhibited till now, and the property of Lord Armstrong. The lady, a portrait of course, wears a brocaded gown, the execution of which, as a specimen of brush power, is not unworthy of Frank Hals. The large picture of Perseus and Andromeda (32), painted in 1891, needs no lengthy comment. Here again the trouble Leighton gave himself in preparing his works is conspicuous. In order to solidify his ideas of the subject, he modelled in clay not only the figure of Andromeda, but the group of Perseus and Pegasus, and he carried out his conception of the attitude of the hero and his horse with superabundant care. These models are now in the Water-Colour Room and numbered 322. In the same room are the Sketch Model for a Group of Three Figures in 'The Daphnephoria' (312) and models of Cymon and Iphigenia in the large picture 'Cymon and Iphigenia,' Nos. 314 and 315, together with One of the Figures in 'The Daphnephoria,' No. 320. It was by means of the statuettes that Leighton contrived to impart so much force to the expressive light and shade of 'Perseus and Andromeda,' and to illustrate the relationship of the chained maiden and the rescuer. The very telling shadow of the dragon's wing, in which Andromeda's flesh is seen, was best studied by these means. Although we do not care for the monster, it is impossible not to admire the suitability of the landscape and seascape. The dark and deep rift in the iron-bound coast, and the narrow opening through which the placid sea is seen, form a capital instance of Leighton's ability to compose the mise-en-scène of his subjects, an ability of which other first-rate examples are 'David,' 'Pastoral,' 'Cymon and Iphigenia,' and 'Clytie'; but the altar-like rock rising from the dark-green water in the middle of the inlet is almost too well arranged to sustain the monster and his prey. On the other hand, the wildness of the rift and its chilly gloom are very well suited to the occasion. We believe the scene of this background was found on the coast of Donegal. The radiance surrounding Perseus is not radiant enough, the rock painting is academic, while the dragon is far from being an unqualified success.

The Jealousy of Simætha the Sorceress (33) leaves nothing to be desired in the agony of the woman's beautiful face, which is modelled as if it were carved out of marble, while she turns in her seat and is filled with dread because of the omen following the immolation of the dove upon the magic wheel at her side. The Arab Hall (34), a fine study of colour and effect, shows the beauty of Mr. Aitchison's adaptation of Oriental art to his friend's taste for the sumptuous. Ariadne abandoned by Theseus (36), painted in 1868, is, in our opinion, the simplest and most pathetic of Leighton's pictures. Ariadne wears a voluminous mantle of a wan olive colour, over a tunic of marble white; and these colours not only harmonize with the pallors of her carnations, but enhance the mournful sentiment of the design, while they add the force of contrast to the livid purple of the waveless sea, which extends to the horizon and meets there a long bar of brass-like light. Leighton, always careful of his accessories, has introduced among the arid herbage of the white limestone cliff groups of harsh and dry mortuary flowers, and cast over the whole scene the cold shadow of the brooding clouds which slowly spread themselves as far as we can see. The yellowish-brown flowers are the strongest notes in the picture's coloration, and yet so skilfully are all its elements harmonized that there is no lack of strength of tone or tint. A much smaller picture of A Greek Girl Dancing (38) owes its existence to Leighton's seeing a beautiful damsel dancing with a slow rhythmical motion upon the sands of Cadiz Bay. She moves with charming freedom and abundant grace, her draperies swaying about her knees. The élan of her attitude is in the best taste. A much larger picture, The Garden of the Hesperides (39), which we described before it went to the Academy in 1892, need not detain us now. Fine in every technical respect, it, in spite of the brilliance, gaiety, and splendour of its colouring, the voluptuousness and grace of the figures, fails in adding to our admiration for Leighton, simply because it has no ruling purpose and no vitalizing motive, such as nearly all his more ambitious works possess. Yet in one supremely important respect—in its delightful harmonies of "rose, amber, emerald, blue," and in the glowing lustre of its sunlight effect—No. 39 is the equal of any picture here.

Lord Davey's Golden Hours (40) illustrates the culmination of the Italian Renaissance as Leighton understood it. Here the coloration and the light and shade combine to produce excellent chiaroscuro and a choice exercise in tone. We can hardly tell why the life-size, half-length figure of a beautiful damsel—whose bare shoulders and bosom afford a sumptuous example of masterly treatment for the flesh, a noble instance of what the carnations ought to be in art—is styled Atalanta (44). Cleoboulos instructing his Daughter Cleobouline (45) is exactly what a Greek Watteau might be expected to paint. The charming figure of the girl in a pale purple, semi-transparent costume, her ingenuous expression, and her attentive air, are quite excellent. The teacher is a little prosaic, but the beauty, simplicity, and colour of the picture as a whole are admirable. The largeness and sumptuousness of the nude Actæa (49), reclining on the shore and turning to look over her shoulder at the dolphins disporting in the shallow sea near her feet, are not the only charms of a picture the style of which and the flesh modelling are just what they should be. The brilliancy and homogeneity of the whole work are such that it may seem ungrateful to challenge the drawing of her right thigh, as well as to complain that her hands are too large and the dolphins are too near her. It is a work of 1868, and was at the Academy with 'Ariadne Abandoned' and the delightful 'Acme and Septimius,' which is here again as No. 171.

There is somewhat excessive grace and sweetness about the small full-length figure of the naked virgin standing near the edge of a marble bath which Leighton called The Bath of Psyche (51), and the Academicians bought it with the Chantrey Fund. Neither it nor the Egyptian Slinger (53), which was the fruit of the artist's Nile voyage, is one of his best works. Nearly thirty years before this the President painted an immeasurably finer Venus disrobing for the Bath (56), which was some time in hand before he sent it to Trafalgar Square in 1867. It may be taken as a sign of the times that more than one beautiful lady was wont to hint that she had been the model for this beautiful whole-length, life-size goddess, and the artist was wont to smile when he heard of these claims. It is more than possible that all of them and a well-known professional model besides were in the artist's mind when he painted this tall and slender goddess, somewhat more French than antique. It is hard to say how it came about that Leighton, whose flesh tints mostly tended to rosy rather than to silvery hues, made this Venus's flesh somewhat more grey and marble-like than usual. It is probable that the teint of some lady whose charms, unused to the sun, were paler than the model's, attracted Leighton at the time and set the key of these carnations at lower pitch than ordinary. However this may be, there is no doubt of the uncommon beauty of this figure, the long and pure lines of which are as chaste in their style as they are statuesque in their forms. The type of this Venus contrasts strongly with that of Actæa, or with that of the maiden singers in 'Daphnephoria,' the lovely girls in 'Summer Moon,' and the voluptuous woman in 'Flaming June.' It is right to call attention to these differences in Leighton's nudities, because they are sufficient to disprove the alleged narrowness of his taste and choice of female charms for the subjects of his art. In this case we have before us a Venus of the Court of Louis XIV. rather than of antiquity; with the former the dressing of the lady's hair, the moulding of her features, and even the slenderness of her torso and limbs, completely agree.

The catholicity of the taste of the Corporation of Manchester is curiously illustrated by its owning Madox Brown's 'Work' as well as the Captive Andromache (57). Although one of the most elaborate of the painter's efforts, the 'Andromache' is not one of the happiest. It is, in fact, a collection of almost emotionless statues, most skilfully put together. Some of the figures are lovely, and, severally, they are most excellent illustrations of Leighton's cast of mind. The best is the stately and graceful girl in blue with the Athenian vase upon her head, so elegant that she might have been born in Tanagra. Another picture that is not quite successful is Orpheus and Eurydice (61), a group of life-size, hree-quarters-length figures, the passion of which does not approach that of the far finer lesign of Mr. Watts representing a somewhat ater moment in the same incident. Mr. Watts's dea is a concrete and organic one, anything but commonplace like Leighton's. However, the nterest of his picture for us is greatly enhanced by the beauty of Browning's "Fragment" of verse, which appeared in the Academy Catalogue of 1864, when the work was exhibited, and begins with the wife's cry,

> But give them me—the mouth, the eyes, the brow—
> Let them once more absorb me! One look now
> Will lap me round for ever.

This fragment may be matched with that other one which the same poet wrote in honour of Maclise's picture of 'A Serenade,' representing lovers parting in Venice, a verse which seems to have been developed into the masterly poem 'In a Gondola,' which we all admire. Mrs. Sutherland Orr, we may remark, in her 'Life and Letters of Browning,' pp. 130 and 133, appears to think that Maclise's work was at the British Institution in 1841. In that year he did not exhibit in Pall Mall. 'A Serenade' was, with the verses, No. 255 in the exhibition of 1842.

The Corporation of Manchester was much wiser in buying of Leighton the large upright picture called The Last Watch of Hero (67) than when it purchased 'Captive Andromache.' The former, though consisting of a single figure, is truly an epitome of passion such as the President seldom surpassed. 'Twixt Hope and Fear (68) and Flaming June (75) are the last of the works now before us which adorned the Academy's walls during the painter's lifetime. We have frequently admired the subtle pathos of the single figure of the dark-haired Greek, clad in dark green and white, who turns suddenly towards us as if she heard a longed-for footfall. Her lips seem to tremble and her eyes open wide beneath her eyebrows lifted in anxiety. Such are the means by which the artist justified his claim to deal with the more subtle emotions, while most of the works here represent his claims to delineate the more obvious passions. 'Flaming June' was so recently seen in this gallery that we need only regret the signs of failing power traceable in its imperfect drawing and the thinness of its painting. Seeing it on his easel before it went to the Academy, we hoped these shortcomings would be removed. No time was, alas! allowed.

Leighton proved himself an admirable painter of children's portraits when he chose to attempt them, which was seldom. The life-size whole-length of Miss R. Stewart Hodgson (72), a charming little girl, dressed in a dark red coat and a hat trimmed with fur, a hitherto unexhibited portrait, is an admirable work technically speaking, a perfect piece of flesh-painting, of which the carnations are as good as Millais's, while the whole is excellent in colour. Winding the Skein (79) was painted in 1878, the same year as Miss Hodgson's portrait, and as No. 302 at the Academy it charmed us all by its beautiful and gay coloration, the grace of the figures, and the choiceness of the attitudes and expression, as well as the loveliness and originality of the background of sea and hills. Of Summer Moon (84) we have already spoken as one of the finest decorative pictures of our time. It is one of the best of Leighton's compositions in curving lines of unusual complexity and grace. The effect of sultry gloom pervading the alcove is most appropriate and is admirably rendered, while nothing could be finer than the draughtsmanship of the draperies and the sumptuous forms within them. The sentiment of Albert Moore, which Leighton understood too well to repeat often, is to be found in 'Summer Moon,' which surpasses any of Moore's pictures in beauty, delicacy, and also homogeneity of effect and light and shade. These last were qualities in which Moore, fine artist as he was, was lamentably deficient.

To conclude our notice of the exhibition, we may once again repeat our opinion that the 'Daphnephoria' is the finest work of art in it—a picture on which Leighton lavished all his best gifts without regard to time or cost. Some of the figures in it are the most beautiful he ever painted, and it represented his conception of Greek life at its fairest. At the time it was ready for exhibition a description of it was published in these columns which was sanctioned by Leighton himself.

Fine-Art Gossip.

In accordance with a recent practice of the "Old Society," of which he was so distinguished a member, a collection of Mr. Boyce's works will probably be formed next winter at the gallery in Pall Mall. In addition to what we said in our obituary notice of him, let us state that in 1875 he married Mlle. Augustine A. Soubeyran, whose devoted affection soothed, so much as was possible, the sufferings of her husband's later days. Boyce, we may also say, was adequately represented at Manchester in 1887 by No. 1491, 'A Valley at Wooton, Surrey, 1866.'

At Messrs. Agnew & Sons' may now be seen one of Alfred Hunt's most impressive pictures in oil, which was exhibited at the Academy in 1874. Named 'Rents and Scars on Coniston Fells,' it represents with great power a thunderstorm brooding over the deep valley which Hunt depicted in the drawing he called 'The Miner's Path,' No. 1 in the recent collection of his works at the Old Society's Gallery.

It was to No. 3 of the Germ—and not No. 4 of that magazine, as we stated last week—that Madox Brown contributed an etching similar to 'Cordelia's Portion.' Brown did so with reference to the theme of Mr. W. M. Rossetti's poem of 'Cordelia.' Coventry Patmore's essay on 'Macbeth,' one of his most acute prose writings, Dante G. Rossetti's 'The Carillon of Bruges,' Woolner's 'Emblems,' and several contributions by Christina Rossetti followed 'Cordelia' in the same number of the Germ.

A picture by G. Richmond, entitled 'Christ and the Woman of Samaria,' the gift of the painter's family, has been hung in the National Gallery and numbered 1492. It is in Room XXI., and has been followed by Millais's 'Yeoman of the Guard,' popularly known as 'A Beefeater,' which was at the Academy in 1877 with 'The Sound of Many Waters' and 'Yes!' The 'Yeoman' is the gift of Mr. Hodgkinson, of Kensington.

The promoters tell us that they have on view in the Continental Gallery, New Bond Street, a "New Series of Marvellous Pictures from the Paris Salons, &c."—Messrs. H. Graves & Co. invite us to see "A Collection of Oil Paintings of English Landscape by the Misses S. Wood and A. Elias."

Dr. G. C. Williamson, the author of 'The Life of Richard Cosway' which has just been published, has in the press a book on 'Miniatures,' which is to be profusely illustrated. It will be included in Messrs. Bell's "Connoisseur Series."

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 13th inst. the following pictures: D. Cox, 'A Welsh Landscape, with men watering horses,' 110*l*. J. Stark, 'A Coast Scene, with figures, dog, and shipping craft,' 210*l*.

Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge sold the following medals on the 11th inst.:—Gold: Anne, Accession, 1702, 14*l*. 15*s*. Silver: Elizabeth, oval and gilt, 20*l*. 15*s*. Return of William III. from Ireland, bust of the king on the obverse, the queen on the reverse, 17*l*. 5*s*. Medal by Roettier on the presentation of a new chain of honour to the Lord Mayor of Dublin, 12*l*. Loyal Society medal, 1745, 12*l*. 15*s*. George III. small "Indian chief's" medal, 1814, 30*l*. Medal commemorating the earthquake at Lisbon, 1755, 10*l*. 10*s* War medal, "Candahar," 1842, 21*l*. 10*s*.

The following, taken from Le Journal des Arts, Paris, of the 13th inst., shows what is thought of art critics in France:—

"M. Osiris vient d'annoncer à M. Hébrard, président du Syndicat de la Presse, qu'il donnerait, à l'occasion de l'Exposition de 1900, comme il l'a fait pour celle de 1889, un prix de 100,000 fr. à décerner par le Syndicat de la Presse parisienne à l'œuvre la plus intéressante au point de vue de l'art, de l'industrie ou de l'utilité publique."

We have received a letter from Mr. F. M. Hueffer in reply to our remarks on the Catalogue of the exhibition of his grandfather's works. He admits that he ought to have given the dimensions of the pictures, but he thinks his additions to Brown's notes are more important than we represented them as being. We cannot agree with him. He adds that the Catalogue was put together under pressure, and that it "contains a number of slips of the pen, some of which your critic has copied into his notice"; but we did not copy a line of the Catalogue beyond the titles.

The Musée du Luxembourg has been closed for enlargements, involving two new halls devoted (1) to specimens of French Impressionists and modern foreign (not French) pictures, and (2) to engravings, which for the present consist of the works of M. Bracquemond only. The latter will in a few months give place to another collection of a similar kind.

At Athens a small potsherd has been found which bears the name of Themistocles, and is supposed to have been used when the ostracism of Aristides took place.

The French School of Athens announces that amongst the inscriptions lately found at Delphi there are some decrees of peculiar importance for the history of Thrace. One of them mentions the Thracian King Chersobleptes, and gives the names of his four sons, which were completely unknown.

An important archæological discovery is reported from St. Petersburg. Prof. S. d'Oldenburg, of that city, has received from the Russian Consul in Kashgaria a manuscript on birch bark written in the Kharoshthi ("Ariano-Pali") character. With the exception of some tiny scraps found by Masson in the topes of Afghanistan, no written example of this character has ever been found. The character is of obviously Semitic origin, and is written from right to left. The latest datable examples of it are of the fourth century A.D.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

Queen's Hall.—London Ballad Concerts. Promenade Concerts.

An important innovation was made by Messrs. Boosey & Co. at the Ballad Concert last Saturday afternoon. The second part of the programme consisted of a selection of "English Music of the Olden Time," given under the direction of a most earnest worker in the cause of antiquarian music, Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch, who, with his daughters, Misses Hélène and Elodie Dolmetsch, played various selections from sixteenth and seventeenth century composers, on virginals, lute, viola da gamba, and harpsichord; and vocal items were rendered by Mrs. Bertha Moore, Mr. Jack Robertson, and Mr. Douglas Powell. The known composers represented were Henry Lawes, Christopher Simpson, John Jenkins, and Henry Purcell, and some items were anonymous, taken from various sources. The selection was interesting, and we hope there will be more to follow.

Wagner's death day was commemorated at the Promenade Concert last Saturday evening with fourteen items given under the baton of Mr. H. J. Wood. Of course nothing new was done, for every work representative of the Bayreuth master is now familiar as household words. The various selections from 'The Flying Dutchman,' 'Lohengrin,' 'Tannhäuser,' 'Götterdämmerung,' 'Die Walküre,' 'Tristan und Isolde,' 'Die Meistersinger,' and 'Parsifal' were superbly interpreted, and the same definition will apply to the rendering of the Siegfried Idyl and the Kaiser March. Finer orchestral playing could not be imagined; but Miss Lucile Hill and Mr. Lloyd Chandos did not render full justice to the vocal excerpts with which they were entrusted.

OBITUARY.

M. Castelmary's sudden death during the first act of 'Martha,' in which he was playing the part of Plunket at the Metropolitan Opera-house, New York, has removed a hard and earnest worker in opera, though scarcely an eminent artist. He was one of Mr. J. H. Mapleson's "discoveries," and he first appeared in London in 1873. A more industrious performer never lived. Castelmary's voice was a somewhat rough bass, but he acted vigorously—at first rather too vigorously—and he did good service as a stage manager in Italian opera; but he apparently did not understand how to direct Wagner's music-dramas. At the lowest estimate M. Castelmary was a very useful public servant. His repertory was extensive. According to accepted records he was sixty-three years of age.

Signor Antonio Bazzini died on Friday last week. Commencing as an organist, Bazzini early took up the violin, and earned much reputation as a performer in the Paganini style. In 1864 he retired to his native place Brescia, and subsequently he devoted himself to teaching. In 1881 he was appointed a professor of the Conservatoire at Milan. He had ambition as a composer, but we fear there is no likelihood that his music will endure. Signor Bazzini was in his seventy-ninth year.

Musical Gossip.

Schubert's almost matchless Quartet in G, Op. 161, was repeated at last Saturday's Popular Concert, and Beethoven's 'Kreutzer' Sonata was finely rendered by Lady Halle and Mr. Leonard Borwick. The last-named artist was most praiseworthy in Bach's so-called 'Italian' Concerto. Mr. James Leyland gave satisfaction as the vocalist in airs by Scarlatti and Dvoràk.

Scambati's Quartet in C sharp minor, which was promised for Monday, stands postponed until next week, and in its place Brahms's melodious Quintet in G, Op. 111, was given. The same composer was represented by the revised version of his Pianoforte Trio in B, Op. 8, and also by the Variations on a Theme by Paganini, Op. 35. These are mainly in the old style as to key relationship, but are very clever and difficult. They were finely played by Mr. Frederic Lamond. Some vocal duets by Schumann, Brahms, and Delibes were pleasantly sung by the Misses Florence and Bertha Salter.

The revival of Ferdinando Paër's one-act, or rather two in the original, opera buffa, 'Il Maestro di Cappella,' at the Prince of Wales's Theatre on Tuesday afternoon, was interesting. The composer wrote in the old Italian style, and his music shows the influence of Cimarosa, Rossini, and even Mozart; but it is infinitely superior to the French opéra bouffe of to-day, and the libretto, though exceedingly slight, is diverting. The trifle, which in its compressed form occupied only forty minutes, was very well played by Signor Maggi, Miss Pauline Joran, and Mr. Austin Boyd, with an excellent orchestra under the direction of Mr. E. Levi. 'Il Maestro di Cappella' was produced in Paris in 1821, Paer having succeeded Spontini as conductor at the Italian Opéra in the French capital.

Presumably the nervousness inseparable from a first appearance in London prevented Miss E. A. Atkinson doing herself full justice at her pianoforte recital on Tuesday at the Steinway Hall. This may account for the want of repose and impressiveness in her interpretation of Beethoven's Sonata in A flat, Op. 26. Miss Atkinson, however, possesses an excellent technique, and played several smaller familiar works with notable taste and expressiveness. A very pleasing feature of the afternoon was the singing of Schubert's 'Die junge Nonne' and two of Mr. Cowen's songs by Miss Beatrice Frost, who was sympathetically accompanied by Miss Ross Hicks.

It is unofficially announced that the Carl Rosa Opera Company will have another brief season in London next autumn and at Covent Garden Theatre. We sincerely trust that the assertion is founded on fact.

An ode for chorus and orchestra has been written by Mr. F. H. Cowen in commemoration of the Queen's long reign, and it will be performed at some of the forthcoming celebrations.

An excellent scheme for the spring and summer concerts of the eighty-fifth season of the Philharmonic Society is arranged. Several new works are announced, among them being a Scottish pianoforte concerto by Sir Alexander Mackenzie, to be played by M. Paderewski; an overture, 'Spring and Youth,' by Mr. Herbert Bunning; a vocal scena by Mr. F. H. Cowen; an English 'Fantasia' by Mr. Edward German; and Orchestral Variations by Dr. Hubert Parry. All these are to be conducted by their respective composers. In addition is promised Glazounow's Symphony, No. 4, also under the composer's personal direction. Several other works by British composers new to these concerts are announced to be given with their respective composers at the desk. The general programme looks very commendable, and, of course, Sir Alexander Mackenzie remains conductor in chief.

Mr. Robert Newman has forwarded us advance programmes of the spring series of the Lamoureux Concerts during the last week in March. To give an entire synopsis of the series would neither be possible nor desirable. A few of the more salient features of the series may, however, be noted. The classical composers are well represented, and among pieces unfamiliar to London are a 'Fantaisie Dialogue' for organ and orchestra, by L. Boëllmann, a composer whose name we are unacquainted with, and a symphonic poem, 'Tamara,' by Balarikeff. The schemes, however, mainly consist of well-known works, and selections by Mozart, Mendelssohn, Beethoven, Bach, Weber, Schumann, Berlioz, and, of course, Wagner. The dates and times of the concerts will be duly noted in our musical calendar of March 20th.

We have received a revised edition of the so-called Mottl "Wagner" Concerts, to be given in March, April, and May next at the Queen's Hall. Several other composers are placed side by side with the Bayreuth master, among them being Berlioz, Liszt, Handel, Gluck, Mozart, Beethoven, Weber, Mendelssohn, and Smetana. The concerts cannot fail to prove extremely interesting.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Sun. Orchestral Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall
— National Sunday League Concert, "The Redemption," 7, Queen's Hall
— Queen's Hall String Quartet Concert, 7.30
Mon. Royal College Students' Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
— Miss Marie Mott's Concert, 3, St. James's Hall
— Popular Concert, 8, St. James's Hall
Tues. Miss Eileen O'Moore's Orchestral Concert, 3, Queen's Hall
— Bohemian String Quartet Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall
— Musical Guild Concert, 8, Kensington Town Hall
— Prince Ito Hanover's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall
Wed. Ismail Concert, 3, St. James's Hall
— Mr. Gompertz's Concert, 8.15, Queen's Hall
Thurs. Misses Olson and Barns and Mr. C. Phillip's Concert, 3, St. James's Hall
— Miss Edith Miller's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall
— Welsh Entertainment, 8, Wesleyan Church, City Road
— Mr. Henschel's Symphony Concert, 8, St. James's Hall
— Mr. Johann Bandy's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall
Fri. Mlle. Esbetschutz's Brahms Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall
— Hampstead Popular Concert, 8, Vestry Hall, Haverstock Hill
Sat. Popular Concert, 3, St. James's Hall
— Queen's Hall Symphony Concert, 3
— Crystal Palace Concert, 2
— Concert in Aid of the Funds of the North Eastern Hospital, 3, Queen's Hall
— Promenade Concert, 8, Queen's Hall
— Mr. C. Copland's Concert, 8, Steinway Hall

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

Avenue.—'Nelson's Enchantress,' a Play in Four Acts. By Risden Home.

Garrick.—'My Friend the Prince,' Farce in Three Acts. Adapted by Justin Huntly McCarthy.

If the visitor to the Avenue will dismiss from his mind all notion of the drama, and treat the entertainment as a picture of life in England and Italy at an exciting epoch in our annals, he may derive from 'Nelson's Enchantress' a certain amount of pleasure. If he look for more than an historical pageant he will be disappointed. Though called a play, 'Nelson's Enchantress' has not a dramatic moment. It is a series of episodes, in which the great naval hero is shown as subjugated by the lovely, impressionable lady, immortal alike through her beauty, her conquests, and her indiscretions. Some objection has been raised to the exhibition of an attachment such as existed between Nelson and Lady Hamilton. So well known are the particulars, however, that the author must be acquitted of any serious responsibility. With almost as much reason might objection be taken to the loves of Helen and Paris, or of Antony and Cleopatra. The charge that the play is dull cannot so easily be rebutted. The third act—in which Nelson, living at Merton in undisputed possession of his charmer, tells her that he is ordered on active service, and supplies the heroine with an opportunity for what is technically known as a "back fall"—is extremely dull; while the second act, which passes at the British Embassy at Naples, is more than a little fantastic. As a whole the piece is pleasing, and the pictures of the officers with their naval uniforms and pigtails are delightful. Mr. Forbes Robertson might almost have stepped out of a picture of Nelson so lifelike is he in all respects. The scenes between him and his fair enchantress have a certain amount of tenderness, and the death of the hero, depicted in a vision, is genuinely touching. It is useful to contemplate the picture of Neapolitan or Sicilian society exhibited in this piece beside those presented in a period not far remote by Sardou in 'La Tosca.' For tableaux still more highly coloured one may turn to Henri Latouche and other zealots of the First Republic, who depict the Queen of Naples and Lady Hamilton in the most lurid colours. The general performance of 'Nelson's Enchantress' is good, Mr. Lowne being specially excellent as Capt. Blackwood. Much of the detail of the work is amateurish, and some is a trifle childish. Other portions are, however, both pleasing and touching, and with the exercise of no very large amount of goodwill the whole may be seen with pleasure. Mrs. Patrick Campbell looks well as the heroine. She is neither, however, the model for Romney's pictures nor the giddy, irresponsible being whom Nelson loved.

'My Friend the Prince,' as Mr. Justin Huntly McCarthy has called his adaptation of a farce known in the United States as 'My Friend from India,' is a neat and creditable piece of work. It is extravagant and wholly inconceivable—qualities to be expected in farce; and it is a little too boisterous, for which, perhaps, the actors rather than the author may be regarded as responsible. It is, however, written with some spirit, brings about some humorous complications, and stirs much laughter. One other quality it has. As in 'The Prisoner of Zenda,' in which piece the leading motive seems to have been found, it has an underlying element of prettiness and tenderness, and one scene of wooing at least is pleasant to contemplate. The singing by Miss Juliette Nesville of a French song, though an excrescence in the work, was its most pleasing feature. 'My Friend the Prince' furnished opportunity for some good acting on the part of Misses Nesville, Sibyl Carlisle, and Blanche Massey, and Mr. Paul Arthur; and for some conventional low-comedy performances by Mr. James Welch and Mr. F. Kaye. It introduced to us also a Miss Miriam Clements from America, in whom beauty of face and form seems more conspicuous than histrionic talent.

My Theatrical and Musical Recollections. By Emily Soldene. (Downey & Co.)—Miss Soldene's 'Recollections' have no motto. With a slight alteration we furnish her with a passage from 'Hamlet' which is at once a motto and a criticism: "All which.....though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down." Miss Soldene writes vivaciously, and, in the main, accurately, and the task of reading her revelations to those who know the personages and things with which she deals is not unpleasant. Her work is not, like some recent revelations, a mere example of book-making. She has had the good fortune to know many of those whom the world calls smart people, and many of those whom the world calls smart people have had the evil fortune of meeting her. One and all of these she "gives away." At the time when she knew them they belonged to the jeunesse dorée. Now not a few of them are statesmen, judges, peers, what not. Relentlessly she reveals to the world whatever she knows in their lives. If they have loved not some "bright particular star," but some actress more richly endowed with symmetry than with talent, the fact is set down. If the conditions or the results might justify proceedings in the courts, divorce or other, all is told. Nobody is spared, not even those in highest position, and were the succession in doubt it is possible that claimants might refer in vindication of their pretensions to her book. Nothing is sacred to a sapper says a song with which Miss Soldene should have an acquaintance. She is not a sapper, but she shows a sapper-like contempt for social prejudices. French literature is rich in memoirs, the names in which are suggested by initials, leaving to ingenuity and conjecture to fill in the blanks. We have our own Mrs. Manley, and we have four volumes of 'State Poems,' in most copies of which possessors have extended names indicated by initials. In the case of those who have reached or scrambled into the purple, or in that of Hebrew financiers, Miss Soldene employs a little mystery that, if it were only inspissated, might prove piquant. Of Astrea, otherwise Mrs. Behn, Pope says that she > —— fairly puts all characters to bed.

This charge cannot be brought against our latest chronicler, but she leaves her readers in some instances in no doubt as to her meaning. At any rate, she mentions by name the people who went behind the scenes of the theatre at which she acted. This could only be done after society journalism has taken privacy and reticence out of our lives. Miss Soldene is not a Brantôme nor a Tallemant des Réaux, but her indiscretions are at least amusing. She ventures on French now and then, and tells us of "François première" and "Molièr," and speaks of herself as a "Mascot." Little eccentricities of grammar such as these may be overlooked. We are, however, aghast when we learn from her professional observation concerning a gallant soldier, African traveller, and Orientalist, "tall, dark, bronzed, masterful, and much addicted to long conversations with ladies of the ballet," that he was "artistically made up; the cheeks rouged a little, and the eyes indian-inked a lot."

Deacon Brodie; or, the Double Life. By W. E. Henley and R. L. Stevenson. (Heinemann.)—From the conjunction of two such writers as Robert Louis Stevenson and Mr. W. E. Henley a good play might well have been expected. It was not obtained. Pleasant enough and greatly to be commended as literature is the work they have produced. It has, moreover, some conspicuous dramatic qualities, but it is not a good drama. This was felt when, on July 2nd, 1884, at the Prince's Theatre, the piece was put on the English stage, and the impression is confirmed by a reperusal. English managers were censured for want of enterprise and insight in letting pass the opportunity of seizing on a play of this calibre. Not blind to their interests are English managers, nor yet wholly incapable in judgment. They were right to pass over a work which, with all its conspicuous merits of characterization and colour, defeats at every point the sympathy which is the one vitalizing and indispensable thing in drama. 'Deacon Brodie' will never obtain on the stage more than a succès d'estime. As a book it is welcome, and worthy of the reputation of its joint authors.

Three ladies have combined to produce Brownie (Dent & Co.). Miss Alice Sargent has written the little drama, and considerately given directions for the preparation of its scenery. The music is by Miss (?) Lilian MacKenzie and the illustrations by Miss Alice Woodward. We confess to liking the illustrations best. The cover of the book is especially pretty and ingeniously arranged. The drama is weak, and this is a specimen of the versification:—

> Come let us all obeisant
> Pay homage to the fair
> Stars in their courses pleasant
> Dance, so the wise declare.
> Then ringing, singing spheres
> We 'll join thy [sic] harmony,
> Listening with wond'ring ears
> To such glad melody.

THE ELIZABETHAN DRAMA.

English Historical Plays. Arranged for Acting as well as for Reading by Thomas Donovan. 2 vols. (Macmillan & Co.)—A collection of the plays of the Elizabethan age, based more or less solidly on English history, would doubtless make an interesting volume or volumes, and would stimulate the study of that history itself. Many a one besides Mr. Pepys ('Diary,' October 23rd, 1667) has been induced by an historical play to turn to the "true story"; but therein lies the gist of the matter: it was the stage that moved Mr. Pepys to consult the chronicle, and it is the stage, in Mr. Donovan's opinion, that is the only, or at any rate the best way of overcoming the initial difficulty of attracting attention to the plays themselves. Unfortunately, however, it is impossible to bring the methods of Elizabethan and Victorian managers into line. Modern managers neither will nor can adapt their scenes to the requirements of the ancient drama; obviously, therefore, the only way to bring the two together is to adapt the ancient drama to the requirements of the modern manager. To effect this it has seemed necessary to Mr. Donovan to divide, conjoin, transpose, or suppress acts and scenes; to redistribute, cut down, and suppress much of the dialogue; and in a general way to clear out much of the comedy and romance with which our old dramatists lightened—or, as Mr. Donovan probably considers, weighted—their historical labours. He has done his work with admirable courage, and, we willingly admit, with considerable intelligence, but with a result which to lovers of the drama as literature is simply appalling. The historical period represented by the plays in these volumes commences with the reign of King John and ends with that of Henry VIII. Shakspeare's series is, of course, included, and the gaps—with one exception—left by him in the continuity of history are filled up with plays by Peele, Marlowe, Heywood, and Ford. The one exception is the reign of Henry III.; for this long reign Mr. Donovan has found no play suited to his purpose. We commend his volumes to managers; we cannot to our readers.

Medicine and Kindred Arts in the Plays of Shakespeare. By Dr. John Moyes. (Glasgow, MacLehose & Sons.)—The late Dr. Moyes presented his thesis on this subject for the Doctorate of Medicine to Glasgow University in 1886; he afterwards worked on it with a view to publication, but left it incomplete; his friend Dr. James Finlayson has revised and prepared the work for press. In the little book which is the result of this co-operation we have what we guess to be a fairly complete collection of such passages in the plays as refer to disease and death. The comment which accompanies them is for the most part but meagre, nor does it often, we think, afford much illustration of the passages quoted or of the pathology of the time. Under these circumstances the utility of this publication seems rather doubtful, and we are quite sure we do not like it; we lack the professional enthusiasm needful for its enjoyment.

New editions (or perhaps we should rather say reprints) of Shakspeare's works continue to pour in upon us. We have received from Messrs. Warne & Co. two single-volume editions, the one called the "Universal," the other the "Victorian" edition.—Messrs. Bliss, Sands & Co. also send us a single-volume edition called the "Falstaff"—a portly volume conformable to its name, a clear and well-printed book. Its title-page, however, is scarcely worthy of its general excellence.

From Messrs. George Newnes we have received a handy, well-printed twelve-volume edition, called the Stratford-on-Avon Shakespeare on the paper wrappers accompanying each volume, though we do not find that title in the volumes themselves.

Messrs. Routledge & Sons have sent us two tiny volumes, The Tempest and Much Ado about Nothing, with illustrations reproduced, of course on a very small scale, from the once popular designs in outline of Frank Howard, first published more than sixty years ago. We would fain welcome them, if only in remembrance of the pleasure they afforded us in our youth; but we fear their day is hopelessly past.

The Whitehall Shakespeare (Constable & Co.), to be completed in twelve volumes, the first two of which were issued in 1893, makes slow progress, but has now reached its seventh volume. As an excellent example of the Chiswick Press we have already commended this edition.

Messrs. Dent & Co., having completed their highly popular "Temple" edition of Shakspeare's works, have now commenced their projected series of "Temple Dramatists," selected plays from the works of Shakspeare's contemporaries, produced in style and size similar to that of the "Temple Shakespeare." We have received the first number of this series, Webster's famous play of The Duchess of Malfi, edited by Prof. C. Vaughan, and with a good and sufficient introduction, glossary, and notes. The series, if all up to this mark, should be as popular as convenient. It is, however, only fair to protest against the scrabble, called an etching, which, under the pretence of a frontispiece, disfigures the volume: too many of the volumes of the "Temple Shakespeare" itself were thus disgraced. Unless something better than this can be produced, it would be well to suppress "frontispieces" altogether.

Dramatic Gossip.

OWING to the indisposition of Miss Terry the production at the Lyceum of 'Madame Sans-Gêne' has been deferred. On the 27th, the day fixed for its performance, Sir Henry Irving, now happily recovered from the consequences of his accident, will reappear as Richard III.

THE death of Mr. Henry West Betty, the son of the Infant Roscius, has taken place in his seventy-eighth year. Mr. Betty was for a few years an actor, and made his début in London at Covent Garden, December 28th, 1844. In 1852 he was at Drury Lane, playing George Harris in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.' Shortly afterwards he retired from the stage, but took to the last a keen interest in theatrical charities, which benefit considerably by his death. Among the parts in which he was seen in London or the country were Hamlet, Shylock, Macbeth, Othello, Richard III., Sir Giles Overreach, and Claude Melnotte.

'ROSEMARY' was revived on Saturday last at the Criterion, with Mr. Wyndham, Mr. Bishop, Mr. Barnes, Miss Mary Moore, and Miss Carlotta Addison in their original parts. As Priscilla Miss Annie Hughes was replaced by Miss M. Jocelyn, who, to her credit be it said, left no sense of shortcoming; while Mr. A. E. George succeeded to the part of George Minifie vacated by Mr. Welch.

As the opening piece at the Garrick 'The Man in the Street' of Mr. Louis N. Parker has been revived, with Mr. James Welch in his original character of Jabez Gover.

'THE PHYSICIAN' is the title of a play by Mr. Henry Arthur Jones, which will be the next novelty at the Criterion.

'THE DESTROYING ANGEL' is the title of a piece by Mr. Scudamore, which will shortly be produced by Miss Agnes Hewitt at the Brixton Theatre.

ON March 8th Mr. Robert Buchanan will open the Olympic Theatre with a play called 'The Mariners of England.'

'MY AUNT'S ADVICE' will shortly be revived by Mr. John S. Clarke at the Strand Theatre.

'THE FIRST GENTLEMAN IN EUROPE' is the title of a play by Mrs. Hodgson Burnett, which has been played at the Lyceum Theatre, New York. The hero, as the title indicates, is the Prince of Wales, afterwards George IV., who is at the time of the action in his twenty-fourth year. He can scarcely at that time have won the appellation assigned to him in the title.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—G. R. C.—M. R. & Co.—G. F. H.—A. C.—E. S. D.—M. A. S.—R. K.—C. W. H.—received.

N. K.—You should send such a question to Notes and Queries.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST.

To all parts of the United Kingdom.

	s.	d.
For Twelve Months...	15	3
For Six Months	7	8

For all Countries within the Postal Union.

For Twelve Months...	18	0
For Six Months	9	0

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

READY ON MARCH 1,
FIRST ISSUE AT HALF-A-CROWN.

WOLFENBERG.

By Mr. WILLIAM BLACK.

Forming the latest addition to the New Uniform Edition of this popular Novelist's Works.

TO BE FOLLOWED BY MR. WILLIAM BLACK'S
The HANDSOME HUMES. [April 1.
HIGHLAND COUSINS. [May 1.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITIONS OF
TWO NOVELS BY ALFRED CLARK.
Uniform crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

A DARK PLACE OF THE EARTH.

"Fresh, powerful, and extraordinarily vivid in presentment."—Athenæum.

THE FINDING OF LOT'S WIFE.

"A very fine piece of imaginative work—a night's entertainment of modern Arabian adventure."—Scotsman.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.
Royal 8vo. over 220 pp. cloth limp, 5s. net; or half-roan limp, 6s. 6d. net.

THE ANNUAL VOLUME
OF THE
ENGLISH CATALOGUE FOR 1896

differs from its predecessors in this respect, that it gives the

FULL TITLE

with Duplicate, and in many cases Triplicate, Classification under one General Alphabet, of every Book, instead of, as hitherto, Abbreviated Titles, consequently

The Bulk of the Catalogue is increased by over 80 Pages,

while the price (5s. net) remains the same.

It now contains over 7,000 Titles of New Books and New Editions, and over 6,000 duplicate Titles, forming the Index in one continuous alphabet.

NOW READY, price 3d.; or 3s. per annum, post free.
A SECOND EDITION OF
The JANUARY MONTHLY PART of
THE ENGLISH CATALOGUE OF BOOKS FOR 1897.

Giving FULL TITLES, classified under Author and Subject in one strict Alphabet, with particulars of the Size, Price, and Name of Publisher, of the Books issued in Great Britain and Ireland during the Month of January.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

The RUINED CITIES of CEYLON: being a Description of Anuradhapura and Polonaruwa. By HENRY W. CAVE, M.A., Queen's College, Oxford. Illustrated with 50 Full-Page Woodburygravures, from Photographs taken by the Author. Small 4to. Roxburghe, gilt top, 38s. net.

HEROIC JAPAN: an Authentic and Complete Description of the War between China and Japan, from the Inception of Hostilities up to the Treaty of Shimonoseki. By Dr. F. W. EASTLAKE and Mr. YAMADA YOSHI-AKI, President of the Chautauquan Association of Japan. With 3 Maps and numerous Illustrations. 8vo. 400 pp. 18s.

SHORT STUDIES in PHYSICAL SCIENCE. By VAUGHAN CORNISH, M.Sc. Crown 8vo. 230 pp. 5s.

"The information is thoroughly sound."
Manchester Guardian.

"Both readable and instructive."—Scotsman.

FOURTH EDITION (SIXTH THOUSAND).

HEALTH and CONDITION in the ACTIVE and the SEDENTARY. By Dr. N. E. YORKE-DAVIES, Author of 'Foods for the Fat.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Those who desire a long and healthy life will perhaps find their best means of attaining it in the study and observance of such rules as are laid down here.....Practical guide to 'Health and Condition.'"—Morning Post.

London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

ANIMAL EPISODES AND STUDIES IN SENSATION.

By G. H. POWELL.

8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. net.

"If you sit up late to finish a book, and if during the night you dream weird and creepy dreams of venomous blue snakes pursuing you up blazing telegraph posts from which you tumble down through miles and miles of space into a green, slimy moat haunted by hideous, scaly reptiles, it is a reasonable presumption that your book was a sensational one. Mr. Powell's short stories, which have been collected from Macmillan's Magazine, Temple Bar, and elsewhere in a volume under the title of 'Studies in Sensation,' may be relied upon to produce the effects referred to. They are told with a graphic realism which may sometimes be bloodcurdling, but which is never revolting."—Westminster Gazette.

"Mr. G. H. Powell is evidently a master of the short story. He knows how to concentrate its effects, without piling them up so as to defy all probability."
Spectator.

"So far as the more sensational stories are concerned, it is long since we feasted so fully of 'pity and terror.'"
St. James's Gazette.

"No one who dips into the 'Studies in Sensation,' and has the eye for a 'style,' will doubt that the author will be quite as effective in low tones as he is with the primary hues of the tragic and supernatural."—Academy.

"The stories are all admirably told and the interest of a very varied kind."
Glasgow Herald.

"We have nothing but praise for Mr. Powell's collection of stories."
New Saturday.

"There is not a dull page in the little volume."—Pall Mall Gazette.

GEORGE REDWAY, Hart-street, Bloomsbury.

MR. MURRAY'S PUBLICATIONS,

SEASON 1896–1897.

BIOGRAPHY AND MEMOIRS.

2 vols. crown 8vo. 18*s*.

NOTES from a DIARY, 1851-1872. Kept by the Right Hon. Sir MOUNTSTUART E. G. GRANT DUFF, G.C.S.I., sometime Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, Governor of Madras, 1881–6.

With Portraits, 3 vols. 8vo. 36*s*.

The UNPUBLISHED WORKS of EDWARD GIBBON. Including Six Autobiographies, Correspondence, &c. Printed verbatim from MSS. in the possession of the Earl of Sheffield. With a Preface by the EARL of SHEFFIELD.
Vol. I. The SIX AUTOBIOGRAPHIES. Edited by JOHN MURRAY. 12*s*.
Vol. II. GIBBON'S PRIVATE LETTERS to his FATHER, his STEPMOTHER, LORD SHEFFIELD, and others, from 1735 to 1794. Edited, with Notes, &c., by ROWLAND E. PROTHERO. 24*s*.

With Portrait, fcap. 4to. 10*s*. 6*d*.

LORD BOWEN: a Biographical Sketch. With Selections from his Unpublished Poems. By Sir HENRY STUART CUNNINGHAM, K.C.I.E.

With Portrait and Illustrations, 8vo. 16*s*.

A MEMOIR of the late SIR JOHN DRUMMOND HAY, P.C. K.C.B. G.C.M.G., sometime Minister at the Court of Morocco. Based on his Journals and Correspondence. With a Preface by General Sir FRANCIS DE WINTON, K.C.M.G.

With Portraits, 8vo. 16*s*.

The LETTERS of FREDERIC, LORD BLACHFORD, Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, 1868–1871. Edited by GEORGE EDEN MARINDIN.

With Portraits, crown 8vo. 7*s*. 6*d*.

OUR SEVEN HOMES: Autobiographical Reminiscences of the late Mrs. Rundle Charles, Author of 'The Schönberg-Cotta Family.'

With Portraits, 8vo. 14*s*.

The LIFE of BRIAN HODGSON. By Sir WILLIAM W. HUNTER, K.C.S.I.

With Portraits, 2 vols. 8vo. 24*s*.

LIFE and LETTERS of SAMUEL BUTLER, D.D. (Head Master of Shrewsbury School, 1798–1836, and afterwards Bishop of Lichfield). By his Grandson, SAMUEL BUTLER, Author of 'Erewhon,' &c.

TRAVEL AND ADVENTURE.

SECOND EDITION, crown 8vo. 7*s*. 6*d*.

RUNNING the BLOCKADE: a Personal Narrative of Adventures, Risks, and Escapes during the American Civil War. By THOMAS E. TAYLOR. With an Introduction by JULIAN CORBETT, Illustrations by R. T. PRITCHETT, and Maps.

With Maps and Illustrations, medium 8vo. 21*s*.

The JAPANESE ALPS: an Account of Climbing and Exploration in the Unfamiliar Mountain Regions of Japan. By the Rev. WALTER WESTON, M.A. F.S.A., Member of the Alpine Club, late British Chaplain, Kobe, Japan.

FOURTH EDITION, with Maps and Illustrations, medium 8vo. 21*s*.

The HEART of a CONTINENT: a Narrative of Travels in Manchuria, the Desert of Gold, the Pamirs, &c. From 1884–1894. By Capt. FRANK YOUNGHUSBAND, C.I.E., Indian Staff Corps, Gold Medallist Royal Geographical Society.

GENERAL LITERATURE.

With Portrait and Illustrations, crown 8vo. 9*s*.

COMMON THOUGHTS on SERIOUS SUBJECTS. Addresses to the Elder Students of the Rajkumar College, Kattywar. By the late CHESTER MACNAGHTEN, M.A. Edited, with an Introductory Memoir, by ROBERT WHITELAW, Master at Rugby School.

A NEW POEM BY AN ANONYMOUS WRITER. Royal 8vo. 10*s*. 6*d*.

The WATCH SONG of HEABANE, the WITNESS. A Poem. Based on the Traditions of the Early History of the World.

Crown 8vo. 10*s*. 6*d*.

SOPHOCLES. The Seven Plays in English Verse. By the Rev. LEWIS CAMPBELL, M.A. LL.D., Emeritus Professor of Greek in the University of St. Andrews, and Hon. Fellow of Balliol College, Oxford. New Edition, Revised.

With Maps, 8vo. 14*s*.

The NAVY and the NATION. By JAMES R. THURSFIELD, M.A., and Lieut.-Col. Sir GEORGE SYDENHAM CLARKE, R.E. K.C.M.G. F.R.S.

With Map, crown 8vo. 5*s*.

The DEFENCE of the EMPIRE; or, the Protection of British Ships, Ports, and Commerce. A Selection from the Letters and Speeches of HENRY HOWARD MOLYNEUX, FOURTH EARL of CARNARVON. Edited by Lieut.-Col. Sir GEO. SYDENHAM CLARKE, R.E. K.C.M.G.

THEOLOGY AND RELIGION.

Crown 8vo. 3*s*. 6*d*.

The SERMON on the MOUNT. A Practical Explanation. By the Rev. CHARLES GORE, Canon of Westminster.

Crown 8vo. 3*s*. 6*d*.

The WORK of the CHURCH in LONDON. A Series of Lectures delivered in St. James's Church, Piccadilly, during the Summer of 1896.

8vo. 12*s*.

DEAN HOOK'S CHURCH DICTIONARY. A Popular and Cheaper Edition.

Crown 8vo. 3*s*. 6*d*.

SOME THOUGHTS on the TEXTUAL CRITICISM of the NEW TESTAMENT. By Professor GEORGE SALMON, D.D., Provost of Trinity College, Dublin.

HISTORY AND GEOGRAPHY.

With Maps and Plans, 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12*s*.

HERODOTUS. The Text of CANON RAWLINSON'S Translation. With the Notes Abridged for the Use of Students by A. J. GRANT, M.A., of King's College, Professor of History, Yorkshire College, Leeds, Author of 'Greece in the Age of Pericles.'

With Maps and Plans, crown 8vo. 9*s*.

EUROPE in the MIDDLE AGE. By OLIVER J. THATCHER, Ph.D., and FERDINAND SCHWILL, Ph.D.

The DAWN of MODERN GEOGRAPHY. A History of Travel and Geographical Science from the Conversion of the Roman Empire to 900 A.D., with an Account of the Achievements and Writings of the Early Christian, Arab, and Chinese Students and Explorers. By C. RAYMOND BEAZLEY, Fellow of Merton College, Oxford. With Maps. 8vo. 18*s*.

BOOKS FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

8vo. 10*s*. 6*d*.

EILEEN'S JOURNEY: a True History in Fairyland for Children and Young Readers. By ERNEST ARTHUR JELF. With Illustrations.

NEW AND CHEAP EDITION OF TWO POPULAR WORKS BY H. C. BARKLEY, AUTHOR OF 'BETWEEN THE DANUBE AND THE BLACK SEA.'

MY BOYHOOD: a Story-Book for Boys. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 2*s*. 6*d*.

STUDIES in the ART of RAT-CATCHING. Crown 8vo. 2*s*. 6*d*.

SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY.

NEW EDITION OF KIRKES' HANDBOOK OF PHYSIOLOGY.

HANDBOOK of PHYSIOLOGY. By W. D. HALLIBURTON, M.D. F.R.S., Professor of Physiology, King's College, London. Thoroughly Revised with upwards of 600 Illustrations, including some Coloured Plates. Large crown 8vo. 14*s*.

TWO NEW UNIVERSITY EXTENSION MANUALS.

Edited, from Notes of Lectures delivered at the College, 1879-1892, by (Mrs.) C. A. FOLEY RHYS DAVIDS, M.A. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 3*s*. 6*d*. each.

ELEMENTS of PHILOSOPHY. By G. C. ROBERTSON, late Grote Professor, University College, London.

ELEMENTS of PSYCHOLOGY. By G. C. ROBERTSON, late Grote Professor, University College, London.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

DAVID NUTT,

270-271, STRAND.

JUST OUT.

THE SECOND AND CONCLUDING VOLUME OF

The NIGHT of the GODS. An Inquiry into Cosmic and Cosmogonic Mythology and Symbolism. By JOHN O'NEILL. Comprising pp. 583-1036 of the Inquiry, an Index (to both Volumes) of 38 double-columned pages, and a Memoir of the Author. Profusely illustrated. The price of the Two Volumes is 2*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

 As only a very small number of copies of Vol. II. have been printed, the complete work must shortly become scarce. It forms undoubtedly one of the most remarkable collections of facts relating to early mythological speculation and symbolism ever brought together.

The ELEMENTS of HEBREW GRAMMAR. With Exercises. By MICHAEL ADLER, B.A., Senior Hebrew Master at the Jews Free School. Cloth, 1*s.* net (1*s.* 2*d.* post free).

GREEK FOLK-POESY. By L. M. GARNETT and J. S. STUART-GLENNIE. 2 vols. medium 8vo. cloth, 18*s.* net.

 In this work will be found, inter alia, many ballads and tales derived from Crete and relating to the long and fierce struggle for independence waged by the Greeks of that island. Mr. Stuart-Glennie's Introduction and Appendices aim at establishing the unity of speech and belief throughout the whole period of Hellenic history and throughout the area of Hellenic culture.

FORTHCOMING BOOKS.

A. J. DAWSON.

IN THE BIGHT OF BENIN:
Stories from the West African Coast.

By A. J. DAWSON,
Author of 'Mere Sentiment,' &c.

Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.* [Next week.

DANIEL VIERGE.

ON THE TRAIL OF DON QUIXOTE:
Being a Record of Rambles in the Ancient Province of La Mancha.

By A. F. JACCACI.

Illustrated by DANIEL VIERGE.

Small 4to. 8*s.* 6*d.* net. [Immediately.

An attempt to describe Don Quixote's country as it is to-day. The illustrations, numbering 130, are the best work of the distinguished Spanish Artist.

STANDISH O'GRADY.

THE FLIGHT OF THE EAGLE:
A Romantic History.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.* [Immediately.

A narrative of the adventures of Red Hugh, a famous Irish Chieftain of the Elizabethan age.

SIDNEY PICKERING.

MARGOT: a Novel.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.* [In a few days.

LAWRENCE & BULLEN, LTD.,
16, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London.

NEW EDITION price Two Shillings

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy Ninth Edition With 5 Plates By W T LYNN B A F R A S

"Has we are glad to see, reached a ninth edition, which evinces the excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to-date — Guardian

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S W

FIFTH EDITION price Sixpence cloth

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy By W T LYNN B A F R A S

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S W.

SECOND EDITION price Fourpence

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY By W T LYNN B A F R A S

Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical —Scotsh Mercury

G Stoneman 39, Warwick lane E C

SECOND EDITION, fcap 8vo cloth, price Sixpence

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES: a Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses both in Ancient and Modern Times By W T LYNN, B A F R A S.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street Charing Cross, S W

Published at 7*l.* 7*s.*, and as the stock got low the price was raised to 10*l.* 10*s.*

Now offered for 3*l.* 3*s.* cash.

THE ROYAL HOUSE OF STUART.

SKELTON'S SUPERBLY ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF THE ROYAL HOUSE OF STUART.

A Series of 40 Plates in Colours by W. GIBB.

With Descriptive Notes and Introduction by JOHN SKELTON and ST. JOHN HOPE.

Folio, 40 fine Colour-Prints of the Stuart Regalia in Scotland and England, half-bound morocco, gilt edges.

(Macmillan, 1890.)

This was the forerunner of Skelton's 'Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots.' A special Prospectus will be sent on demand.

An extra set of the 40 Colour-Prints may be had separately, for framing or illustrating, for 1*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*

BERNARD QUARITCH, 15, Piccadilly, London.

SIR GEORGE TRYON'S LIFE.

NOTICE TO THE TRADE.—The FIRST EDITION of 'The LIFE of VICE-ADMIRAL SIR GEORGE TRYON, K.C.B.,' by Rear-Admiral C. C. PENROSE FITZGERALD, having been exhausted, a SECOND EDITION is in preparation, which will be ready on Wednesday, 24th inst.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

BEATRICE HARRADEN'S NEW BOOK.

NOTICE TO THE TRADE.—On Saturday, 27th inst., will be published, 'HILDA STRAFFORD and The REMITTANCE MAN,' Two Californian Stories, by BEATRICE HARRADEN, Author of 'Ships that Pass in the Night,' 'In Varying Moods,' &c. Crown 8vo. price 3s. 6d.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

NOTICE.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

The VOLUME, JULY to DECEMBER, 1896,

With the Index, price 10*s.* 6*d.*, IS NOW READY.

 The Index separately, price 6*d.*; by post, 6½*d.* Also Cases for Binding, price 1*s.*; by post, 1*s.* 3*d.*

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

The New Romantic Novel, SEBASTIANI'S SECRET, written and illustrated by S. E. WALLER, is now ready. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

Cheap Popular Edition of PHIL MAY'S SKETCH-BOOK (54 Humorous Pictures) is now ready. Crown folio, cloth, 2s. 6d.

New and Cheaper Edition of CLARK RUSSELL'S Novel, The TALE of the TEN, is now ready, with 12 fine Illustrations by G. Montbard. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"There seems no limit to the capacity of Clark Russell to produce stirring stories of the sea. He has so long and so osely communed with the illimitable ocean that he has acquired something of its power and its infinite variety. His test story, 'The Tale of the Ten,' is as good as anything he has yet written, which is high praise. It is better than some, nasmuch as the action is more rapid. Once started with the story, my Baronite found it difficult to lay the book down till e had seen comfortably shot, or hanged, every one of the Ten. This desire is, through a series of breathless incidents, ılfilled. Like the Ten Little Niggers of earlier fame, the rogues drop off one by one, 'and then there were' only just nough to send to Norfolk Island. The story, skilfully constructed, graphically told, is adorned with some of those narvellous descriptions of the many moods of the sea in which Clark Russell is unapproachable."—Punch.

A MISSING WITNESS. By Frank Barrett, Author of 'The Woman with the Iron Bracelets.' With 8 Illustrations by W. H. Margetson. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"A simple but effective story of love and crime. The history of the struggles of the three young dressmakers is escribed with wonderful spirit and convincingness, and the 'little mother' of the volume is a delightful study."
Morning Leader.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

An ANXIOUS MOMENT. By Mrs. Hungerford, Author of 'Molly Bawn.' Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Teems with the same delightful qualities that have won for her previous volumes the warm admiration of pleasure-oving people."—Morning Leader.

"The beauty and grace and spirit of the daughters of the ancient Anglo-Irish families is proverbial the world over, but o one ever drew these women like Mrs. Hungerford. One might almost think that she partly gave them this reputation. do not think that any English author ever drew so many delightful heroines. Mrs. Hungerford makes you see and elieve in the beauty and grace of these girls in their teens and the sweetest of their twenties, who as girls kick so against he pricks, and will yet make such good wives and mothers. Her heroines, for all their family likeness, are so high-spirited, o generous, so witty, so gay, capable of such tenderness when the process of the taming of the shrew is finished, that one eads of them all with the old zest created by Molly Bawn."—Queen, in notice of Mrs. Hungerford's life.

A New Edition of APRIL'S LADY, by Mrs. HUNGERFORD, will be ready on February 25. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

T. W. SPEIGHT'S Novel, The MASTER of TRENANCE, will be ready in a New Edition on February 25. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

A Cheap Edition of ALLEN UPWARD'S Romantic Story, The PRINCE of BALKISTAN, will be ready on February 25. Crown 8vo. picture boards, 2s.

BEYOND the PALE: an Irish Romance. By B. M. Croker, Author of 'Diana Barrington.' Crown 8vo. buckram, 6s.

"Amusing books have come from Mrs. Croker's pen, but her last, 'Beyond the Pale,' is about, if not quite, her best. t is a picture of Irish life, limned with grace and ease. Each character is a lifelike portrait.....It is rarely that in searching or an interesting story with which to beguile time one is fortunate enough to come across a novel so thoroughly pure, resh, bright, delicate, ingenious, and good in every sense of the word. It is a book that cannot fail to refresh even the most jaded novel-reader, and we are ready to welcome gladly more such romances from Mrs. Croker's pen."—Morning.

"The Irish people, from peasant to patrician, in the story are all natural and fresh—which is as much as to say that he book is charming.....It will both please its readers and add to the reputation of its author."—Scotsman.

"The novel is full of movement and vivacity.....It is written in high spirits and has plenty of story—love story. We nay safely predict for it a success at the circulating libraries, and it is sure to be read from cover to cover once it has been pened."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"This is a brisk, lively story of Irish life, as full of hunting and steeplechasing as any of Lever's novels, not lacking in touches of native humour. Mrs. Croker's skill in her own line of fiction is well known, but we question whether she has ever given us any more attractive figure than the slender high-spirited girl, the last of the O'Biernes."—Glasgow Herald.

"A striking and entertaining romance—a finely conceived and firmly executed story. 'Beyond the Pale' may be styled superb."—Morning Leader.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

WITH the RED EAGLE: a Romance of the Tyrol. By William Westall. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s.

"A fine historical romance."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Mr. Westall has produced a very creditable specimen of the historical romance after the style of Mr. Stanley Weyman. .....Mr. Westall has studied his history with care, and clearly has the advantage of personal knowledge of the picturesque district in which the scene of his story is laid. He produces for us a vivid picture of the successive battles."—Speaker.

"The environments of period and of place are instinct with a fascination that loses nought in Mr. Westall's skilled hands.....The story.....is marked by an originality and a dash that hold you like a spell from first to last. The novel is fresh, vigorous, and altogether delightful."—Black and White.

MADAME SANS-GENE. (Founded on Sardou's Play.) By Edmond Lepelletier. Translated by JOHN DE VILLIERS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The NARRATIVE of CAPTAIN COIGNET, Soldier of the Empire, 1776–1850. With 100 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"A good, sound, rattling tale of thrilling adventure.....Like 'The Red Badge of Courage,' 'Captain Coignet' yields a richer fund of entertainment than the mere glory of romance. The actors in their habit as they lived play out their parts before us.....All these matters, and a thousand more equally terrible, and related with equal vividness, we find in the pages of this incomparable French narrative."—Morning Leader.

TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE; and other Stories. By Mark Twain. With a Photogravure Portrait of the Author. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

"The real merit of this story, in which the origin of a mysterious crime is triumphantly elucidated, is the skill with which the author has kept both Tom and his friend Huck Finn in the mental and moral atmosphere of boyhood. None but a very accomplished artist could have done this."—Speaker.

NEW EDITIONS OF POPULAR NOVELS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

By BRET HARTE.
The CRUSADE of the "EXCELSIOR."

By MARK TWAIN.
The STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT

By GEORGE R. SIMS.
ROGUES and VAGABONDS.

By HAWLEY SMART.
LONG ODDS.
The MASTER of RATH KELLY

By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED.
MRS. TREGASKISS.

By Mrs. OLIPHANT.
The SORCERESS

By Sir WALTER BESANT.
IN DEACON'S ORDERS.

By Mrs. ALEXANDER.
A LIFE INTEREST.
MONA'S CHOICE

WALFORD'S COUNTY FAMILIES of the UNITED KINGDOM, 1897.
Containing Notices of the Descent, Birth, Marriage, Education, &c., of more than 12,000 distinguished Heads of Families, their Heirs Apparent or Presumptive, the Offices they hold or have held, their Town and Country Addresses, Clubs, &c. Royal 8vo. cloth gilt, 50s.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

JARROLD & SONS' LIST.

MAURUS JOKAI'S NEW NOVEL.

The GREEN BOOK; or, Freedom under the Snow. By Dr. MAURUS JOKAI. Translated by Mrs. WAUGH (ELLIS WRIGHT). With Engraved Portrait of Dr. Jókai (Authorized Edition). Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

First, Second, and Third Editions exhausted.
FOURTH EDITION NOW READY.

The Daily Chronicle says:—"The author has given us a group of striking personalities, of every one of whom it is not too much to say that it is brilliantly drawn and vividly presented. From every point of view 'The Green Book' is a book to be read. It is an interesting and knowledgable narrative of a puzzling political period, and it is a work of fine art."

MR. COURTNEY says in the Daily Telegraph:—"It is truly an astonishing book this latest novel, dealing with the early years of the present century, and with that world of inarticulate romance—the empire of all the Russias. In force and fire and prodigal variety he reminds one of the elder Dumas."

BY MAURUS JOKAI.

(Uniform with the above.)

BLACK DIAMONDS. By Maurus JOKAI. THIRD EDITION. Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

"It is so well written, so abounding in all sorts of special knowledge, and displays so much real literary power, that we never feel tempted to leave any of its pages unread. There are some extremely fine descriptive passages in the book.....Maurus Jókai is absolutely original in thought and treatment."—Daily Chronicle.

OTHER POPULAR WORKS BY MAURUS JOKAI.

Authorized Editions, crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 5s. each.

Translated from the Hungarian by R. NISBET BAIN.

'MIDST the WILD CARPATHIANS. By MAURUS JOKAI.

PRETTY MICHAL. By Maurus JOKAI.

London: JARROLD & SONS, 10 and 11, Warwick-lane, E.C. At all Libraries and of the Booksellers.

Just published, 3 vols. 8vo. price 21. 2s.

THE WILDERNESS and its TENANTS: a Series of Geographical and other Essays illustrative of Life in a Wild Country. By JOHN MADDEN.

London: Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Limited.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS
(TRAVELLING, RIDING, CYCLING, HUNTING, SHOOTING, &c.),
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY AND WORKMEN'S ACCIDENTS,
INSURED AGAINST BY THE
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.
Established 1849.
Capital £1,000,000. Claims paid £3,750,000.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.
Made in Three Sizes.
10s. 6d., 16s. 6d., and 25s. each, post free.
Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen
A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce
We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.
Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to
MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W.; London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing.

EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES are sold in Tins, 7½d and 1s. 1½d, labelled "James Epps & Co., Limited, Homœopathic Chemists, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street, London."

WM. & GEO. LAW.
COFFEE—
SUGAR—
TEA.
104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION.
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants
DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

MESSRS. CHAPMAN & HALL, LTD.,

WHO ARE THE OWNERS OF THE COPYRIGHTS OF THE WORKS OF CHARLES DICKENS AND THOMAS CARLYLE, ARE THE ONLY PUBLISHERS WHO CAN ISSUE COMPLETE EDITIONS OF THEIR WRITINGS.

NEW EDITIONS OF DICKENS AND CARLYLE.

FULL DESCRIPTIVE PROSPECTUSES ON APPLICATION.

"Messrs. Chapman & Hall might fairly claim the publishers' Victoria Cross, if such a thing there were. They have had the rare courage to bring out almost at the same moment two large and costly ventures. We have already spoken of their admirable Carlyle, and to-day we have to speak of their equally admirable Dickens."

GUARDIAN.

THE GADSHILL EDITION
OF
CHARLES DICKENS'S WORKS.
Edited by ANDREW LANG.

In 32 Volumes, square crown 8vo. price 6s. each Volume.

In issuing the GADSHILL EDITION of the works of CHARLES DICKENS, Messrs. CHAPMAN & HALL, who are the owners of the copyright, and therefore are alone able to publish an entire edition of his works, are making this, the Gadshill Edition, the most complete that has ever been published.

MR. ANDREW LANG has undertaken to write an Introduction to each work; also Notes to each volume. A General Essay on Dickens's works, by Mr. Lang, will appear in one of the later volumes.

In this edition will be included 'SKETCHES of YOUNG COUPLES and YOUNG GENTLEMEN,' 'SUNDAY under THREE HEADS,' and 'The MUDFOG PAPERS,' hitherto not issued in any existing uniform edition of Dickens's works. 'MASTER HUMPHREY'S CLOCK' will be issued in the form in which it was originally published—viz., with 'The OLD CURIOSITY SHOP' and 'BARNABY RUDGE.'

All the original plates of Cruikshank, Seymour, and Hablot Browne, &c., will be given, chiefly from unused duplicate plates in very fine condition in the possession of the publishers. In some of the later works, where the artists are not so closely connected in public estimation with the author, new illustrations will be employed by the best available artists of the day.

The PICKWICK PAPERS. Two Volumes, with 43 Illustrations by Seymour and Phiz. [Ready.

The ADVENTURES of OLIVER TWIST. One Volume, with 24 Illustrations by Cruikshank. [Ready.

To be followed by—

The LIFE and ADVENTURES of NICHOLAS NICKLEBY. Two Volumes, with 39 Illustrations by Phiz, and Portrait of Charles Dickens by Maclise, engraved by Finden.

SOME PRESS OPINIONS.

The ATHENÆUM says:—"The type is excellent, the paper good, the illustrations are the original ones. Mr. Lang's introduction is piquant and shrewd.....Altogether in these two volumes this new edition has made an excellent start."

The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"The type of it is bold and untrying to the eyes, the binding is a fine-grained crimson cloth, and the plates are reproductions of those of the original edition in their most perfect state."

The SCOTSMAN says:—"There have been many editions of Dickens, but in respect of paper and print this one can challenge comparison with them all."

The SHEFFIELD TELEGRAPH says:—"Superb 'Gadshill Edition.'.....A handsome scarlet binding and exquisitely clear print on fine paper are minor charms compared with the illustrations, which are from the original etchings and woodcuts.....The two volumes of 'Pickwick' offer the most brilliant evidence of the success of the publishers."

The GLOBE says:—"The type used is large and clear, the paper is good, the text is the latest authorized by Dickens, and all the original illustrations are to be reproduced. Altogether, it is an edition to be desired."

The GUARDIAN says:—"The 'Gadshill Edition' is all that the lover of Dickens can desire. It will be more complete than any that have appeared.....It is handsome in form, easy to hold, and pleasant to read. The utmost pains have been taken to restore the illustrations to their original freshness, and, if we may judge from the first two volumes, these pains have had the success they deserved.....Mr. Andrew Lang promises an introduction to each work. No one is so well fitted for the work as Mr. Lang."

The MORNING POST says:—"Mr. Lang has done all it was possible to do, and done it well.....The edition is printed in large and clear type, on excellent paper, and is handsomely bound in red."

The LEEDS MERCURY says:—"The 'Gadshill Edition' can scarcely fail to win a wide and rapid welcome."

THE CENTENARY EDITION
OF
THOMAS CARLYLE'S WORKS.
Edited by H. D. TRAILL.

In 30 Volumes, square crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. each Volume.

The CENTENARY EDITION, now being brought out, is under the supervision of Mr. H. D. TRAILL, D.C.L., who contributes a general Introduction to the First Volume, and a short Preface to each succeeding Work.

With a view of making the CENTENARY EDITION as complete as possible, the Publishers intend to add another Volume to the already well-known works, comprising some Essays and Minor Writings never before published in a collected form.

The CENTENARY EDITION is being printed from the text of the last Edition, collated and arranged by Carlyle himself.

The Illustrations will consist mainly of Portraits, which, including some of THOMAS CARLYLE, have never appeared in any existing Edition.

Maps and Plans will also be given.

 A LIMITED AND NUMBERED EDITION IS PRINTED FROM THE SAME TYPE ON LARGER PAPER, WITH EXTRA ILLUSTRATIONS, 10s. 6d. NET EACH. 300 ONLY PRINTED.

SARTOR RESARTUS. With a Steel Portrait of Carlyle by Samuel Lawrence, engraved by Armitage. [Ready.

The FRENCH REVOLUTION: a History. 3 vols. With Photogravure Portraits of Louis XIV., Mirabeau, Lafayette, Marie Antoinette, Necker, Madame Roland, Danton, Charlotte Corday, Robespierre. [Ready.

ON HEROES, HERO WORSHIP, and the HEROIC in HISTORY. With 3 Photogravure Portraits of Shakespeare, Rousseau, and Napoleon. [Ready.

To be followed by

OLIVER CROMWELL'S LETTERS and SPEECHES.

Other Volumes at regular intervals.

SOME OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

The STANDARD says:—"The notes are pithy, scholarly, exact."

The GUARDIAN says:—"In appearance and editing it is all that the most fastidious reader can desire, while in point of price it is remarkably cheap.....Mr. Traill contributes a general introduction.....We know of no estimate of Carlyle's position in literature at once so brief and so convincing as we have here."

The BRADFORD OBSERVER says:—"The form of them is dignified and comely, and every detail has been arranged with marked taste and discretion."

The SCOTSMAN says:—"A better edition the reader of Carlyle could not desire."

The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"In the matter of printing, paper, and binding nothing is left to be desired, while to add to the value of the production there is an admirable critical introduction from the pen of Mr. H. D. Traill. It is a handsome edition for all its cheapness."

The HOME NEWS says:—"At the popular price at which it is to be sold it is a marvel. .....The Centenary Edition will be a real boon."

The NATIONAL OBSERVER says:—"Bids fair to be the standard edition. It is printed on light, thick paper, in readable type which will not easily weary the eyes. Mr. Traill contributes a brilliant introduction, which, besides being the latest word spoken on Carlyle, is also the most daring and incisive."

The DAILY NEWS says:—"A series of handsome octavo volumes."

The WORLD says:—"In outward aspect the present volume promises that the series will be worthy of the reputation of Carlyle, which is now assured. Mr. Traill, too, has done his work well. He has resisted the temptation to add much to the Carlyliana with which we have been deluged, but writes with insight upon the autobiographical elements in 'Sartor,' as well as upon the vexed question of its author's style."

The LITERARY WORLD says:—"The series is one that would decorate any library, handsome and substantially bound as it is, and printed on thick antique wove paper."

VANITY FAIR says:—"It is a beautiful edition."

The QUEEN says:—"A sumptuous edition at the extraordinarily low price of three shillings and sixpence a volume.....A handsome library size, with charming print and paper, illustrated with handsome plates."

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED, London.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, February 20, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3618. SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

BRITISH MUSEUM.—The READING ROOMS will be CLOSED from MONDAY, March 1, to THURSDAY, March 4, inclusive.
E. MAUNDE THOMPSON, Principal Librarian and Secretary.
British Museum, February 23, 1897.

ROYAL INSTITUTION of GREAT BRITAIN, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W.
THURSDAY NEXT (March 4), at 3 o'clock, Prof PERCY GARDNER, Litt D F S A., Professor of Classical Archeology and Art in the University of Oxford, FIRST of THREE LECTURES on 'Greek History and Extant Monuments.' Half-a-Guinea the Course
SATURDAY (March 6), at 3 o'clock, the Right Hon. LORD RAYLEIGH, M.A. D.C.L. LL.D. F.R.S., Professor of Natural Philosophy, R.I., FIRST of SIX LECTURES on 'Electricity and Electrical Vibrations.' One Guinea.
Subscription to all the Courses in the Season, Two Guineas.

BRITISH ARCHÆOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.—The SEVENTH MEETING of the SESSION will be held at 32, Sackville-street, Piccadilly, on MARCH 3, at 8 P.M., when Antiquities will be exhibited, and the following Paper read: 'Some Seventeenth Century Records of Absentees from Church,' by THOMAS BLASHILL, Esq.
W. DE GRAY BIRCH, LL.D. F.S.A. } Honorary
GEO. PATRICK, A.R.I.B.A. } Secretaries.

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.
PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C.,
Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

ROYAL ACADEMY of ARTS.—Notice to Artists.—The DAYS for RECEIVING PAINTINGS, DRAWINGS, &c., are FRIDAY, SATURDAY, and MONDAY, March 26, 27, 29; and for SCULPTURE, TUESDAY, March 30.—Forms and Labels can be obtained from the Academy during the month of March on receipt of a stamped and directed envelope.

LONDON ASSOCIATION of CORRECTORS of the PRESS and READERS' PENSION COMMITTEE.—The SEVENTH ANNUAL DINNER (celebrating the completion of the Second Readers' Pension) will take place on SATURDAY, March 6, at the HOLBORN RESTAURANT, under the Presidency of the Right Hon. LORD GLENESK. The Names of Gentlemen willing to support the Chairman will be gladly received by the Secretary, Mr. JOHN RANDALL (to whom cheques for the Benevolent Fund or for the Third Readers' Pension may be made payable), at the Offices of the Association, 33, Chancery-lane, W.C.

A LADY, able to correspond in French, German, or Italian, SEEKS EMPLOYMENT as SECRETARY.—Address, in the first instance, Z., 8, Fulham-road, S.W.

YOUNG LADY, aged 30, requires RE-ENGAGEMENT as SECRETARY in an Institution, Amanuensis, or any position of trust. Good Correspondent and Reader aloud. Knowledge of Spanish. Excellent personal references.—Apply to S., care of Miss Deede, 66, Whitcombe-street, Coventry-street, W.C.

RE-ENGAGEMENT as ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN WANTED by YOUNG MAN. Knowledge of Dewey System. Excellent testimonials.—DAVY, 24, Bethune-road, London, N.

PUBLIC LIBRARIANSHIP REQUIRED by GENTLEMAN of eighteen years' Public Library experience. Age 33. Highest testimonials and references.—Address H. R., 8, Burnage View, Stockport-road, Levenshulme, Manchester.

AN ASSOCIATE of a London College, having good knowledge of Literature and Bibliography, DESIRES an OPENING in LIBRARY or INSTITUTE.—A. C. P., Victoria Cottage, Victoria-street, St. Paul's, Bristol.

A GRADUATE of Cambridge (in Classical Honours) begs to offer his services to PUBLISHERS as READER.—Address CAMBRIDGE, 44, Chancery-lane, W.C.

GENTLEMAN, aged 23, is desirous of obtaining EMPLOYMENT with a good PUBLISHER where there would be some prospect of advancement. Premium could be arranged for, but salary would be expected. Literary and artistic tastes; knowledge of German and French. Type-writer.—Address E. G. F., care of Willing's Advertisement Offices, 162, Piccadilly, W.

GRADUATE, Classical Honours, TEACHES CLASSICS and GERMAN, and Prepares for Examinations. He would also be willing to accept Tutorial or Travelling Engagements for Easter or Summer Vacations.—B. C., 30, Lower Belgrave-street, Eaton-square.

WANTED, EASY LITERARY WORK for spare hours.—CANTAB, care of A. J. Isard, Esq., Solicitor, 14, Queen-street, Cheapside, E.C.

A GENTLEMAN, with some literary and business experience and small capital, wishes to JOIN PUBLISHING FIRM.—Address No. R 4, Keith & Co., Advertising Agents, Edinburgh.

LITERARY.—To Young and other Authors, Members of Universities, &c.—A NEW MAGAZINE (Science, Fiction, &c.) REQUIRES CONTRIBUTORS. Names and particulars—not MS.—in first instance to Editor, HARRINGTON, Oxford Union Society.

OFFICE and SERVICES of intelligent REPRESENTATIVE OFFERED genuine Association or Enterprise—Philanthropic, Literary, Commercial, or Professional—by a business-like Woman having Secretarial and Journalistic experience. N.B. Services of Gentleman Representative when needed.—Particulars, in confidence, to CO-OPERATION, Box 500, Willing's, 125, Strand.

SOUND ENGLISH SCHOLAR WANTED to TRANSLATE QUASI-SCIENTIFIC BOOK from the FRENCH.—Please address terms, in strict confidence, CHARLES CARRINGTON, 13, Faubourg Montmartre, Paris.

EDITOR WANTED for UNIONIST JOURNAL.—Must be experienced Journalist, thoroughly versed in selection of matter and supervision of proofs, and possessing good style. University man preferred.—Address, in confidence, FIDES, Box 493, Willing's Advertisement Offices, 125, Strand, W.C.

TRAVELLERS, Town and Country, WANTED for a large PUBLISHING HOUSE. First-Class references required. Good salary given.—Address A. B. C., Messrs. Francis & Co., 13, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

HEAD MASTER REQUIRED for May 1 at the NEW SECONDARY SCHOOL, ISLEWORTH. Salary 250*l.* and Capitation Fee.—Application to be made before March 15 to the PRINCIPAL, Borough-road College, Isleworth, from whom particulars may be obtained.

ROYAL IRISH ACADEMY.

Applications for the Academy's TODD PROFESSORSHIP of the CELTIC LANGUAGES, which is NOW VACANT, must be sent in to the Secretary of Council before March 15, 1897.—All particulars regarding the Professorship can be obtained from the TREASURER OF THE ACADEMY, 19, Dawson-street, Dublin.

LLANGEFNI COUNTY SCHOOL.

WANTED, a HEAD MASTER for the above School. Candidates must be Graduates, and must not be over 35 years of age.—Applications and testimonials (25 copies of each) to be in the hands of the undersigned, from whom further particulars may be obtained, on or before March 13.
R. H. WILLIAMS,
Clerk to the Anglesey County Governing Body.
4, Stanley-crescent, Holyhead, February 16, 1897.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE of SOUTH WALES and MONMOUTHSHIRE.
FACULTY OF MEDICINE.
The Council invites applications for the PROFESSORSHIP of ANATOMY. Eighty copies of application, together with testimonials, must be in the hands of the undersigned on or before March 8, 1897.
Further particulars may be obtained on application to
J. AUSTIN JENKINS, B.A.,
Secretary and Registrar.
University College, Cardiff, February 8, 1897.

KARACHI, INDIA.—SIND MADRESSEH (MAHOMEDAN COLLEGE).
A PRINCIPAL WANTED for the above State-aided Institution. Must be a Graduate in Honours of a British University, and not more than 35 years of age. He will be required to teach English Literature, Mathematics, and Elementary Science. Salary Rs. 450 per mensem, rising by biennial increments of Rs. 50 to Rs. 700 per mensem. A house will shortly be provided rent free, and in the interim rent-free quarters will be provided. 60*l.* allowed for passage money.
Applications will be received up to March 10 by SIR JAMES PEILE, India Office, London, from whom further particulars as to the appointment may be obtained.

INDIA OFFICE, February 25, 1897.

A PROFESSOR of NATURAL SCIENCE is REQUIRED for the THOMASON ENGINEERING COLLEGE, KURKI, in the North-West Provinces of India. He should be a Practical Electrical Engineer, and qualified to lecture in and teach Electricity, Magnetism, Heat, Sound, Light, and the Elements of Chemistry, Geology, and Mineralogy. He should understand Telegraph Engineering.
The salary will be Rupees 500 a month in the first year, rising by Rs. 50 a year to Rs. 700. If retained on termination of five years' agreement salary Rs. 750 a month rising to Rs. 1,000, with benefit of Leave and Pension Rules from date of first appointment.
Applications should be addressed to the Secretary, Judicial and Public Department, India Office, London, not later than the end of March.
A. GODLEY, Under-Secretary of State for India.

SCHOLASTIC.—EASTER VACANCIES.

1. THOROUGH FRENCH and fair MATHS., in good Prep. School. 150*l.* Res.
2. MUSIC (Piano and Violin) and some Form Work in Public School. 90*l.* Res.
3. JUNIOR WORK in large Church School. Clergyman (Priest), High Church. 70*l.* Res.
4. CLASSICS in large and well-known Prep. School. 120*l.* Res., increasing to 180*l.*
5. MUSIC and DRAWING in large Seaside School. Good salary to a good man.
Also JUNIOR and other MASTERSHIPS in Endowed and Private Schools.
Apply to W. H. FRICKER, M.A. (TEACHERS' GUILD REGISTRY), 74, Gower-street, W.C.
(Scholastic Agency work at lowest charges to cover expenses. Interviews 3 to 5 Daily, except Thursday.)

ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE, Cooper's Hill, Staines.—The Course of Study is arranged to fit an Engineer for Employment in Europe, India, and the Colonies. About 40 Students will be admitted in September, 1897. The Secretary of State will offer them for Competition Twelve Appointments as Assistant Engineers in the Public Works Department and Three Appointments as Assistant Superintendents in the Telegraph Department.—For particulars apply to the SECRETARY, at the College.

PUBLISHING BUSINESS of high standing FOR SALE. The whole or portion of Stock, Copyrights, and Contracts at valuation. An excellent opening for Gentleman with from 5,000*l.* to 10,000*l.* capital. Present Proprietor, who wishes to retire owing to ill health of his wife, would be willing to advise during the first year.—Address J. N. K., care of Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, W.

TO LITERARY MEN and others.—Experienced M.D. OFFERS HOME to RESIDENT PATIENT or BOARDER. Good house in sheltered part of Harrogate. Hunting, Golf, Fishing, &c. Special advantages for Photography, and exceptionally good Library. No children. Close to Baths and Wells. References given and required.—Apply M.D., Social and Literary Club, Prospect Hotel, Harrogate.

TOURS IN GREECE,
INCLUDING
EXCURSIONS IN AND AROUND ATHENS.
The TEMPLE of ATHENA (ÆGINA), ELEUSIS, POROS, HYDRA, SPETSAI, NAUPLIA, TIRYNS, ARGOS, MYCENÆ, CORINTH, MARATHON, SALAMIS, PENTELIKON, FORTRESS of PHYLE, TRIPOLITZA, MEGALOPOLIS, VOLO, MONASTERIES of METENA, VALE of TEMPE, PASS of THERMOPYLÆ, MOUNT PARNASSUS, DELPHI, OLYMPIA, PATRAS, &c.
Programme of Fares, Rates, and Routes free on application.
THOS. COOK & SON,
LUDGATE-CIRCUS, LONDON; and Branches.
Athens Office: PLACE DE LA CONSTITUTION.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—
AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.
And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

BOYS' STORIES.—Any number of the above required; about twenty thousand words in length; plenty of dash and fun, though sound in tone. Payment on approval. Declined MSS. returned.—Address BOYS' STORIES, Hart's Advertising Offices, Maltravers House, Arundel-street, Strand, W.C.

THE SCHOOL of LITERARY ART. Conducted by FLORENCE MARRYAT. For instruction in Composing and Writing Fiction, Journalism, and the Drama.—Apply to SECRETARY, 26, Abercorn-place, N.W.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

MR. GERALD MARSHALL UNDERTAKES GENEALOGICAL SEARCHES in Town and Country. Indices Searched and Abstracts of Records made at low inclusive rates.—Care of Greenberg & Co., 80, Chancery-lane, W.C.

THE EXCEL TYPE-WRITING CO.,
49, BROAD-STREET HOUSE, OLD BROAD-STREET.
SPECIAL TERMS TO AUTHORS AND LITTÉRATEURS.
MESSENGER CALLS FOR AND RETURNS WORK.

TYPE-WRITING (Remington), 10*d.* per 1,000 words. Authors' MSS. promptly and carefully copied.—Apply to EPSILON, care of Gould's Advertising Offices, 54, New Oxford-street, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, 1*d.* per folio of 72 words. References to Authors.—Miss GLADDING, 23, Lansdowne-gardens, South Lambeth, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—Over 5,000 words 1*s.* per 1,000. Special terms for larger quantities. MSS. carefully Revised. Testimonials, Reports, &c., duplicated. Translations.—E. GRAHAM, Surrey Chambers, 172, Strand, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING.—1*s.* per 1,000 words. Large quantities by arrangement. Examination Questions Reduplicated. Dramatic Work advised upon (and arranged) by experienced S.M.—FAUCIT DARLISON, 88, Iverson-road, West Hampstead, N.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—Terms, 1*d.* per folio (72 words); or 5,000 words and over, 1*s.* per Thousand.—Miss NIGHTINGALL, Springfield, Walkern-road, Stevenage, Herts.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type writing). Usual terms.—Misses E. B. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

WELL-READ TYPIST DESIRES AUTHORS' MSS.—Accustomed to French and Spanish Documents. Good references to Authors. 10*d.* per 1,000, including paper.—J. LAWIN, 59, Selborne-street, Liverpool.

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos) sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries (expert Stenographers and Typists). Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations. French, German, and Medical Typewriting.

INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9 Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 1s. per 1,000 words.—N. Taylor, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6080. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

AUTHORS of NOVELS and SHORT STORIES adapted for Serial Publication are invited to communicate with Mr. J. F. Sheridan's Newspaper Serial Agency, 21, Paternoster square, London, E.C.

NORTHERN NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE, KENDAL.

LITERARY AGENTS.

FICTION, SERIES OF ARTICLES, WEEKLY SERVICES.

9, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, London.

MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS. ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879. Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. Burghes, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

SOCIETY of AUTHORS.—Literary Property.—The Public is urgently warned against answering advertisements inviting MSS., or offering to place MSS., without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society. By order, G. HERBERT THRING, Secretary.
4, Portugal-street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.
N.B.—The AUTHOR, the organ of the Society, is published monthly, price 6d., by Horace Cox, Bream's-buildings, E.C.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W., Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

Catalogues.

FOREIGN BOOKS and PERIODICALS promptly supplied on moderate terms.
CATALOGUES on application.
DULAU & CO. 37, SOHO-SQUARE.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,
14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.
CATALOGUES on application.

ELLIS & ELVEY, Dealers in Old and Rare Books, Manuscripts, and Engravings.
NEW CATALOGUE of choice BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS (No. 85), including a Remarkable Collection of Rare Books on Music, post free, Sixpence.
29, New Bond-street, London, W.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth; Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. Catalogues issued and sent post free on application. Books bought.—Walter T. Spencer, 27, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

NEW CATALOGUE (No. 19) now ready. Choice Engravings, Drawings, and Books—Constable's English Landscape—Turner's Liber Studiorum—Drawings by Turner, Prout, Hunt, Cotman, &c.—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence.—Wm. Ward, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—Gilbert & Field, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

TO ARCHÆOLOGISTS and LIBRARIANS.—VALUABLE BOOKS FOR SALE—'HISTORICAL COLLECTIONS—STAFFORDSHIRE.' Edited by the William Salt Archæological Society. 16 vols. complete. The Widow of a Subscriber from the first wishes to meet with a Purchaser.—Apply to Mrs. Tillcote, Great Haywood, Stafford.

COMPLETE FILES for 1895 and 1896 of Graphic—Illustrated London News—Punch—Sketch—Truth—Queen, and other Ladies' Papers—Field—Guardian, and other Church Papers—the Times, and other Dailies—Athenæum—and many others. WHAT OFFERS?—Address Reader, 54, New Oxford-street, W.C.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD. (The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)
Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each. 5s. per dozen, ruled or plain.

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY.

FORD MADOX BROWN.
DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI.
FREDERIC J. SHIELDS.

A Series of AUTOTYPE REPRODUCTIONS of the Chief Works of these Masters is now ON VIEW at the GRAFTON GALLERIES. They include the chief Cartoons made by Ford Madox Brown for stained glass, his 'Cordelia's Portion,' 'English Boy,' 'Shakespeare,' 'Homer,' &c.; Rossetti's 'Beata Beatrix,' 'Lamp of Memory,' 'Monna Rosa,' 'Proserpine,' 'The Annunciation,' 'The Blessed Damozel,' 'Studies for the Oxford Frescoes,' &c.

Particulars on application.

A NEW PORTRAIT OF ROBERT BROWNING.
Painted by D. G. ROSSETTI in 1855. REPRODUCED in AUTOGRAVURE from the Original in the possession of C. Fairfax Murray, Esq. Size of work, 4⅞ by 4¼ inches. Proofs on Vellum, 21s.; on Japanese, 10s. 6d.; Prints, 5s.

THE WEST FRONT OF PETERBOROUGH CATHEDRAL.
From a Negative specially taken before the erection of the scaffolding by R. G. SCRIVEN, F.S.I. Printed in Sepia or warm black, 18 by 15 inches, price 10s. 6d.

G. F. WATTS, R.A.
A large Series of the Chief Works of this Master, including the great Allegorical Designs and many others.

Full particulars on application.

FRENCH PAINTERS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
PERMANENT CARBON REPRODUCTIONS of WORKS by JEAN FRANÇOIS MILLET, THÉODORE ROUSSEAU, JEAN BAPTISTE COROT, DAUBIGNY, JULES BRETON, DAGNAN BOUVERET, W. BOUGUEREAU, MEISSONIER, CAROLUS-DURAN, CABANEL, DEBAT-PONSAN, E. ADAN, &c., in various sizes.

THE ENGLISH SCHOOL OF LANDSCAPE PAINTING.
Including the Chief Works of JOHN CONSTABLE, R.A., J. M. W. TURNER, R.A., THOMAS GAINSBOROUGH, R.A., R. P. BONINGTON, OLD CROME, W. J. MÜLLER, DAVID COX, GIRTIN, SAMUEL PROUT, &c.

ABRIDGED CATALOGUES ON APPLICATION.

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,
74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

(nearly opposite the National Gallery).

Inspection invited.

REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7l. 10s.
[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5l. 5s.

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
Books can be exchanged at the residences of Subscribers in London by the Library Messengers.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S FOREIGN LIBRARY.
All the Best Works in French, German, Italian, and Spanish are in circulation.

CATALOGUES of English or Foreign Books, 1s. 6d. each.

Prospectuses and Clearance Lists of Books on Sale, postage free.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, Limited,
30 to 34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, London.

Branch Offices:—
241, Brompton-road; and 48, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. (Mansion House End).

Also 10–12, Barton Arcade, Manchester.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c.; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. Stocker, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS. South aspect, good view, three minutes' walk from the town and common. Suitable for winter months.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

Sales by Auction.

FRIDAY NEXT.

Several high-class Models—Scientific Instruments and Apparatus—Valuable Lathes, and a large quantity of Chucks and Tools—Photographic Apparatus—and Miscellaneous Property.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, March 5, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.
On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

MONDAY, March 8.

A Portion of a Manufacturer's Stock of Carpets and Rugs.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY, March 8, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.
On view the Saturday prior 12 till 3 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

MONDAY, March 15.

The Valuable Collection of Shells formed by the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq., removed from Condover Hall, Shrewsbury, including many Fine and Rare Species, especially in Murex, Conus, Voluta, Pecten, and Spondylus, &c.; also the Beautiful Ebonized Plate-Glass Cases in which they are contained.

MR. J. C. STEVENS has received instructions to SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY, March 15, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.
On view the Saturday prior 12 till 3 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

Miscellaneous Books, including the Chemical and Scientific Library of a Gentleman.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 3, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock, MISCELLANEOUS and SCIENTIFIC BOOKS, including Chemical Journal, 1874-96—The Chemist, 16 vols.—Watts's Dictionary of Chemistry, 9 vols.—Roscoe and Schorlemmer's Chemistry, 3 vols.—Thorpe's Applied Chemistry, 3 vols.—Journal of Psychical Research, 11 vols.—New Law Reports, 1881-4—Neal's Views of Seats, 6 vols. Large Paper—Howard and Crisp's Visitation of England, 4 vols.—Crisp's Family Collections, 3 vols.—Evelyn Family Pedigrees—Prescott's Works, 16 vols.—Motley's Netherlands, &c., 7 vols.—Mrs. Delany's Autobiography, 6 vols.—Ruskin's Stones of Venice, 3 vols.—Lever's Works, 34 vols.—Cooper's Novels, 25 vols.—Scott's Waverley Novels and Poems, 60 vols.—Carlyle's Works, 36 vols.—Morley's Universal Library, 21 vols.—Series of Notes and Queries—Miscellanea Genealogica—Bibliographical Serials, &c.
To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

The SECOND PORTION of the Collection of Old Japanese Colour Prints, the Property of ERNEST HART, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on SATURDAY, February 27, at 1 o'clock precisely, the SECOND PORTION of the COLLECTION of OLD JAPANESE COLOUR PRINTS, the Property of ERNEST HART, Esq., including Specimens of the Work of the best known masters, from the earliest dates to recent times.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Decorative Porcelain, Enamels, Bijouterie, &c. of the late Mr. THOMAS HAINES.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 1, at 1 o'clock precisely (by order of the Executors), the COLLECTION of ENGLISH and ORIENTAL CHINA—Battersea Enamels—Cut Glass—Needlework—Bijouterie—Miniatures—Antique Furniture, &c., the Property of the late Mr. THOMAS HAINES.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

The Remaining Portion of the Collection of Works of Art, the Property of the late WILLIAM WEBB, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 2, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely (by order of the Executor), the REMAINING PORTION of the COLLECTION of the late WILLIAM WEBB, Esq., including Bronzes — Enamels — Oriental and European Porcelain — Pottery—Miniatures—Engravings—Snuff-Boxes, &c.; also a Series of Sixteen remarkably beautiful Caskets, of Painted and Variegated Leathers, by a modern Artist, in designs of the periods of Henry II. and Diane de Poictiers, Francis I., Lorenzo de Medicis, &c., from the COLLECTION of a GENTLEMAN, deceased.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Library of the late Sir JOHN E. ERICHSEN, F.R.S., &c.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, March 4, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Rev. MICHAEL ANGELO ATKINSON, formerly Fellow and Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Hon. Canon of Norwich, comprising valuable Architectural Works in English and French—fine Illustrated Books—Archæology, &c.; a SELECTED PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late Sir JOHN E. ERICHSEN, F.R.S. F.R.C.S. LL.D., &c., comprising Topography—Poetry—History—and First Editions of the Writings of Thackeray, Stevenson, Rogers, Browning, and others; a SELECTED PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late Mons. LUIS FALERO, the well-known Artist, consisting chiefly of valuable French Architectural and Scientific Publications; the Property of JOHN R. ELDRIDGE, Esq., comprising a Small Collection of Sporting Books; the Property of the late JULIUS TALBOT AIREY, Esq. (sold by order of Mrs. Sheffield Neave), consisting of Poetical Works—Theology—Standard French Books—Voyages and Travels—finely Illustrated Works, &c.—and other Properties.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A SELECTED PORTION of the Valuable Library of BERESFORD R. HEATON, Esq., and Valuable Books, the Property of Sir LEWIS MOLESWORTH, Bart.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 8, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising a Portion of the Library of BERESFORD R. HEATON, Esq., of Cheniston-gardens, Kensington; a Selected Portion of the Valuable Library of a GENTLEMAN, deceased; a Small Collection of Illustrated French Books, the Property of O. W. SELIGMAN, Esq.; a Selected Portion of the Library of Sir LEWIS MOLESWORTH, Bart., and other Properties, including Dibdin's Bibliographical Works—Valuable Topographical Works by Hunter, Thoresby, and Whitaker—Black-Letter Chronicles—Officium B. V. M. with Illuminations, Sæc. XV.—First Illustrated Edition of the Malermi Bible, 1490—First Editions of the Writings of Ruskin, Jesse, Swift, Matthew Arnold, Fielding, Pierce Egan, &c.—rare Sporting Books—Water-Colour Drawings, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of four stamps.

The Original Manuscripts of Keats's Endymion and Lamia, entirely in the Autograph of the Poet.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 10, the ORIGINAL MANUSCRIPTS of KEATS'S ENDYMION and LAMIA, entirely in the Autograph of the Poet. These MSS. have never before been sold, and are in the exact condition in which they left the Printer. They are the Property of a relative of John Taylor, who published the Poems. Also TWO AUTOGRAPH MANUSCRIPTS of the late WILLIAM MORRIS, 'Mine and Thine,' a Poem, and 'An Old Story Retold'—an Unpublished Poem in the Autograph of W. M. Thackeray—and other Manuscripts.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of four stamps.

The Valuable Collection of Coins, the Property of E. C. KRUMBHOLZ, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, March 11, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the Valuable COLLECTION of ENGLISH COINS, in Gold, Silver, and Copper, including a few Patterns and Proofs, to which is added a very remarkable Series of German Thalers, &c., comprising Specimens from 1507 to the Present Day, and other Foreign Coins, many in the finest possible condition, formed by E. C. KRUMBHOLZ, Esq., Member of the Numismatic Society of London.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

THE MONTAGU COLLECTION OF COINS.

Final Portion of the Greek and Roman Series.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 15, and Four Following Days, the FINAL PORTION of the GREEK SERIES, together with a Small Series of Roman, Silver and Bronze Coins and Medallions of the late H. MONTAGU, Esq.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues, illustrated with Autotype Plates, may be had, price 3s. each.

Autograph Letters and Documents.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 2, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a VALUABLE COLLECTION of AUTOGRAPH LETTERS and DOCUMENTS, including examples of Queen Elizabeth, Charles II., William III., Louis XVI., Ferdinand and Isabella, Frederick William I. of Prussia, Prince Albert, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Cromwell, Pepys, Evelyn, Horace Walpole, Madame Patti, F. Mendelssohn Bartholdy, Mozart, Lord Nelson, Lady Hamilton, Sir J. Franklin, Benjamin Franklin, Napoleon Lafayette, Dr. Johnson, W. Cowper, Lord Byron, T. Campbell, George Eliot, J. Ruskin, Lord Lytton, Robert Browning, Sir W. Scott, and others.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

Postage Stamps.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 2, and Following Day, at half-past 5 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of rare BRITISH, FOREIGN, and COLONIAL POSTAGE STAMPS.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

Entire Stock of Mr. C. PALMER, of Southampton-row, who is changing the character of his business.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 3, and Two Following Days, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the ENTIRE STOCK of Mr. CLEMENT PALMER, of Southampton-row, comprising Works on History, Biography, Travel, Bibliography, Theology, Antiquities, Astrology—Specimens of Early Foreign Typography—valuable Editions of English Histories—interesting Manuscripts, &c.

Catalogues may be had on receipt of two stamps.

Miscellaneous Engravings and Paintings.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 9, and One Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS, removed from Bournemouth, and other Private Sources, comprising Rare Mezzotints, some in proof states—Fancy Subjects after Cosway, Bartolozzi, Minasi, Kauffman, &c.—Sporting Subjects and Caricatures—Topographical and Architectural Prints—and Oil Paintings, both old and modern.

Catalogues in preparation.

Library of the late Admiral BAUGH (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 17, and Two Following Days, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Admiral BAUGH, amongst which will be found Thackeray's Works, Edition de Luxe—Dickens's Works, Complete Set, First Editions, bound in calf gilt, gilt edges—Strickland's Queens of England, 12 vols.—Whitaker's Leeds, 2 vols.—Barham's Ingoldsby Legends, 3 vols.—Costumes du Quadrille Historique—Phiz, A Run with the Stag Hounds, coloured plates—Whitaker's Craven—Browne's Annals of Newark-upon-Trent—Complete Set of Punch—Dance of Death, 2 vols. coloured plates by Rowlandson, &c.

Catalogues in preparation.

Library of the late Rev. ROBT. CHARLES JENKINS, Honorary Canon of Canterbury Cathedral.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., EARLY in APRIL, the LIBRARY of the late Rev. ROBT. CHARLES JENKINS, Honorary Canon of Canterbury Cathedral, comprising Theological, Classical, Early Printed, and Miscellaneous Books in all Branches of Literature, both English and Foreign.

Catalogues in preparation.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, March 1, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS from different sources.

On TUESDAY, March 2, BRONZES and WORKS of ART relating to Napoleon I., the Collection of a GENTLEMAN.

On THURSDAY, March 4, and Following Day, the CONDOVER HALL COLLECTION of OBJECTS of ART, DECORATIVE FURNITURE, and ARMOUR and ARMS of the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq.

On FRIDAY, March 5, OBJECTS of ART and DECORATION of the late BARON HIRSCH, the Rev. Sir ALGERNON COOTE, Bart., and from other private sources.

On SATURDAY, March 6, the CONDOVER HALL COLLECTION of PICTURES of the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq., and Pictures from other Celebrated Collections.

On TUESDAY, March 9, ENGRAVINGS of the EARLY ENGLISH SCHOOL, the COLLECTION of a GENTLEMAN.

On WEDNESDAY, March 10, the CELLAR of WINES of the late JOHN CLUTTON, Esq., and choice Wines from other private Cellars.

On THURSDAY, March 11, the COLLECTION of DRAWINGS by the Right Hon. the EARL of DUNMORE.

On FRIDAY, March 12, fine OLD SILVER and SILVER-GILT PLATE, including a few Pieces, the Property of the late Mrs. DURIE; Jewels—Lace—Miniatures—Snuff-Boxes, &c.

On SATURDAY, March 13, the COLLECTIONS of PICTURES of the late Sir CHARLES BOOTH, Bart., and of the late SNOWDON HENRY, Esq.

On MONDAY, March 15, the COLLECTION of PORCELAIN, PLATE, and DECORATIVE OBJECTS of the late Sir CHARLES BOOTH, Bart.

On MONDAY, March 15, and Following Days, the COLLECTION of the ENGRAVED WORKS of Sir JOSHUA REYNOLDS, formed by FREDERIC, EARL of BESSBOROUGH.

To wealthy Connoisseurs and Collectors.

OLD ENGRAVINGS, DRAWINGS, PAINTINGS, ETCHINGS, BOOKS, and other Literary and Art Items, from the Collections of the late Mr. Arthur Parsons, Rev. E. Alleyn, Henry Payne, Esq., M.A., the Chevalier Lupino, Alfred Tabois, Esq., B.A., Henry Wood, Esq., Lord Mayor Sir Thomas White, Queen Anne of Denmark, Royal Gallery of Spain, Colonel Stuart, Accademia di Milano, Henry Weekes, Esq., John Houlton, Esq., of Farley Castle, Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, Sir E. Antrobus, Charles Pickering, Esq., Mr. Crawfurd, Miss Wood, Miss Stevens, Miss Graham, Mrs. Bunduck, the "Kew Bee" Literary and Art Societies, King George III., Napoleon I., General Chinese Gordon, the Royal Naval Exhibition, Sir James Brooke, Mr. Vacher, Rev. E. B. Pusey, George Paulet, W. M. Thiselton, Esq., the Gurdon Family, Miss Knatchbull, Wilhelmus Burmann, Monsieur Gawet, Don D'Abreu, and other select sources; and special items relating to Queen Victoria, her Family, Reign, Court and Ancestors, suitable for Collectors for the Queen's Diamond Jubilee.

MR. JOHN PARNELL, Bonâ Fide Auctioneer, will SELL by AUCTION (subject to declared reserve prices), at 12, Rockley-road, near the Uxbridge-road Station, London, W., on WEDNESDAY NEXT, March 3, and every succeeding Wednesday until the lots be all sold, at 1 o'clock.

Private view by card on Monday. Public view on Tuesday. Gentlemen who cannot attend the Sale can register their bids with the Auctioneer. Catalogues on application.

[For Continuation of Sales, see next page.]

NOW READY.

THE JUCKLINS.

BY

OPIE READ,

Author of 'A Kentucky Colonel.'

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

NOW READY.

A MATTER

OF TEMPERAMENT.

BY

CAROLINE FOTHERGILL,

Author of 'The Comedy of Cecilia' and 'A Question of Degree.'

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

NOW READY.

VOLUME XVII.

STANDARD EDITION

OF THE

WAVERLEY NOVELS.

Now being issued in Twenty-five Monthly Volumes, crown 8vo. containing Photogravure Frontispieces printed on Japanese paper, bound in art canvas, gilt top, price 2*s.* 6*d.*; or in full limp leather, gilt edges, price 3*s.* 6*d.* per Volume.

NOW READY.

VOLUME V.

STANDARD EDITION

OF THE

COLLECTED WRITINGS

OF

THOMAS DE QUINCEY.

Now being issued in Fourteen Monthly Volumes, small crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, price 2*s.* 6*d.* each.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square.

CONDOVER HALL, SHREWSBURY.

SALE of the APPOINTMENTS to this Ancient Elizabethan Mansion, including Pictures, Engravings Old Japan China, Bronzes Antique English Furniture French Italian and Dutch Marqueterie and numerous important Effects worthy the attention of Collectors and others, being the Property of the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq

MESSRS. WM. HALL, WATERIDGE & OWEN are favoured with instructions from the Rev R H CHOLMONDELEY who has disposed of the Condover Hall Estate to hold the above SALE by AUCTION, commencing on TUESDAY, March 9, and following Days

Book Catalogues 6d each; forwarded on application to the Auctioneers High street Shrewsbury Sale each day at 12 o clock to the minute

At BIRMINGHAM, on MONDAY, March 1.

A most interesting and unreserved Sale of a Valuable Collection of Rare War Medals, by direction of a well-known Collector in the South of England (who has been collecting or upwards of thirty-five years and is now relinquishing the pursuit), also a few Lots the Property of a Lady

MESSRS CLEMENT WELLER & LOCKER will SELL by AUCTION at their Rooms, No 18, NEW STREET, BIRMINGHAM on MONDAY March 1, commencing at 2 o'clock punctually, a valuable COLLECTION of WAR MEDALS including many very rare Specimens, in all numbering upwards of 160 Lots

Catalogues post free from the Auctioneers, No 18, New-street, Birmingham

On TUESDAY, March 2.

Important Sale of the valuable Collection of Pictures, removed from Wigston Hall, Leicestershire, by Direction of J. F. DOBSON, Esq., who is leaving.

MESSRS. CLEMENT, WELLER & LOCKER will SELL by AUCTION, at their Galleries, No. 18, NEW-STREET, on TUESDAY, March 2, at 1 o'clock punctually, the above highly important PICTURES, including Four important Works by Wm Shayer, sen —large and important Work by P Nasmyth—large and important Work by Alexandra Nasmyth—a very fine Work by George Morland, also a large and important Work, the Circumcision, attributed to Rembrandt, and others by and attributed to Rubens, Hunduella, Richard Wilson, P. Wouvermanns, A Kauffman, R A, Teniers, Zuccarelli W Collins, R.A., Landseer, Constable, T. S Cooper, R.A., Barker, of Bath, Morris, T Baker, T. Wainewright, 1861, W Webb, G Gregory 1884, O'Connor, J. Willis, 1839, G. Cole, Wm. de Heusch, Van Dyck, &c.

On view the day preceding Sale. Catalogues may be obtained at the Offices of the Auctioneers, No. 18, New-street.

NOTE.—The above Pictures are exclusively the Wigston Hall Collection.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.
No 977. MARCH, 1897. 2*s.* 6*d.*

GORDON'S STAFF-OFFICER at KHARTUM.
SOME PLANTATION MEMORIES. By A. G. Bradley.
WOMAN in POLITICS. By T. P. W.
KAFIRISTAN and the KAFIRS. By Major W. Broadfoot.
DARIEL: a Romance of Surrey. By R. D. Blackmore. Chaps 21-24.
SALADIN and KING RICHARD: the Eastern Question in the Twelfth Century. By Lieut.-Col. C. R. Conder.
The GOAT: his Useful Qualities, and how he came by Them. By Dr. Louis Robinson.
RECENT NAVAL BIOGRAPHY and CRITICISM.
TRAVELLING JOE. By Zack.
DISRAELI VINDICATED. By Frederick Greenwood.
The POLITICAL PROSPECT.
William Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London.

Monthly, price Half-a-Crown.

THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

Contents for MARCH.

CHARTERED COMPANY in SOUTH AFRICA. By the Rev. John Mackenzie.
The HOUSE of COMMONS and its LEADER. By Herbert Paul.
SOME RECENT ENGLISH THEOLOGIANS: Lightfoot, Westcott, Hort, Jowett, Hatch. By A. M Fairbairn, D.D.
OUR WAR-SHIPS. By William Allan, M.P.
The PRONUNCIATION of GREEK in ENGLAND. By J. Gennadius.
The FAMINE in my GARDEN. By Phil Robinson.
An IRISH CHANNEL TUNNEL. With Map. By J. Ferguson Walker.
LIFE in a FRENCH COMMUNE. By Robert Donald.
TEN YEARS of MILLIONAIRES. By H. S. Maclauchlan.
FREE CHURCH UNITY: the New Movement. By the Rev. Hugh Price Hughes.
London: Isbister & Co., Limited, Covent-garden, W C.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
No. 241. MARCH, 1897.

FOR GREECE and CRETE. By Algernon Charles Swinburne.
The CRETAN QUESTION. By Francis de Pressensé (Foreign Editor of Le Temps).
GREATER BRITAIN and the QUEEN'S LONG REIGN. By Sir Julius Vogel, K C M.G (ex-Premier of New Zealand).
FIGHTING the FAMINE in INDIA. By J. D. Rees, C.I.E.
ENGLAND'S ADVANCE NORTH of ORANGE RIVER. By Melius de Villiers (Chief Justice of the Orange Free State)
MR. HERBERT SPENCER and LORD SALISBURY on EVOLUTION. By His Grace the Duke of Argyll
HOW POOR LADIES LIVE. By Miss Frances H. Low.
The MASS: Primitive and Protestant (in correction of Mr. J. Horace Round). By Geo. W. E Russell.
The LIMITS of BIOGRAPHY. By Charles Whibley.
ABOUT ALEXANDRIA. By Professor Mahaffy.
HINTS on CHURCH REFORM. By the Rev. Dr. Jessopp.
DELIBERATE DECEPTION in ANCIENT BUILDINGS. By G. A. T. Middleton.
The SINS of ST. LUBBOCK. By St. John E C Hankin.
SKATING on ARTIFICIAL ICE. By Mrs Walter Creyke.
FRANCE and RUSSIA in CHINA. By Holt S. Hallett.
NOTE on the DECLARATION of PARIS. By Major Charles A Court.
London: Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.

THE LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL HALL QUESTION, also Original Illustrations of Rouen and Coutances Cathedrals, Mass Chapel at Hadleigh, The Advancement of Architecture (Fourth Royal Academy Lecture); Glazed Bricks, &c.
See the BUILDER of February 27 (4*d.*, by post, 4½*d*).
Publisher of the Builder 46, Catherine-street, London, W C.

BICKERS & SON'S
LIST OF NEW REMAINDERS
AND LATEST PURCHASES,
OFFERED AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.
All New and Perfect.

Published at £ s d		Offered at £ s d
4 4 0	Wilkinson (Sir J. G.).—Manners and Customs of the ANCIENT EGYPTIANS, their Private Life, Laws Arts Religion &c New Edition Edited by SAMUEL BIRCH, LL.D With 8 Coloured Plates, 61 Full-Page Plates, and 645 Woodcuts 3 vols 8vo cloth	2 2 6
1 16 0	The Cruikshankian Momus. "Let Momus Rule the Day" Pictorial Broadsides and Humorous Song-Headings 52 Comic Designs to Popular Ballads By the THREE CRUIKSHANKS (The Elder Isaak, Robert, and the Great George) Coloured by Hand	0 12 6
3 3 0	The Memoirs of the Tenth Royal Hussars (PRINCE of WALES'S OWN.) Historical and Social Collected and Arranged by Colonel R. S. LIDDELL With Portraits of the Prince of Wales, Duke of Clarence, and the Prince Regent (George IV.), and 12 Coloured Illustrations by Oscar Norie, showing Changes of Uniform, &c., from 1715 to the Present Time. 1 vol. imperial 8vo.	1 5 0
0 18 0	Elphinstone (Hon. M.).—History of INDIA: the Hindoo and Mohammedan Periods. Edited by Prof. COWELL. Map 8vo.	0 5 0
0 7 6	Smedes (Susan Dabney).—A Southern PLANTER. Memoirs of Thomas Dabney Preface by the Right Hon. W. H. GLADSTONE. Post 8vo.	0 3 0
0 7 6	Rambles in Search of Wild Flowers. By MARGARET PLUES. With 96 fine Coloured Figures, and numerous Woodcuts. Post 8vo. cloth	0 4 6
0 7 6	Our Common British Fossils, and Where to Find Them: a Handbook for Students. By J. E. TAYLOR. With 331 Illustrations	0 2 6
0 7 6	Romilly (Hugh H.).—The Western PACIFIC and NEW GUINEA. Second Edition. With a Map. Crown 8vo.	0 2 6
1 16 0	Blunt (Rev. J. H.).—The Reformation of the CHURCH of ENGLAND: its History, Principles, and Results. 2 vols. 8vo.	0 14 0
2 12 6	Dyer (Dr. T. H.).—History of Modern EUROPE, from the Fall of Constantinople to 1871. Revised Edition. 5 vols. 8vo.	1 11 6
0 18 0	Schliemann's Excavations: an Historical and Archæological Study By Dr. C. SCHUCHHARDT. Translated by E. SELLERS. 8vo. ..	0 7 6
	Ashton (John).—Curious Creatures in ZOOLOGY. With 130 very quaint Illustrations. Large-Paper Copy, royal 8vo.	0 13 6
0 16 0	Macpherson (Wm Charteris). — The BARONAGE and the SENATE: or, the House of Lords in the Past, the Present, and the Future. 8vo.	0 4 0
1 4 0	Dunmore (Lord).—The Pamirs: a Narrative of a Year's Expedition on Horseback through Kashmir, Western Tibet, Chinese Tartary, &c. With Maps and Illustrations. 2 vols. crown 8vo.	0 10 6
6 18 0	Kaye and Malleson's History of the SEPOY WAR in INDIA Best Library Edition. With all the Maps and Plans. 7 vols. 8vo. cloth ..	2 10 0
5 5 0	History of Hampton Court Palace. By ERNEST LAW. Complete in 3 vols. profusely illustrated	2 2 0
0 10 6	Shakespeare's Works (Globe Edition). Beautifully printed on thin India Paper, and neatly bound	0 6 0
0 7 6	Selections from the 'Tatler,' 'Spectator,' and 'GUARDIAN.' Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by AUSTIN DOBSON. Neatly bound in white parchment	0 3 6
0 6 0	Messer Agnold's Household: a "Cinque Cento" Household. By LEADER SCOTT. Crown 8vo.	0 2 0
7 4 0	Thiers's History of the Consulate and EMPIRE of FRANCE UNDER NAPOLEON. Best Library Edition. With Steel Plates. 12 vols 8vo.	2 18 0
1 10 0	Lockhart's Life of Sir Walter Scott. Roxburghe Edition. With the Turner Vignettes and Frontispieces. 10 vols. 12mo cloth	0 15 0
20 0 6	Alison's History of Europe. Best Library Edition. With Atlas 24 vols. 8vo. ..	5 15 6
	Gould's Birds, &c. A very fine complete Set. 43 vols. folio, bound in green morocco extra, most of the Volumes being good as new, with the Introductions, &c., in cloth	700 0 0
	The Badminton Library. Large Paper, Complete Set, in the Original Binding, and good as new. 28 vols 4to.	105 0 0

All Books in General Literature supplied at 3d. in the Shilling Discount. Orders by post receive prompt attention.

1, LEICESTER-SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S
NEW BOOKS.

SEVENTEENTH CENTURY STUDIES. By EDMUND GOSSE. A New Edition, uniform with 'Critical Kit-Kats,' &c. 1 vol. buckram, 7*s.* 6*d.*

TIMES.—"Equipped with full knowledge, sound critical instinct, and an interesting, easy style, Mr. Gosse appeals to the student and the general reader alike."

TIMBUCTOO THE MYSTERIOUS. By FELIX DUBOIS. With 155 Illustrations and 11 Maps and Plans. 1 vol. 12*s.* 6*d.*

TIMES.—"One does not often meet with a book of travel so full of interest and novelty as this. An excellent picture of the present condition of things on the Niger."

UNDERCURRENTS OF THE SECOND EMPIRE. By ALBERT D. VANDAM, Author of 'An Englishman in Paris.' 1 vol. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

TRUTH.—"Incomparably the most interesting book recently published."

LETTERS OF A COUNTRY VICAR. By YVES LE QUERDEC. 1 vol. 5*s.*

SPECTATOR.—"Every vicar in charge of an English parish should read this book."

THE MAN OF STRAW. By Edwin PUGH, Author of 'A Street in Suburbia.' 1 vol. 6*s.*

DAILY MAIL.—"So finely imagined that no one who cares for a fine novel can afford to let it pass. London humanity has never been so well portrayed since Dickens ceased to portray it."

THE SPOILS OF POYNTON. By HENRY JAMES, Author of 'The Other House.' 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

NATIONAL OBSERVER.—"A work of brilliant fancy, of delicate humour, of gentle satire. A polished and enthralling story."

THE LITTLE REGIMENT, and other Episodes of the American Civil War. By STEPHEN CRANE, Author of 'The Red Badge of Courage.' Cloth, 3*s.* net; paper, 2*s.* 6*d.* net. "Pioneer Series."

ATHENÆUM.—"The extraordinary power of imagination is more wonderful than that of Defoe."

ACADEMY.—"'The Little Regiment' is truly wonderful."

McLEOD OF THE CAMERONS. By M. HAMILTON, Author of 'A Self-Denying Ordinance.' 1 vol. 6*s.*

STANDARD.—"Not only more promise, but more achievement than in any novel by a comparatively new writer that we have read for a long time. It is well constructed and well thought out."

LIFE THE ACCUSER. By the AUTHOR of 'A SUPERFLUOUS WOMAN.' New Edition. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"A story in which our interest is held until the last word."

MAGNHILD AND DUST. By BJORNSTJERNE BJORNSON. 1 vol. 3*s.* net. (Uniform Edition of Björnson's Novels.)

London:
WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

WARD, LOCK & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

GUY BOOTHBY'S NOVELS.

PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED BY STANLEY WOOD.

Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 5s. each.

FOURTH EDITION.

DR. NIKOLA.

"Deeply interesting.....The charm of the book is its remoteness from the ordinary scenes and ways of fiction; after reading it one could almost fancy that one had stood within the gates of Kassa the Blessed."—British Weekly.

SIXTH EDITION.

THE BEAUTIFUL WHITE DEVIL.

"An original idea worked out in original fashion. A book for all who like stories told in a bright, healthful style."—Globe.

THIRD EDITION.

A BID FOR FORTUNE.

"He never allows the interest to drop from first to last. .....The plot is highly ingenious, and when once it has fairly thickened, exciting to a degree."—Times.

THIRD EDITION.

IN STRANGE COMPANY.

"A capital novel of its kind—the sensational-adventurous. It has the quality of life and stir, and will carry the reader with curiosity unabated to the end."—World.

THIRD EDITION.

THE MARRIAGE OF ESTHER.

"A story full of action, life, and dramatic interest..... There is a vigour and a power of illusion about it that raises it quite above the level of the ordinary novel of adventure."
Manchester Guardian.

ETHEL TURNER'S STORIES.

PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED.

Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

THIRD EDITION.

THE LITTLE LARRIKIN.

"So brightly written and so full of delicate touches of both humour and pathos."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"This is a most delightful, pathetic, and humorous—yet neither too pathetic nor too humorous—story."—Spectator.

"The character of Lol is exquisitely drawn, and the sayings and doings of the curly-headed little wag furnish the material for some of the most amusingly delightful pages of the book."—Western Daily Mail.

SIXTH EDITION.

SEVEN LITTLE AUSTRALIANS.

"A beautiful book is Miss Ethel Turner's 'Seven Little Australians'—a book that ought to capture hearts, young and old, as 'Helen's Babies' captured them."—Queen.

"One of the most delightful volumes of the season."
Birmingham Post.

THIRD EDITION.

THE FAMILY AT MISRULE.

"Delightful young people they are, with all their mistakes and innocent naughtiness, yet so bright and natural they cannot fail to charm."—Graphic.

"Its charm consists in its simple and natural style, its mingled fun and pathos.....We do not hesitate to give it the first place among the stories for young girls of the present season."—Standard.

WARD, LOCK & CO.'S
68 SHILLING ILLUSTRATED GUIDE-BOOKS.

WITH NEW MAPS, PLANS, COPIOUSLY ILLUSTRATED, AND THOROUGHLY UP TO DATE.

Red cloth, round corners, 1s.

ENGLAND AND WALES.

LONDON.
WINDSOR.
NORTH WALES.
LIVERPOOL.
SOUTHPORT.
The ENGLISH LAKE DISTRICT.
FURNESS ABBEY.
MORECAMBE BAY.
HEXHAM, CARLISLE.
The ISLE of MAN.
SCARBOROUGH and EASTERN YORKSHIRE.
BRIDLINGTON and FILEY.
WHITBY.
REDCAR, MIDDLESBROUGH.
SALTBURN-BY-THE-SEA.
HARROGATE and its SPAS.
ILKLEY and its SURROUNDINGS.
BUXTON and the PEAK DISTRICT.
MATLOCK and DOVEDALE.
SHERWOOD FOREST and "THE DUKERIES."
LEAMINGTON, WARWICK, &c.
STRATFORD-ON-AVON.
BIRMINGHAM.
OXFORD.
HASTINGS.
BRIGHTON.
The ISLE of WIGHT.
The CHANNEL ISLANDS.
WYE VALLEY.
BATH.
TORQUAY.
BOURNEMOUTH and the NEW FOREST.
EXETER and SOUTH-EAST DEVON.
LYNTON, LYNMOUTH.
ILFRACOMBE, BARNSTAPLE, &c.
BIDEFORD.
PLYMOUTH and DISTRICT.
DARTMOOR.

THE CONTINENT.

PARIS.
The RHINE and RHINELAND.
SWITZERLAND.
BELGIUM and HOLLAND.
The RIVIERA.

IRELAND.

BELFAST.
CARLINGFORD BAY and the MOURNE MOUNTAINS.
CONNEMARA HIGHLANDS and the WEST of IRELAND.
CORK, GLENGARIFF, BANTRY.
DUBLIN and COUNTY WICKLOW.
GIANT'S CAUSEWAY.
COUNTIES WATERFORD and WEXFORD.
KILLARNEY.
LIMERICK, COUNTY CLARE, and the LOWER SHANNON.
LONDONDERRY and DONEGAL HIGHLANDS.
NORTHERN LAKE DISTRICT of IRELAND.

SCOTLAND.

EAST COAST of SCOTLAND.
SOUTH-WEST of SCOTLAND.
HIGHLANDS and ISLANDS of SCOTLAND.
EDINBURGH and Environs.
ABBOTSFORD, MELROSE, and the SCOTTISH BORDER.
ABERDEEN, DEESIDE, BALMORAL, &c.
AYR, ARRAN, DUMFRIES, and LAND of BURNS.
FIFE, KINROSS, DUNFERMLINE, &c.
OBAN, FORT WILLIAM, and the WEST of SCOTLAND.
GLASGOW and the CLYDE.
INVERNESS.
PERTH, DUNDEE, &c.
SKYE, ORKNEY, SHETLAND, &c.
The TROSSACHS, LOCH LOMOND, &c.

London: WARD, LOCK & CO., Limited, Salisbury-square, E.C.; New York and Melbourne.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

THE FOLLOWING NEW EDITIONS WILL BE READY ON MARCH 4.

ROUGHING IT, and The INNOCENTS AT HOME. By MARK TWAIN. With 200 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

BY WOMAN'S WIT. By Mrs. ALEXANDER. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

AT MARKET VALUE. By Grant ALLEN. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2s.

A Cheap Edition of ALLEN UPWARD'S Romantic Story, The PRINCE of BALKISTAN, is now ready. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2s.

A New and Cheaper Edition of T. W. SPEIGHT'S Popular Novel, The MASTER of TRENANCE, is now ready. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

A New Edition of Mrs. HUNGERFORD'S well-known Novel, APRIL'S LADY, is now ready. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

BEYOND the PALE: an Irish Romance. By B. M. CROKER, Author of 'Diana Barrington.' Crown 8vo. buckram, 6s.

"A more alluring, romantic, and energetic story we have not read for a long time....All who read Mrs Croker's delightful story will thoroughly enjoy its brilliant wit, its continuous succession of lively incidents, and will appreciate its excellent pictures of Irish life, and its unfailing sincerity of purpose."—Daily Mail.

WITH the RED EAGLE: a Romance of the Tyrol. By WILLIAM WESTALL. SECOND EDITION Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s.

"Mr Westall has made a fine choice of subject, and has contrived to handle it very prettily....The book deserves much praise There is a freshness in some of the mountain pictures which the cavalier romances now pouring from the press so abundantly often lack."—Daily Chronicle.

An ANXIOUS MOMENT. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD, Author of 'Molly Bawn.' SECOND EDITION. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Her heroines are so high-spirited, so generous, so witty, so gay, capable of such tenderness when the process of the taming of the shrew is finished, that one reads of them all with the old zest created by Molly Bawn."—Queen.

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. WALLER. With 9 Illustrations by the Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

A MISSING WITNESS. By Frank BARRETT, Author of 'Little Lady Linton.' With 8 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The history of the struggles of the three young dressmakers is described with wonderful spirit and convincingness, and the 'little mother' of the volume is a delightful study."—Morning Leader.

The NARRATIVE of CAPTAIN COIGNET, Soldier of the Empire, 1776–1850. With 100 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Told with a simplicity that almost leaves a sense of abruptness behind it, and in the plainest language, this story of the Grand Army, as told by one of its humblest members, is extremely impressive" New Saturday.

PHIL MAY'S SKETCH-BOOK. 54 Humorous Drawings. CHEAPER EDITION. Crown folio, cloth, 2s. 6d.

POPULAR NOVELS.—Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

By W. CLARK RUSSELL. The TALE of the TEN.
By BRET HARTE. The CRUSADE of the "EXCELSIOR."
By MARK TWAIN. The STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT.
By GEORGE R. SIMS. ROGUES and VAGABONDS.
By Sir WALTER BESANT. IN DEACON'S ORDERS.
By HAWLEY SMART. LONG ODDS. The MASTER of RATHKELLY.
By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED. MRS. TREGASKISS.
By Mrs. OLIPHANT. The SORCERESS.
By Mrs. ALEXANDER. A LIFE INTEREST. MONA'S CHOICE

WALFORD'S COUNTY FAMILIES of the UNITED KINGDOM, 1897. Containing Notices of the Descent, Birth, Marriage, Education, &c., of more than 12,000 distinguished Heads of Families, their Heirs Apparent or Presumptive, the Offices they hold or have held, their Town and Country Addresses, Clubs, &c. Royal 8vo. cloth gilt, 50s.

WALFORD'S COMPLETE PEERAGE, BARONETAGE, KNIGHTAGE, HOUSE of COMMONS (1897). Considerably Enlarged Royal 32mo cloth, gilt edges, 5s

WALFORD'S SHILLING PEERAGE (1897). Much Enlarged

WALFORD'S SHILLING BARONETAGE (1897). Much Enlarged

WALFORD'S SHILLING KNIGHTAGE (1897). Much Enlarged

WALFORD'S SHILLING HOUSE of COMMONS (1897).

The GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE. One Shilling Monthly. Contents for MARCH: LITTLE DANIEL. By J. W. Sherer, C.S.I.—ON BEHALF of BIRDS. By Robin Birdlove.—WALTER PATER. By Stanley Addleshaw.—A FIGHT for LIFE. By Rev. M. G. Watkins, M.A.—DONNA PIETRA. By Edmund G. Gardner.—BENHILL ON-SEA. By Dr. Yorke Davies.—SIR CLOUDESLEY SHOVEL. By W. A. Fox.—SEPARATE CREATION. By W. T. Freeman, F.R.C.S.—The TRIBUTE from BREENY. By Nora Hopper.—IN SUBTERRANEAN CAVES. By Walter Wood.—The HOOSIER POET. By Sylvanus Urban.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

INDIA
IN FACT AND FICTION.

ROMANTIC INDIA.
BY ANDRÉ CHEVRILLON.
1 vol. 7s. 6d. net. [Just out.

SOCIETY IN INDIA.
A PINCHBECK GODDESS.
BY MRS. J. M. FLEMING (ALICE M. KIPLING).
1 vol. 3s. 6d.

SCOTSMAN.—"A brilliance that defies description. In nowise unworthy of the great name on its cover."

THE NOVEL OF THE MUTINY.
ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS.
BY FLORA ANNIE STEEL.
Twentieth Thousand. 1 vol. 6s.

SPECTATOR.—"We have read Mrs. Steel's book with ever-increasing surprise and admiration. It is the most wonderful picture. We know that none who lived through the Mutiny will lay it down without a gasp of admiration, and believe that the same emotion will be felt by thousands to whom the scenes depicted are but lurid phantasmagoria."

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS.
SATURDAY REVIEW.—"'On the Face of the Waters' is the best novel of the great Mutiny, and we are not likely to see its rival in our time."

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS.
ILLUSTATED LONDON NEWS.—"A book which confers a distinct benefit on us, for it helps us to understand the ways of life and thought of some of the nations of the great continent of India."

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS.
BOOKMAN.—"We do not meet with a novel of this order once in ten years. On its imaginative side it is strong and deeply impressive. Mrs. Steel has made us realize, as we never did before, the signs of the coming storm, and the mystery and the tragedy of it."

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS.
A. T. Q. C. in the SPEAKER.—"It certainly is a remarkable book. The native intrigues are brilliantly handled. .....The whole book has the high seriousness which until quite recently few people dreamed of as possible in an Anglo-Indian novel."

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS.
PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"A triumph. Mrs. Steel has managed to set the Mutiny before us till it is more like a personal recollection than a tale told to us."

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS.
ACADEMY.—"All that relates to the natives is admirable, and the sketches of British military and civil life are absolutely convincing."

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.
FROM THE FIVE RIVERS.
1 vol. 6s.

TIMES.—"Of exceptional merit and freshness."

THE POTTER'S THUMB.
1 vol. 6s.

GLOBE.—"A brilliant story—a story that fascinates."

BY RUDYARD KIPLING and WOLCOTT BALESTIER.
THE NAULAHKA.
1 vol. 6s.

ATHENÆUM.—"In this book Mr. Kipling has surely surpassed himself."

London:
WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

MESSRS.
WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' NEW PUBLICATIONS.

SECOND EDITION.
NOW READY.
LIFE OF VICE-ADMIRAL SIR GEORGE TRYON, K.C.B.
BY REAR-ADMIRAL
C. C. PENROSE FITZGERALD.
With Two Portraits and numerous Illustrations, Several from Sir George Tryon's own Sketches.
Demy 8vo. 21s.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"The graphic pages of Admiral Penrose Fitzgerald. It is a fascinating and absorbing narrative, skilfully recounted, of an unspoiled darling of fortune, whose life from its beginning was one long, joyful triumph, until its astounding and terrible close."

STANDARD.—"Admiral Fitzgerald writes with discretion and moderation; he has full knowledge, and can handle his pen as well as he handles his ships.....He has produced a book which all will read with pleasure as well as profit."

DAILY NEWS.—"Admiral Fitzgerald has written a biography which is in every way worthy of one of the best of modern British seamen."

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"The volume should be read not by sailors only, but by every man who, with Tryon, regards the navy as the Right Arm of England."

SCOTSMAN.—"A brilliant career—a career which is sketched in this volume with the easy freedom that usually distinguishes members of the sea-faring profession. The biographer is in full sympathy with his subject.....He presents an effective picture of a naval officer of the very first order."

NEW BOOK BY BEATRICE HARRADEN.
READY THIS DAY.
HILDA STRAFFORD, AND THE REMITTANCE MAN.
Two Californian Stories. By BEATRICE HARRADEN, Author of 'Ships that Pass in the Night,' 'In Varying Moods,' &c. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

ON MARCH 1 WILL BE PUBLISHED.
THE APOSTOLIC MINISTRY IN THE SCOTTISH CHURCH.
(The Baird Lecture for 1897.) By ROBERT HERBERT STORY, D.D. (Edin.), F.S.A. Scot., Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the University of Glasgow; Principal Clerk of the General Assembly; and Chaplain to the Queen. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

POPULAR EDITION OF BURTON'S SCOTLAND.
In Eight Monthly Vols. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. each.
THE HISTORY OF SCOTLAND.
From Agricola's Invasion to the Extinction of the last Jacobite Insurrection. By JOHN HILL BURTON, D.C.L., Historiographer-Royal for Scotland.
 VOLUME I. READY MARCH 1.

CHEAP REISSUE IN SHILLING VOLUMES.
ANCIENT CLASSICS FOR ENGLISH READERS.
Edited by Rev. W. LUCAS COLLINS.
I. HOMER: THE ILIAD. By the EDITOR. [Ready.
II. HOMER: THE ODYSSEY. By the SAME. [March 1.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS,
Edinburgh and London.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & CO.'S
NEW AND FORTHCOMING BOOKS.

AN IMPORTANT NEW WORK
BY THE LATE SIR RICHARD BURTON.

HUMAN SACRIFICE AMONGST the EASTERN JEWS. Edited, with an Introduction, by W. H. WILKINS. In large demy 8vo. cloth gilt, 21*s.* net, with Photogravure Portrait from the Picture by the late Lord Leighton. [To be ready in March.

 The MS. of this Work was carefully prepared for press by the Author previously to his death, and is reproduced almost in the form in which it was written. It has, however, been carefully annotated, and in the Introduction the cause of the delay in publication is explained.

A NEW HISTORICAL NOVEL BY F. FRANKFORT MOORE.
With Illustrations by A. Forestier.

The JESSAMY BRIDE. By the Author of 'I Forbid the Banns,' 'Phyllis of Philistia,' &c. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6*s.* [March 15.

A NEW NOVEL BY ELLA MACMAHON.

The TOUCHSTONE of LIFE. By the Author of 'A New Note,' 'A Pitiful Passion,' &c. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6*s.* [This day.

A NEW HISTORICAL ROMANCE BY A. L. GLYN.

A PEARL of the REALM. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, with Frontispiece, 6*s.*

A NEW NOVEL BY ADELINE SERGEANT.
A Second Edition immediately called for.

The IDOL-MAKER. By the Author of 'The Mistress of Quest,' 'Roger Vanbrugh's Wife,' &c. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6*s.*

The DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—"Miss Sergeant's literary masterpiece."

The ACADEMY says:—"'The Idol-Maker' will rank with Miss Sergeant's best. She has done nothing that will be read with keener interest or with greater satisfaction."

A NEW NOVEL BY MRS. ORPEN.

PERFECTION CITY. By the Author of 'The Chronicles of the Sid.' In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6*s.* [Immediately.

A NEW NOVEL BY A NEW NOVELIST.

TATTERLEY. By Tom Gallon. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6*s.*

The NEW SATURDAY says:—"Mr. Tom Gallon has accomplished a work which many experienced writers would be only too glad to acknowledge."

The ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE says:—"'Tatterley' is in a sense an idyll such as Dickens himself might not have been ashamed to conceive. The author possesses a style of his own—lucid, distinctive, forcible. Once taken up, there is small likelihood that 'Tatterley' will be laid down until the last page has been turned."

A New Edition, completing 88,000 Copies.
OLIVE SCHREINER'S MASTERPIECE.

The STORY of an AFRICAN FARM. In crown 8vo. handsome cloth gilt, 3*s.* 6*d.*

THE CONCLUDING VOLUME, BEING VOL. X. OF "THE POETS AND POETRY OF THE CENTURY."
Edited by ALFRED H. MILES.

SACRED, MORAL, and RELIGIOUS VERSE. Containing Selections from the Poetry of JOHN KEBLE, J. H. NEWMAN, STOPFORD BROOKE, E. H. PLUMPTRE, S. BARING-GOULD, S. H. STONE, W. H. HOW, Dr. ALEXANDER, and others. With Biographical and Critical Notices. In cloth, gilt top, 4*s.*; in buckram, gilt top, 6*s.* [In March.

A NEW NOVEL BY MORLEY ROBERTS.

MAURICE QUAIN. By the Author of 'The Adventures of a Ship's Doctor.' In crown 8vo. cloth, gilt, 6*s.* [Immediately.

IN THE PRESS FOR EARLY PUBLICATION.
A NEW AND MOST INTERESTING VOLUME.
Edited by J. E. MUDDOCK.

The SAVAGE CLUB PAPERS. Containing Literary and Art Contributions by Members of the Savage Club, including COULSON KERNAHAN, ARTHUR MORRISON, G. A. HENTY, E. J. GOODMAN, LORD CHARLES BERESFORD, MACKENZIE BELL, G. MANVILLE FENN, HARRISON WEIR, PAUL MERRITT, Sir J. D. LINTON, CHARLES GREEN, R.I., YEEND KING, HERBERT JOHNSON, AARON WATSON, W. RALSTON, J. F. SULLIVAN, and others. In fcap. 4to. fancy cloth cover, designed by Albert W. Warren, 6*s.*

A NEW NOVEL BY FLORENCE MARRYAT.

A PASSING MADNESS. By the Author of 'The Dream that Stayed,' &c. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6*s.* [Immediately.

A NEW NOVEL BY LUCAS CLEEVE.

The WATER-FINDER. By the Author of 'Epicures,' &c. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6*s.*

A NEW HISTORICAL ROMANCE BY S. R. KEIGHTLEY.

The LAST RECRUIT of CLARE'S. Being Passages from the Memoirs of ANTHONY DILLON, Chevalier of St. Louis and late Colonel of Clare's Regiment in the service of France. By the Author of 'The Cavaliers,' 'The Crimson Sign,' &c. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, with Illustrations by Paul Dare, 6*s.*

The MANCHESTER GUARDIAN says:—"It is, indeed, a tale of extraordinary power, full of subtle characterization and strong situations, and distinguished specially by a finish of style and reserve of force."

The FREEMAN'S JOURNAL says:—"If this book does not find thousands of readers, then the taste for thrilling adventures gallantly told is lost to the novel-readers of this day."

A NEW NOVEL BY DEREK VANE.

The THREE DAUGHTERS of NIGHT. By the Author of 'The Sin and the Woman.' In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3*s.* 6*d.*

The MARCH NUMBER of THE LADY'S REALM,

READY MARCH 1, CONTAINS:—

BY FLORA ANNIE STEEL.
FROM the GRAVE and GATE of DEATH.
EUGÉNIE: EMPRESS and EXILE.
BY MRS. HUGH FRASER.
IN TOKYO.
FAMOUS WOMEN TRAVELLERS.
BY SARAH DOUDNEY.
TURNING BACK.
BY MARIE CORELLI.
The MODERN MARRIAGE MARKET.
BY S. R. CROCKETT.
LAD'S LOVE.
The SEASON on the RIVIERA.
BY H.M. THE QUEEN OF ROUMANIA.
The SERPENT'S ISLE.
The ROYAL MARRIAGES of 1897.

POEMS BY HELEN MARION BURNSIDE, ELLEN THORNEYCROFT FOWLER, AND MANY ARTICLES OF INTEREST.

WITH 98 ILLUSTRATIONS, PORTRAITS, AND AUTOGRAPHS.

Price SIXPENCE.

London: HUTCHINSON & CO. Paternoster-row.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

The THIRD EDITION of Mr. ANDREW LANG'S

PICKLE THE SPY

will be ready next week. 8vo. 18s.

JUST PUBLISHED, 2 vols. 8vo. 24s.

MEMOIRS OF BARON LEJEUNE,

Aide-de-Camp to Marshals Berthier, Davout, and Oudinot.

Translated and Edited from the Original French by Mrs. ARTHUR BELL (N. D'Anvers).

With an Introduction by Major-General MAURICE, C.B.

NEXT WEEK, 8vo. 16s.

VITA MEDICA:

Chapters of Medical Life and Work.

By Sir BENJAMIN WARD RICHARDSON, M.D. LL.D. F.R.S.

NEW BOOK BY PROFESSOR MAX MÜLLER.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE SCIENCE OF MYTHOLOGY.

By the Right Hon. Professor MAX MÜLLER, K.M., Member of the French Institute.

2 vols. 8vo. 32s.

CABINET EDITION OF BISHOP CREIGHTON'S 'PAPACY.'

A HISTORY OF THE PAPACY FROM THE GREAT SCHISM TO THE SACK OF ROME

(1378-1527).

By M. CREIGHTON, D.D. Oxon. and Camb., Lord Bishop of London.

New and Cheaper Edition. In Six Monthly Volumes.

Vol. I. crown 8vo. 6s. [Now ready.

With 12 Views of Constantinople and the Neighbourhood.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

LETTERS FROM CONSTANTINOPLE.

By Mrs. MAX MÜLLER.

With 11 Illustrations of Churches, &c., in Constantinople, crown 8vo. 6s.

THE CHURCH OF THE SIXTH CENTURY:

Six Chapters in Ecclesiastical History.

By WILLIAM HOLDEN HUTTON, B.D., Fellow and Tutor of St. John's College, Oxford.

FOR THE WHITE ROSE OF ARNO:

A Story of the Jacobite Rising of 1745.

By OWEN RHOSCOMYL, Author of 'Battlement and Tower,' &c.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

"We follow the fortunes of Mr. Owen Rhoscomyl's personages with breathless interest from the first page to the last.....'The White Rose of Arno' ought to take a high place in the long list of popular romances dealing with the Stuart cause."—Daily Telegraph.

LONGMAN'S MAGAZINE.

No. 173. MARCH, 1897. 8vo. price 6d.

The CHEVALIER D'AURIAC. Chaps. 6–8. By S. Levett Yeats, Author of 'The Honour of Savelli.'

ANNE MURRAY. By Lady Verney.

A NINETEENTH CENTURY CRAFT-GILD. By L. M. Roberts.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS: Ancient and Modern. By Eric Parker.

BEN PLUMBY'S CORNET. By Mary L. Pendered.

MILK DANGERS and REMEDIES. By Mrs. Percy Frankland.

AT the SIGN of the SHIP. By Andrew Lang.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.

London, New York, and Bombay.

ELLIOT STOCK'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

ENGLAND'S ATTAINMENT of COMMERCIAL SUPREMACY. By H. TIPPER, Associate of the Institute of Bankers.

"Those who desire to trace the history of British commerce for the last three hundred years may do it in Mr. Tipper's book. Mr. Tipper has done his work well. His selection is good, his arrangement excellent, his compression judicious. He has supplied an undoubted want in our current literature, and has opened for the average busy man a field hitherto closed to him by its size and difficulty of access."—Financial News.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

NEW THOUGHTS on CURRENT SUBJECTS: Scientific, Social, Philosophical. By the Rev. J. A. DEWE.

"The book presents conjectures as to the causes of many things which profound thinkers and men trained to scientific habits of thought are content to admit that they cannot explain."—Scotsman.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

The FOUR FIRST THINGS, and other Essays. By J. E. A. BROWN, Author of 'Thoughts through the Year,' 'From Advent to All Saints,' 'The Heart of a Girl,' &c.

"The things in question are life, character, childhood, and love, upon which the writer discourses with unimpeachable morality."—Scotsman.

In handsome crown 8vo. volumes, to be issued at short intervals, price 3s. 6d. net.

THE ANTIQUARY'S LIBRARY.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE SERIES IS NOW READY, ENTITLED

GLEANINGS from the NATURAL HISTORY of the ANCIENTS. By the Rev. M. G. WATKINS, M.A., Author of 'Pictures of Bird Life.'

"A volume at once readable and informing.....Full of the curiosities of literature, and therefore pleasing while it instructs."—Globe.

NEW VOLUME OF THE "BOOK-LOVER'S LIBRARY."

Cloth, price 4s. 6d.; Roxburghe half-morocco, 7s. 6d.; Large Paper, 1l. 1s. net.

The LITERATURE of MUSIC. By JAMES E. MATTHEW, Author of 'A Manual of Musical History.'

"A work which should guide the reader to the best discourses in all languages on musical history and technique." Globe.

"This is a very good general guide to the best works in the history of music, to dictionaries, to the literature of the opera, of musical instruments, and to musical bibliography." Bookman.

NEW VOLUME OF THE CAMDEN LIBRARY.

On fine paper, with rough edges, at 6s. per Volume; on fine paper, bound in Roxburghe, with gilt top, 7s. 6d. net; Large-Paper Copies (50 only), on Hand-made Paper, and bound in Roxburghe, with gilt top, 21s. net.

ECCLESIASTICAL VESTMENTS: their Development and History. By R. A. S. MACALISTER, M.A., Member of the Royal Society of Antiquaries of Ireland.

"The volume is well written, clearly arranged, and full of facts backed with authorities. A good index is provided, and a helpful series of illustrations."—Publishers' Circular.

NEW NOVELS.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.

TALES of BLACK COUNTRY LIFE. By DAVID HOBBS.

"What has been called the 'literature of locality' receives a pleasing addition in 'Tales of Black Country Life,' by David Hobbs. These tales may be commended as an interesting presentation of the working class among our Scottish ironfields."—Dundee Advertiser.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

MOSES GRIMSHAW. A Story of Lancashire Life. By NORMAN POULTON.

"The story is well told, prominence being given to those traits in the character of Moses which account for his success in life."—Western Morning News.

NEW VOLUME OF VERSE.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

The HUIA'S HOMELAND, and other Verses. By ROSLYN.

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

NOTICE.—The important New Work by Dr. DONALDSON SMITH, F.R.G.S., the well-known Explorer, entitled

THROUGH UNKNOWN AFRICAN COUNTRIES,

will be ready next week at all Libraries and Booksellers'. Price 21s. net.

NOTICE.—SOLDIERING and SURVEYING in BRITISH EAST AFRICA, 1891–1894, by Major MACDONALD, R.E., fully illustrated with Maps and Plans, is just ready at all Libraries and Booksellers'. Price 16s.

ON FARM and VELDT in CAPE COLONY, BECHUANALAND, NATAL, and the TRANSVAAL. By FRANCES McNAB. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. [March 2.

FISH TALES—and SOME TRUE ONES. By BRADNOCK HALL. With Etched Frontispiece by the Author, and 12 Full-Page Illustrations by T. Hope McLachlan. Crown 8vo. 6s. [March 5.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

WASTED RECORDS of DISEASE. By CHARLES E. PAGET, Lecturer on Public Health in the Owens College, Medical Officer of Health for the County Borough of Salford. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

The BEGGARS of PARIS (PARIS QUI MENDIE). Translated from the French of M. LOUIS PAULIAN by LADY HERSCHELL. Paper boards, 1s.

Times.—"Not only contains a great many amusing and instructive anecdotes, but formulates a definite scheme for the entire suppression of begging as a trade. Lady Herschell's excellent translation should be read by all who are interested in the vexed question of charity-giving, and even to those who read but for amusement it will prove vastly entertaining."

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

STUDIES in EARLY VICTORIAN LITERATURE. By FREDERIC HARRISON, M.A., Author of 'The Choice of Books,' &c. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

BY MR. J. CHURTON COLLINS.

A TREASURY of MINOR BRITISH POETRY. Selected and Arranged, with Notes, by J. CHURTON COLLINS, M.A. Handsomely bound, crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Standard.—"A choice and beautiful book."

NEW AND BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED EDITION.

The PLANT-LORE and GARDEN CRAFT of SHAKESPEARE. By the Rev. Canon ELLACOMBE, Author of 'In a Gloucestershire Garden.' With 80 Illustrations. Handsomely bound, 10s. 6d.

HABIT and INSTINCT: a Study in Heredity. By Prof. C. LLOYD MORGAN, Author of 'Animal Life and Intelligence.' Based on the Author's 'Lowell Lectures' in 1895–96. Demy 8vo. 16s.

Times.—"A valuable book on a fascinating subject."

SIR ALFRED MILNER'S STANDARD WORK.

ENGLAND in EGYPT. By Sir ALFRED MILNER, K.C.B., Governor of Cape Colony, and High Commissioner to South Africa. Popular Edition. Large crown 8vo. with Map, cloth, 7s. 6d.

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

VOLUME II. NOW READY FOR DELIVERY TO SUBSCRIBERS.

LIFE OF NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

By Prof. W. M. SLOANE, Ph.D. L.H.D.

Illustrated with 80 Reproductions of the Masterpieces of Painting, in their Original Colours, and 220 Full-Page Engravings in Tint and Black and White.

In Twenty Parts at 4*s.* net, each; or in Four Volumes at 24*s.* net, each. (Supplied only in Sets.)

Also ready, Vol. I. and Parts I.–VI.

 Subscriptions (sent through a Bookseller) will be received at any time and the Volumes or Parts delivered at such intervals as may be convenient to the Subscriber.

THE DONGOLA EXPEDITION.

LETTERS FROM THE SUDAN.

By the Special Correspondent of the Times (E. F. KNIGHT).

Reprinted from the Times of April to October, 1896.

With Illustrations and Plans. Demy 8vo. 8*s.* 6*d.* net.

TIMES.—"The whole of the work accomplished by the expedition can be clearly followed in Mr. Knight's pages, and the bright, observant style, to which his lively records of travel and adventure have long accustomed us, gives the story an interest and a charm that makes the book one of permanent value."

THIRD THOUSAND.

MISS KINGSLEY'S TRAVELS.

TRAVELS IN WEST AFRICA.

By Miss MARY H. KINGSLEY.

With 16 Full-Page and numerous Text Illustrations.

Demy 8vo. 21*s.* net.

FIELD.—"One of the most entertaining and instructive works that have come under our notice."

PUNCH.—"She has a keen eye for character, an abiding sense of the picturesque, a humour that bubbles over in all places and predicaments, and a graphic pen."

MACMILLAN'S MAGAZINE.

No. 449. MARCH. Price 1*s.*

Contents.

THROUGH the SWAMPS of BENIN.

A STRANGER at the DOLPHIN.
THACKERAY'S PHILOSOPHY.
The STORY of CRESSIDA.
REQUIESCAT.
THAT AWKWARD BOY.
The SICILIAN PEASANT.
PANTOMIME in PARIS.
EL DORADO.

Illustrated, price 1*s.* 4*d.*

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE

For MARCH

Contains, besides many Stories and Articles,

NELSON at TRAFALGAR. By Captain Alfred T. Mahan.
OUR FELLOW-CITIZEN of the WHITE HOUSE. The Official Cares of a President. By C. C. Buel.
CAMPAIGNING WITH GRANT. V. From the North Anna to Cold Harbour. By Horace Porter.

Illustrated, price 1*s.*

THE ST. NICHOLAS MAGAZINE

For MARCH

Contains, besides many Stories and Articles,

TEDDY BAIRD'S LUCK. By K. D. Sweetser.
JOHNNY in GOBOLINK LAND. By Ruth McEnery Stuart and A. B. Paine.
JED'S WINDMILL. By G. W. Curran.

BY FRANCIS T. PALGRAVE.

Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

LANDSCAPE in POETRY, from HOMER to TENNYSON. With numerous representative quotations. By FRANCIS T. PALGRAVE, late Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford.

MACMILLAN'S ILLUSTRATED STANDARD NOVELS.

NEW VOLUME.

The MISFORTUNES of ELPHIN and RHODODAPHNE. By THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK. With an Introduction by Professor GEORGE SAINTSBURY. Illustrated by F. H. TOWNSEND. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, antique paper, 3*s.* 6*d.*; "Peacock" Edition, gilt sides, back, and edges, 5*s.* (This completes the series of "Peacock" Novels.)

8vo. 10*s.* net.

EPIC and ROMANCE. Essays on Mediæval Literature. By W. P. KER, Fellow of All Souls' College, Oxford, Professor of English Literature in University College, London.

Extra crown 8vo. 6*s.*

A STUDY of the SKY: a Popular Astronomy. By Prof. HERBERT A. HOWE, Professor of Astronomy, University of Denver.

SECOND EDITION, REVISED THROUGHOUT.

Medium 8vo. 14*s.* net.

The ELEMENTS of POLITICS. By HENRY SIDGWICK, Author of 'The Methods of Ethics,' &c.

BY GOLDWIN SMITH.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

GUESSES at the RIDDLE of EXISTENCE, and other ESSAYS on KINDRED SUBJECTS. By GOLDWIN SMITH, D.C.L.

TIMES.—"Will excite a large amount of interest, both on account of the personality of the writer and because of the short, trenchant, and often brilliant form into which he has thrown what he has to say."

Royal 16mo. 5*s.*

The MORE ABUNDANT LIFE. Lenten Readings selected chiefly from Unpublished Manuscripts of the Right Rev. PHILLIPS BROOKS, D.D., late Bishop of the Diocese of Massachusetts. By W. M. L. JAY.

BY THE LATE DEAN CHURCH.

OCCASIONAL PAPERS, selected from the Guardian, the Times, and the Saturday Review, 1846–1890. By the late R. W. CHURCH, M.A. D.C.L., sometime Rector of Whatley, Dean of St. Paul's, Honorary Fellow of Oriel College. 2 vols. Globe 8vo. 10*s.* [Eversley Series.

TIMES.—"All the articles alike are marked by the same qualities—wide knowledge, perfect urbanity, and a singular charm of style."

BY EDWIN A. ABBOTT.

8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

The SPIRIT on the WATERS. The Evolution of the Divine from the Human. By EDWIN A. ABBOTT, Author of 'Philochristus,' &c.

CHRISTIAN WORLD.—"Dr. Abbott is emphatically a man to be listened to."

MACMILLAN & CO., Limited, London.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

THIRTEENTH EDITION READY THIS DAY.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 36s.

FORTY-ONE YEARS IN INDIA.

From Subaltern to Commander-in-Chief.

By FIELD-MARSHAL

LORD ROBERTS of KANDAHAR, V.C.

Besides Maps and Plans, the Volumes are embellished with Portraits on Steel and Copper of Sir JAMES OUTRAM, General NICHOLSON, Sir HENRY LAWRENCE, Sir ABRAHAM ROBERTS, Sir COLIN CAMPBELL, Sir WILLIAM MANSFIELD, LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA, Sir DONALD STEWART, Sir SAMUEL BROWNE, the AMIR OF AFGHANISTAN, Sir ARTHUR HARDINGE, and Field-Marshal LORD ROBERTS.

"A vivid and simple narrative of things actually seen by a fighting man who, during forty-one years of Indian service, saw more hard fighting than almost any other Englishman of our time. It also records the experience of a military administrator who has conducted historical campaigns and been the presiding genius in the re-organization of a great army. But to the general reader perhaps its chief charm will be glimpses which it gives, with a certain Cervantes-like naïveté, of the personality of the author. A hundred unconscious touches, in the camp, on the battlefield, and at the Council table, reveal to us the veritable hero of the British private, and the fearless leader of men whom every native soldier would follow to the death."—Times.

"It would be difficult to overstate the service which the author renders to the British nation by reminding it of the true temper and trustworthiness of one of its greatest weapons of security, the army.....The story of Lord Roberts's life should be studied by every young soldier.....The peculiar charm of the book is the modest and generous spirit which, like a golden thread, runs through it."—Athenæum.

Now ready, price One Shilling.

THE TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE.

Contents for MARCH, 1897.

1. DEAR FAUSTINA. Chaps. 7-9.
2. The BATTLE of VAL.
3. TIME.
4. The FATE of the LETTER.
5. WALPOLE and "ST. HANNAH."
6. FOOL or ANGEL?
7. ABBÉ SCARRON.
8. BEAUTY and the BEAST.
9. The CAPITAL of BURGUNDY.
10. THAT IMPOSSIBLE SHE.
11. The CAREER of CLAUDIA. Chaps. 14-16.

STANDARD WORKS OF FICTION.

THE NOVELS OF RHODA BROUGHTON.

Scylla or Charybdis?—A Beginner—Mrs. Bligh—Cometh up as a Flower—Good-bye, Sweetheart!—Joan—Nancy—Not Wisely, but Too Well—Red as a Rose is She—Second Thoughts—Belinda—Alas!—"Doctor Cupid."

Each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

THE NOVELS OF ROSA N. CAREY.

Nellie's Memories—Barbara Heathcote's Trial—Heriot's Choice—Mary St. John—Not Like Other Girls—Only the Governess—Queenie's Whim—Robert Ord's Atonement—Uncle Max—Wee Wifie—Wooed and Married—For Lilias—Lover or Friend—Basil Lyndhurst—Sir Godfrey's Granddaughters—The Mistress of Brae Farm.

Each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

THE NOVELS OF MAARTEN MAARTENS.

The Sin of Joost Avelingh—An Old Maid's Love—"God's Fool"—The Greater Glory—My Lady Nobody.

Each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

THE NOVELS OF JESSIE FOTHERGILL.

From Moor Isles—The "First Violin"—Aldyth—Probation (Reprinting)—Borderland—Kith and Kin.

Each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

THE NOVELS OF MARY CHOLMONDELEY.

Sir Charles Danvers—Diana Tempest.

Each in 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,

Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

THE PEOPLE'S EDITION.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

In medium 8vo. paper cover.

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN.

By Mrs. CRAIK.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6s.

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR

SHIPS and their COMMANDERS. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"Pleasantly written and readable as it is, it cannot but prove welcome to a large number of readers who have no access to the heavier naval literature from which it is drawn."—Scotsman.

In 1 vol. large crown 8vo. gilt top, price 6s.

BARRACK and BATTLEFIELD.

TALES of the SERVICE at HOME and ABROAD. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'A Captain in the Fusiliers,' &c.

"Mr. Wood never fails to make his tragic point with force, and he presents the spirit of sturdy Tommy Atkins with fidelity to his original. A volume like this is always welcomed by both old and young."—Dundee Advertiser.

"There is nothing melodramatic about these narratives, which are obviously true to the life they profess to depict."

Globe.

UNDER THE ESPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY.

NOW READY, SIXTY-SIXTH EDITION.

1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved, 31s. 6d. bound, gilt edges.

LODGE'S PEERAGE AND BARONETAGE FOR 1897.

CORRECTED BY THE NOBILITY.

"That compendious and admirably printed guide to the peerage and baronetage of the British Empire has reached its sixty-sixth edition with the volume for 1897. The usefulness of this concise and carefully-edited book is enhanced by the excellent and stout paper on which it is printed."

Pall Mall Gazette, December 29, 1896.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

The SOUND of a VOICE. By Linda GARDINER, Author of 'His Heritage,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, 6s.

The WOOING of a FAIRY. By GERTRUDE WARDEN, Author of 'The Sentimental Sex,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"A clever, well-written story, which has this merit, that the key of the well-constructed plot is hidden until the last chapter."—Pall Mall Gazette.

An AUSTRALIAN DUCHESS. By AMYOT SAGON, Author of 'A Fair Palmist,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"Mr. Sagon's brightly written romance."—Daily Telegraph.

GENTLEMAN GEORGE: a Story without a Heroine. By Mrs. HERBERT MARTIN, Author of 'Britomart,' 'Her Début,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"Mrs. Herbert Martin has produced an excellent story of country life which loses nothing in interest from the fact that it has no heroine."—Scotsman.

BLIND BATS. By Margaret B. CROSS, Author of 'Stolen Honey,' 'Newly Fashioned,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"Miss Cross has a delightful style, fresh, crisp, and witty, without straining after epigrams, and her portraiture is throughout lifelike without being photographic."

Pall Mall Gazette.

The YOKE of STEEL. By C. J. WILLS, Author of 'The Pit Town Coronet,' &c., and GODFREY BURCHETT, Author of 'Dominic Penterne,' &c.

"The dialogue throughout is spontaneous and natural without lapsing into trivial platitudes or idle chatter. On the whole a capital novel."—Daily Telegraph.

OF the DEEPEST DYE. By Col. CUTHBERT LARKING, Author of 'With Everything Against Her,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"The author writes of nothing that he does not know, and the thrilling interest of his narrative enchains the reader's attention from start to finish."—Daily Telegraph.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED, 13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN'S NEW BOOKS.

OLIVE SCHREINER'S TROOPER HALKET.

"Grips the heart and haunts the imagination."

Daily News.

OLIVE SCHREINER'S TROOPER HALKET.

"Is powerfully written."—Scotsman.

OLIVE SCHREINER'S TROOPER HALKET.

"Is superlatively beautiful, and must be read."

Sheffield Independent.

OLIVE SCHREINER'S TROOPER HALKET.

"Is a bold piece of work, and an opportune."

Daily Chronicle.

OLIVE SCHREINER'S TROOPER HALKET.

"Is well and impressively written."—Pall Mall Gazette.

TROOPER PETER HALKET, By OLIVE SCHREINER.

With Photogravure Frontispiece, cloth, 6s.

NEW VOLUMES OF "THE STORY OF THE NATIONS."

BRITISH INDIA. By R. W. Frazer, LL.B.

CANADA. By J. G. Bourinot, C.M.G. LL.D.

With Maps, Illustrations, and Index, cloth, 5s. each.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MR. MAGNUS.'

SOUTH AFRICA AS IT IS. By F. REGINALD STATHAM, Author of 'Mr. Magnus,' &c. Cloth, 10s. 6d.

INTRODUCTION BY RIGHT HON. A. J. MUNDELLA.

A VILLAGE POLITICIAN: the Life-Story of John Buckley. Edited by J. C. BUCKMASTER. Cloth, 6s.

NEW NUMBER OF "LITTLE NOVELS."

PASSPORTS. By I. J. Armstrong. Paper covers, 6d.; cloth, 1s.

Recently issued in Same Series.

A Slight Indiscretion. By Mrs. Edw. CARTWRIGHT.

A Comedy of Three. By Newton SANDERS.

WILL BE READY NEXT WEEK.

LE SELVE. By Ouida. Second Edition. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

"A very excellent story."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Is admirably written."—Morning Post.

ENGLAND. By Frances E. Cooke. (A Volume of "The Children's Study.") Cloth, gilt top, Photogravure Frontispiece, 2s. 6d.

"Terse, vivid, well informed."—Speaker.

The SHADOW CHRIST: an Introduction to Christ Himself. By GERALD STANLEY LEE. Fcap. 8vo. paper boards, 2s. 6d.

QUOTATIONS for OCCASIONS. Compiled by KATHERINE B. WOOD. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

STOPS; or, How to Punctuate. By PAUL ALLARDYCE. Ninth Edition. Parchment covers, 6d.; cloth, 1s.

COSMOPOLIS:

An International and Tri-Lingual Monthly Review.

Edited by F. ORTMANS.

Contents for MARCH.

A CHILD of the GHETTO. I. Zangwill.
JOHN STUART MILL, 1869-1873. Right Hon. Sir Charles W. Dilke.
LITERARY RECOLLECTIONS. Right Hon. F. Max Müller.
MADAME BLANC (RENIZON as a ROMANCE WRITER. Mlle. Yetta Blaze de Bury.
CURRENT GERMAN LITERATURE. John G. Robertson.
The GLOBE and the ISLAND. Henry Norman.
Le TIGRE. J. H. Rosny.
LETTRES INÉDITES, publiées par E. Halpérine-Kaminsky. Ivan Tourguénett.
La MAISON de MANTEGNA à MANTOUE et les 'TRIOMPHES de CÉSAR' à HAMPTON COURT. Charles Yriarte.
Les CONFÉRENCES d'AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, d'après la CORRESPONDANCE INÉDITE du DUC de RICHELIEU. R. de Cisternes.
L'AMERIQUE UNIVERSITAIRE. Baron Pierre de Coubertin.
Le LIVRE à PARIS. Émile Faguet.
REVUE du MOIS. F. de Pressensé.
MEDEA. Paul Heyse.
Die ENTWICKLUNGSGESCHICHTE des MODERNEN STAATES. Rudolph Sohm.
TURKISCHE REFORMEN SEIT VIERZIG JAHREN. H. Vambery.
"JOHN GABRIEL BORKMAN," SCHAUSPIEL von HENRIK IBSEN. Alfred Freiherr von Berger.
POLITISCHES in DEUTSCHER BELEUCHTUNG. "Ignotus."

PRICE 2s. 6d.

London:
T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Olive Schreiner's Peter Halket	271
English Schools at the Reformation	272
John Stuart Mill's Early Essays	273
Jewish Life in the Middle Ages	274
Prof. Maitland's Domesday Book and Beyond ...	274
Dean Church's Occasional Papers	275
Australian Fiction	276
Genealogical Literature	276
The Literature of Social Economy	277
Our Library Table—List of New Books ...	277–278
To G. F. Watts, R.A.; Miss Kingsley's 'Travels in West Africa'; Barbour's 'Bruce' and the Disputed 'Legends'; A Letter of Stevenson	278–280
Literary Gossip	280
Science—Chemical Literature; Societies; Meetings; Gossip	281–283
Fine Arts—Hueffer's Life of Ford Madox Brown; Minor Exhibitions; Pompey's Pillar at Alexandria; Sales; Gossip	284–286
Music—The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week	287–288
Drama—The Week; Gossip	288

LITERATURE

Trooper Peter Halket of Mashonaland. By Olive Schreiner. (Fisher Unwin.)

Political pamphlets and religious tracts seldom call for notice in these columns. Mrs. Schreiner's little book may be placed in either category. But it is much more than an exercise in polemics. Though her scornful resentment of the policy and methods of the Chartered Company in South Africa finds free vent here, and though in condemning them she makes bolder use of Scriptural associations than many may like, she has achieved a remarkable literary success. 'Trooper Peter Halket' does not compete with 'The Story of an African Farm' either as a narrative or as a study of characters, but it is, in our opinion, superior in workmanship. In spite of occasional blemishes, and the impossibility of its central figure being presented in all the dignity proper to the conception, it is a really powerful and most impressive picture of the struggle between the forces of good and evil, Christian obligations and the ways of Mammon, as it has shown itself to Mrs. Schreiner from her Kimberley point of view. Changing the term, it is, taken as a whole, a well-sustained and eloquent parable, and several of the minor parables contained in it are told with rare grace of style and vigour of expression.

Peter Simon Halket, whose name suggests the "sinful" disciple who was chosen to be the rock on which the Church of Christ was to be built, is the son of a poor English widow, has gone to seek his fortunes in Mashonaland, and has had his full share in the rough tasks and coarse pastimes of those in the employ of the new masters of the country. One long night, which may be dated some three or four months ago, he passes on the veld, waiting for the dawn to give him an opportunity of rejoining the comrades from whom he has got astray. Without food and with very little Cape brandy left in his flask, he tries to warm himself and to keep himself awake by crouching over a fire he has lighted on a koppje. He is not addicted to thinking, but to-night he thinks much. He recalls his childish life, its simple pleasures, and the petty faults for which his mother tenderly reproved him. He broods over his mother's patience and poverty, and longs for the time when, his term of service as a trooper being over, and the grant of land with which it is to be partly paid for being obtained, he will have a chance of acquiring the wealth that is to make both him and her happy. As soon as he gets his land he will start a syndicate :—

"Peter Halket was not very clear as to how it ought to be started ; but he felt certain that he and some other men would have to take shares. They would not have to pay for them. And then they would get some big man in London to take shares. He need not pay for them ; they would give them to him ; and then the company would be floated. No one would have to pay anything ; it was just the name—'The Peter Halket Gold Mining Company, Limited.' It would float in London ; and people there who didn't know the country would buy the shares ; they would have to give ready money for them, of course ; perhaps fifteen pounds a share when they were up !—Peter Halket's eyes blinked as he looked into the fire.—And then, when the market was up, he, Peter Halket, would sell out all his shares. If he gave himself only six thousand and sold them each for ten pounds, then he, Peter Halket, would have sixty thousand pounds ! And then he would start another company, and another."

Further projects and other thoughts jostle in the weary and half-famished trooper's mind, when suddenly a stranger, who, on being questioned, says that he is "a Jew of Palestine," appears, and asks leave to sit beside him. Converse between these two occupies half the volume. At first it is the trooper who does nearly all the talking. Partly to entertain his mysterious visitor, partly under an attraction that grows steadily upon him, he gives some account of his experiences in Mashonaland, his treatment of his nigger wives and the other niggers whom he helped to hunt down, and so forth. But all the trooper tells seems to have been known to the stranger already, and everything else. Then

"'Peter Simon Halket,' said the stranger suddenly—Peter started ; he had not told him his second name—'if it should come to pass that you should obtain those lands you have desired, and you should obtain black men to labour on them and make to yourself great wealth ; or should you create that company'—Peter started—'and fools should buy from you, so that you became the richest man in the land ; and if you should take to yourself wide lands, and raise to yourself great palaces, so that princes and great men of earth crept up to you and laid their hands against yours, so that you might slip gold into them—what would it profit you ?' 'Profit !' Peter Halket stared : 'Why, it would profit everything. What makes Beit and Rhodes and Barnato so great ? If you 've got eight millions—' 'Peter Simon Halket, which of those souls you have seen on earth is to you greatest ?' said the stranger, 'Which soul is to you fairest ?' 'Ah,' said Peter, 'but we weren't talking of souls at all ; we were talking of money. Of course if it comes to souls, my mother 's the best person I 've ever seen. But what does it help her ? She 's got to stand washing clothes for those stuck-up nincompoops of fine ladies ! Wait till I 've got money ! It 'll be somebody else then, who—'"

It is now the stranger's turn to speak, and in the trooper he has an awed listener. He shows the cruelty of persecuting the natives, of robbing them of their lands and lives. He denounces the great men who have taken the lead in bringing this evil about ; he blames as partners in the guilt all the smaller folk who tolerate it and hope to gain by it. He speaks chiefly in parables or fables. One of these is about a preacher who dared to preach righteousness, and thereby lost his whole congregation, but received his heaviest blow through the reproaches of his wife. Another is about two friendly beasts (by whom we are, presumably, to understand the English and the Dutch parties in South Africa) who were brought into deadly combat by the treacherous action of malignant birds. Another opens thus :—

"There was a streamlet once : it burst forth from beneath the snow on a mountain's crown ; and the snow made a cove over it. It ran on pure and blue and clear as the sky above it, and the banks of snow made its cradle. Then it came to a spot where the snow ended ; and two ways lay before it by which it might journey ; one, on the mountain ridges, past rocks and stones, and down long sunlit slopes to the sea ; and the other, down a chasm. And the stream hesitated : it twirled and purled, and went this way and went that. It might have been, that it would have forced its way past rocks and ridges and along mountain slopes, and made a path for itself where no path had been ; the banks would have grown green, and the mountain daisy would have grown beside it ; and all night the stars would have looked at their faces in it ; and down the long sunny slopes the sun would have played on it by day ; and the wood dove would have built her nest in the trees beside it ; and singing, singing, always singing, it would have made its way at last to the great sea, whose far-off call all waters hear."

But the streamlet, taking the wrong course, leaped into the abyss.

"The rocks closed over it. Nine hundred fathoms deep, in a still, dark pool it lay. The green lichen hung from the rocks. No sunlight came there, and the stars could not look down at night. The pool lay still and silent. Then, because it was alive and could not rest, it gathered its strength together, through fallen earth and broken débris it oozed its way silently on ; and it crept out in a deep valley ; the mountains closed it around. And the streamlet laughed to itself, 'Ha, ha ! I shall make a great lake here ; a sea !' And it oozed, and it oozed, and it filled half the plain. But no lake came—only a great marsh—because there was no way outwards, and the water rotted. The grass died out along its edges ; and the trees dropped their leaves and rotted in the water ; and the wood dove who had built her nest there flew up to the mountains, because her young ones died. And the toads sat on the stones and dropped their spittle in the water ; and the reeds were yellow that grew along the edge. And at night, a heavy, white fog gathered over the water, so that the stars could not see through it ; and by day a fine white mist hung over it, and the sunbeams could not play on it. And no man knew that once the marsh had leapt forth clear and blue from under a hood of snow on the mountain's top : aye, and that the turning of one stone might have caused that it had run on and on, and mingled its song with the sea's song for ever."

By such discourse the trooper's eyes are opened and his heart is softened. "I would like to be one of your men," he says to the stranger, who told him that he also had a "company"; "I am tired of belonging to the Chartered Company." But Halket pleads inability to convey any of the weighty messages which are proposed to him, to the people of England and of Cape Colony, and to "one man," evidently Mr. Cecil Rhodes, adding to his other reasonable excuses, "In truth, the message is so long I could not well remember it." At length

"the stranger looked down at him, and placed his hand gently on his head. 'Peter Simon Halket,' he said, 'a harder task I give you than any which has been laid upon you. In that small spot where alone on earth your will rules, bring there into being the kingdom to-day. Love your enemies; do good to them that hate you. Walk ever forward, looking not to the right hand or the left. Heed not what men shall say of you. Succour the oppressed; deliver the captive. If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he is athirst give him drink.' A curious warmth and gladness stole over Peter Halket as he knelt; it was as, when a little child, his mother folded him to her: he saw nothing more about him but a soft bright light. Yet in it he heard a voice cry, 'Because thou hast loved mercy—and hated oppression—' When Trooper Peter Halket raised himself, he saw the figure of the stranger passing from him. He cried, 'My Master, let me go with you.' But the figure did not turn. And, as it passed into the darkness, it seemed to Peter Halket that the form grew larger and larger: and as it descended the further side of the koppje it seemed that for one instant he still saw the head with a pale, white light upon it: then it vanished."

How much of hallucination, and how much of supernaturalism, Mrs. Schreiner wishes to be assumed in the night's startling experiences which make up three-fourths of her volume, it would be hard to say. This experiment in the writing of a modern gospel, or in supplementing the old Gospel with a new chapter, and supplying it with a new gloss, is more ambitious than anything of the sort hitherto attempted by her. Perfection in a piece of work so daring was unattainable; that she has succeeded so far in handling such difficult material, in blending the boldest idealism with the most matter-of-fact realism, is surprising and gratifying. The pathos of her sketch, and the skill and delicacy with which she has drawn her outlines and filled them in, are notable; the signs of bathos and clumsiness are few.

There is a short and apt sequel to the story of Peter Halket's conversion to Mrs. Schreiner's view of nineteenth century Christianity and Christian duty. A few days after his lonely—or all but lonely—night on the veld, when he is again with his rough companions, and when he has not many hours to wait for the end of his service as a trooper and the promised grant of land which he has earned by so much ignorant and degrading self-sacrifice, his newly acquired religion is put to the test. Already he has shown himself to be a changed man. As one of his fellow troopers explains to another:—

"He 's never been quite right since that time he got lost and spent the night out on the koppje. When we found him in the morning he was in a kind of dead sleep; we couldn't wake him; yet it wasn't cold enough for him to have been frozen. He 's never been the same man since; queer, you know; giving his rations away to the coloured boys, and letting the other fellows have his dot of brandy at night; and keeping himself sort of apart to himself, you know. The other fellows think he 's got a touch of fever on, caught wandering about in the long grass that day. But I don't think it 's that; I think it 's being alone in the veld that 's got hold of him. Man, have you ever been out like that, alone in the veld, night and day, and not a soul to speak to? I have; and I tell you, if I 'd been left there three days longer I 'd have gone mad or turned religious. Man, it 's the nights, with the stars up above you, and the dead still all around. And you think, and think, and think! You remember all kinds of things you 've never thought of for years and years. I used to talk to myself at last, and make believe it was another man. I was out seven days: and he was only out one night. But I think it 's the loneliness that got hold of him. Man, those stars are awful; and that stillness that comes toward morning!"

On the eventful day Halket has quarrelled with his captain about the treatment of a starving native, who has been caught and tied up to a tree as a spy, waiting to be shot next morning. He dares to talk "pure, unmitigated Exeter Hall" to the captain, urging that "all men were brothers, and God loved a black man as well as a white," and so forth. The scene is described in detail by one trooper, a hardened colonial, to another, a fresh arrival from England:—

"And then he says—'If you let me take him up to Lo Magundis, sir, I 'm not afraid; and I 'll tell the people there that it 's not their land and their women that we want, it 's them to be our brothers and love us. If you 'll only let me go, sir, I 'll go and make peace; give the man to me, sir!' The Colonial shook with laughter. 'What did the Captain say?' asked the Englishman. 'The Captain; well, you know the smallest thing sets him off swearing all round the world; but he just stood there with his arms hanging down at each side of him, and his eyes staring, and his face getting redder and redder: and all he could say was, "My Gawd! my Gawd!" I thought he 'd burst. And Halket stood there looking straight in front of him, as though he didn't see a soul of us all there.'"

The tragic ending of the quarrel the reader may be left to ascertain from Mrs. Schreiner's closing pages. It is the most touching episode in a book as conspicuous for its dramatic force and artistic construction as for the impressive moral it is intended to convey.

English Schools at the Reformation, 1546–8. By Arthur F. Leach. (Constable & Co.)

The returns of the Commissioners under the Chantries Acts of 37 Henry VIII. and 1 Edward VI. have been printed for Yorkshire, Lancashire, and Somerset, and from what has already appeared it was clear that in these records were buried the secrets of the sufferings under the Reformation of all those schools which were maintained out of endowments attached to guilds, chantries, or stipendiary priests. That the number of such schools was far larger than has hitherto been supposed Mr. Leach made known in an article on 'Edward VI.: Spoiler of Schools,' which appeared in the Contemporary Review, in 1892. The results then foreshadowed are in the main established by the extracts from the chantry certificates which make up this volume. The idea of bringing together all those entries in the returns which deal with schools was a good one, for the schools fail to receive due prominence where the chantry certificates are printed in extenso. Unfortunately selection leads to the exclusion of a mass of important data concerning population, and of many other records of great interest to the social, local, and economic historian, which will have ultimately to be collected. Also there is always the risk that important entries concerning schools have been overlooked. Among the returns here quoted, those of the Commissioners in the West Country are the most interesting, and at times they wax even eloquent. The example of Ledbury may be cited as a specimen. First, the number of communicants, "houseling people," is entered as 640. The stipendiary priest, aged fifty-four, is a man of good conversation, and daily occupied in teaching children grammar, and he ekes out his living with the little rewards of the friends of the scholars. The town of Ledbury, a poor place, finds the school a source of gain, for the scholars have been lodged and boarded in the town, and the country round about has profited by selling victuals there. The poor inhabitants humbly beg that the said school may still be kept, "a charitable deed, if so it may please His Highness." A half-free school is thus defined:—

"that is to say, taking of scholars learning grammar 8*d.* the quarter, and of others learning to read, 4*d.* the quarter."

But there is matter on every page which lends itself to quotation.

As to the importance of that part of the material which is here for the first time printed there cannot be two opinions, and there is no doubt that the introduction on "English Schools at the Reformation" will serve to correct some popular errors. It is unfortunate, however, that the tone which the author has chosen to adopt in speaking of the work of his distinguished predecessors and contemporaries is generally ungracious, and sometimes violent. Even if their statements are as faulty as he would have us believe, after all it is as natural to be guided by the works of previous writers, in the absence of handy original authority, as it is human to err. Mr. Leach escapes the one frailty by the nature of his undertaking, which is to explore the originals, but his knowledge is not so great as to protect him from the other. Certainly he follows no previous authority in calling Henry, the brother of Stephen, uncle of Henry II.; nor when he states that schoolboys were reading "Valla and other ancient Latin authors." It is, perhaps, not his own invention that secular canons were "ordinary clergymen who, like the canons of our cathedrals now, married and gave in marriage." We do not know by what law these persons were exempted from the canons which attempted to enforce sacerdotal celibacy. Again, we do not know on what authority Fox is called head master of Stratford-on-Avon Grammar School. Mr Leach's allegiance to previous authority on the question of the purchasing power of money is wavering. First it is stated to have been from twelve- to twenty-fold; subsequently the equations are based on the supposition that twenty-fold, which is now generally acknowledged to be too high an estimate, is correct.

Doubtless there has been some hasty generalization on the subject of the good work done for grammar schools under Edward VI., but does the generalization "Edward VI.: Spoiler of Schools," here repeated as the title of a chapter, bring us any nearer to the truth? On Mr. Leach's own showing it is unjust. The small part which Edward personally could take in the matter is one of the points on which Mr. Leach dwells in exposing the errors of others. Another is that the Chantries Act of 1 Edward VI., had it been executed in accordance with its design, bid fair on the whole "not to harm the schools." The verdict finally pronounced is no more severe than that the statesmen of Edward VI.'s reign missed a great opportunity. There is no reason to suppose that the exchange of landed endowment for a fixed stipend, which did so much in the end to impoverish schools, was deliberately planned to obtain this result.

Mr. Leach's aim seems to be at all costs to catch attention by a startling declaration. Because Edward and Somerset and the monks have had more than their fair share of acknowledgment for their zeal in the cause of education, henceforth we must believe that they showed no zeal at all, that Edward robbed schools, that Dudley, not Somerset, deserves some little credit, and as for the monasteries, "certain it is that at the period with which we are concerned, monks had little to do with general education and less with learning." Bridgwater gains no credit for maintaining and educating thirteen poor boys, because the priory was merely in the position of a trustee, as the endowment came, not out of the general revenues, but out of rectories appropriated to the priory on that condition. Extend this principle, and the monasteries have little to do with feeding and clothing their own monks; they merely hold lands in trust on that condition. In several of the certificates the schoolmaster is stated to be in receipt of a pension out of the possessions of a late monastery, which may mean that many monks took to teaching after the dissolution, or may point to an earlier connexion between the school and the monastery. Mr. Leach questions whether any schoolmaster can be named who was at the same time a monk, yet he himself quotes the stipulation at Manchester School in 1525 that the master "be a single man, priest or not priest, so that he be no religious man," which would indicate that the founder desired to avoid the danger of having a monk as schoolmaster.

The tone of the introduction is throughout not that of the historian who weighs his judgments, but that of the ready writer. The depth of Mr. Leach's historic insight may be measured by a passage in which he describes the tenth century revival of monasticism: England was "seized with a craze, like that under which the Eastern world had long lain, for celibacy, fastings, floggings, and other forms of self-torture of the same kind as, and perhaps not very much less in degree than, the fanatical performances of Indian fakirs now."

Early Essays by John Stuart Mill. Selected from the Original Sources by J. W. M. Gibbs. (Bell & Sons.)

These selections include the whole of Mill's small volume issued in 1844 and now out of print, entitled 'Essays on some Unsettled Questions in Political Economy,' together with a number of contributions to periodicals between 1829 and the date of the 'Essays.' Of these some were included in 'Dissertations and Discussions.' There have been added the reviews of Tennyson's early poems and of Carlyle's 'French Revolution,' neither of which was republished by Mill himself. The essays included in 'Dissertations and Discussions,' now also out of print, Mr. Gibbs has reprinted from the original versions, the passages that Mill omitted in his reprint being placed within brackets. As appendices there are given 'Remarks on Bentham's Philosophy, by E. L. Bulwer-Lytton and J. S. Mill' (published in a book of sketches called 'England and the English,' 1833), and Mill's letter to the Edinburgh Review (1844) on Bowring's 'Life of Bentham.'

The collection is decidedly interesting, but the propriety of restoring passages from the original versions in the case of essays deliberately revised for publication by the author is more than doubtful. The passages restored are sometimes mere references to the aims of the periodical in which the essays appeared; sometimes they are what Mill evidently thought over-hasty expressions of opinion. A passage on Hume that had been left out of the republished article on Bentham will, however, be read with interest. Hume is there called "the prince of dilettanti," and it is remarked that his "absolute scepticism in speculation very naturally brought him round to Toryism in practice."

Of the essays on political economy the last ('On the Definition of Political Economy and its Method') was well worth reprinting, but we are not sure about the first four. They will interest professed students of economics, but they are rather technical, and have not the general interest which is common to all the other essays in the volume. The remaining essays are on 'Corporation and Church Property,' 'What is Poetry?' 'The Two Kinds of Poetry,' and 'Democracy and Government' (in the appendix). All these deserved republication, both for their own sakes and as affording indications of the ideas —especially political—that Mill was afterwards to develope in more systematic form. In the essay on the 'Definition of Political Economy' the reader finds the general view afterwards set forth in the 'Logic'—that the peculiar character of political economy is due to its being at once an "abstract" science, dealing with hypothetical results of tendencies that never act alone, and a "moral" science, dealing with actions considered as proceeding from motives. Mill is here also striving to find a name for the science that has since been called sociology. He suggests "speculative politics" as less open to objection than anything else, though not quite satisfactory. Political economy, he says, is "not the science of speculative politics, but a branch of that science."

Since Mill is often wrongly regarded as an unqualified adherent of laissez faire, it is interesting to quote a criticism on Turgot in the article entitled 'Corporation and Church Property.' A protest is there made against the opinion of Turgot and the French philosophers of his time that foundations and endowments are necessarily useless or pernicious. Mill's comment is that they "seem to have conceived the perfection of political society to be reached, if man could but be compelled to abstain from injuring man." In the same essay of 1833 we already find Mill's characteristic view about minorities, and the peculiar importance of securing for them means of expression in a democracy. The disapprobation of the Government, when the constitution is popular, "means the disapprobation of the majority; and where the opinion of the majority gives the law, there, above all, it is eminently the interest of the majority that minorities should have fair play." Another idea afterwards made prominent in the 'Liberty' is to be found in a note appended to the article on 'The Two Kinds of Poetry,' where Mill remarks that "the present as often goes amiss for lack of what time and change have deprived us of, as of what they have yet to bring." And in the article on Bentham there is to be found already a very strong protest against the "despotism of Public Opinion," too little guarded against, as Mill thought, in Bentham's political philosophy.

The reviews of Tennyson and Carlyle will both be read with interest now they are revived; but of the two the former has the more permanent interest. It is noteworthy both for its enthusiasm and for its reference at the end to what Mill evidently thought the weak points of the poet's early work. After remarking on a certain inequality of thinking power to poetic endowment, he goes on to say that while Tennyson's power of painting a picture was almost perfect from the beginning, "his powers of versification are not yet of the highest order." Whatever may now be thought of these criticisms, it cannot be said that Mill falls under the condemnation pronounced against those who in poetry think differently from the poets; for criticisms very like these have since been passed on Tennyson by two of the chief among his poetic contemporaries.

The editorial notes occasionally appended to the articles are useful, but in one case we observe an error. At p. 241 there occurs the remark that Robert Montgomery was the author of 'The Omnipresence of the Deity,' and that this book, "published in 1828, reached twelve editions in as many months. His 'Satan' was afterwards very much cut up by Macaulay in the Edinburgh Review." It was, of course, the first of the two poems that was "cut up by Macaulay"; 'Satan' is only just referred to at the end of his article. There is also a mistake in the editor's preface where he speaks of the 'Essays on some Unsettled Questions in Political Economy' as the first book Mill published. The essays were, indeed, all written earlier than the 'Logic'; but while they were not published till 1844 (the date given), the 'Logic' was published in 1843. The 'Logic' seems to have been the first book Mill published as author, and not as editor.

Jewish Life in the Middle Ages. By Israel Abrahams. (Macmillan & Co.)

In this the first volume of "The Jewish Library," edited by Mr. Joseph Jacobs, Mr. Abrahams tries to put together a picture of Jewish social life in the Middle Ages, or rather from the tenth to the eighteenth century. This study, as Mr. Abrahams says, is not quite original, but rather eclectic, as he thus states at the beginning of his short preface:—

"Though I have everywhere referred to the works from which I have derived incidental facts, or from which I have borrowed quotations, there are three writers to whom I should like to express my more general indebtedness. The works of Dr. M. Güdemann, Dr. A. Berliner, and Mr. Joseph Jacobs have been of constant service to me. One thing I have done to justify my frequent use of their works. I have verified their quotations wherever possible. Indeed I honestly believe that not five in a hundred of the many citations made in the course of the following pages have been set down without reference to the original sources. Moreover, a large proportion of my quotations, and almost all my citations from 'Responsa,' have been made at first hand."

Since the appearance of Mr. Abrahams's book the first volume of the history of the Jews in Rome by Dr. Vogelstein has appeared. Dr. Güdemann arranges his highly valuable work ('Geschichte des Erziehungswesen und der Cultur der abendländischen Juden während des Mittelalters und der neuen Zeit,' 3 vols., 1883–1888) according to countries; Mr. Abrahams classifies his observations according to subjects. Thus, after his introductory chapter, he begins to treat of the synagogue, which was the centre of Jewish life, of the institution of the Ghetto, of the home life and social morality, of the various occupations, of the amusements, of the personal relations between Jews and Christians. Most of the documents in these parts Mr. Abrahams adduces from the immense literature of the 'Responsa,' without having exhausted the matter. Mr. Abrahams has done what he could in making the best of the information found in the rabbinical compendium of 'Responsa,' but much, and perhaps more than he acquired, escaped him, since he had no opportunity of searching in MSS. or in rare editions. To give an example, a book by Abraham of Rothenburg, 'Sinai,' may be mentioned, containing interesting information concerning usages in religious matters, the MS. of which is to be found in the Jews' College, London. Important additions to Mr. Abrahams's predecessors who worked on the same subject are the details brought to light in the volumes issued in connexion with the Anglo-Jewish Historical Exhibition, which took place after the publication of Dr. Güdemann's work. The part which treats of the mediæval schools will be read with considerable pleasure; it will be seen that the Jews in all parts of the world took an interest in all branches of science, as far as the study was allowed. They wrote also in the various vernacular dialects of the countries in which they lived, besides the traditional Aramaic. Here our author fetches from far what lies near. He quotes, for instance, 'Responsa' for showing that the prophetical lesson for the Day of Atonement—the Book of Jonah—was read in Greek in those localities where Greek was the language ordinarily in use. A prayer book containing this Greek text in Hebrew characters is to be found in the Bodleian Library, and another copy is in the University Library at Bologna. And this is mentioned in the Jewish Quarterly Review, of which Mr. Abrahams is the editor. A similar instance of omission may be detected when he speaks of the Provençal vernacular. There is no mention of the Provençal romance concerning the history of Esther composed by Crescas of Caylar (fourteenth century), a fragment of which was edited from a Hebrew MS. in the possession of the Chief Rabbi in London, and published in Romania, vol. xxix. Important omissions of the kind occur elsewhere. It is only necessary to mention the astronomical instrument made by the famous Levi ben Gershom, of Bagnols, which helped to the discovery of America, and is fully described in Renan's article in the 'Histoire Littéraire de la France,' tome xxxi. p. 622, sqq., quoted in other pages of Mr. Abrahams's book. Concerning the praise and blame of women reference ought to have been made to the many pages touching on the subject in the periodical Isr. Letterbode. All these omissions are pointed out only for the sake of rendering more complete a second edition of our author's interesting book, which there can be little doubt will appear. Many second-hand quotations will then probably be suppressed, and originals will take their places. We hope also that the 'Responsa,' which are so difficult to consult, may be replaced by references to modern books. The two indexes, viz., 1, Hebrew authorities; 2, general index, are most carefully elaborated.

Domesday Book and Beyond. By F. W. Maitland. (Cambridge, University Press.)

The advent of a new book from the pen of Prof. Maitland is always an event of importance in the world of law and history. It is also, happily, a frequent one. As one of that small — that painfully small—band of original explorers who are striving to lighten the darkness that surrounds the infancy of England, he stands out in striking contrast to a school which finds its sphere in a ceaseless flow of compilations, a school against which, in these columns, a protest has frequently been raised. It is the work of such men as Prof. Maitland that saves in continental eyes the credit of our historical scholarship, which but for them, it is to be feared, would rank low indeed. Nor, it may be said, in France or Germany would the precious time and toil of a scholar so eminent and so brilliant have had to be wasted in what he here terms the "repulsive work" of counting hides. It is simply deplorable to think of the work such men could achieve if the heavy and almost mechanical labour of preparing for them the facts and figures were done, as it could be, in advance by those minor investigators whose work so sadly needs to be organized, or those who, in competing school-books, purvey ancient knowledge.

The "three essays in the early history of England" which constitute the sub-title of this work are respectively devoted to "Domesday Book," "England before the Conquest," and "The Hide." On each of them much might be said. While keeping before him, as prominently as befits a "professor of the laws of England," the "land-law" of the eleventh century, while treating "mainly of the things of the law, of legal ideas and legal forms," the author sees clearly enough that it is in the finance, not in the law, to be found in the pages of Domesday Book that students must seek the key to many mysteries, not only of the eleventh century, but of those preceding. He strikes at the outset the right note by insisting that Domesday is "a geld-book." From this axiom he advances to the corollary that the distinction it draws between various classes of men or classes of tenements is somehow or other connected with the "geld," and thence to two important conclusions. First, the villanus is the man whose lord is responsible for the geld: the sochemannus is responsible for his own. A new terminology was necessitated by a new, a financial distinction, hence the term villanus, which merely rendered tûnesman. The second conclusion is a more striking one. What is the manerium of Domesday? "A manor is a house against which geld is charged." This view, we believe, is quite original: it is of brilliant simplicity, and it is likely to be true. The reader is then shown how the influence of the "geld" acted both directly and indirectly in the depression of that class which represented the old ceorls, the free cultivators. Heavier, perhaps, than has been generally realized, it was capable, we are told, of transmuting the face of society by the strain its payment would inflict on the small holders; while, indirectly, the new classification which it introduced, as above, tended to depress the tenure of those whose lord paid it for them.

The trend, it will be seen, of this argument is in the same direction as that of Prof. Vinogradoff. It points to the Norman Conquest as a catastrophe, or perhaps we should say a catastrophic stage in the "depression" of a free peasantry. Domesday, it is urged, actually records a long step in the downward course since the day when Edward was "quick and dead"; and that course had begun long before. It is difficult for the student of the great record to free himself from the influence of environment. Mr. Seebohm had ever before him "the classic fields of Hitchin"; Prof. Maitland is clearly influenced by the Cambridgeshire evidence in general and that of Orwell in particular. Yet the latter, it is fair to add, is keenly alive to this danger: he strives to keep his outlook wide. Still, the sokemen of Cambridgeshire and the East afford him his strongest evidence. He is not content, however, with working backwards from Domesday. Land-books in hand, he works downwards. He starts from the very earliest evidence, and shows to his readers kings granting to the churches vast tracts of land. What, asks the author, did they grant? May they not, in fact, have merely conveyed their royal rights over land held by free cultivators? Was it not a mere "superiority" that they gave? And if we accept this view, "shall we not be believing that so far as English history can be carried there is no age before 'feudalism'?" It is a daring conception: one calls a halt. But Prof. Maitland, pushing on, discovers in the action of the churches, both as grantees and as tithe-owners, a fateful engine of depression, supplemented later by the geld. Need one add that in all this he is in collision with Mr. Seebohm? He always, indeed, has his "fenders" out; but a collision there must be. And so for a Roman villa as the origin of the later manor is substituted the original settlement consisting of a few free land-owning ceorls, who were not, however, without slaves.

Mr. Seebohm, so far as England is concerned, has held an almost Athanasian position; but his many critics are agreed in admitting the extreme ability of his work. It is probable that Prof. Maitland's criticism is the most formidable it has yet encountered; for the authorities on which it relies are here severely handled. The equation of the English and the Roman "villa," which always struck us as weak and hazardous, is not only seriously assailed in these pages, but prettily satirized in one of those rare touches of sarcasm which the author allows himself in this volume: "And so England is full of villas which are Roman and satraps who, no doubt, are Persian."

But another and important line of attack is opened up by Prof. Maitland. Mr. Round had urged that the famous "virgate," Mr. Seebohm's sheet-anchor, was only a secondary term, "a term of relation," and that "the original unit" must, therefore, be the hide. The professor accepts and insists upon this view. In language irresistibly suggestive of Gulliver, he divides historians into the parties of the "big" and the "little" hide: "our whole conception of early English history depends on the choice we make." Why? Because, to express it as briefly as possible, a "big" hide of 120 arable acres would be the holding of a free landowner; the "little" hide of a quarter its size would be, and is recognized as, the typical servile holding. Such, if right, are the "important results" at which Mr. Round hinted. The author finally asserts confidently that the fiscal hide of Domesday contained 120 (fiscal) acres, that its conception was derived from an original areal hide of 120 arable acres, but that the ploughland of Domesday must, for the present, remain undetermined. He definitely advances the theory that the hidage assessed on a district was connected with the value of its land, and he vigorously criticizes the evidence of 'Fleta' as to ploughlands of 160 and 180 acres, overlooking, perhaps, the Rochester evidence as to ploughlands of 180 arable acres.

In this brief summary we have endeavoured to explain some of the chief points in these notable essays. The book, however, is one that needs to be closely studied, to be grappled with. The modern Domesday student dances upon giddy heights; but surely only a Cambridge man could attain such a pinnacle as this:—

"A certain sub-district has $\frac{x}{a}$ hides thrown upon it; a sub-sub-district has $\frac{x}{ab}$; but this apportionment is obtained by combining a proposition about value with the partitionment of the y teamlands. The sub-sub-district has $\frac{x}{ab}$ hides, because $\frac{y}{cd}$ teamlands fall to its share," &c.

It may be, as Prof. Maitland assures his readers, "very pretty"; but to the average man it is distinctly chastening.

We would gladly dwell on the author's brilliant and ingenious argument — suggested, apparently, by Keutgen's work—as to the origin of the English "borough." Advancing here from the position that its true characteristic is found in its "tenurial heterogeneity," he finds in the peculiar position it occupies on the pages of Domesday Book evidence of its origin and status. And he shows us further how a document which he terms "the Burghal Hidage" reveals a whole system of local military defence. This and the similar "County Hidage" will henceforth be deemed of high importance for the study of our ancient institutions. Attention may specially be drawn to the Worcestershire evidence as eminently clear and satisfactory. There are points, no doubt, in the author's conclusions which are open to some question; and in a few, a very few, cases he may possibly be mistaken; but it is at least safe to say that Domesday students owe him a real debt of gratitude for his perfect and scrupulous candour. With him they are absolutely safe from that fitting of facts to theory which has led so many a scholar cruelly and wantonly astray. The author can "revere" even those who have done their successors this wrong. His charity is great.

There are times when the play of humour sparkles even in these pages; but it cannot be denied that the Downing Professor has here laid on men a task, like William's geld, "exceeding stiff." Yet he also, like the great Conqueror, is winning for himself a realm—a realm carved out of the darkness which, almost alone, he has explored. He is planting the standard of knowledge ever further and further in advance, and he sees, in vision, its triumphs in the hands of those who are to come; for the words with which he closes his volume are words of hope.

Occasional Papers. By the late R. W. Church. 2 vols. (Macmillan & Co.)

The republication of articles on subjects of current interest, originally written for daily or weekly papers, is in most cases a somewhat risky experiment. There are not many writers whose reputation can bear close contact with judgments often expressed in a hurry, and on the spur of the moment, during a period of forty years or more, "loose cards, flung daily down, and not the same way twice." It is a great testimony to the sincerity and even balance of the late Dean Church's mind that in passing through these papers, which cover a period of some forty-five years of his life, and are not arranged in chronological order, the reader is nowhere startled by discrepancies or dislocations, whether in the matter of judgments or in the mode in which they are expressed. The only possible exception that we can recall is the first paper here printed—the first also, as it happens, in order of date. It is a review of Carlyle's 'Cromwell,' written for the Guardian when the writer was thirty years old. In this one notices, perhaps, a slightly more pugnacious tone than Church seems ever to have again adopted, as well as now and then a curious echo of Carlyle's own style, as unlike as possible to the limpid and equable flow characteristic of all the rest of the reviewer's work. After this it would be difficult by purely internal evidence to assign any piece to any particular period of the writer's life. The maturity of the earlier articles is matched by the freshness of the later ones.

This harmony of the mind with itself is given to but few men, and to hardly any whose convictions on some of the subjects which divide mankind most deeply are as strong as Church's were. When it does exist, it is as the result of a happy combination of qualities. A keen intellect is compatible with much party spirit of the worst kind, a conciliatory temper with bovine stolidity. The intelligence which, while detecting the gaps in an adversary's armour, is sufficiently under restraint to touch them with weapons that leave no smart, is a rare phenomenon; but, when recognized, it commands both respect and affection. One so keen to note the defects of his fellow men as Mark Pattison could find nothing but "moral beauty" in Church, even at a moment when Church had won the fellowship which he himself was bent on obtaining.

The criticisms of a man like this on current subjects of discussion, particularly in his own sphere of thought, are undoubtedly worth preserving; but those here printed deal too largely with ecclesiastical and theological matters to allow of their being dealt with at all fully in these columns. Where politics and theology meet, as in the matter of the Court of Final Appeal, Church is thoroughly on his own ground. The "two clever young men of strong bias and manifest indisposition to respect or attend to, or even to be patient with, any aspect of the subject but their own," who in 1865 edited a 'Collection of the Judgments of the Judicial Committee,' would probably appreciate by this time his reminder that they were handling a two-edged weapon:—

"Those who talk about the Supremacy ought to remember what the Supremacy pretended to be. It was over all causes and all persons, civil as well as ecclesiastical. It held good certainly in theory, and to a great extent in practice, against the temporalty as much as against the spiritualty. Why are we to invoke the Supremacy as then understood, in a question about courts of spiritual appeals, and not in questions about other courts and other powers in the nation? If the Supremacy, claimed and exercised as Henry claimed and exercised it, is good against the Church, it is good against many other things besides."

Church's serenity was probably reinforced by his historical sense. He could see the analogies of current events with those of the past, until he was able to stand no less outside of the present and regard it no less dispassionately than any student of history would do when regarding events which he cannot have had any hand in shaping. In a short article headed 'The New Court'—"his last utterance," says his daughter, "on any distinctively Church question"—he deals with "the claim maintained" (and sustained) "by the Archbishop.....to cite, try, and sentence one of his suffragans." Not unnaturally he finds it "undoubtedly what is called in slang language 'a large order.'" (The slang is good Aristotle, by the way.) He is not quite clear as to the ultimate origin of the "great jurisdiction" claimed, not quite easy as to the possibilities which the success of the claim may involve. But the chief interest of "the present proceedings" is "that they illustrate.....the way in which great spiritual prerogatives grew up in the Church."

"Time after time the necessity arose of some arbiter among those who were themselves arbiters, rulers, judges. Time after time this necessity forced those in the front rank into this position, as being the only persons who could be allowed to take it, and so Archbishops, Metropolitans, Primates appeared, to preside at assemblies, to be the mouthpiece of a general sentiment, to decide between high authorities, to be the centre of appeals. The Papacy itself at its first beginning had no other origin. It interfered because it was asked to interfere; it judged because there was no one else to judge."

This is the application to current events of the historical way of looking at things; but Church had the converse faculty of bringing past history and the actors in it into a "common denominator," so to speak, with the events and the men of modern experience, a faculty perhaps more common in historians pure and simple than in theologians. Take this, from a criticism of his predecessor Dean Milman's 'Essays,' published after the writer's death: essays which, as he says, "give life and order and consecutiveness to what are to most of us the rather dry bones of Ranke":—

"We would almost venture to say that if the truth had been better and more generally known in England about the modern religious history of the Roman Church, if the Popes had been known to us as Ranke has shown them, as men, often interesting men, with their human good and evil, instead of as vague general impersonations of some ill-defined, but shocking wickedness, we should not have had so much stupid fanaticism about Popery, but neither could the dream have arisen and taken root in intelligent minds that at Rome there was a divine and supernatural system, different from all earthly ruling and statesmanship in its purity of purpose and its heavenly wisdom, which made the communion which it governed an exception to all the ordinary rules of experience. If people had duly learned that the Popes of Rome were, as statesmen, not very different from the lay statesmen with whom they contended or allied themselves, and, as ecclesiastical authorities, not worse than the great ecclesiastical authorities of the same period in England or Scotland, it would not have been so easy to fly round to the opposite extravagance, that they are something infinitely better, and belonging to a different order of things."

When one comes to think of it, the audacity of this almost takes one's breath away. "Scarlet Women, if you like, but not 'single men in barracks, most uncommonly like you'"; one can fancy the chorus of Gregories, Bonifaces, Innocents. Admirably as Church could expound Dante, this is hardly Dante's manner.

An interesting touch of personal character occurs at the end of a review of Mr. Morison's 'St. Bernard.' The writer evidently was himself one of those who in regard to that eminent saint feel a "jar between the unction of his writings and the distractions and the vigilant and all-embracing energy of his practical life." He concludes the summary of Bernard's character in these striking words:—

"He is a warning to all Christian explorers and expounders of truth.....not to be tempted, by the influence which their work in retirement has given them, into those entangling and difficult paths of public activity from which, when once a man has entered on them, it is hard to draw back, and in which it is so easy for the thinker, the divine, the teacher, to pass into the religious partisan, the religious manager and meddler and contriver, forgetting, at once in the purity and elevation of his purpose, and in the intoxication of success, the inherent snares and dangers of power in any human hands."

No wonder that, with these views, he should practically, if not formally, have refused the Primacy.

As has been said, there is hardly one of the papers now reprinted which does not deal with Church matters in one form or another; but the Dean wrote many political articles. The Eastern Question—which, after all, is not entirely devoid of an ecclesiastical element—interested him greatly; and he was familiar with Italian matters. It is to be hoped that Miss Church may see her way to compiling another volume, which will perhaps appeal to a somewhat wider public than the papers here reprinted.

AUSTRALIAN FICTION.

Too many have found West Australia to be a land of fiction; it remained for Mr. Hume Nisbet to show that it could be a region for romance, although its sandy plains seemed to afford little scope except for tragedies. Three-fourths of The Swampers: a Romance of the Westralian Gold-Fields (White & Co.), are filled with murders, burglaries, and hairbreadth escapes in New South Wales; comparatively little relates to West Australia. The scenes are, like most of Mr. Nisbet's, forcibly enough painted and of considerable interest; but none of his heroes or heroines presents a single good trait in their composition. We have had occasion to notice this imperfection in some of Mr. Nisbet's former works, and hope that in future he may try his hand at delineating a decently conducted person. It would seem that our author does not intend ever to revisit New South Wales.

Critics are prepared for surprises in Australia, but really the idea that Capt. Cook met with a phantom ship off the coast of Queensland, whose ghostly sailors were able to throw a material boomerang with an inscription on it in an extinct language, of which a translation could only be made in Germany, is too great a strain upon human credulity. Still less are readers likely to believe that the "Fishers of Moreton Bay" continue at intervals to appear. Australia is too practical and prosaic in its nature for any such nonsense. Mr. J. D. Hennessey, the author of An Australian Bush Track (Sampson Low & Co.), can write effectively enough, however. Dorna Stoneham's journey through the wilds is well described and with considerable humour. These are the best chapters in his book. Our fortunate explorer rivals Monte Cristo in the possession of gold and diamonds. He concludes by forming a limited liability company, which he floats in London, but he evidently is not at home in the City; he has no idea of the greed of the modern "promoter."

Mr. Nat Gould is already favourably known as a sporting writer. In Town and Bush (Routledge & Sons) he has given to his readers a series of amusing gossiping sketches not only of the turf, but of political, social, and domestic life, written in a good spirit with fairness and vigour. He is an enthusiast, but states his grounds for his views. We can cordially commend this little book; it is replete with useful information, and is too short.

There is considerable literary ability in the sketch of society and politics in Sydney entitled The Sin of Angels, by the author of 'A Vicar's Wife' (Methuen & Co.). The picture is clearly drawn from life, and is by no means calculated to please colonial susceptibilities. Under the guise of depicting the characters of a brother and sister (the one a labour member of the legislative assembly, the other an ambitious girl), the story carries the reader through a very detailed account of the life of to-day in New South Wales, and especially of its chief city. In itself the story is good, though not agreeable, and there is no little art in the telling of it. 'The Sin of Angels' will well repay perusal.

GENEALOGICAL LITERATURE.

The second instalment of The Parish Registers of Dalston, Cumberland, edited by the Rev. James Wilson, M.A. (Dalston, Beck), begins in 1679 and ends in 1812, when Rose's Act came into force and registers were placed under the control of Parliamentary law. We are glad to see the good work of printing all such records advancing, and hope that the time is not far distant when we shall be able to obtain any register we may happen to want in convenient book form. If only as a precaution against occasional carelessness in their custodians, of which many stories are told—not to speak of risks from damp or fire—this ought to be done. Rarely, however, have we met with parish registers less likely to be useful to genealogists, or so barren of antiquarian interest. Until Paley became vicar, indeed, all the entries seem to have been made by men bent on performing their task as quickly as possible, with the result that after one generation, or at most two, had passed away, these entries must have been absolutely worthless for purposes of identification. "Dorothy of John Atkinson of Dalston" or "Margaret of Richard Brown" tells us nothing but that some babies called Atkinson and Brown were baptized; and "John Simpson and Anne Hodgson" imperfectly informs us of a wedding. These persons were probably what one of the vicars styles "labourers in husbandry," who were never likely to be wanted as heirs to wealth; but what shall we say of "Ponsonby, son of——"? words which, as Tennyson has it, never found their "earthly close." Some of the vicars make no mention of the month and day of the month when a marriage or burial took place. Their spelling, too, was not on a high level, and yet when anything had to be registered that seemed to require a veil, they were always able to clothe their facts in Latin. Dalston showed the laxity of the period with regard to "carrying infants to church," i. e., having them promptly baptized. Illegitimate, or, as the register calls them, "spurious" children seem to have been baptized much more quickly than legitimate. Even the vicars themselves do not always seem to have been in a hurry "to make Christians" of their children. Occasionally slighting mention is made of what Mr. Wilson speaks of as "that marriage scandal which used to be so prevalent in the Border counties and usually known as 'Gretna marriages.'" Between 1678 and 1696 there are, of course, the customary entries "buried in woollen." Mr. Wilson has performed his work as editor well and carefully, and the book has been printed satisfactorily by one of his parishioners.

Calendar of Close Rolls, 1327–1330. (Stationery Office.)—We have to praise, as before, this admirable Calendar, and to express our satisfaction at the fact of which the preface reminds us, that Mr. Stevenson, who is responsible for its text, has received from Oxford University a well-deserved honour. His note in the "Corrigenda" that "Ovemastmathefeld" preserves for us the Middle-English uremeste illustrates the keenness of his eye for philological matters. It must frankly be confessed that so many of the

"plums" on the rolls of these three years have already been printed in the 'Fœdera' that they can hardly be expected to add much to our general historical knowledge. But for local and family history their value, as usual, is great. One of the first acts of the new reign was to reduce the "ferm" of London and Middlesex from 400*l.* to the time-honoured 300*l.*; and we here find the concession made retrospective in favour of the late sheriffs. It should be noted, as the point is difficult, that neither James Butler, created Earl of Ormond in 1328, nor his father Edmund is styled Earl of Carrick in these pages. We select for special mention an entry in August, 1328, because it has an important bearing on a controversy waged in our columns some two years ago. It was then pointed out that a document discovered by Mr. Joseph Bain had carried back the office of champion at the king's coronation to the accession of Edward III., when it was discharged by the tenant of Scrivelsby. But here we have the Crown reciting an inquisition according to which Tamworth Castle (the seat of the rival claimants) was held "by the service of coming to the king's coronation armed 'universaliter' with royal arms of the king's livery, sitting upon the king's principal destrier, and offering to make proof for the king against all withsaying the king's coronation." The document with which this should be compared is "Privy Seals, 1 Edw. III., file 3." The admirable index of this volume extends to some 260 columns, and its compilers are rarely, if ever, at fault. But the priory of "La Seke," which has baffled them, is simply that of Sele, Sussex. The queerly named "honour of Hagenet" might also, we think, have been identified. A "mayor" of Colchester, who occurs in this index, is a disquieting apparition; but in this case, and probably in those of some other towns, one can see how the slip was made. We suspect that the "Robert of Stephen" of whom the fourteenth century Thomas de Carren was "cousin and heir" was no other than Thomas Fitz Stephen, so prominent in the conquest of Ireland under Henry II.; but this in no way impugns the absolute correctness of the text.

The Genealogist. New Series. Vol. XII. (Bell.)—Under the editorship of Mr. Forsyth Harwood, this old-established magazine continues to maintain its high standard as the organ of genealogical research. The present volume completes Mr. G. W. Watson's learned papers on the "seize quartiers" of the kings and queens of England, and Mr. Barron's edition of the Parliamentary Roll of Arms. Mr. Metcalfe continues Harvey's Wiltshire visitation of 1565, and Mr. J. W. Clay his valuable annotated and extended visitation of Yorkshire by Dugdale. The critical genealogist is represented by Mr. J. A. C. Vincent's 'A Bristol Ancestor of the Dukes of Somerset,' and by notes on the origin of the families of Thynne, Lindsay, and Le Poher. General Wrottesley continues his useful 'Pedigrees from the Plea Rolls'; and the lists of 'Funeral Certificates' and of wills and administrations in the Court of Delegates are welcome. Mr. Round's paper on 'Faramus of Boulogne' illustrates the close connexion between England and the Boulonnais in the twelfth century. The volume contains as an appendix a large instalment of the parish registers of Street, co. Somerset, and has for frontispiece an illustration of the fine seal of William Erskine, Archbishop of Glasgow.

THE LITERATURE OF SOCIAL ECONOMY.

The hardships of peasant life in the Midlands half a century ago are forcibly described in the earlier chapters of A Village Politician (Fisher Unwin). This little volume, edited by Mr. J. C. Buckmaster, purports to set forth "the life-story of John Buckley," and Mr. Mundella, M.P., in a brief introduction, states that the author is "a practical and active worker in all social and educational effort" whom he has known for many years. It is implied that the book is an accurate autobiography, except that "changes in names and places" have been made in order "to prevent a too personal identification." We fail to see any advantage in this partial concealment. The friends of "John Buckley" will probably have no difficulty in recognizing him, and, had he publicly taken on himself responsibility for all his statements, he would probably have framed them more carefully. The first third or half of the narrative is interesting and well put together. It recounts the painful experiences of the writer, who was born in 1820, through his childhood and youth, for a few years as a farmer's boy and afterwards as a carpenter's apprentice. The country parson who taught him to read and write, the village shoemaker who took him to Radical meetings, and others by whose influence he profited in ways not intended or desired by them, are sketched with some skill and humour. These chapters are welcome additions to the small store of first-hand information about the condition of the working classes in times more trying than the present, of which Samuel Bamford's 'Early Days' is the best example. What follows is less satisfactory. "John Buckley" improved his social position, and became a much more important member of the community when he threw aside his carpenter's tools and took to lecturing on the Corn Laws and assisting at Parliamentary elections. But this part of his "life-story" is clumsily and incoherently told. His later occupations, in furthering "with marvellous energy and success," as Mr. Mundella says, "the growing cause of popular education," are not here chronicled.

Mr. William Reeves publishes the second part of The Annals of Toil, by Mr. Morrison Davidson, which deals with the years 1381–1649, dwelling much on the Wat Tyler and Jack Cade insurrections, and less perhaps on the Elizabethan legislation than we should have expected from the author. Mr. Morrison Davidson, in his account of the period of the Civil Wars, takes the side of the Levellers against Cromwell, and says that they were Social Democrats who found the liberal "piously-unscrupulous capitalistic crew" "a good many degrees more unbearable than Charles Stuart and the feudal aristocracy." This end-of-the-nineteenth-century way of looking at the Civil Wars is not without amusement for the reader; but there is something in it, and Col. Lilburne, it will be remembered, although an Anarchist (as we should say) both before and after his brilliant military service, was an excellent officer of the Parliamentary cause. Mr. Morrison Davidson draws a parallel between the oratory of Cromwell and that of Mr. Gladstone, the closest point of resemblance being that each of these great masters of speech, according to our author, has been able to "become absolutely incomprehensible at will."

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Sir George Clarke edits, and Mr. John Murray publishes, The Defence of the Empire, being a collection of some of the letters and speeches of the late Lord Carnarvon, which chiefly concern coaling stations. They are, of course, well known to all students of the subject, and are now somewhat out of date. A letter to the Times of 1886 on the abandonment of Port Hamilton receives a fresh interest at this moment from the fact lately mentioned by Mr. Henry Norman in a magazine article, that Admiral Fremantle repeatedly telegraphed, while in command of the China station, to be allowed to occupy Chusan, thus showing that the navy have come round to the view that a station is necessary north of Hong Kong. The advance on the part of Russia which Lord Carnarvon prophesied eleven years ago is taking place, and is apparently not being met by any step of the nature of those which he thought necessary.

Mr. Reginald Statham publishes, through Mr. Fisher Unwin, South Africa as It Is, a volume which is more friendly to the natives than most South African literature, and, indeed, in many points hostile to the Chartered Company and its enterprises. There is told at the end of a chapter called "The Charter at Work" the story of a raid in 1891 on the Portuguese territories. The author charges "Cape Colony officials, responsible to Mr. Rhodes as Premier," with arming Gungunhana against the Portuguese.

Some of the papers by Miss Milman collected under the title of Through London Spectacles (Smith, Elder & Co.) originally appeared in the Spectator. They are not bad specimens of occasional articles for a newspaper. In their place they would (properly enough) be called bright. They are written in an easy style, they begin well, and they are ornamented with many literary allusions and quotations from favourite authors. Commonplace reflections are easily pardoned in newspaper articles, and a newspaper reader is rather grateful for familiar quotations that he may safely skip. But the reader who takes up a book is apt to consider a little more curiously, and resents what he would pardon in a newspaper. The author of 'Through London Spectacles' has occasion to mention Sterne's 'Sentimental Journey,' and asks, "Who has not read that book and condoned its faults of propriety for the sake of its singular and extravagant excellences?" One feels injured at being asked so poor a question. A page or two further on the author says, "I console myself with David's lamentation over Jonathan and Saul, and murmur, too low for scoffers to overhear, 'How are the mighty fallen!'" If so trite a quotation must be made, it might at least be given without explanation. Here is a descriptive introduction to a paper on the Temple Gardens:—

"The Thames Embankment at Westminster, when the moon is full.....the long array of lamps reflected in the dark tide outlining river and bridges in a subtly diminishing perspective, the ceaseless traffic momentarily obscuring the lights on the bridges.....presents a picture that can be equalled in no other part of London."

A moment's consideration should have convinced the author that "subtly diminishing perspective" is a phrase that means nothing, and only the hurry of journalism can excuse the flatness of the conclusion, though it is true enough that the picture could not be equalled by the Serpentine or the lake in Battersea Park. The book has not been ransacked to find such passages as these. There are too many of them. In preparing her pages for publication in book form the author should have struck them out. The matter is too diffuse. Still the papers show a good deal of skill, a pleasant liking for good literature without any very great appreciation of it, and considerable industry.

James Boswell, by Mr. W. Keith Leask, in the "Famous Scots Series" (Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier), is an unpretentious but satisfactory life of Johnson's famous biographer. In this small volume of one hundred and sixty pages ample information is to be found about the life and loves, the successes and failures, the cleverness and the weaknesses of James Boswell of Auchinleck. Mr. Leask, though himself an enthusiastic Scot, has written with rare impartiality. No attempt is made to exaggerate Boswell's obvious good qualities or to conceal his still more obvious eccentricities. Mr. Leask considers that Boswell's art as a biographer was "in selecting the 'characteristical' and the typical to group and dramatize." We have so often discussed the seemingly complex character of Boswell and the work which has immortalized his name that it is unnecessary on the present occasion to return to the subject. Mr. Leask's volume appears to be singularly free from errors, though we notice a slight inaccuracy on p. 112. It was not Mr. Gladstone, but Mr. Disraeli, at that time the leader of the House, who, in proposing a vote of thanks to Sir Robert Napier, spoke of that officer "having planted the standard of St. George upon the mountains of Rasselas."

We mention La Langue Sacrée: La Cosmoglyphie (Paris, Heymann), from the pen of M. Emile-Soldi, not because it is truly learned, but because there are great numbers of readers interested in the symbol languages of early religions, to whom the cuts of this plentifully illustrated volume, and of those which are to follow it in a series, may be useful. The author has worked immensely hard, and covers the most extensive field, but he is not, we fear, enough of a scholar to be able thoroughly to place his knowledge or to avoid the dangers which every writer must run in dealing with so wide a subject, even if he be, as a fact, learned in some one branch of it. It would require a school full of great scholars properly to perform the task which M. Soldi has taken upon his own shoulders.

Messrs. Cassell & Co. publish, under the title Are We Ruined by the Germans? a reprint from the Daily Graphic of the excellent reply to Mr. Williams by Mr. Harold Cox.

M. Guiraud has written an appreciative and yet critical monograph on the great historian Fustel de Coulanges (Hachette).

Willing's British and Irish Press Guide (Willing) is an excellent handbook, convenient in size and arrangement, as well as low in price, which we have frequently had occasion to praise.

Messrs. Service & Paton have issued in their "Illustrated English Library" The Last of the Barons. Mr. Pegram's cuts are clever and careful, but we are a little doubtful of the correctness of his armour. The edition is singularly cheap.

To that pretty collection of reprints the "Temple Classics" (Dent) the Morte d'Arthur and Bacon's Essays have been added.

We have on our table Across Greenland's Ice-Fields, by M. Douglas (Nelson),—An Outline of the Doctrine of Thomas Carlyle: being Selected and Arranged Passages from his Works (Chapman & Hall),—Stories of the Cæsars from Suetonius, edited by H. Wilkinson (Macmillan),—The Organist and Choirmaster's Diary, 1897, compiled by R. H. Baker (Low),—Compressed-Air Illness, by E. Hugh Snell (Lewis),—Mensuration for Beginners, by F. H. Stevens (Macmillan),—The Money-Spinner, by H. S. Merriman and S. G. Tallentyre (Smith & Elder),—The Rosy Cross, and other Psychical Tales, by M. Sandeman (Roxburghe Press),—Cot and Cradle Stories, by C. P. Traill, edited by Mary A. Fitzgibbon (Low),—Sons of Freedom, by F. Whishaw (Nelson),—The Spirit of Storm, by R. Ross (Methuen),—The Tantalus Tour, by W. Parke (Bellairs),—Aleph, the Chaldean, by E. F. Burr (Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier),—The Story of Florence Nightingale, by W. J. Wintle (S.S.U.),—The Turn of the Tide, by the Author of 'Once for All' (Women's Printing Society),—The Story of Hannah, by W. J. Dawson (Hodder & Stoughton),—Poems, by R. Loveman (Lippincott),—The Strike, and other Poems, by G. B. Hewetson (Putnam),—The Magic Key, by I. Willcocks (Digby & Long),—God the Creator and Lord of All, by S. Harris, D.D., 2 vols. (Edinburgh, T. & T. Clark),—A Critical Dissertation on the Athanasian Creed, by G. D. W. Ommanney (Oxford, Clarendon Press),—The Modern Reader's Bible: The Kings, edited by R. G. Moulton (Macmillan),—Vocabulaire Anglais, by G. de la Quesnerie, Parts I. to III. (Paris, Laisney),—Saint Augustin et le Néo-Platonisme, by L. Grandgeorge (Paris, Leroux),—L'Année de Clarisse, by P. Adam (Paris, Ollendorff),—Le Maître de l'Heure, by Hugues Le Roux (Paris, Lévy),—Roscelin, Philosophe et Théologien, by F. Picavet (Paris, Imprimerie Nationale),—and Artasse, by M. Dagna (Alexandria, G. Jacquemod Figli). Among New Editions we have The Directorium Asceticum; or, Guide to the Spiritual Life, by John Baptist Scaramelli, S.J., 4 vols. (Washbourne),—History of the Life of Fénelon, by the Chevalier Ramsay (Paisley, Parlane),—and A Treatise on Ore Deposits, by J. A. Phillips, rewritten and greatly enlarged by H. Louis (Macmillan).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Craufurd's (Rev. A. H.) Christian Instincts and Modern Doubt, Essays, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Hutton's (W. H.) The Church of the Sixth Century, 6/ cl.
Lee's (G. S.) The Shadow Christ, an Introduction to Christ Himself, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Modern Reader's Bible: Isaiah, 16mo. 2/6 cl.
Smith's (Rev. F. B.) Parsons and Weavers, a Study in Lancashire Clerical Work, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Texts and Studies: Vol. 5, No. 1, Apocrypha Anecdota, by M. R. James, 8vo. 7/6 net.
Valling's (J. F.) The Holy Spirit of Promise, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Greek Papyri, Series 2, edited by B. P. Grenfell and A. S. Hunt, 4to. 12/6 net.
Ramsay's (W. M.) The Cities and Bishoprics of Phrygia, Vol. 1, Part 2, 8vo. 21/ net.
Way of the Cross, a Pictorial Pilgrimage from Bethlehem to Calvary, 4to. 8/6 cl.

Poetry and the Drama.

Campion's (T.) Fifty Songs, ed. by John Gray, 8vo. 15/ net.
Castle's (E. J.) Shakespeare, Bacon, Jonson, and Greene, a Study, royal 8vo. 10/6 net.
Field's (E.) Songs of Childhood, imp. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Keble's (J.) Christian Year, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl. (New Library.)
Meredith's (G.) An Essay on Comedy and the Uses of the Comic Spirit, cr. 8vo. 5/ net.

History and Biography.

Fea's (A.) The Flight of the King: Escape of Charles II. after Battle of Worcester, 8vo. 21/ net.
Garrett (E.) and Edwards's (E. J.) The Story of an African Crisis, the Jameson Raid, 3/6 cl.
Groesbeck's (T.) The Incas, the Children of the Sun, with Preface by C. F. Markham, royal 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Harris's (J. R. and H. B.) Letters from the Scenes of the Recent Massacres in Armenia, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Hartwright's (H.) The Story of the House of Lancaster, 9/
Lejeune, Baron, Memoirs of, translated from the French by Mrs. A. B. N. D'Anvers, 2 vols. 8vo. 24/ cl.
Murray's (G.) A History of Ancient Greek Literature, 6/ cl.
Story of the Pilgrim Fathers, 1606-1623, as told by Themselves, edited by E. Arber, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

Folk-lore.

Crooke's (W.) Popular Religion and Folk-lore of Northern India, 2 vols. 8vo. 21/ net.

Science.

Marcet's (W.) A Contribution to the History of the Respiration of Man, imp. 8vo. 12/6 cl.
Neville's (H.) Students' Handbook of Practical Fabric Structure, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Rentoul's (R. R.) The Causes and Treatment of Abortion, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Rothwell's (C. F. S.) The Printing of Textile Fabrics, a Practical Manual, 8vo. 21/ cl.
Smith's (R. H.) The Calculus for Engineers and Physicists, cr. 8vo. 8/6 cl.
Stephens's (W. P.) Supplement to 'Small Yachts,' Examples of Yachts, 1890-1896, 4to. 21/ cl.
Tilden's (W. A.) Manual of Chemistry, Theoretical and Practical, 12mo. 10/ cl.
Trowbridge's (J.) What is Electricity? cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.

General Literature.

Black's (W.) Wolfenberg, cheap edition, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Bullock's (F. S.) Ring o' Rushes, 16mo. 2/ cl.
Chapters on the Aims and Practice of Teaching, edited by F. Spencer, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Chevrillon's (A.) Romantic India, translated by W. Marchant, 8vo. 7/6 net.
Cleeve's (Lucas) The Water-Finder, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Dawe's (W. C.) Kakemonos, Tales of the Far East, 3/6 net.
Descendant, The, a Novel, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Dewe's (Rev. J. A.) New Thoughts on Current Subjects, 5/
Duryea's (A. S. P.) Sir Knight of the Golden Pathway, 5/
Forster's (J.) From Grub to Butterfly, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Gardiner's (L.) The Sound of a Voice, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Harraden's (B.) Hilda Strafford and the Remittance Man, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Kennard's (Mrs. E.) The Girl in the Brown Habit, 3/6 cl.
Kennedy's (H. A.) A Man with Black Eyelashes, 3/6 cl.
M'Millan's (Mrs A.) The Evolution of Daphne, a Novel, 6/
Nisbet's (H.) My Love Noel, cr. 8vo. 2/ bds.
O'Grady's (S.) The Flight of the Eagle, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Orpen's (Mrs.) Perfection City, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Peacock's (T. L.) The Misfortunes of Elphin Rhododaphne, illustrated by F. H. Townsend, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Pendleton's (J.) The Ivory Queen, a Story of Strange Adventure, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Raymond's (W.) Charity Chance, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Smeaton's (O.) Our Laddie, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Speight's (T. W.) The Master of Trenance, a Mid-Century Romance, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Stimson's (F. J.) King Noanett, a Story of Devon Settlers in Old Virginia, &c., cr. 8vo. 5/ net.
Upward's (A.) The Prince of Balkistan, cr. 8vo. 2/ bds.
Warden's (Florence) A Lady in Black, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Wood's (K. B.) Quotations for Occasions, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Bartmann (B.): St. Paulus u. St. Jacobus üb. die Rechtfertigung, 5m. 20.
Sasse (J. B.): Institutiones Theologicæ de Sacramentis Ecclesiæ, Vol. 1, 8m.
Schaefer (E.): Luther als Kirchenhistoriker, 9m.
Volz (P.): Die vorexilische Jahwepropheție u. der Messias, 2m. 80.

Law.

Friedberg (E.): Die Canones-Sammlungen zwischen Gratian u. Bernhard v. Pavia, 12m.
Legis Romanæ Wisigothorum Fragmenta ex Codice Palimpsesto Sanctæ Legionensis Ecclesiæ, ed. Regia Historiæ Academia Hispana, 25m.

Philosophy.

Reiche (A.): Die künstlerischen Elemente in der Welt- u. Lebens-Anschauung des Gregor v. Nyssa, 1m.
Tönnies (F.): Der Nietzsche-Kultus, 2m.

History and Biography.

Murat (Comte): Murat, Lieutenant de l'Empereur en Espagne, 1808, 7fr. 50.
Welschinger (H.): Le Roi de Rome, 1811-1832, 8fr.

Geography and Travel.

Poncins (Vicomte E. de): Chasses et Explorations dans la Région des Pamirs, 15m.

Science.

Oettel (F.): Elektrochemische Übungsaufgaben, 3m.
Pospichal (E.): Flora des österreichischen Küstenlandes, Part 1, 8m.

General Literature.

Beauvoir (R. de): Annuaire illustré de l'Armée Française pour 1897, 1fr. 50.
Bourget (P.): Recommencements, 3fr. 50.
Hervieu (P.): La Bêtise Parisienne, 3fr. 50.
Laforest (D. de): Messidor, 3fr. 50.
Lovenjoul (Vicomte de S. de): La Véritable Histoire de 'Elle et Lui,' 3fr. 50.
Pouvillon (É.): L'Image, 3fr. 50.

TO
GEORGE FREDERICK WATTS, R.A.,
ON THE EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF HIS BIRTH,
February 23, 1897.

High thought and hallowed love, by faith made one,
Begat and bare the sweet strong-hearted child,
Art, nursed of Nature; earth and sea and sun
Saw Nature then more godlike as she smiled.
Life smiled on death, and death on life: the Soul
Between them shone, and soared above their strife,
And left on Time's unclosed and starry scroll
A sign that quickened death to deathless life.
Peace rose like Hope, a patient queen, and bade
Hell's firstborn, Faith, abjure her creed and die;
And Love, by life and death made sad and glad,
Gave Conscience ease, and watched Good Will pass by.
All these make music now of one man's name,
Whose life and age are one with love and fame.

Algernon Charles Swinburne.

MISS KINGSLEY'S 'TRAVELS IN WEST AFRICA.'

100, Addison Road, Kensington.

I should esteem it a great favour if you would permit me to make in your columns a few remarks on your most kind review of 'Travels in West Africa.'

The present is a very unpleasant time, owing to the morbid state of opinion regarding women's work, for any student who happens to be a woman to come before the public. I make no pretensions to being a traveller; I am an ethnologist who believes that the best way of studying one's subject is to go and work at the material of it in a native state, instead of relying entirely on information from untrained observers, who, however truthful they may be, are liable to fail to give sufficient time to the consideration of the less striking points in native customs, and thereby fail to grasp and report the most important point in them, the underlying idea. As my visiting West Africa has brought down on the ladies there resident the disparaging remarks of your reviewer, I must combat his statements, and assure you that the wives of the officials and missionaries and traders who are resident there, not for their own pleasure or instruction, but from the noble motive of duty to their husbands, do not lead either an easier or a safer life than I do in the bush. It is far more dangerous to health in West Africa to remain in one place, however comfortable the surrounding conditions may be, than to wander far and wide in the forest, however uncomfortable the surrounding conditions may be there; and when the residential lady is the wife of a missionary at such places as Lembarene or Talagouga, with little children of her own to see to, domestic affairs to carry on with only the aid of natives quite unused to white culture, and the moral and physical strain constantly on her of a large school of native girls, she has an infinitely harder time and task than I ever had in the most remote regions of Africa my studies have ever compelled me to live in; and I should be ashamed to grumble over my inconveniences and worries when away from a white station in the face of my knowledge of the cheerful and helpful way Madame Jacot, Miss Mary Slessor, and Madame Forget deal with their surrounding circumstances, or in the face of the equally creditable behaviour under difficulties of hundreds of women who have never left England in their lives.

There is, however, a point of greater general interest in your reviewer's authoritative contradiction of my statement that the African has never made an even fourteenth-rate piece of cloth, &c. I am well acquainted with the various cloths he mentions, and have a collection of them; but being a lady, I am also acquainted with the velvets, brocades, chintzes, muslins, and gauzes produced by European and Asiatic looms, and feel I should still have been well within the truth if I had said fortieth-rate instead of fourteenth. The African, besides making cotton cloths, makes them of bark and grass, excellent of its kind, and in the Kassai region of much real beauty; but I doubt whether one would be justified in saying that these cloths were equal to those of the same type—the Polynesian tappa. The African's pottery is quite as good as can be expected without the employment of the potter's wheel, which he would have invented if he had had sufficient mechanical sense. This mechanical deficiency of the African mind seems to me an important point, and one that requires studying, so I venture to insist on it, and ask your reviewer if he would really feel inclined to face European society in a suit made from any sort of African-made cloth he has ever seen. The African's rhetoric, his manners, his honesty—taken in their higher developments—do not require of his advocate the plea that they are very good for an African. In these things he will pass muster with any other race.

There is but one other statement I should like to dwell on, and that is that the old coasters were of a "lower type" than those men at present working on the Coast. I have often heard it before, but have never been able to accept it fully, because I have had the honour, both in '92, '93, and '95, of meeting and knowing several of these old coasters quite well enough to know that they could never have been anything but a credit to their country. Capt. Boler of Bonny, himself a devout Wesleyan, but at the same time a great supporter and help to Bishop Crowther, and a man honoured and respected by all men, black and white, who knew him; Capt. Buchan; Mr. Newberry; Major Parminter; Mr. Coxon; Mr. Newton of Loanda; Mr. Joachim Monteiro, whose book on Angola is and will remain one of the best books on Africa ever published; and Mr. Forshaw, I have had the honour of knowing personally quite well, and they are represented in their courage and charity and sobriety among the young men who are coming on, but I know these young men would no more relish being praised at the expense of their forerunners than I relish being praised at the expense of the missionary's wife. Mary H. Kingsley.

 We meant no disparagement to the wives of missionaries, officials, or traders. We merely stated the fact that they seldom go far from their comfortable homes. This is perfectly true of the great majority, although there are exceptions, and to those mentioned by Miss Kingsley we could add some others.

The cloths made by Africans are well adapted to the country in which they are intended to be worn; but it does not necessarily follow that because they are suitable wear in Africa they could be used in England, nor did we think of saying so.

Half a century or more ago there were traders (long since dead) on the coast who could neither write nor speak the Queen's English correctly, and whose manners and habits would not pass muster in a drawing-room. How could it be otherwise when the terrible mortality of those days not infrequently raised boatswains, carpenters, coopers, &c., to the position of agents for rich firms? They had not been accustomed to the responsibilities which accidentally devolved upon them, nor to having at their disposal large quantities of merchandise, including spirits, and consequently they often abused their power; still some of them proved able and competent traders, and were maintained in positions which they had not been educated to fill. Men of refinement were then the exception. The gentlemen mentioned by Miss Kingsley are (or were) all that Miss Kingsley describes them as being, and we have no desire to praise the present generation at the expense of their predecessors; we simply stated what is within the personal knowledge of most old West Coasters. We praised the late Mr. Monteiro's book highly when we reviewed it.

BARBOUR'S 'BRUCE' AND THE DISPUTED 'LEGENDS.'

The original attribution of the 'Legends of the Saints' to John Barbour, made by the late Mr. Henry Bradshaw and adopted by Prof. Horstmann, the primary editor, was first rejected by Dr. Buss, and received the finishing touch of demolition by British authority at the hands of Prof. Skeat, followed without fresh discussion by Dr. Metcalfe, the latest editor. The rejection was grounded upon contrasts in rhyme and vocabulary apparent from a comparison with 'The Bruce.' The chief propositions of fact were: (1) that in 'The Bruce' e with a guttural or after-sound never rhymes with e pure, whilst in the 'Legends' it does; (2) that 'The Bruce' has but one assonance, "Bretane," to rhyme with "hame," whilst in the 'Legends' there are very many; and (3) that there are numerous and important differences of vocabulary. The inference was that Barbour could not have written the 'Legends.'

The first proposition when examined gets reduced to the by no means formidable distinction that e, eye, fle, flee or fly, and he, high, rhyme in 'The Bruce' with e guttural, whereas in the 'Legends' and the Troy fragment published along with them by Dr. Horstmann they rhyme both as guttural and pure. There is no eccentricity in this, and perhaps the proposition itself is affected by the fact that there is a large body of precedent for fle being correctly rhymed as e pure. Early poems such as 'Sir Tristrem' habitually use it so. A tendency to ignore some etymological discriminations and confound such rhymes was no novelty at the close of the fourteenth century. The second proposition might not be far from true if the boundary line of assonance were harder and faster than I conceive it is. But in any case it is only fair to note that all the manuscripts and early editions of 'The Bruce' agree in giving two lines ending in "Cowbane" and rhymed with "name" (xviii. 410, 431). Again, however, there is no eccentricity; other poets than Barbour in his time found assonance frequently convenient. The third proposition is certainly true, but here, as in the whole argument, enough attention has not been bestowed on the fact that a long translation on a widely changed theme would infallibly expand and alter very greatly any author's vocabulary. The inference itself—that a poet using assonances in a national epic only once, or thrice, in 1375, could not possibly have given way to the temptation many times in 1390 or thereabouts, when towards the close of his days engaged on a tedious taskwork for local recital in church, and, as he describes himself, old, infirm, and in trouble of eyesight—is a very large one indeed, to which the logician of every-day life will be slow to give his adhesion. The poetical equipment for an original but simple buoyant Scottish story might well prove exceedingly inadequate without much forced expansion for an extended hagiological exercise in almost literal translation. The case against Barbour shrinks under criticism to very thin dimensions. The Buss-Köppel-Skeat-Metcalfe rhyme-inference fails because it proceeds on the erroneous assumption that Barbour was a purist in his rhymes, because it rests on characteristics not uncommon with other poets of Barbour's time, and therefore not distinctive, and because it is in itself inconsequent. For a real crux something better must be sought out, some inherent quality, whether of vice or virtue, individualistic if possible, and organic.

The unfortunate thing is that the argument for Barbour has never been fully set forth. Prof. Horstmann apparently has never restated at large the excellent general reasons which he advanced in 1881. The sketch of the claim for Barbour given in the prefaces to Prof. Skeat's 'Bruce' and Dr. Metcalfe's 'Legends' was in each case cursory to a degree and coloured by the hostile opinion with which it closed. All that need here be said is that not a few facts and allusions in the 'Legends,' personal to the author and relative to Aberdeen and its saint, harmonize admirably with the Barbour theory, although admittedly not amounting to substantive proof. It is a question for internal evidence, a very weighty part of which is a general similarity of language and an identity of metre and style. A few weeks ago an entirely new factor was brought forward (see Scottish Antiquary, January, 1897, for full statement), importing a very different measure of applicability into these general considerations. It has now been shown that the curious tale of Macdougall of Galloway and his minstrel Jack Trumpour in the legend of St. Ninian has the corroboration of actual charter by Macdougall to John Trumpour, confirmed by David II. in 1365. The tale is a contribution of the poet's own, "a ferly," he says, "that in my tyme befel." Turning on the wars of Scotland and England, it concerns an exploit which may be assigned approximately to 1355. Being an original piece of biography of a soldier interjected into the translation of the life of a saint, it reveals individuality most clearly. An ardour of Scottish patriotism flashes for a moment on the interminable record of intolerable virtue and inconceivable miracle as the poet sings of arms and men. The narrative displays an absolute correspondence of general idea and particular phrase between the Galloway adventure of the legend and two Galloway incidents in 'The Bruce,' combined with some virtually identical lines such as the following:—

1. And hardy vas of hart and hand.
'Leg.,' xl. (Ninian) 819.
That hardy wes of hart and hand.
'Bruce,' i. 28.

2. That thai mycht cume one hyme thane
And tak hyme but skath of mene.
'Leg.,' xl. 833.
And vald cum on thame suddanly
Vith few menze mycht soyn thame scath
And ȝhet eschape vithouten vath.
'Bruce,' vii. 303.

3. That thai mycht nocht do be mycht
Thai schupe thaime forto do be slycht.
'Leg.,' xl. 829; cp. xix. 441-2.
Schapis thaim to do with slycht
That at thai drede to do with mycht.
'Bruce,' ii. 324; cp. i. 527, v. 268, vii. 13, ix. 350.

'The Bruce' has but one mist, and that one in Galloway: just so with the 'Legends.' And both rise at the dramatic moment with the same verb —

4. Bot myste ves in ale degre
That nane mocht a stane caste se.
'Leg.,' xl. 895.

Gret myst lu-to the morniyng fell
Swa that men mycht mocht se thaim by
For myst ane bowdraucht futtely.
'Br.,' ix. 577 (cp. xiii. 581 for word "stane-cast").

5. And tharwith wox sa bricht the day.
'Leg.,' xl. 912.

And befor mydmorne of the day
The mist wox cleir suddanly. 'Br.,' ix. 587.

These passages and others establish a contact of the closest possible kind between the poems. If any one shall be so hardy as to interpret them by saying that the incident in the Ninian legend is merely copied from Barbour, the answer must be that the copying of such scattered passages for a descriptive purpose entirely subordinate to the main object of the legend, although it may be a possibility, is practically out of the question. The resemblances of phrase are as nothing to the identity of descriptive method. Only one great question remains: Is there or is there not organic unity in the rhyme-systems?

What is the rhyme-specialty of 'The Bruce'? Fortunately, here there is the invaluable assistance of a master in philology for whom and for whose work, despite the present critical lifting of the heel, I cherish a student's highest regard and gratitude. Prof. Skeat, in his rhyme-index to 'The Bruce' (vol. ii. pp. 315–6), says with emphasis:—

"Here take notice of a remarkable class of words in which the ending yn or yne (with silent e) represents the modern ing at the end of a verbal noun."

He looks on this as so important that he quotes the rhyme-words in all the instances:—

I. 255, commandyne, syne.
III. 241, fechtyn, syne.
IV. 243, fichtyne, syne.
IV. 512, hontyne, syne.
V. 405, mellyne, vyne.
IX. 120, Brechyne, leding.
IX. 682, restyne, Lyne.
XII. 373, hapnyne, tyne.
XIV. 229, dowtyne, vyne.
XV. 83, helyne, syne.
XVII. 263, armyne, syne.
XIX. 693, tranontyne, tyne.
XIX. 793, welcummyne, syne.

He remarks that "welcoming" is also found written "welcummyng" to rhyme with "kyng." The remark is a little odd, as if the obvious fact had been overlooked that most of the other words in the list appear also in the legitimate gerundial spelling and rhyme of yng. Clearly all these gerunds should have been in yng or ing, and the rhymes with yn and yne should have been stigmatized as defective. 'The Bruce' has over five-and-twenty pure rhymes of gerundial yng with yng for one in yne. The yne is a numerically rare, although systematic exception. Intelligible enough as rendered possible by a slurred pronunciation, it was not the less a slovenly and incorrect rhyme, although I lay no particular stress on this so far as regards the two proper-name instances. Perhaps "assonance" is hardly the word for it, although it is plainly of that species, being a concord perfect in the vowel, but imperfect in the consonant. The point, however, is that it is an eccentricity. In the early poetry of Scotland this gerundial rhyme is, as Prof. Skeat said, indeed remarkable. A faithful search enables me to confirm that opinion. I can find no such usage as Barbour's in any other poet. Sporadic examples exist, but even these are rare: so rare that in over 70,000 lines—not by Barbour—of Scottish fourteenth and fifteenth century verse, I can (leaving out of account four proper-name instances) find only four cases (Wyntoun, viii. 5417; Holland's 'Howlat,' 52, 712; Rauf Coilȝear, 60). It is a usage, therefore, more than remarkable: it is unique, an integral organic flaw in the rhyme-system.

It is no solitary solecism. Barbour's use of the vowels throughout his rhymes appears to be marked by great latitude, but it is easier to show departures from rectitude in the consonants. "Mankynd" (spelt "mankine") and "panch" rhymed with "syne and "dance" (xv. 249, ix. 398) appear, like the yngs and ynes, to be on the straight road for degeneration. A few other bad rhymes are worth citing, such as "Robert," "speryt" (iv. 13), "ruschit," "refusit" (iv. 145), and "grathit," "laid" (v. 387)—the last especially, which Prof. Skeat pauses at and wonders over. Barbour used dual rhymes for many words. "Hede," for example, he rhymes here strictissime with "revede" (v. 11), there more popularly with "reide" (ii. 121). "Lyne" and "lyng" (ii. 417, xix. 355) are convertible according to the exigency of the occasion. This duplication appears to have been one of the ways to decadence of technique. Legitimate alternative rhymes led to illegitimate. The line of descent, which was no sudden leap, is even discernible. Yne is rhymed with ynd by suppressing the d. Then the persistent rhyme of yne, yng, marks a stage well down the slippery slope which ends in ane, ame. One could predicate that under stress of rhyme a much more extended resort to assonance would be far from unlikely. The grand canon of Barbour's critics is in the direct teeth of tendencies and facts.

Now to return to the false rhymes of yng, yne. Besides 'The Bruce' there are but two other works in old Scottish literature known to me in which the same usage exists. The first of these is the 'Legends of the Saints,' where the list of mis-rhymes has come to embrace more than gerunds:—

I. 86, thrynde (thrynge?), bynde.
I. 311, entremetynge, Agrippyne.
I. 649, cumlyne, syne.
III. 73, baptysing, sene.
V. 373, biddinge, done.
XVI. 533, admonestine, fyne.
XVIII. 381, our-cummyne, wethyrwyne.
XVIII. 923, ȝarninge, wyne.
XVIII. 991, clethinge, sene-syne.
XIX. 266, mornynge, fynd.
XIX. 384, kinge, bynd.
XIX. 685, lowynge, fynd.
XXIII. 223, carpyng, pyne.
XXVI. 379, blyssine, fyne.
XXVII. 27, lowing, Martyne.
XXVII. 375, persawing, schyne.
XXVII. 817, teching, discypline.
XXXI. 805, endynge, fynde.
XXXII. 35, schewynge, ourcumyne; "ourcumyne" here a past participle.
XXXIV. 83, thingis, wynis.
XXXV. 79, reknynge, thine.
XXXVII. 193, dinge, behynde.
XLI. 315, lykine, virgine.
XLI. 379, rynge, tharein.
XLIII. 491, duellinge, fyne.
XLV. 173, flynge, bynd.

What began with gerunds did not end with them. These examples, especially "thrynde," "mornynge," "kinge," "rynge," and "flynge," instructively illustrate the sad fact that laxity in rhyme is a progressive quality. This is shown further by the rhyme that puzzled Prof. Skeat in 'The Bruce' occurring here also as "gratht," "mad" (made), and, if possible, still worse as "grathit," "consawit" (xiii. 68, xvi. 544). The significant alternative use of "lyng" and "lyne" (iv. 298, vi. 445, xii. 111, 167, xlii. 65) is the same as in 'The Bruce.' The gerundial and other yng, yne rhymes are distributed over the whole 'Legends,' although just as there are whole books in 'The Bruce' without them, so there are whole legends, sometimes even long ones.

Some little interest attaches to the second work in which they occur, since it happens to be the Troy fragment, of which one of the two known manuscripts bears within it the express attributions, "Her endis barbour and begynnis the monk" and "Her endis the monk and begynnis Barbour." The instances in the Troy fragment (from Horstmann's edition) are:—

Line 497 conselyne, Appolyne.
517, stekinges, engynes.
922, distribuyne, syne.
1445, refetyne, syne.

Having more than exhausted my due space, I must conclude with but the briefest alignment of salient facts making towards identification—the actual ascription of the Troy fragment; the internal allusions of the 'Legends' to the author's personality; his being a "mynistere of haly kirke"; the clear suggestion of passages in the Ninian and Machor legends of his residence in the north-east of Scotland; his obviously familiar acquaintance with Aberdeen; his declaration that "befor vthyre" he "wald fayn" write of Aberdeen's patron St. Machor, whose Latin life, by the way, is believed to have been known in Aberdeen, though now lost; his references to his own journeyings in younger days; and his varied erudition, to be remembered alongside of the classical and post-classical lore of 'The Bruce.' I may not stay to comment on the deep significance of the many points of contact and parallel furnished by the Galloway episode of John Trumpour, and can spare only one sentence to urge the cumulative conclusiveness of all these things, especially when there is added to them the present demonstration of a systematic unity of error throughout the three poems. This specialty occurs as a usage nowhere else, yet 'The Bruce' (13,000 lines) has it eleven times, the 'Legends' (33,000 lines) have it twenty-four times, and the short Troy fragment (3,000 lines) has it thrice. It is, happily, a positive crux, not negative: it is not an inference, but a fact. It has that organic and individualistic character requisite for a real rhyme-test, and as such I submit it for the verdict of scholars—confident that it ends the question, and finally restores John Barbour to his own.

Geo. Neilson.

A LETTER OF STEVENSON.

The following letter of Stevenson appears in the Napier Daily Telegraph, N.Z. It was a reply to one from Dr. Bakewell, communicating an anecdote of a New Zealand boy who, when asked whether he had read 'Treasure Island,' replied: "Every boy 's read 'Treasure Island.' I 've read it four times." Dr. Bakewell remarked that Mr. Stevenson must be "more than human" if he did not appreciate this compliment, and cautioned him against the danger of overwork:—

Vailima, August 7th [1894].

Dear Dr. Bakewell,—I am not more than human. I am more human than is wholly convenient, and your anecdote was welcome. What you say about unwilling work, my dear Sir, is a consideration always present with me, and yet not easy to give its due weight to. You grow gradually into a certain income; without spending a penny more, with the same sense of restriction as before when you painfully scraped two hundred a year together, you find you have spent, and you cannot well stop spending, a far larger sum; and this expense can only be supported by a certain production. However, I am off work this month, and occupy myself instead in weeding my cacao, papa chases, and the like. I may tell you my average of work in favourable circumstances is far greater than you suppose: from six o'clock till eleven at latest [sic: least?], and often till twelve, and again in the afternoon from two to four. My hand is quite destroyed, as you may perceive to-day—to a really unusual extent. I can sometimes write a decent fist still; but I have just returned with my arms all stung from three hours' work in the cacao.

Literary Gossip.

Mr. Stopford Brooke and Mr. Alfred Perceval Graves are engaged upon an anthology of Anglo-Irish poetry, mainly that of the present century, which will be published at no distant date by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. The collaboration of the leading men and women of letters in Ireland is being obtained.

Mr. R. C. Christie has just edited, and printed for distribution amongst the members of the Roxburghe Club, a volume of letters of Sir Thomas Copley to Queen

Elizabeth and her Ministers, from the originals in the Record Office and British Museum. Sir Thomas Copley was one of the leaders of the Roman Catholic fugitives from the penal laws of Elizabeth, and was knighted and created a baron by Henry III. of France. Camden styles him "e primariis inter profugos Anglos," and he was much in the confidence of successive Viceroys of the Netherlands and in high favour with the Kings of Spain and France. His letters, now for the first time printed, extend from 1572 to 1584, and are written from various towns in the Low Countries and France, mostly to Burleigh and Walsingham.

Messrs. Kegan Paul & Co. announce for early in March a one-volume selection by the author from the poems of Sir Lewis Morris. The volume will contain representative pieces from all the writer's works, and will be published at a popular price.

A meeting of bookbinders and subscribers interested in the Bookbinders' Pension and Asylum Society will take place at the Freemasons' Tavern on Tuesday next, March 2nd, for the purpose of forming a committee to place the institution in a better financial position, as at the approaching election there will be forty candidates, and the Committee will be able to elect three only, in consequence of want of funds. Authors and publishers are cordially invited to attend the meeting.

Lord Glenesk will take the chair at the annual meeting of the Newsvendors' Benevolent Institution at the Memorial Hall on Tuesday evening, March 9th, when four pensioners will be elected without the anxiety and expense of a ballot; it is also proposed to appoint a trustee in succession to the late Joseph Newstead.

From the Forty-third Annual Report, which the London Association of Correctors of the Press have just issued, it appears that 1896 was a prosperous year for the Association. Many new members joined, and the satisfactory condition of trade during the year is shown by the fact that on several occasions every member who was not incapacitated by illness was employed. The subscriptions show a considerable increase. The second Readers' Pension has been established, and the third is now in course of formation. During the year lectures have been delivered by Mr. W. T. Lynn, Mr. J. T. Young, Mr. E. W. Brabrook, and Mr. W. H. Harper, the series being brought to a close by Mr. Sidney Lee, who discoursed on 'The Making of National Biography.' In the obituary notices a tribute is paid to Mr. Frederic Pincott, who died in India, as "one of those who have added lustre to the profession of a reader by their attainments." He had become proficient in Urdu, Hindi, Sanskrit, and Panjabi, besides knowing French and Latin.

The value of the property left under the will of Dr. Whewell for the establishment of scholarships in International Law at Cambridge has so largely increased that it has been found possible to double the number of scholarships. There will now be sixteen, representing, we believe, an income of 1,200*l.* a year.

It has been decided by the authorities of Aberystwith College to spend 15,000*l.* on the erection of a new wing to the college buildings.

Mr. Gwenogfryn Evans has now completed the catalogues of the Mostyn, Conway, and Llandudno manuscripts, and he reports considerable progress with the Jesus College manuscripts, and other Welsh documents in the British Museum Library.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has announced that additional grants amounting to 9,500*l.* will be made this year to the various university colleges recently inspected on his behalf, in accordance with a promise made some time ago to an influential deputation from the colleges.

A new work on the Wrekin country, entitled 'Wrekin Sketches,' will be published by Mr. Elliot Stock immediately. It will fully describe the present aspect of the country, but its chief feature will be the information it will contain concerning the ancient ecclesiastical and secular buildings of the district and the legends which surround them. Notices will be added of celebrated residents. The work will be illustrated by sketches and photographs from the neighbourhood.

Mr. Frederic Boase has just completed the second volume of his 'Modern English Biography,' memoirs of public characters who have died since 1850. The arrangement is alphabetical, and this portion runs from the letter I to Q, and includes accounts of a very large number of celebrities, ranging from Prime Ministers to beggars. The volume is at the binder's, and will be issued by Messrs. Netherton & Worth, of Truro.

Mr. Morris Colles has written for the North American Review an article on the reform of the domestic copyright laws in England and America. The subject of copyright has been occupying a good deal of the attention of the Society of Authors, who, having eaten their dinner, have now circulated their report. They have prepared a Bill which Lord Monkswell, it is hoped, will introduce in the House of Lords.

The publishing business established many years since by Mr. W. Hunt, of 12, Paternoster Row, and carried on by him with branches at Holles Street and at Ipswich, has been taken over by Messrs. Marshall Brothers.

The next Clark Lecturer in English Literature at Trinity College, Cambridge, will be appointed in the Easter term, and his tenure of office will be for one year from October next. He will be required to deliver twelve lectures on some period of literature not earlier than Chaucer, to be distributed over two terms at least.

Prof. Wallace, who died last week from the effects of a fall from his bicycle, was one of the many Scotsmen whom the national taste for metaphysics attracts to Oxford. After a successful career as an undergraduate, he became a Fellow and Tutor of Merton, and showed himself an admirable teacher of those reading for honours. In 1882 he replaced the late T. H. Green in the Chair of Moral Philosophy, and proved himself a fit and adequate successor of that distinguished man. Like him, he belonged to the school of Oxford men who took up Hegel when his countrymen were abandoning him, and the main effort of his life was the exposition of Hegelian doctrine. For this he possessed one invaluable gift, an excellent and quite un-German style, which made his treatment of abstruse trains of thought singularly luminous. His first publication was a translation of Hegel's 'Logic,' to which he prefixed an elaborate introduction. He further brought out a translation of the third part of the 'Encyclopædia of the Philosophical Sciences,' under the title of 'Hegel's Philosophy of Mind,' accompanied by explanatory essays. Besides he put together an admirably clear monograph on Schopenhauer. He was also a close student of ancient philosophy, and wrote for the S.P.C.K. a luminous exposition of Epicureanism. An eminently honest, painstaking thinker, he never shrank from toil or thought in his philosophical work, and never attempted to put off his hearers with phrases. In all his efforts truth was his main object.

A new journal for the trade, entitled The Booksellers' Review, is to make its appearance. It is to be a weekly.

A correspondent writing from India states that the Amir of Afghanistan's religious work entitled 'Takweem-ud-din' has just been published at Kabul, but that at present it has only been distributed to the Kazis and provincial governors. One of the principal subjects it deals with is Jehad, or holy war.

The paragraph we inserted last week regarding Marsh's Library was unfortunately left incomplete. We should have added that what Dr. Stokes had discovered was an indulgence granted by Wolsey and Cardinal Campeggio to all contributors of funds for the completion of Hereford Cathedral.

The only Parliamentary Papers likely to interest our readers this week are two further Returns of the Endowed Charities of West Riding Parishes.

SCIENCE

CHEMICAL LITERATURE.

Analytical Chemistry. By N. Menschutkin. Translated by James Locke. (Macmillan & Co.)—About three quarters of this book are devoted to qualitative analysis, the remaining portion treating of some of the more important methods of gravimetric and volumetric quantitative analysis. So far as concerns the qualitative portion, both the style and method of the book recall Fresenius's standard work on the subject, and the comparison is not to the advantage of the present work; yet, taken as a whole, the subject is very thoroughly treated, and a student who has worked from it will have a knowledge of qualitative analysis very different from that to be obtained from so many of the wretched cram-books written at present on this subject—books which seem to be intended only to enable students to pass examinations without regard to whether they acquire any real knowledge of the subject. The chapter on the analysis of silicates calls for particular notice; the qualitative methods are treated very fully, and in most cases in such a manner that they can readily be used for quantitative work also. There seem very few errors in the book; one, however, needs correction. It is stated that gold is precipitated by sulphurous acid from hot solutions only. This limitation is certainly not correct; it can be precipitated completely in the cold, and liquefied sulphurous acid, now an article of commerce, forms perhaps the most convenient reagent for the precipitation of gold. The book can be safely recommended for the use of more advanced students, and will also be found a useful work of reference to those engaged in teaching chemical analysis.

The Chemistry of Gas Manufacture, by W. J. Atkinson Butterfield (Griffin & Co.), whilst it contains quite a store of valuable information on gas manufacture, is rather difficult to read on account of the need for a better arrangement of the matters treated of; especially will it prove stiff reading to those who know little or nothing of the subject. As might be expected from the author, who is the head chemist at the Beckton gas works, the chemistry of gas and the testing of the various products are well described; but it would have been much better had he treated these subjects in distinct sections and not mixed them up with descriptions of manufacturing processes. The account of the new machinery used for charging the retorts is very good and clear, but some of the other descriptions of appliances used in gas-making are not so good—that of the horizontal condenser is certainly confusing, and the diagram given makes it still more so. There is so much that is good in this work that it is to be hoped that Mr. Butterfield will in a later edition so recast the work as to make readily available the really valuable information which it contains.

A Dictionary of Chemical Solubilities.—Inorganic. By Arthur Messinger Comey. (Macmillan & Co.)—All those who have worked much in chemical laboratories must have had cause to feel gratitude to the author of that work known to them by the abbreviated title of Storer's 'Solubilities,' in which Prof. Storer had collected practically all the data on the solubilities of chemical substances published prior to 1860; whilst to those who had to search through chemical literature for later data the wish must often have occurred that some fresh author would devote himself to the heavy task of writing another work bringing the subject up to date. To Prof. Comey the thanks of the chemical world are now due for the volume before us, which contains what seems to be a complete collection of the data on this subject up to March, 1894. Very wisely Prof. Comey decided not to draw any distinction as to the trustworthiness of the various data given by different observers, for without repetition of the determinations this would be an impossible task. Such distinction would, as he says, have been impracticable; therefore, save in a few cases where the inaccuracy of certain work is obvious, he has quoted all the statements that have been made, the authority for each being given. The arrangements of the entries seem to have been very carefully thought out, and should facilitate reference. So far as we have been able to check it, the compilation seems to have been most carefully and completely effected, and we must congratulate Prof. Comey on the result of his arduous labours. The book closes with some formulæ and tables for the conversion of acrometric degrees into specific gravity, and a useful synchronistic table of chemical and allied scientific periodicals from 1800 to 1895.

SOCIETIES.

Royal.—Feb. 18.—The President in the chair.—The following papers were read: 'On the Iron Lines present in the Hottest Stars: Preliminary Note,' by Mr. J. N. Lockyer,—'On the Significance of Bravais's Formulæ for Regression, &c., in the Case of Skew Variation,' by Mr. G. U. Yule,—'Mathematical Contributions to the Theory of Evolution: on a Form of Spurious Correlation which may arise when Indices are used in the Measurement of Organs,' by Prof. K. Pearson,—and 'Note to the Memoir of Prof. Karl Pearson on Spurious Correlation,' by Mr. F. Galton.

Society of Antiquaries.—Feb. 18.—Sir H. H. Howorth, V.P., in the chair.—Sir A. W. Franks exhibited a delicately wrought example of a silver-gilt nef, of Swiss workmanship. In form it closely resembles the ships shown in the famous picture at Hampton Court of Henry VIII.'s embarkation from Dover in 1520.—Sir H. H. Howorth exhibited a contemporary painting on vellum of George Clifford, Earl of Cumberland, as Champion to Queen Elizabeth, an office conferred upon him in 1590.—The Rev. E. B. Savage communicated a note on ancient burial customs, in which he suggested an explanation of the fact of cremated remains being found side by side in the same barrow with instances of inhumation. The former, he thought, represented the bodies of those who died in troublous times, and were burnt to prevent mutilation, while the latter were the remains of those who had died in times of peace and quiet.—Sir J. Evans said he was of opinion that some other explanation was necessary, and that inasmuch as cremation was more expensive than inhumation, it was possible that the burnt remains were those of the more wealthy members of the community.—Mr. G. Grazebrook read a paper 'On Mediæval Surnames and their Various Spellings.' He indicated how, by degrees, fixed forms of spelling arose, but until the sixteenth century all English names show how the scribes attempted to express in letters their sounds, varied as these would be by the dialect of the speakers on one side, and on the other by the intelligence and refinement of the writers. This was shown by placing side by side the duplicate copies of a concord dated about 1150. Of course, the Latin in both followed what was taught in schools, but the long list of witnesses showed the scribes giving very different spellings, and yet each was an evident attempt to reproduce the sound. The duplicates of another concord, dated January 26th, 1293, showed the same. Quotations from Hickes's 'Thesaurus' and Higden's 'Polychronicon' described the dialects prevailing in different districts, and instances were adduced to show changes in dialect, and the alterations which followed in place-names at certain dates. The origin and growth of fixed surnames were examined, and Mr. Grazebrook maintained that before 1200 there were very few "fixed"—that is, which would have survived separation from the estates which had given rise to them—and that these few were chiefly drawn from the early Norman homes from which the families had originally come. All the early changes in the spelling of names were attributed to dialects and phonetic writing, but from perhaps the fourteenth century another cause arose, namely, the extreme prevalence of Pleas of Misnomer. The legal axiom that the writ of indictment must be exact in the smallest particular was greatly strained. From Horne's 'Mirour of Justices,' a book said to be translated from Norman French of the reign of Edward I., directions were read showing how to take vicious exceptions to writs; the misspelling of the smallest word, and, of course, much more so of names of persons or places, the putting "eum" for "eos," and other little points were urged by counsel on either side. From a number of instances picked out of the Plea Rolls between 1300 and 1400 Mr. Grazebrook selected the following instances of surnames attacked:—Hereford, 1318, Ricardus fil' Willelmi Irby de Hope-Maloysel claimed that he need not respond to the breve because he was named "de Irby," and not as described therein. The jury declared upon oath that he was known as "Irby," and not as "de Irby," and so the plea was disallowed. The corollary from this is that had he been named "de Irby" the case would have collapsed. In another assize, Staff., 1306, Alexander Craket sued Richard de Vernun, &c. Richard referred to the writ, where his name was given as Richard le Vernun, and Craket was nonsuited. In another assize, Staff., 1301, the question was whether Alan le Blore had unjustly raised a fence, &c. Alan pleaded that his name was De Aldytheley and not De Blore. The jury found that he was called Alan de Blore and Alan de Aldytheley, and the case proceeded. To show the fear lest such exceptions would lead to the miscarriage of the law a further case was quoted, Staff., 1411, Joan Vernun, formerly wife of Richard Vernun, Knt., and Richard Hawund, administrators of the goods of Richard Vernun alias Vernon, Knt., &c. So "wholesome a dread" was thus aroused that every variety in the forms of spelling names came to be introduced into legal documents. Reference was made to a Grasebrok suit in Chancery in 1621, wherein that name occurs in nine different forms, and other similar instances were referred to in many early documents. Legal gentlemen would not have thus painfully introduced all these for the mere sake of variety. A list was submitted showing sixty-one various forms in which the Grazebrook name is found from the year 1200, with the dates and references to the evidence where each occurs.

Geological.—Feb. 19.—Anniversary Meeting.—Dr. H. Hicks in the chair.—The following gentlemen were elected to serve on the new Council:—H. Bauerman, Dr. W. T. Blanford, Prof. T. G. Bonney, Prof. W. Boyd Dawkins, Sir J. Evans, F. W. Harmer, R. S. Herries, Dr. H. Hicks, Rev. E. Hill, Prof. E. Hull, Prof. J. W. Judd, R. Lydekker, Lieut.-General C. A. McMahon, J. E. Marr, Prof. H. A. Miers, H. W. Monckton, E. T. Newton, A. Strahan, J. J. H. Teall, W. W. Watts, W. Whitaker, Rev. H. Winwood, and Dr. H. Woodward. President, Dr. H. Hicks; Vice-Presidents, Prof. T. G. Bonney, Lieut.-General C. A. McMahon, J. J. H. Teall, and Dr. H. Woodward; Secretaries, J. E. Marr and R. S. Herries; Foreign Secretary, Sir J. Evans; Treasurer, Dr. W. T. Blanford.—The following awards of medals and funds were made: The Wollaston Medal to Mr. W. H. Hudleston; the Murchison Medal and part of the Fund to Mr. H. B. Woodward; the Lyell Medal and part of the Fund to Dr. G. J. Hinde; the Bigsby Medal to Mr. C. Reid; the balance of the proceeds of the Wollaston Fund to Mr. F. A. Bather; the balance of the proceeds of the Murchison Fund to Mr. S. S. Buckman; and the balance of the proceeds of the Lyell Fund to Mr. W. J. L. Abbott and Mr. J. Lomas.—The President delivered his anniversary address, which dealt with some recent evidence bearing on the geological and biological history of early Cambrian and pre-Cambrian times.

British Archæological Association.—Feb. 17.—Mr. Compton, V.P., in the chair.—A paper entitled 'London under the Monastic Orders' was read by Miss E. Bradley, which was well illustrated by maps of the City, indicating in different colours the sites of the many religious houses which existed both within and without the walls between the thirteenth century and the sixteenth. Miss Bradley noticed in detail many of the houses, arranging them in groups under the orders to which they belonged; thus the Benedictines, the Cistercians, the Carthusians, the Augustine Canons, and the three orders of friars were each in turn described, and the circumstances of the foundation of the several houses were related. The Cistercians, apparently, possessed but one abbey in London, that of St. Mary Grace's on Tower Hill, founded by King Edward III. in 1349. He called it "Eastminster" in contradistinction to Westminster. The king and his grandson richly endowed it, and it was regarded as of great importance, notwithstanding which only the very scantiest knowledge of it remains. It was surrendered in 1539, and was valued at 602*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*, according to Speed. The names of its two earliest abbots alone are known, viz., William de Sancta Cruce, 1349, and William Warden, 1360. The site it occupied is now covered with victualling storehouses and biscuit bakeries for the royal navy; not a trace or fragment of its walls remains. It is not generally known, but it is stated on authority, according to Miss Bradley, that even Westminster Abbey had a very narrow escape from similar destruction at the hands of the Protestant vandal the Protector Somerset when he required stone for the building of his palace in the Strand; this, however, he obtained by demolishing instead the Priory of St. John, Clerkenwell. The paper was listened to with great interest, and conveyed a good impression of the power and influence wielded by the religious orders in London, and showed how large a share they must have had in the making of the history of our great city during the mediæval centuries.—At the conclusion of the paper the Chairman expressed what he felt was the feeling of all present, the obligation they were under to Miss Bradley for the comprehensive and catholic spirit in which she had treated her subject and brought so prominently forward the great benefit which the monastic orders conferred on the country in preserving religion and learning in times when, but for their existence, the country would have sunk into barbarism and gross darkness.—A very animated and interesting discussion ensued, in which Mr. Blashill, Hon. Treasurer, spoke of the value of the Ordnance maps in identifying the sites of the religious houses, and in other ways enabling us to illustrate the life of the old city.—Mr. Patrick pointed out that although the Great Fire was destructive of the majority of the churches of Old London, yet much of their walls must have remained standing, and their foundations, of course, were untouched; and in that connexion it is interesting to know, on the authority of Mr. G. H. Birch, that the present church of Christ Church, Newgate Street, is built upon the actual foundation walls of the eastern portion of the old church of the Grey Friars' Monastery, the nave of which extended considerably further to the west, covering the site of the present burial-ground.—Dr. W. de Gray Birch made many interesting observations on the methods of giving land in the Middle Ages.—

The Rev. J. Cave Browne, the Rev. H. J. D. Astley, Mr. S. W. Kershaw, Mrs. Collier, and the Chairman joined in the discussion.

NUMISMATIC.—Feb. 18.—Sir J. Evans, President, in the chair.—Mr. H. W. Lawrence, Mr. F. Bowcher, and Mr. A. Trice Martin were elected Members.—Mr. R. Day exhibited a silver-gilt oval badge of Prince Charles Edward, with his bust three-quarters to left. This badge appears to be a cast reproduction of a repoussé plaque.—Mr. T. Ready exhibited a plaster cast of a quarter-stater of Cyzicus in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, similar in type to that exhibited by him on November 19th last, the authenticity of which had been questioned. Mr. Ready was of opinion that the Paris coin proved the genuineness of his coin. He also exhibited an unpublished bronze coin of the Empress Tranquillina struck at Tarsus, with the name of the city on the reverse and a representation of the Cabiri standing on a galley and holding up a species of arch, beneath which is a pyramidal building enclosing a figure of the god Sandan standing on a lion.—Mr. L. A. Lawrence exhibited a plated half-crown of James I. and a copper penny of the Transvaal Republic bearing the bust of President Kruger, of which only forty specimens are said to have been struck.—Mr. A. Prevost exhibited two vaccination medals: one Dutch, dated 1809, was struck for presentation to local doctors; the other French, dated 1814, for presentation to the Chefs de Service of the Paris hospitals.—Lord Grantley read a paper 'On the Styca Coinage of Northumbria from A.D. 758 to A.D. 808.' Besides giving a general view of the coinage of that period, he called special attention to a few coins, most of which were unpublished. Amongst these was a styca of Elfwald I., with the name of the moneyer instead of an animal on the reverse. This coin is of considerable importance, as it shows the earliest occurrence of a moneyer's name on the Northumbrian series. He also described several unpublished stycas of Elfwald II., formerly in the Bateman Collection, with the moneyer's name Eadwine.

ZOOLOGICAL.—Feb 16.—Prof. G. B. Howes in the chair.—Dr. E. C. Stirling exhibited some bones, casts, and photographs of the large extinct struthious bird from the Diprotodon-beds at Lake Callabonna, South Australia, which had been recently discovered and named by him Genyornis newtoni.—Mr. G. E. H. Barrett-Hamilton exhibited a pair of walrus-tusks from the Pacific, belonging to the species which has been named Trichechus obesus, and gave some account of the cetaceans and seals of the North Pacific.—Papers were read: by Mr. A. Smith Woodward, on Echidnocephalus troscheli, an extinct fish from the Upper Cretaceous of Westphalia, proving its identity in all essential respects with the existing deep-sea genus Halosaurus; specimens in the British Museum exhibited most of the essential characters of the skull and opercular apparatus, also the enlarged scales of the ventrally situated slime-canal on the trunk of Halosaurus,—by Mr. G. A. Boulenger, on Acanthocybium solandri, recording the occurrence of this fish in the Arabian Sea; a specimen of it, transmitted by Surgeon Lieut.-Col. Jayakar, C.M.Z.S., from Muscat, had recently been received by the British Museum, in which the species had been previously represented only by a dried head from the Atlantic,—by Mr. W. E. de Winton, on the distribution of the giraffe, and the synonyms and more definite descriptions of the two existing forms; Giraffa camelopardalis, Linn., was fixed for the name of the three-horned form, and G. capensis, Less., for that of the two-horned southern species,—from Dr. A. Dugès, on a new Ophidian from Mexico, which was proposed to be named Oreophis boulengeri, gen. et sp. nov.,—from Mr. C. D. Sherborn, on the exact dates of the publication of the parts of the natural history portion of Savigny's 'Description de l'Égypte,'—and by Mr. F. E. Beddard, on the anatomy of the tropic-bird (Phaëthon) of the order Steganopodes, amongst which he considered it to occupy a low position near Fregata.

ENTOMOLOGICAL.—Feb. 17.—Mr. R. McLachlan, V.P. and Treas., in the chair.—Messrs. Champion and Jacoby exhibited the collection of phytophagous Coleoptera made by Mr. H. H. Smith in Grenada and the Grenadines for the West India Exploration Committee of the Royal Society.—Mr. F. C. Adams exhibited rare Diptera taken in the New Forest during the preceding year, and including Callicera ænea and Nephrocerus flavicornis.—Mr. M. Burr showed an example of an undetermined species of locust, taken in the Post Office at Bedford Street, Strand, and six new species of Acrydiidæ of different genera.—The Secretary exhibited a cicada larva from which a fungus, probably Cordyceps sobolifera, was growing, which had been sent to the Society from Venezuela, with an inquiry as to its real nature.—The Rev. Dr. Walker showed a series of Coleoptera, Hymenoptera, and Diptera, collected in the Orkney Islands during the previous season.—Mr. Tutt exhibited bred examples of the extreme radiate variety of Spilosoma lubricipeda. This variety occurred naturally in Heligoland, and its existence in Great Britain was probably attributable to accidental importation.—Messrs. Jacoby and Champion communicated a 'List of the Phytophagous Coleoptera obtained by Mr. H. H. Smith in St. Vincent, Grenada, and the Grenadines, with Descriptions of New Species.'

CHEMICAL.—Feb. 18.—Mr. A. G. Vernon Harcourt, President, in the chair.—The following papers were presented: 'The Oxidation of Sulphurous Acid by Potassium Permanganate,' by Messrs. T. S. Dymond and F. Hughes,—'Sodamide and some of its Substitution Derivatives' and 'Rubidamide,' by Dr. A. W. Titherley,—'Dissociation Pressure of Alkyl Ammonium Hydrosulphides,' by Mr. J. Walker and Dr. J. S. Lumsden,—'On the Spectrographic Analysis of some Commercial Samples of Metals, of Chemical Preparations, and Minerals from the Stassfurt Potash Beds,' by Messrs. W. N. Hartley and H. Ramage,—'Supposed Condensation of Benzil with Ethyl Alcohol: a Correction,' by Dr. F. R. Japp.—'The Viscosity of Mixtures of Miscible Liquids,' by Dr. T. E. Thorpe and Mr. J. W. Rodger,—and 'On the Production of Pyridine Derivatives from Ethylic-β-Amidocrotonate,' by Dr. J. N. Collie.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—Feb. 23.—Mr. J. W. Barry, President, in the chair.—Two communications, 'On the Main Drainage of London,' by Messrs. W. S. Crimp and J. E. Worth, and 'On the Purification of the Thames,' by Mr. W. J. Dibdin, were read.

ANTHROPOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.—Feb. 23.—Mr. H. Balfour, V.P., in the chair.—A paper by Miss G. M. Godden, 'On the Nagas of Assam,' was read by Col. R. G. Woodthorpe. The paper was compiled from all available sources of information, and gave an exhaustive account of the various Naga tribes.—In the discussion which followed, Sir S. Bayley, Dr. Leitner, Mr. Crooke, Mr. Gomme, Dr. Garson, and Mr. Balfour took part.—A large number of Naga weapons and personal ornaments were exhibited, and several large paintings by Col. Woodthorpe were hung on the walls. The paper was also illustrated by the optical lantern.

HISTORICAL.—Feb. 18.—Anniversary Meeting.—Sir M. E. Grant Duff, President, in the chair.—The Earl of Rosebery, Prof. Max Müller, and Prof. M. Burrows, nominated by the Council, were re-elected Vice-Presidents; Prof. F. W. Maitland, Archdeacon R. Thornton, Mr. C. W. Oman, and Mr. C. R. Beazley, also nominated by the Council, were re-elected Members of Council.—The Council presented their annual report for the session 1895-6, which was unanimously adopted.—The President delivered his annual address, the subject of which was the value of the work of Polybius as an historian.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL.—Feb. 15.—Dr. Garnett, President, in the chair.—Mr. R. Steele read a paper 'On Early Books on Arithmetic,' with special reference to those printed in England. The paper was divided into two parts, the first dealing with the bibliography of the subject, while the second gave a brief conspectus of the methods of arithmetic in use during the mediæval and early commercial epochs, with the object of pointing out the traces which these methods left on the English treatises of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. The first important work dealing with arithmetic in English was said to be Robert Record's 'Ground of Artes,' which between 1540 and 1699 went through some twenty editions, its most serious rival being Humfrey Baker's 'Well Springe of Sciences,' first printed in 1562, in use till at least 1670. In the second part of the paper an account was given of the abacus, and of the Arabic system of arithmetic, or algorism, and instances were given of the light which the early treatises on arithmetic throw on the social customs and manners of thought of the day.—The subsequent discussion turned chiefly on the second half of Mr. Steele's paper, the speakers being the President, the Bishop of Portsmouth, Mr. H. B. Wheatley, Mr. C. Davis, Mr. C. Welsh, and Mr. F. Jenkinson.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

MON. Victoria Institute, 4½.—'The Relations of Science and Faith,' Prof. G. Maclosky.
— London Institution, 5.—'The History of Rontgen's X Rays and their Practical Applications,' Mr. H. L. Jones.
— Royal Institution, 5.—General Monthly.
— Engineers, 7½.—'Notes on the Proposed By-laws of the London County Council with respect to House Drainage,' Mr. J. P. Barber.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Industrial Uses of Cellulose,' Lecture III., Mr. C. F. Cross. (Cantor Lecture.)
— Institute of British Architects, 8.
TUES. Royal Institution, 3.—'Animal Electricity,' Prof. A. D. Waller.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Gesso,' Mr. M. Webb.
— Zoological, 8.—'The Growth of Hair upon the Human Ear and its Testimony to the Shape, Size, and Position of the Ancestral Organ,' Mr. H. M. Wallis.—'Notes on a Visit to the Bird Islands, Saldanha Bay, South Africa,' Mr. G. Bolton.—'Collection of Earthworms from South Africa belonging to the Genus Acanthodrilus,' Mr. F. E. Beddard.
— Biblical Archæology, 8.—'The Climate of Ancient Egypt,' Dr. Grant-Bey.
— Civil Engineers, 8.—Further Discussion on 'The Main Drainage of London' and 'The Purification of the Thames'; Ballot for Members.
WED. Archæological Institute, 4.—'The Portraits of Pompei,' Mr. H. P. F. Marriott.
— Entomological, 8.—'The Prothoracic Gland of Dicranura vinula,' Mr. O. H. Latter.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'English Orchards,' Mr. G. Gordon.
— British Archæological Association, 8.—'Some Seventeenth Century Records of Absentees from Church,' Mr. T. Blashill.
THURS. Royal Institution, 3.—'Greek History and Extant Monuments,' Prof. P. Gardner.
— Royal, 4½.
— London Institution, 6.—'Cheapside,' Rev. Canon Benham.
— Linnean, 8.—'A Trichoderma parasitic on Peltia epiphylla, Corda,' Mr. W. G. P. Ellis; 'New Species of Perichæta from New Britain,' &c., Dr. W. B. Benham.
— Chemical, 8.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Mechanical Production of Cold,' Lecture VI., Prof. J. A. Ewing. (Howard Lecture.)
— Antiquaries, 8½.—Election of Fellows.
FRI. Philological, 8.—A Paper by Prof. G. Foster.
— Geologists' Association, 8.—'Some Properties of Precious Stones,' Prof. H. A. Miers.
— Royal Institution, 9.—'Some Curiosities of Vision,' Mr. S. Bidwell.
SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'Electricity and Electrical Vibrations,' Lord Rayleigh.

Science Gossip.

THE following are the changes proposed in the office-bearers and Council of the Chemical Society: as President, Prof. J. Dewar, vice Mr. A. G. Vernon Harcourt; as Vice-Presidents, Prof. W. Ramsay and Prof. J. Emerson Reynolds, vice Prof. Dewar and Mr. Horace T. Brown; as ordinary members of Council, Mr. C. T. Heycock, Dr. Rudolph Mensel, Dr. T. Kirke Rose, and Dr. A. Scott, vice Dr. B. Dyer, Dr. G. H. Morris, Mr. W. A. Shenstone, and Dr. T. Stevenson.

THE death is announced of Prof. Weierstrass, the celebrated mathematician, in his eighty-first year. He had held the Chair of Mathematics in the University of Berlin for over forty years. He had been a Correspondent of the Institute since 1868, and was also a Foreign Member of the Royal Society.

MR. J. R. B. MASEFIELD, Vice-President of the North Staffordshire Naturalists' Field Club, has written a small volume on 'Wild Bird Protection and Nesting Boxes,' which gives illustrations of various designs of boxes, brackets, &c., that have actually been used by wild birds for nidification. It also contains a list of the orders made under the Wild Birds Protection Acts on the application of County Councils, with the names of the species protected. Messrs. Taylor Brothers, of Leeds, are the publishers.

THE twenty-sixth congress of the Gesellschaft für Chirurgie will be held at Berlin, under the presidency of Prof. Bruns of Tübingen, from the 21st to the 24th of April. The bearing of the Röntgen rays upon surgery will form one of the three principal subjects of discussion.

THE planet Mercury is still visible in the early morning, but will soon cease to be so, as in the latter part of next month he will be approaching superior conjunction with the sun. Venus about the same time will attain her greatest brilliancy as an evening star; she is passing in an easterly direction through the constellation Aries, and will be in conjunction with the crescent moon on the 7th prox. Mars continues to decrease in brightness, but will be visible until past midnight throughout the month of March, situated during the latter part of it in the constellation Gemini; he will be in conjunction with the moon (then just entered on her first quarter) on the night of the 11th. Jupiter is still a brilliant object during nearly the whole of the night, in the western part of Leo; he will be in conjunction with the moon on the morning of the 17th prox. Saturn does not rise until about midnight, being in the constellation Scorpio.

A SPECIAL meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society is to be held on Tuesday next, the 2nd prox., at 4.30 P.M., to receive the medalist, Prof. Barnard, who was to have been present at the general meeting on the 12th inst. (as stated in our "Science Gossip" on the 13th), but did not arrive in time in consequence of delay caused by bad weather. Prof. Barnard will exhibit some of his photographs at the meeting; later in the week he proposes to start on his return journey, and shortly to commence work at the new Yerkes Observatory.

FINE ARTS

Ford Madox Brown: a Record of his Life and Work. By F. M. Hueffer. Illustrated. (Longmans & Co.)

(First Notice.)

The first thing a sympathizing reader, if he be a man of taste, is sure to do with this volume will be to cover up its binding. That done he will, if he knew Madox Brown, regret that the portrait which faces chap. i. is not more worthy of a manly painter, to whom its affectations hardly do justice. Thirdly, if he have not unlimited time to spare, he must needs wish that Mr. Hueffer had been somewhat less diffuse in what he says about his great-great-grandfather, the "Author of the Brunonian System" of medicine. Mr. Hueffer is also too prolix when he treats of the minute details of his grandfather's family affairs and the small events of his boyish career. It really matters very little whether or not Madox Brown's father possessed the washhand stand and an armchair of which we read on p. 21. It is of much more importance that, in 1839, Brown himself won the praise of his teacher in Antwerp, Baron Wappers—the admirable master of many admirable painters—and, as we have reason to know, the warm appreciation of Slingineyer, an excellent artist, who painted the 'Martyr in the Reign of Diocletian,' which was No. 1843 in the Belgian Section of the International Exhibition at South Kensington—not in 1871, as Mr. Hueffer has it, but in 1862—a picture well known by an engraving. It is of still more importance as explaining how it came about that Madox Brown, naturally resolute and self-reliant, not to say obstinate—characteristics which adhered to him through life and formed the basis of much of his career in art as well as of his dealings with others—inherited an income which, small as it was, partly relieved him from that necessity which has compelled so many artists to debase their powers and skill to the demands of the market.

Despite not a few lapses from good taste, Mr. Hueffer writes, we are bound to say, with no lack of tenderness and gratitude, although it cannot be denied that that sense of humour and delight in a joke which he has inherited from the "Author of the Brunonian System" does now and then startle readers. It must be admitted, too, that the much-loved "Bruno" of the P-R.B. not only enjoyed a joke, even when it told against himself, but often laid himself open to the jokes of others. With regard to the development of his character, of which his art was simply the expression, his biographer might have spoken at greater length than he has done of the qualities of those tentative pictures in which, even in the choice of the subjects, it is easy to detect idiosyncrasies which marked the painter through the whole of his long career. The youth was destined more than once to essay similar subjects who, in 1836, painted the 'Head of a Flemish Fish-wife' and 'A Blind Beggar and his Child,' and, a little later, 'A Friday of the Poor,' 'Job among the Ashes,' 'Elizabeth at the Death-Bed of the Countess of Nottingham,' and, above all, 'Flamand voyant passer le Duc d'Albe' and 'Col. Kirk showing the Woman he had deceived the Corpse of her Husband hanging on the Gallows.' These themes indicate Brown's liking for passionate motives, such as men brooding over their wrongs, illustrations of the tyranny of modern society, class grievances, and democratic legends which, true or false, were more or less tragic. As a humourist, too, he affected a certain unrefined grotesqueness in many of his tragedies and grim comedies, such as 'Ehud and Eglon,' 'The Expulsion of the Danes from Manchester,' 'Cordelia's Portion,' 'Harold' (both versions), 'Parting of Cordelia,' 'Work,' 'The Last of England,' 'Death of Sir Tristram,' and 'Joseph's Coat.' Not one of these (and they include the greater number of Brown's masterpieces) but offers indications of a sardonic temperament which is decidedly rare in modern art, and probably obtruded itself in the earlier pictures we have named, some of which have doubtless vanished. In 'Ehud,' 'Harold,' 'The Last of England,' and 'Sir Tristram' the force of this mocking spirit was very strongly marked. In some of the others, especially in 'Work'—a much overrated picture, though an exhaustive illustration of Brown's technical powers, and a perfect expression of the moodiness which at times swayed him—it is to be seen in its most prosaic guise.

Mr. Hueffer is right in describing Brown's large picture of life-size figures, 'The Execution of Mary, Queen of Scots,' as the first of his great historical works. Produced in 1839–40, it is a noble example of style, full of passion, well composed and compact in all its arrangements, and in these respects it differs materially from such works as youths of nineteen are wont to produce. As we saw it long before it was restored in 1889, it is easy for us to praise the largeness of its draughtsmanship; the firmness of its drawing; the suitability (in spite of certain not unnatural exaggerations) of the expressions, which have something of the tendency to mockery to which we have alluded; and the homogeneity of its colour scheme. Most painters of such a subject would have represented Queen Mary as much younger than she really was, and even drawn her features from portraits taken in France; but Brown had evidently selected for his model the statue erected by her son in Henry VII.'s Chapel. It is likewise evident that he saw the importance of exaggerating those traces of time and pain which King James's sculptor flinched from reproducing in his marble. Brown knew that when Mary's head fell at Fotheringhay her scanty tresses were grey; he likewise knew that she was then somewhat lame, and that in confinement she had grown stout. The infusion of melodrama, not to say clap-trap, which to some extent mars the design, is less conspicuous than might be looked for from a youth trained in the Belgian school, and it is manifest that Brown very soon followed Johnson's counsel and "cleared his mind of cant," although there are still traces of it in the too Byronic 'Manfred,' which followed 'Queen Mary.' Mr. Hueffer thinks the contrary; but we take it that all Brown's subjects from Byron (except 'Parisina's Sleep,' which followed 'Manfred') are tainted with Byronic vices. We can admire the design and execution of 'Parisina,' and it has always been a matter of immense surprise that the authorities of the Salon rejected it in 1843, "the subject being too improper," while in 1845 those of the British Institution did not flinch from exhibiting it. To the Byronic affectation succeeded in Brown's mind in 1843–4, and as became a youth of twenty-one, a Dumas cult, among the manifestations of which were some Monte Cristo-ish stories. Of these a good specimen is an anecdote Brown, in later days, loved to tell to the effect that, in order to raise the wind, Alexandre, at the height of his popularity, said to a certain costumier, "Pay me a million francs and I will sit in your shop window for an hour." That said and done, the news spread. All Paris rushed to see the idol in the part of his tailor's dummy.

"Foreshortened in the tracts of Time" as most of the earlier events of his grandsire's life must needs be to Mr. Hueffer, it is not surprising that the account he gives of Brown's appearances in the Westminster Hall exhibitions is inadequate to explain the effects of them upon the artist's future career. In the eyes of those students whose voices were to become the Fame of the future, 'Parisina' had, even before it was at the British Institution in 1845, compelled attention to any work of Brown's. At Westminster Hall in 1844 the great cartoon of 'The Body of Harold brought to the Conqueror,' now at the South London Gallery, added prodigiously to his reputation. Private notes made at the time by one of the ablest leaders of public opinion, a marked catalogue belonging to another (presented to the present writer), the warm praise of Maclise, Dyce, E. M. Ward, and E. Armitage, all of them eminent competitors with Brown, were, of course, of greater ultimate value than any commendations the Commissioners of the exhibitions (most of them laymen) bestowed on the painter. Rossetti's enthusiasm was roused, as he told us, to the highest pitch by 'Parisina,' the cartoons, and 'Wycliffe,' the last of which he saw at Hyde Park Corner in 1848. There is, by the way, an error in the catalogue before us (p. 435), which dates 'Wycliffe' as "begun 1867–8"; it should have been "1847–8." This catalogue needs much revising. Thus, on the same page, it is stated that Brown's 'Infant's Repast' was at Hyde Park Corner in 1848; it should have been 1849, when it accompanied 'King Lear' and two portraits. That Brown and most of the P-R.B. acted and reacted upon each other is manifest. This was the case with regard to Rossetti more than the others, but it is absurd to describe Brown as the founder; he was, in fact, hardly an "elder brother" of the society; he was not particularly intimate with its leaders till it was established; and when two Brethren sounded him on the subject he specifically declined to be elected a member, alleging, with what sincerity his practice proved, that he could not accept some of its canons.

Mr. Hueffer, too, is wrong in calling Deverell a P-R.B., which he was not; and he does not say that Miss Siddal (Mrs. D. G. Rossetti) sat for the lady who, with clasped hands, listens in rapt attention to the 'Story of Custance,' as its author reads it in Brown's large picture of 'Chaucer at the Court of Edward III.' In quoting from the Athenæum of that day a criticism of great care and acumen upon the 'Chaucer' picture, Mr. Hueffer does not seem to be aware that it was written by Mr. Solomon Hart, who likewise wrote for this journal a highly appreciative notice of Rossetti, and was, in fact, the first critic of note who took pains enough to study either Brown or Rossetti. What Mr. Hueffer may, after this, think of Brown's expletives (p. 78) against "that animal Hart," it is not for us to say.

On the other hand, Mr. Hueffer is right in suggesting that W. B. Scott's assertion that a drawing school in Camden Town, in which Mr. Cave Thomas, T. Seddon, and Madox Brown were warmly concerned, was intended "to run in opposition to the Royal Academy Schools," is on a par with many of Scott's anecdotes; and he need not have taken notice of Scott's statement that the fewness of Millais's shavings in 'The Carpenter's Shop' was due to Brown and his school. Millais had won a Gold Medal at the Royal Academy years before 1850, when the school for artisans and lads was set up in Camden Town. Mr. Hueffer says that Brown wrote for the Germ an elaborate essay 'On the Mechanism of an Historical Picture'; this is true, but he ought to have added that Brown wrote in the same magazine a fine sonnet on 'The Love of Beauty.' He is in error as to "the luckless" Germ having "roused the anti-innovating forces of the country and brought down the fulminations of their wrath upon the pictures of the school." How could this be when nobody would buy the Germ even for a shilling? He errs again in thinking that the head of St. John in Brown's 'Christ washes Peter's Feet,' now in the National Gallery, was painted from Christina Rossetti. There was excuse for this belief before the lady found herself unable to remember sitting for the head; but Mr. W. Rossetti is certainly mistaken in supposing Deverell, whom it does not at all resemble, sat for it. W. B. Scott sat, we think, for one of the Apostles, and this is not mentioned here. The rest of the account is correct enough. We shall have to speak further of the history of this picture and its original reception at the Academy; but, meanwhile, let us say that the notice which follows concerning that most pathetic picture, 'The Last of England,' now in the gallery at Birmingham, is correct and interesting, though we think—allowing for the intrinsic importance of the picture, and the fact that it secured for Brown for the first time fairly adequate appreciation among the general public—not sufficient. The group of the angry emigrant and his confiding companion are admirably painted portraits of the artist and his second wife, while the supposed incident which forms the subject of the picture had its origin in the resentment Brown felt when, finding himself neglected by the London world, he was strongly tempted to follow Woolner to the Southern hemisphere, if not to dig for gold, as the sculptor did, at least to take land and become a sheep farmer. The idea of doing this was impressed upon him by his having accompanied Woolner so far as Gravesend on his setting out. The brilliant painting, the vividness of the cold daylight, the cheerlessness of the bleak sea wind, and the pathos of the whole, to say nothing of the fine drawing and strong harmonious colours of the work, make 'The Last of England' not only one of Brown's masterpieces, perhaps the greatest of them, but one of the noblest pictures painted in England in his lifetime. In our second notice of this interesting biography we shall be able to discuss Brown's relations with the P-R.B. as a society and with the Royal Academy, both matters of great importance to Brown, in regard to the first of which Mr. Hueffer entertains confused notions, while as to the second it will be easy to show that, like Brown, he is far from just or even reasonable.

MINOR EXHIBITIONS.

The collection of noteworthy English drawings formed, as we stated last week, by Messrs. Agnew & Sons in the Old Bond Street Galleries is at least as attractive as any of the similar gatherings this firm has brought together from year to year. Of two hundred and fifty examples there is not one we should prefer not to see again; a large proportion of them are of extraordinary merit; and very many have, each in its way, no superiors. The whole represents English art of the kind at its best. The most important are, in the order of the Catalogue (which is, of course, not the order of their value), G. Barret's brilliant and famous Classical Landscape, Sunset (No. 5), and his excellent and characteristic Tow-path (115); De Wint's dignified Buildwas Abbey (9), Bolton Abbey (53), and his excellent idyl Milking Time (74); H. G. Hine's Black Cap, near Lewes, a grand yet simple drawing (10), and his noble Mount Harry, near Lewes (94); D. Cox's Bettws-y-Coed Churchyard (14), a notable specimen of his middle period; Crossing the Stream (37), a later and more popular work; Kenilworth (42), a very sober and fine piece; Haddon (209), and Near Bettws-y-Coed (212); Sir John Gilbert's Scene from 'Henry IV.' (27), a work full of spirit and tragic force; J. Holland's Hospital of the Pietà, Venice (36), a brilliant and pure drawing; Copley Fielding's Off Scarborough (41); Edridge's Village Church (50), choice and sweet, though somewhat weak; L. Haghe's Tournay Cathedral (55), depicting that Romanesque, semicircular fragment, the end of the south crossing, with skill and tact, but giving little idea of its grandeur; Sir E. Burne-Jones's beautifully coloured Cupid and Psyche (66); Mr. Wilfred Ball's pathetic Coming Night, Surrey (69); A. Powell's sincere and neat Llanberis (75); and The Studio (76), Mr. Alma Tadema's learned and powerful drawing of his studio. Next to these hangs a group of W. Hunt's marvellous exercises in colour, draughtsmanship, humour, and pathos, including Boy with a Pitcher (110); The Gardener's Daughter (112); The Sum, a boy in arithmetical difficulties (117); Roses in a Jar, and Fruit (210); A Negro Boy (217); Pineapple and Grapes, a marvel of modelling and verisimilitude, treated with brilliancy and breadth of style (218); and Flowers in a Jug (227), which is flower painting at its best. Besides these, there are several admirable, but less important fruit and flower pieces of his, such as Sloes and Plums (111), Dog-Rose (143), Apple-Blossom (144), May-Blossom (173), and the delightful Red Jug and Birds' Eggs (177). Then come Apollo (121), by Mr. Briton Riviere; Minehead (185), by G. P. Boyce; and three exquisite exercises in white and fairy tints by Miss M. L. Gow, who paints as Prospero's Ariel might do if he "took to art," The Interlude (167), A Frolic (188), and The Necklace (196). Albert Moore's Classic Figure (204) is an extremely fine and mannered drawing of a stalwart girl in quasi-classic draperies, and J. Holland's La Grande Horloge, Rouen (211), is good and sound. The last, if not the noblest set of drawings, consists of not fewer than fifteen Turners, the most noteworthy of which are Richmond, Yorkshire (239); Minehead (245); the Girtin-like Brecon Castle and Bridge (246); The Valley of Jehoshaphat (247), which, like some of its neighbours, has been engraved; Zurich (248); and A Watermill (256). Besides these the student will find capital examples by J. Varley, S. Prout, G. F. Robson, G. Chambers, G. A. Fripp, J. Linnell, J. F. Lewis, Mr. MacWhirter, Sir J. E. Millais (see 189), Sir J. E. Poynter (193), J. Constable, and T. Danby.

At the Fine-Art Society's Gallery are to be seen a number of careful and pleasing, if not transcendently interesting drawings by Mr. A. W. Rimington, illustrating his "Wanderings in Italy." Of these the visitor should look at The Towers of San Francesco, Bologna (4); Courtyard of the Palazzo Bevilacqua, Bologna (7); The Lagoons near Torcello (14), which is exceptionally artistic and attractive; At Amalfi (17); San Domenico, Bologna (21); The Palazzo Pubblico, Vicenza (43); Via Pellicini, Verona (76); Facciata del Duomo, Siena (85); In the Piazza d'Erbe, Verona (100); and, the best of all, Drawbridge at Mantua (108).

At the Dowdeswell Galleries may be seen a number of highly effective and deftly drawn sketches by Mr. J. Aumonier of "Old Brighton Pier."

POMPEY'S PILLAR AT ALEXANDRIA.

I need not insist how completely the origin and history of this famous monument have been a mystery to the learned. It stands in a most prominent position, it has ever been a landmark to sailors, it bears upon the west face of its huge basement stone an inscription from an unknown eparch of Egypt, probably called Posidius, to the Emperor Diocletian. This is all that is certain, and so far even the name of the eparch has been disputed. The conjecture Pompeius (for which there is insufficient room) has caused the whole to be called Pompey's Pillar. Most critics have assumed that this gigantic work was actually set up about 303 A.D. by an obscure magistrate to the emperor who had just punished Egypt for its revolt with relentless severity. But he had also, it seems, given a grant of corn to the starving populace of Alexandria—hence the dedication:—

Τον [τιμ]ιωτατον αυτοκρατορα
Τον πολιουχον Αλεξανδρειας
Διοκλητιανοντον ανεικητον
Πο[....]ος επαρχος Αιγυπτου.

But the erection of such a monolith points to some greater occasion, and to wealthier governors of Egypt. Hence there has always been some suspicion that it was only rededicated to Diocletian and belongs to an older period. A careful survey of the pillar makes this almost certain. The capital, a bastard form between Egyptian and Corinthian, is too large for the shaft; the stone, though of the same kind (Aswan granite), is browner, and from some other part of the quarry. We know from the sailors who saw the top in 1733 that there was the foot of a bronze (gilt?) statue still there. All the indications point to the dedication, the capital, and the statue being added to the monument in honour of Diocletian.

But what was it before that date? The great block which forms the base of the monument is not set on the live rock, but on a foundation of much smaller and various stones (granite, limestone, &c.), which are put together without art or care for appearance. This foundation, now uncovered, was evidently meant to be hidden by a platform of earth, on which the great base seemed to rest. Among the stones utilized for the foundation are some taken from Pharaonic monuments, and showing cartouches of Seti I., Psamtik II., &c. It is most unfortunate that no record has been kept of the occasional repairing of this foundation, which has often been disturbed in search of treasure.

But if the date be indeed that of the Arsinoeion, as Dr. Botti suggests, a new light is thrown upon the passage in Pliny which has long perplexed the learned, and to which Admiral Blomfield called my attention in this connexion. Here it is (xxxvi. 14, sq.). Pliny the Elder, after describing the greatest of all the obelisks in Alexandria, which was set up by Ptolemy Philadelphus to his wife, eighty-five cubits high, and by the architect Satyrus, adds: "Inde eum (obeliscum) navalibus incommodum Maximus quidem præfectus Ægypti transtulit in forum, reciso cacumine, dum vult fastigium addere auratum, quod postea omisit."

There was no forum in Alexandria, and what has become of this mighty obelisk? All the others which Pliny describes in the same passage are still extant. Why should such a thing interfere with dockyards? I need not pile up difficulties. I propose to alter completely the sense, or rather to make sense of the passage, in the following way: "Inde eum navalibus in commodum, Maximus, &c., transtulit in pharum," &c.

"Navalia" is commonly used by Pliny for shipping, and Maximus wished to set up a beacon on this obelisk, whose gilded top would glitter and do the service in the day done by the lighthouse of Sostratus in the night. I had also thought of φανον, the Greek word for a beacon, before the Pharos gave its name to all lighthouses. Thus the proposed gilding of the top acquires its meaning, and when the obelisk had stood for many years with its mutilated top, the eparch in Diocletian's time undertook two further changes: (1) he set a capital with a gilded statue on the top, and to correspond with this (2) he rounded the four-sided monolith to make a Corinthian pillar. So the great obelisk of Philadelphus has assumed its present form. There is a bad flaw on the south-east side, which seems to me only to have been discovered when the stone was thus cut down. But I will not extend this long statement.

J. P. Mahaffy.

SALES.

Messrs. Puttick & Simpson sold a number of scarce engravings, chiefly of the eighteenth century, on the 24th inst. Amongst the best prices realized were Lady Elizabeth Foster, 74*l.*, and Lady Smythe and Children, 56*l.*, both after Reynolds by Bartolozzi; The Fortune-teller, after Reynolds, 46*l.* 10*s.*; Lady Hamilton, after Romney, 49*l.*; Nerissa, by J. R. Smith, 53*l.*; Courtship and Matrimony, after Williams by Jukes, 48*l.* 10*s.* The total of the day's sale (180 lots) amounted to 1,278*l.*

At Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods's, on the 20th inst., the late Mr. R. Beavis's drawing of "Green Sussex fading into blue, with one grey glimpse of sea," brought 75*l.*

The sale of the drawings in chalks, pastels, and water colours collected by MM. de Goncourt, which occurred at the Hôtel Drouot during the last week, produced a total of 695,729 francs. On the whole, the prices were very high. The largest sums were given as follows: Baudouin, L'Épouse Indiscrète, 25,100 francs. Boucher, Académie de Femme, 18,500; Femme vêtue à l'Espagnole, 10,100. Fragonard, Portrait de Rosalie Fragonard, 14,500; Dites donc, s'il vous plaît! 12,000; La Culbute, 18,100; Des Cascatelles, 17,500; Enfants jouant dans une Métairie, 14,500. Hoin, Madame Dugazon dans le rôle de Nina, 19,000. Moreau le jeune, La Revue du Roi à la Plaine des Sablons, 29,000. Pater, L'Amour et le Badinage, 3,900. Portail, Portrait du Peintre, 5,500; Une Dame en Grand Panier, 4,100; Le Musicien, 3,150. St. Aubin, Portrait d'Augustin de St. Aubin, 15,100; Au moins soyez Discret! 18,500. Watteau, Figure de Printemps, 24,100; Un Mezzetin Dansant, 19,000; Feuille d'Études, 17,500.

Fine-Art Gossip.

The exhibition of Lord Leighton's pictures at the Royal Academy is to be closed on Monday, the 15th prox.

Mr. Watts, in honour of whose eightieth birthday Mr. Swinburne has contributed a sonnet in another column, came to London the other day for a very short period. He is in excellent health, and has now returned to the country. On Tuesday, his eightieth birthday, he was presented with an address of congratulation signed by at least two hundred eminent men and women of our time, including all the members of the Royal Academy.

The exhibition at the rooms of the Fine-Art Society of drawings by G. Du Maurier, to which we have already referred, will be opened to the public on Monday next; the private view occurs to-day (Saturday).

We briefly mentioned last week the gift of Millais's 'Yeoman of the Guard' to the National Gallery. That admirable work is now on a screen in the British Section of the Gallery. In May, 1877, when it was at the Academy, we said: "Mr. Millais's 'Yeoman of the Guard' (52) will be one of the attractions of the season. It is a life-size, seated figure, the whole nearly in profile to our left; the view has been adopted probably as that best suited to the motive of the subject, severe and simple as that motive is. The yeoman wears the vivid scarlet state dress of the corps, which is trimmed with black and gold, and bears the royal initials and emblems on his broad but flat chest in bold embroideries. His thin grey beard rests on the ruff which encloses his neck; on his head is the quaint cap of black velvet bound with gay ribands, the showy tints of which contrast oddly with the faded features and hollow contours of the face, its seared and serious eyes. He has a staff in one hand, a packet of papers in the other, and seemingly waits orders to go on a long journey, doing his duty the while in this world. Technically speaking, all will delight in the painting of the red dress, the flesh, and the cap." We may add that Millais himself sanctioned our interpretation of the motive of his picture. Besides being at the Academy, this splendid work was shown at the Exposition Universelle, Paris, in 1878, where it attracted the attention of every artist, no matter of what country, who saw it there; it was No. 36 at the Grosvenor Gallery with other Millaises in 1886, and was in the rooms of the Fine-Art Society in 1881. It was in obedience to her late husband's wish that Mrs. Hodgkinson, Millais's half-sister, gave it to the nation.

Many surmises have been afloat of late about the destination of the Hertford Collection, but it is now definitely announced that it has been bequeathed by Lady Wallace to the nation. Every visitor to recent Academy Winter Exhibitions is well aware that it contains a very large number of admirable pictures of the best schools. In 1872 the whole of it was lent by Sir Richard Wallace to the Bethnal Green Museum, and while there it was criticized at some length in these columns. It counts among its Reynoldses 'Perdita,' 'The Duke of Queensberry' (i. e., "Old Q."), 'Miss Bowles,' 'Nelly O'Brien,' 'Mrs. Carnac,' 'The Strawberry Girl' (Rogers's version), 'Lady E. Seymour-Conway,' and 'Mrs. Braddyll' (Lord C. Townshend's); 'Miss Boothy' and 'A Lady,' by Gainsborough; and of Van Dycks, 'Wife of Philippe le Roy' (the King of Holland's) and 'Philippe le Roy' (same). There are also Hobbema's fine 'Landscape,' dated "1663"; the 'Rainbow' Landscape by Rubens, 'Helena Forman,' and other Rubenses; seven works by Berchem, Guardis, De Heems, two Landseers, a Le Duc, three Leyses, six Metsus, Murillos, Hogarths, Ostades, eleven Rembrandts, Jan Steens, Teniers, Terburgs, Turners, Velazquezes, Vernets, Watteaus, Wilkies, and Wouvermans; three by Mlle. R. Bonheur, including 'Highland Sheep'; thirty-eight Boningtons; a 'Portrait of an Italian Lady,' by Bronzino; 'Boar Asleep,' by Brouwer; seventeen Canalettos, all of Venice and good; an Alonzo Cano; two Claudes; three of Gonzales Coques's groups of portraits; thirty-four pictures of high merit by Decamps; fifteen by Delaroche, some of which were lately at Burlington House; five by Fragonard; twenty-two Greuzes, some of which are of the first water; a superb 'Cavalier,' by F. Hals; two De Hooghes, one of them being the famous 'Woman peeling Apples'; 'Guard of the Hareem' and 'Draught Players,' by M. Gérôme; and fifteen Meissoniers, among them 'Polichinelle,' 'Connoisseurs,' 'Visitors,' his first contribution to the Salon, 1834, and 'Murderers waiting their Victim.' These names and the numbers attached to them will give some idea of the stupendous wealth of this world-renowned collection.

In consequence of the interest excited by the exhibition of drawings in water colour by the late Alfred William Hunt at the Burlington Fine-Arts Club, the Committee have decided that it shall remain open until Sunday, March 14th, that is to say, a fortnight longer than originally arranged.

There is some talk of an exhibition of Mr. Hunt's drawings being formed at Liverpool.

The death is announced at Madrid of M. Luis de Madrazo (brother of F. de Madrazo), who was born at the Spanish capital in 1825, and studied under his father José. He painted historical and anecdotic themes, the most important of which are 'Pelayo at Covadonga' and 'The Funeral of St. Cecilia.'

The Chronique des Arts of the 20th inst. contains the first portion of an important examination, by M. S. Reinach, of the details of the discovery of the Venus of Milo. This article is characteristically minute and thorough.

The French Department for Public Instruction is preparing a topographic plan of ancient Carthage, to form the first part of an archæological atlas of Tunis. M. Cagnat, M. Philippe Berger, and M. Clermont-Ganneau have been appointed to accomplish this work.

The Archæological Commission of the province of Bari, in South Italy, will publish in a few weeks the first volume of a 'Codice Diplomatico Barese,' containing the parchments of the Cathedral of Bari written from the tenth to the twelfth century A.D. The following volumes will be devoted to the historic documents of the archives of the province, amongst which those of the celebrated church of St. Nicolas and of the towns of Giovinazzo and Terlizzi are particularly important.

A Correspondent writes:—

"I send you the earliest news of a very precious discovery at Nocera, in Umbria, not far from Gualdo Tadino. A landowner has found on his property the body of a Suabian [?] chieftain lying on an iron camp-bed. Much gold decoration adorns his armour and helmet, and there is also a golden Maltese cross on the breast. It is supposed that he may have been a member of the suite of Frederick II. (twelfth century) during his retreat after the siege of Assisi. The handle of the sword and the end of the scabbard are in massive gold."

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

St. James's Hall.—Henschel Concerts. Messrs. Greene and Borwick's Recital.
Queen's Hall.—Symphony Concerts.
St. James's Hall.—Popular Concerts.

As nearly as possible on the anniversary of Wagner's death Mr. Henschel always gives an In Memoriam concert, consisting of selections from the master's works and Beethoven's 'Eroica' Symphony. This took place on Thursday evening last week, the Wagnerian excerpts being the Good Friday music from 'Parsifal,' the Prelude and Death Song from 'Tristan und Isolde,' the whole of the final scene from 'Die Walküre,' and the Walkürenritt. The vocal parts in the great duet were well sustained by Madame Marie Duma as Brünnhilde and Mr. Charles Clark as Wotan. The latter artist is an American baritone with a pleasant and well-trained, though not very powerful voice. The orchestral playing was about up to the average at these concerts.

There was much of interest in the selection of songs at Messrs. Plunket Greene and Leonard Borwick's recital on the afternoon of the next day, many unfamiliar lyrics being given. Among them were Bach's 'Begleuckte Heerde,' Brahms's 'Todessehnen,' Schumann's 'The Hero,' Prof. Villiers Stanford's setting of the clown's three songs from 'Twelfth Night,' and songs by Mr. H. Walthew, Mr. Augustus Barratt, and Mr. Lemprière Pringle. All these were finely sung by Mr. Plunket Greene, though signs of fatigue were manifest towards the close of the recital. Pianists seem to have evinced a sudden liking for Brahms's very clever Variations and Fugue on a Theme by Handel, Op. 24, which Mr. Borwick played extremely well, as he did some pieces by Chopin, Schumann, and Mendelssohn. The recital was in every respect artistically successful.

The third Queen's Hall Symphony Concert last Saturday afternoon was mainly devoted to the compositions of Tschaïkowsky, the most important feature being the noble 'Symphonie Pathétique,' which grows more and more upon the hearer every time it is performed, and on this occasion it was beautifully interpreted by Mr. Henry J. Wood's orchestra. Another enjoyable portion of the programme was the suite of several brief and light, piquant movements from the ballet 'Casse-Noisette,' first given in London October 17th last year, at a Queen's Hall Promenade Concert. Less agreeable, on a first hearing, was the overture to the morbid and tragic drama 'L'Orage' by Alexander Ostrovsky, first produced in 1859, and after thirty years given at the Théâtre Beaumarchais in Paris. This is Russian in the strongest degree, with snatches of peaceful melody and orchestration, but, on the whole, it is barbaric, and, if appropriate to the subject, not very pleasant as abstract music. The introduction of Bach's Chaconne in D minor orchestrated by Raff was an artistic error. Many works by the old masters need retouching in order to make them acceptable to present-day amateurs, but Bach wrote his Chaconne for violin unaccompanied, and there was no occasion to interfere with it as Mendelssohn and Schumann with their pianoforte accompaniments, and Raff with his certainly effective instrumentation, have done.

Schubert's magnificent String Quintet in C, Op. 163, was repeated at last Saturday's Popular Concert, and the only other concerted item was Mozart's Duet in G for violin and viola, beautifully played by Lady Halle and Mr. Gibson. This work was composed as an act of kindness by Mozart. Michael Haydn was very ill at Salzburg, and could not write some duets ordered by the unlovable prince-archbishop who ruled the place. Mozart came to the rescue and penned two duets, the origin of which was kept a secret from the autocratic dignitary. Otto Jahn in his eloquent monograph says: "These two duets show no signs of hasty composition, but are worked out with evident affection, no doubt from desire to do credit to himself and his friend." Madame Lena Law sang excellently Handel's air "Cui vive amante" from his once successful, but now forgotten opera 'Poro,' and Gounod's song 'The Worker.' Two little pianoforte pieces by Schumann and Rubinstein were placed at the end of the programme, and were well played by Miss Adela Verne.

The postponed performance of Sgambati's Quartet in C sharp minor, Op. 17, took place on Monday evening, and it must be noted that the work did not make a favourable impression. As a rule, it is unjust to speak dogmatically concerning an elaborate composition on a first hearing, but in the present instance there need be no hesitation. As the programme annotator observes, the quartet abounds in varied tempi, rhythms, figuration, and structure. These, however, do not make beauty, nor compensate for a laboured and restless style of utterance. Signor Sgambati seems ambitious to rival the great masters of Germany in works built on classical lines; but in the C sharp minor Quartet he proves himself unequal to the task, and he might do well to adopt a lighter and more graceful Italian style. Mozart's beautiful Pianoforte Trio in E, No. 6, was a welcome relief. Miss Adela Verne should surely have selected some less hackneyed piece for her pianoforte solo than Mendelssohn's Andante and Rondo Capriccioso, Op. 14, which every schoolgirl plays, or thinks she can play. Mr. Thomas Meux was commendable in songs by Gluck and Gounod.

Musical Gossip.

Mr. F. H. Cowen's picturesque and earnestly written cantata, 'The Transfiguration,' was performed for the first time in Manchester at Sir Charles Halle's concert on Thursday last week, with Madame Medora Henson, Miss Marian McKenzie, and Messrs. Edward Lloyd and G. Holmes in the principal parts. Purcell's 'Te Deum' in D was also rendered for the first time at these concerts, and, in fact, the whole programme was of a religious character.

The Delegates of the Clarendon Press have arranged for the publication of a series of five books on musical history, to be issued under the editorship of Mr. W. H. Hadow, of Worcester College. The first, dealing with the ecclesiastical period, has been undertaken by Prof. H. E. Wooldridge; Dr. C. Hubert H. Parry deals with the seventeenth century, and Mr. J. A. Fuller-Maitland with the age of Bach and Handel. The editor has in preparation the fourth volume, treating of the Viennese School and its times; and Mr. E. Dannreuther will close the series with an account of the romantic movement.

According to the annual report of the Wagner Society (London Branch) the number of members is gradually diminishing, as we expected it would, for there is no longer any necessity for speaking in trumpet tongues concerning the Bayreuth master. But subscribers should remain, and if possible increase their numbers, until the issue of the English translation of Wagner's remarkable prose works is completed; and then the society may well dissolve, having fulfilled its duties worthily.

The "Böhmische Streichquartett," which gave two classical chamber concerts in the Queen's Small Hall on Friday last week and Tuesday this week, has won much favour abroad, and the verdict of continental musicians has already been fully ratified in London. At the first concert the perfection of the ensemble in spirit and unity of expression was fully revealed in Beethoven's Quartet in F from the Lobkowitz set, Op. 18, Schubert's in D minor, and Dvoràk's in G.

Even more successful was the second concert, the central feature of which consisted of Smetana's Quartet in E minor, in which all the characteristics of Slavonic music were revealed with the utmost intensity. The distinctly national style of the interpretation gave quite a new colour to a work with which we were previously well acquainted. Beethoven's Quartet in F, Op. 59, No. 1, and Schubert's in A minor were also performed at this concert. The Bohemian artists will give a third concert at St. James's Hall on the 8th prox.

Miss Marie Motto, who held her first concert in St. James's Hall on Monday afternoon, showed that she has amply developed her talents as a violinist since she first appeared in public two years ago. Though not very powerful, her tone is pure, and her intonation perfectly accurate. These qualities were fully evinced in Beethoven's 'Kreutzer' Sonata, in which she had the valuable assistance of Mr. Leonard Borwick, and in two movements from Lalo's 'Symphonie Espagnole,' Op. 21. Mr. Plunket Greene sang Schubert's 'Der Erl König' and Prof. Stanford's setting of the clown's three songs from 'Twelfth Night' with much expression; and the concert concluded with Brahms's Pianoforte Quartet in G minor, Op. 25, in which the instrumental artists above named were associated with Messrs. Alfred Hobday and R. Purcell Jones.

The young violinist Miss Eileen O'Moore, who ventured on an orchestral concert on Tuesday afternoon at St. James's Hall, is a highly promising executant. She played with force as well as refinement items by Ernst, Spohr, and Tschaïkowsky, and will be heard again with pleasure. Mr. G. H. Betjemann, who conducted, had his orchestra well in hand, and due justice was done to the overtures to 'Oberon' and 'Rosamunde,' and Mr. F. H. Cowen's 'Four English Dances in the Olden Style.'

The Gompertz String Quartet produced at its sixth and last chamber concert in the Queen's Small Hall on Wednesday evening a brief but interesting programme. Tschaïkowsky's Quartet in E flat minor was repeated by desire, and most admirably played by Messrs. Richard Gompertz, Haydn Inwards, Emil Kreuz, and Charles Ould, as were two movements from Raff's Quartet in D minor, Op. 77, No. 1. The last item in the scheme was the great Fugue in B flat of Beethoven, Op. 133, which was originally the finale to the quartet in the same key; but Beethoven withdrew it and substituted a much lighter final movement. Mr. Hayden Bailey was an agreeable vocalist at this concert.

Miss Marie Olson, Miss Ethel Barns, and Mr. Charles Phillips gave a pianoforte, song, and violin recital in St. James's Hall on Thursday afternoon. The two artists first named essayed Brahms's Sonata in D minor for piano and violin, and Mr. Charles Phillips, a pleasant baritone, did well in various songs by Purcell, Handel, Tschaikowsky, Jensen, and various other composers, ancient and modern. Miss Ethel Barns played Bach's Chaconne for Violin with agreeable purity of tone and intonation.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Sun.	Orchestral Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall
—	National Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
—	Queen's Hall String Quartet Concert, 7.30
Mon.	Mrs Henry Wylde's Matinée Musicale, 2.30, St. George's Hall
—	Royal Academy of Music Students' Concert, 3, St. James's Hall
—	Popular Concert, 8, St. James's Hall
—	Messrs. Ross and Moore's Recital of Ensemble Pianoforte Music, 8, Queen's Hall
Tues.	Mark Hambourg's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Queen's Hall
—	Miss Kuhe's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall
—	Miss H. V. Sloman's Chamber Concert, 8, West Norwood Public Hall
—	English College of Music Concert, 8.30, Queen's Small Hall.
Wed.	Queen's Hall Choral Society, Rossini's 'Stabat Mater' and Mendelssohn's 'Lobgesang,' 3
—	Mr. Tobias Matthay's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	St. James's Hall Ballad (Sacred) Concert, 8
—	Royal Choral Society, 'The Redemption,' 8, Albert Hall.
—	London Ballad (Sacred) Concert, 8, Queen's Hall
Thurs.	Herr Theodor Werner's Violin Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Herr Brousil's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall
Fri.	Messrs. Plunket Greene and Leonard Borwick's Recital, 3, St. James's Hall
—	Mr. Arnold Dolmetsch's Concert on Old Instruments, 9, No. 6, Keppel Street, Bloomsbury.
Sat.	Crystal Palace Concert, 3.
—	Popular Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Queen's Hall Choral Society, 'Samson et Dalila,' 3.
—	Mr. Ernest Mead's Recital, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Promenade Concert, 8, Queen's Hall

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

Court. — Afternoon Performance: 'Mariana,' by José Echegaray. Translated by James Graham.

Where Miss Elizabeth Robins is is the Independent Theatre. Thus, though no public announcement is put forth connecting with that institution for the cult of the sombre and the purveyance of the dismal the performances at the Court of Echegaray's 'Mariana,' these may be and are contemplated as under its patronage. Regarded in this light, they may count among the happiest of its experiments. No part specially suited to the fair actress who is its hierophant is provided, nor is there one being among the specimens of modern society in Madrid in whom it is easy to feel any poignant interest. Still the play, which has respectable claims as literature, constitutes an intellectual and a fairly stimulating entertainment. Its most notable feature is its ingenuity. It is always theatrical and never dramatic, marvellously clever and wholly unconvincing. Spanish criticism speaks of 'Mariana' as false, an arraignment scarcely merited, since it does not seek to deceive or pretend to be other than it is. We have no more right to blame it for falsehood than we have to censure the actress for the make-up without which she cannot face the fierce light of the stage. It may rather be regarded as insincere. As a problem play it is incomplete, a study after the guise of Dumas fils rather than that of Balzac. Echegaray seeks to portray a heroine of the type of Gilberte de Sartorys, whose nature in her own despite is transformed by passion. Love comes unbidden, unwelcomed, unsought. Step by step he is resisted, but his triumph is final and fatal. Is the woman who at the close expiates by a death she has voluntarily challenged an uncommitted offence the same whose delight at the outset was in the exercise of empire and the infliction of torture? Possibly. In a novel her conversion might be exhibited. What is shown us in the play does not satisfy. We understand the sorrowful memories in the girl's mind of her hurried abduction by her mother; her bitter experience in that London against which she rails, the climate of which is, perhaps, worse than all others except that of her native Madrid; and her recoil when she finds that the man whose clasp has roused all that slumbered deepest down in her nature is the son of him she has had most cause to curse. Her disorder and tumult are obvious and finely shown, and her resolution to die at her husband's hands rather than share her mother's sin presents a certain aspect of nobility. It leaves us not greatly moved, however, since in our souls we do not believe it. Against the extravagance of putting on the stage a woman twice married and unpossessed it is needless to protest. Not greatly impressed are we, moreover, with this new Giles de Retz, Don Pablo, who marries women for the purpose of killing them. Other characters are conventional, and Don Castulo, the virtuoso, is both conventional and tedious. Doña Clara has scarcely a whiff of Cyprienne in 'Divorçons,' but Arturo has a distinct suggestion of le beau Adhémar. One or two parts were finely played. In the later scenes Miss Elizabeth Robins realized fully the character of Mariana, so far as we ourselves understand it. Her fevered change of moods—the strife begot by the possession of the senses and the mutiny of her moral and intellectual nature—were admirably shown, and the delivery was faultless throughout. In the early scenes a lighter style, as of Signora Duse in 'Mirandolina,' would have been effective if only for the sake of contrast. Mr. Hermann Vezin's performance of Don Felipe, the père noble, was exemplary in all respects.

Dramatic Gossip.

It is not often that a theatrical performance is the subject of a question in Parliament. Admiral Field has, however, drawn attention in the House of Commons to the presentation at the Avenue of 'Nelson's Enchantress,' and has given notice of further investigation of the subject. As a matter of news Admiral Field's action may be recorded. It does not seem to have much significance.

In consequence of Miss Beatrice Ferrar being engaged at the Globe, her part in 'Sweet Nancy' at the Court has been taken by a younger sister, who acts under the name of Miss Marion Bishop, and is scarcely to be distinguished from her predecessor.

The management of Drury Lane Theatre will be in the hands, as has been said, of Mr. Arthur Collins, who will be backed by a limited company with a capital of 100,000*l*.

Mr. Bancroft, whose readings from Dickens have prospered beyond anticipation, bringing in for charities no less a sum than 3,000*l*., contemplates a new series for next winter.

'My Aunt's Advice' has now been inserted in the bill at the Strand.

'The Sorrows of Satan' is this evening withdrawn from the Shaftesbury, which house will now close.

The Princess's Theatre was offered by auction at Tokenhouse Yard. The reserve price was not reached, and the house was bought in at 20,500*l*.

A new lever de rideau entitled 'By-Ways' is promised at the Comedy Theatre.

To Correspondents.—F. M.—J. R. K.—L. J. R.—L. L.—E. M. A.—C. S.—R. G. S.—W. G. S.—E. R.—received.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

READY ON MONDAY,
FIRST ISSUE AT HALF-A-CROWN.

WOLFENBERG.
By Mr. WILLIAM BLACK.
Forming the latest addition to the New Uniform Edition of this popular Novelist's Works.
TO BE FOLLOWED BY MR. WILLIAM BLACK'S
The HANDSOME HUMES. [April 1.
HIGHLAND COUSINS. [May 1.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITIONS OF
TWO NOVELS BY ALFRED CLARK.
Uniform crown 8vo. cloth, 2*s.* 6*d.* each.

A DARK PLACE OF THE EARTH. [Ready.
"Fresh, powerful, and extraordinarily vivid in presentment."—Athenæum.

THE
FINDING OF LOT'S WIFE.
[Immediately.
"A very fine piece of imaginative work—a night's entertainment of modern Arabian adventure."—Scotsman.

SECOND EDITION AT ALL BOOKSELLERS.'

JOSEPH THOMSON, the African Explorer. By his Brother, the Rev. J. B. THOMSON, of Greenock. With Six Maps and many Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.*
"Joseph Thomson has a front place in the ranks of African explorers beside his countrymen Mungo Park and David Livingstone.....A worthy and substantial memorial of a noble character."—Scotsman.

The RUINED CITIES of CEYLON: being a Description of Anuradhapura and Polonaruwa. By HENRY W. CAVE, M.A., Queen's College, Oxford. Illustrated with 50 Full-Page Woodburygravures, from Photographs taken by the Author. Small 4to. Roxburghe, gilt top, 38*s.* net.

HEROIC JAPAN: an Authentic and Complete Description of the War between China and Japan, from the Inception of Hostilities up to the Treaty of Shimonoseki. By Dr. F. W. EASTLAKE and Mr. YAMADA YOSHI-AKI, President of the Chautauquan Association of Japan. With 3 Maps and numerous Illustrations. 8vo. 400 pp. 18*s.*

SHORT STUDIES in PHYSICAL SCIENCE. By VAUGHAN CORNISH, M.Sc. Crown 8vo. 230 pp. 5*s.*
"The information is thoroughly sound."
Manchester Guardian.
"Both readable and instructive."—Scotsman.

FOURTH EDITION (SIXTH THOUSAND).
HEALTH and CONDITION in the ACTIVE and the SEDENTARY. By Dr. N. E. YORKE-DAVIES, Author of 'Foods for the Fat.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*
"Those who desire a long and healthy life will perhaps find their best means of attaining it in the study and observance of such rules as are laid down here.....Practical guide to 'Health and Condition.'"—Morning Post.

READY NEXT WEEK, PRICE 3d.,
The FEBRUARY MONTHLY PART of
THE ENGLISH CATALOGUE OF BOOKS FOR 1897.
Giving FULL TITLES, classified under Author and Subject in one strict Alphabet, with particulars of the Size, Price, and Name of Publisher, of the Books issued in Great Britain and Ireland during the Month of FEBRUARY.

NOW READY, PRICE ONE SHILLING
SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.
MARCH NUMBER.
Contents
ESMOND and the PRINCE. Drawn by Howard Pyle. SCENES from the GREAT NOVELS. III. Engraved by Florian. Frontispiece.
LONDON: as SEEN by C. D. GIBSON. II. LONDON AUDIENCES. Written and illustrated by Mr. Gibson. (The Second of Six Illustrated Papers.)
The BANDERIUM of HUNGARY. Richard Harding Davis. Illustrated by Drawings after Photographs.
The MASTER of the LITHOGRAPH—J. McNEILL WHISTLER. Elizabeth Robins Pennell. With Reproductions from Twelve of Mr. Whistler's Lithographs.
The STORY of a PLAY. Chaps. 1-3. W. D. Howells. (To be continued.)
The BUSINESS of a FACTORY. Philip G. Hubert, jun. The CONDUCT of GREAT BUSINESSES. Third Paper. Illustrated.
SOLDIERS of FORTUNE. Chaps. 5-8. Richard Harding Davis. Full-Page Illustration by C. D. Gibson. (To be continued.)
A LOOK into the GULF. Charles Edwin Markham.
The ART of TRAVEL. First Paper. Lewis Morris Iddings. BY LAND. Illustrated.
CUPID STUNG by the BEE. Elizabethan Songs. IV.
LIVER'S RESPONSIBILITY. Wolcott Le Clear Beard.
&c. &c.

London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Ltd.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

HISTORY in FACT and FICTION. By the Hon. A. S. G. Canning, Author of 'Lord Macaulay: Essayist and Historian,' 'The Philosophy of Charles Dickens,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"An intensely interesting book.....I do not think that I ever saw the difficulties of the Eastern question in so clear a light as I did after reading the short chapter which Mr. Canning devotes to it."—Pall Mall Gazette.

An ACCOUNT of the LIFE and WORKS of DR. ROBERT WATT, Author of the 'Bibliotheca Britannica.' By JAMES FINLAYSON, M.D., Physician to the Glasgow Western Infirmary and the Royal Hospital for Sick Children; Hon. Librarian to the Faculty of Physicians and Surgeons, Glasgow, &c. With a Portrait. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

FOUR NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

The YOUNG CLANROY: a Romance of the '45. By the Rev. COSMO G. LANG. Crown 8vo. 6s.

OUT of the DARKNESS. By Percy Fendall and Fox Russell. Crown 8vo. 6s.

GILBERT MURRAY. By A. E. Houghton. Crown 8vo. 6s

"The story is gracefully written, and never fails to prove interesting."—Scotsman.

"Gilbert Murray is a true hero of romance of the old type."—Glasgow Herald.

UNDER the CIRCUMSTANCES. By Archie Armstrong. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"A capital romance, exciting, lively, and sensational to exactly the right degree."—Black and White.

"There is not a dull page in it. A taking manner is allied to an unusual amount of interest and ingenuity in unravelling the threads of a complicated plot."—Morning Post.

THROUGH LONDON SPECTACLES. By Constance Milman. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Pleasant reading.....Delightful to leisure over at odd half-hours."—Glasgow Herald.

The AGE of the DESPOTS. By the late John Addington SYMONDS. Large crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. [Shortly.

 This is Volume I. of a NEW and CHEAPER EDITION of "The RENAISSANCE in ITALY," in 7 vols. large crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. each. The remaining Volumes will be published at intervals.

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE for March. Price One Shilling.

CONTENTS.

IN KEDAR'S TENTS. Chaps. 7-9. By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN, Author of 'The Sowers,' &c.
The ENGLISHMAN'S CALENDAR (March).
The DEATH of QUEEN ELIZABETH: an Anniversary Study. By Sidney Lee.
PICTURESQUENESS in HISTORY. By the Bishop of London.
The IRISH SCHOOL of ORATORY. By J. F. Taylor, Q.C.
TEN DAYS at COURT: the Emperor Nicholas's Visit. A Diary kept by the late Hon. Sir Charles Murray, P.C., June, 1844.
TWO AFRICAN DAYS' ENTERTAINMENTS. By Miss Mary Kingsley.
ON the SPUR of OCCASION. By E. and H. Heron.
NOTES on LORD LEIGHTON. By Giovanni Costa.
FAMOUS TRIALS: the Queen against Dr. Pritchard. By J. B. Atlay.
A CADDIE'S TRAGEDY. By Horace G. Hutchinson.
PAGES from a PRIVATE DIARY.

POPULAR NOVELS.

EACH WORK COMPLETE IN ONE VOLUME, CROWN 8vo. 6s.

RODNEY STONE. With 8 Full-Page Illustrations. By A. CONAN DOYLE, Author of 'The White Company,' &c.

The WHITE COMPANY. By A. Conan DOYLE. SEVENTEENTH EDITION.

CLEG KELLY, Arab of the City. By S. R. CROCKETT, Author of 'The Raiders,' &c. THIRTY-SECOND THOUSAND.

The SOWERS. By Henry Seton MERRIMAN, Author of 'With Edged Tools,' &c. THIRTEENTH EDITION.

The MARTYRED FOOL. By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of 'Rainbow Gold,' 'Aunt Rachel,' 'Joseph's Coat,' &c.

SIR GEORGE TRESSADY. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD. THIRD EDITION.

MARCELLA. By Mrs. Humphry WARD. FIFTEENTH EDITION.

ROBERT ELSMERE. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD. TWENTY-SEVENTH EDITION.

The HISTORY of DAVID GRIEVE. By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD. NINTH EDITION.

GERALD EVERSLEY'S FRIENDSHIP: a Study in Real Life. By the Rev. J. E. C. WELLDON, Head Master of Harrow School. FOURTH EDITION.

CHEAP EDITIONS OF STANDARD WORKS.

Handy Volumes, printed in clear bold type, on good paper. Each Work complete in One Volume.

Fcap. 8vo. picture boards, 2s. each; or limp red cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN.

ITH EDGED TOOLS. | FROM ONE GENERATION
he SLAVE of the LAMP. | to ANOTHER.

By the Author of 'MOLLY BAWN.'

OLLY BAWN. | PHYLLIS.
RS. GEOFFREY. | PORTIA.
RY FAIRY LILIAN. | ROSSMOYNE.
ORIS. | BEAUTY'S DAUGHTERS.
REEN PLEASURE and GREY GRIEF.
AITH and UNFAITH. | LADY BRANKSMERE.
DYS, LORD BERRESFORD, and Other Tales.
NDERCURRENTS.

By GEORGE GISSING.

EMOS: a Story of Socialist Life in England.
LIFE'S MORNING. | THYRZA.
he NETHER WORLD. | NEW GRUB STREET.

By the Author of 'MEHALAH.'

MEHALAH: a Story of the Salt Marshes.
COURT ROYAL. | The GAVEROCKS.
JOHN HERRING. | RICHARD CABLE.

By W. E. NORRIS.

HEAPS of MONEY. | MATRIMONY.
MADEMOISELLE DE MERSAC.
NO NEW THING. | ADRIAN VIDAL.

By HAMILTON AIDÉ.

IN THAT STATE of LIFE. | PENRUDDOCKE.
MORALS and MYSTERIES.
MR. and MRS. FAULCONBRIDGE.

By the Author of 'JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN.'

ROMANTIC TALES. | DOMESTIC STORIES.

STANDARD EDITIONS.

W. M. THACKERAY'S WORKS.
THE STANDARD EDITION.
26 vols. large 8vo. 10s. 6d. each.
This Edition contains many additional Illustrations.

W. M. THACKERAY'S WORKS.
THE LIBRARY EDITION.
26 vols. large crown 8vo. handsomely bound in cloth, 9l.; or half-russia, marbled edges, 13l. 13s.
With Illustrations by the Author, Richard Doyle, and Frederic Walker.
 The Volumes are sold separately, in cloth, 7s. 6d. each.

W. M. THACKERAY'S WORKS.
THE POPULAR EDITION.
13 vols. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece to each vol., scarlet cloth, gilt top, 3l. 5s.; or in half-morocco gilt, 5l. 10s.
 The Volumes are sold separately, in green cloth, 5s. each.

W. M. THACKERAY'S WORKS.
CHEAPER ILLUSTRATED EDITION.
26 vols. uniformly bound in cloth, 4l. 11s.; or handsomely bound in half-morocco, 8l. 8s.
Containing nearly all the small Woodcut Illustrations of former Editions, and many New Illustrations by Eminent Artists.
 The Volumes are sold separately, in cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

W. M. THACKERAY'S WORKS.
THE POCKET EDITION.
27 vols. small fcap. 8vo. bound in cloth, with gilt top, 1s. 6d. each.
 The Volumes are also supplied as follows:—
The NOVELS. 13 vols. in gold-lettered cloth case, 21s.
The MISCELLANIES. 14 vols. in gold-lettered cloth case, 21s.

MISS THACKERAY'S WORKS.
UNIFORM EDITION.
10 vols. each Volume illustrated with a Vignette Title-Page, large crown 8vo. 6s. each.

ROBERT BROWNING'S COMPLETE WORKS.
NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.
Edited and Annotated by AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Q.C., M.P., and FREDERIC G. KENYON. In 2 vols. large crown 8vo. bound in cloth, gilt top, with a Portrait-Frontispiece to each Volume, 7s. 6d. per Volume.
 Also the UNIFORM EDITION of ROBERT BROWNING'S WORKS, in 17 vols. crown 8vo. bound in Sets, 4l. 5s.; or the Volumes bound separately, 5s. each.

ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING'S POETICAL WORKS.
UNIFORM EDITION.
In 6 vols. small crown 8vo. 5s. each. This Edition contains 5 Portraits of Mrs. Browning at different periods of life, and a few Illustrations.
 Vol. VI., AURORA LEIGH, can also be had bound and lettered as a separate Volume.

LIFE AND WORKS OF CHARLOTTE, EMILY, AND ANNE BRONTË.
LIBRARY EDITION.
7 vols. each containing 5 Illustrations, large crown 8vo. 5s. each.
 Also the POPULAR EDITION, in 7 vols. small post 8vo. limp cloth, or cloth boards, gilt top, 2s. 6d. each. And the POCKET EDITION, in 7 vols. small fcap. 8vo. each with a Frontispiece, bound in half-cloth, with cut or uncut edges, 1s 6d. per Volume; or the Set bound in cloth, with gilt top, in gold-lettered cloth case, 12s. 6d.

MRS. GASKELL'S WORKS.
UNIFORM EDITION.
7 vols. each containing 4 Illustrations, 3s. 6d. each, bound in cloth.
 Also the POPULAR EDITION, in 7 vols. small post 8vo. limp cloth, or cloth boards, gilt top, 2s. 6d. each. And the POCKET EDITION, in 8 vols. small fcap. 8vo. bound in half-cloth, with cut or uncut edges, 1s. 6d. per Volume; or the Set bound in cloth, with gilt top, in gold-lettered cloth case, 14s.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

THE CANTERBURY POETS.

IMPORTANT ADDITIONS.

WORKS BY ROBERT BROWNING.

VOL. I. NOW READY.

PIPPA PASSES, and other Poetic Dramas. By ROBERT BROWNING. With an Introductory Note by FRANK RINDER.

Contents.—Pauline—Paracelsus—Strafford—Pippa Passes—King Victor and King Charles. These works appeared between 1833 and 1842, and are arranged in their chronological order.

VOL. II. NOW READY.

A BLOT in the 'SCUTCHEON, and other Poetic Dramas. By ROBERT BROWNING. With an Introductory Note by FRANK RINDER.

Contents:—The Return of the Druses—A Blot in the 'Scutcheon—Colombe's Birthday—The Flight of the Duchess—Luria—A Soul's Tragedy—Christmas Eve and Easter Day. The dates of the above Poems range from 1843 to 1850, and they appear in chronological order.

VOL. III. READY MARCH 2.

DRAMATIC ROMANCES and LYRICS, and SORDELLO. By ROBERT BROWNING. With an Introductory Note by Miss E. DIXON.

Contents:—Dramatic Romances and Lyrics, including The Pied Piper of Hamelin—How they brought the Good News—Incident of the French Camp—The Lost Leader—The Boy and the Angel—Home Thoughts—Waring—The Cavalier Tunes, &c., and Sordello (complete). Sordello dates from 1840, and the other Poems from 1842 to 1845.

BINDINGS.

The above Volumes are supplied in the following Bindings:

IN GREEN ROAN, Boxed, with Frontispiece in Photogravure, 2*s*. 6*d*. net.

IN ART LINEN, with Frontispiece in Photogravure, 2*s*.

IN WHITE LINEN, with Frontispiece in Photogravure, 2*s*.

IN BROCADE, 2 vols. in Shell Case to match (each vol. with Frontispiece), 4*s*. per Set, or 3 vols. 6*s*. per Set.

And in the ordinary SHILLING BINDINGS, green cloth, cut edges, and blue cloth, uncut edges (without Photogravure).

The three volumes form an admirable and representative set, including a great part of Browning's best known and most admired work, and (being each of about 400 pages) are among the largest yet issued in the CANTERBURY POETS. The Frontispiece of Vol. I. consists of a reproduction of one of Browning's last Portraits; Mr. RUDOLF LEHMANN has kindly given permission for his Portrait of Browning to be reproduced as a Frontispiece of Vol. II.; while a reproduction of a drawing of a View of Asolo forms the Frontispiece of the Third Volume.

NEW VOLUME BY ERIC MACKAY.

The LOVER'S MISSAL. By Eric MACKAY, Author of 'Love-Letters of a Violinist.'

The 'Love-Letters of a Violinist,' by Mr. Eric Mackay, already included in the Canterbury Poets, having run into no less than ELEVEN EDITIONS, the appearance of a new volume of verse by Mr. Mackay, in the same Series, will doubtless be appreciated by his very large circle of readers.

BINDINGS.

The above Volume is supplied in the following Bindings:

IN GREEN ROAN, Boxed, with Frontispiece Portrait in Photogravure of Eric Mackay, 2*s*. 6*d*. net.

IN ART LINEN, with Frontispiece Portrait in Photogravure, 2*s*.

IN WHITE LINEN, with Frontispiece Portrait in Photogravure, 2*s*.

IN BROCADE, 2 vols. consisting of the 'Love-Letters' and 'Lover's Missal,' in Shell Case to match (each vol. with Frontispiece), 4*s*. per Set.

And in the ordinary SHILLING BINDINGS, green cloth, cut edges, and blue cloth, uncut edges (without Photogravure).

COUNT TOLSTOY'S LONGEST AND MOST MAGNIFICENT WORK.

ISSUE IN TWO DOUBLE VOLUMES.

7*s*. the Set.

WAR and PEACE. By Count TOLSTOY. Contains 1600 pages, printed in very clear type.

This is not only one of the finest, but probably one of the longest novels ever written, occupying, as it does in this edition, 1600 large and closely printed pages. Notwithstanding its vast length, its multitude of figures, the number of events it deals with, the interest of 'War and Peace' is not only intense, but unbroken throughout the immense march of the story, so that no reader, great though the undertaking is, will fail to read to the end once he has started on the book.

At the end of the second volume a complete Synopsis of the story is given, also a list of the principal characters.

London:
WALTER SCOTT, Limited, Paternoster-square.

GAY & BIRD'S NEW BOOKS.

Just published, price 1*s*.

The GHOST of WAR and the POTENTATES of PEACE. A Satire. By ALURED GRAY.

A very smart up-to-date political skit.

Just published, crown 8vo. cloth, illustrated, price 3*s*. 6*d*.

TARRAGAL; or, Bush Life in Australia. By E. T. HOOLEY.

Pall Mall Gazette.—"Is a breezy tale of life in the bush during the roaring 'fifties,' with plenty of bushrangers, wallabies, murders, savages, wrecks, and buried treasure. Boys will enjoy the book, for there is plenty of go in the story."

Ready March 1, price 6*s*.

The EARTH for a DOLLAR; or, the Romance of the King of Wall Street. By ROOF ROOFER.

A topical financial novel of love and money.

SECOND EDITION now ready, price 6*s*.

MARM LISA. By Mrs. Wiggin, Author of 'Timothy's Quest,' &c.

Times.—"Wholesome and humorous.....Exquisitely told. .....They (the twins) are delightful to read about."

Baron de Bookworms says:—"Is a story told with rare combination of humour and pathos that is genius."

Daily News.—"Is unsurpassed by anything its gifted authoress has yet written.....Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin's humour and pathos are as pure and true as any that America is producing nowadays."

Queen.—"Is a remarkable book.....It has the bubbling-over wit which characterized 'Timothy's Quest,' the most laughter producing book published in America for years..... Mrs. Wiggin has never written a better book, unless it be 'Timothy's Quest.'"

Liverpool Post.—"In 'Marm Lisa' Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin has with keen insight and varied resource sketched the career of a poor semi-imbecile girl in the slums of a great city on the Pacific Slope. Her sympathy with child-life peeps out from every page.....Mrs. Wiggin has a graphic and forceful style, and the interest of her work never flags for a moment."

POEMS of LOVE and LIFE. By G. COLMORE. Fcap. art cloth, gilt top, title by Selwyn Image, price 2*s*. 6*d*. net.

SECOND EDITION now ready, price 3*s*. 6*d*.

The WORLD BEAUTIFUL. By LILIAN WHITING. Fcap. tastefully printed by Constables, bound in red or white buckram, gilt top, price 3*s*. 6*d*.

H.M. the QUEEN has been pleased to accept a copy of this work.

Dr. Clifford writes:—"It is a delight and an inspiration to make its acquaintance."

New Age.—"In a simple literary style the author treats of subjects which have for us always an indefinable charm."

Literary World.—"Fancy, humour, sympathy, sense, mingle in its pages with the happiest results."

Now ready, price 1*s*. net.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY.

Devoted to Literature, Science, Art, and Politics.

Contents, February, 1897.

MR. CLEVELAND as PRESIDENT. Woodrow Wilson.
MY SIXTY DAYS in GREECE. II. Basil L. Gildersleeve.
The CHARM. Frank Dempster Sherman.
MARIGOLD-MICHEL. Blanche Willis Howard.
VENUS in the LIGHT of RECENT DISCOVERIES. Percival Lowell.
CHEERFUL YESTERDAYS. V. Thomas Wentworth Higginson.
The RATIONAL STUDY of the CLASSICS. Irving Babbitt.
LEGISLATIVE SHORTCOMINGS. Francis C. Lowell.
The GOOD and the EVIL of INDUSTRIAL COMBINATION. Arthur Twining Hadley.
The JUGGLER. VI. Charles Egbert Craddock.
The ARBITRATION TREATY. John Fiske.
The STORY of an UNTOLD LOVE. 11-14. Paul Leicester Ford.
COMMENT on NEW BOOKS.
The CONTRIBUTORS' CLUB.

London: GAY & BIRD,
22, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.
Agency for American Books.

"A VERY FINE HISTORICAL ROMANCE"
Pall Mall Gazette.

THE GLEAMING DAWN:

A ROMANCE OF THE MIDDLE AGES

By JAMES BAKER,
Author of 'John Westacott,' &c.

Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The Athenæum says—"Excellent and interesting romance....Mr Baker's novel deserves to rank high. He has a good story to tell, he writes well and there is no cessation of the reader's interest."

THE GLEAMING DAWN.

The Literary World says—"Movement, vigour, and hearty prose. Without a shadow of doubt, compact of the true stuff of romantic literature."

THE GLEAMING DAWN.

The Morning Post says—"Popular movements, stirring scenes of adventure and passion succeed each other rapidly until the end of a romance which is at the same time an attractive study of one of the most important periods of transition Europe has witnessed."

THE GLEAMING DAWN.

The British Review says—"We may say that Mr James Baker has accomplished the miracle. It is impossible to catch Mr Baker tripping in archaic phrase or local colour or domestic or warlike detail of the life of the period. The story opens vividly....Sets one's blood tingling with the sense of danger and daring. We have seldom read anything more impressive and suggestive."

Chapman & Hall (Limited), London.

MR. HERBERT SPENCER'S WORKS.

	s.	d.
FIRST PRINCIPLES	16	0
PRINCIPLES of BIOLOGY. 2 vols. ...	34	0
PRINCIPLES of PSYCHOLOGY. 2 vols.	36	0
PRINCIPLES of SOCIOLOGY. Vol. I....	21	0
,, ,, ,, Vol. II....	18	0
,, ,, ,, Vol. III....	16	0
ECCLESIASTICAL INSTITUTIONS ...	5	0
PRINCIPLES of ETHICS. Vol. I. ...	15	0
,, ,, ,, Vol. II. ...	12	6
The DATA of ETHICS (Separately) ...	3	0
JUSTICE (Separately)	8	0
The STUDY of SOCIOLOGY	10	6
EDUCATION	6	0
,, Cheap Edition	2	6
ESSAYS. 3 vols. ... 30*s*. (or each vol. 10*s*.)
SOCIAL STATICS and MAN v. STATE...	10	0
MAN v. STATE (Separately)	1	0

Williams & Norgate, 14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh, and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.

SECOND EDITION, price Fourpence.

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Kentish Mercury.

G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo cloth, price Sixpence.

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES: a Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

NEW EDITION, price Two Shillings,

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Ninth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached a ninth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

FIFTH EDITION, price Sixpence, cloth.

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."
Dr. B. A. Gould, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for April 29th, May 13th, 27th, June 10th, 24th, and July 8th, 1893 contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'CONINGSBY,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'

Price of the Six Numbers, 2*s*., or free by post, 2*s*. 3*d*.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for December 10th and 24th, 1892, and January 7th and 21st, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR GLADSTONE.

Price of the Four Numbers, 1*s*. 4*d*. or free by post, 1*s*. 6*d*.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

Just published, in 1 vol. demy 8vo. price 10*s.* 6*d.* net,

AN ENQUIRY INTO THE LIFE and LEGEND of MICHAEL SCOT, 1175-1232.

By the Rev. J. WOOD BROWN, M.A.

"Supplies us for the first time with a fairly complete and authentic ecord of the life and works of Michael the Scot, pieced together with uch labour from authorities mainly Italian, and executed with suffi- ient care to satisfy the demands of the student."—Daily Chronicle.

"A valuable as well as interesting contribution to our knowledge of he thought and science and superstitions of the early thirteenth entury."—Scotsman.

"A very valuable contribution to Scottish history and to European hilosophy."—Dundee Advertiser.

Edinburgh: David Douglas, 10, Castle-street.
London: Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Limited.

JARROLD & SONS' LIST.

MAURUS JOKAI'S NEW NOVEL,

ENTITLED

The GREEN BOOK; or, Freedom under the Snow. Translated by Mrs. WAUGH (ELLIS WRIGHT). With Engraved Portrait of Dr. Jókai (Authorized Edition). Crown 8vo. art linen, 6*s.*

FOURTH EDITION NOW READY.

"The author has given us a group of striking personalities, f every one of whom it is not too much to say that it is bril- antly drawn and vividly presented. From every point of iew 'The Green Book' is a book to be read. It is a work f fine art."—Daily Chronicle.

MR. COURTNEY says in the Daily Telegraph:—"It is truly n astounding book. In force and fire and prodigal variety e reminds one of the elder Dumas."

"Altogether a great book, and worth all the novels of ative growth we are likely to see this season."
Pall Mall Gazette.

BY MAURUS JOKAI.

(Uniform with the above.)

BLACK DIAMONDS. By Maurus JOKAI. THIRD EDITION. Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6*s.*

"It is so well written, so abounding in all sorts of special nowledge, and displays so much real literary power, that e never feel tempted to leave any of its pages unread. here are some extremely fine descriptive passages in the ook.....Maurus Jókai is absolutely original in thought and eatment."—Daily Chronicle.

OTHER POPULAR WORKS BY DR. MAURUS JOKAI.

uthorized Editions, crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 5*s.* each.
Translated from the Hungarian by R. NISBET BAIN.

MIDST the WILD CARPATHIANS.

"A thrilling Hungarian historical novel. Jókai's extra- dinary dramatic and descriptive powers have full play."
Truth.

'RETTY MICHAL.

"It is part of the high art of the story that the author has pt the whole atmosphere free from the complexity, the ttle motives of a later and more sophisticated age. Maurus kai's novel is a book to be read."—Saturday Review.

ondon: JARROLD & SONS, 10 and 11, Warwick- ne, E.C. At all Libraries and of the Booksellers.

Price 1*s.* post free,

INDIGESTION: its Causes and Cure. By JOHN H. CLARKE, M.D.

London: James Epps & Co., Limited, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Thread- needle-street.

A BRILLIANT NOVEL.

A DAUGHTER'S GRIEF.

By F. H. CLIFFE.

Price 3*s.* 6*d.*

"There are numbers of strong situations and skilful and unexpected developments in 'A Daughter's Grief' The reader follows with the closest attention the unfolding of the plot. The various parts are finished and fitted to one another with considerable art."—Scotsman.

London: Bellairs & Co. 9, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, W.C.

BLISS, SANDS & CO.

NEW NOVELS.

JUST PUBLISHED.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'TRYPHENA IN LOVE.'

First Edition exhausted before publication.

BY WALTER RAYMOND.

CHARITY CHANCE: a Novel.

By the AUTHOR of 'TRYPHENA in LOVE,' &c.

With a Frontispiece by T. H. Robinson.

Large crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, price 6*s.*

READY THIS WEEK.

BY OLIPHANT SMEATON.

OUR LADDIE: a Novel.

By OLIPHANT SMEATON.

Fully illustrated. Large crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, price 6*s.*

NEW NOVELS AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

A MAN of MOODS. By H. D. Lowry. Price 6*s.*

"Has a lightness and deftness of touch that make it a pleasure to look at or into his literary handiwork."
Scotsman.

A TALE of the THAMES. By J. ASHBY STERRY. Price 6*s.*

"'A Tale of the Thames' is an extremely pretty, idyllic story."—Daily Telegraph.

NEW WORK BY THE REV. H. R. HAWEIS, M.A.

The DEAD PULPIT. By the Rev. H. R. HAWEIS, M.A. A Volume of Sermons containing an estimate of the NEW ARCHBISHOP of CANTERBURY (Dr. TEMPLE) and the NEW BISHOP of LONDON (Dr. CREIGHTON). With Personal Notices of A. P. STANLEY (Dean of Westminster), F. D. MAURICE, F. W. ROBERTSON, and the DOCTRINE of RE-STATEMENT. Large crown 8vo. price 7*s.* 6*d.*

London: 12, Burleigh-street, Strand, W.C.

NOW READY.

Crown 8vo. pp. 384, neatly half bound.

WHITAKER'S

DIRECTORY OF TITLED PERSONS FOR 1897.

A COMPLETE PEERAGE FOR HALF-A-CROWN.

The ordinary contents of a Peerage, Baronetage, and Knightage, including Dowager Ladies and Titled Issue, is presented WHITAKER'S DIRECTORY under a single alphabet; and to this is prefixed an extended list of the Royal Family, gether with much descriptive and explanatory information never before given in any similar work. An alphabetical list Country Seats is also provided, helping appreciably to render the volume a handy and concise Court Guide.

London: J. WHITAKER & SONS, 12, Warwick-lane, E.C.

By F. ANSTEY, Author of 'Vice Versa,' 'Under the Rose,' &c.

WILL BE PUBLISHED NEXT WEEK.

PUPPETS AT LARGE.

Scenes and Subjects from Mr. Punch's Show.

By F. ANSTEY,

AUTHOR OF 'VICE VERSA,' &c.

With 16 Page Illustrations by I. B. PARTRIDGE.

In crown 8vo. price 5*s.*

London: BRADBURY, AGNEW & CO., LIMITED, 8, 9, 10, Bouverie-street, E.C.

THE PROGRESSIVE REVIEW.

No. 6. MARCH. Now ready.

Price ONE SHILLING.

MR. RHODES and SOUTH AFRICA.
By Mr. P. C. CRONWRIGHT SCHREINER.

WHAT IS the LAND QUESTION?

The PROBLEM of EDUCATION.

MR. JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN.

FREEDOM and its CONDITIONS.
T. KIRKUP, Author of 'The History of Socialism.'

PROGRESSIVE TEMPERANCE.
S. BARKER BOOTH.

The KAISER and the SOCIAL EMPIRE.
W. H. DAWSON, Author of 'Germany and the Germans.'

CAUSERIE of the MONTH—BOOK REVIEWS.

London: Horace Marshall & Son,
Temple House, Temple-avenue.

THE ANTIQUARY.

Monthly, price 6*d.*

Contents for MARCH.

NOTES of the MONTH. Illustrated.
ON the RECENT OPENING of a TUMULUS in YORKSHIRE. By the Rev. E. Maule Cole, M.A. F.G.S.
The HORSE in RELATION to WATER-LORE. By Miss M. Peacock.
RAMBLINGS of an ANTIQUARY. Hardwick Hall. III. By George Bailey. Illustrated.
NOTES on SOME ANNUAL CUSTOMS of the ABRUZZI PEASANTRY. By G. M. Godden. With Translations by C. M. Harrison.
PUBLICATIONS and PROCEEDINGS of ARCHÆOLOGICAL SOCIETIES.
REVIEWS and NOTICES of NEW BOOKS:—'The Ruined Cities of Ceylon'; 'The Thackerays in India.'

London: Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row.

Just published, 3 vols. 8vo. price 21*s.*

THE WILDERNESS and its TENANTS: a Series of Geographical and other Essays illustrative of Life in a Wild Country. By JOHN MADDEN.

London: Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Limited.

IMPORTANT WORK RELATING TO GLAMORGANSHIRE.

HISTORY of MARGAM ABBEY.

From the Original Documents in the British Museum, H.M. Record Office, the Margam Muniments, &c.

With numerous Illustrations and Reproductions.

By W. DE GRAY BIRCH, LL.D. F.S.A., of the British Museum.

Nearly ready, in 1 vol. large 8vo.

Price to Subscribers before issue, One Guinea.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.

Made in Three Sizes.

10*s.* 6*d.*, 16*s.* 6*d.*, and 25*s.* each, post free.

Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to- day pronounce it as a perfect Pen

A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce. We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.

Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95*a*, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS.

ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.

ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.

ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.

West Strand, London. Discount 10 per cent.

EPPS'S COCOA.

THE MOST NUTRITIOUS.

EPPS'S COCOA.

GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA.

WM. & GEO. LAW.

COFFEE—

SUGAR—

TEA.

104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION.

And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

CASSELL & COMPANY'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

NOTICE.—The Sixth and concluding Volume of SOCIAL ENGLAND, embracing the Period from the Battle of Waterloo to the General Election of 1885, will be published during the Spring. Price 18s.

NOVELS.

J. M. BARRIE.

Sentimental Tommy. 35th Thousand. 6*s.*

The Little Minister. 46th Thousand. 6*s.*

MAX PEMBERTON.

A Puritan's Wife. Second Edition. 6*s.*

The Impregnable City. Second Edition. 6*s.*

The Iron Pirate. Third Edition. 5*s.*

The Sea Wolves. Second Edition. 6*s.*

The Little Huguenot. Second Edition. 1*s.* 4*d.*

FRANK STOCKTON.

Mrs. Cliff's Yacht. Second Edition. 6*s.*

Adventures of Captain Horn. Fourth Edition. 6*s.*

Pomona's Travels. Cheap Edition ready shortly. 3*s.* 6*d.*

W. CLARK RUSSELL.

What Cheer! Second Edition. 6*s.*

List, Ye Landsmen! Cheap Edition ready shortly. 3*s.* 6*d.*

E. W. HORNUNG.

The Rogue's March. Second Edition. 6*s.*

Tiny Luttrell. 6*s.*

NEW VOLUMES.

Complete in 3 vols. 18*s*

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY.

Edited by P. MARTIN DUNCAN, F.R.S.

With about 2,000 Illustrations.

CHEAP EDITION.

"'Cassell's Natural History' is unquestionably the best popular general work on zoology which has yet appeared."—Field.

BRITISH BALLADS.

With 300 Original Illustrations.

CHEAP EDITION.

Complete in 1 vol. 7*s.* 6*d.*

"The illustrations are so very spirited and clever that it is really difficult to point out any one part, poem or picture, that could be spared."—Times.

THE ADMIRABLE LADY BIDDY FANE.

By FRANK BARRETT.

With 12 Full-Page Illustrations.

CHEAP EDITION. 3*s.* 6*d.*

Complete in 2 vols. 9*s.* each.

BATTLES OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

With numerous Original and Stirring Illustrations by the best Black and White Artists of the Day.

CHEAP EDITION. 5*s.*

CASSELL'S CONCISE CYCLOPÆDIA.

With about 600 Illustrations.

IMPORTANT BOOKS.

2 vols. cloth, 21*s*

The STORY of MY LIFE. By the Right Hon. Sir RICHARD TEMPLE, Bart., G.C.S.I. D.C.L. (Oxon), LL.D. (Cantab.), F.R.S. With 2 Portraits of the Author.

CHEAP EDITION, in 1 vol. 10*s.* 6*d.*

A HISTORY of MODERN EUROPE. By C. A. FYFFE, M.A., late Fellow of University College, Oxford. 1088 pp. cloth.

ENTIRELY NEW and ENLARGED EDITION, 9*s.*

PRACTICAL ELECTRICITY. A Laboratory and Lecture Course for First Year Students of Electrical Engineering based on the International Definitions of the Electrical Units. Completely Rewritten by W. E. AYRTON, F.R.S. Assoc.M.Inst.C.E., Dean, and Prof. of Electrical Engineering, of the City and Guilds of London Central Technical College, &c.

Contents:—CURRENT, PRESSURE, RESISTANCE, ENERGY, POWER, and CELLS. With 247 Illustrations.

THE "CENTURY SCIENCE" SERIES.

Edited by Sir HENRY ROSCOE, D.C.L. F.R.S.

3*s.* 6*d.* each.

Just published.

CHARLES DARWIN and the THEORY of NATURAL SELECTION. By EDWARD B. POULTON, M.A. F.R.S.

HUMPHRY DAVY, Poet and Philosopher. By T. E. THORPE, LL.D. F.R.S.

Already published.

JOHN DALTON and the RISE of MODERN CHEMISTRY. By Sir HENRY E. ROSCOE, F.R.S.

MAJOR RENNELL, F.R.S., and the RISE of ENGLISH GEOGRAPHY. By CLEMENTS R. MARKHAM, C.B. F.R.S.

JUSTUS VON LIEBIG: his Life and Work (1803–1873). By W. A. SHENSTONE, F.I.C.

The HERSCHELS and MODERN ASTRONOMY. By AGNES M. CLERKE.

CHARLES LYELL and MODERN GEOLOGY. By Prof. T. G. BONNEY, F.R.S.

J. CLERK MAXWELL and MODERN PHYSICS. By R. T. GLAZEBROOK, F.R.S.

CHEAP EDITION ready in a few days, price 10*s.* 6*d.*

The STORY of the HEAVENS. By Sir Robert Stawell Ball, LL.D. F.R.S. F.R.A.S., Lowndean Professor of Astronomy in the University of Cambridge. Illustrated by Chromo Plates and Wood Engravings.

CASSELL & COMPANY, Limited, London, Paris, and Melbourne.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by John Edward Francis, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C., and Published by John C. Francis at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, February 27, 1897.

THE ATHEN

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine

No. 3619. SATURDAY, MARCH 6, 1897

ROYAL INSTITUTION of GREAT BRITAIN, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W.

The Right Hon. LORD RAYLEIGH, M.A. D.C.L. LL.D. F.R.S., Professor of Natural Philosophy, R.I., will THIS DAY (SATURDAY), March 6, at 3 o'clock, begin a Course of SIX LECTURES on 'Electricity and Electrical Vibrations.'

Subscription to this Course, One Guinea; to all the Courses in the Season, Two Guineas.

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C., Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

ROYAL ACADEMY of ARTS.—Notice to Artists.—The DAYS for RECEIVING PAINTINGS, DRAWINGS, &c., are FRIDAY, SATURDAY, and MONDAY, March 26, 27, 29; and for SCULPTURE, TUESDAY, March 30.—Forms and Labels can be obtained from the Academy during the month of March on receipt of a stamped and directed envelope.

LONDON ASSOCIATION of CORRECTORS of the PRESS and READERS' PENSION COMMITTEE.—The SEVENTH ANNUAL DINNER (celebrating the completion of the Second Readers' Pension) will take place on SATURDAY, March 6, at the HOLBORN RESTAURANT, under the Presidency of the Right Hon. LORD GLENESK. The Names of Gentlemen willing to support the Chairman will be gladly received by the Secretary, MR. JOHN RANDALL (to whom cheques for the Benevolent Fund or for the Third Readers' Pension may be made payable), at the Offices of the Association, 33, Chancery-lane, W.C.

PALL MALL CLUB. (Established 1893.)

The Committee propose (prior to entering on New and Larger Premises) to elect FIVE HUNDRED NEW TOWN MEMBERS and ONE THOUSAND NEW COUNTRY MEMBERS at the Original Subscription of 3*l.* 3*s.* and 1*l.* 1*s.* per annum respectively.

The Subscription for Future Members will then be raised to 5*l.* 5*s.* (Town) and 2*l.* 2*s.* (Country).

For further particulars apply to the HON. SECRETARY, Pall Mall Club Offices, 60, Haymarket, S.W.

THE SESAME CLUB, for Ladies and Gentlemen, is of the usual character of Social Clubs. It is also intended as a centre for those interested in Literature, Science, Art, and especially in improved methods of Education, but is pledged to no religious, social, or political party.

The Club, which was founded in 1895, will move at Easter to 29, DOVER-STREET, PICCADILLY, where a larger house, with fine Reception-Rooms (and Bed-Rooms for accommodation of Ladies) has been secured.

The SESAME is not a commercial speculation, and is under the management of a Committee, consisting of an equal number of Men and Women, in whom is vested the election of Members. No Entrance Fee as yet. Special terms for Country Members.—Apply to THE SECRETARY, 171, Victoria-street.

MUSICAL CRITIC can SUPPLY Weekly or Fortnightly LONDON LETTER to Provincial or Colonial Journal.—Address BATON, Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, W.

RE-ENGAGEMENT as ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN WANTED by YOUNG MAN. Knowledge of Dewey System. Excellent testimonials.—DAVY, 24, Bethune-road, London, N.

PUBLIC LIBRARIANSHIP REQUIRED by GENTLEMAN of eighteen years' Public Library experience. Age 33. Highest testimonials and references.—Address H. R., 8, Burnage View, Stockport-road, Levenshulme, Manchester.

GRADUATE, Classical Honours, TEACHES CLASSICS and GERMAN, and Prepares for Examinations. He would also be willing to accept Tutorial or Travelling Engagements for Easter or Summer Vacations.—E. C., 30, Lower Belgrave-street, Eaton-square.

WANTED, EASY LITERARY WORK for spare hours.—CANTAB, care of A. J. Isard, Esq., Solicitor, 14, Queen-street, Cheapside, E.C.

TO AUTHORESSES.—Known Novelist, who can command a market, REQUIRES the ASSISTANCE of a COLLABORATOR on sharing terms, or will sell Plot.—PLAYWRIGHT, care of Streachan's, Limited, 295, Strand, London, W.C.

AN EDITOR of large administrative experience, a Writer of character and reputation, possessing some capital, would JOIN an established or a promising LITERARY UNDERTAKING which offered occupation, with some freedom, and a reasonable return upon investment.—Apply, by letter, to EDITOR, care of C. Mitchell & Co., Agent for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, 12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

A GRADUATE of Cambridge (in Classical Honours) begs to offer his services as READER to PUBLISHERS requiring same.—Address READER, Clark's Library, 2, Colcherne-terrace, Richmond-road, S.W.

VICAR RECOMMENDS YOUNG MAN as AMANUENSIS or Companion to a Gentleman. Photographer; Shorthand Writer; experienced Clerk. No objection to travel abroad. Highest testimonials.—VICAR, Bradpole, Bridport.

A GERMAN, twenty-five years old, musical, having passed the Abiturienten Examination, and having lived one year at Oxford and fifteen months in London, wants a POST as PRIVATE SECRETARY. Librarian, or Travelling Companion. Quiet and reserved. Good references.

Address H. W., 5, St. George's-terrace, Regent's Park-road, London, N.W.

OFFICE and SERVICES of intelligent REPRESENTATIVE OFFERED genuine Association or Enterprise—Philanthropic, Literary, Commercial, or Professional—by a business-like Woman having Secretarial and Journalistic experience. N.B. Services of Gentleman Representative when needed.—Particulars, in confidence, to CO OPERATION, Box 500, Willing's, 125, Strand.

LITERARY.—To Young and other Authors, Members of Universities, &c.—A NEW MAGAZINE (Science, Fiction, &c.) REQUIRES CONTRIBUTORS. Names and particulars—not MS.—in first instance to Editor, HARRINGTON, Oxford Union Society.

THE COUNCIL of the ROYAL INSTITUTE of BRITISH ARCHITECTS are prepared to receive applications for the appointment of SECRETARY. Applicants must be gentlemen of culture and literary attainments, with a knowledge of Architecture, but not necessarily Architects. Proficiency in French essential and German desirable. Age not less than about 30 or more than 45. The Secretary will be required to devote his whole time to his official duties. Salary 400*l.* per annum. Full particulars can be obtained at the Offices of the Institute, No. 9, Conduit-street, Hanover-square, London, W. Any canvassing will disqualify.—Applications, addressed to "The Hon. Secretary, R.I.B.A.," No. 9, Conduit-street, W., must be delivered not later than March 20.

INDIA OFFICE, February 25, 1897.

A PROFESSOR of NATURAL SCIENCE is REQUIRED for the THOMASON ENGINEERING COLLEGE, KURKI, in the North-West Provinces of India. He should be a Practical Electrical Engineer, and qualified to lecture in and teach Electricity, Magnetism, Heat, Sound, Light, and the Elements of Chemistry, Geology, and Mineralogy. He should understand Telegraph Engineering.

The salary will be Rupees 500 a month in the first year, rising by Rs. 50 a year to Rs. 700. If retained on termination of five years' agreement salary Rs. 750 a month rising to Rs. 1,000, with benefit of Leave and Pension Rules from date of first appointment.

Applications should be addressed to the Secretary, Judicial and Public Department, India Office, London, not later than the end of March.

A. GODLEY, Under-Secretary of State for India.

A LIBRARIAN is REQUIRED for the WHITECHAPEL FREE LIBRARY and MUSEUM.

Candidates for the post must give evidence of Knowledge of Books and of experience in managing a Library. They must be willing to put their whole time at the disposal of the Commissioners, and in every way to carry out their directions. They must make written application, sending three written testimonials, to the CLERK of the COMMISSIONERS, No. 15, Great Alie-street, Whitechapel, not later than MONDAY, the 15th instant.

The salary offered is to commence with 150*l.* a year, rising by yearly increments of 20*l.* to 250*l.* the maximum, together with rooms, fire, and lighting. Age of Candidates not to exceed forty years.

BOROUGH of EVESHAM.

PUBLIC LIBRARIES ACT, 1892.

The Town Council invite applications for the post of LIBRARIAN to the EVESHAM PUBLIC LIBRARY. Duties to commence on the 26th of March next, when the Evesham Institute and Library will be taken over as a Public Library. Salary 60*l.* per annum, which a competent person will have the opportunity of augmenting by being allowed to act as teacher for one or more of the Local Technical Classes. A Candidate duly qualified for such teaching will be preferred.—Applications, accompanied by copies of three recent testimonials, to be sent in on or before 12th March next to THOS. COX, Town Clerk, Evesham.

February 25, 1897.

ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE, Cooper's Hill, Staines.—The Course of Study is arranged to fit an Engineer for Employment in Europe, India, and the Colonies. About 40 Students will be admitted in September, 1897. The Secretary of State will offer them for Competition Twelve Appointments as Assistant Engineers in the Public Works Department, and Three Appointments as Assistant Superintendents in the Telegraph Department.—For particulars apply to the SECRETARY, at the College.

BEDFORD GRAMMAR SCHOOL.—EIGHT EXHIBITIONS, SIX HEAD-MASTER'S NOMINATIONS, TO BE COMPETED FOR MARCH 16.—Apply SECRETARY.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

MANCHESTER COLLEGE, OXFORD.

An OPEN THEOLOGICAL SCHOLARSHIP, of the annual value of 75*l.* (tenable for one, two, or three years), is offered by the Dr. Daniel Jones's Trustees for competition.

For particulars apply to the SECRETARY, 1, St. James's-square, Manchester.

BOYS' STORIES.—Any number of the above required; about twenty thousand words in length; plenty of dash and fun, though sound in tone. Payment on approval. Declined MSS. returned.—Address BOYS' STORIES, Hart's Advertising Offices, Maltravers House, Arundel-street, Strand, W.C.

THE SCHOOL of LITERARY ART. Conducted by FLORENCE MARRYAT. For instruction in Composing and Writing Fiction, Journalism, and the Drama.—Apply to SECRETARY, 26, Abercorn-place, N.W.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

FRENCH MASTERSHIPS.—The Education Committee of the Scottish Branch of the Franco-Scottish Society direct the attention of Educationalists to the fact that a list of highly qualified FRENCH TEACHERS can be procured from MONSIEUR PAUL MYRON, Secrétaire-Général du Comité de Patronage des Étudiants Étrangers, La Sorbonne, Paris.

ASSISTANT SCHOOLMISTRESSES.—Miss LOUISA BROUGH can recommend University Graduates, Trained and Certificated High School Teachers, Foreign Teachers, Kindergarten Mistresses, &c.—Central Registry for Teachers, 25, Craven-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

graphers, and Typists. Special staff of French ... Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Typewriting.

INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6690. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

TO AUTHORS.—Messrs. DIGBY, LONG & CO. (Publishers of 'The Author's Manual,' 3*s.* 6*d.* net, Eighth Edition), INVITE AUTHORS to FORWARD their MSS. (Fiction, Travel, Poetry, &c.) for prompt consideration.—Address 18, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MSS. in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

NORTHERN NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE, KENDAL.

LITERARY AGENTS.

FICTION, SERIES OF ARTICLES, WEEKLY SERVICES.

9, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.

MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS. ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

(nearly opposite the National Gallery).

Inspection invited.

REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7*l.* 10*s.*

[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5*l.* 5*s.*

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY.

FORD MADOX BROWN.
DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI.
FREDERIC J. SHIELDS.

A Series of AUTOTYPE REPRODUCTIONS of the Chief Works of these Masters is now ON VIEW at the GRAFTON GALLERIES. They include the chief Cartoons made by Ford Madox Brown for stained lass, his 'Cordelia's Portion,' 'English Boy,' 'Shakespeare,' 'Homer,' c; Rossetti's 'Beata Beatrix,' 'Lamp of Memory,' 'Monna Rosa,' Proserpine,' 'The Annunciation,' 'The Blessed Damozel,' 'Studies for the Oxford Frescoes,' &c.

Particulars on application.

A NEW PORTRAIT OF ROBERT BROWNING. Painted by D. G. ROSSETTI in 1855. REPRODUCED in AUTOGRAVURE from the Original in the possession of C. Fairfax Murray, Esq. Size of work, 4¾ by 4¼ inches. Proofs on Vellum, 21*s.*; on Japanese, 10*s.* 6*d.*; Prints, 5*s.*

THE WEST FRONT OF PETERBOROUGH CATHEDRAL. From a Negative specially taken before the erection of the scaffolding by R. G. SCRIVEN, F.S.I. Printed in Sepia or warm black, 18 by 15 inches, price 10*s.* 6*d.*

G. F. WATTS, R.A. A large Series of the Chief Works of this Master, including the great Allegorical Designs and many others.

Full particulars on application.

FRENCH PAINTERS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY. PERMANENT CARBON REPRODUCTIONS of WORKS by JEAN FRANÇOIS MILLET, THÉODORE ROUSSEAU, JEAN BAPTISTE COROT, DAUBIGNY, JULES BRETON, DAGNAN BOUVERET, W. BOUGUEREAU, MEISSONIER, CAROLUS-DURAN, CABANEL, DEBAT-PONSAN, E. ADAN, &c., in various sizes.

THE ENGLISH SCHOOL OF LANDSCAPE PAINTING. Including the Chief Works of JOHN CONSTABLE, R.A., J. M. W. TURNER, R.A., THOMAS GAINSBOROUGH, R.A., R. P. BONINGTON, OLD CROME, W. J. MÜLLER, DAVID COX, GIRTIN, SAMUEL PROUT, &c.

ABRIDGED CATALOGUES ON APPLICATION.

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,
74 NEW OXFORD-STREET LONDON, W.C.

...AGENCY. Established 1875. Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W., Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Catalogues.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,
14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.
CATALOGUES on application.

ELLIS & ELVEY, Dealers in Old and Rare Books, Manuscripts, and Engravings.
NEW CATALOGUE (No. 85) OF CHOICE BOOKS AND MANUSCRIPTS,
Including a Remarkable Collection of RARE BOOKS on MUSIC, now ready, post free, Sixpence.
29, New Bond-street, London, W.

Now ready,
CATALOGUE of FRENCH BOOKS, at greatly reduced prices. I. PHILOSOPHY. II. RELIGION. III. HISTORY. IV. POETRY, DRAMA, MUSIC. V. BEAUX-ARTS.
DULAU & CO. 37, Soho-square, London, W.

JUST PUBLISHED
CATALOGUE (No. 57) of MISCELLANEOUS SECOND-HAND BOOKS in General Literature, including a number of Early Examples of Local History, Topography, &c., and a Selection of CRITICAL EDITIONS of GREEK and LATIN Classical WRITERS and Works relating to Classical Archæology, now ready.—Copies of the Catalogue and Works—Either or both post free on application to E. H. BAYNES, 2 and 3, Broad-street, Oxford.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books. Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

AUTOGRAPHS.—Over 300, mostly 1623 to 1638.—Particulars, Milton-road, Weston-super-Mare.

CHOICE OLD ENGRAVINGS in COLOURS, Rare Sporting Prints, Theatrical and other Portraits, Americana, Scarce Books, Autographs, Drawings, &c. ON SALE by FRANK T. SABIN, 11a, Shaftesbury-avenue, W.

BOOK of OLD PLATES (size about 22 by 15 in.) FOR SALE.—Selections from Works of Le and Vicenzo Paolo Caliarri Jacopo Robusti and Jacopo Deponte, by John Baptista Jacobson published in Venice 1745.—Address L. E. P., 30, Lydden-road, Wanstead, N.E.

LONDON LIBRARY,
ST JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.
Patron—H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
President—LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.
Vice-Presidents—Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, The Very Rev. the Dean of Llandaff, Herbert Spencer, Esq., Sir Henry Barkly, K.C.B.
Trustees—Right Hon. Sir M. Grant Duff, Right Hon. Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P., Right Hon. Earl of Rosebery.
The Library contains about 170,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in various Languages. Subscription 3*l.* a year; Life Membership, according to age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country and Ten to Town Members. Reading-Room open from Ten to half-past Six. Catalogue, Fifth Edition, 2 vols. royal 8vo, price 21*s.*; to Members, 16*s.* C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

FOR THE CIRCULATION AND SALE OF ALL THE BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE in ONE SUBSCRIPTION and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

Town and Village Clubs supplied on Liberal Terms.

Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books gratis and post free.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS
NOW OFFERED AT
GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST
(100 PAGES)
Sent gratis and post free to any address.

The List contains POPULAR WORKS in TRAVEL, SPORT, HISTORY, BIOGRAPHY, SCIENCE, and FICTION.

Also NEW and SURPLUS COPIES of FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

Books Shipped to all parts of the World at Lowest Rates.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,
30–34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.;
241, BROMPTON-ROAD, S.W.;
48, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C.; and at
BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

EXCEPTIONAL OPPORTUNITY for a GENTLEMAN desiring PERMANENT OCCUPATION of comfortably FURNISHED ROOMS. Large Bed-Room, Box Room, and Sitting Room en suite on Second Floor in a Doctor's house, Upper Wimpole-street, Cavendish-square. Bath-Room, &c., on same floor. Electric light. Board—entire or partial—optional. Unfurnished if preferred.—Address Box 195, Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, W.

TO BE LET, FURNISHED, for the Summer or longer, the HOME of the late CHARLES DARWIN at DOWNE, KENT, a very rural and beautiful part of the country, 550ft. above sea level. It comprises comfortable old-fashioned House, having about Twenty Bed and Dressing Rooms, Four Reception-Rooms and usual Offices. Stabling for Six Horses. Lovely Gardens and Pleasure Grounds. Tennis Lawn and Court. Range of Greenhouses with Experiment or Photo-Dark Room. Surrounded by meadows and woodlands of twenty acres, affording delightful private walks. Moderate rent.—Terms and Photos of HAMPTON & SONS, 1, Cockspur-street, S.W.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS. South aspect, good view, three minutes' walk from the town and common.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD.
(The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)
Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each. 5s. per dozen, ruled or plain.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c.; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

Sales by Auction.

Engravings and Paintings.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 9, and One Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS, removed from Bournemouth, and other Private Sources, comprising Rare Mezzotints, some in proof states—Fancy Subjects after Cosway, Bartolozzi, Minasi, Kauffman, &c.—Sporting Subjects and Caricatures—Topographical and Architectural Prints—and Oil Paintings, both old and modern.

Catalogues on application.

Postage Stamps.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 16, and Following Day, at half-past 5 o'clock precisely, rare BRITISH, FOREIGN, and COLONIAL POSTAGE STAMPS.

Catalogues on application.

Library of the late Admiral BAUGH (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 17, and Two Following Days, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Admiral BAUGH (by order of the Executors), amongst which will be found Thackeray's Works, Édition de Luxe—Dickens's Works, Original Editions, bound in calf extra—Punch, Complete Set—Fielding's Works, Édition de Luxe—Costume of Turkey, Coloured Plates—Barham's Ingoldsby Legends, 3 vols.—Whymper's Scrambles amongst the Alps—Picturesque Views of Seats, 7 vols. morocco extra—Works on Family History, Genealogy, &c.—Newspaper Cuttings, neatly mounted in Scrap-Books, &c.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

Miscellaneous Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, March 25 at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY, including a small Collection of Antique Silver.

Catalogues in preparation.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON'S NEXT SALE of MUSICAL PROPERTY will take place on TUESDAY, March 30.

Collection of Ex-Libris and Armorial China.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 6, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a VALUABLE COLLECTION of EX-LIBRIS and ARMORIAL CHINA, amongst which will be found Henrietta, Countess of Bessborough, engraved by Bartolozzi, dated 1796—William Penn, dated 1703—Sir T. Hanmer, dated 1707—Anna Damer—Sir Robert Clayton, dated 1679—Henrietta Cavendish Holles, dated 1736—Countess of Pomfret—George I.'s Gift-Plates to Cambridge University, in Four Sizes—C. Dickens—T. Carlyle—Lord Byron—Matthew Prior—Francis Gwyn, dated 1698—Birnie of Broomhill—David Garrick, fine impression—fine Specimens of Foreign, some of which are dated, &c.

Catalogues on receipt of three stamps.

Further Portion of the Library of H. J. FARMER-ATKINSON, Esq., F.S.A., removed from Ore.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, April 7, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a FURTHER PORTION of the LIBRARY of H. J. FARMER-ATKINSON, Esq., F.S.A., consisting chiefly of valuable Examples of Biblical and Liturgical Literature in various Languages, including Biblia Latina, Venet 1476—Biblia Germanica, Nurenberg, 1483—Biblia Islandica, 1584—La Sacra Bibla, Scuol, 1679—The Newe Testament, Geneva, 1557—Coverdale, Exhortacion to the Carienge of Christ's Crosse—Chap-Books, illustrated by Blake—MS. Antiphonarium in Usum Romanum, with Illuminated Initials—Early German Block-Book, with Illustrations—Le Case, I Monumenti di Pompei, Coloured Plates—Series of Heraldic Drawings—MS. on Vellum, with Miniatures, &c.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

Valuable Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 8, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a valuable COLLECTION of BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising many choice Examples of Early Foreign and English Printing—Works of Elizabethan and Jacobean Authors—Scarce Editions of the Bible—Manuscripts on Vellum, with Illuminated Capitals and Miniatures—fine Examples of Bindings, some with Arms; also a remarkable Collection of Early Playbills from the Vienna Exhibition, &c.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

Modern Publications—Surplus Stock of Stationery—Wood-Blocks by Bewick, &c.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 10 and Following Day at 1 o'clock, MODERN PUBLICATIONS, in Cloth and Quires, comprising 528 Child's Church and State under the Tudors (15s.)—1,000 Davies's Orthodox and Unorthodox London, crown 8vo (6s.)—2,000 vols. of Griffith & Farran's Devotional Library—200 Lockwood's Marlborough College (10s. 6d.)—121 Diez, Romance Languages (12s.)—100 Huxley's Elementary Osteology (1l. 1s. 6d.)—740 Bards and the Birds—650 Roderick Random—3,000 Railway Volumes—Small Stock of Fancy Stationery and Leather Goods—Several Hundred Original Wood-Blocks by Bewick, &c.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

CONDOVER HALL, SHREWSBURY.

SALE of the APPOINTMENTS to this Ancient Elizabethan Mansion, including Pictures, Engravings, Old Japan China, Bronzes, Antique English Furniture, French, Italian, and Dutch Marqueterie, and numerous important Effects worthy the attention of Collectors and others, being the Property of the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq.

MESSRS. WM. HALL, WATERIDGE & OWEN are favoured with instructions from the Rev. R. H. CHOLMONDELEY, who has disposed of the Condover Hall Estate, to hold the above SALE by AUCTION, commencing on TUESDAY, March 9, and Following Days.

Book Catalogues (6d. each) forwarded on application to the AUCTIONEERS, High-street, Shrewsbury. Sale each day at 12 o'clock to the minute.

A SELECTED PORTION of the Valuable Library of BERESFORD R. HEATON, Esq., and Valuable Books, the Property of Sir LEWIS MOLESWORTH, Bart.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 8, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising a Portion of the Library of BERESFORD R. HEATON, Esq., of Cheniston-gardens, Kensington; a Selected Portion of the Valuable Library of a GENTLEMAN, deceased; a Small Collection of Illustrated French Books, the Property of O. W. SELIGMAN, Esq.; a Selected Portion of the Library of Sir LEWIS MOLESWORTH, Bart., and other Properties, including Dibdin's Bibliographical Works—Valuable Topographical Works by Hunter, Thoresby, and Whitaker—Black-Letter Chronicles—Officium B. V. M. with Illuminations, Sæc. XV.—First Illustrated Edition of the Malermi Bible, 1490—First Editions of the Writings of Ruskin, Jesse, Swift, Matthew Arnold, Fielding, Pierce Egan, &c.—rare Sporting Books—Water-Colour Drawings, &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

The Original Manuscripts of Keats's Endymion and Lamia, entirely in the Autograph of the Poet.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 10, the ORIGINAL MANUSCRIPTS of KEATS'S ENDYMION and LAMIA, entirely in the Autograph of the Poet. These MSS. have never before been sold, and are in the exact condition in which they left the Printer. They are the Property of a relative of John Taylor, who published the Poems. Also TWO AUTOGRAPH MANUSCRIPTS of the late WILLIAM MORRIS, 'Mine and Thine,' a Poem, and 'An Old Story Retold'—an Unpublished Poem in the Autograph of W. M. Thackeray—and other Manuscripts.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Valuable Collection of Coins, the Property of E. C. KRUMBHOLZ, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, March 11, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the Valuable COLLECTION of ENGLISH COINS, in Gold, Silver, and Copper, including a few Patterns and Proofs, to which is added a very remarkable Series of German Thalers, &c., comprising Specimens from 1507 to the Present Day, and other Foreign Coins, many in the finest possible condition, formed by E. C. KRUMBHOLZ, Esq., Member of the Numismatic Society of London.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

THE MONTAGU COLLECTION OF COINS.
Final Portion of the Greek and Roman Series.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 15, and Four Following Days, the FINAL PORTION of the GREEK SERIES, together with a Small Series of Roman, Silver, and Bronze Coins and Medallions of the late H. MONTAGU, Esq.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues, illustrated with Autotype Plates, may be had, price 3s. each.

The Valuable Library of the late JAMES PARLANE, Esq., J.P., of Rusholme, Manchester.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION (by order of the Executors), at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on SATURDAY, March 20, and MONDAY, March 22, at 1 o'clock precisely, the Valuable LIBRARY of the late JAMES PARLANE, Esq., J.P., of Appleby Lodge, Rusholme, Manchester, including Rare Works on the Scots Colony in Darien—an extensive Collection of Civil War Tracts—Valuable Tracts and Books relating to Scotland—Archæological Publications—First Editions of Works by Defoe—Gaelic and Scottish Dictionaries—Old Tracts on Theology—Black-Letter Bibles—Reprints of Rare Books, &c., and comprising Burns's Poems, First Edinburgh Edition, 1787; Third Edition, 1787; Second Edinburgh Edition, 1793—Froude's History of England, 10 vols.—Dictionarium Scoto-Celticum, 2 vols.—Jamieson's Scottish Dictionary, with Supplement, 5 vols.—Swift's Gulliver's Travels, 2 vols., First Edition, &c. Also the REMAINING PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late Sir G. W. DASENT, D.C.L., &c., including Rare Works of Icelandic Literature, Sagas, Folk-lore, &c., many of which are Translated and Edited by Sir G. W. Dasent—Thackeray's The Snob and the Gownsman—Swinburne's Atalanta in Calydon, First Edition—Black-Letter Books, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Etchings, Oil Paintings, and Water-Colour Drawings of the late W. J. GALLOWAY, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION (by order of the Executors), at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 23, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of ETCHINGS, OIL PAINTINGS, and WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS, the Property of the late W. J. GALLOWAY, of Islington, comprising Etchings by Rajon, Waltner, Brunet Debaines F. Seymour Haden, H. Herkomer, R. Macbeth, C. Méryon, J. F. Millet, S. Palmer, &c.; Drawings by H. Herkomer, S. Prout, Sir J. E. Millais, Neuhuys, W. Hunt, Varley, T. B. Hardy, R. W. Macbeth, De Wint, Cattermole, J. M'N. Whistler, Sir E. Burne-Jones, &c.; Paintings by Joseph and Albert Neuhuys, W. Maris, T. Lloyd, T. Hines, Lord Leighton, and others.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Coins and Medals of the late Rev. THOMAS CALVERT, of Sandysike, Cumberland.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, March 26, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of COINS and MEDALS of the late Rev. THOMAS CALVERT, M.A., F.S.A., of Sandysike, Cumberland, including the following: Greek Silver, Roman and Byzantine Gold, Roman Brass and Denarii—an important series of Mohammedan Coins in Gold, Silver, and Copper—British, Anglo-Saxon, and English, Colonial, and Foreign Coins in Gold and Silver—a few War and other Medals, including a rare Dublin Regimental, 1780, &c.—Persian Talisman, Seals, Gems, &c.—Coin Cabinets and Numismatic Books.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Engravings by Masters of the English School, the Property of the Right Hon. the EARL of CRAWFORD.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 31, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS, including Fancy Subjects by Masters of the English School, some finely printed in Colours, comprising Master Philip Yorke and the Age of Innocence, both after Sir Joshua Reynolds—and Thoughts on Matrimony, after J. R. Smith, all in the finest condition, the Property of the Right Hon. the EARL of CRAWFORD; also other Properties, comprising Mezzotint Portraits after Sir J. Reynolds, &c.—the 'Cries of London,' after Wheatley—Lady Kenyon, after Hoppner—Miss Farren, after Sir T. Lawrence—and others; also the Series of Six Original Water-Colour Drawings by R. Caldecott illustrating 'The Mad Dog,' by Oliver Goldsmith, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

[For Continuation of Sales, see next page.]

NOW READY, price 30s. net.

A DICTIONARY OF BIRDS.

By ALFRED NEWTON, M.A. F.R.S.,
Professor of Zoology and Comparative Anatomy in the University of Cambridge.

Assisted by HANS GADOW, F.R.S., Strickland Professor and University Lecturer in Advanced Morphology, Cambridge.

With Contributions by RICHARD LYDEKKER, B.A. F.R.S.; CHARLES S. ROY, M.A. F.R.S.; and ROBERT W. SHUFELDT, M.D. (late United States Army).

"A work which the ornithologist must have beside him for constant reference. Marks an epoch in ornithological literature."
Daily Chronicle.

"The most important work on ornithology that has ever been published in this country."
New Saturday.

"For the general scope and execution of the dictionary we have no words but warm praise."
Pall Mall Gazette.

"This valuable and important work, the best in its class that has yet seen the light."
Notes and Queries.

"Combines high scientific authority with lucidity, as well as condensation of statement and convenience of arrangement."
Scotsman.

"The completion of this important treatise is a considerable event in the history of ornithology. It would be difficult to praise adequately the volume as a whole."
Saturday Review.

"Stands entirely alone among the vast and still increasing crowd of works on ornithology. The author's name is in itself sufficient guarantee for the excellence of his workmanship; but even those who are familiar with his previous writings will hardly be prepared for a treatise so masterly as this."
Daily News.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square.

Sales by Auction.

MONDAY NEXT.

A Portion of a Manufacturer's Stock of Carpets and Rugs.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY NEXT, March 8 at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the Saturday prior 12 till 3 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

FRIDAY NEXT.—Miscellaneous Property.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, March 12, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, PHOTOGRAPHIC CAMERAS, Lenses, Stands, Shutters, and other Apparatus—Telescopes—Microscopes—Electricals—Jewellery—Furniture, Lanterns and Slides—and a Large Collection of Miscellaneous Effects, from various Private Sources.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

MONDAY, March 15.

The Valuable Collection of Shells formed by the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq., removed from Condover Hall, Shrewsbury, including many Fine and Rare Species, especially in Murex, Conus, Voluta, Pecten, and Spondylus, &c.; also the Beautiful Ebonized Plate-Glass Cases in which they are contained.

MR. J. C. STEVENS has received instructions to SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY, March 15, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the Saturday prior 12 till 3 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, March 8, MODERN PICTURES of the late C. C. GRIMES, Esq., and others.

On TUESDAY, March 9, ENGRAVINGS of the EARLY ENGLISH SCHOOL, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

On WEDNESDAY, March 10, the CELLAR of WINES of the late JOHN CLUTTON, Esq., and choice Wines from other Private Cellars.

On THURSDAY, March 11, the COLLECTION of DRAWINGS by the Right Hon. the EARL of DUNMORE.

On FRIDAY, March 12, fine OLD SILVER and SILVER-GILT PLATE, including a few Pieces, the Property of the late Mrs. DURIE; Jewels—Lace—Miniatures—Snuff-Boxes, &c.

On SATURDAY, March 13, the COLLECTIONS of PICTURES of the late Sir CHARLES BOOTH, Bart., and of the late SNOWDON HENRY, Esq.

On MONDAY, March 15, the COLLECTION of PORCELAIN, PLATE, and DECORATIVE OBJECTS of the late Sir CHARLES BOOTH, Bart.; and SHERATON, CHIPPENDALE, and MAHOGANY FURNITURE, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

On MONDAY, March 15, and Following Days, the COLLECTION of the ENGRAVED WORKS of Sir JOSHUA REYNOLDS, formed by FREDERIC, Third EARL of BESSBOROUGH.

On THURSDAY, March 18, COLLECTION of PORCELAIN and OLD ENGLISH FURNITURE of a LADY, deceased, and DECORATIVE FURNITURE, TAPESTRY, and OBJECTS of ART from numerous sources.

On FRIDAY, March 19, the REMAINING WORKS of the late G. A. FRIPP, R.W.S.

On SATURDAY, March 20, the COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of J. NUTTALL, Esq., and the COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES of the late J. A. BACCHUS, Esq.

On TUESDAY, March 23, and Following Days, the COLLECTION of the WORKS of FRANCIS BARTOLOZZI, R.A., formed by FREDERIC, Third EARL of BESSBOROUGH.

MR. JOHN PARNELL will SELL by AUCTION, at his Literary and Art Sale-Rooms, 12, Rockley-road, Shepherd's Bush Green (adjoining Holland Park-avenue), London, W., at 1 o'clock each day—

On MONDAY, March 8, QUEEN VICTORIA, old Royal Russian, Scotch, English, French, Prussian, and German Portraits, Prints, and Heraldry, connected with the Queen's Reign and Family, Palaces and Dominions.

On TUESDAY, March 9, all Counties of England and Wales, old separate Topographical Collections—old English Road Books—Early Railway Maps, Books, and Views—City and Town Histories and Guides—County Directories and other Books—Sixteenth-Century Maps—old London, Scotland, and Ireland Topographical Collections.

On WEDNESDAY, March 10, OLD SHAKESPERIAN COLLECTIONS, all the Plays separate—old Theatrical Portraits—Water-Colour Stage Drawings—Italian Operas and Playbills—Early Kean Playbills and Letters—old Water Colours and Crayons, English and Foreign—Rare Autograph Letters—Early Newspaper Stamps, A.D. 1794—and Seventeenth Century Water-Marked Paper.

On THURSDAY, March 11, SIXTEENTH CENTURY PAINTINGS, Engravings, Books, Drawings—Armada, Imperial, Royal, and other Portraits of the Sixteenth Century—old Jersey Deeds, A.D. 1583—Engravings by Albert Durer, A.D. 1507 to 1520—and Spanish MS. A.D. 1614.

On FRIDAY, March 12, OLD BRITISH PEERAGE and OLD FAMILY PORTRAITS, PRINTS, and HERALDRY—old Nelson and British Navy Portraits, Drawings, Paintings, Gazettes, Prints, and Songs from the time of King Charles II.—old Newspapers of New Zealand, England, Ireland, France, Scotland, Orange Free State, St. Lucie, India, Italy, Germany, Switzerland, and United States.

On SATURDAY, March 13, rare old MEZZOTINT and COLOURED ENGRAVINGS—original "Kew Bee" Art Society Water-Colour Drawings and Paintings—early Bartolozzi and Hogarth Engravings—Personal Relics of General Gordon, Napoleon I., and George III.—Memorial Mugs of Sir Walter Scott, Sir Robert Peel, and John Wesley.

On view mornings of Sale.

All Lots must be cleared before 12 o'clock the day after Sale.

WEST FRONT, NOTRE DAME; Royal Academy Lectures on Architecture; American Theatres; Proposed New Drainage By-laws for London, &c.

See the BUILDER of March 6 (4*d.*; by post, 4½*d.*).

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

Monthly, price Half-a-Crown.

THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

Contents for MARCH.

CHARTERED COMPANY in SOUTH AFRICA. By the Rev. John Mackenzie.
The HOUSE of COMMONS and its LEADER. By Herbert Paul.
SOME RECENT ENGLISH THEOLOGIANS. Lightfoot, Westcott, Hort, Jowett, Hatch. By A. M. Fairbairn, D.D.
OUR WAR SHIPS. By William Allan, M.P.
The PRONUNCIATION of GREEK in ENGLAND. By J. Gennadius.
The FAMINE in my GARDEN. By Phil Robinson.
An IRISH CHANNEL TUNNEL. With Map. By J. Ferguson Walker.
LIFE in a FRENCH COMMUNE. By Robert Donald.
TEN YEARS of MILLIONAIRES. By H. S. Maclauchlan.
FREE CHURCH UNITY: the New Movement. By the Rev. Hugh Price Hughes.

London: Isbister & Co., Limited, Covent-garden, W.C.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
No. 241. MARCH, 1897.

FOR GREECE and CRETE. By Algernon Charles Swinburne.
The CRETAN QUESTION. By Francis de Pressensé (Foreign Editor of Le Temps).
GREATER BRITAIN and the QUEEN'S LONG REIGN. By Sir Julius Vogel, K.C.M.G. (ex-Premier of New Zealand).
FIGHTING the FAMINE in INDIA. By J. D. Rees, C.I.E.
ENGLAND'S ADVANCE NORTH of ORANGE RIVER. By Melius de Villiers (Chief Justice of the Orange Free State).
MR. HERBERT SPENCER and LORD SALISBURY on EVOLUTION. By His Grace the Duke of Argyll.
HOW POOR LADIES LIVE. By Miss Frances H. Low.
The MASS: Primitive and Protestant (in correction of Mr. J. Horace Round). By Geo. W. E. Russell.
The LIMITS of BIOGRAPHY. By Charles Whibley.
ABOUT ALEXANDRIA. By Professor Mahaffy.
HINTS on CHURCH REFORM. By the Rev. Dr. Jessopp.
DELIBERATE DECEPTION in ANCIENT BUILDINGS. By G. A. T. Middleton.
The SINS of ST. LUBBOCK. By St. John E. C. Hankin.
SKATING on ARTIFICIAL ICE. By Mrs. Walter Creyke.
FRANCE and RUSSIA in CHINA. By Holt S. Hallett.
NOTE on the DECLARATION of PARIS. By Major Charles à Court.

London: Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.

THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.
Edited by W. L. COURTNEY.

The MARCH Issue contains:—
AN OPEN LETTER TO THE RIGHT HON. A. J. BALFOUR.
TURKISH FINANCE.
LORD SALISBURY AND THE EASTERN QUESTION.
MR. RHODES'S SPEECHES.
SUN YAT SEN ON CHINA'S PRESENT AND FUTURE.
JORIS KARL HUYSMANS.
And other Articles on
The Genius of D'Annunzio, by Ouida—Workers' Insurance Legislation in Germany—Our Gentlemanly Failures—Justice for the Taxpayer—Gibbon the Man.

CHAPMAN'S MAGAZINE,
Edited by OSWALD CRAWFURD,
For MARCH,
Contains the Commencement of
MISS VIOLET HUNT'S NEW NOVEL,
UNKIST, UNKIND!
And SEVEN SHORT COMPLETE STORIES
By CONSTANCE MILMAN, the Hon. DAPHNE RENDEL, H. WAREHAM, ROBERT STEWART, ALFRED HURRY, CYRIL MULLET, and A. H. HAMER.
Price SIXPENCE.
Chapman & Hall, Limited, London.

THE FORUM.

1*s.* 6*d.* MARCH, 1897. 1*s.* 6*d.*

TAXATION: its Amount, Justification, and Methods. Hon. Perry Belmont.
The ANGLO-AMERICAN ARBITRATION TREATY. Hon. Frederic R. Coudert.
SOME COMMENT on the TREATY. Theodore S. Woolsey.
RECENT TRIUMPHS in MEDICINE and SURGERY. Dr. Geo. F. Shrady.
The TORREY BANKRUPT BILL. Hon. Jay L. Torrey.
AMERICAN EXCAVATIONS in GREECE: Ikaria, Anthedon, Thisbe. J. Gennadius.
MR. CLEVELAND and the SENATE. James Schouler.
KANSAS: its Present and Future. William Allen White.
NEW LETTERS of EDWARD GIBBON. Frederic Harrison.
WHAT ARE NORMAL TIMES? E. V. Smalley.
IS ENGLAND'S INDUSTRIAL SUPREMACY a MYTH? S. N. D. North.
MODERN GREECE. The late Prof. John Stuart Blackie.

London: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 24, Bedford-street, Strand.

Price 2*d.*; by post, 2½*d.* Yearly Subscription, 2*s.* 8*d.*

THE LITERARY GUIDE:
A RATIONALIST REVIEW.

Devoted mainly to Books and Publications which deal with Religion, Philosophy, Science, and Ethics from a Rationalist standpoint.

No. 9, MARCH, 1897, contains:—
DR. GOLDWIN SMITH'S GUESSES.
ARISTOTLE'S FIRST PRINCIPLES.
The NEW "ANTE-NICENE" VOLUME.
The SCIENCE of MIND.
ON BEHALF of POSTERITY.
The HUMAN JESUS in TRAGEDY.
BIBLE STORIES and HISTORICAL CRITICISM.
MILL'S EARLY ESSAYS.
RELIGION and the SCIENTIFIC SPIRIT.
ETHICS for the YOUNG.
GERMAN CRITICS at WORK.
SIGNS and WARNINGS (gleaned from the Religious Press).
RANDOM JOTTINGS.
CHATS ABOUT BOOKS. V. With J. H. Muirhead, M.A.
RATIONALISM in the MAGAZINES.
 Nos. 2 to 8 may still be obtained.

London: Watts & Co. 17, Johnson's-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

MRS. HUNGERFORD'S NEW NOVEL,
LOVICE,
will be ready on March 11 at all Libraries and Booksellers'. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

MARK TWAIN'S The PRINCE and the PAUPER. A New and Cheaper Edition, with 200 Illustrations, is now ready. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

GRANT ALLEN'S AT MARKET VALUE. A Cheap Edition is now ready. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2s.

Mrs. ALEXANDER'S BY WOMAN'S WIT. A New Edition is now ready. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

BEYOND the PALE: a Romance. By B. M. CROKER, Author of 'A Family Likeness.' Crown 8vo. buckram, 6s.

"A thoroughly vivacious and attractive novel of Irish life and society.....Sure to have a run at the circulating libraries."—Leeds Mercury.

"The characters are admirably drawn."
Westminster Gazette.

"The unflagging vivacity and brisk naturalness of Mrs. Croker's style have rarely been more happily displayed than in her latest novel.....This capital story.....Almost every character in the story is typical, and all the types are true.'
World.

WITH the RED EAGLE: a Romance of the Tyrol. By WILLIAM WESTALL. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

"A fine historical romance."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Marked by an originality and a dash that hold you like a spell from first to last.....Fresh, vigorous, and altogether delightful."—Black and White.

A MISSING WITNESS. By Frank BARRETT, Author of 'The Sin of Olga Zassoulich.' With 8 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Written in Mr. Frank Barrett's best manner.....The interest is well maintained from the opening to the closing chapters."—Daily Telegraph.

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. WALLER. With 9 Full-Page Illustrations by the Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"There are passages that are delightful.....It will please readers who love mysteries and would escape for a while from the tedious round and common light of workaday life."
British Review.

An ANXIOUS MOMENT. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD, Author of 'Molly Bawn.' SECOND EDITION. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"In the happiest style of the author of 'Molly Bawn.'"
World.

The PRINCE of BALKISTAN. By ALLEN UPWARD, Author of 'A Crown of Straw.' Cheap Edition. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2s.

The MASTER of TRENANCE. By T. W. SPEIGHT, Author of 'The Mysteries of Heron Dyke.' Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

APRIL'S LADY. By Mrs. Hungerford, Author of 'Phyllis.' A New Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

PHIL MAY'S SKETCH-BOOK. Fifty-four Humorous Drawings. CHEAPER EDITION. Folio, cloth, 2s. 6d.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & CO.

NEW EDITION, WITH SEVENTY PAGES OF NEW MATTER AND A NEW INDEX.

APPEARANCE and REALITY: a Metaphysical Essay. By F. H. BRADLEY, M.A., Fellow of Merton Coll., Oxon. Large 8vo. 12*s.*

ON HUMAN NATURE: Essays in Ethics and POLITICS. By ARTHUR SCHOPENHAUER. Translated by BAILEY SAUNDERS, M.A. 2*s.* 6*d.*

Contents:—HUMAN NATURE — GOVERNMENT — FREE WILL and FATALISM — CHARACTER—MORAL INSTINCT—ETHICAL REFLECTIONS.

The NICENE CREED: a Manual for the Use of Candidates for Holy Orders. By the Rev. J. J. LIAS, Chancellor of Llandaff and Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Llandaff. 6*s.*

"He has done excellent service in the preparation of this scholarly, open-minded, and luminous exposition of the Nicene Creed."—Speaker.

The ARMENIAN ACTS of APOLLONIUS, and other Monuments of Early Christianity. By F. C. CONYBEARE, M.A. Second Edition, with an Appendix. 370 pages, 8vo. 6*s.* Giving, in a succession of vivid pictures, an insight into the practical working of Christianity during the first three centuries.

The RATIONAL, or SCIENTIFIC, IDEAL of MORALITY. Containing a Theory of Cognition, a Metaphysic of Religion, and an Apologia pro Amore. By P. F. FITZGERALD. 376 pages, 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

"There is much that is suggestive of high-thinking in the pages of this book."—Scotsman.

TEN YEARS in a PORTSMOUTH SLUM. By FATHER DOLLING. With 18 Full-Page Plates. Third Edition. 6*s.*

"We know of no slum record so well told or so important. Should be carefully read by every one interested in the practical work of reform."—Progressive Review.

TRUE WOMANHOOD. By W. Cunningham, D.D., Hon. Fellow of Caius College and Vicar of St. Mary's, Cambridge. The Power of Woman; Marriage as a Vocation; Motherhood; Woman's Work; Woman as a Teacher; Woman's Mission. In white and gold, 1*s.*

EXPERIENCE: a Chapter of Prolegomena. By WILFRED RICHMOND, M.A. Cloth, 2*s.*

"A short philosophical argument directed against the main position of Agnosticism and the philosophy of the unknowable. Acutely reasoned, and deserves attention."—Scotsman.

SIDE LIGHTS on SHAKSPERE. With 2 Illus- trations. By L. ROSSI and E. M. CORBOULD. Cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

Contents:—SHAKSPERE and his SONNETS—A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM—KING RICHARD II.—The MERCHANT of VENICE—KING HENRY V.—AS YOU LIKE IT — JULIUS CÆSAR — HAMLET, PRINCE of DENMARK — MACBETH — KING HENRY VIII.—INDEX.

"Filled with facts and written with a degree of freshness, not to say vivacity, which is uncommon. Exactly the kind of information which students preparing for examinations require."—Speaker.

'TOM JONES' FOR FAMILY READING.

TOM JONES: the History of a Foundling. By HENRY FIELDING. Adapted for Family Reading by his Great-Granddaughter, J. E. M. FIELDING. 6*s.*

"Miss Fielding has performed a useful service in preparing an expurgated 'Tom Jones.' Fielding is thus for the first time made accessible to an important section of the reading public. The volume preserves the spirit while preserving the very language of the author. Had Fielding lived it is no great feat of imagination to fancy his doing for himself what has been so successfully done by his descendant."—Daily Chronicle. "All indecency and even indelicacy have been removed. We do not see what more could be done in the way of elimination and alteration than has been done without spoiling the story altogether, while the alterations have been effected with a very skilful hand. Enough remains to leave 'Tom Jones' a very attractive novel."—Times.

The FARM in the KAROO: a Sketch of South African Life. By Mrs. CAREY-HOBSON. Illustrated. 2*s.* 6*d.*

"Delightfully natural."—Daily Telegraph. "A regular boy's book, all about snakes, elephants, Hottentots, ostrich farming, baboons, and other marvels of the Cape."—Saturday Review. "Excellent reading."—Literary World.

FERDINAND LASSALLE and HELENE VON DONNIGES. A Modern Tragedy. By ELIZABETH E. EVANS. 1*s.*

"No novelist ever imagined a more romantic story."—Glasgow Herald. "A well-written and deeply interesting little book."—Western Morning News.

EDUCATION of GIRLS and WOMEN in GREAT BRITAIN. By C. S. BREMNER. With a Preface by Miss E. P. HUGHES, of Cambridge.

A very comprehensive account of Primary, Secondary, and Higher Education in Great Britain from personal investigation and inspection, with the co-operation of many experts.

"There are probably at least four classes of persons who will find an interest in this book: (1) British teachers of all kinds, who will be enabled by its means to get a fair survey of the education of the British Isles; (2) our fellow teachers in other parts of the British Empire; (3) foreigners who desire to understand the present state of English education; (4) all those interested in educational progress—parents, teachers, politicians, and social reformers."—EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

AESCHYLUS.—PROMETHEUS BOUND. Edited, with Introduction, Appendices, and Notes, by C. R. HAINES, M.A. (Uppingham). With 10 Archæological Illustrations and Map. 3*s.* 6*d.*

"A beautiful little edition of this masterpiece. Excellent both from a scholastic and æsthetic point of view, the notes showing great taste and judgment, the illustrations from ancient art being charming and instructive, and the printing and paper of first-rate quality."—Educational Review. "The attention is at once arrested by the taste and excellent get-up of the book. A charming little volume."—Academy.

The SCIENCE of EDUCATION. By J. F. HERBART. Translated, with a Biographical Introduction, by H. M. and E. FELKIN. With a Preface by OSCAR BROWNING, M.A. A New Edition. 4*s.* 6*d.*

TWO USEFUL ANNUALS.

1. The PUBLIC SCHOOLS YEAR BOOK, 1897. Eighth Year of Issue. Cloth, 2*s.* 6*d.*

Contains full information relating to the 60 principal Public Schools, besides Woolwich, Sandhurst, Cooper's Hill, and the Britannia. Appendices of Preparatory Schools, Entrance Scholars, Public School Bibliography, New Books, &c.

2. The ART SCHOOLS of LONDON: Painting, Music, &c. By T. MACKENZIE. Cloth, 2*s.* 6*d.*

"An able handbook for the guidance of those intending to follow the study of art. It is assuredly the best of its kind."—Black and White.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

BRADSHAW (Dr. JOHN).—CONCORDANCE to the POETICAL WORKS of MILTON, LL.D. 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

DEMARR (J.).—ADVENTURES in AUSTRALIA FIFTY YEARS AGO (1839–44). Map and Plates. 6*s.*

HARTMANN von AUE: der ARME HEINRICH. With Introduction, Notes, and Glossary by J. G. ROBERTSON, M.A. Ph.D. D.Sc. 4*s.* 6*d.*

HINTON (C. H.).—SCIENTIFIC ROMANCES. Series II. 6*s.*

INDERWICK (F. A., Q.C.).—The KING'S PEACE: Historical Sketch of the English Law Courts. 16 Plates. 4*s.* 6*d.*

LAYCOCK (F. U.).—ECONOMICS and SOCIAL- ISM: a Demonstration of the Cause and Cure of Trade Depressions and National Poverty. 7*s.* 6*d.*

LEA (Dr. H. C.).—HISTORY of AURICULAR CONFESSION and ABSOLUTION in the LATIN CHURCH. 3 vols. 45*s.*

LILLIE (A.).—The WORSHIP of SATAN in MODERN FRANCE. 6*s.*

MORRIS (Wm.) and BAX (E. B.).—SOCIALISM: its Growth and Outcome. Second Edition. 3*s.* 6*d.*

SANDEMAN (G.).—PROBLEMS of BIOLOGY. 6*s.*

SANDYS (Dr. J. E.).—FIRST GREEK READER and WRITER. 2*s.* 6*d.*

STEPHEN (LESLIE).—SOCIAL RIGHTS and DUTIES. 2 vols. 9*s.*

STOUT (Prof. G. F.).—ANALYTIC PSYCHOLOGY. 2 vols. 21*s.*

TEBB (W.) and VOLLUM (Col. E. P., M.D.).— PREMATURE BURIAL. 5*s.*

WUNDT (Prof. W.).—LECTURES on HUMAN and ANIMAL PSYCHOLOGY. Edited by Prof. J. E. CREIGHTON and Prof. E. B. TITCHENER. Cuts. Second Edition. 10*s.* 6*d.*

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & CO., LIMITED, London.

TROOPER PETER HALKET

OF MASHONALAND.

BY

OLIVE SCHREINER,

Author of 'Dreams,' 'Dream Life and Real Life,' &c.

With Photogravure Frontispiece, cloth, 6s.

ATHENÆUM, February 27, 1897.

"Mrs. Schreiner has achieved a remarkable literary success. 'Trooper Peter Halket' does not compete with 'The Story of an African Farm' either as a narrative or as a study of characters, but it is, in our opinion, superior in workmanship.....It is a well-sustained and eloquent parable, and several of the minor parables contained in it are told with rare grace of style and vigour of expression.....It is a book as conspicuous for its dramatic force and artistic construction as for the impressive moral it is intended to convey."

SPEAKER, February 27, 1897.

"There can be no question as to the remarkable literary merits of 'Trooper Peter Halket.' Not even in 'A South African Farm' is the exquisite skill and delicacy of Olive Schreiner's art displayed more conspicuously than in these pages. There are some passages in the book which one reads with a sudden thrill of wonder and surprise, such as thrills the mind at first sight of some scene of natural beauty the existence of which had been undreamed of.....We have not referred to the most remarkable feature of this very remarkable book—the introduction into it of our Lord. With such wonderful skill and delicacy does Olive Schreiner perform her task, that before it is finished she reconciles her readers to her audacity, and leaves them completely under the spell of her enchantment."

ACADEMY, February 27, 1897.

"This book, in its directness, its actuality, its intention of personal invective, is strikingly different from anything else Olive Schreiner has done.....It is an extraordinarily powerful bit of writing.....The conclusion is vigorously and pointedly told.....The book breathes a spirit of humanity, of sincerity, of unfaltering righteousness, which is rare enough in contemporary literature."

PALL MALL GAZETTE, February 20, 1897.

"There is no need to say that it is well and impressively written; that the story of Peter's life is sketched for us by himself only as a true artist could do it. The book is full of passionate eloquence and entreaty."

DAILY NEWS, February 17, 1897.

"The story is one that is certain to be widely read, and it is well that it should be so, especially at this moment; it grips the heart and haunts the imagination. To have written such a book is to render a supreme service, for it is as well to know what the rough work means of subjugating inferior races."

DAILY CHRONICLE, February 19, 1897.

"We advise our readers to purchase and read Olive Schreiner's new book, 'Trooper Peter Halket of Mashonaland.' Miss Schreiner is one of the few magicians of modern English literature, and she has used the great moral, as well as the great literary, force of her style to great effect."

ECHO, February, 1897.

"A story to be bought and read and re-read, for it is brimful of meaning.....It is a book which only a good and great woman of genius could have given us."

SCOTSMAN, February 18, 1897.

"Some of the imaginative passages are very fine.....The book is powerfully written."

BIRMINGHAM DAILY POST, February 16, 1897.

"The story is striking and sometimes piercing in its lights. Even in handling so thorny a subject as the chequered history of Rhodesia, Miss Schreiner commands a thrilling response to that enthusiasm for moral ideals which is the pervasive inspiration of all her works."

METHODIST TIMES, February 25, 1897.

"The volume before us is a masterpiece, and from a purely literary standpoint takes its place with the masterpieces that preceded it. The consummate art which has produced this brief and apparently slight work will escape the observation of a casual or superficial reader. But a second, and yet more a third, perusal disclose the ineffable sign of genius.....This volume is one of the most impressive exhibitions of real Christianity that in our day has seen the light."

INDEPENDENT, February 18, 1897.

"Is in many respects an extrordinary work.....Every page, nay almost every line, rings with bitter irony, savage invective, barbed satire, and thundering denunciations against the lust for gold which has brutalized South African pioneers. Miss Schreiner's vivid imagination and extraordinarily trenchant style are here wedded for the single purpose of exposing the unscrupulous tactics of men who, under the guise of extending our Empire, have waded through blood and outrage to positions of personal affluence and political power."

London: T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

MESSRS. KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO.

BEG TO ANNOUNCE THE

COMPLETION OF BIBLIOGRAPHICA.

BIBLIOGRAPHICA:

PAPERS ON BOOKS, THEIR HISTORY AND ART.

IN TWELVE QUARTERLY PARTS.

BEGUN MARCH, 1894, FINISHED FEBRUARY, 1897.

THE FORTY CONTRIBUTORS.

W. H. ALLNUTT.
ARBER.
J. W. BRADLEY.
A. J. BUTLER.
R. C. CHRISTIE.
A. CLAUDIN.
CYRIL DAVENPORT.
AUSTIN DOBSON.
R. K. DOUGLAS.
E. G. DUFF.
C. I. and M. A. ELTON.
W. Y. FLETCHER.
R. GARNETT.
R. E. GRAVES.
W. J. HARDY.
LAURENCE HOUSMAN.
P. KRISTELLER.
ANDREW LANG.
G. S. LAYARD.
S. L. LEE.
W. D. MACRAY.
FALCONER MADAN.
R. MARTINEAU.
WILLIAM MORRIS.
E. D. NORTH.
JOSEPH PENNELL.
H. R. PLOMER.
A. W. POLLARD.
S. C. PRIDEAUX.
R. PROCTOR.
G. R. REDGRAVE.
Sir J. C. ROBINSON.
N. RONDOT.
H. O. SOMMER.
W. B. SQUIRE.
E. J. STRANGE.
Sir E. M. THOMPSON.
OCTAVE UZANNE.
H. B. WHEATLEY.
G. C. WILLIAMSON.

SOME OF THE CONTRIBUTIONS.

ON MANUSCRIPTS.—English Illuminations—The Grotesque and the Humorous in Mediæval Illuminations—The Calligraphers of the Middle Ages—A Manuscript of the Biblia Pauperum—Venetian Ducali.

ON PRINTERS AND PRINTING.—The Stationers at the Sign of the Trinity—The Chronology of the Early Aldines—The Early Italian Book Trade—The Books of the Carthusians—English Provincial Presses—Private Printing in France in the Fifteenth Century—John Rastell and his Contemporaries—The Strawberry Hill Press—Early Representations of the Printing Press.

ON BOOK-ILLUSTRATION.—Florentine and Pavese Book-Illustrations—The Illustrated Books of Augsburg and Ulm—The Illustrations in French Books of Hours—The Illustrated Books of Sebastian Brant—Italian Initial Letters—Heraldic and Pictorial Initials—Chinese and Japanese Illustrated Books.

ON BINDINGS.—A Grolier Binding—Florimond Badier—Little Gidding Bindings—Samuel Mearne—Roger Payne—The Decoration of Book Edges—Woodcuts as Bindings.

ON MARKS OF OWNERSHIP.—The Book-Plates of J. Skinner, of Bath—English Armorial Book-Stamps.

ON COLLECTORS AND COLLECTING.—Queen Christina of Sweden and her Books—Samuel Pepys—Fielding—Dr. Mead—The Thomason Tracts—Names and Notes in Books.

MISCELLANEOUS.—The Earliest English Book-Lists—Little Books—English Writing Books—Puckle's Club—An Elizabethan Bookseller—The 'Guirlande de Julie'—Late Jacobite Tracts—The Isham Books—Foreign Dedications to Englishmen—La Bibliophilie Moderne.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Vol. I. has 23 Plates in Collotype or Colours, and about 60 Illustrations. Vol. II., 21 Plates and about 100 Illustrations. Vol. III., 22 Plates and about 125 Illustrations.

Price for the Three Volumes, in Parts, 5*l.* 5*s.* net.

In Volumes, bound in half-morocco, Roxburghe style, by Zaehnsdorf, 6*l.* 6*s.* net.

Vols. II. and III. can still be bought separately, price 30*s.* in parts, or 2*l.* 2*s.* in Zaehnsdorf binding.

Single Numbers, except Parts III. and IV., 10*s.* net.

"BY FAR THE FINEST BIBLIOGRAPHICAL PUBLICATION EVER ATTEMPTED IN ENGLISH."
TIMES.

PATERNOSTER HOUSE, CHARING CROSS-ROAD, LONDON.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

THE DONGOLA EXPEDITION.
Demy 8vo. 8s. 6d. net.

LETTERS FROM the SUDAN.

By the Special Correspondent of the Times,
E. F. KNIGHT.

Reprinted from the Times of April to October, 1896.
With Illustrations and Plans.

GUARDIAN.—"Those who read the graphic letters in the Times describing the march to Dongola will gladly welcome them again in the more enduring form of a volume."

THIRD THOUSAND NOW READY.

MISS KINGSLEY'S TRAVELS IN WEST AFRICA.

By Miss MARY H. KINGSLEY.
With 16 Full-Page and numerous Text Illustrations.
Demy 8vo. 21s. net.

PUNCH.—"She has a keen eye for character, an abiding sense of the picturesque, a humour that bubbles over in all places and predicaments, and a graphic pen."

Vol. II. now ready for delivery to Subscribers.

LIFE OF NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

By Prof. W. M. SLOANE, Ph.D. L.H.D.

Illustrated. In Twenty Parts, at 4s. net each; or in 4 vols. at 24s. net each. (Supplied only in sets.) Also ready, Vol. I. and Parts I.–VI.

 Subscriptions (sent through a Bookseller) will be received at any time, and the volumes or parts delivered at such intervals as may be convenient to the subscriber.

BY FRANCIS T. PALGRAVE.
Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

LANDSCAPE in POETRY, from HOMER to TENNYSON. With numerous representative Quotations. By FRANCIS T. PALGRAVE, late Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford.

TIMES.—"Mr. F. T. Palgrave has done a real service to lovers of literature by publishing this enlarged version of the lectures which he delivered at Oxford, as Professor of Poetry, during 1895. They are the work of a critic whose knowledge of the poetical literature of many countries is both wide and minute."

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Suggestive, sympathetic, refreshing to the spirit."

Now ready, Vols. I. and II. of the

PROSE WORKS of WILLIAM WORDSWORTH. Edited by Prof. KNIGHT. With Portraits and Vignettes etched by H. MANESSE. Globe 8vo. 5s. each.
[Eversley Series.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"Promises to be a final edition of one of the greatest and certainly of one of the most voluminous of modern poets."

MACMILLAN'S ILLUSTRATED STANDARD NOVELS.—New Volume.

The MISFORTUNES of ELPHIN and RHODODAPHNE. By THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK. With an Introduction by Professor GEORGE SAINTSBURY. Illustrated by F. H. TOWNSEND. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, antique paper, 3s. 6d.; "Peacock" Edition, gilt sides, back, and edges, 5s.

TIMES.—"The whole tale is eminently readable, and the story carries the reader quickly along, Mr. F. H. Townsend's illustrations adding to the charm of a new edition that deserves to be thoroughly popular."

8vo. 10s. net.

EPIC and ROMANCE. Essays on Mediæval Literature. By W. P. KER, Fellow of All Souls' College, Oxford, Professor of English Literature in University College, London.

TIMES.—"The book is the work of a scholar and a man of very wide reading."

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

2 vols. 8vo. 24s.

MEMOIRS OF BARON LEJEUNE,

Aide-de-Camp to Marshals Berthier, Davout, and Oudinot.

Translated and Edited from the Original French by Mrs. ARTHUR BELL (N. D'ANVERS).

With an Introduction by Major-General MAURICE, C.B.

 These Memoirs relate the experiences of Lejeune, one of the few officers who survived to tell the tale of their experiences during the First Empire. They were originally printed during the lifetime of their author for private circulation, but of the twenty copies issued all were lost or destroyed except the one from which the French edition has just been printed.

THIRD EDITION, with 6 Portraits, 8vo. 18s.

PICKLE THE SPY; or, the Incognito of Prince Charles.

By ANDREW LANG.

TIMES.—"In this brilliant study of the betrayal and extinction of Jacobitism, Mr. Andrew Lang has triumphantly solved a mystery which once baffled all Europe."

ATHENÆUM.—"Mr. Lang has unmasked a dead traitor, who has lain unsuspected in his Highland grave for close upon seven score years. It was right it should be done, and he has done it well."

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.—"'Pickle the Spy' will be one of the books by which the general reader may remember the year 1897."

8vo. 16s.

VITA MEDICA: Chapters of Medical Life and Work.

By Sir BENJAMIN WARD RICHARDSON, MD. LL.D. F.R.S.

NEW BOOK BY PROF. MAX MÜLLER.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE SCIENCE OF MYTHOLOGY.

By the Right Hon. Prof. MAX MÜLLER, K.M., Member of the French Institute.
2 vols. 8vo. 32s.

CABINET EDITION OF BISHOP CREIGHTON'S 'PAPACY.'

A HISTORY of the PAPACY from the GREAT SCHISM to the SACK of ROME (1378–1527). By M. CREIGHTON, D.D. Oxon. and Camb., Lord Bishop of London. New and Cheaper Edition. In 6 Monthly Volumes. Vol. 1. crown 8vo. 6s. [Now ready.

PRACTICAL STUDIES on the PARABLES of OUR LORD. By B. W. MATURIN, of the Society of St. John the Evangelist, Cowley St. John, Oxford, Author of 'Some Principles and Practices of the Spiritual Life,' &c. Crown 8vo. 5s.

LETTERS from CONSTANTINOPLE. By Mrs. Max Muller. With 12 Views of Constantinople and the Neighbourhood. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The CHURCH of the SIXTH CENTURY. Six Chapters in Ecclesiastical History. By WILLIAM HOLDEN HUTTON, B.D., Fellow and Tutor of St. John's College, Oxford. With 11 Illustrations of Churches, &c., in Constantinople. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The ANNUAL CHARITIES REGISTER and DIGEST for 1897: being a Classified Register of Charities in or available for the Metropolis, together with a Digest of Information respecting the Legal, Voluntary, and other Means for the Prevention and Relief of Distress and the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor, and an Elaborate Index. With an Introduction by C. S. LOCH, Secretary to the Council of the Charity Organization Society, London. 8vo. 4s. [In a few days.

ARISTOTLE and the EARLIER PERIPATETICS: being a Translation from Zeller's 'Philosophy of the Greeks.' By B. F. C. COSTELLOE, M.A., and J. H. MUIRHEAD, M.A. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 24s.

"All serious students of Greek philosophy will welcome this translation of a work which belongs to the first rank of Aristotelian literature."—Times.

The STAPELTONS of YORKSHIRE: being the History of an English Family from very Early Times. By H. E. CHETWYND-STAPYLTON, Author of 'The Chetwynds of Ingestre.' With Illustrations by the Author. 8vo. 14s. [In a few days.

NEW ROMANCE BY MR. WILLIAM MORRIS.

The WELL at the WORLD'S END: a Tale. By William Morris, Author of 'The Earthly Paradise.' 2 vols. 8vo. 28s.

FOR the WHITE ROSE of ARNO: a Story of the Jacobite Rising of 1745. By OWEN RHOSCOMYL, Author of 'Battlement and Tower,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"We follow the fortunes of Mr. Owen Rhoscomyl's personages with breathless interest from the first page to the last.....'For the White Rose of Arno' ought to take a high place in the long list of popular romances dealing with the Stuart cause."—Daily Telegraph.

The PRINCESS DÉSIRÉE: a Romance. By Clementina Black. With 8 Illustrations by John Williamson. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"An uncommonly amusing and skilful adventure."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"The reader is carried along without pause to the very last page. It is a stirring and well-written story of the quasi-historical sort."—Literary World.

LONGMAN'S MAGAZINE.

No. 173. MARCH, 1897. 8vo. price 6d.

The CHEVALIER D'AURIAC. Chaps. 6–8. By S. Levett Yeats, Author of 'The Honour of Savelli.'

ANNE MURRAY. By Lady Verney.

A NINETEENTH CENTURY CRAFT-GILD. By L. M. Roberts.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS: Ancient and Modern. By Eric Parker.

BEN PLUMBY'S CORNET. By Mary L. Pendered.

MILK DANGERS and REMEDIES. By Mrs. Percy Frankland.

AT the SIGN of the SHIP. By Andrew Lang.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. London, New York, and Bombay.

MESSRS. SKEFFINGTONS' NEW NOVELS, &c.

JUST OUT, crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

HELEN MATHERS' NEW BOOK 'THE JUGGLER AND THE SOUL.'

A startling and striking New Story by the AUTHOR of 'COMING THRO' THE RYE.'

The DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—"A weird and fanciful narrative of a formidable and startling character."

The STANDARD says:—"Highly exciting, thrilling, and mysterious."

The COURT JOURNAL says:—"We must not discount the eerie delight of readers of this weird, thrilling, and blood-curdling story by revealing the plot."

The DAILY NEWS says:—"We can confidently recommend this thrilling and uncanny romance."

The ATHENÆUM says:—"A terrific surgical secret removed from all ordinary experience. To this startling, but not inconceivable story, we refer our readers, not only for its blood-curdling qualities, but for the womanly study of the Anglo-Indian maiden Ninga."

The DAILY MAIL says:—"A weird and exciting novel."

FORTY-THIRD THOUSAND, JUST OUT, crown 8vo. cloth, price 5*s.*

MARIE CORELLI'S BOOK 'THE MURDER OF DELICIA.'

JUST OUT, demy 8vo. cloth, bevelled boards, gilt top, price 12*s.*

MY REMINISCENCES. By Signor ARDITI.

Illustrated with about 40 Portraits and Facsimile Letters, &c.

The ATHENÆUM says:—"The book will prove peculiarly interesting and serviceable as a work of reference.....Much charm in the book results from the genial spirit in which it is written."

The COURT JOURNAL says:—"This lavishly illustrated volume literally teems with countless good stories and authentic recollections of a truly wonderful list of brilliant names. There is not a dull moment in the book."

This day, by Rev. F. B. SMITH, crown 8vo. price 3*s.* 6*d.*

PARSONS AND WEAVERS: a Study in Lancashire Clerical Work.

This Original and most interesting New Book includes Chapters on REPUTATION in General—In the Sunday School—As a Preacher—In Visiting—Among Dissenters—In Mission Rooms—In Social Intercourse, &c.

By H. A. D. SURRIDGE, M.A.—JUST OUT, elegant silk cloth, illustrated, price 6*s.*

CYRUS: a Tale of the Ten Thousand.

The MANCHESTER GUARDIAN says:—"Mr. Surridge has got up the scenery of his tale with care and accuracy. The story has no lack of adventures, of rescues, and of fighting both with beasts and with enemies."

By ESCA GRAY.—Crown 8vo. price 3*s.* 6*d.*

BELFIELD: a New Novel.

TENTH EDITION, with special Frontispiece by DU MAURIER, crown 8vo. illustrated paper wrapper, price 1*s.*

MY DOCTORS. By a Patient.

The SCOTSMAN says:—"Characteristic sketches of various types of doctors; what with friendly satire and good sense, it makes an interesting and amusing book."

The LITERARY WORLD says:—"Characterized by great acuteness and much wit."

NEXT WEEK. By C. J. WILLDEY.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

Translator of that successful Book, OLIVEIRA MARTIN'S 'The ENGLAND of TO-DAY.'

THE BOOK OF HUMBUG. An Exposure of Shams Literary and Social.

The humorous and clever sarcasm of this book cannot fail to obtain for it a very wide circle of readers.

Messrs. Skeffington will publish Four Important and most interesting New Novels on WEDNESDAY, March 17, viz.:—

By RICHARD PENDEREL, Author of 'Wilfrid Waide, Barrister and Novelist,' 'Dick Wylder,' &c.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

AS A ROARING LION.

By EDITH E. CUTHELL, Author of 'Only a Guardroom Dog,' 'A Baireuth Pilgrimage,' &c.—Crown 8vo. elegant cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

SWEET IRISH EYES: a Charming Story of Society Life.

By ERNEST G. HENHAM.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

GOD, MAN, AND THE DEVIL.

A most striking Novel dealing with the Marriage Question, Divorce, &c.

By LILIAN STREET, Author of 'The Little Plain Woman,' &c.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

NELL AND THE ACTOR.

London: SKEFFINGTON & SON, 163, Piccadilly, W.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

Now ready, price One Shilling.

THE TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE.

Contents for MARCH, 1897.

1. DEAR FAUSTINA. Chaps. 7-9.
2. The BATTLE of VAL.
3. TIME.
4. The FATE of the LETTER.
5. WALPOLE and "ST. HANNAH."
6. FOOL or ANGEL?
7. ABBÉ SCARRON.
8. BEAUTY and the BEAST.
9. The CAPITAL of BURGUNDY.
10. THAT IMPOSSIBLE SHE.
11. The CAREER of CLAUDIA. Chaps. 14-16.

NEW NOVELS

At all Libraries and Booksellers'.

THE CAREER OF CLAUDIA.

By F. M. PEARD,
Author of 'The Rose Garden,' &c.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The BACKSLIDER. By Constance SMITH, Author of 'The Repentance of Paul Wentworth.' In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12*s*.

The MISTRESS of BRAE FARM. By ROSA N. CAREY, Author of 'Nellie's Memories,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The TOWER of GHILZAN. By Surgeon-Major H. M. GREENHOW. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

ANTHONY BLAKE'S EXPERIMENT. In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12*s*.

GODDESSES THREE. By D. Hugh PRYCE. In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12*s*.

The YOKE of FREEDOM. By CHARLES JAMES, Author of 'On Turnham Green,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

MR. HISSEY'S ROAD BOOKS.

ON SOUTHERN ENGLISH ROADS. With a Plan of the Route taken, and 16 Full-Page Illustrations from Sketches by the Author. Demy 8vo. 16*s*.

THROUGH TEN ENGLISH COUNTIES. In demy 8vo. with 16 Full-Page Illustrations by the Author, and a Plan of the Route, 16*s*.

ACROSS ENGLAND in a DOG-CART. With 16 Illustrations from Sketches by the Author, and Plan of the Route. Demy 8vo. 16*s*.

AN OLD-FASHIONED JOURNEY in ENGLAND and WALES. Demy 8vo. with Frontispiece, 12*s*.

A HOLIDAY on the ROAD. With 14 Full-Page and 30 smaller Illustrations from Sketches by the Author. Demy 8vo. 16*s*.

ON the BOX SEAT. Demy 8vo. with 16 Full-Page Illustrations from Sketches by the Author. 16*s*.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

THE PEOPLE'S EDITION.
PRICE SIXPENCE.

The First Printing of 50,000 copies is now exhausted. A SECOND PRINTING of 50,000 copies is now in the press and will be ready in a few days.

In medium 8vo. paper cover.

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN.

By Mrs. CRAIK.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6*s*.

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR SHIPS and their COMMANDERS. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"Pleasantly written and readable as it is, it cannot but prove welcome to a large number of readers who have no access to the heavier naval literature from which it is drawn."—Scotsman.

In 1 vol. large crown 8vo. gilt top, price 6*s*.

BARRACK and BATTLEFIELD. TALES of the SERVICE at HOME and ABROAD. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'A Captain in the Fusiliers,' &c.

"Mr. Wood never fails to make his tragic point with force, and he presents the spirit of sturdy Tommy Atkins with fidelity to his original. A volume like this is always welcomed by both old and young."—Dundee Advertiser.

"There is nothing melodramatic about these narratives, which are obviously true to the life they profess to depict."
Globe.

UNDER THE ESPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY.
NOW READY, SIXTY-SIXTH EDITION.

1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved, 31*s*. 6*d*. bound, gilt edges.

LODGE'S PEERAGE AND BARONETAGE FOR 1897.

CORRECTED BY THE NOBILITY.

"That compendious and admirably printed guide to the peerage and baronetage of the British Empire has reached its sixty-sixth edition with the volume for 1897. The usefulness of this concise and carefully-edited book is enhanced by the excellent and stout paper on which it is printed."
Pall Mall Gazette, December 29, 1896.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

ALL IN ALL. By Corinna A. Bruce. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The SOUND of a VOICE. By Linda GARDINER, Author of 'His Heritage,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, 6*s*.

"An exceedingly able story."—Scotsman.

The WOOING of a FAIRY. By GERTRUDE WARDEN, Author of 'The Sentimental Sex,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"A clever, well-written story, which has this merit, that the key of the well-constructed plot is hidden until the last chapter."—Pall Mall Gazette.

An AUSTRALIAN DUCHESS. By AMYOT SAGON, Author of 'A Fair Palmist,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"Mr. Sagon's brightly written romance."—Daily Telegraph.

GENTLEMAN GEORGE: a Story without a Heroine. By Mrs. HERBERT MARTIN, Author of 'Britomart,' 'Her Début,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"Mrs. Herbert Martin has produced an excellent story of country life which loses nothing in interest from the fact that it has no heroine."—Scotsman.

BLIND BATS. By Margaret B. CROSS, Author of 'Stolen Honey,' 'Newly Fashioned,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"Miss Cross has a delightful style, fresh, crisp, and witty, without straining after epigrams, and her portraiture is throughout lifelike without being photographic."
Pall Mall Gazette.

The YOKE of STEEL. By C. J. WILLS, Author of 'The Pit Town Coronet,' &c., and GODFREY BURCHETT, Author of 'Dominic Penterne,' &c.

"The dialogue throughout is spontaneous and natural without lapsing into trivial platitudes or idle chatter. On the whole a capital novel."—Daily Telegraph.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

CASSELL & COMPANY'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

IMPORTANT NEW VOLUME.

READY IN A FEW DAYS, price 3*s*. 6*d*.

ESSAYS IN LIBERALISM.

CONTENTS.

The Liberal Tradition.
By HILAIRE BELLOC,
Late Scholar of Balliol College, Oxford.

Liberalism and Wealth.
By FRANCIS W. HIRST,
Late Scholar of Wadham College, Oxford.

Liberals and Labour.
By J. ALLSEBROOK SIMON,
Late Scholar of Wadham College, Oxford.

Liberalism in Outward Relations.
By J. S. PHILLIMORE,
Student of Christ Church, Oxford.

A Liberal View of Education.
By J. LAWRENCE HAMMOND,
Late Scholar of St. John's College, Oxford.

The Historic Basis of Liberalism.
By P. J. MACDONELL,
Late Scholar of Brasenose College, Oxford.

This book is the result of the Liberal revival recently so marked in the younger generation of Oxford men. The authors were originally brought together at the Union by a common belief in the adequacy of old principles to meet present-day difficulties. The essays put forward, from various points of view—historic, economic, moral, educational, imperial—a plea for the deductive method in politics, and urge a steady application of well-tried ideas to problems which mere hand-to-mouth opportunism cannot hope to solve. Mr. Gladstone has written to the authors of the volume a remarkable declaration criticizing collectivist proposals which will be found in the preface.

NOTICE.—The Sixth and Concluding Volume of SOCIAL ENGLAND, embracing the period from the Battle of Waterloo to the General Election of 1885, will be published during the Spring, price 18s.

Dedicated by permission to Her Majesty the Queen.

Messrs. CASSELL & COMPANY have pleasure in announcing that they are about to begin the publication of

A NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK, unique in character and of extraordinary interest, entitled

THE QUEEN'S EMPIRE.

A Pictorial Record in which the Modes of Government, National Institutions, Forms of Worship, Methods of Travel, Sports, Recreations, Occupations, and Home Life of the Inhabitants of the British Empire will be faithfully and vividly portrayed by means of artistic Reproductions of Photographic Views, most of which have been made specially for this work.

 Prospectuses, giving full particulars, will be sent post free on application.

CASSELL & COMPANY, LIMITED,
London, Paris, and Melbourne.

SATURDAY, MARCH 6, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Admiral Tryon's Life	303
The Centenary Burns	304
A Book of Travel in Hungary	305
Historical Research on Anglican Orders	306
Mr. Arthur Benson's Poems	307
The Indian Village Community	307
New Novels (The Spoils of Poynton; A Capful o' Nails; A Missing Witness; Arrested; Margaret Moore, Spinster; The Wooing of a Fairy; Gilbert Murray; Weighed in the Balance; Gentleman George; The Wise and the Wayward)	308–310
Law-Books	310
American Fiction	311
Bibliographical Literature	311
Our Library Table—List of New Books	312
Cromwell's Speeches; Mr. H. G. Hewlett; Prof. Tiele and Mr. Max Müller; St. Patrick; 'Siren Voices'; Degrees for Women at Cambridge; The Spring Publishing Season; Historical Manuscripts Commission; Sales; Notes from Paris	313–315
Literary Gossip	316
Science — Zoological Literature; Societies; Meetings; Gossip	318–319
Fine Arts—The Discovery of Buddha's Birthplace; Sales; Gossip	319–320
Music—The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week	320–321
Drama—The Week; Library Table; Gossip	321–322
Miscellanea	322

LITERATURE

The Life of Vice-Admiral Sir George Tryon, K.C.B. By Rear-Admiral C. C. Penrose FitzGerald. (Blackwood & Sons.)

Three and a half years ago the tragic death of Sir George Tryon was in every mouth, and the circumstances of it were much discussed and wondered over; but though during two summers, at least, he had been much talked of as one of the commanders in the naval manœuvres, it may be doubted whether, outside the navy, his name has lived in the public memory except in its melancholy connexion with the loss of the Victoria. We are glad, therefore, that it should now be brought forward in a pleasanter manner; for in many respects Tryon was a remarkable man—one who might have been expected to achieve greatness had the opportunity come within his reach, and who, without the opportunity, was recognized by all who knew him and by the whole service as a highly capable and accomplished officer, of a ready wit, a quick decision, great force of character, and a personal magnetism which inspired his subordinates with confidence, love, and respect, not unmixed, sometimes, with awe. It is not that he was a man of exceptional genius; but he had at least one of the qualities which carry genius to greatness—the capacity for taking infinite pains; and from his first entry into the service he devoted himself with singular energy, determination, and self-denial to prepare for the work that lay before him. Here is one instance which occurred whilst in his first ship, the Wellesley, carrying the flag of Lord Dundonald on the North American station:

"Some of the officers had planned a tour in the United States and had invited Tryon to accompany them. It seems that he at first thought that he could go, but then writes to his mother to say, 'I am sure I shall disappoint you in saying that I do not think I can go this year, for various reasons undermentioned, and I am sure you will say I am right in the end. First, I have a boat, and shall have plenty to do as to duty. It is a cutter, which is seldom given to a cadet. Secondly, I must this summer study hard with the naval instructor.....I could not think of going as long as I have a boat, particularly a cutter, which is seldom given to a cadet, particularly to the junior cadet in the ship; and therefore if I was to go away I should decidedly forfeit my claim in some measure to her. The money you sent me will keep: it won't melt."

Afterwards in the Vengeance he satisfied even that most exacting of mortals, the commander of a line-of-battle ship, whom Admiral FitzGerald quotes as now writing:

"He served with me, when I was commander of the Vengeance, for two years, as a midshipman, and a better young officer never existed; ever full of energy and zeal. As a boat midshipman and signal midshipman he was unrivalled. On my becoming flag captain to the late Admiral Lord Lyons, I applied, with his permission, for Tryon's appointment as one of the lieutenants of the Royal Albert, and as such he more than fulfilled the opinions I had formed of him in the junior ranks."

In the Vengeance he was with the fleet in the Black Sea, and as signal mate witnessed the battle of the Alma from the maintop, duly reporting all that he saw. He was afterwards for some time with the Naval Brigade in the trenches, but was ordered home in the beginning of 1855. He had previously been promoted by the admiral to a death vacancy, and, on passing his examination at Portsmouth, was again dispatched to the Black Sea as one of the lieutenants of the Royal Albert. His good and zealous conduct, which had won him early promotion as lieutenant, secured him an appointment to the royal yacht when the Royal Albert returned to England; to be followed two years later by a commission as commander, and in July, 1861, an appointment to the Warrior, then just commissioned, the first sea-going ironclad in our navy. After three years' experience of her he obtained an independent command, the Surprise, in the Mediterranean; and as an instance of the care and pains which he took to understand everything connected with his profession, Admiral FitzGerald quotes a report which he was desired by the senior officer at Gibraltar to make on a proposal of the Governor's that certain naval storehouses, which it was alleged the navy did not need, should be handed over to the land service, either permanently or on loan. Tryon reported to the effect that though they might not be absolutely wanted by the navy during peace, they would certainly be wanted in time of war, when the reclaiming of them would put the garrison to great inconvenience, when it would be most difficult for it to provide other accommodation, and when,

"the great question for the navy being the rapidity with which their stores could be embarked, a few hours' delay might make the difference of a good many miles, and possibly the failure of a chase or strategic combination."

Admiral FitzGerald adds:—

"It is only within the last few years that it has come to be generally recognized that the only value of Gibraltar to the empire is as a place for the replenishment of the British fleet; but Tryon held this view nearly [more than] thirty years ago."

When the Surprise was ordered to England in April, 1866, Tryon was made a captain

"at the comparatively early age of thirty-four; and as he had but little naval interest save what he made for himself, it must be acknowledged that his success was mainly due to his own exertions, to the zeal and professional ability which he exhibited—qualities which were recognized and duly appreciated by the officers under whom he served."

His first appointment as captain—the first, it may be said, to bring him to the knowledge of any beyond his own immediate circle—was as transport officer at Annesley Bay during the Abyssinian war in 1867:—

"It was not the kind of service which is generally considered brilliant or attractive to a young navy captain yearning to distinguish himself in his profession. It was likely to be—and, in fact, proved to be—an extremely arduous service. There was no prospect of getting to the front and seeing any fighting, but, on the contrary, the certainty of remaining on the unhealthy and oppressively hot coast; constant hard work somewhat strange to a naval officer; all sorts and conditions of men to deal with; conflicting views and interests to reconcile; many an irate commissariat officer and merchant captain to pacify; and, in short, a fine field for the exercise of great tact, judgment, and organization of details; and it is probable that a forecast of the numerous difficulties to be overcome, coupled with his zeal and anxiety to render good service in any capacity, was a sufficient reason to cause Tryon to accept the appointment without a moment's hesitation."

It was thus that for the best part of a year Tryon was at Zoulla, arranging for the landing, provisioning, and embarking of upwards of 62,000 people and 36,000 animals.

"One of the greatest difficulties was the water. After the first few days there was no drinkable water there, and it all had to be condensed by the steamers in the bay and landed for the use of man and beast. The total amount of water so condensed amounted to 29,068 tons, and the coal expended in making this water to 8,020 tons. These figures will give some idea of the work done."

And it was not only the work that gave trouble, but the men who had to do it. Many of these were merchant captains, with a fine sense of their independence and importance—men who could be led or managed, but could not be driven. But by force of character and by tact Tryon overcame all difficulties. Here is the account of one that verges on the comic:—

"The captain of one of the steamers which was used for condensing water represented that his engines were suffering undue wear and tear from being kept continually going astern whilst condensing, the ship being moored and revolving round her moorings. The captain pointed out that the design of the engines contemplated their going ahead almost continuously, but going astern only occasionally, and that, therefore, the thrust bearings would not stand the work, and he claimed a rest, or else special compensation for undue wear and tear. Tryon, however, upset his argument in a very few words. He pointed out that if the engines were undergoing greater wear, the hull was escaping the strain of being at sea, rolling about with a full cargo on board; and he gave him the following alternative: If the constant going astern was bad for the engines, he could slip his moorings and steam round and round the bay, thus keeping the engines going ahead instead of astern, but he must go on condensing at any cost. As, however, there were between 150 and 200 transports anchored in the bay, the captain came to the conclusion that he was better off as he was, and there was nothing more heard of his complaint."

Eventually the captains of the transports came to understand, to respect, and even to like the somewhat arbitrary gentleman under whose orders they were placed, and at the end of the service they presented him with a complimentary address on parchment, expressing their feeling

"that the part of the expedition which was under your command was as successful as any other branch of it, and we attribute this largely to your influence and management, to your justice and general kindness, and to your perseverance and forbearance"

And this was followed on their return to England by a service of plate, with an inscription on the centre-piece to the effect that it was "a token of their appreciation of his courtesy and kindness to them whilst in discharge of his arduous duties at Annesley Bay." Tryon was much gratified by this recognition from the men he had ruled—more so even, it is implied, than by the C.B. which was his official reward. But the commendations, official and personal, were earned at a high price, for continued exertion under a burning sun, with the thermometer seldom under 100°, had completely knocked him up, and for several months he was in a very feeble state. "At first," his secretary writes,

"he could not walk from his lodgings in York Street, St. James's Square, down to the Army and Navy Club, without halting to rest on the way and holding on to the railings."

This for a man of six feet, robust in frame and constitution!

His appointment in 1871 as private secretary to Mr. Goschen, then, as now, First Lord of the Admiralty, afforded him his first insight into the inner workings of Admiralty administration, and for three years he performed the duties of that post—often extremely delicate—with tact and discretion. In 1874 he took command of the Raleigh in a curiously varied commission, one of the flying squadron, attending on the Prince of Wales during his tour in India, and finally attached to the Mediterranean fleet.

In October, 1876, his ship was one of a squadron at Smyrna detached to do honour to the Duchess of Edinburgh, who arrived there in the Russian yacht Livadia. A Russian squadron and representative ships of all nations also attended; and from these there were salutes and illuminations. In the latter the Russian ships, having come fully prepared, were specially distinguished. The next day Tryon had his revenge. It was arranged that the Russian vessels and the Raleigh should escort the Livadia down the thirty-mile-long Gulf of Smyrna, so far on her way to Malta:—

"Off went the Livadia at full speed, but the Raleigh kept her station (two cables on the starboard quarter) accurately. Not so, though, the Russian squadron, for in a very short time they were all 'hull down' astern, and the Raleigh was the sole escort! Then, when the entrance to the Gulf was reached, the Duchess requested that a courteous signal should be made to Capt. Tryon, thanking him for his attendance and begging that he would not come any farther out of his way: so Tryon prepared to 'part company'; but before doing so he called upon his chief engineer to make an effort and put on a spurt. The latter responded; up rushed the Raleigh close alongside the Livadia; the ship's company manned the rigging and gave three hearty cheers, and the Raleigh sheered off and went on her way. Squibs, crackers, and rockets were eclipsed: this was the real thing—one of the leading factors of modern naval efficiency demonstrated; Britannia was justified of her stokers; and Tryon was happy."

During part of the interval between leaving the Raleigh in June, 1877, and taking command of the Monarch in October, 1878, Tryon was on a committee for the revision of the signal-book and the manual of fleet evolutions. One of the other members was Captain—now Vice-Admiral—Colomb, who "had made a deep study of the subject of fleet tactics and the manœuvring power of ships, and had mapped it all out on paper. Tryon represented the practical side of the question, as distinguished from the theoretical side of it. His mind was always eminently practical. He believed greatly in the training of the eye, to judge distance and speed, as the foundation of all successful fleet manœuvres. Colomb and Tryon represented somewhat divergent views with regard to the theory and practice of steam tactics."

It is interesting to record this divergence of opinion, in view of the discussion on the subject since Tryon's death. It has led Admiral Colomb to suppose that Tryon believed he could manœuvre his ship independently of the inexorable mathematical principles which governed her course. There is nothing recorded by Admiral FitzGerald that supports this view, but Tryon is described as holding that, though the exact determination of bearings and distances by compass and sextant was in the highest degree important to the beginner, the aim of all fleet exercises was to educate the eye, so that manœuvres could be performed with approximate and sufficient accuracy without the use of the sextant, which in battle or critical emergency would be impossible. And this view he persistently maintained both as a captain in the Monarch and—after a busy interval as Commander-in-Chief in Australian waters, which won for him a K.C.B.—as Superintendent of Reserves, and also when he was Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean, where his skill and boldness in manœuvring the fleet excited first the wonder and then the admiration of the officers under his command.

He is described as loving to discuss tactical questions, and to work out experimentally the movements of a squadron, but in actual exercise to endeavour to make them more real by the introduction of the unexpected. And thus the captains of the fleet had learnt to place implicit confidence in his orders and in his ability, often, it would seem, without understanding what they were doing till the sense of it was revealed by the result. This must be taken as explaining what appeared to outsiders as the blind acquiescence of his subordinates in the fatal order of June 22nd, 1893. It was taken for granted that the admiral knew exactly what he wanted to do and how to do it. How the deadly mistake was made is a psychological secret which died with him. We may guess, but we cannot be certain; and Admiral FitzGerald is content to leave the question where he found it. This is certainly the most discreet and also the justest course to adopt, for, as he rightly says,

"it is scarcely consistent with that boasted British love of fair play, which we claim to be a specially national characteristic, that a man singularly gifted with all those qualities which inspire trust, devotion, admiration and confidence in those who serve under him.....should be judged by his countrymen in relation to only one act of his life; and that all the years of hard work and devotion which he dedicated to the best interests of his country, the ability which he exhibited as an organizer, the lessons which he taught as a strategist and tactician, the example which he set and the confidence he inspired as a bold, firm, skilful leader of fleets and squadrons, should be forgotten."

Admiral FitzGerald has provided that all these claims should not be forgotten, and in a pleasantly written and sympathetic biography has done much to embalm the memory of his old friend and chief. He has had a congenial subject, and he has dealt with it in an admirable manner.

The Poetry of Burns. Centenary Edition. Edited by W. E. Henley and T. F. Henderson. Vol. III. (Edinburgh, Jack.)

The exhaustive investigation of the origins of Burns's songs, which principally occupies this third volume of the "Centenary Edition," is so full of interesting results as to compensate for the considerable exercise of patience by prospective readers. The book is a monument of industry, acuteness, and literary judgment, and its conclusions will satisfy most students who are acquainted with Scottish literature, being in the main confirmatory of what they have learnt to regard as the truth about the poetic genesis of Burns. In several individual instances, however, reason may be found for doubting the accuracy of novel theories, or, at any rate, the confidence with which they are advanced, and there is no doubt a certain challenge to some contemporary commentators implied in the airy way in which existing beliefs are occasionally dismissed.

The present instalment consists of the "songs sent by Burns to W. Johnson's 'Musical Museum' and Thomson's 'Scottish Airs,' and duly set forth in these collections. Some," continue the editors, "he sent which were not used, and some were used which he did not send. These will appear in our fourth and last instalment of all."

As the poet's avowed contributions to these miscellanies amounted to some two hundred and fifty numbers, the merely quantitative importance of the volume is great; but its interest is enhanced by the exposition contained in it of the degree to which Burns was indebted to previous singers. It were tedious to follow in detail the minute investigations of Messrs. Henley and Henderson into the sources from which themes and forms were derived, but it may be roughly said that in these pieces about two to one are shown to be based on works already in vogue in a more or less literary form. Of these in many cases a mere over-word or chorus has been the source of inspiration; in more an old version, not seldom unsuitable to modern delicacy, has been transposed bodily into a worthier shape; some are mere centos of fragmentary verse from widely different quarters. Occasionally the recent exemplars of Ramsay and Fergusson are frankly followed; at other times the source of inspiration has been some old popular ditty, some breath of folk-song which may have come in various transmuted phases from days long before 'The Complaynt of Scotland' or the list in 'Cockelby's Sow.' Thus 'John Anderson my Jo,' which is certainly traced to a parody in 'The Gude and Godlie Ballates,' is probably a skeleton of hoar antiquity; while such a jewel as "My love is like a red, red rose" derives its beauty from four borrowed stanzas, of which three date from a black-letter sheet called 'The Unkind Parents,' itself the parent of at least three derivatives. When we add that Burns was "never above vamping from himself," as the editors put it, it will be seen that an intimate acquaintance with the ramifications surrounding the question of origins must prove an almost distracting acquisition. It is both characteristic and creditable that the gratification of discovery has not seriously impaired the sanity of appreciation now-a-days expected from the investigators. As Sir Walter Scott well knew, and as specialists so recent as M. Angellier and Mr. Logie Robertson have maintained, Burns was not the isolated phenomenon in Scottish literature which Carlyle proclaimed him to be, and which the votaries in "Burns clubs" and nine out of ten illiterate enthusiasts outside are apt to believe him.

"Burns's knowledge of the older minstrelsy was unique; he was saturate with its tradition, as he was absolute master of its emotions and effects; no such artist in folk-song as he (so in other words Sir Walter said) has ever worked in literature. But a hundred forgotten singers went to the making of his achievement and himself. He did not wholly originate those master-qualities—of fresh and taking simplicity, of vigour and directness and happy and humorous ease, which have come to be regarded as distinctive of his verse; for all these things, together with much of the thought, the romance, and the sentiment for which we read and love him, were included in the estate which he inherited from his nameless forebears; and he so assimilated them that what is actually his forebears' legacy to him has come to be regarded as his gift to them. Those forebears aiding, he stands forth as the sole great poet of the old Scots world; and he is thus national as no poet has ever been, and as no poet ever will, or ever can be, again."

If there is a word to which we would demur in this wise estimate, we are inclined to hesitate at "sole." The one great poet who miraculously survived the flood of politics and polemics which submerged Scotland in the sixteenth century seems here forgotten. William Dunbar was no "nameless forebear" of the still greater poet whose genius had so much in common with his wide humanity. But the phrase may pass. It is practically the due expression of Burns's place in letters. And it is the expression of those who can give chapter and verse for the faith that is in them.

Although to the majority of the lay public the view of the poet's place thus opened will have the force of novelty, it will but confirm the impressions of those who are more or less "saturate" with Scots literature and tradition. But even these will congratulate Mr. Henley on his great "find" in the shape of the Herd MS. (British Museum)—presented by the compiler to Archibald Constable — which, besides the material printed in Herd's own publications of 1769 and 1776, contains a multiplicity of scraps which Burns utilized in his connexion with Johnson's 'Museum.'

This fact seems clearly authenticated, and its importance to the editors has been the greater as so many MSS. which would have been valuable (that of the 'Merry Muses,' for instance) have been destroyed, while others compiled in the first part of the century are often untrustworthy. An evil eminence, perhaps not absolutely deserved, is assigned to a certain Peter Buchan in this connexion. The mare's-nesting Aberdonian is credited with much deceptive information imparted to Hogg and Motherwell. It will not be matter for much surprise that the rejection of some legends hitherto cherished by the "common Burnsite" is trenchant, not to say contemptuous. "Highland Mary," whose character has been most sedulously vindicated in an appendix to one of the new volumes of Chambers's work, is subjected to much depreciatory criticism as "a figment of the general brain." It is certain that little is known about her, and that Burns's allusions to her "may be meant to dissemble more than they reveal." For ourselves, while hesitating to accept her as a "bare-legged Beatrice," we feel little difficulty in rejecting her identification by some writers with the Mary of the Dundonald Kirksession books. And we think the lines beginning "Thou ling'ring star" will continue to hold their own, in spite of the faint praise of the present editors.

> Time but the impression stronger makes,
> As streams their channels deeper wear, even if Cromek's story of their composition or of "the Stream-and-Bible episode" could be proved fallacious.

Another characteristic bit of iconoclasm seems less justified. Why should the incident of James Macpherson (the literal, not the literary, freebooter) playing his Rant on the way to the scaffold be "a ridiculous tradition"? Our editors' notions of the course of judicial solemnities in the Highlands are too much bounded by modern "environment." There is nothing absolutely impossible in a gentleman cateran (he was a slip of Invereshie, and probably thought himself quite as good a man as Duff of Braco), escorted to the "kind gallows" by a more or less sympathizing crowd, having his latest whims, musical or other, consulted. Even the victim of "Black Maria" is indulged with a latitude of choice in regard to his last breakfast. The coolness or bravado of the outlaw is nothing exceptional. Lady Jane Grey sitting pleasantly at the dinner-table of the Lieutenant of the Tower and talking cheerfully of politics when under sentence of death is hardly less remote from present conventionalities.

In certain unimportant matters some inferences of fact by other editors have been corrected. Thus chronology seems against the song "To the Weaver's gin ye go" being suggested by Armour's visit to Paisley. The motive of the 'Banks o' Doon,' one of Burns's most original pieces, does not seem to have been the tragedy of Peggy Kennedy. In these and other details we recognize the thoroughness of research which is the best feature of this excellent performance. No fault can be found with the glossary, which is less needed here than in the earlier volumes, but we notice with some subrident joy the pugnacity with which the erroneous translation of "lyart" in vol. i. is still supported. The incidental criticisms in the notes are frequent and valuable, though we presume we shall receive a more general literary judgment in the promised final volume.

The foundation of the stanza—"binding-rhyme and all"—of "Scots wha hae" on 'Helen of Kirkconnell,' a ballad which Burns thought silly to contemptibility, is as curious as Burns's estimate. That the diction, but for some of the spelling, is "pure eighteenth century English" is also noteworthy. Chappell's assiduous attempt to trace 'Logan Water' to an English original is confuted from Herd; and the general effect of songs of the Restoration period, introduced or reintroduced from England, upon the current of Scottish song, is briefly treated in the bibliographical essay, where due acknowledgment is made to a very numerous list of co-operators who by giving access to their collections have aided in the production of this volume.

A Girl's Wanderings in Hungary. By H. Ellen Browning. (Longmans & Co.)

Believing Hungary terra incognita, of which "beyond the mere name very little was known in Western Europe," Miss Browning determined to explore it. This bulky volume is supposed to recount her experiences, but its perusal leaves the reader doubtful as to whether it is what it professes to be, or only a work of fiction. In her preface the writer disclaims the idea of being able to write a book "full of adventures and hairbreadth escapes," as "things of that sort don't fall to the lot of a nineteenth-century girl even at the other end of Europe"; but really she is too modest. Her book teems with deeds and episodes not only marvellous, but verging on the miraculous. Here is the record of one of her earliest feats, performed shortly after her arrival in Hungary:—

"Apropos of interference, I once horrified my friends most terribly on this point. We had walked one morning a couple of miles along the banks of the Danube outside the city, and came across a Slav peasant castigating his young wife with a leathern strap. This sight awoke the lust of murder in my heart. I felt just like [sic] King Saul must have felt when he hurled the javelin at David. Fortunately for everybody concerned, there was no javelin in my hand; nothing, in fact, except a muff. But, purple with indignant rage, I sprang upon the man and shook him by the collar like a terrier shaking a rat."

The following is a lively account of the weather she encountered in Hungary:—

"Violent thunderstorms occurred several times during August, also hailstorms of the most devastating character. These used to begin suddenly. A raging wind would arise; the air would be filled with dust; man and beast would run for their lives to the nearest shelter. Doors and windows were often torn off their hinges before they could be closed; trees and shrubs were uprooted, roofs sometimes blown off bodily, and then came the hail. A blinding sheet of solid lumps of ice, about the size and shape of small pigeon's eggs, came rattling down furiously, breaking every pane of glass unless the outside Venetian shutters had been closed over them.....Once I gathered a tumblerful of these enormous hailstones and kept them in my room till they melted. It took them just about fourteen hours to dissolve into fluid in the shade.

So much for Miss Browning's own personal experiences. The following terrible tragedy she relates from hearsay only. Referring to the way in which the Jews gradually squeeze all their possessions from the peasants of Hungary, even as they do from those of Russia, she tells of a certain Israelite who lived in a Transylvanian village, and lent money to the peasants there:—

"For years and years he had lived amongst them and become by degrees the possessor of farms, flocks, and herds. The widow and the orphan were his particular prey, and one morning, after he had turned a dying woman out of her cottage on to the road, his fate overtook him. Her neighbours found her dead by the roadside, with a little child crying in her stiffening, emaciated arms. They took her corpse up and carried it away, and their hearts burned within them. There was, indeed, an inhuman devil in the world, one who abode in their village and sucked the very life-blood from their veins. The news spread like wildfire. This brutal act was 'the last straw.' Even a worm will turn, and these worms turned to take a terrible revenge. The men and women gathered together in silence—their hearts too full of vengeful thoughts for words. They only looked at each other with gleaming eyes and set teeth. At last one man spoke: 'He is a damned devil, a veritable limb of Satan, no human beast could act as he acts. Time after time he has skinned us (figuratively), let us skin him now.'.....'We will, we will! So help us God, we will!' answered a chorus of deep, indignant, hatebreathing voices, and they did. Next day the Pester Lloyd gave a long account of the barbaric vengeance practised on a Jewish inn-keeper. He had been skinned alive and then plunged into a cauldron of boiling water. Naturally, arrests were made by the police, and somebody suffered the death penalty."

Miss Browning's assertion that her volume is not to be regarded as "a contribution to the eternal Sex-question" is wide of the mark. Her references to sexual questions are not only frequent, but different from what one might expect in a work issued for unrestricted circulation. Take, for instance, her remarks upon the Roman Catholic clergy of Hungary, who, she would appear to fancy, are unlike other priests of their faith in being vowed to celibacy. "Priests," she says,

"are not permitted to marry; but housekeepers of the youngest and prettiest description are allowed. Also, 'nephews' and 'nieces.' This struck me as being a neat way of getting round an awkward corner. Euphemism cannot be said to have died out entirely yet. Somehow the term 'celibate clergy' always sticks in my throat. I object to the rankly hypocritical."

Not contented with returning again and again to the charge against their clergy, Miss Browning includes the whole Magyar race in one general indictment of immorality. In proof of her allegations she recounts such incidents as this at Arád, where she is conversing with the hostess of an inn:—

"She told me, amongst other things, that she was in a great quandary. Her maid-servant had been taken ill the day before, and she was at her wit's end to know how to get through all the work till her return.

"'Is it likely to be a long illness?' I enquired.

"'Oh, no; the child arrived a couple of hours after she left here, and she 's going on capitally; but she won't come back under ten days or a fortnight, I 'm sure; she never does. This is the third time I've waited for her, but she 's such a good girl I 'd rather wait than hire another.'

"'The third time? But why doesn't the man marry her?'

"'Which of them does the gracious lady mean?'

"'Which? Well.....either of them?'

"'Oh! They 're all too poor for her to marry them. Her father wouldn't give her to either one of them. She 's a beauty, you know, and rich too. Such hair, such eyes, such a tongue! She 's never at a loss for an answer to anybody.....She 'll make a good match when she does marry; that 's very certain. Why! her dower won't be a kreutzer less than fifty florins, besides linen and feather beds and poultry. Yes, indeed, gracious lady, the man who gets her for a wife may deem himself a very lucky fellow.'.....

"'But the three children and these..... goings on?'

"'Pshaw! gracious lady, what of them? That 's nothing to do with her husband! Besides, hasn't he done the same himself with other girls? Can he expect better than he gives? No, no: justice in everything, if you please.'"

Although Miss Browning asserts that she is only twenty-three, she must have enjoyed an extensive and varied experience. She alludes to visits to countries all over the globe; intimates acquaintance with all kinds of arts and sciences, past, present, and to come; and claims to be conversant with several languages, various philosophies, and, indeed, more things than are dreamt of by most men. Truly, she displays a smattering of colloquial German, but the depth of her French may be gauged by the quotations with which she garnishes her book, such as "coffee à la crème," "on a changé tout ça," "revenons à nos moutons," "toute au contraire," and the like. Her Latin citations are equally erudite, and, unfortunately, she never mastered enough Hungarian to comprehend its simplest forms or to write the names of its best-known men correctly, whilst her disquisitions on its philology are simply ludicrous. Her pet English quotations are also faulty—unless, indeed, we except her slang, in which, so far as we are able to judge, she is proficient.

In fact, the volume is an incongruous collection of mistakes, misstatements, and platitudes, yet it is not irretrievably bad, or we should not have taken the trouble to notice it. There are several interesting pictures of Hungarian home life and descriptive bits of folk-lore likely to escape the notice of casual travellers, and at times, especially towards the end of the book, the author's style becomes picturesque, and even brilliant. Had some experienced literary friend revised the work, and expunged the flippant, vulgar, and indecorous sentences—that is to say, one-half of the book—the remaining moiety would have repaid perusal.

The Marian Reaction in its Relation to the English Clergy: a Study of the Episcopal Registers. By Walter Howard Frere. (S.P.C.K.)

This little volume opens up quite a new aspect of a controversy which, though recently decided at Rome for the faithful of that communion, is apparently by no means closed. The book, however, it should be remarked, is the fruit of researches in episcopal registers which the writer was commissioned to undertake by the Church Historical Society in 1895, before the question of Anglican orders had been submitted to the Pope, and it was fully completed before the publication of the Papal decision, to which the writer in the last sentence is looking forward hopefully. But he has come to a totally different conclusion from that pronounced at the Vatican; and as his arguments are founded on a set of evidences which the Pope's advisers never saw, they at least deserve a respectful hearing. Further, we may say, without presuming to pronounce a judgment ourselves, that his tone throughout is exceedingly temperate, not like that of a man desirous to plead a cause or uphold a particular view, but simply that of an inquirer setting forth the result of his investigations.

The historical interest of the subject certainly is by no means inconsiderable; and if there be no flaw in the statistics or the reasoning, the results should modify in some points current views of the story of the Reformation. Much has been said of the deprivations of bishops and clergy after the accession of Elizabeth, and there is no question, so far, of the facts; but it seems, as regards changes of incumbencies, nothing took place in her reign, or in that of Henry VIII. or Edward VI., "at all comparable in its effects to the wholesale Marian devastation." The data, indeed, are imperfect from the deficiencies of many of the registers; but comparing the statistics for the diocese of London with such as exist for other dioceses, especially Norwich, where there are particular lists for each archdeaconry compiled by order of the bishop, Wharton's estimate of one deprivation in every five benefices seems not at all unlikely. In London there was actually about one in every four; but the London average is suspected to be too high for the rest of the country. These deprivations, Mr. Frere tells us, were due to but one cause—"practically all those who were deprived were deprived for marriage." This, in fact, is the cause expressly alleged in all but seven cases in the London institutions, which amounted altogether to about one hundred and fifty, and even in one of those seven cases it is certain that the deprived incumbent was married. Not a hint appears anywhere, according to Mr. Frere, that a single clergyman was deprived for invalidity of orders.

"On the contrary, in the cases of Nowell and Aston, the Deacon's Order conferred under the English Ordinal is clearly if tacitly recognized. Indeed, if the Edwardine Orders had been regarded as an absolute disqualification, it would have been far simpler to get rid of Edwardine clergy on that ground, rather than on the ground of marriage. But all the evidence so far goes to show that they were not so regarded; on the contrary, the very fact that an Edwardine priest was deprived for marriage shows that so far his Orders were recognized, otherwise he would have been deprived as a layman, and there is no instance of any Edwardine clergy being so described at their deprivation; they are classed with the rest of the married clergy."

Mr. Frere admits, indeed, that a certain number of the Edwardine clergy presented themselves to the Marian bishops for reordination under the old Latin rite. But he maintains that a very large number were left in possession of their benefices without reordination at all; and he appears to think that reordination, when it did take place, was only due to individual scruples. There was some inconsistency, he admits, in practice; but the general tendency of Mary's policy was not to dispute the sufficiency of the new ordinations.

"The view that Edwardine Orders were invalid, though clearly held in some quarters in the earlier days of Mary's reign, seems to have decayed and been given up."

With this indication of the contents of the book we may leave it to the reader, who will not take long to go through it, for the text consists of only 162 small pages. But there is a very valuable appendix of documents, including a list of the clergy ordained by Mary in five different dioceses, arranged in alphabetical order. There is also a good general index.

Lord Vyet, and other Poems. By Arthur Christopher Benson. (Lane.)

Mr. Arthur Benson is one of those rare verse-writers who are content to occupy a humble position in poetry, and who are worthy to occupy that position. In some introductory verses to his new book he represents the priests of song offering up the victim on the altar:—

Victim or minister
I dare not claim to be,
But in the concourse and the stir,
There shall be room for me.

The victim feels the stroke,
The priests are bowed in prayer:—
I feed the porch with fragrant smoke,
Strew roses on the stair.

And it is, indeed, just this relation which he holds to those of whom we can say, without hesitation, This is a poet. Of Mr. Benson we can always say that he is an accomplished writer of verse, that he is sincere, unaffected, and that he has observed certain things which most people do not observe, and with so vivid an interest in them himself that his record of these things in verse seems to suggest a new, almost possible kind of poetic substance. In one of his earlier books there was a poem about a toad, a poem about we forget what insect, in which the curiosity of the naturalist communicated an ingenious novelty to that precisely observed detail which is at the very root of poetic imagery. Here we find not only the cat, the ringdove, and the hawk, but live-bait and the barbel, turned, in some cases, to meditative uses—perhaps, in some cases, a little over-accentuated in their moral. Thus the poem on the owl (written in a skilfully handled metre of some intricacy) seems to us more artistic in construction than the poem which follows it, on the ringdove, just because its meaning is implicit in itself, conveyed by suggestion, not in the form of a statement of this kind:—

This be my part in thy unconscious lay,—
Strongly to hope and softly to aspire.

That, surely, is to follow Wordsworth where he is most to be avoided. In the poem on the cat there is something perhaps a little Wordsworthian, but there is also a close observation, full of gentle humour, to which these three stanzas will bear witness:—

On some grave business, soft and slow,
Along the garden-paths you go,
With bold and burning eyes:
Or stand, with twitching tail, to mark
What starts and rustles in the dark,
Among the peonies.

* * * *

You all day long, beside the fire,
Retrace in dreams your dark desire,
And mournfully complain,
In grave displeasure, if I raise
Your languid form to pet or praise;—
And so to sleep again.

* * * *

You loved me when the fire was warm,
But now I stretch a fondling arm,
You eye me and depart.
Cold eyes, sleek skin, and velvet paws,
You win my indolent applause,
You do not win my heart.

That is a delicate, an impartial appreciation of an animal whom it is difficult to consider without prejudice. Cats have this among other feminine qualities, that unless you are their lover you will not understand them, and if you are too much their lover you will disregard what you have understood. But Mr. Benson, though he is most easily distinguished from other people by this side of his temperament, is not merely an observer. He is able at times to express gravely, and with the same precision of language with which he expresses the mood of a cat, the wriggle of live-bait, some sensations of the mind which it is a triumph over difficulties to have expressed. Take, for instance, the first and best of the four sonnets on 'Self.' See how firmly the escaping idea is seized, forced to reveal itself in its true shape, held captive before one:—

This is my chiefest torment, that behind
This brave and subtle spirit, this swift brain,
There sits and shivers, in a cell of pain,
A central atom, melancholy, blind,

Which is myself: tho' when spring suns are kind,
And rich leaves riot in the genial rain,
I cheat him dreaming, slip my rigorous chain,
Free as a skiff before the dancing wind.

Then he awakes, and vexed that I am glad,
In dreary malice strains some nimble chord,
Pricks his thin claw within some tingling nerve:
And all at once I falter, start, and swerve
From my true course, and fall, unmanned and sad,
Into gross darkness, tangible, abhorred.

Several of the sonnets which fill the last twenty pages of this little book are not less closely thought out, and are even more sonorous in the progress of their rhythm. Mr. Benson has a considerable power of writing impressive single lines—lines full of a sort of rich gravity. His workmanship in verse is always careful, and it is never employed without deliberation or without taste. Sometimes, as in the short poem called 'Lord Vyet,' it is employed on really imaginative substance, and with such sympathetic skill that the alchemy is all but achieved—that rare, last, invisible drop of some unknown essence which turns honourable metal into pure gold.

The Indian Village Community. By B. H. Baden-Powell. (Longmans & Co.)

Since Sir Henry Maine wrote, so much has been discovered about the Indian village community that the time had fully arrived for a new study of the subject by a scholar who is also an Indian official, and an Indian official who is also a student of the comparative history of institutions. Mr. Baden-Powell has essayed to fill this position, but valuable as his work is in many respects, we are bound to say that he has not succeeded in producing the book that is so much needed.

Recognizing almost all the elements of the problem according to the results of recent research—ethnological, institutional, legal, economical, and religious—recognizing, too, the important consideration of geography, which is so often ignored by the English student, Mr. Baden-Powell has, in our opinion, stated too many of the general conclusions he has formed from the evidence he has collected and observed, and too little of the evidence itself. With several of his general conclusions we are in complete accord, and we can with a little trouble refer to the sources from which he has drawn his evidence; with others of his conclusions it is difficult to agree, and we should have preferred to see the evidence upon which they rest properly set forth and examined in detail. No doubt Mr. Baden-Powell's own familiarity with the subject prevents him from quite seeing the importance of presenting to the English student a series of complete examples of the Indian village community in all the different stages of development, and under all the varying influences, racial and economical, which have differentiated the various types. But it is not enough to have some important features dismissed in a sentence or two, other features described, or rather discussed, at some length, while other features—generally some very important and significant rite or religious ceremony—are relegated to the safe obscurity of a foot-note. For it is true now, just as it was true when Sir Henry Maine and other authorities first began to write on the subject, that the key to much of the economical and institutional history of the Western world is to be found by a scientific comparison, undertaken with care and precaution, of the economical and institutional history of India. Let the reader, for instance, note what such a comparison means in one important particular emphasized more than once throughout Mr. Baden-Powell's book—we mean the question of a communal or collective form of tenure. Mr. Baden-Powell can find it nowhere. He disputes with Mr. Maine, Mr. Tupper, and other authorities the conclusions they have drawn, and he goes out of his way, as it would seem, to deny this characteristic whenever there is a chance of doing so. But it happens that a distinguished historical jurist in England, Mr. F. W. Maitland, is engaged upon the same crusade in respect of the survivals, or assumed survivals, of the village community in England. Where Sir Henry Maine, Mr. Seebohm, Prof. Vinogradoff, Mr. Gomme, and others have detected evidence of communal tenure, Mr. Maitland can see none. Like Mr. Baden-Powell with the Indian evidence, he can only detect a mass of co-sharers of a given extent of territory, a mass of men who are tenants of one manor, of burghers who are residents in one town; but he cannot see communal holding in all this. Now such an agreement as this by two independent authorities, one dealing with the primitive or archaic side of the village community, the other dealing with the historical or developed side of the village community, is of great importance, and it may well be that scholars will have to change their terminology somewhat and to rewrite much of the early history of institutions, which has of late received such special attention; but if this should prove to be necessary, we should have liked Mr. Baden-Powell to give in his work the necessary materials for tracing out each step of the argument from the Indian evidence before the conclusions are stated, and it is impossible to avoid thinking that it is a fault not to have done so.

It may be that the fight which is beginning round this subject is much more than one of terms only; but, if so, it would save an immensity of labour if certain definite facts could be settled. Mr. Baden-Powell could, it appears probable, have helped towards this end. Let us take an instance. Mr. Maitland lays great and very proper stress upon the fact that as escheats went to the lord or to the king, and not to the community, the theory of individual holding is thereby indicated. But in parts of India, at all events, on the failure of heirs male the land becomes the property of the village, and is divided among its members (e.g., Mr. Carmichael's 'Manual of the Vizagapatam District,' p. 95); and upon such an important detail as this we should have liked Mr. Baden-Powell's observations, and, above all, a series of well-arranged examples. But the reader does not get them. He gets incidental notes, as from the Kheri district (p. 318), that "all lapsed and forfeited villages" became the Raja's; but the point is too important to be passed over like this.

The chapter on joint villages arising from foundation by individuals is of special interest to the subject as it is viewed by the author:—

"Individual enterprises, the rise to local power of individual families, the establishment of Royal Courts, with the grants, assignments, and, ultimately, the revenue farms which they give rise to—these are the causes of the establishment of individual lordships over village as well as larger estates, and are equally the causes of the foundation of new villages in uninhabited country."

It will be seen how closely these political conditions touch those of early Europe, and it is not surprising that in this branch of the subject there exist many interesting features of village institutions, which need most careful elucidation and ample illustration before his readers are ready for the analysis which Mr. Baden-Powell attempts to supply.

Our complaint against this book, therefore, is in reference to the method adopted for bringing forward the results of the author's researches — the method, namely, of comparing different features selected from many examples, instead of selecting different examples and comparing them, first in details, and then as a whole, one with another. And this complaint is surely justified by the illumination afforded by the two or three cases where complete or nearly complete examples of a community are given, as, for instance, that on p. 214 of "an actual instance which came under my notice judicially," as the author pointedly states. In this case we have a unique study in primitive economics, which supply the key for solving many of the long-continued disputes about the relationship of rent to taxation, and which many have suspected to exist in India, but have hitherto failed to find recorded. Let us, however, hasten to observe that in taking this line of criticism we are not intending to cast any doubt on the distinct contribution which this book makes towards the subject; our criticism arises out of the regret which we feel that the book was not made, as it could well have been, of greater value. The author knows quite well the importance of the subject from the point of view we have taken, for in the introductory pages he states succinctly and ably what that view is, and refers to the necessity of securing for observation types of the Indian village community in all its forms. Perhaps the most useful part of the book is that dealing with the geographical and physical features of India, where it is shown that the influence of environment in producing certain forms of economical development is really great. Scarcely less important is the section on ethnographical considerations, and we suppose after this it will not again be seriously asserted that the village community is an institution originating with the Aryan-speaking peoples.

In these two sections the evidence is clearly and succinctly stated, ably and distinctly commented upon, and the reader is taken forward to the conclusion in a manner that is in every way admirable. One of the most important sections, and no doubt one of the most difficult, is that dealing with the relationship of the tribe to the village. This is the point which in Europe has almost defied elucidation, and Mr. Baden-Powell at least shows that in India all the elements of the problem exist. That he has worked out all these elements he himself would, of course, not pretend, and we trust he will return to this part of the subject in a separate treatise. The Aryan tribal system, with its foundation resting on the sacred rights of blood kinship, and the non-Aryan political system (using the word "political" in its extended sense), with its foundation resting on a union of common interests and often on an agricultural basis, met together in India and founded a new system, which is represented at different stages of coalition in different places. This process of coalition wants thorough investigation, not only on account of its value to Indian institutions, but on account of its value in comparative politics wherever Aryan-speaking peoples have conquered and settled.

One excellent feature of Mr. Baden-Powell's work is the explanation and illustration of the various tenure terms. Often of an extremely technical character in meaning and signification, they have been frequently used in the earlier revenue and settlement reports to describe things to which they were not really applicable, with the result that institutions have frequently in subsequent administrative transactions been made to conform to the terms used. Thus the effect of English rule on Indian institutions is always a serious factor to be reckoned with, and in this department Mr. Baden-Powell's guidance is of extreme importance. When, however, he is using the terms of science his guidance is not so useful. It is not only misleading, but incorrect, to state of the Hindu system of kinship, with its parallels in Greek, Welsh, and Hebrew systems, that "when in such widely different regions we come across this same distinction, we are justified in believing it to be universal and springing out of a feeling common to all early tribes, and founded in human nature itself" (p. 236); and, indeed, there is throughout a great tendency to appeal to "natural feelings common to human nature" (p. 233) for the first cause of many things. Again, no evidence is adduced but general theory for the statement as to the Dravidians that they "had strong agricultural instincts, and had passed out of the nomadic and pastoral stage" (p. 403), as if nomadic, pastoral, and agricultural conditions formed the necessary and universal order of development of human society. And what does Mr. Baden-Powell mean by the statement that "all we can discover of the earliest clans leads us to believe that they were not unorganized hordes or collections of individuals; they were invariably organized on some principle" (p. 232)? Surely we have long since passed this elementary knowledge, while the term "horde" itself has assumed a specialized meaning at the hands of Dr. Mucke and other authorities.

We trust it will not appear ungracious to have made these objections. The expressions complained of disfigure the book too frequently to be altogether passed over, and they could so easily have been avoided. The index is a very poor one, but the diagrams and tabular information are most excellent, affording a ready means of explaining difficult facts which it is to be hoped may find favour in the future among authors of this kind of work.

NEW NOVELS.

The Spoils of Poynton. By Henry James. (Heinemann.)

The first impression produced on the reader by Mr. James's latest novel is that he is looking at things through glasses not quite suited to his focus; the next, that it must have cost the author a deal of trouble to write. If you debar yourself from the use of "spade," "implement of husbandry," or "adjective shovel," it is not always easy to find an English phrase that will legitimately denote the article, and when you do find one the chances are that your reader will not be sufficiently in the habit of associating it with the object indicated to be able, without conscious effort, to proceed from it to the idea of that object. And conscious effort is just what the novel-reader does not want. The odd thing is that the story is really simple enough. Mrs. Gereth is a widow who has spent her married life in making a palace of art at Poynton. The house and all the pretty things in it have become her only son's property, and the question that torments her is whether he will marry some one not only capable of appreciating her "lordly pleasure-house," but also willing to allow its creator to continue in undisturbed enjoyment of it. Unfortunately he, being a person of dull perceptions, settles upon a girl who has been brought up in an atmosphere of opulent bad taste, but is sharp enough to see that Mrs. Gereth's bric-à-brac is worth holding fast to. Mean time that lady has pitched upon a damsel who combines the qualifications which she requires in a daughter-in-law, and the story amounts practically to a narrative of the contest (for the spoils of Poynton) between Mona Brigstocke and Mrs. Gereth, fighting behind her protégée, Fleda Vetch. We cannot exactly congratulate Mr. James this time on his taste in nomenclature. The situation is further complicated by the fact that the elder lady, when retiring from the house in consequence of her son's engagement, carries off a "large and important" selection from the portable property contained in it. The struggle is well balanced, and the reader is never justified till it is over in anticipating one end or the other to it. The more obvious characters, Owen Gereth and Mona, are concrete enough, if not very interesting —they are the matter. Mrs. Gereth, the force, is decidedly more of an abstraction, and not wholly a pleasant one, if we rightly decipher the plan of campaign which she enjoins upon Fleda. As for Fleda herself—well, the mind and heart of a girl such as Mr. James seems to have in his eye is an unexplored region to any man, so anything may be put there, and no one has any right to say it cannot be there. The only real fault in the construction of the book is the fire at the end. A catastrophe of that kind has no business in a novel unless it be either cause or effect. Now here, so far as the story goes, it is neither.

A Capful o' Nails. By D. Christie Murray. (Chatto & Windus.)

Mr. Christie Murray in a short preface reviews his own book unfavourably. It is, as he suggests, not much of a novel, because its purpose is too plain. It is a vigorously written story of the martyrdom of a nail-maker who fought for the cause of his wretched fellow workers. The misery and cruelty with which, unfortunately, a true chronicle of such a struggle must be loaded are relieved by some acts of extraordinary kindness. From the point of view of art these seem to occur almost too conveniently; but the sad story wanted some such contrasts. One of the best touches in the book is supplied by the kindly, but not very wise Mr. Jeremiah, a character drawn to some extent, as the author admits, after Mr. Dick in 'David Copperfield.' His good nature and genial vanity are described with pleasant humour, and even with something of the pathetic. Mr. Murray shows his skill as a writer in no way more decidedly than in his accounts of savagery and bloodshed. His descriptions are harrowing, but not disgusting.

A Missing Witness: from the Narrative of Dorothy Heatherly. By Frank Barrett. (Chatto & Windus.)

Pretty, pathetic, improbable, and hackneyed—these are the epithets, all more or less commonplace, which best describe Mr. Barrett's illustrated story of a returned convict and his complete vindication. There is nothing altogether improbable in the escape of a man from penal servitude, and the subsequent discovery that he ought never to have been sent to Dartmoor; but, in spite of all the records of physiology, it does arouse a sense of incredulity to be told of an imbecile who has his broken skull manipulated until he suddenly reverts to a scene which had been interrupted many years before, and is thus enabled to bring the guilty to book, and to relieve the innocent from suspicion. The reader who already knows Mr. Barrett as a novelist will understand at once the use which he has made of these materials, and will not be surprised if he finds one, two, or even three couples of sweethearts whose happiness depends upon that bit of broken bone on the imbecile's skull, and who in years to come will inevitably compete with each other for the Dunmow flitch. Needless to add that the bit of bone is removed in presence of the various actors in this little drama, that it is done by one of the future husbands, and that the description is a complete chapter of clinical surgery.

Arrested. By Esmè Stuart. (White & Co.)

A man in prison for a crime he has not committed, to wit, a brutal murder; an imbecile; a heroine named Elsie, with somebody to persecute her in the absence of her lover—these are pawns in Miss Stuart's game, as they are in Mr. Frank Barrett's. 'Arrested' has an advantage over 'A Missing Witness' in length, but not in probability or in novelty, or in its modes of producing a melodramatic effect. It is not one of the best stories which Miss Stuart has written, though it reveals much of her wonted refinement of feeling and quiet humour. We regret to find that Miss Stuart's heroines continue to regard her heroes as young Greek gods. Elsie's sweetheart was a young English simpleton, who fully deserved all the trouble that overtook him.

Margaret Moore, Spinster. By A. W. Buckland. (Ward & Downey.)

It is a pleasure in these days of the New Woman, with her atmosphere of storm and stress, to meet with a simple story of the loves and cares of woman some hundred years ago, when the fireside, and not the platform, still claimed her as its rightful occupant. Such is the love story of Margaret Moore, and though in no sense a new one, it is redeemed from the commonplace by a refreshing atmosphere of old-world sentiment, and by its picturesque setting of town and country life in the days of our grandmothers. Margaret is introduced to us in her home, a farmhouse in Wiltshire, where an accident throws her in the way of a gay but worthless gallant. Despite the warnings of her brothers and the pricks of her own conscience, she clings to her faithless lover, and thus by means direct and indirect causes misery and misfortune to her family and friends, at the same time wrecking her own happiness. The characters, though slight and somewhat hackneyed, are well drawn and consistent, while the glimpses of Bath and its society in the days of its glory are perhaps the part of the book on which Miss Buckland is most to be congratulated.

The Wooing of a Fairy. By Gertrude Warden. (Hurst & Blackett.)

The eminent writers of fiction who have lately been airing their opinions of reviewers in the columns of a daily paper—those of them, at any rate, who said severe things about that much-enduring class—had a good deal to say, if we remember right, about the perfunctory and superficial character of much modern criticism. No reviewer, so far as we are aware, has retorted about the perfunctory and superficial character of much that passes for fiction—these controversies, it may be observed, always turn upon fiction; philosophers, historians, men of science, rarely complain that their works are perfunctorily reviewed. It is when the reviewer is brought face to face with works like 'The Wooing of a Fairy' that he is at his wits' end how to avoid the charge of perfunctoriness without giving an undue importance to the infinitely worthless. "Worthless" is the word; the book, like scores of others, is not coarse, not immoral, not grotesque, but simply without any value. It is clear that the author has never studied men and women outside the covers of novels; her characters are the merest clichés, which never, even at their freshest, bore any near resemblance to any people that walk this earth, and are now as unrecognizable as her gipsies who talk "Yeddish." How is it possible for the critic who knows what a novel ought to be to "put himself in touch," or whatever the phrase is, with the writer of a book like this? Nobody demands elaborate musical criticism of 'Two Lovely Black Eyes'; why should any one look for careful studies of novels which stand in the category of fiction about where that once popular air stands in that of music?

Gilbert Murray. By A. E. Houghton. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

The main characteristics of Mr. Houghton's book are easily summed up. The story is simple and unaffected; there are few graces of style in the composition, while the morals of the volume are absolutely unexceptionable. There is little originality in the plot, which deals with the affairs of various families living in England in our own times. The nearest approach to anything of the sort is not very happily contrived. A gentleman engages himself to a young lady, though (to use his own words to his dearest friend) he never intended nor hoped to marry her. He professes that his intentions were really good "in the main," and asks that his blundering may be forgiven. It is hardly to be wondered at that the author has some difficulty in making a story out of these materials. In fact, his book is better suited to the schoolroom than the drawing-room. The right man dies and the survivors are well provided for, and are put in a fair way to live happily.

Weighed in the Balance. By Harry Lander. (Lane.)

This book appears to have been written largely with a view to the expression of personal wrongs, and perhaps for this reason, clever as it is in many respects, it fails to carry conviction. Moreover, though Mr. Lander can write well, he has not acquired the art of construction, and there is little continuity in the gamut of demoralization through which his hero passes, and which is detailed to us both in the first and third person, a habit that is as inartistic as it is bewildering. The story purports to be the confessions of a certain James Norton, who is driven to a life of recklessness and crime because his early socialistic and possibly better aspirations fail in fulfilment, and are unappreciated by the plebeian mill-owning family to which he belongs. It reads, however, rather as a bitter attack upon the manufacturing class as a whole, and especially upon those members of it who are successful, and the bitterness is so overdone that the truth which without doubt underlies it does not convince us as it should. Mr. Lander knows his surroundings well. The picture of the North-Country town and its life is excellent if depressing, and Norton's disreputable experiences across the Atlantic, both east and west, are painted with force and occasional brilliancy. Each time that a woman crosses his path, however, the story becomes trivial and vulgar, for the women have no reality. Norton's is a strange character, but for all that we hear of it we are barely persuaded that he is a much more honest, while he is certainly a less useful man, than the brother at whom he and his author are ever ready to cast a stone.

Gentleman George. By Mrs. Herbert Martin. (Hurst & Blackett.)

Mrs. Martin's story is said to be without a heroine, but some people will find one in four-year-old Sukey, the passionate and self-willed child who is so fervently in love with the hero. Her mother, "a meek, stout, long-suffering woman," has many misgivings about her:—

"'You may comfort yourself with thinking Sukey is more earthly than heavenly, Mrs. Rogers,' George said, smiling. 'I don't fancy really the Lord can want such a handful.' 'No, that is a comfort too,' the mother said, quite gravely and devoutly, 'there ain't much making of an angel in Sukey—that's very true. And whatever her is, Mr. Jarge, I 'ool say this for her, her ain't a liar, and her has got a good 'eart.'"

Imperfect qualifications for the struggle of life for an impulsive maiden of the peasant class, but likely to win friends, as in the present instance. The little maid's chum is a broken-down man of fifty, shiftless rather than a wrongdoer, who has parted from home and family for a quarter of a century, and led a solitary life among the poor of a Midland village. The simple story is well told, and one learns to condone George's shiftlessness for the sake of his humanity. It has the further merit of truthfulness in the description of his rustic friends.

The Wise and the Wayward. By G. S. Street. (Lane.)

In 'The Wise and the Wayward' Mr. Street is not seen to the best advantage. Excellent artist as he is, here one finds him at work at a style of composition which for the present does not thoroughly suit him. This is the first regular novel he has published, and the experiment is not so successful as might have been hoped for. The most obvious indication of his not feeling quite master of this sort of work is that his humour does not serve him so well as in his earlier books. He seems to have been to some extent oppressed by the seriousness of his task. But the practised reader of novels need not go far to discover another sign of the novice. The story starts badly. It is introduced too laboriously, with too much description and too much effort to show the state of things in which it begins. The strong parts of the book are the conversation (in which a clever writer can generally do well) and the critical analysis, which is, as a rule, a fault in novel-writing. Here Mr. Street is at his best. In the construction of his story he is not inspired. It may be conceded that the events narrated happen as in real life, but in examining a well-worked-out story one ought not to have to say, "This is exactly what would have happened." That is usually commonplace and ineffective. One requires of the novelist that he should so choose his action and control the course of events that one may say, "This is exactly how it would have happened." It is obvious that in real life the wayward go to the wall and the wise succeed. Mr. Street affects to be contented with his tame conclusion; his readers must think otherwise. The novelist's task was to defeat the dulness of the ordinary course of events, to contrive something dramatic, and compel one to admit that it happened naturally.

LAW-BOOKS.

A Short History of Solicitors. By E. B. V. Christian, LL.B. (Reeves & Turner.)—This is by no means a book to be dreaded by the general reader; for, though dealing with law and called by the severe name of "history," it abounds in anecdotes, traditions, and lively quotations from old dramatists and other writers, so that there is scarcely a page which can be said to consist merely of dry legal records or dull statistics. The history, of course, includes attorneys, and goes back to the times when attorneys and solicitors were persons privately employed by the rich and great, having no legal status and constituting no distinct social body. From those early times the growth of a profession is gradually traced down to the present day, when solicitors (including persons who would formerly have been called attorneys and also those practitioners who, until recently, were called proctors) are officers of the High Court, and are hemmed in by all sorts of acts and orders which regulate, or purport to regulate, their conduct in every particular. Mr. Christian somewhat exaggerates the statutory and other restrictions under which the business of a solicitor in the nineteenth century is carried on. No doubt he desires to be impartial, but he is carried away by his subject and unconsciously becomes a champion. A solicitor, he states (to put it briefly), must set forth in his bill every detail of work done and the price charged for it, which price is regulated by law and may be cut down by taxation. It ought to be stated in the same place that the terrors of taxation are wholly imaginary—partly because a solicitor in court work sends in two bills, of which only one is strictly taxed (the other, generally, not being taxed at all), partly because a client who applies for taxation is mulcted in costs unless more than one-sixth of the bill is taxed off. Practically, it may be assumed that a solicitor need not be afraid of the present system of taxation, and that, probably, he gains in the long run more than he loses by it. There might, we believe, be a method of regulating solicitors' remuneration which would effectively protect the public; but such a method has not yet been devised. The author mentions conveyancing as formerly a barrister's, now to a great extent a solicitor's, business. He does not add that, in numberless cases, a barrister does all the work, while a solicitor is allowed to charge for "drawing" deeds which he does not draw, thus frequently realizing more for doing nothing than the barrister is paid for doing everything. We do not think that the barrister is underpaid; if not, the conclusion is inevitable that the public pays twice over or more for what it gets. The author admits that a solicitor—who, poor fellow, has only a "pittance"—has a lien on the client's documents till the "pittance" is paid; he ought to state in the same place that a solicitor's lien extends also to all kinds of property recovered or preserved by his exertions, and is not limited to the interest of the actual client. We have used here and there the words "in the same place," because the non-mention of a particular fact in a particular context may easily mislead the reader, although that fact may be mentioned elsewhere in the book. It is curious to read that in old times Osbaston, a fraudulent solicitor, besides being "put out of the Roll," was "cast over the Barr"; that one Bradley, a solicitor, finding an order against his client expedited, knocked off the hat of the registrar's clerk, and was promptly committed to the Fleet; that Sir John Churchill, "a famous Chancery practiser," took 28*l.* in his walk from Lincoln's Inn to Temple Bar, merely in fees for motions and defences for hastening and retarding hearings; that in the later part of the seventeenth century some attorneys did "abominate the name of a solicitor"; and that such celebrated judges as Dyer, Coke, Wylde, and Jones were believed to have been educated as "clerks to an attorney of the Common Pleas." But for these and a host of quaint sayings and interesting facts we must refer the reader to Mr. Christian's amusing pages, which, as has been hinted earlier, need not be looked upon with that reverential dread which usually strikes the bold Briton at the mere suggestion of his glancing at a law-book.

Ruling Cases. Arranged, annotated, and edited by Robert Campbell, M.A. With American Notes by Irving Browne. Vols. VII., VIII., IX. (Stevens & Sons.)—The industry of Mr. Campbell and his assistants is conspicuously evident in the production of three new volumes of their important series during the year 1896. The first of these, in alphabetical sequence, extends from "Conversion" to "Counsel," the second from "Criminal Law" to "Deed," the third from "Defamation" to "Dramatic and Musical Copyright." The three volumes together extend to 2,365 pages, but vol. ix. is much larger than either of the other two, containing 907 pages. Vol. vii. commences with the usual little preface, from which we learn that "the assistance of Mr. A. E. Randall and Mr. Agarwala, with whom is now associated Mr. J. Ritchie, is continued as before"; and further, that "this may be assumed in subsequent volumes." Accordingly, we feel no surprise at not seeing these gentlemen's names mentioned as contributors to vols. viii. and ix. Some readers have expressed a desire for a current guide in the shape of an index of subjects, with full cross-references; the editor, while sympathizing with those who invoke such assistance, deems it undesirable to add a separate index of this description to each volume, but hopes, when ten volumes have been published, to issue an index volume for the whole decade, with the valuable supplementary feature of addenda bringing the whole up to date. Vol. ix. has no preface; in the preface to vol. viii. the editor states that there is "almost a certainty" of the work being completed, as originally estimated, in twenty-five volumes. Considering that he has not yet got beyond the fourth letter of the alphabet, the reader may scarcely be prepared to adopt so hopeful a view; but it must be remembered that some of the last few letters of the alphabet cannot possibly be prolific, and the editor points out that in nearly all English and American alphabetical works the first three letters of the alphabet usurp a mighty space. He adds that "Practice"—a "maddening title" which commonly inflates the letter p most unreasonably—will probably be omitted altogether, the comparatively few points which are of general interest being dealt with under other heads. We have heard it remarked that in a really healthy state of legal procedure there should be no such word as "practice," and Mr. Campbell's opinion seems to incline somewhat in that direction. Let us hope for this and other reforms, particularly for the abolition of the doctrines recorded under the title "Counsel," namely, that barristers have no claim to be paid for their work, but that, per contra, they have the privilege of being allowed to abuse the litigant on the other side irrelevantly, maliciously, and without reasonable cause. O fortunatos nimium, sua si bona norint!

We are glad to have on our table The Magistrate's Annual Practice, 1897, by Charles Milner Atkinson (Stevens & Sons; Sweet & Maxwell), a useful and comprehensive work, and to hear that in future a new edition may be expected every year. The changes of law and practice are so frequent that any book, however carefully written—perhaps even the more for being carefully written—must to some extent misrepresent the actually existing state of things unless kept up to date by frequent revision. The author is well aware of this, and in the performance of his duty on the present occasion he increases the whole book (including the copious index) by something over sixty pages. This expansion enables him to include some important Acts which were not passed or were not in operation when the previous edition appeared, such as the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Acts, 1895, the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, the Truck Act, 1896, and the much discussed and much to be discussed Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896. On looking carefully through the table of contents we find that the six chapters into which the book is divided have the same general structure as before, the new matter being fitted in, as it were, in convenient places. This is as it should be, for the practical usefulness of a law-book is a good deal impaired by gratuitous changes in its arrangement. Apart from new Acts, the chronological "Table of Statutes" (pp. xxix–xxxix), the "Illustrative Forms of Summons" (Appendix, pp. 861, 862), and the Local Government Board Regulations under the Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896 (Appendix, pp. 863–868), are additions of considerable value. We cordially wish success to the work.

AMERICAN FICTION.

The Country of the Pointed Firs. By Sarah Orne Jewett. (Fisher Unwin.)—This is a very favourable specimen of a class of work in which American ladies excel. It is a collection of studies, more or less consecutive, of life in an out-of-the-way fishing village—the experience of a long summer holiday. An English reader must fail to catch the exact flavour of the place described, somewhere on the coast of Maine; but a well-drawn picture of human beings is attractive in any circumstances, and in Miss Jewett's pleasant pages one finds a bit of life consistent, original, and vivid in presentment. It requires some effort to realize the amount of artistic skill which goes to the composition of such a piece of work—one that in its method, though not in its detail, recalls Mrs. Gaskell. The little book is marked by good taste throughout; it is at times gently pathetic, at others delicately humorous, and it is always free from exaggeration. For the English market it would have been better to alter some of the spelling. Besides the usual words—"neighbor," "traveler," "gayety"—there are some which are still more objectionable to English eyes, such as "woolen," &c. Less objectionable—for one likes the phrase—but hardly correct, is the spelling "readied up."

College Girls. By Abbe Carter Goodloe. Illustrated by Charles Dana Gibson. (Downey & Co.)—These studies of life in an American ladies' college are full of vigour and fun, and the author is evidently determined to be thoroughly modern. Some of the slang is new to ordinary English readers—"got the cinch on the rest of us," "there was an awful muss." It seems quite fitting that the author's name should raise a doubt whether one should speak of him or her. He or she will, perhaps, like to know that the Langham Hotel is in the western postal district of London, not the west central, and that "Dr. Bernardo" should be Dr. Barnardo. That girls in American colleges work hard and learn a great deal English readers know very well, and they will be delighted to hear further that the girls have plenty of amusement and are keen about athletic sports. The author gives an engaging picture of the whole thing, and the illustrator adds to the reader's pleasure by his cleverly drawn sketches, though his girls would be more attractive if their heads were smaller and their legs longer.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL LITERATURE.

The Bibliography of Tennyson. (Privately printed.)—To collectors of first editions this little volume should be most useful, containing as it does in a small space a very great deal of minute information about the publications of the late Poet Laureate. Prefixed is a short memorial notice of Mr. Richard Herne Shepherd, the author presumably of this bibliography, and a well-known authority on the early editions of modern authors. So far as we can judge, every production of Tennyson's is mentioned in its chronological order; but later editions are not specified unless they vary in their contents from the earlier ones. In the case of exceedingly rare books the author has added interesting notes, often even tracing the career of individual copies and pointing out their peculiarities. The book ends with a carefully worked-out "Scheme for a final and definitive edition of the complete poetical and dramatic works of Alfred, Lord Tennyson, including all his suppressed or unacknowledged poems, and the readings of the various editions (with indexes and appendices), to be completed in fifteen volumes." When shall we see this edition?

The Theory of National and International Bibliography. By Frank Campbell. (Library Bureau.)—Mr. Frank Campbell's name has long been known as that of an intrepid traveller into the arid wastes of bibliography, and the present volume shows ample evidence of his zeal in the cause. In it he has collected a series of monographs contributed from time to time to library journals or meetings of learned societies, and their object for the most part is to urge the necessity for comprehensive bibliographies of modern literature, compiled on a careful and accurate system. On one point the author appears confused, or rather perpetually confuses two things, a bibliography and a catalogue, whereas there is a most important difference between them; however, as far as a catalogue is concerned all readers of the book will agree with him in wishing for accurate lists of all modern literature, though on the system upon which these should be compiled there must of necessity be various opinions. To the general reader, perhaps, the importance of catalogues and indices to the mass of Blue-books may appear overstated; but to such as have to grope through these tiresome volumes, and waste valuable time in endeavouring to disentangle their contents, the need is evident. There is no romance in Mr. Campbell's volume, it deals with commonplace literature in the most matter-of-fact way; but for all that it is full of interest of a technical kind. There is a want of connexion in many parts; we skip from tables of statistics to imaginary conversations between inquisitive readers and smiling librarians; but this was almost inevitable from the character of the book. We cannot honestly say that it is light reading; but it is a perfect mine of information on modern bibliography.

Mr. Slater has issued the tenth volume of Book-Prices Current (Stock), a compendium so useful that it seems nowadays indispensable. The addition of a subject index adds signally to the value of the volume as a work of reference, and Mr. Slater may be congratulated upon his work. The average price obtained in the sales recorded was considerably higher than in the previous season. This Mr. Slater ascribes in a measure to the large sums paid for two copies of the editio princeps of 'The Canterbury Tales.' The sum given (35*l*.) for a copy of Shelton's 'Don Quixote,' 1612–20, which lacked the printed title of Part I., was absurdly high, for the book is not so scarce in this state as some people would have us believe. Florio's 'Montaigne' (1603) sold for 23*l*. 10*s*. Mr. Slater, by the way, is a little rash in, without qualification, calling the Shakspeare autograph in the Museum copy of this book genuine.

Index Biblio-Iconographique. Par Pierre Dauze. — Janvier à Octobre, 1894. (Paris, Répertoire des Ventes Publiques Cataloguées.)—This excellent work by M. Pierre Dauze is intended to do for France what 'Book-Prices Current' does for England, and it certainly deserves success. Not content with registering every book sold at a sum higher than twenty francs, the compiler has made similar lists of pictures, prints, and autographs. The descriptions of books are full and of considerable bibliographical value, and, instead of being arranged under sales, are combined into one alphabet, making the book very handy for reference. Abroad much greater pains is taken with the preparation of auction catalogues than in England, and to this, perhaps, in a large measure much of the excellence of M. Dauze's work is due; but beyond this the book shows many signs of care and trouble, and is far in advance of any other work of a similar kind. In his preface the compiler states that if the book proves a success its scope will be enlarged, and in it will be cited every example of certain classes of book, however low the price. All examples of books printed in the fifteenth century, for instance, will be quoted, and to those who care for such books and know how arbitrarily prices — especially auction prices — are settled, such an enlargement of the original design of the work will be very welcome.

Manuel de Bibliographie Historique. Par Ch. V. Langlois.—Instruments Bibliographiques. (Hachette & Co.)—In this extremely sensible little volume the author has pointed out how essential to students, especially historical students, is a knowledge of the bibliographies relating to their special subject. Without a little help of this sort specialists may work at a subject in ignorance of materials of the highest importance, while others may use reference books long superseded to write on questions about which others have already written, and written better. The chief object of the book has been to point out the most important bibliographies on any subject, under the main headings, "Bibliographies des Bibliographies," "Répertoires de Bibliographie Universelle," "Répertoires de Bibliographie Nationale," "Bibliographie des Sources Originales," "Répertoires de Bibliographie Rétrospective," "Répertoires de Bibliographie Périodique." Under each head the author has gathered a great deal of concise information, and his chapters on "National Bibliography" are especially valuable, giving under each country a list of the best books to consult on the subject of its literature. In his preface the author promises a second volume on 'Materials for History,' and if it is carried out as well as the present book it will be a most valuable addition to our historical reference books. In conclusion, we would point out that, unpretending as this little book is in appearance, it is well worth the attention of every student.

Die Bucherliebhaberei am Ende des 19 Jahrhunderts. Von Otto Mühlbrecht. (Berlin, Puttkammer & Mühlbrecht.)—Fired by the example of M. Brunet and Mr. Roberts, two recent writers on rare books and their prices, Herr Mühlbrecht has adventured in the same field for the benefit of German readers. The usual fault of books of this class written for popular circulation is a general disregard for accuracy in detail; but in the present instance a considerable amount of care seems to have been taken to make the information precise. The book treats lightly of the history of great printers and presses, of special classes of rare books, and of book collecting and collectors in various countries. About a third of the volume is taken up by a bibliography of books about books, arranged under various classes. This is a decidedly handy list and well put together, bibliographies of places and presses being arranged alphabetically under the towns or printers; but on special subjects it does not appear to be quite up to date. Two lists—the first of printers who worked before 1500, and the second of towns in the order in which they received the art—finish the volume. These lists are taken from Falkenstein's 'Geschichte der Buchdruckerkunst,' a book issued forty years ago, and therefore are not quite accurate, though still useful. To such as are fond of the light side of bibliography this book will be most acceptable, and, as it has a fairly full index, may sometimes be useful.

We have received the catalogues of Mr. Dobell (good), Mr. Edwards, Mr. Menken, Messrs. Myers & Co., Messrs. Parsons & Sons (portraits and books, good), and Mr. Spencer (good). We have also catalogues from Mr. Cameron (Scotch books, interesting) and Messrs. Douglas & Foulis of Edinburgh, Mr. Carver of Hereford (scientific), Mr. Miles of Leeds (interesting), Mr. Howell (good) and Messrs. Young & Sons of Liverpool, Mr. Withers of Manchester, Messrs. Thornton & Son of Oxford (theology), and Messrs. Hiscoke & Son of Richmond, Surrey. Messrs. Baer & Co. have also sent us from Frankfurt a catalogue of German and English books.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

THE first volume of the "Isthmian Library" (Innes & Co.) is concerned with Rugby Football, and Mr. B. Fletcher Robinson and a band of experts have supplied in detail their views upon the tactics of play behind and in the scrummage, with valuable diagrams on such novel operations as "screwing the scrummage" and the methods of half-backs and others in attack and defence. It is probable that as much as ever can be learnt from books by the football player is here imparted. The historical portion of the work is on a briefer scale than in that of Mr. Marshall which has been reviewed in these columns. Perhaps the chapter on the past might have been omitted with advantage. It certainly gives a most unfavourable, and we think unjust impression of Rugby play before the days of the Union. Whatever may have been the horrors of hacking (and in our experience charging and tackling were responsible for many more accidents than hacking ever occasioned), the game was much faster in the fifties than it became for a time when pushing first succeeded foot-work; and some of the finest features of the old game—long left and right drop-kicking, and dodging runs—have become almost extinct under the modern system of passing from hand to hand. We are glad to observe that one of the writers ventures to suggest the abolition of the odious system of "heeling out," which, of course, is as contrary to the spirit of the older game as to the letter of the "offside" rule. We should like to see the forwards use their feet a little more. Dropped goals from that quarter would revive an interesting feature. There would be no fear of the game becoming appreciably slower. The directory of clubs, and other information on the statistics of this now cosmopolitan game, seem complete and valuable.

THE new issue of Kelly's Handbook to the Titled, Landed, and Official Classes reaches us from Messrs. Kelly & Co., and can only be received by us with words of general praise, which we have frequently extended to previous issues of the work under both its present and its former title. We have been unable to discover any errors in it in the course of our examination, and we have often said that it is one of the most useful of all books of reference.

Whitaker's Titled Persons, 1897, is a miracle of concentration, supplying most of the information of a large peerage, with similar facts with regard to baronets and knights, in very small compass. We have found it accurate so far as we have been able to check its information. The book in size and shape and type resembles the famous 'Almanack,' and should share its popularity.—That useful volume The Clergy Directory has been sent to us by Mr. Phillips. It has evidently been carefully revised; for instance, Archdeacon Perry's death is noted. The editor complains of the difficulty of ascertaining the whereabouts of retired clergymen. Sometimes he has also omitted their names. At p. 33 Canon Eyton is by a misprint made into "R. Eyre."

A SECOND edition of Mr. F. Harrison's Studies in Early Victorian Literature has reached us from Mr. Arnold.—Mr. Gosse's pleasant volume Seventeenth Century Studies has been reprinted by Mr. Heinemann. As this collection of sympathetic essays has reached a third edition the enumeration of a few slips may be worth while. Mr. Gosse has most sensibly decided not to modify the opinions expressed in these sprightly pages, even when his maturer judgment disagrees with them; but an unfortunate epithet like "Livy's unvarnished tale" might be omitted, and an error such as that involved in saying that "all else that its voluminous author [Strada] wrote and said was promptly forgotten" should be corrected. Strada's 'Prolusiones' furnished the theme for a well-known paper in the 'Spectator.' Two or three misprints have escaped Mr. Gosse, although, generally speaking, the typography is correct: Mayerdomo, p. 61; Barnabas, p. 70. The word "effort" was included in Cotgrave's 'Dictionary' before 1660.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN have added to their "Illustrated Standard Novels" a volume containing The Misfortunes of Elphin and Rhododaphne. How 'Rhododaphne' is to be considered a novel the publishers have not explained. Mr. Saintsbury in his introduction to this instalment of Peacock's writings boldly calls it "a verse novel"! The illustrations by Mr. Townsend are not so good as usual

MESSRS. BLISS, SANDS & Co. have reprinted in one volume The History of Tom Jones, from the first edition of 1749. It is a wonderfully cheap as well as a commendable volume.

MR. HUMPHREYS has sent us Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, a large-paper reprint of Long's well-known translation. The philosopher has probably never appeared before in such luxury of type and paper as is here accorded to him.

WE have on our table A Brief History of the English Language, by O. F. Emerson (Macmillan),—Practical Work in Physics, by W. G. Woollcombe: Part III., Light and Sound (Oxford, Clarendon Press),—The Profession of Medicine, by C. West (Kegan Paul),—The Warwick Shakespeare: Cymbeline, edited by A. J. Wyatt (Blackie),—Professional Papers of the Corps of Royal Engineers: Vol. I., Paper III., The Defence of Mds by Armoured Fronts, translated by Capt. W. W. Baker, R.E. (Chatham, Mackay),—American Journal of Archæology, Vol. XI., No. III. (Trübner),—Knowledge, Vol. XIX. (Office of 'Knowledge'),—Ross of Dutcher's Coolly, by H. Garland (Neville Beeman),—Tales of Black-Country Life, by D. Hobbs (Stock),—Charaka Puja, and other Stories, by Chola (Roxburghe Press),—The Duke's Ward, by D. M. Jones (Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier),—Herod the Great, an Historic Drama in Three Parts, by Henry Solly (Kegan Paul),—Lays and Legends of the Weald of Kent, by L. Winser (Mathews),—A Child-World, by J. W. Riley (Longmans),—The Year of Shame, by W. Watson (Lane),—Songs and Odes, by R. W. Dixon (Mathews),—Selections from the Early Scottish Poets, edited by W. H. Browne (Baltimore, Johns Hopkins Press),—The Vale of Arden, by A. Hayes (Manchester, Cornish Brothers),—Odds and Ends, by an Odd Fellow (Digby & Long),—The Mickle Drede, and other Verses, written by G. Bottomley (Kendal, Wilson),—Four Children in Prose and Verse, by W. T. Webb (Macmillan),—The Dead Pulpit, by the Rev. H. R. Haweis (Bliss, Sands & Co.),—The Divine Library: Suggestions how to Read the Bible, by J. P. Smyth (Bagster),—The Clue to the Ages: Part I., Creation by Principle, by E. J. Page (Baptist Tract and Book Society),—Christ no Product of Evolution, by the Rev. G. Henslow (Stoneman),—Preachers of the Age: The Heritage of the Spirit, and other Sermons, by the Bishop of Peterborough (Low),—The New Life in Christ Jesus, edited by Julian Field (Innes),—Judaismus Triumphatus, by Dr. H. Lisco (Williams & Norgate),—La Hongrie Littéraire et Scientifique, by J. Kont (Paris, Leroux),—Maître Dolon, by C. Velloni (Paris, Lévy),—L'Emploi de la Vie, by Sir John Lubbock (Paris, Alcan),—M. Greifs Gesammelte Werke, 3 vols. (Leipzig, Amelang),—Mémoires du Baron d'Haussez, edited by the Duchesse d'Almazan, Vol. II. (Paris, Lévy),—and Causeries du Mercredi, by P. Gille (Paris, Lévy). Among New Editions we have History of Philosophy, by A. Weber (Longmans),—Rome of To-day and Yesterday, by J. Dennie (Putnam),—A Thousand and One Gems of English Poetry, selected by C. Mackay, LL.D. (Routledge),—and The Literary Shop, and other Tales, by J. L. Ford (Lane).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Angus's (J.) Six Lectures on Regeneration, 8vo. 6/ cl.
Hall's (Rt. Rev. A. C. A.) Christ's Temptation and Ours (Baldwin Lectures, 1896), cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Ponte's (Ven. L. de) Meditations on the Passion of our Lord, translated by J. Heigham, cr. 8vo. 4/ cl.
Pulpit Commentary Reissue: Exodus, Vol. 2, 8vo. 6/ cl.
Story's (R. H.) The Apostolic Ministry in the Scottish Church (Baird Lecture, 1897), cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.

Philosophy.

Balfour's (F. H.) Unthinkables Discussed, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

History and Biography.

Burton's (J. H.) History of Scotland, cheaper edition, Vol. I., cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Cooke's (J. H.) The Early Churches of Great Britain, 2/6 cl.
Finlayson's (J.) An Account of the Life and Works of Dr. Robert Watt, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Macdonagh's (M.) The Book of Parliament, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Macdonald's (J. C.) Chronologies and Calendars, 7/6 cl.
Seth's (M. J.) History of the Armenians in India, 7/6 net.
Stapeltons of Yorkshire, the History of an English Family, by H. E. Chetwynd-Stapylton, 8vo. 14/ cl.

Geography and Travel.

Curzon's (Right Hon G. N.) The Pamirs and the Source of the Oxus, royal 8vo. 6/ net.
Dawson's (A. J.) In the Bight of Benin, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Lucas's (C. P.) Historical Geography of the British Colonies, Vol. 4, cr. 8vo. 9/6 cl.
Macnab's (F.) On Veldt and Farm in Bechuanaland, &c., 3/6

Science.

Richardson's (Sir B. W.) Vita Medica, Chapters of Medical Life and Work, 8vo. 16/ cl.

General Literature.

Allen's (Grant) At Market Value, 12mo. 2/ bds.
Baring-Gould's (S.) Guavas the Tinner, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

Carrel's (F.) The Adventures of John Johns, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Cholmondeley's (Mary) A Devotee, an Episode in the Life of a Butterfly, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Keightley's (S. R.) The Crimson Sign, cheaper edition, 3/6
Kenealy's (A.) Belinda's Beaux, and other Stories, 6/ cl.
King's (Capt. C.) Under Fire, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Lang's (Rev. C. G.) The Young Clanroy, a Romance of the '45, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Marryat's (F.) A Passing Madness, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Molyneaux's (T.) A Lady's Confession, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Peard's (F. M.) The Career of Claudia, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Roofer's (Roof) The Earth for a Dollar, or the Romance of the King of Wall Street, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Saintsbury's (G.) The Flourishing of Romance and the Rise of Allegory, cr. 8vo. 5/ net.
Sporting Society, Stories from the Pens of Sporting Celebrities, edited by Fox Russell, 2 vols. cr. 8vo. 12/ net.
Twain's (Mark) Prince and the Pauper, cheaper edition, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Coblenz (F.): Über das betende Ich in den Psalmen, 3m.
Hamburger (J.): Real-Encyclopädie des Judentums, Parts 2 and 3, 5m.
Schaefer (R.): Philipp Melanchthon's Leben, 3m. 60.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Maistre (X. de): Les Prisonniers du Caucase, Illustrations de J. Le Blant, 40fr.
Rosenberg (A.): Terborch u. Jan Steen, 3m.
Steindorff (G.): Grabfunde des mittleren Reichs in den königl. Museen zu Berlin: I. Das Grab des Mentuhotep, 80m.

History and Biography.

Biré (E.): Journal d'un Bourgeois de Paris pendant la Terreur: Vol. 4, La Chute des Dantonistes, 3fr. 50.
Broglie (Duc de): Malherbe, 2fr.

Geography and Travel.

Deschamps (G.): Sur les Routes d'Asie, 3fr. 50.

Philology.

Lange (R.): Einführung in die japanische Schrift, 8m.
Sanders (D.): Encyklopädisches englisch-deutsches u. deutsch-englisches Wörterbuch: Vol. 2, Deutsch-Englisch, Part 1, 1m. 50.

Science.

Bucherer (A. H.): Grundzüge e. thermodynamischen Theorie elektrochemischer Kräfte, 4m.

General Literature.

Bourget (P.): Recommencements, 3fr. 50.
Sales (P.): L'Enfant du Péché, 3fr. 50.

CROMWELL'S SPEECHES.

That the homage due to Carlyle should be combined with justice to Cromwell in the admirable "Centenary Edition" of Carlyle's works, now issuing from the press, is the motive that urges me to call attention to the careful revision of Cromwell's speeches, as published by Carlyle, that is urgently needed.

The text of these speeches, so far as research has carried me, proves to be most inaccurate and untrustworthy.* Take, for example, Cromwell's last speech when he dissolved his last Parliament—an extraordinary speech from an extraordinary man delivered on an extraordinary occasion.

A copy of a verbatim report of this speech, "taken at" Cromwell's "elbow," lies among the "Pell Papers," having been sent by Mr. S. Hartlib, a clerk in the Council of State office, to Mr. Pell, Cromwell's representative in Switzerland (Brit. Mus., Lansd. MS. 754, fo. 343).

The version of this speech given by Carlyle is taken from Burton's 'Diary.' The vital difference between the MS. speech and the "Burton" speech a quotation of some twelve words will amply prove. Cromwell, it may be remembered, was forced to break up Parliament because Parliament had been put to confusion by Sir A. Haselrig and the Republican party in the Commons; and their object was, as Cromwell said, according to the text given by Carlyle, "that some people might be the men that might rule all"; but, according to the MS., Cromwell asserted that the aim of the malcontents was "that some Tribune of the people might be the man to rule all."

The contrast is amply evident between "the real utterance of the man Oliver"—of the mighty victor whose power was paralyzed by a mere prater in the House of Commons—and the purposeless sentence which Carlyle incorrectly transcribes from Burton, where the passage stands thus: "that some of the people might be the men to rule all."

* Such proof of this statement as can be set forth in a printed form is contained in an article, 'Carlyle as Editor of Cromwell's Speeches,' National Review, January, 1897.

Besides being thus flabby in quality, in quantity also is Burton's version no less deficient. It is a mere summary of Cromwell's speech, equivalent in length, not style, to a Times digest of a Budget speech by a Chancellor of the Exchequer. Nor does the copy published by Carlyle from the pages of the "thing Burton" fail to share in the peculiarity common, so far as I can ascertain, to all the transcripts of Cromwell's speeches supplied to Carlyle, namely inaccuracy. It contains nineteen deviations from the original text, in three cases making serious havoc among the sentences; even the closing adjuration, "And let God judge between me and you," is perverted into "And let God be judge between you and me."

If Cromwell's speeches were published from the best sources, following, as a rule, the division of sentences and the punctuation of the original text, their readers, judging by my experience, would find themselves strangely drawn within the cloudy influence, the glamour, which that terrible man cast on those around him; and they would perceive that his words were, in their way, as efficacious towards their design as the blows of his sword or the movements of his soldiers.

The distinguished editor of the "Centenary Edition" of Carlyle's works will, I trust, acquit me of presumption if I venture to suggest that some responsibility attaches to the reissue of Cromwell's speeches in a form useless alike to the student of history and to the student of human nature; and, though the mystification be of less importance, it seems to me hardly desirable that a crowd of new readers should remain deluded by Carlyle's most unfounded assertion that those eminent collections of State Papers, "the Rushworths, Whitelockes, Nalsons, Thurloes, are not so much as indexed," and that Burton's 'Diary' is a "book filled with mere dim inanity."

This justification may be pleaded in behalf of what may be deemed an unwarranted attempt to lay a burden on other men's shoulders: if I venture to call attention to the need of a trustworthy edition of Cromwell's speeches, it is because that is an undertaking which, greatly to my regret, age and occupation compelled me to relinquish. Reginald F. D. Palgrave.

MR. H. G. HEWLETT.

Mr. H. Gay Hewlett, whose death on the 25th ult. was recently announced, will be regretted by a wide circle of archæological students at the Record Office and British Museum. His acquaintance with "black-letter" law and history (which was, in no small degree, a matter of inheritance in his family) caused him to be appointed in 1865 Keeper of the Land Revenue Records and "Record Agent" for the Crown. He resigned this office in 1895 on account of failing health, but the step was taken too late, and he was never able to enjoy the leisure which he had earned. Mr. Hewlett devoted to literature such hours as he could spare from business. His first published work, 'Shakespeare's Curse, and other Poems' (1861), drew a sharp but not unkindly review from Henry Chorley. The young poet met his judge with a request for an interview; and from the meeting that ensued must be dated a lifelong friendship and the entrusting him by Chorley with the office of literary executor. The fruits of this work appeared on Chorley's death in the 'Memoirs of Henry Fothergill Chorley' in two volumes. Two later volumes, 'A Sheaf of Verse' (1877) and 'A Wayfarer's Wallet' (1888); an edition of Roger of Wendover for the "Rolls Series," and 'Post-Norman Britain,' a little book written for an historical series published by the S.P.C.K., with scattered essays and reviews in the Nineteenth Century and other periodicals, complete a list which would have been longer if duty had allowed what love of letters prompted. Hewlett was a man who covered with a mask of self-possession and reserve the warmth of his enthusiasms so effectually that only the few among his acquaintance could succeed in becoming his friends. But those who did succeed loved him the more for an outward dignity which they found to be rooted in honour, and for an urbanity of manner which proceeded from native kindliness and reverence for everything clean and good. There were many among his contemporaries who reached a fame which was denied to him; none loved poetry and learning more, aimed higher, or served more faithfully.

PROF. TIELE AND MR. MAX MÜLLER.

In Mr. Max Müller's 'Contributions to the Science of Mythology' (i. 35) he quotes Prof. Tiele as saying that I have cited himself as an ally, which M. Gaidoz has also done, and that "ces messieurs n'ont point entièrement tort." But Mr. Max Müller's way of putting this is, "Prof. Tiele was even claimed as an ally by the ethnological students of customs and myths, but he strongly declined that honour." When a gentleman says that I am not quite wrong in regarding him as an ally, Mr. Max Müller renders this, "he strongly declined that honour"! I cite Prof. Tiele's own words: "Je suis un allié bien plutôt qu'un adversaire de la nouvelle méthode qu'on l'appelle ethnologique ou bien anthropologique" (Revue de l'Histoire des Religions, xii. 256). This is a curious way of "strongly declining" an alliance which I am not aware that I ever offered. I do cite Prof. Tiele in 'Myth, Ritual, and Religion' (i. 24; i. 43–44), and give the words in which he calls Mr. Max Müller's method "inadequate and misleading," and "applauds" our method as "alone explaining the why and wherefore," &c. Does Mr. Max Müller not know these passages? Prof. Tiele and I, of course, have minor differences.

Andrew Lang.

ST. PATRICK.

Ballyclough.

In your review of Mr. Plummer's 'Bede' it is stated that "the name Patricius first appears in Tirechan." That writer's annotations belong to the seventh century, but the name is found in the sixth century, in Columba's subscription to the 'Book of Durrow,' "rogo beatudinem tuam sancte presbyter Patrici"; and again in the fifth century Patrick begins his own 'Confessio' and also his letter to Coroticus with his name.

I think if Mr. Plummer had studied carefully the documents in Mr. Whitley Stokes's invaluable edition of 'The Tripartite Life of St. Patrick' (Rolls Series) he would hardly have offered his conjecture as to the identity of Patrick and Palladius. If they were the same it would follow that Patrick did not convert Ireland, for Palladius came "ad Scottos in Christum credentes"—words which have been unfairly minimized by writers with whose theories they conflict. There are three names which must be dealt with by any one who undertakes to give a rational account of St. Patrick. They are Sen-patric, Patricius, and Palladius. Sen-patric, or Patrick the Elder, appears in the earliest documents, 'The Hymn of Fiacc,' 'The Calendar of Oengus,' &c. Who was he? Dr. Todd promised to tell us, but thought better of it and dropped it. He is, in fact, the skeleton in the closet, and most theorists prefer to leave him there, nevertheless he is the Hamlet of the play. Mr. Stokes (p. cx, note 4) suggests that the whole passage in which the "qui Patricius alio nomine," &c., occurs is an interpolation, and there is every reason to believe he is right.

I have endeavoured in Appendix A to my 'History of the Church of Ireland,' and in the article on St. Patrick in the 'Dictionary of National Biography,' to give an account of Patricius which, at the same time, is in harmony with Prosper, and does no violence to existing records. T. Olden.

'SIREN VOICES.'

Miss Robertson writes:—

"Will you kindly allow me a few words in reply to your critic of 'Scandinavian Novels' in the Athenæum of February 13? In my translation of Jacobsen's 'Niels Lyhne' (not 'Nils,' as your reviewer in Norwegian fashion insists on writing) he has picked out a few 'slight errors which a little care would have prevented.' It is a pity he has not been more fortunate in his choice. In the following sentence, 'How frankly and openly she breathed into them' (the notes of a song), your critic finds fault with me for not translating what in Danish is literally 'breathed out in them' by 'breathed out her soul in them.' A point like this is really too trivial to dwell upon; his suggestion is no happier than mine and considerably less literal. Again, your reviewer does not appear to be familiar with the use of ublufærdig in Danish, or he would not complain that 'unchaste' is too strong a rendering of the word; if there is any fault to find, it is that it is not strong enough, as he might have seen had he taken the trouble to read the sentence which follows it on p. 168. 'Knogler der knuses i Kjöd' does not mean, as your critic thinks, 'bones crushed into the flesh' (which would be 'i Kjödet'), but 'bones crushed into flesh or pulp,' for which I felt justified in giving as an English equivalent 'bones crushed to powder.' Had I the opportunity of revising the translation I might perhaps substitute 'pulp' for 'powder,' but as it stands I fail to see how 'the meaning of the metaphor is lost by this blunder.' As the translator of Björnson's 'Fisher Lass,' noticed in the same article, allow me to protest against the trivial objections that are raised here too. I am not aware that I have translated ax anywhere by 'a grain of corn.' The only passage I can remember where the word occurs is on p. 84, where I wrote, 'her thoughts swayed and bent like ripe grain.' If your critic prefers to translate the Norwegian hælpepræst by the dictionary equivalent 'curate,' he is welcome to do so; it is a matter of taste. But the word 'curate,' with its peculiarly English associations, is not a translation that would recommend itself to any one familiar with Norwegian life. Finally, as to my crowning offence, the translation of Draug by 'bogies.' 'Can it be possible that this critic of a Norse story has never heard' of the ordinary dialect word Draug? Any Norse child could inform him that Draug is used everywhere in Norway as an equivalent of our 'ghost' or 'bogy.' If he wishes more precise information I refer him to Aasen's 'Norsk Ordbog,' p. 111. Draug is simply the Old Norse draugr, Scotch drow. If your reviewer will turn again to the passage in question, he will see how superfluous was his display of mythological learning. As I have been several times taken to task for the misleading title which the English version of Jacobsen's novel bears, I should like to mention here that I am in no way responsible for it. The title of the book was changed by the publisher after the proofs had left my hands."

We are sorry to find Miss Robertson so impenitent and, alas! so ill instructed. To translate udaande by "breathe out" is not even literally correct. The word is, notoriously, but a contraction of the old phrase "udaande sit sidste Suk" ("breathe forth one's last sigh"). A lady vocalist who knew her business would, of course, breathe her soul into her songs, not (unless she were asthmatical) "breathe out in them," whatever that may mean. Ublufærdig can only be translated "immodest." It is the equivalent of uanstændigh, and has been used in this milder sense, ever since Holberg's time, by all Danish classics. Possibly Miss Robertson confounded it with the older and much coarser word ublu. We hope not. It is strange that Miss Robertson should fail to see how her error in translating "Knogler der knuses i Kjöd" spoils the metaphor. Two boys, armed with wooden swords, are slashing away at the rich sappy grasses in a field, "and the severed stalks squashed beneath their feet like the bodies of Turks beneath horses' hoofs, with the sound of bones crushed into the flesh," i.e., of the Turks. Now "bones crushed to powder" would not give this stimulating, squashing sound suggestive of fresh slaughter. Ax cannot, under any pretext, be rendered by "grain." The "Draug," whenever, as in the present instance, he figures in a Norwegian fisher-folk's tale, can only be the terrible demon who haunts the Norwegian coast from the Lofotens to the Naze, and has been immortalized by Jonas Lie and others. He is not the conventional and colourless bogy of the nursery, though doubtless a distant relation.

DEGREES FOR WOMEN AT CAMBRIDGE.

March 2, 1897.

The Syndicate appointed to consider the question of granting degrees to women have made a report which was published yesterday. The report itself is not a very long one, but it is accompanied by a large number of appendices containing information which was before the Syndicate. The recommendations with which the report concludes are simple and intelligible. The signatures of nine out of the fourteen members of the Syndicate are attached; the remaining five Syndics have issued a paper of the nature of a minority report.

The gist of the proposals of the Syndics is that women should continue to be admitted to Tripos examinations under the same conditions as at present, and that those who pass a Tripos examination which would qualify a man for the B.A. degree and who have resided nine terms shall receive the title of the B.A. degree by diploma. When of the standing which would entitle men to proceed to M.A., women are to receive the title of the M.A. degree by diploma, and may subsequently obtain the titles of the degrees Doctor of Literature or Science by satisfying the tests that are imposed on men for those degrees.

Such are the new privileges which it is proposed to offer women; on the other hand, the report proposes to maintain all existing restrictions. It is not proposed at any stage to confer membership of the University upon women, nor to open any examinations, such as those for the ordinary degree, to which they are not now admitted. No fresh educational facilities in reference to lectures or laboratories will be secured by the proposed change, and the diplomas giving the titles of degrees will carry with them no university privileges. On the question of academical dress the report is discreetly silent. These limitations to the proposed changes will meet many objections which have been urged by those who view with dread the possibility that Cambridge should become a mixed university, while the granting the titles of degrees would go far towards removing the disadvantage—in the opinion of the Syndicate a serious one—felt by women who, having gone through Tripos examinations, have no title to show the fact, but only a certificate, which is seldom understood away from the University, and is often confused with certificates granted to non-resident students.

The view of the Syndicate as to the reality of this disadvantage is supported by the statements of no fewer than thirty-six women who have studied in Cambridge, as to their personal experience. These statements are collected in an appendix to the report. The greater weight attached to a degree from some other university than to the Cambridge Tripos certificate is similarly evidenced by statements contained in another appendix. It would seem that one of the principal objects aimed at by the Syndicate has been to remedy this with the minimum of change.

It will be seen that the proposals of the Syndicate, while not so extreme as some of the promoters of the inquiry may have hoped, go quite far enough to raise a very distinct issue, or rather several issues, between the supporters of change and those who desire to see no further steps taken by the University in the direction of granting academical degrees to women.

The paper circulated by the five members of the Syndicate who did not sign the report indicates one of the lines that will be taken in opposing it. After enumerating various reasons which prevented some of them from signing the report, they state that they would have wished to recommend to the Senate, as alternative to the proposal actually made, a resolution as to the desirability that the University should confer by diploma the title of Magistra in Litteris, or Magistra in Scientia, or some other title not being the title of a degree in the University, upon women who shall have qualified, under conditions to be defined, by passing a Tripos examination. It is not clear how far the signatories of this paper concur in the reasons given at the beginning of it. Those reasons seem to refer, among other things, to a suggestion which it is stated in the report itself was considered by the Syndicate, namely, that if any change is to be made in the way of further recognition of women students, such recognition should be extended to students who have studied and resided at approved colleges away from Cambridge. This change in the existing system the Syndicate state that they are not prepared to recommend.

It appears from the report that another suggestion considered by the Syndicate was that the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge acting together should take steps for combining the existing women's colleges in a separate university for women. Information is supplied in an appendix as to the proceedings of a committee privately formed in the two universities to promote such a movement. The Syndicate say that they are not in favour of such a proposal, and give reasons why they cannot think that the present is a fitting occasion for an attempt to secure the joint action of the two universities. The question will no doubt be again raised by members of the Senate when the report is discussed. The discussion has been fixed for Saturday, March 13th, and is expected to be of an animated character. W.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

Messrs. Bemrose & Sons have in the press Vols. V. and VI. of Wanklyn's 'Lessons of Holy Scripture illustrated from the Poets,'—'Heller's Annotated Edition of the New Code for Day Schools,'—and 'The Oldest Register Book of the Parish of Hawkshead, Lancashire,' by Mr. Swainson Cowper.

Messrs. A. D. Innes & Co. promise 'The Sepoy Revolt,' a critical narrative of the Indian Mutiny till the final suppression, by Lieut.-General McLeod Innes,—'The Sikhs and the Sikh War,' by General Sir C. Gough and Mr. A. D. Innes,—a translation by Mr. A. D. Jones of 'Cicero and his Friends,' by M. Gustave Boissier,—'The Law of War,' by Mr. J. S. Risley,—'Elfinn's Luck, and other Poems,' by A. E. Hills,—and two more volumes of the "Isthmian Library": 'The Complete Cyclist,' by A. C. Pemberton and Mr. C. P. Sisley; and 'Rowing,' by Mr. R. C. Lehmann, Mr. Guy Nickalls, and Mr. C. M. Pitman.

HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS COMMISSION.

THE HODGKIN COLLECTION.

In his brief introduction to the latest publication of the Commission, Mr. Cordy Jeaffreson tells his readers that "this collection of papers belongs to the class usually spoken of as 'made collections'.....in contradistinction to the accumulations of manuscripts..... of historic families or ancient corporations."

This definition is probably sufficiently exact, but we question whether the further statement that,

"resembling all other similar collections in that its multifarious evidences lack the particular continuity that contributes so largely to the enjoyment with which a student examines the muniments of an ancient family or corporate body, Mr. Hodgkin's assemblage of documents is also characterised by the piquant and animating diversity that is one of the usual and peculiar qualities of 'made collections,'" is a sentence that will be generally accepted or even generally understood.

Having ushered in the subject-matter with these portentous expressions, the editor gets to work at once by dividing the collection into eleven groups, the contents of which are "exhibited" in "eleven several calendars." This done, he disappears behind the scenes, after delivering a parting shot at the less "studious searcher." After all, however, the searcher, "studious" or otherwise, has much cause for gratitude in respect of the actual arrangement of the report and the descriptions of the several pieces. In all this Mr. Jeaffreson has displayed excellent judgment, and, so far as we have been able to test his dates and identifications, an almost unfailing accuracy, though herein he has readily acknowledged the assistance of the learned owner. At the same time, the repetition—five times in as many pages—of such expressions as "the tremulous handwriting of the aged first Duke of Leeds" cannot fail to lessen the literary effect of the most careful and conscientious workmanship.

The editor has truly remarked that the proportion of "valueless matter" in this collection is necessarily small. This is a circumstance which reflects credit upon the historical knowledge and judgment of the collector, but it is also one that renders it difficult to enter upon any detailed examination of the whole series of papers contained in this report. It might be possible, however, to make some distinction between the manuscripts which appear to have been selected merely as "curiosities" and those which are of the nature of historical evidences. Amongst the latter class (which is fortunately by far the more numerous) the papers of the Earl of Danby, the Duke of Ormonde, and those described here as "Miscellaneous Writings" appear to be the most important. Many of these deserve to be carefully compared and noted in connexion with the official State Papers to which they are related, but the exact degree of this relationship cannot be very easily ascertained, though one group must have been derived in some way from the ancient receipt branch of the Exchequer.

SALES.

Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge continued their sale of the library of printed books and manuscripts of Sir Charles Stewart Forbes and others on Thursday and Friday in last week. The following are some of the highest prices realized: Goethe, Wilhelm Meister, first edition, 16*l*. Goldsmith's Vicar of Wakefield, first edition (cut down and bound), 60*l*. Heures de Romme, Paris, N. Hygman, s.d., 40*l*. Horæ, MS. on vellum, with miniatures, Sæc. XV., 124*l*. La Bruyère, Caractères, first ten editions in morocco by Trautz-Bauzonnet, 1688–99, 47*l*. La Fontaine, Contes, 1685, 14*l*. 10*s*.; another, "Fermiers Généraux," 1762, 16*l*. 10*s*.; Fables, on vellum paper, by Didot, 6 vols., 1787, 22*l*. Monet, Chansons, 4 vols., 1765, 21*l*. William Morris's News from Nowhere, on vellum, 13*l*. 5*s*. Ruskin's Autograph Letters addressed to a College Friend (twenty-one), 21*l*.; and Twenty-nine Autograph Letters addressed to an Artist, 24*l*. Horæ ad Usum Rothomagensem, MS., illuminated, 30*l*. Milton, Justa Naufrago Edovardo King (containing first edition of Lycidas), 1638, 60*l*.; Paradise Lost, first edition (first issue), 1667, in modern binding, 80*l*. Froissart, Croniques, Verard's first edition, 70*l*. Graduale Sarisburiense, 1532, 115*l*. Montaigne's Essays, by John Florio, first edition, 1603, 12*l*. 5*s*. Charters of Pennsylvania, 1682–1701, 52*l*. Heures de Rome (1500–20), 12*l*. 15*s*. Swinburne's Sans Veneris, first edition, in sheets, 23*l*. 10*s*. Walton's Angler, first five editions (inferior copies, in modern bindings and cut down), 240*l*. Old English Ballets and Madrigals, Cantus parts only, 30*l*. Shakespeare, Fourth Folio, 25*l*. 10*s*. Report of the Houses of Assembly on South Carolina, 1742, 22*l*. A volume of Theatrical Portraits, various, 41*l*. A volume of Engravings of Sports and Pastimes, 53*l*.

The same auctioneers sold the following books this week. Loggan, Oxonia Illustrata and Cantabrigia Illustrata, 3 vols., 1675–88, 18*l*. Manning and Bray, History of Surrey, 1810–14, 20*l*.; another copy, 21*l*. The original drawings by Phiz to illustrate Dickens's Sketches of Young Gentlemen and Sketches of Young Ladies, thirteen in number, 79*l*. Ruskin, Poems, 1850, 22*l*. Thackeray, The Second Funeral of Napoleon (slightly soiled), 39*l*. Nichols, History of Leicester, 4 vols., 1795–1815, 101*l*. Annals of Sporting, 13 vols., 1822–28, 31*l*. Burns, Poems, Kilmarnock, 1786 (last leaf inlaid), 80*l*. Carey, Life in Paris, 1822, 17*l*. 15*s*. The Humourist, Vols. I., III., and IV., 1819–20, 17*l*. 10*s*. Blake, Songs of Innocence, 1789, 42*l*. Berain, Œuvre d'Ornement, Paris, 20*l*. Blake, Book of Thel, 1789, 18*l*. 5*s*.; Visions of the Daughters of Albion, 1793, 20*l*. 5*s*.; Little Tom the Sailor, 12*l*. 10*s*.; Thirty Drawings in pen, ink, and sepia, some being illustrations to Urizen, 61*l*. A portion of an illuminated manuscript, fifteenth century, Boccaccio's Fall of Princes, 30*l*. Dives and Pauper, printed by Wynkyn de Worde, 1496 (imperfect), 22*l*. Dürer Drawings, reproduced by Dr. Lippmann, Parts I. to IV., 1883, 13*l*.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

Last week the Academy held a reception; they will hold an election on the first Thursday in April. Will M. Hanotaux be the candidate chosen to take the place of M. Challemel-Lacour? It is highly probable, and the historian of Richelieu will have already pronounced the eulogium of the great cardinal founder of the Academy, which, once customary, has now fallen into desuetude. To compliment the sovereign and Richelieu was once a compulsory duty; we have changed all that, as Molière said. There remains only for the head of the State the copy of the speech of the new member presented to him after the séance in a binding which is ordinary enough, but very curious, and settled by tradition—a binding, or rather a covering, in boards of gilt paper, of deplorable taste, which perhaps appealed strongly to Louis XIV., and has been preserved for his successors. M. le Marquis Costa de Beauregard will carry one day, or has already offered, this special binding to M. Félix Faure.

Politics, moreover, are mixed up with these contests for places in the Academy. The opponents of M. Hanotaux regret, for instance, that he is a politician. "We have," they say, "already too many former ministers, and politicians embarrass us sometimes." That was not the opinion of Eugène Spuller, who long aspired to a seat in the Academy, and died on the threshold of the promised (or hoped-for) land with a fine book on Lamennais in his hand. The friends of M. Hanotaux will vote for him, not because he is Minister of Foreign Affairs, but because he has put his name to a masterpiece, and no various views of the affairs of Crete will prevent me from thinking that, since the famous 'Tableau de la France' by Michelet, I have read nothing more striking than the panoramic view (if I may so call it) of the France of Louis XIII. presented by M. Hanotaux. The book has a colour, an accent, and a vigour which are admirable; it conjures up the whole scene. But M. Hanotaux is Minister of Foreign Affairs, and like them mixed up with political contingencies. The partisans of the intervention, even though Greece profits by it, discuss his rôle and his doings 'Les Orientales' in hand. A patriot before everything and a statesman, M. Hanotaux makes politics no more a matter of sentiment than Richelieu would do if alive to-day. I am sure that he entertains as much respect and admiration for the Greek genius as Mr. Gladstone can have. He obeys that need of peace, that horror of a war of which no one can foresee the extent, that love of a somewhat selfish quiescence, which is the general feeling of Europe and modern society.

I do not think any one can help feeling moved by the ancestral valour of the little Greek people, which their courage has kept great, and fail to profess a feeling of admiration for the attitude of King George. It is certain that at other times volunteers would have flocked into vessels in our ports sailing to Crete. But the age of chivalry is dead. We are all more or less like Don Quixote, who returned from his heroic rides well belaboured with blows. "Europe," said the caricaturist Gavarni, even in his time, "Europe is an old lady and so tired!" Gavarni was the regular designer of the bals de l'opéra of the time of Louis Philippe, and supplied the irony of the Carnival of his time. The Carnival was not then so demonstrative as now. It confined itself to the bals masqués, and the traditional promenade of the Bœuf Gras did not involve the display of decoration, the figures, and the cars which the Paris of our days has seen pass in procession. Note this singular antithesis: the more literature affects an obstinate pessimism, the more the crowd seems pleased with gaieties on a large scale. The cultured are pleased with the prospect of the Hindoo Nirvana; the good folks who form the multitude revive, in order to appreciate the passing masquerade, that rough old French humour, that good humour which is a fashionable subject for ridicule in the tents of the Ibsenites and Wagnerians.

And the gaiety of France being satirical and bantering in its essence—as appears clearly from the vogue of the reviews of the end of the year, in which impromptu Aristophaneses apply the lash to events and hiss men—the organizers of the cavalcades which are the joy of the boulevards desired to mix with operatic mythologies some realism of present interest, to make a living chronicle, to act journalism. The responsible authorities did not allow it. Imagine a car representing some Turk brandishing his scimitar over an Armenian, or a palikar displaying the colours of Greece! No politics! So the Carnival was confined to the regions of the conventional fairyland in which the figurants of the theatre show themselves to the public in the guise of animated flowers. So no ambassador, no state, will have anything to complain of.

The irony of events, which equals human irony, is responsible for the troubles and disquieting days in which the French School at Athens is preparing to celebrate its jubilee. These fêtes are destined to take place at the end of April, and it is proposed to supplement the meetings and archæological conferences in Greece, over which M. Homolle, the eminent director of the School, will preside, by a representation of the 'Œdipus Rex' of Sophocles, played at the theatre of Dionysus by the actors of the Comédie Française. M. Mounet Sully was delighted with the prospect of such an experience, and I confess that for a tragedian to play Sophocles at the very theatre of Bacchus for which Sophocles wrote his work—or rather one which has taken its place on the old site—is a sensation at once unusual and, in fact, unique.

But we are far, it seems, from Sophocles and his 'Œdipus,' and the Athenians without doubt expect France to send out to them other than theatrical companies. I do not know what will become of the project, or if they will mobilize our tragedians. Vessels were already preparing to leave for the Tyrrhenian Sea, and the paper Le Tour du Monde was collecting subscriptions for the Easter fêtes. "A Trinity Easter!" replies a French proverb corresponding to the evasive Greek calends. M. Homolle will none the less have planned an artistic programme at once generous and brilliant. We are not makers of the winds, nor of the seas, nor of international storms, and it is enough for us in such a case to do ourselves this justice, that we have done—or dreamt—all for the best.

The irony of facts again! The Academy, of which I spoke just now, has in this very year proposed for competition a piece of verse on a subject which, though fixed a year ago, appears specially intended for the moment. Salamis! I do not know how many poets have responded to the call. All the pieces have been sent in to the commission, and all naturally celebrate the glory of Greece, Athens, γλαυκῶπις Ἀθήνη. They make Themistocles speak more or less lengthily, and tell sufficiently plainly his doings to Xerxes. Is there not here a meeting premeditated by destiny? Is it not concerned to show that letters remain faithful to old traditions, in spite of the necessities imposed by politics?

Salamis! The poet, whoever he may be, who is to be crowned, will be much applauded at the public séance when some Academician who knows how to read well makes known to the public the result of the competition and the verse of the laureate. When the Academy chose this subject (in place of "Victor Hugo," which had been suggested) some members objected: "Xerxes, Themistocles, the Greek nation taking refuge in their ships—all this is a very old subject, like the favourite compositions of the classic poets of the empire." But now Salamis is again in fashion, and it looks as if the Academy had burnt incense on the altars of opportunism. One need not, in this present world, be astonished at anything; long ago Talleyrand said more than once, "Nothing is impossible." Victor Hugo will doubtless be dealt with another time. Homage to the poet whose centenary will be celebrated in 1902 will be a fine theme for young poets. Next year will witness the centenary of Michelet, when his widow, who only lives to keep her illustrious husband's memory green, will publish a part of the correspondence of the master. Michelet wrote without restraint in his letters. They are unusually short and striking. In them we shall possess an intimate memorial to rank beside the national one of his great history.

From Victor Hugo we might have (so M. Paul Meurice has told us in a recent notice of Sardou's 'Spiritisme') a whole volume of great interest, a series of "conversations avec les esprits." At Guernsey, in fact, the poet was enamoured of spiritualism, turned tables, interrogated them, noted their answers, and talked with various spirits—inferior to his own, I suppose. But he believed in these practices. One of his friends at this time, an exile like him, M. Pégat-Ogier, now dead, has entrusted to me a manuscript dealing with Victor Hugo in exile, which if published, as it should be, would prove exceedingly interesting. One evening a spirit was interrogated in the salon at Guernsey.

"Who are you?" asked Victor Hugo.

The spirit replied: "I am the Drama."

M. Auguste Vacquerie, Victor Hugo's faithful disciple, has noted somewhere, I believe, the answer. It is a little strange, and original enough to be disconcerting—"I am the Drama"! Vacquerie believed, no doubt, in the actual presence of the Drama in the piece of furniture that was interrogated. What could the face of the Drama possibly be like? In what unknown planet did the Drama dwell in the immense world of the invisible? Neither Victor Hugo nor Auguste Vacquerie has told us. But can one be astonished to see dramatists conversing with the Drama when one meets with credulous spiritualists who converse with Ivan hoe?

"Ivanhoe?"

"Certainly. Ivanhoe."

Walter Scott himself would have been amazed at it. Perhaps Victor Hugo would have found it natural to talk with Ruy Blas. What is certain is that his 'Conversations with the Spirits' fill large note-books of importance. Will they be printed and form part of his complete works? Will they find a place in those posthumous works which have still many surprises for us? I suspect that the heirs of the poet will consider them as works essentially personal. They will see in them, perhaps, the distractions of a great writer during the hard nights of winter in time of exile, and preserve unpublished these recreations of the master. Is this to be regretted? "All that I write can be published," said Victor Hugo one day to me. In Victor Hugo as spiritualist we shall see at least an unexpected side of the man.

Once (no doubt in jest) a volume was announced of 'Conversations of Charles Baudelaire with the Angels.' Paul Verlaine laughed at it in his day, like all of us. But once again Talleyrand is right—"Nothing is impossible," and the hour of occult revelations is at hand. Those who believe in them give themselves up to them heart and soul; those who do not amuse themselves thereby, and all the world is pleased. This is a slight change from politics—in which no one is satisfied. JULES CLARETIE.

Literary Gossip.

ANTHONY HOPE is writing a new story which is said to have a less fantastic plot than his recent books. It will probably be called 'Born in the Purple.'

THE Booksellers' Dinner will be held at the King's Hall, Holborn Restaurant, on Saturday, May 8th, when Mr. W. E. H. Lecky, M.P., has promised to occupy the chair.

THE Delegates of the Clarendon Press are about to issue the translation of the newly found Hebrew text of Ecclesiasticus, parallel with the Authorized Version, with preface, in a cheap and popular form for the benefit of the general reader.

THE Rev. Francis G. Waugh is printing a much enlarged edition of his volume 'The Athenæum Club and its Associations,' of which a small number of copies were privately printed a few years back. The book has been for the most part rewritten, and will now contain illustrations. The edition will be limited to seventy-five copies for private distribution only.

MR. JOHN S. FARMER, who has been long working, not only on his 'Slang Dictionary,' but on our old ballad literature, will begin presently the issue of an anthology of national ballad and song. The slang songs have been given in a volume already issued ('Musa Pedestris'). The loose and humorous are nearly ready, and will form ten volumes under the title of 'Merry Songs and Ballads,' and will be followed at once by hunting songs and sporting ballads, the editor pledging himself to give in every case a faithful and unexpurgated reprint of the original text. Messrs. Gibbings & Co. will issue for the author.

DR. J. B. CHABOT has prepared for publication the Syriac text of the 'Commentary' of Theodore of Mopsuestia, and a translation of the same with notes and variant readings. He has based his text upon the Paris MS. No. 308, and has made use of the Berlin MS. described by Dr. Baethgen in 1889, and the fragments preserved in the British Museum, which were published some twenty-five years ago by Dr. Sachau. The first volume of Dr. Chabot's work will be issued immediately by Leroux. The same Parisian publisher announces for immediate publication the fifth part of the famous Syriac and Arabic lexicon of Ishô' bar-Bahlûl, who flourished in the last half of the tenth century of our era, edited for the French Government by Dr. Rubens Duval. This part will finish the lexicon proper, but a further part is to appear which will contain the editor's introduction and index.

MESSRS. SMITH, ELDER & Co. will publish immediately the second volume (completing the work) of Prof. Charles Foster Kent's 'History of the Hebrew People.' The book is devoted to a consideration of "the Divided Kingdom" under four heads: 1. The Pre-Assyrian Period of Hebrew History; 2. The Assyrian Period of Israel's History; 3. The Assyrian Period of Judah's History; 4. The Babylonian Period of Judah's History. It is illustrated by maps and a chart.

WE are glad to hear that Mr. E. G. Hodge, the senior partner of Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge, is gradually recovering from the illness which has confined him to his house for several weeks. He is going to the seaside for a short stay, and his many friends will be glad to see him back in his old place before the rush of the spring season sets in.

THE Convocation of the Province of York is to be added to the public bodies which have declared by resolution the urgent need of delimitation between elementary and secondary schools.

MR. NIMMO will publish early in April a new work by Dr. Gasquet, entitled 'The Old English Bible, and other Essays.'

MESSRS. OLIVER & BOYD have in the press a new edition of Dr. Hutchison Stirling's 'Secret of Hegel,' revised by the author. This work has been long out of print, and copies are eagerly sought for.

IN anticipation of the annual meeting on Thursday next, the report of the Booksellers' Provident Institution has just been issued. During the sixty years since its establishment 64,644*l.* has been distributed. In the past year, it is mentioned, two widows have died who had received 601*l.* and 747*l.* respectively. For this large benefit their husbands had only paid 22*l.* and 24*l.* each. Yet, in spite of the great advantages offered, the trade, as a rule, refuse to become members. The entire expenses only amounted to 159*l.*

MESSRS. SKEFFINGTON & SON have this week been appointed Publishers to the Queen.

THE Royal Victoria Pension Fund, in connexion with the Newsvendors' Institution, is making good progress, and Lord Crewe is issuing a special appeal to the press and the news trade. The dinner on the 28th of April promises to be a representative gathering. Sir John Robinson, Mr. Frank Lloyd, Messrs. Harmsworth, Sir Wemyss Reid, Sir Richmond Cotton, Mr. Alderman and Mrs. Treloar, Mr. and Mrs. Horace B. Marshall, Mr. Upcott Gill, and Mr. and Mrs. Hance, among others, have already promised to be present.

THE English Dialect Society has lately issued its eightieth and last number, for the year 1896. It was founded in June, 1873, and for the first four years, 1873–6, the annual subscription was fixed at half-a-guinea. Owing to the success of the Society and the number of contributions offered for printing, the subscription was raised to one pound for the remaining twenty years; so that the whole cost to each subscriber has been 22*l.* 2*s.* in the course of twenty-four years. The publications have varied greatly in size and cost, and some at least are of permanent value, as it would scarcely be possible to collect glossaries of equal value and interest in the future. It can hardly be doubted that, with the close of the present century, several of the words which have thus been successfully recorded will be dead or only imperfectly remembered. Owing to the frequent applications of members of the Society as to the best way of binding the publications, schemes for their arrangement into volumes have been issued from time to time, and some special title-pages have been printed. An endeavour will shortly be made to complete the scheme, so that the whole may be distributed into thirty-two volumes.

In the year 1896, being the last year of the existence of the English Dialect Society, 'The English Dialect Dictionary' was successfully started; so that, for this year only, subscribers to the publications of the Society and to the Dictionary have been called upon for a guinea in addition to the usual pound. In future the Dictionary will alone be proceeded with, and it is highly desirable that this important national work—the outcome not only of the Society's publications, but of all other publications of a similar character, including an immense collection of manuscript material—should receive strong support, if the high standard attained in the two parts published in 1896 is to be maintained in the future. The collection of manuscript material for the Dictionary began as far back as in 1888, and an additional sum of two hundred and fifty pounds was expended in collecting this material and reducing it to order, the expense being met by the establishment of a separate fund for the purpose. This enables the editor to supply many valuable and appropriate quotations in illustration of the words employed. The Dictionary contains all the dialect words that have been recorded since the close of the seventeenth century, in every known dialect. A large number belong, as might be anticipated, to the Lowlands of Scotland and the north of England; but there are also a great many from the south of England, from Lincolnshire, and from East Anglia. The two parts issued in 1896 extend from A to Blare; and it is remarkable that the letter B occupies a far larger space in dialect than it does in literary English. It is anticipated that the whole will be completed in about eight years from the commencement, viz. in 1903.

On the 6th of April Messrs. Puttick & Simpson hold their second sale of book-plates (ex-libris) and armorial china. The collection, which comprises nearly 350 lots of property, contains a variety of plates in the Early English, Jacobean, Chippendale, and Bartolozzi styles, many of them the work of celebrated designers. It is relatively of greater importance than that held by the same firm in January last. The latter sale, however, stands in a unique position as being the first in this country exclusively devoted to book-plates, or, indeed, in any other so far as is known. Its immediate effect has been to call general attention to the subject and to enhance prices.

A correspondent writes that a papyrus of the sixth dynasty has been discovered in Egypt; also the text of a Logia, perhaps connected with that of Papias.

The critical edition of the text of 'Don Quixote,' begun by Mr. Ormsby and continued by Mr. Fitzmaurice-Kelly, is to be soon out. Mr. Nutt is the publisher. If it only gives, as it promises, a thorough collation of the early editions, it will be a boon to students and another good service rendered by our countrymen to Cervantes; but we confess we are afraid the editors are too scornful of the Madrid edition (1608) of Part I. It is right, we think, to neglect the Lisbon editions of 1605, but we should have been inclined to pay some attention to the Brussels editions of Part I. subsequent to 1607 and to Sorita's Barcelona edition. We fail to see the use of collating late Madrid reprints.

Mr. Farnell writes:—

"In the Athenæum of February 13th, p. 207, your reviewer quotes the following sentence from Mrs. J. H. Philpot's work on 'The Sacred Tree': 'According to Mr. Farnell, the latest writer on the subject, the chief gods of the Greeks were, in their origin, deities of vegetation.' I assume that the quotation is accurate, as I have not yet had the opportunity of reading Mrs. Philpot's work. Your reviewer proceeds with the obvious rejoinder: 'Alas! even the latest writer is not necessarily right.' He might, perhaps, have added that there is no such general view expressed in my treatise, and that in regard to certain leading deities I have expressly combated this theory. It is one thing to say that ancient Greek ritual, like the ritual in most parts of ancient Europe, was greatly concerned with the fruits of the earth, and that an agricultural or pastoral community was sure to invest its deity with agricultural or pastoral functions; but quite another thing to maintain that the deity sprang directly from the tree or the cornstalk. I believe on the evidence of the facts that 'vegetation-ritual' was more prevalent than thunder-ritual or sun-worship or dawn-worship in ancient Greece. And the theories of tree-worship and totemism may unlock many of the mysteries of primitive cult. But, as your reviewer says, no single clue is sufficient; and it is the exaggerated adherence to single principles of explanation that gives the reactionary critic his opportunity."

A committee of those concerned in secondary education in Liverpool and the district has been formed with the purpose of watching over the interests of secondary schools in view of forthcoming educational legislation. Principal Rendall is president, Mr. W. S. Connacher, of the Birkenhead Institute, is treasurer, and the Rev. Dr. H. de B. Gibbins has become secretary.

The Canadian Bookseller, the organ of the little knot of Canadians who wish to enrich themselves at the expense of the British author and therefore call themselves "the people of Canada," complains that Canadian booksellers must obtain copies of Anthony Hope's 'Phroso' from the United States. We fail to see the grievance. The author derives a profit from the sale, and the Canadian public obtain the book at a lower price than they could get it from London. The only persons injured are those who would like to reprint the novelist's work without paying him adequately.

The erudite Prof. Michael Bernays, born in 1834, died on the 25th ult. at Karlsruhe. He was brother of the celebrated classical scholar Jakob Bernays, and occupied the Chair of Literary History at Munich from 1873 to 1890. Dr. Bernays was the author of several valuable works on Goethe and Shakspeare, and in 1895 he issued the first volume of his 'Schriften zur Kritik und Litteraturgeschichte,' which shows his intimate acquaintance with English and French literature. The second volume was to have appeared last autumn, and it is to be hoped that he was able to complete it.

On the 25th of this month Italy celebrates the first centenary of the birth of her greatest philosopher of modern days, Antonio Rosmini. In addition to the usual unveiling of statues and commemorative meetings and speeches, a new and complete edition of the whole of his voluminous writings will be issued. A special volume, containing an abstract of his general teaching, together with an estimate of his character as statesman, social reformer, and philosopher, from the pens of about twenty of the most distinguished living Italian writers, is already in the press, and will appear shortly. Though Rosmini has a large and enthusiastic body of admirers and disciples in Italy, Germany, and France, he is known to English readers only by his 'Origin of Ideas,' 'Psychology,' and 'The Ruling Principle of Education.' The influence of his writings and of his lofty character upon the "Risorgimento" entitles him to an honourable place in contemporary Italian history. His philosophical opinions and his liberal views on ecclesiastical matters procured for him the opposition of the extreme Ultramontanes, and the Civiltà Cattolica still continues to attack his writings, and is at present exerting itself to bring discredit upon the prime movers of the centenary celebrations.

At the Readers' Dinner this evening, under the presidency of Lord Glenesk, the guests will include three chairmen of previous gatherings of the Correctors of the Press—Mr. F. Macmillan, Mr. Joseph Knight, and Mr. L. Upcott Gill. Mr. Sidney Lee will also be present. Among those who have sent donations are the Earl of Desart, Sir Edward Lawson, and Sir Douglas Straight, Mr. Ashby-Sterry, Mr. Knight Clowes, Mr. H. A. Jones, Mr. Algernon Locker, Mr. C. J. Longman, Mr. H. W. Lucy, Mr. James Payn, Mr. Compton Rickett, M.P., Mr. Leslie Stephen, Mr. Stanley Weyman, Dr. Aldis Wright, and the proprietors of the Daily Chronicle.

The Parliamentary Papers of the most general interest this week are Education—Code of Regulations for Day Schools (6*d.*), Revised Instructions to Her Majesty's Inspectors (5*d.*), and Return of Standards of Exemption in various Board Schools (1*d.*); University of Edinburgh, Report as to Statistics (2*d.*); and a Statement showing the Production and Consumption of Coal, and the Number of Persons employed in Coal Production, in the Principal Countries of the World, 1883–1895 (6*d.*).

SCIENCE

ZOOLOGICAL LITERATURE.

The Cambridge Natural History.—Worms, Rotifers, and Polyzoa. (Macmillan & Co.)—In absolute contrast to Prof. Lang's 'Text-Book' stands this second volume of the 'Cambridge Natural History': the former is an academic study in the severest anatomy, the latter essentially a "natural history," a guide to outdoor work, in which external morphology, systematic classification, life-history, and bionomics are the main features. Until lately, with the development of zoology as an examination subject, the old type of "naturalist" bade fair to become extinct in England, and outdoor work of every kind (other than entomology) tended to pass into the hands of amateurs, who lacked the general knowledge necessary to make their observations effective. There are now, fortunately, symptoms of a revival of interest in invertebrate natural history, the credit for which is due in great measure to the Marine Biological Association in opening the Plymouth Laboratory. In the course of last summer, for instance, to our knowledge three parties of university students spent more than a month in the study of marine zoology at different points on the coastline, in addition to the workers at the Plymouth and Port Erin stations. If the biological stations lately suggested for Windermere and the Norfolk Broads were started, a similar revival of interest in freshwater life would doubtless follow. In such outdoor work the volume before us will prove most useful, and on internal evidence five out of the seven contributors appear to have worked at the Plymouth Laboratory. The sections of the volume have been distributed as follows: Flatworms and Mesozoa (Mr. Gamble), Nemertina (Miss Sheldon), Nematoda, Chætognatha, Gephyrea, and Phoronis (Mr. Shipley), Polychæta (Dr. Benham), Oligochæta and Hirudinea (Mr. Beddard), Polyzoa (Mr. Harmer), Rotifera (Prof. Hartog). It is hardly necessary to point out that most of the contributors have been selected as authorities on their special groups. The work has been so well done on the whole that it would be ungracious to call attention to minor slips, the more so since it really marks a new departure among invertebrate handbooks. We hope that it may help to stimulate the younger school of zoologists to study organic life under natural conditions, not content with those deformed caricatures of animals which are presented to them for laboratory dissection. Great praise is due to the publishers for the handsome volume and capital illustrations.

Life in Ponds and Streams. By W. Furneaux, F.R.G.S. (Longmans & Co.)—A zoologist is often asked to recommend a guide-book to a boy with a taste for outdoor natural history, and feels great difficulty in selecting a work not too dry, but with some pretensions to accuracy. Mr. Furneaux writes with the authority of the habitual collector, and his book, if not always scientifically accurate, is unusually so for a work of this kind. It is not the ideal book, but it may be recommended. The general introduction is the weakest part, and should be revised by a professed zoologist. In a future edition reference should be made to the encysted condition in which Protozoa are so often found in pools; the description of the reproduction of Vorticella (p. 105), the account of pearls (p. 156) and of the self-amputation of Astacus (p. 190), should be carefully corrected. It seems to us a pity that the author has almost entirely avoided any account of sexual reproduction. On the practical side attention should be called to the often fatal effects of water-companies' water on microscopic animals, to the great value of the tow-net as an engine of capture, and to the immense superiority of formalin over alcohol for the preservation of specimens for the young collector's museum. Many of the illustrations (e.g., that of Euglena, fig. 91) might be considerably improved.

Records of Big Game. By Rowland Ward. (Ward & Co.)—In so far as "science is measurement" Mr. Rowland Ward is to be congratulated on the appearance of a second edition (though the title-page does not say so) of his 'Records.' The chief value of the book lies in the measurements that it gives of the horns of big game, and we recommend a copy of it to every smoking room in which hunters with their "tall stories" congregate. Its other claims to scientific value are not great.

SOCIETIES.

ROYAL.—Feb. 25.—The President in the chair.—The following papers were read: 'Note on the Dielectric Constant of Ice and Alcohol at very Low Temperatures,' by Profs. Dewar and Fleming,—'On the Relation between Magnetic Stress and Magnetic Deformation in Nickel,' by Dr. E. T. Jones,—'On the Relations between the Cerebellar and other Centres (namely, Cerebral and Spinal), with Especial Reference to the Action of Antagonistic Muscles, Preliminary Account,' by Dr. M. Löwenthal and Prof. Horsley,—'On the Action of Light on Diastase, and its Biological Significance,' by Prof. J. R. Green,—and 'Fragmentation in Linens gesserensis,' by Mr. A. Brown.

LINNEAN.—Feb. 18.—Dr. D. H. Scott, V.P., in the chair.—Sir W. Roberts, Mr. J. M. Lowson, and Mr. W. H. Betts were admitted, and the Hon. C. Ellis and Mr. G. E. Lodge were elected Fellows.—Mr. J. E. Harting exhibited under a glass case the nest of a wren built of moss in the dried body of a rook which had been hung up as a scarecrow in Gloucestershire. Similar instances of the kind had been recorded ('Essex Nat.' ii. 205 and iii. 25). The nest of a swallow in the dead body of an owl was mentioned by Gilbert White, and other cases had been collected by a former president of the Society (Bishop Stanley). For instances of nests of the hoopoe placed in the desiccated bodies of unburied men, he referred to the experience of Pallas in Russia and of Swinhoe in China.—On behalf of Mr. D. T. G. Vaughan, Dr. D. H. Scott gave the substance of a paper 'On the Morphology and Anatomy of Certain Nymphæaceæ.' Dealing first with the embryonic leaves, he showed, by the aid of lantern-slides, a series of transitional forms between the earliest leaf, which is acicular, and those of the mature plant. As regards the vascular system, the whole central region of the rhizome in Victoria regia was shown to be permeated by a number of separate bundles irregularly anastomosing; the more peripheral bundles appearing to be arranged in a definite manner, forming a limiting zone, the outermost phloem-strands of which run not in a vertical, but in an obliquely horizontal direction. In Nymphæa and other genera the vascular system is not limited by such a peripheral zone. Nothing corresponding to a plerome could be distinguished in the apex of the mature rhizome of Nymphæa or of the floating shoots of Cabomba aquatica. In those species of Victoria, Nymphæa, and Nuphar which were examined, and also in Cabomba aquatica and Nelumbium speciosum, the adventitious roots do not arise indiscriminately upon the vascular bundles scattered in the ground-tissue of the rhizome, but are borne upon some which appear to be specially set apart for that purpose, and form a structure essentially similar to a stele, which reaches the greatest perfection in Victoria regia. In species of Nymphæa which produce many roots at each leaf-base the root-bearing stele is perfectly constituted, but in others, and in Nuphar, the vascular bundles are few in number, and are not arranged with sufficient regularity to constitute a stele, although they bear exclusively the adventitious roots. In Nelumbium speciosum the seedling was shown to be remarkable on account of the complete abortion of the primary root, and also on account of the complexity exhibited by the vascular system in the earliest or epicotyledonary internode. The rhizomes of Nymphæa flava and N. tuberosa bear a number of small tubers on stalks, or stolons, of varying length, wherein the vascular system exhibits a polystelic arrangement, the bundles being grouped around three to five different centres to form so many steles, consisting of three or four bundles each. When the tubers which are borne at the ends of these primary stolons germinate, they give rise to a number of narrow secondary stolons, which in turn produce new rhizomes at their extremities.—On these and other points of interest, as demonstrated by Dr. Scott, a discussion took place, in which Prof. J. B. Farmer, Messrs. C. B. Clarke, A. W. Bennett, and G. Murray took part, Dr. Scott replying to the criticisms.—Mr. J. H. Burrage read a paper 'On the Adhesive Discs of Lecilla spicata, Moq.' He showed, with the aid of lantern-slides, that the adhesive organs were developed endogenously immediately above the axils of the leaves, and that each was made up of a mass of parenchyma with a central plate of tracheids in connexion with the bundles of the stem at the base of the disc. It appeared also that hairs which force their way into the crevices of the support are formed from a special layer of columnar cells beneath the epidermis, resulting in the exfoliation of the latter. After a time the walls of the cells in the external layers of the discs become suberized, a periderm being eventually formed from a definite cambium just outside the vascular plate. It was further shown that while absolute contact was necessary for complete development, discs of various sizes might occur some distance from the support, possibly stimulated to growth by a moist environment. It was found that a few discs gave rise to small roots, and as the walls of the cortical cells were invariably suberized, they could not act in a normal manner. While there was no evidence to show that they were anything but climbing organs, a comparison with parasitic suckers, such as those of Cuscuta, suggested the possibility that the discs were not far removed from acting parasitically.—The paper was criticized by Prof. Farmer and Dr. D. H. Scott.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—March 2.—Mr. J. Wolfe Barry, President, in the chair.—It was announced that ten Associate Members had been transferred to the class of Members, and that twenty-one candidates had been admitted as Students.—The monthly ballot resulted in the election of one Member, forty-four Associate Members, and three Associates.

ROYAL INSTITUTION.—March 1.—Sir J. Crichton-Browne, Treas. and V.P., in the chair.—The following were elected Members: Mrs. T. Collier, Mrs. H. Edmunds, Mrs. G. King, Mrs. A. D. Waller, Mrs. J. L. Walton, Major C. T. Blewitt, Col. G. Sartorius, Dr. F. Hewitt, Dr. W. R. Smith, Rev. J. D. Parker, Messrs. F. J. Beaumont, J. F. L. Brunner, J. Cadett, J. C. Carter, J. Cohen, J. G. Craggs, T. Donaldson, H. Edmunds, G. S. Elliot, W. A. Frost, W. T. Garnett, H. A. Harben, F. W. Hildyard, H. Leitner, E. M. Preston, J. M. Richards, F. H. Schwann, H. A. Stern, C. J. Stewart, and G. L. Stewart.

SOCIETY OF ARTS.—March 1.—Mr. Cross delivered the concluding lecture of his course of Cantor Lectures 'On the Industrial Uses of Cellulose.'

March 2.—Mr. H. Stannus in the chair.—A paper 'On Gesso' was read by Mr. M. Webb before the Applied Art Section, and was illustrated by lantern-slides and by a practical demonstration of the process.

March 3.—Prof. Thiselton Dyer in the chair.—A paper 'On English Orchards' was read by Mr. G. Gordon, and was followed by a discussion.

SOCIETY OF BIBLICAL ARCHÆOLOGY.—March 2.—Sir P. Le Page Renouf, President, in the chair.—A paper by the late Dr. Grant-Bey, 'The Climate of Egypt in Geological, Prehistoric, and Ancient Historic Times,' was read.

SOCIETY OF ENGINEERS.—March 1.—Mr. G. M. Lawford, President, in the chair.—A paper was read by Mr. J. P. Barber, entitled 'Notes on the Proposed By-Laws of the London County Council with respect to House Drainage.'

ARISTOTELIAN.—Feb. 22.—Mr. B. Bosanquet, President, in the chair.—Mr. J. B. Askew was elected a Member.—A resolution expressing the regret of the Society at the loss by death of Prof. W. Wallace was unanimously adopted.—Mr. L. T. Hobhouse read a paper 'On some Problems of Conception.' General conception is based upon a complex experience of resemblance in the world of perception, involving analysis and comparison rather than mere abstraction. Theories of conception are generally based on a part rather than the whole of this experience, and lay undue stress on instances of some special type. In fact, there are two well-marked species of generality—the first, definite, self-identical, and unaffected by its context; the second, essentially modifiable by its specific differentiæ. The distinction tends to coincide with that between infima species and higher genera. And the more definite and unchanging conceptions form the basis of "disjunctive" classification and the "geometrical method," while the other class, which we may call "organic," is the foundation of "natural" classification, the "concrete universal" of art. Finally, the element of identity in the "organic" concept provides a meaning for the conception of the "generic essence."—The paper was followed by a discussion.

PHYSICAL.—Feb. 26.—Mr. S. Bidwell, President, in the chair.—Mr. J. H. Vincent read a paper 'On the Photography of Ripples,'—and Mr. Elder read a paper by Mr. B. Burnie 'On the Thermo-Electric Properties of some Liquid Metals.'

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

MON. Geographical, 8.—'Recent Discoveries south of Hudson Bay,' Dr. R. Bell.
— Aristotelian, 8.—'Types of Will,' Mr. A. F. Shand.
— Surveyors' Institution, 8.—'Agricultural Co-operation,' Right Hon H C Plunkett.
TUES. Royal Institution, 3.—'Animal Electricity,' Prof. A. D. Waller.
— United Service Institution, 3½.—'The National Study of Military History,' Dr T. M. Maguire.
— Asiatic, 4.—'The Ruins of Dimāpūr in Assam,' Surgeon-Capt. F. H. B Brown.
— Civil Engineers, 8.—Further Discussion on 'The Main Drainage of London' and 'The Purification of the Thames.'
WED. Huguenot, 8.—'The "Eikon Basilike" and some French Translations of It,' Rev. J. B. Medley.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Prevention of Fires due to the Leakage of Electricity,' Mr. F. Bathurst.
— Geological, 8.—'Volcanic Action in Guatemala in Relation to Earthquakes in the British Isles,' Mr. A. Gosling; 'The Red Rocks near Bonmahon on the Coast of co. Waterford,' Mr. F. R. C. Reed; 'Depth of the Source of Lava,' Mr. J. L. Lobley.
THURS. Royal Institution, 3.—'Greek History and Extant Monuments,' Prof. P. Gardner.
— United Service Institution, 3.—'The Proposed Naval College at Dartmouth,' Commander W. H. Lewin.
— Royal, 4½.
— Society of Arts, 4½.—'Prevention of Famine in India,' Sir C. A. Elliott.
— Electrical Engineers, 8.—'On some Repairs to the South American Company's Cable off Cape Verde, 1893 and 1895,' Mr. H Benest.
— Mathematical, 8.—'On a Law of Combination of Operators, bearing on the Theory of Continuous Transformation Groups,' Mr J E Campbell; 'A System of Circles associated with a Triangle,' Prof Steggall.
— Antiquaries, 8½.—'Neolithic Implements found in Worcestershire,' Prof. Windle; 'Further Discoveries at the Glastonbury Lake Village,' Mr A. Bulleid.
FRI. Physical, 5.—'A Mechanical Cause of Homogeneity of Structure and Symmetry Geometrically Investigated, with Special Application to Crystals and to Chemical Combination,' Mr. W. Barlow.
— Civil Engineers, 8.—'The Inverness Section of the Inverness and Aviemore Railway,' Mr. H. F. Brand. (Students' Meeting.)
— Astronomical, 8.
— Royal Institution, 9.—'The Source of Light in Flames,' Prof. A. Smithells.
SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'Electricity and Electrical Vibrations,' Lord Rayleigh.

Science Gossip.

THE Council of the Senate of the University of Cambridge recently agreed to propose a grace to the Senate to confer the honorary degree of Doctor of Science on Mr. Herbert Spencer. Mr. Spencer, however, on being asked whether he would accept such a degree, has replied, in an appreciative letter, that it has been his uniform practice, from which he cannot depart, to decline honours of the description proposed.

M. BOSSERT has published in the Bulletin Astronomique an ephemeris of Swift's periodical comet at the forthcoming return; but the apparent place is so near that of the sun that the chances of seeing the comet are almost nil. The perihelion passage will be due on the 4th of June, when the comet will be very near the Pleiades. More hopeful are the prospects of seeing D'Arrest's periodical comet, which is also approaching perihelion, and of which M. Leveau has published an ephemeris in No. 3405 of the Astronomische Nachrichten. The comet next week will be very near α Aquilæ.

FINE ARTS

THE DISCOVERY OF BUDDHA'S BIRTHPLACE.

Vienna, February, 1897.

THE kindness of Dr. Führer enables me to give some account of his discoveries in the Nepalese Terai, north of the district of Gorakhpur, which were briefly noticed in an Indian telegram of the Times of December 28th, 1896. He has sent me two excellent impressions of the new Ashoka edict on the pillar of Paderia, together with a memorandum regarding his tour and the situation of the ruins in its neighbourhood.

The edict leaves no doubt that Dr. Führer has accomplished all the telegram claimed for him. He has found the Lumbini garden, the spot where the founder of Buddhism was born, according to the tradition of the canonical works of the South and of the North. The decisive passages of the Paderia Edict are as follows:—"King Piyadasi [or Ashoka], beloved of the gods, having been anointed twenty years, himself came and worshipped, saying, 'Here Buddha Shakyamuni was born'.....and he caused a stone pillar to be erected, which declares, 'Here the worshipful one was born.'" Immediately afterwards the edict mentions the village of Lummini (Lumminigâma), and adds, according to my interpretation of the rather difficult new words, that Ashoka appointed there two new officials.

However that may be, Lummini is certainly equivalent to Lumbini, and the pillar marks the site which was pointed out to Ashoka as the royal garden to which Mayadevi retired immediately before her confinement. The evidence of the edict could only be set aside if it were shown that the pillar has been carried from some other place to its present site. But there is collateral evidence to prove that it is in its original position. The Chinese pilgrim Hiuen Tsiang, who visited the sacred places of the Buddhists all over India and reached the Lumbini garden in A.D. 636, mentions the pillar erected by Ashoka. He says that it stood close to four Stupas, and Dr. Führer says that their ruins are still extant. Hiuen Tsiang further alleges that the pillar had been broken into two pieces through the contrivance of a wicked dragon, and Dr. Führer remarks that it has lost its top part, which appears to have been shattered by lightning. The Buddhists consider destructive storms to be due to the anger of the snake-deities or Nâgas, whom the Chinese call dragons. If Hiuen Tsiang does not mention the inscription, the reason is no doubt that it was not visible in his time. When Dr. Führer first saw the pillar on December 1st, only a piece, 9 feet high, was above the ground, and it was covered with pilgrims' records, one of which bears the date A.D. 800. This piece must, therefore, have been accessible, and the surface of the ground must have been at the present level, for nearly 1,100 years. When the excavation of the pillar was afterwards undertaken, the Ashoka inscription was found 10 feet below the surface and 6 feet above the base. It seems impossible to believe that 10 feet of débris could have accumulated in the sixty-four years between the date of Hiuen Tsiang's visit and the incision of the oldest pilgrim's record at the top. Finally, it may be mentioned that the site is still called Rumindei, and the first part of this name evidently represents Ashoka's Lummini and the Pali Lumbini.

The identification of the Lumbini garden fixed also the site of Kapilavastu, the capital of the Shakyas, and that of Napeikia or Nabhika, the supposed birthplace of Shakyamuni's mythical predecessor Krakuchanda. According to the Chinese Buddhist Fahien, Hiuen Tsiang's predecessor, Kapilavastu lay 50 li (about 8 miles) west of the garden. Following this indication, Dr. Führer discovered extensive ruins 8 miles north-west of Paderia, stretching in the middle of the forest from the villages of Amauli and Bikuli (north-west) to Ramghat on the Banganga (south-east), over nearly 7 miles. Again, Fahien gives the distance of Napeikia from Kapilavastu as one yojana. Dr. Führer found its ruins with the Stupa, which is still 80 feet high, 7 miles south-west. As the Stupa of Konagamana, another mythical Buddha, had already been found by Dr. Führer, together with its Ashoka edict, in 1895, at Nigliva, 13 miles from Paderia, all the sacred sites in the western part of the Nepalese Terai mentioned by the Chinese pilgrims have been satisfactorily identified. Some others, particularly Ramagrama and Kusinara, the place where Buddha died, will probably be found in the eastern portion of the Nepalese lowlands. For, if the direction of the route from Kapilavastu to these places has been correctly given by the Chinese, Kusinara cannot be identical with Kasia in the Gorakhpur district, where Sir A. Cunningham and Mr. Carlleyle believed they had found it.

Dr. Führer's discoveries are the most important which have been made for many years. They will be hailed with enthusiasm by the Buddhists of India, Ceylon, and the Far East. For the student of Indian history they yield already some valuable results and they are rich in promise.

It is now evident that the kingdom of the Shakyas lay, as their legend asserts, on the slopes of the Himalaya, and that they were, as they too admit, jungle and hill Rajputs exiled from the more civilized districts. Their settlement in the hill-forest must have separated them for a prolonged period from their brethren further south and west. Their isolation no doubt forced them to develope the entirely un-Aryan and un-Indian custom of endogamy as well as other habits not in accordance with those of their kindred. This also explains why intermarriages between them and the other noble families of Northern India did not take place. It was not, as their tradition says, their pride of blood which prevented such alliances, but the stigma attaching to exiles who had departed from the customs of their race, and were perhaps not even free from a strong admixture of un-Aryan blood.

For the history of Ashoka, the Paderia Edict and the Nigliva inscription, the mutilated lines of which may now be restored with perfect certainty, teach us that the king visited in his twenty-first year the sacred places of the Buddhists in Northern India. His journey extended probably also in the east to Kusinara, and further west to Shravasti, where Hiuen Tsiang saw his inscribed pillars. And his route from his capital at Patna to the Terai is probably marked by the row of columns found from Bakhra, near Vaishali or Besarh, as far as Rampurva, in the Champaran district. The journey may indicate that Ashoka was at the time already a convert to Buddhism, or it may have been, as I think more probable, one of the "religious tours" which, according to the eighth Rock Edict, he regularly undertook from his eleventh year "in order to obtain enlightenment."

The fact that he planted a number of pillars all over the Terai indicates that also this district belonged then to his extensive empire. If I am right in my interpretation of the concluding sentence of the Paderia Edict, according to which Ashoka appointed there two officials, this inference becomes indisputable.

The promise which Dr. Führer's discoveries hold out is that excavations of the newly found ruins will make us acquainted with monuments and documents not only of the third century B.C., but of a much earlier period, extending to the fifth and sixth centuries, which latter will be partly Buddhistic and partly pre-Buddhistic, like the ancient Shiva temple seen by Hiuen Tsiang ('Siyuki,' vol. ii. p. 23, Beal) outside the eastern gate of Kapilavastu, where the Shakyas used to present their children. Kapilavastu and its neighbourhood are particularly favourable for the discovery of really ancient monuments; for in Fahien's time, about A.D. 400, the country was already a wilderness with very few inhabitants and full of ancient mounds and ruins. Hiuen Tsiang's description is very similar. It is therefore to be expected that the old buildings have not been disfigured by late restorations. I am glad to learn from Dr. Führer's memorandum that the Nepalese Governor of the district, General Khadga Shamsher Jang Rana Bahadur, who had the pillar of Paderia excavated, but did not think any other operations feasible on account of the severe famine, has generously promised to lend next year a number of his sappers for more extensive excavations. I trust that the Indian Government will now consent to prolong the existence of the Archæological Department, which, if the rumours in the papers are true, was recently threatened. The services of the few officers still employed are sorely needed for conducting the researches in a really systematic and scientific manner. G. Buhler.

SALES.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 27th ult. the following, from the collection of the late Mr. W. Brockbank. Drawings: S. Solomon, The Grievous Drought, 31*l.* F. J. Shields, The Bread-Watcher, 27*l.* H. C. Whaite, The Rainbow, 65*l.*; Cynicht, the Matterhorn of Wales, 45*l.* D. G. Rossetti, Head of a Girl, 47*l.* Ford Madox Brown, The Nosegay, 35*l.* Sir E. Burne-Jones, The Triumph of Love (four drawings in one frame), 189*l.* W. Holman Hunt, The Great Pyramid, 63*l.* Sir J. E. Millais, The Disentombment of Queen Matilda, 54*l.* Sir E. J. Poynter, Endymion, 28*l.*; Falls of the Llugwy, Bettws-y-Coed, 27*l.*; The Gardens, Wharncliffe Hall, 54*l.*; Hardraw Force, 37*l.*; Joseph and his Brethren, 115*l.*; Poetry, 54*l.* J. Ruskin, Venice, 52*l.* Pictures: H. C. Whaite, The Afterglow, 105*l.* Ford Madox Brown, The Coat of Many Colours, 105*l.*; Cromwell on his Farm, 168*l.* Sir E. J. Poynter, A Suppliant to Venus, 189*l.*; Offerings to Isis, 168*l.*

The following were from different properties. Drawing: A. Mauve, A Meadow, with two cows and ducks, 102*l.* Pictures: M. Munkacsy, A Love Song, 294*l.* J. Israëls, Women Netmaking at Scheveningen, 420*l.* É. Detaille, The Fishermen, two soldiers on the bank of a river, 252*l.* A. Schreyer, Cannon Shot, Retreat before Kashbar, 378*l.*

The same auctioneers sold on the 1st inst. the following picture: Prof. C. Cherici, A Frightful State of Affairs, 155*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

The private view of the Painter-Etchers' Exhibition is appointed for to-day (Saturday). The public may see it on and after Monday next.

All Mr. Hook's friends will condole with him on the death of Mrs. Hook. After an illness of some duration she passed peacefully away at Silverbeck on the evening of Saturday last. A biographer of Mr. Hook, describing his success in winning in 1846 the Travelling Studentship in the Royal Academy (he had gained the Gold Medal for Painting in 1845), said:—

"Previous to the contest he had engaged himself to marry Rosalie, the third daughter of Mr. James Burton, a well-known London solicitor; a young lady of exceptional worth and many charms, herself a zealous artist of considerable skill, which, absorbed in domestic and affectionate duties, since her marriage she has been content to let remain in abeyance. It was determined that if Hook got the Travelling Studentship he should, with all convenient speed, get a wife also, and that the pair should go to Italy for their wedding trip."

They were married on August 13th, 1846. Thus it happened that just seven months ago their golden wedding came about. The lady was her husband's constant companion, and went wherever he went. They were never parted for many days at a time, although the painter's studies took him to Norway, Scotland, Holland, France, a second time to Italy, repeatedly to Wales, Sark, and Shetland, besides a score of places in England. Through all these years she was his companion in the truest sense, and, on her own account as well as his, much loved and honoured by all who knew her. It may be added that, in his early paintings of Venetian subjects, and in one or more of his etchings, she was several times introduced, both alone and in company with one or the other of her sons, both of whom are now well-known painters.

The merits and characteristic qualities of Du Maurier's wit and art being perfectly well known, it is not necessary for us to say more about the two hundred and eighteen of his original drawings now in the Fine-Art Society's rooms than that when we have begun to study them it is extremely difficult to leave them.

The project of an exhibition of A. W. Hunt's drawings at Liverpool, of which we made mention, is to be carried out when the exhibition of the Burlington Fine-Arts Club closes. Owners will confer a favour by communicating with the secretary of the Walker Art Gallery, where the exhibition is to be held.

An incident analogous to the presentation of an address to Mr. Watts on his eightieth birthday, which we mentioned last week—and obvious reasons prevented our mentioning it sooner—occurred when a number of artists subscribed for and presented to Maclise a gold portcrayon. The occasion was the completion of the picture now in the Royal Gallery at Westminster, representing 'The Interview between Wellington and Blücher after Waterloo.'

Mr. Sargent's three-quarters-length, life-size portrait of Coventry Patmore, No. 172 in the Academy Exhibition, 1895, which, as we have already stated, was offered by the poet's widow to the Trustees of the National Portrait Gallery, has been accepted by them, and will shortly be hung at St. Martin's Place.

Dr. Garnett reminds us that on the 20th ult., when describing Leighton's 'Jealousy of Simœtha the Sorceress,' No. 33 at the Academy, we spoke of the bird represented on the wheel behind the seated Simœtha as a dove, whereas we should have called it a wryneck. The temporary failure of memory is not the less to be regretted in this case because, although the bird is not distinctly represented in the picture, we had, when describing the work when it was on Leighton's easel, January 15th, 1887 (Athen. No. 3090, p. 104, col. 2), written of Simœtha: "She has turned from the apparatus of enchantment to which she has had recourse, and which lies on our right of the picture and includes the wheel, on which the wryneck is nailed."

Near Cologna Veneta, in North Italy, some remarkable objects of the so-called Euganean period have been discovered. The most noteworthy of them are a bronze fibula, adorned by three figures of monkeys on its bow, and a fine bronze belt with decorations in the Mycenæan style.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

St. James's Hall.—Henschel Concerts. Miss Ilona Eibenschütz's Brahms Pianoforte Recital.
Crystal Palace.—Saturday Concerts.
Queen's Hall.—Symphony Concerts. Promenade Concerts.
St. James's Hall.—Popular Concerts.
Queen's Hall.—Mr. Mark Hambourg's Pianoforte Recital.

The programme of Mr. Henschel's Symphony Concert on Thursday last week commenced with Dr. Hubert Parry's MS. Overture "to an Unwritten Tragedy," an impressive work, conducted by the composer. The next item was Brahms's fine and characteristic Concerto in A minor for violin and violoncello, Op. 102, first performed in London by Messrs. Joachim and Hausmann at Mr. Henschel's Symphony Concert on February 15th, 1888 (Athen. Nos. 3147 and 3148). The solo parts last week were well interpreted by Messrs. Joseph and Paul Ludwig. The principal theme of the andante in D is one of the most beautiful melodies that Brahms ever wrote. Mignon's song "Kennst du das Land?" set by Liszt, was, of course, exquisitely sung by Mrs. Henschel; and the concert closed with a meritorious performance, much better than that at a previous concert, of Tschaïkowsky's 'Symphonie Pathétique' in B minor, No. 6, of which the public evinces no symptoms of tiring.

That Brahms's pianoforte music is well appreciated in the metropolis was shown by the fact that Miss Ilona Eibenschutz, when she ventured upon giving a recital of his works on Friday afternoon last week, secured a large audience. Commencing with the early Sonata in F minor, Op. 5, Miss Eibenschütz passed to the fine Rhapsody in G minor, Op. 79, which was somewhat too rapidly played; the often-rendered Variations on a Theme by Handel, Op. 24; the Ballade in B major, Op. 10, admirably executed; and various minor items, all technically and artistically well rendered. The recital was a decided success.

The Crystal Palace Saturday Concerts were resumed last week, and the first programme was very properly devoted to Schubert's music, in commemoration of the centenary of the composer's birth. In a preliminary note Sir George Grove refers with justifiable pride to the crusade continued for forty years at the Crystal Palace in favour of Schubert, and its complete success. He rightly says that the expression used a few years ago, that Sydenham was the "natural home of Schubert in this country," is hardly inappropriate. For example, the great Symphony in C, No. 9, which was grossly misunderstood when it was first introduced here, is now by many considered the most enjoyable of all symphonies, thanks in great measure to the efforts of Mr. Manns and his orchestra. A magnificent performance of this inspired work was given, and the playing of the Palace orchestra in the selection from the 'Rosamunde' music, which was happily unearthed by Sir George Grove many years ago, was equally beyond reproach. We do not greatly care for Liszt's arrangement of the fine song 'Die Allmacht,' originally written for tenor solo and piano accompaniment, but adapted by the Weimar virtuoso for the solo voice, with orchestra and chorus of tenors and basses. Still, Mr. Edward Lloyd rendered his part very well indeed, and he also contributed two songs from the 'Winterreise' and the 'Schwanengesang.' An interesting item was the Sadducee's aria from the unfinished cantata 'Lazarus,' written in 1820. The fragment as it stands contains some beautiful music, and, as it is published, it might now receive attention from choral societies. The selection last Saturday was sung by Mr. Arthur Ferguson, whose intentions were better than his achievement. Some Lieder were contributed by Mlle. Margarethe Petersen.

Felix Draeseke is a German composer whose name is but little known in London, and it is, therefore, not surprising that there should have been a comparatively small attendance at the fourth of the Queen's Hall Symphony Concerts, when this musician's 'Tragic' Symphony in C, Op. 40, was the central item in the programme. Draeseke was born at Coburg in 1835, and has composed works in various styles, and before he had attained manhood's age he was a devout believer in Wagner and Liszt, and in the advanced school generally. He is now a professor of composition at the Dresden Conservatorium. As a composer Draeseke has not been extraordinarily prolific. He has written about fifty works, including three symphonies, two operas, a requiem, a cantata, a violin concerto, two string quartets, and two overtures. A competent critic says of Draeseke that "he has scarcely as yet made the mark that might have been expected from a man of his high ideals and thoroughly artistic methods of working," and it is difficult to pronounce a verdict on his 'Tragic' Symphony after but one hearing. We can say, however, without hesitation, that there is much of interest in the work, especially in the funereal slow movement and the scherzo. The symphony should be given another trial. The introduction to the second act of Humperdinck's new opera 'Königskinder,' produced at Munich on January 23rd last, is a charming and bright little piece, though the plot of the opera is tragic and even unhealthy in tone. Familiar pieces by Wagner formed the remainder of the scheme.

A Wagner programme was presented at the Promenade Concert in the evening, and, strange to say, it contained two novelties. The first was an orchestrated version of the 'Album Sonata' written in 1853 for Frau Mathilde Wesendonck, and we are bound to say that the piece is far more effective in its new shape, as rendered by Mr. Henry Wood's splendid orchestra, than it is when played on the pianoforte. The other was Isabella's song from the early opera 'Das Liebesverbot,' produced at Magdeburg in 1836, and performed only once. It is, of course, immature Wagner, but it contains unmistakable germs of the master's ripest methods, and the song was pleasingly sung by Miss Lucile Hill. The rest of the selection consisted of excerpts too familiar to need quotation.

Passing over last Saturday's Popular Concert, we come to that of Monday evening, when Herr Joachim made his reappearance for the season. Beethoven's Quartet in C, Op. 59, No. 3, headed the programme, and it was recognized at once that the Hungarian violinist had not in the least deteriorated as an executant. He has never led a Beethoven quartet more finely, the tone, phrasing, and expression being as grand as ever. A splendid performance was subsequently given of Brahms's First, and, as some regard it, finest Sonata for pianoforte and violin in G, Op. 78, by Herr Joachim and Miss Fanny Davies; and the concert ended with Haydn's Quartet in G, Op. 64, No. 4. Mr. Kennerley Rumford, a highly intelligent young baritone, was entirely successful in songs by Franz, Brahms, Somervell, and Henschel.

Mr. Mark Hambourg, who gave a pianoforte recital at the Queen's Hall on Tuesday afternoon, showed that his talents are still steadily developing, but at present he is most acceptable in music that demands mechanical dexterity rather than emotional expression. The principal items in his programme were Beethoven's Sonata in E flat, Op. 31, No. 3; Brahms's Variations on a Theme by Paganini; Chopin's Sonata in B flat minor, Op. 35; and Schumann's 'Faschingsschwank aus Wien,' Op. 26. There was much to commend in the interpretation of these works and in minor pieces, and Mr. Mark Hambourg has the promise of being a fine pianist in due course.

Musical Gossip.

It is too soon to say definitely, but as at present arranged the summer opera season at Covent Garden Theatre will commence on May 10th with 'Tannhäuser' in French, M. Vandyck in the rôle of the hero. On the previous Saturday there will be an operatic concert in aid of the Prince of Wales's Hospital Fund.

An admirable scheme has been drawn up for the Hereford Festival, which will be held on September 14th, 15th, 16th, and 17th. There will be an opening service in the Cathedral on the previous Sunday morning, with the full orchestra and chorus. The first concert on the Tuesday morning is marked "Special Thanksgiving Performances for the Queen's Reign," and will contain new works, not yet specified, by Drs. C. H. Lloyd and Hubert Parry, Beethoven's C minor Symphony, and Mendelssohn's 'Lobgesang.' In the evening there will be a secular concert in the Shire Hall, the programme including Grieg's Pianoforte Concerto in A minor and various orchestral pieces and songs. Wednesday morning's programme will include Bach's church cantata "A stronghold sure," a new work by Arthur Somervell, excerpts from Wagner's 'Parsifal,' and Spohr's 'Last Judgment.' In the evening 'Elijah' will be given; and on Thursday morning Beethoven's Mass in D, Tschaïkowsky's 'Symphonie Pathétique,' and Part I. of 'The Creation.' Gounod's 'Redemption' is announced for Thursday evening, and 'The Messiah' for Friday morning. The festival will close with a chamber concert in the Shire Hall. The principal artists already engaged are Mesdames Albani, Anna Williams, and Medora Henson, and Messrs. Lloyd and Oscar Meyer. Mr. G. R. Sinclair will, of course, be the conductor.

The Students' Chamber Concert of the Royal Academy of Music at St. James's Hall on Monday afternoon showed that the Tenterden Street institution can still furnish well-equipped young musicians. Perhaps the most noteworthy feature of the performance was that of Svendsen's Octet in A minor by about thirty pupils, an achievement, of course, quite permissible at an Academy concert.

Concerts of sacred music were more than usually numerous on Ash Wednesday; but as these partake more of the nature of religious functions than ordinary entertainments they scarcely call for criticism. It may be said, however, that excellent performances were given of Rossini's 'Stabat Mater' and Mendelssohn's 'Lobgesang' by the Queen's Hall Choral Society, under the conductorship of Mr. Randegger, in the afternoon; and in the evening Gounod's 'Redemption' was given by the Royal Choral Society at the Albert Hall, under the direction of Prof. Bridge. There were also ballad concerts of sacred music at the St. James's and the Queen's Hall in the evening.

Special interest will attach to the concert of the Highbury Philharmonic Society on the 9th inst., when Mendelssohn's music to Racine's 'Athalie' will be performed in its proper connexion with the play. The usual "illustrative verses" will be discarded, and the translation of the play (in an abridged form) by the late W. Bartholomew will be recited by several elocutionists, the part of Athalie being entrusted to Mrs. G. H. Betjemann, while Mr. Charles Fry has been specially engaged for that of Joad.

Herr Felix Mottl has been engaged by Frau Cosima Wagner to conduct all the performances of 'Parsifal' at Bayreuth this year.

The Frankfurter Zeitung has recently published several letters addressed by Richard Wagner to the composer Wendelin Weissheimer in the year 1862, when the former was occupied with the composition of the 'Meistersinger' at Biebrich, near Mayence. The letters, which have not been published before and contain valuable materials for the Master's biography, unfold a pitiful tale of his straitened circumstances, which reached at the end of April such a pitch that he actually declared to Weissheimer, "Ich bin am Ende. Ich muss auf einige Zeit verschwinden." The vehicle which was to convey him to a secluded spot had already been ordered for the next morning when an envoy appeared, like a deus ex machinâ, with an invitation from King Lewis II. of Bavaria, who generously offered him support and protection.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Sun.	Orchestral Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
—	National Sunday League, Verdi's 'Requiem,' 7, Queen's Hall.
—	Queen's Hall String Quartet Concert, 7.30.
Mon.	Popular Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
Tues.	Miss Amy Hare's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Highbury Philharmonic Society, Mendelssohn's 'Athalie,' 8, Highbury Athenæum.
—	Musical Guild Concert, 8, Kensington Town Hall.
—	Miss M. A. Ferdinand's Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
Wed.	Royal College of Music Chamber Concert, 7.45
Thurs.	Miss Wild and Herr Hausmann's Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Mr. Henschel's Symphony Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
Fri.	Mr Louis H. Hillier's Concert, 3, St. James's Hall
—	Hampstead Popular Concert, 8, Vestry Hall, Haverstock Hill.
Sat.	Crystal Palace Concert, 3.
—	Mozart Society's Concert, 3, No. 26, George Street, Hanover Square
—	Popular Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Mr. Ernest Mead's Recital, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	London Ballad Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Promenade Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

Globe.—'The MacHaggis,' a Farce in Three Acts. By Jerome K. Jerome and Eden Phillpotts.
Lyceum.—Revival of Shakspeare's 'King Richard III.'

The maxim of Rosaline that

> A jest's prosperity lies in the ear
> Of him that hears it holds true when the jest is in three acts. A happy chance was it for the new farce of Messrs. Jerome and Phillpotts that the fourth wall of the stage was sensitive, and, if such a thing may be said of a wall other than that of which Snout the tinker was the representative, responsive. For in very fact neither the idea underlying 'The MacHaggis' nor the treatment has more value or beauty than "may without candle go dark to bed." One can conceive the dismay of a meek, shame-faced, prudish little Scotsman, whose life hitherto has known no pleasure more stimulating than "pedalling" round Battersea Park, upon discovering that he has become the chieftain of a lawless and turbulent clan, which insists upon his assuming the responsibilities of his position, presiding over its domestic brawls, and leading it to combat against its hereditary foes. The idea is, however, thin to be extended over three acts, and it involves a complete surrender on the part of the audience, which regards as a picture of the life of the day proceedings which, if accepted at all, even as a subject of burlesque, carry one back to mediæval times. If the main story is thin, the underplot is wildly and idiotically extravagant. The action accordingly bristled with dangers and difficulties. So well closed with its fourth wall was the stage that success was never for a moment in doubt. The spectators laughed consumedly when the unheroical chieftain sought vainly to hide his chilly knees beneath his kilt, when he rebuked the passionate Spanish maiden who followed him to his Highland fortress and planted reckless kisses upon his reluctant brow. Still more loudly did they laugh when, in obedience to the traditions of the clan, he took up claymore and targe and fought a duel with his own piper. All is accordingly well for management and authors, and the new piece starts on a run that may—who knows?—rival that of 'Charley's Aunt.' Quite content are we with this state of affairs. The farce is blameless, and portions of it are genuinely funny. A widely different result was, however, at any time within reach. Had the audience had the slightest grudge against author, manager, or actor, the whole would scarcely have escaped hostile demonstrations. As it was even, to the practised ear there was more than one moment when the cheering was to some extent derisive. These moments passed, and a public that had been amused from the outset gave 'The MacHaggis' an enthusiastic reception. The play is of the order of Mr. Gilbert's 'Engaged,' but is less cynical than that mock pastoral, in which Corin and Silvius or Donald and Jamie add to their slender income by placing obstructions in the way of passing trains. Its mock-heroics are moreover less happy. Still, as the result proved, the piece is not less amusing. Its triumph is principally due to Mr. Weedon Grossmith, whose presentation of comic distress was highly humorous and commendably free from exaggeration. A picture by Miss Beatrice Ferrar of a Highland maiden with a keen eye to the main chance was pretty and amusing. The general performance, though adequate, had no special excellence.

During the long and enforced rest and seclusion to which he has been driven, Sir Henry Irving has apparently thought out the character of Richard. His performance, accordingly, is mellower and finer than before. No sign of suffering or injury was apparent, the walk assumed being calculated to cover any halting, were such present. For the rest, the savage scorn of Richard for the "gulls" whom he employs, the self-derision, and the scarcely veiled hypocrisy constitute the performance a veritable masterpiece. It is to be doubted whether an instance of more perfect Shakspearean interpretation is to be seen on the stage. A marked improvement is visible in the Lady Anne of Miss Julia Arthur; Miss Genevieve Ward's Queen Margaret retains remarkable intensity. The general cast is adequate, though some lack of inspiration is apparent in Richmond.

Beau Austin: a Drama. By W. E. Henley and R. L. Stevenson. (Heinemann.)—The 'Beau Austin' of Messrs. Henley and Stevenson is a fine piece of literary work and a good acting play. When put on the stage at the Haymarket some six or seven years ago, it obtained no more than a succès d'estime. For this we are not called upon to account. So little known is the piece that to put it again, with a good environment and cast, upon the stage would be anything rather than a risky experiment. The characters are well conceived and drawn, and the study of feminine nature, though daring and not wholly convincing, is at least healthy and stimulating. With stage chances we are, however, not concerned. There is, or used to be, a public that likes to read plays. How else should we be familiar with Beaumont and Fletcher and Congreve? To this public we heartily commend it.

M. CALMANN LÉVY publishes Pièces et Morceaux from the pen of that eminent dramatic member of the French Academy, M. Pailleron. The author of 'Le Monde où l'on s'ennuie' has well chosen his title, for the volume contains two or three little dramatic "pieces," and a great many bits, several of them in verse. M. Pailleron's prose is always brilliant: his verse is less excellent.

Dramatic Gossip.

REPORTS had been circulated that 'Madame Sans-Gêne' would not after all be given at the Lyceum. These were disposed of by the address of Sir Henry on the reopening night, in which he referred to his forthcoming appearance as Napoleon.

UNDER the management of Miss Dorothy Leighton and Mr. Charles Charrington a series of performances of Ibsen are projected for May. 'The Lady from the Sea' is to be given on the 10th, 'The Wild Duck' on the 17th, and 'A Doll's House' on the 24th. An "invitation performance" of 'Ghosts' is also contemplated.

AN adaptation in four acts, by Mr. L. Stoddard, of 'Tess of the D'Urbervilles' was given for copyright purposes at the St. James's Theatre on Tuesday.

MR. W. S. GILBERT'S long-maintained resolution never to write another comedy has, it is said, given way, and he has furnished Miss Fortescue with a play, the title of which is not yet fixed.

'AS YOU LIKE IT' will be withdrawn from the St. James's on the 20th, and the house will then close for a few days previous to the production of Mr. Pinero's new comedy 'The Prince and the Butterfly.'

MR. GEORGE GROSSMITH has retired, in consequence of indisposition, from the part of Ferdinand V. in 'His Majesty,' at the Savoy, and will take a holiday in the south of France.

IT is stated that Miss Kate Santley has parted with the lease of the Royalty Theatre.

'A WHITE ELEPHANT' has been withdrawn from the Comedy, which house has been closed during the week. It will reopen on Wednesday with 'Saucy Sally,' Mr. Burnand's version of 'La Flamboyante.'

'CONFEDERATES,' a one-act drama by Mr. Henry Woodville, constitutes the lever de rideau at the Globe. It is a fairly tender story of self-sacrifice, the action of which is laid in the time of the American Civil War.

'ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA' has been revived at the Queen's Theatre, Manchester, with Miss Janet Achurch as Cleopatra, and Mr. Louis Calvert as Antony.

WE have to record the death, in his sixty-fifth year, of the Austrian writer and politician Karl Morre. He was specially fertile as a playwright, and his Volksstück ''s Nullerl' acquired considerable popularity in Austria. Quite recently his piece 'Der Glückselige' was performed with great success at Vienna, and he had the satisfaction of being informed of it on his sick-bed.

MISCELLANEA

The 'Prelude.'—Will you kindly allow me to ask through the Athenæum in whose possession the MS. of Wordsworth's 'Prelude' now is? I have made several inquiries, but can obtain no information on the subject.

W. HALE WHITE.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—A. F. R.—H. D.—W. W.—L. H.—A. R.—E. L. J.—F. E. P.—J. S. B.—W.—G. W.—received.
No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST.
To all parts of the United Kingdom.

	s.	d.
For Twelve Months...	15	3
For Six Months	7	8

For all Countries within the Postal Union.

For Twelve Months...	18	0
For Six Months	9	0

 Each Volume will be complete in itself, with an Index, and Orders will be taken either for Sets or for separate Volumes.

In Five Handsome Royal 8vo. Volumes, 25s. each net.

The remaining Four Volumes will appear at intervals of about Six Months.

VOL. I., NEARLY READY, will extend to nearly 700 pages.

THE ROYAL NAVY.

A HISTORY.

From the Earliest Times to the Present.

BY

WM. LAIRD CLOWES,

Fellow of King's College, London, Gold Medallist U.S. Naval Institute, Hon. Member of the R.U.S. Institution.

ASSISTED BY

SIR CLEMENTS MARKHAM, K.C.B. P.R.G.S.,

Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N.,

Mr. H. W. WILSON,

Mr. THEODORE ROOSEVELT,

Mr. E. FRASER,

&c.

Twenty-five Photogravures

AND

Hundreds of Full-Page and other Illustrations,

Maps, Charts, &c.

IN FIVE VOLUMES.

An Illustrated Prospectus of this Important Work is now ready.

London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

JOHN C. NIMMO'S
LIST OF NEW AND RECENT BOOKS.

READY MARCH 25.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE NEW ILLUSTRATED EDITION.

In extra crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 5*s.* per Vol. net.

THE REV. S. BARING-GOULD'S

LIVES OF THE SAINTS.

With a Calendar for every Day in the Year.

New Edition, Revised, with Introduction and Additional Lives of English Martyrs, Cornish and Welsh Saints, and a Full Index to the Entire Work.

Illustrated by over 400 Engravings.

To be published in Monthly Volumes.

Volume I. ready March 25.

An Illustrated Prospectus, giving full details, may be had on application to any Bookseller in Town or Country.

A NEW AND POPULAR WORK ON THE OPERA.

In extra crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6*s.*

THE OPERA:

A History of the Development of Opera.

With Full Descriptions of all Works in the Modern Repertory.

By R. A. STREATFEILD.

With an Introduction by J. A. FULLER-MAITLAND.

"A volume which, for clearness in elucidating the mysteries of the plots of opera, ancient and modern, is far ahead of anything in our language hitherto published."—Musical Opinion.

"This book may be recommended as one of the most useful published of recent years."
Saturday Review.

"Throughout the volume there is a welcome freedom from prejudice, while the author exhibits much sound judgment and critical acumen."
Times.

"A book which will give pleasure and instruction to all lovers and students of opera."
National Observer.

"An important work in the criticism and historical development of music."—Daily News.

THE LATE HENRY SEEBOHM'S STANDARD WORK ON BRITISH BIRDS.

In Four Volumes, royal 8vo. cloth, with numerous Wood Engravings and 68 Coloured Plates, 6*l.* 6*s.*, now 5*l.* 5*s.* net.

A HISTORY OF BRITISH BIRDS.

With Coloured Illustrations of their Eggs.

To which is added the Author's Notes on their Classification and Geographical Distribution.

By HENRY SEEBOHM,

Author of 'Siberia in Europe,' 'Siberia in Asia,' &c.

NOTE.—The text of the admirable life-histories of British Birds contained in this work was in every instance the outcome of the author's personal knowledge and experience, and in these respects he was probably unequalled by any other ornithological writer of the present century. The attention of subscribers to the late Lord Lilford's 'Coloured Figures of the Birds of the British Islands' is particularly directed to the fact that the present work, as the best of its kind, is especially recommended as forming the natural and only fitting accompaniment to Lord Lilford's magnificent series of coloured figures.

Two Volumes, extra crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, with 120 Coloured Plates, price 21*s.* net.

THE FLORA OF THE ALPS.

Being a Description of all the Species of Flowering Plants indigenous to Switzerland, and of the Alpine Species of the adjacent mountain districts of France, Italy, and Austria, including the Pyrenees.

BY

ALFRED W. BENNETT, M.A. B.Sc. F.L.S.,

Lecturer on Botany at St. Thomas's Hospital.

With 120 Coloured Plates.

"The whole book forms a valuable contribution to the intelligent enjoyment of a holiday in Switzerland."—Academy.

"These very beautifully illustrated volumes will be welcomed by the numberless people whose summer holiday is spent in Switzerland or the Alpine districts."—Land and Water.

"Mr. Bennett gives an adequate description, and one which is both clear and exact, of all the species of flowering plants common to Switzerland."
Standard.

"The illustrations are numerous and accurate."
Times.

NOTE.—A Reissue of this beautiful work will be commenced on March 25th, in Eight Monthly Parts, at 2s. 6d. each net.

In extra crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, with Portrait and 2 Illustrations, 5*s.*

FRANCIS ORPEN MORRIS.

A Memoir of the Author of 'A History of British Birds,' &c.

By his Son,

The Rev. M. C. F. MORRIS, B.C.L. M.A.,

Rector of Nunburnholme, Yorkshire.

"In this brief, but attractive and adequate biography.....Mr. M. C. F. Morris draws a very engaging picture of his father's personality."
Times.

"Any one and every one will feel his outlook widened by reading this book."—Church Times.

"From the first page to the last.....this delightful volume.....has held us willing captive."
Literary World.

"This very interesting memoir of the naturalist, whose works are perhaps better known among the rising 'generation' than those of any other authority.....gives a remarkably clear and distinct picture of the late Mr. F. O. Morris."—Land and Water.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MARY POWELL.'

In crown 8vo. with an Introduction by the Rev. W. H. HUTTON, B.D., and 26 Illustrations by John Jellicoe and Herbert Railton, 6*s.* cloth elegant, gilt top, uniform with 'The Household of Sir Thomas More.'

CHERRY AND VIOLET:

A Tale of the Great Plague.

"We cannot doubt that 'Cherry and Violet' in its present attractive form will gain many new readers and still delight the old."—Chronicle.

"A very well-written tale."—Saturday Review.

"The late Miss Manning's delicate and fanciful little cameos of historical romance possess a flavour of their own.....The numerous illustrations by Mr. Jellicoe and Mr. Railton are particular pretty."
Athenæum.

"A beautiful book! is the verdict, and one to read and read again. A similar verdict is to be passed on the drawings with which Messrs. Herbert Railton and John Jellicoe have enriched this edition."—Sketch.

Two Volumes, super-royal 8vo. cloth, 1*l.* 10*s.* net.

BRITISH GAME BIRDS AND WILD FOWL.

By BEVERLEY R. MORRIS, M.D.

Entirely Revised and brought up to Date by W. B. TEGETMEIER, F.Z.S.

With 60 Large Plates, all Coloured by Hand.

"The work is handsomely got up, and well-printed."—Athenæum.

"Has held a unique position among works of its class. The sixty hand-coloured plates are splendidly executed."—Daily News.

"A new and revised edition of this well-known and sumptuous work, issued under the skilful supervision of Mr. W. Tegetmeier."—Times.

"Paper and printing of the best kinds, and carefully coloured plates, show that no pains have been spared to secure it a place on the shelves of the country house library."—Spectator.

NOTE.—A Reissue of this valuable Work will be commenced on March 25, in Twelve Monthly Parts, at 2s. 6d. each net.

In small 4to. bound in cloth, gilt top, 10*s.* 6*d.*

HAMPTON COURT.

By WILLIAM HOLDEN HUTTON, B.D.,

Fellow of S. John's College, Oxford.

"We can heartily recommended Mr. Hutton's book."—Saturday Review.

"Mr. Hutton's description of the art collections is admirable."—Public Opinion.

"Pen and pencil have worked in harmony, and the whole is imbued with the spirit of the numerous refined and beautiful drawings."—Daily News.

"A worthy memorial of one of our historic places."—Daily Chronicle.

"Mr. Railton's drawings are picturesque and intensely appreciative."—Magazine of Art.

"The volume is not without distinct scholarly and historical value."—Notes and Queries.

Now ready, royal 8vo. cloth, 15*s.* net per volume.

VOLUMES I., II., III., and IV. of the New Issue of

THE REV. F. O. MORRIS'S

HISTORY OF BRITISH BIRDS.

With 394 Plates, all Coloured by Hand.

The text embodies all the author's latest additions and corrections; and each volume contains, in addition to the letterpress, from 60 to 70 Plates, coloured by hand. The colouring of these Plates has been most carefully revised for the present issue, and will be found superior even to the much sought after early editions of the work. In the Sixth Volume an elaborate and detailed Index will be supplied, thus completing this standard work on British Ornithology.

London: JOHN C. NIMMO, 14, King William-street, Strand, W.C.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON'S NEW ATLASES.

PHILIPS' NEW HANDY GENERAL ATLAS OF THE WORLD.

Containing 120 pages of Coloured Maps and Plans, dealing exhaustively with Physical, Political, and Commmercial Geography, with an Index of over 100,000 Names.

EDITED BY

GEORGE PHILIP, Jun., F.R.G.S.

Size, 15 by 12 inches. Weight, 9 lb.

Handsomely bound in half-morocco, gilt top, £2.

Full bound morocco, gilt edges, £2 12s. 6d.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

1. It is entirely of English origin and manufacture, and has been planned with special reference to the requirements of the British public. For this reason it will be found clearer, more up-to-date, and easier of reference than the Foreign Atlases which are being so extensively advertised in this country.

2. Special care has been taken to show all the British Colonies and Dependencies in great detail.

3. Physical and Commercial Geography are adequately treated in a series of Maps of the World and of the Continents.

Detailed Prospectus gratis on application.

The Daily Mail says:—"In these days, when geographical and political questions are largely intermixed, to the general disturbance of the public mind, a new atlas which, in addition to being complete in every other respect, defines with scrupulous accuracy the most recent frontier limitations, is sure to be liberally welcomed. Such an atlas makes its appearance this week from the house of G. Philip & Son under the title, 'The Handy General Atlas of the World' (40*s.*). For ordinary purposes of study and reference this is the most convenient and complete work of its kind that I know. The index, which comprehends over 100,000 geographical names, quickly guides one to the discovery of the desired place on its particular map, and the maps themselves are in all respects admirable, carefully drawn, and beautifully printed in colours. The physical and climatological maps and the commercial charts are most useful."

The MERCHANT SHIPPERS' and OCEAN TRAVELLERS' ATLAS.

A Series of 15 large Coloured Plates of the various Oceans and Seas, showing clearly Submarine Cables, Steamship and Sailing Ship Routes, distances between Ports, Canals, Lighthouses, Coaling Stations, and much additional information which will be found exceptionally useful to Merchants, Ship Brokers, Insurance Offices, and all those who are interested in Ocean Travels. Large folio, strongly bound in cloth, 1*l.* 10*s.*

Fairplay says:—"No atlas extant will serve the purposes of shipowners, merchants, and underwriters so well as this new one."

PHILIPS' READY REFERENCE ATLAS of the WORLD.

With a Statistical Survey of each Country. Containing 72 Coloured Maps, 100 Pages of Letterpress, and an Index of over 20,000 Names. Edited by E. G. RAVENSTEIN, F.R.G.S., Hon. Fellow of the Geographical Societies of Edinburgh, Amsterdam, Lisbon, and Frankfurt-on-Main. Small 4to. cloth gilt, gilt edges, 10*s.* 6*d.*

The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"The first cartographical work published for the New Year. The maps are clearly drawn and printed, and all the boundaries affected by recent treaties or political developments are carefully marked. This atlas will be found most useful for immediate reference, and the statistical survey is a great acquisition."

PHILIPS' HANDY VOLUME ATLAS of the WORLD.

An entirely New and Enlarged Edition, containing 72 entirely New Maps, 75 Pages of Commercial and Statistical Notes, and an Index of 20,000 Names. Edited by E. G. RAVENSTEIN, F.R.G.S. Size when closed, 6½ by 4 inches. Cloth, rounded corners, 5*s.*; French morocco, gilt edges, in cardboard box, 7*s.* 6*d.*

The National Observer says:—"To bring together within the compass of a volume hardly larger than an ordinary Church Service some seventy-two maps of the world, together with statistical and geographical information accompanying each map, the whole guaranteed by the high authority of so expert a geographer as Mr. E. G. Ravenstein, and procurable at a moderate price, is an undertaking which could hardly fail to commend itself to the English public."

GEORGE PHILIP & SON, 32, Fleet-street, London.
Liverpool:
PHILIP, SON & NEPHEW, 45-51, South Castle-street.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

COMPLETE CATALOGUE post free on application.

BELL'S CATHEDRAL SERIES.

Edited by GLEESON WHITE and E. F. STRANGE.

Fully illustrated and well printed.

Crown 8vo. in specially designed cloth covers, 1*s.* 6*d.* each.

This Series of Monographs in small compass, which has been for some time in preparation, is planned to supply visitors to the great English Cathedrals with accurate guide-books, and also to present a complete record at a lower price, and more fully illustrated than any yet published.

SALISBURY. | CANTERBURY. [Just published.

ROCHESTER. | OXFORD. | CHESTER. [Ready immediately.

"Visitors to the cathedral cities of England must often have felt the need of some work dealing with the history and antiquities of the city itself, and the architecture and associations of the cathedral, more portable than the elaborate monographs which have been devoted to some of them, more scholarly and satisfying than the average local guide-book, and more copious than the section devoted to them in the general guide-book of the county or district. Such a legitimate need the 'Cathedral Series,' now being issued by Messrs. George Bell & Sons under the editorship of Mr. Gleeson White and Mr. E. F. Strange, seems well calculated to supply. The volumes, two of which, relating to Canterbury and Salisbury, have already been issued, are handy in size, moderate in price, well illustrated, and written in a scholarly spirit. The history of cathedral and city is intelligently set forth, and accompanied by a descriptive survey of the building in all its detail. The illustrations are copious and well selected, and THE SERIES BIDS FAIR TO BECOME AN INDISPENSABLE COMPANION TO THE CATHEDRAL TOURIST IN ENGLAND."—Times.

NEW and REVISED EDITION, post 8vo. 2 vols. 15*s.*

SLANG, JARGON, and CANT. A Dictionary of Unconventional Phraseology, comprising English, American, Colonial, Tinkers', Yiddish, Pidgin, and Anglo-Indian Slang. With Philological Notes and Illustrative Quotations. Compiled and Edited by Professor ALBERT BARRÈRE, R.M.A., Woolwich, and CHARLES G. LELAND, M.A., Hon. F.R.S.L., Author of 'The English Gypsies and their Language,' &c., 'Hans Breitmann,' &c.

READY NEXT WEEK. EDITION LIMITED.

Pott 4to. printed on antique laid paper at the Chiswick Press. Price to Subscribers, 15*s.* net.

BOOK SALES of the YEAR 1896. Containing a Detailed Description of all the most Important Books Sold at Auction, with the Names of the Purchasers, and the Prices realized. With Complete Indexes of Names and Subjects, and General Introduction and Notes. By TEMPLE SCOTT.

NOTE.—The special features which last year earned for this work a welcome reception from bibliographers, book collectors, and booksellers will be continued in the present volume. In addition to the usual notes, there will be many collations of rarer items, and a subject as well as author index. A new feature entirely is the arrangement of each sale in alphabetical order. It has not been possible to give the purchasers' names in every case, but the instances of omission are not many. The editor claims that the record he presents is not a mere reprint of the catalogues of the auctioneers, but constitutes a practical guide for the book-collector, as well as an important record for the bibliographer.

The Publishers reserve to themselves the right of raising the price after publication. A few copies of the volume for 1895 are still on hand, and may be had for 15*s.* net each.

Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

GOLF in THEORY and PRACTICE. Some Hints to Beginners.

By H. S. C. EVERARD. A Practical Manual. With 22 Illustrations from Life.

"One of the best books on golf that we have seen."—Manchester Guardian.

"Mr. Everard's book is full of good advice to beginners, but those who are proficient, and even 'scratch' men, may read it with advantage to themselves, and possibly to their play."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Post 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

ACHIEVEMENTS of CAVALRY. By General Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C. G.C.B. G.C.M.G., Quartermaster-General. With 4 Maps.

SECOND EDITION of Vols. I. and II. now ready, demy 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.* each.

The DIARY of SAMUEL PEPYS. Transcribed from the Shorthand MS. by the Rev. MYNORS BRIGHT, M.A. With LORD BRAYBROOKE'S Notes. Edited, with Additions, by HENRY B. WHEATLEY, F.S.A.

HANDBOOKS OF ENGLISH LITERATURE.—New Volume.

Edited by Prof. J. W. HALES, M.A.

Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

The AGE of WORDSWORTH. By Prof. C. H. Herford, Litt.D., Professor of English Literature in the University College of Wales, Aberystwyth.

BOHN'S LIBRARIES.—New Volume.

HORACE. A New Literal Prose Translation. By A. Hamilton BRYCE, LL.D., Translator and Editor of 'Vergil,' &c. 3*s.* 6*d.* [Immediately.

Also issued in Four Parts, sewed, 1*s.* each.—Part I. ODES, Books I. and II.—Part II. ODES, Book III. and IV., CARMEN SECULARE, and EPODES.—Part III. SATIRES.—Part IV. EPISTLES and ARS POETICA.

ALDINE POETS.—New Volumes.

The POETICAL WORKS of JAMES THOMSON. Revised Edition, with a New Memoir and Critical Appendix, by the Rev. D. C. TOVEY, M.A., Author of 'Gray and his Friends,' &c. 2 vols. fcap. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.* net each.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, York-street, Covent-garden.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

NOTICE.—The important New Work by Dr. DONALDSON SMITH, F.R.G.S., the well-known Explorer, entitled THROUGH UNKNOWN AFRICAN COUNTRIES, will be ready on Tuesday next at all Libraries and Booksellers', 21s. net.

NOTICE.—SOLDIERING and SURVEYING in BRITISH EAST AFRICA, 1891–1894, by Major MACDONALD, R.E., fully illustrated with Maps and Plans, will be ready on Thursday next at all Libraries and Booksellers', 16s.

NEW STORY BY THE AUTHOR OF 'DIANA TEMPEST.'

A DEVOTEE. By Mary Cholmondeley, Author of 'Diana Tempest,' 'The Danvers Jewels,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [On Tuesday next.

FISH TALES—and SOME TRUE ONES. By Bradnock Hall. With Etched Frontispiece by the Author, and 12 Full-Page Illustrations by T. Hope McLachlan. Crown 8vo. 6s. [On Thursday next.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

ON VELDT and FARM in CAPE COLONY, BECHUANALAND, NATAL, and the TRANSVAAL. By FRANCIS McNAB. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

WASTED RECORDS of DISEASE. By CHARLES E. PAGET, Lecturer on Public Health in the Owens College, Medical Officer of Health for the County Borough of Salford. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

The BEGGARS of PARIS (PARIS QUI MENDIE). Translated from the French of M. LOUIS PAULIAN by LADY HERSCHELL. Paper boards, 1s.

Times.—"Not only contains a great many amusing and instructive anecdotes, but formulates a definite scheme for the entire suppression of begging as a trade. Lady Herschell's excellent translation should be read by all who are interested in the vexed question of charity-giving, and even to those who read but for amusement it will prove vastly entertaining."

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

STUDIES in EARLY VICTORIAN LITERATURE. By FREDERIC HARRISON, M.A., Author of 'The Choice of Books,' &c. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

BY MR. J. CHURTON COLLINS.

A TREASURY of MINOR BRITISH POETRY. Selected and Arranged, with Notes, by J. CHURTON COLLINS, M.A. Handsomely bound, crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Standard.—"A choice and beautiful book."

A HISTORY of ENGLAND. By C. W. OMAN, M.A., Fellow of All Souls', Author of 'Warwick the Kingmaker,' &c. Fully furnished with Maps, Plans, and Tables, 760 pp. cloth, 5s. Also in Two Parts, 3s. each. Part I. to A.D. 1603. Part II. From 1603 to Present Time.

EIGHTH THOUSAND.

FIRE and SWORD in the SUDAN. By SLATIN PASHA, C.B. Translated by Lieut.-Colonel WINGATE, R.A. D.S.O., Chief of the Intelligence Department, Egyptian Army. Fifth Edition. 21s. net.

Spectator.—"Slatin Pasha's book is absolutely unique."

SIR ALFRED MILNER'S STANDARD WORK.

ENGLAND in EGYPT. By Sir Alfred MILNER, K.C.B., Governor of Cape Colony, and High Commissioner to South Africa. Popular Edition. Large crown 8vo. with Map, cloth, 7s. 6d.

The ART of READING and SPEAKING. By the Rev. Canon FLEMING, Vicar of St. Michael's, Chester-square. Third Edition. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

DEDICATED TO H.R.H. PRINCESS CHRISTIAN.

A TEXT-BOOK of NURSING for HOME and HOSPITAL USE. By C. WEEKS-SHAW. Revised and largely Rewritten by W. RADFORD, House Surgeon at the Poplar Hospital, under the supervision of Sir DYCE DUCKWORTH, M.D. F.R.C.P. Fully illustrated. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

COLONEL KENNEY-HERBERT'S COOKERY BOOKS.

COMMON-SENSE COOKERY. 7s. 6d.
FIFTY BREAKFASTS. 2s. 6d.
FIFTY LUNCHES. 2s. 6d.
FIFTY DINNERS. 2s. 6d.

Times.—"The author has for some time been generally accepted as perhaps the chief English authority on the art of cookery."

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street, Strand.
New York: 70, Fifth-avenue.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' NEW PUBLICATIONS.

SECOND EDITION.

NOW READY.

LIFE OF VICE-ADMIRAL SIR GEORGE TRYON, K.C.B.

BY REAR-ADMIRAL C. C. PENROSE FITZGERALD.

With Two Portraits and numerous Illustrations. Several from Sir George Tryon's own Sketches.

Demy 8vo. 21s.

TIMES.—"He has drawn the portrait of a remarkable seaman with a seaman's frankness and directness of delineation."

SPECTATOR.—"The story of Tryon's life and services is admirably told."

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"A fascinating and absorbing narrative, skilfully recounted."

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Should be read not by sailors only, but by every man who, with Tryon, regards the navy as the Right Arm of England."

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"A well-written and valuable contribution to modern naval history."

BEATRICE HARRADEN'S NEW BOOK.
AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

HILDA STRAFFORD, AND THE REMITTANCE MAN.

Two Californian Stories. By BEATRICE HARRADEN, Author of 'Ships that Pass in the Night,' 'In Varying Moods.' Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

PERIODS OF EUROPEAN LITERATURE.

THE FLOURISHING OF ROMANCE AND THE RISE OF ALLEGORY

(Twelfth and Thirteenth Centuries).

By GEORGE SAINTSBURY, M.A., Professor of Rhetoric and English Literature in Edinburgh University, and Editor of the Series. Crown 8vo. 5s. net. [Immediately.

NEW NOVEL BY DOROTHEA GERARD.

READY MARCH 9.

A SPOTLESS REPUTATION. By DOROTHEA GERARD (Madame LONGARD DE LONGARDE), Author of 'Lady Baby,' 'The Wrong Man,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

PROF. STORY'S NEW WORK.

The APOSTOLIC MINISTRY in the SCOTTISH CHURCH. (The Baird Lecture for 1897.) By ROBERT HERBERT STORY, D.D. (Edin.), F.S.A. Scot., Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the University of Glasgow; Principal Clerk of the General Assembly; and Chaplain to the Queen. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

POPULAR EDITION OF BURTON'S SCOTLAND.

The HISTORY of SCOTLAND. From Agricola's Invasion to the Extinction of the last Jacobite Insurrection. By JOHN HILL BURTON, D.C.L., Historiographer Royal for Scotland.

Vol. I. now ready, crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

CHEAP REISSUE IN SHILLING VOLUMES.

ANCIENT CLASSICS for ENGLISH READERS. Edited by Rev. W. LUCAS COLLINS.

Vols. I. and II. now ready, limp cloth:—

HOMER: THE ILIAD. HOMER: THE ODYSSEY. By the EDITOR.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS,
Edinburgh and London.

JARROLD & SONS' LIST.

MAURUS JOKAI'S NEW NOVEL,
ENTITLED

The GREEN BOOK; or, Freedom under the Snow. Translated by Mrs. WAUGH (ELLIS WRIGHT). With Engraved Portrait of Dr. Jókai (Authorized Edition). Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

FOURTH EDITION NOW READY.

"The author has given us a group of striking personalities, of every one of whom it is not too much to say that it is brilliantly drawn and vividly presented. From every point of view 'The Green Book' is a book to be read. It is a work of fine art."—Daily Chronicle.

Mr. Courtney says in the Daily Telegraph:—"It is truly an astounding book. In force and fire and prodigal variety he reminds one of the elder Dumas."

"Altogether a great book, and worth all the novels of native growth we are likely to see this season."
Pall Mall Gazette.

BY MAURUS JOKAI.
(Uniform with the above.)

BLACK DIAMONDS. By Maurus JOKAI. THIRD EDITION. Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

"It is so well written, so abounding in all sorts of special knowledge, and displays so much real literary power, that we never feel tempted to leave any of its pages unread. There are some extremely fine descriptive passages in the book.....Maurus Jókai is absolutely original in thought and treatment."—Daily Chronicle.

OTHER POPULAR WORKS BY DR. MAURUS JOKAI.

Authorized Editions, crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 5s. each.
Translated from the Hungarian by R. NISBET BAIN.

'MIDST the WILD CARPATHIANS.

"A thrilling Hungarian historical novel. Jókai's extraordinary dramatic and descriptive powers have full play."
Truth.

PRETTY MICHAL.

"It is part of the high art of the story that the author has kept the whole atmosphere free from the complexity, the subtle motives of a later and more sophisticated age. Maurus Jókai's novel is a book to be read."—Saturday Review.

London: JARROLD & SONS, 10 and 11, Warwick-lane, E.C. At all Libraries and of the Booksellers.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

CHRISTIAN INSTINCTS AND MODERN DOUBT.

Essays and Addresses in aid of a Reasonable, Satisfying, and Consolatory Religion.

By Rev. ALEXANDER H. CRAUFURD, M.A.,
Formerly Exhibitioner of Oriel College, Oxford,
Author of 'Enigmas of the Spiritual Life.'

PROPHETS of the CHRISTIAN FAITH. By the Very Rev. F. W. FARRAR, D.D., Dean of Canterbury; the Very Rev. W. H. FREMANTLE, D.D., Dean of Ripon; the Rev. A. M. FAIRBAIRN, D.D., Principal of Mansfield College, Oxford; and others.

Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 5s.

The BIBLE and the CHILD. By Dean FARRAR, Dean FREMANTLE, Dr. HORTON, Professor ADENEY, Professor PEAKE, Dr. MUNGER, Dr. LYMAN ABBOTT, and Dr. WASHINGTON GLADDEN. Pott 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

"All the discourses in this little volume, especially those by Dr. Lyman Abbott, Dr. Horton, Dr. Porter, Dean Farrar, and Dean Fremantle, are excellent."—Daily Chronicle.

"This volume is one which it will benefit every religious teacher to read."—Dundee Advertiser.

SMALL BOOKS ON GREAT SUBJECTS.

Pott 8vo. buckram cloth, 1s. 6d. each.

1. WORDS by the WAYSIDE. By GEORGE MATHESON, D.D. [Ready.
2. FAITH the BEGINNING, SELF-SURRENDER the FULFILMENT of the SPIRITUAL LIFE. By JAMES MARTINEAU, D.D. D.C.L. [Ready.
3. RECONSIDERATIONS and REINFORCEMENTS. By J. M. WHITON, Ph.D., Author of 'Beyond the Shadow,' &c. [In the press.

JAMES CLARKE & CO.
13 and 14, Fleet-street, London.

DAVID NUTT,
270-271, STRAND.

LATEST PUBLICATIONS.

THE CLASSICAL REVIEW.
Vol. XI. No. 2. MARCH, 1897. 1s. 6d.

Contents.

E. W. FAY. Contested Etymologies.
A. PLATT. Agamemnonea.
F. HAVERFIELD. Notes on Aesch. 'Prom.,' 358.
E. C MARCHANT. Notes on Thucydides, Book VI.
ROBINSON ELLIS. On an Epigram of Leonidas of Tarentum.
T. L. AGAR. Note on 'Iliad,' xx. 18.
A. E. HOUSMAN. Critical Notes on Ovid's 'Heroides.'
J. H. GRAY. Note on Plaut. 'Epid.,' 19, 625.
ST. GEORGE STOCK. On 'Alcestis,' 320-322.
ANDREW LANG. On the Magical Papyri.
R. H. GRETTON. On Cic. 'Ad Fam.,' I. 2, 2.
C. D. CHAMBERS. On the Construction of οὐ μή.
G. E. MARINDIN. On the Meaning of ad in "ad Opis" and Similar Expressions.
Jebb's 'Ajax.' A. S.
Van Oordt on Plato and his Times. R. D. HICKS.
Wessely's 'Corpus Papyrorum Raineri,' Vol. I. H.
Horton-Smith's 'Sophocles and Shakespeare.' LEWIS CAMPBELL.
Hartman's 'Epistola Critica.' T. L. AGAR.
Hitzig-Blümner's Edition of Pausanias. E. GARDNER.
Bornecque's Edition of Cicero 'De Signis.' E. SELLERS.
Schneider's 'Das Alte Rom.' W. C. F. ANDERSON.
Marriott on the Mason Marks at Pompeii. W. C. F. ANDERSON.
Boissier's 'Afrique Romaine.' W. C. F. ANDERSON.
Translation of Boissier's 'Nouvelles Promenades.' W. C. F. ANDERSON.
J. MYRES. Torr's 'Memphis and Mycenae.'
Summaries—Bibliography.

The CELTIC CHURCH of WALES. By I. WILLIS BUND. A handsome demy 8vo. Volume of upwards of 540 pages. Cloth, 12s. 6d. net.

Contents.—Characteristics of the Celtic Church—The Tribal System—The Christian Settlement—Monasteries—Bishops—The Clergy—Churches—Endowments—Saints—The Conflict.

GOETHE'S FAUST (The so-called First Part). With the Scene 'Two Imps and Amor,' the Variants of the Göchhausen Transcript, and the complete Paralipomena of the Weimar Edition of 1878. In English, with Introduction and Notes, by R. McLINTOCK. Demy 8vo. xxxvii-375 pp., cloth, 10s. net.

The NIGHT of the GODS. An Inquiry into Cosmic and Cosmogonic Mythology and Symbolism. By JOHN O'NEILL. Second and Concluding Volume. Comprising pp. 583-1036 of the Inquiry, an Index (to both Volumes) of 38 double-columned pages, and a Memoir of the Author. Profusely illustrated. The price of the Two Volumes is 2l. 12s. 6d. net.

 As only a very small number of copies of Vol. II. have been printed, the complete work must shortly become scarce. It forms undoubtedly one of the most remarkable collections of facts relating to early mythological speculation and symbolism ever brought together.

MR. ARTHUR A. SYKES'S NEW BOOK NOW READY.

WITHOUT PERMISSION: a Book of Dedications. Art canvas, 3s. 6d. post free; or may be ordered through any Bookseller
The Roxburghe Press, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster.

Just published, price One Shilling,

THE AUSTRALIAN COLONIES in 1896.

Three Letters describing the Country and its Resources, the Population, Public Works, and Finances, with Remarks on Federation, the Funding of Australian Public Debts, Emigration, &c.

By EDWARD A. PETHERICK.

"Australia in a Nutshell! Mr. E. A. Petherick, than whom a better authority could not easily be found....in three letters....describes the salient facts of the past the position of the present, and the needs of the future....He does all this in some fifty small pages of good type.... Fifty volumes could only go into more detail, and so complete is this brief and brilliant review that geography, agriculture, commerce, philanthropy, religion, the arts the people, public works, finance, federation, and, indeed, every subject that in any way concerns the Australian community are duly noted."—Home News.

"There is, of course, a great deal more than we have here indicated in this remarkable piece of condensation, which is entirely devoid of dryness, for every page reads with the freshness and interest of a romance rather than what might be expected from a digest of the material state and prospects of the Australian colonies....All who want to be conveniently posted up in these subjects should procure and read Mr. Petherick's admirable, timely, and masterly monograph."
European Mail.

"Mr Petherick has observed the colonies from within but has since resided here so long as to be fully able to judge them from without.... Mainly financial....he succeeds in illustrating hard facts with explanatory matter of a more picturesque character....Tells us not only of the population, their circumstances and condition, but makes the story complete, and, it may be said, fascinating, by a recapitulation of their savings, morals, religious and educational advantages, amusements, occupations, and, indeed, the whole surroundings of their lives....The case for the colonies is a very strong one from all points of view, and thanks are due to Mr. Petherick for having set it forth with so much fairness and force."—British Australasian.

London: Effingham Wilson. Glasgow: John Smith & Son.

J. W. ARROWSMITH, BRISTOL.

Gilt top, crown 8vo. 385 pp., Six Shillings.

ZISKA:
THE PROBLEM OF A WICKED SOUL.
BY
MARIE CORELLI.

50,000 copies on day of publication.

SECRETS OF THE COURT OF EUROPE.

By ALLEN UPWARD.

Crown 8vo. 392 pages, Six Shillings.

Will be published March 15.

Bristol: J. W. Arrowsmith. London: Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Limited.

MR. FLINDERS PETRIE'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

PETRIE (W. M. FLINDERS).—KOPTOS. With a Chapter by D. G. HOGARTH, M.A. 1 vol. 4to. 35 pp. 28 Plates (4 Photographic) boards 12s.

—— NAQADA and BALLAS. By W. M. FLINDERS PETRIE and QUIBELL. With a Chapter by J. C. SPURRELL. 4to. 79 pp. 87 Plates boards 25s.

The district treated in this work is about thirty miles North of Thebes and on the Western side of the Nile. Messrs Flinders Petrie and Quibell give decisive evidence of an hitherto unknown race in Upper Egypt which is linked with the prehistoric civilization of the Mediterranean. An ample index adds greatly to the value of the book.

Bernard Quaritch, 15, Piccadilly, London.

Price 6d. post free.

DEAFNESS: its Treatment by Massage (Hommel's Method). Baths and Remedial Agents. With Cases of Nervous Deafness. By R. T. COOPER, M.A., M.D.
London: James Epps & Co., Limited, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street.

W. C. BENNETT'S POEMS.

The GOLDEN LIBRARY.—Square 16mo. cloth. 2s.

CONTRIBUTIONS to a BALLAD HISTORY of ENGLAND.

Athenæum.—"These ballads are spirited and stirring: such are 'The Fall of Harald Hardrada,' 'Old Benbow,' 'Marston Moor,' and 'Corporal John,' the soldier's name for the famous Duke of Marlborough, which is a specially good ballad. 'Queen Eleanor's Vengeance' is a vivid little story. Coming to more modern times, 'The Deeds of Wellington,' 'Inkermann,' and 'Balaklava' are excellently well said and sung. As a book of ballads, interesting to all who have British blood in their veins, Dr. Bennett's contribution will be welcome. Dr Bennett's ballads will leave a strong impression on the memory of those who read them."

SONGS for SAILORS.

Morning Post.—"Spirited, melodious, and vigorously graphic."
Daily News.—"Very spirited."
Pall Mall Gazette.—"Really admirable."
Morning Advertiser.—"Sure of a wide popularity."
John Bull.—"Very successful."

London: Chatto & Windus, 110 and 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

SECOND EDITION, price Fourpence,

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY.
By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Kentish Mercury.
G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo. cloth, price Sixpence,

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES: a Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.
Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

NEW EDITION, price Two Shillings,

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Ninth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Has we are glad to see, reached a ninth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.
Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

FIFTH EDITION, price Sixpence, cloth,

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."
Dr. B. A. Gould, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.
Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th 27th, JUNE 10th 24th, and JULY 8th, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'CONINGSBY,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'
Price of the Six Numbers, 2s.; or free by post, 2s. 3d.
John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 24th, 1892, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.
Price of the Four Numbers, 1s. 4d., or free by post, 1s. 6d.
John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery lane, E.C.

ELLIOT STOCK'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

In demy 8vo. cloth, price 9s.

The STORY of the HOUSE of LANCASTER. By HENRY HARTWRIGHT.

This story of the times is put together in a series of sketches drawn from various sources. An endeavour has been made to render it more lifelike by giving an accurate account of the family of each of the principal characters introduced, instead of merely a string of names.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

ENGLAND'S ATTAINMENT of COMMERCIAL SUPREMACY. By H. TIPPER, Associate of the Institute of Bankers.

"Those who desire to trace the history of British commerce for the last three hundred years may do it in Mr. Tipper's book. Mr. Tipper has done his work well. His selection is good, his arrangement excellent, his compression judicious. He has supplied an undoubted want in our current literature, and has opened for the average busy man a field hitherto closed to him by its size and difficulty of access."—Financial News.

"Going right away back to the earliest commercial relations of the island, Mr. Tipper traces the gradual development of English commerce from century to century down to the battle of Waterloo. His narrative is clear and well ordered."—Glasgow Herald.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

NEW THOUGHTS on CURRENT SUBJECTS: Scientific, Social, Philosophical. By the Rev. J. A. DEWE.

"The book presents conjectures as to the causes of many things which profound thinkers and men trained to scientific habits of thought are content to admit that they cannot explain."—Scotsman.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

The FOUR FIRST THINGS, and other Essays. By J. E. A. BROWN, Author of 'Thoughts through the Year,' 'From Advent to All Saints,' 'The Heart of a Girl,' &c.

"The things in question are life, character, childhood, and love, upon which the writer discourses with unimpeachable morality."—Scotsman.

"The volume will come as a friend, new perhaps in externals, but surprising us by unexpected familiar hints of former sympathetic intercourse. The quality which will most strike the readers is the religiousness of the spirit which pervades one and all of these essays."—Southport Visitor.

NEW NOVELS.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.

TALES of BLACK COUNTRY LIFE. By DAVID HOBBS.

"What has been called the 'literature of locality' receives a pleasing addition in 'Tales of Black Country Life,' by David Hobbs. These tales may be commended as an interesting presentation of the working class among our Scottish ironfields."—Dundee Advertiser.

"Mr Hobbs has in this book broken new ground in the delineation of Black Country Life in Scotland. To say that he has been successful in this new departure is to give but faint praise. The ten stories which make up the volume are most capital reading, and there is not a dull page in the book. We can heartily commend these tales."

Aberdeen Journal.

In small fcap. 8vo. parchment cover, price 2s. 6d.

SPICK and SPAN: a Story for Children. By AUNT CHERRY.

In paper cover, price 6d.

WOMAN. By Marion Graham.

NEW VOLUMES OF VERSE.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

The HUIA'S HOMELAND, and other Verses. By ROSLYN.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.

LEAVES in the WIND. By Anthony C. DEANE.

"Mr. Deane's technical skill is very great, and his verses ring musically and pleasantly without a single jar or discord. Here and there he strikes a deeper note, but he never forces it unduly. He is to be heartily congratulated on his latest little volume."—French.

"These 'Leaves' we may hope will be very widely scattered, for they embody some of Mr. Deane's best work. The writer has wisely ignored the suggestion, foolishly made, that he should turn to serious themes, and continues to deal lightly with light topics."—Globe.

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

DOMESDAY-BOOK AND BEYOND.

THREE ESSAYS IN THE EARLY HISTORY OF ENGLAND.

By F. W. MAITLAND, LL.D.,
Downing Professor of the Laws of England in the University of Cambridge, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law.

Royal 8vo. 15s.

ATHENÆUM.—"The advent of a new book from the pen of Professor Maitland is always an event of importance in the world of law and history.... There are points, no doubt, in the author's conclusions which are open to some question, and in a few—a very few—cases he may possibly be mistaken; but it is at least safe to say that Domesday students owe him a real debt of gratitude for his perfect and scrupulous candour."

The HISTORY of ENGLISH LAW BEFORE the TIME of EDWARD I. By Sir FREDERICK POLLOCK, Bart., M.A. LL.D., Corpus Professor of Jurisprudence in the University of Oxford, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, and F. W. MAITLAND, LL.D. 2 vols. royal 8vo. 40s.

ATHENÆUM.—"The patient and most valuable researches on which the Downing and Corpus Professors are well known to have been long engaged have borne goodly fruit in the two volumes before us... Of the scope and execution of their work we shall have to speak in detail; but we may say at once that there can be no question as to the magistral handling of their subject, the broad, luminous treatment of their materials, the frequent originality, yet unvarying soundness, of the conclusions at which they arrive."

THREE NEW WORKS ON EDUCATIONAL SCIENCE.

CHAPTERS on the AIMS and PRACTICE of TEACHING. Edited by FREDERIC SPENCER, M.A. Phil. Doc., Professor of the French Language and Literature in the University College of North Wales, formerly Chief Master on the Modern Side in the Leys School, Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 6s.

VITTORINO DA FELTRE, and OTHER HUMANIST EDUCATORS: Essays and Versions. An Introduction to the History of Classical Education. By W. H. WOODWARD, M.A., Christ Church, Oxford, Lecturer on Education in Victoria University. Crown 8vo. 6s.

THOMAS ARNOLD. His Life at Rugby, and Contributions to Education. Edited by J. J. FINDLAY, M.A., late Scholar of Wadham College, Oxford, Principal of the College of Preceptors' Training College. [Nearly ready.

BACON'S ESSAYS. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by ALFRED S. WEST, M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge, Fellow of University College, London. Extra fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d. [Pitt Press Series.

POPE'S ESSAY on CRITICISM. Edited by A. S. WEST, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. 2s. [Pitt Press Series.

EDUCATIONAL TIMES.—"Mr. West's book is not only useful as a 'text with notes'; it is also scholarly and interesting. He has worked with the true literary instinct, and his treatment of the 'Essay on Criticism' is in this respect notably above the level of what we are accustomed to in school editions of isolated works."

THE CAMBRIDGE MILTON FOR SCHOOLS.

NEW VOLUME.

COMPLETING THE EDITION OF 'PARADISE LOST.'

GUARDIAN.—"This edition will, we feel sure, long continue to be the standard school text of 'Paradise Lost.'"

PARADISE LOST. Books IX. and X. With Introduction, Notes, Glossary, and Indexes. By A. W. VERITY, M.A., sometime Scholar of Trinity College. 2s.

TEXTS AND STUDIES:

Contributions to Biblical and Patristic Literature.

Edited by J. ARMITAGE ROBINSON, D.D.

Vol. V. No. I. APOCRYPHA ANECDOTA. Second Series. By M. R. JAMES, Litt.D., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. 7s. 6d. net.

THE CAMBRIDGE GREEK TESTAMENT FOR SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

NEW VOLUME.

The EPISTLE to the PHILIPPIANS. Edited by Rev. H. C. G. MOULE, D.D. 2s. 6d.

CAMBRIDGE NATURAL SCIENCE MANUALS.

BIOLOGICAL SERIES.

General Editor: A. E. SHIPLEY, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Christ's College.

A MANUAL and DICTIONARY of the FLOWERING PLANTS and FERNS. By J. C. WILLIS, M.A., Director of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Ceylon. Crown 8vo. 2 vols. 10s. 6d.

CAMBRIDGE GEOGRAPHICAL SERIES.

General Editor: F. H. H. GUILLEMARD, M.D., late Lecturer in Geography in the University of Cambridge.

ETHNOLOGY. By A. H. Keane, F.R.G.S., late Vice-President Anthropological Institute, Corresponding Member Italian and Washington Anthropological Societies. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. Second Edition, Revised, 10s. 6d.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria-lane.

THE NATIONAL REVIEW.

MARCH, 1897. Price 2s. 6d.

Contents

1. EPISODES of the MONTH.
2. SOME HOME TRUTHS ABOUT RHODESIA. By W. E. Fairbridge (Editor of the Rhodesian Herald).
3. The DEFENCE of LONDON. By Spenser Wilkinson.
4. GIBBON. By Leslie Stephen.
5. REMINISCENCES of the OXFORD UNION. By B. R. Wise.
6. MR. CLEVELAND. By Edward P. Clark.
7. The IRISH CLAIM and SOME REPLIES. By F. B. Holland (Secretary of the Financial Relations Commission).
8. HIDDEN DANGERS of CYCLING. A Reply. By Sir Frederick Pollock, Bart.
9. JOHN BULL and SILVER. By F. J. Faraday.
10. "The OTHER GRACE." By Jane H. Findlater, Author of 'The Green Graves of Balgowrie.'
11. AMERICAN AFFAIRS.

Edward Arnold, 37, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

THE HUMANITARIAN.

Edited by VICTORIA WOODHULL MARTIN.

MARCH.

SIXPENCE.

The SOCIAL CUSTOMS of the ZULUS. An Interview with Miss Colenso.

BJORNSTJERNE BJORNSON. A Study. Robert H. Sherard.

FAMINES—ENGLAND'S and INDIA'S PERIL. Andrew Reid.

WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE in "The QUEEN'S YEAR." Charlotte Carmichael Stopes.

BENEDICT SPINOZA. W. B. Wallace.

A SCIENTIFIC VIEW of GHOSTS. W. E. Ord.

AFFINITIES. A Play. Zula Maud Woodhull.

Also Articles on 'The Future of the Spiritual Man'; Mr. Lloyd Morgan's 'Habit and Instinct'; and other subjects of interest.

London: Hutchinson & Co. Paternoster-row.

Crown 8vo. with 40 Woodcuts, price 3s. 6d.

A FEW CHAPTERS in ASTRONOMY. By CLAUDIUS KENNEDY, M.A.

Chap. 1. On a Visual Illusion affecting certain Astronomical Phenomena. 2. The Effect of the Earth's Rotation on certain Moving Bodies. 3. Deviation of Projectiles from the Rotation of the Earth. 4. Foucault's Pendulum. 5. On the Position of the Dynamical High Tide relatively to the Celestial Tide-Producing Body. 6. The Horizontal Pendulum. 7. The Moon's Variation. 8. The Moon's Parallactic Inequality.

"This gives some ingenious and intelligible explanations of various well-known phenomena which are not treated of fully in the usual text-books."—Observatory, February, 1895.

"The idea of this book is a very good one.....This little work will be found of great assistance to students of mathematical astronomy, and we can strongly recommend it to their attention."

Philosophical Magazine, March, 1895.

"In these 150 pages are discussed some of the numerous problems in astronomy, and these are handled in such a manner as to make them full of interest both for the general reader and for the student....As a supplement to the ordinary text-books on astronomy, this small volume will be found especially useful."—Nature, March 21, 1895.

"Several subjects, which most text-books necessarily ignore or dismiss with a few paragraphs, are here treated very copiously and instructively, e.g., the deviation of projectiles caused by the rotation of the earth."—American Journal of Science, June, 1895.

"A valuable work, which deserves to be better known."—CHARLES DAVISON, D.Sc., Sec. of the Brit. Assoc. Committee, on "Earth Tremors" in Natural Science, April, 1896.

Taylor & Francis, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.

Made in Three Sizes.

10s. 6d., 16s. 6d., and 25s. each, post free.

Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen.

A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce. We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.

Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS

(TRAVELLING, RIDING, CYCLING, HUNTING, SHOOTING, &c.),

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY AND WORKMEN'S ACCIDENTS,

INSURED AGAINST BY THE

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.

Established 1849.

Capital £1,000,000. Claims paid £3,750,000.

64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing.

EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES are sold in Tins 7½d. and 1s. 1½d., labelled "James Epps & Co., Limited, Homœopathic Chemists, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street, London."

WM. & GEO. LAW.

COFFEE—

SUGAR—

TEA.

104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION.

And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORDS MAGNESIA.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

NOTICE.—The Fourteenth Edition of Field-Marshal LORD ROBERTS'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY is now ready, in Two Volumes, demy 8vo. 36s.

STANDARD WORKS.

HISTORY.

BY DR. MOMMSEN.

The HISTORY of ROME, from the Earliest Times to the Period of its Decline. By Professor THEODOR MOMMSEN. Translated by WILLIAM PURDIE DICKSON, D.D. LL.D., Professor of Divinity in the University of Glasgow. A New and Cheaper Edition, Revised, and embodying all the most recent Alterations and Additions made by Dr. Mommsen. In 5 vols. crown 8vo. (each sold separately, 7*s.* 6*d.*), 37*s.* 6*d.*

Also an ABRIDGED EDITION, for the use of Schools and Colleges. By C. BRYANS and F. J. R. HENDY. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

The HISTORY of the ROMAN PROVINCES, from the Time of Cæsar to that of Diocletian. By Professor MOMMSEN. Translated by Dr. P. W. DICKSON. 2 vols. demy 8vo. with 10 Maps, 36*s.*

BY DR. CURTIUS.

The HISTORY of GREECE, from the Earliest Time down to 337 B.C. From the German of His Excellency Professor ERNST CURTIUS, Privy Councillor, Rector of the University of Berlin. By A. W. WARD, M.A. 5 vols. demy 8vo. each Volume separarately, 18*s.* [Vols. I. and III. reprinting.

BY PROFESSOR GINDELY.

The HISTORY of the THIRTY YEARS' WAR. By ANTON GINDELY. Translated by Professor ANDREW TEN BROEK. 2 vols. large crown 8vo. with Maps and Illustrations, 24*s.*

BY PROFESSOR CREASY.

The FIFTEEN DECISIVE BATTLES of the WORLD. Marathon, B.C. 490—Defeat of the Athenians at Syracuse, B.C. 413—Arbela, B.C. 331—The Metaurus, B.C. 207—Defeat of Varus, A.D. 9—Chalons, A.D. 451—Tours, A.D. 732—Hastings, A.D. 1066—Orleans, A.D. 1429—The Spanish Armada, A.D. 1588—Blenheim, A.D. 1704—Pultowa, A.D. 1709—Saratoga, A.D. 1777—Valmy, A.D. 1792—Waterloo, A.D. 1815. By Sir EDWARD CREASY, late Chief Justice of Ceylon. Thirty-seventh Edition. With Plans. Crown 8vo. canvas boards, 1*s.* 4*d.*; in ornamental cloth binding, with red edges, 2*s.* Also a LIBRARY EDITION, 8vo. with Plans, 7*s.* 6*d.*

BY MR. JAMES.

The NAVAL HISTORY of GREAT BRITAIN, from the Declaration of War by France in 1793 to the Accession of George IV. By WILLIAM JAMES. With a Continuation of the History to the Battle of Navarino, by Capt. CHAMIER. 6 vols. crown 8vo. with 12 Portraits on Steel, 42*s.*

BY M. THIERS.

The HISTORY of the GREAT FRENCH REVOLUTION, 1789–1801. By ADOLPHE THIERS. Translated by FREDERICK SHOBERL. With 50 fine Engravings and Portraits of the most Eminent Personages engaged in the Revolution, engraved by W. Greatbach. A New and Revised Edition. In 5 vols. demy 8vo. 45*s.*

LETTERS.

THE FOURTH EARL OF ORFORD.

The LETTERS of HORACE WALPOLE. Edited by PETER CUNNINGHAM, F.S.A. 9 vols. demy 8vo. with 50 Illustrations on Steel, 5*l.* 5*s.* Hand-made Paper Edition, with 67 Illustrations on Steel, cloth, 10*l.* 10*s.*; vellum, 12*l.* 12*s.*

MR. FITZGERALD'S LETTERS.

LETTERS of EDWARD FITZGERALD to FANNY KEMBLE (1871–1883). Edited by WILLIAM ALDIS WRIGHT, D.C.L. Small crown 8vo. with Portraits of Mrs. Kemble and Edward Fitzgerald engraved on Steel, 6*s.*

JANE AUSTEN.

UNPUBLISHED LETTERS of JANE AUSTEN. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by the late Lord BRABOURNE. 2 vols. large crown 8vo. with Frontispieces, 24*s.*

ART.

BY WILLIAM POWELL FRITH, R.A.

REMINISCENCES of W. P. FRITH, R.A. Eighth Edition. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

FURTHER REMINISCENCES. Third Edition. 8vo. with Portrait, 15*s.*

BY SIDNEY COOPER, R.A.

MY LIFE. By THOMAS SIDNEY COOPER, R.A. Cr. 8vo. with Portrait, 6*s.*

BY ALFRED T. STORY.

The LIFE of JOHN LINNELL. By ALFRED T. STORY. Demy 8vo. with Illustrations, 28*s.*

BY JOHN TIMBS, F.S.A.

The LIVES of PAINTERS: Hogarth, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Gainsborough, Fuseli, Sir Thomas Lawrence, Turner. By JOHN TIMBS, F.S.A. Crown 8vo. with Portraits, 6*s.*

EDITED BY MR. GOSSE.

NOLLEKENS and his TIMES. By JOHN THOMAS SMITH, formerly Keeper of the Prints in the British Museum. With an Essay on Georgian Sculpture and a Note on J. T. Smith by EDMUND GOSSE. Demy 8vo. with a Portrait of Nollekens by Jackson, and a List of his Works, 15*s.*

MUSIC.

NOW READY.

MY MUSICAL RECOLLECTIONS. By WILHELM KUHE. In 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Portraits and Autographs, 14*s.*

BY F. J. CROWEST.

The STORY of BRITISH MUSIC, from the Earliest Times to the Tudor Period. By FREDERICK JAMES CROWEST, Author of 'The Great Tone Poets,' 'Musical Anecdotes,' &c. Demy 8vo. with numerous Illustrations, 15*s.*

[In the press.

The GREAT TONE POETS: Brief Memoirs of the Greater Composers—Bach, Handel, Gluck, Haydn, Mozart, Spohr, Beethoven, Weber, Rossini, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Schumann, &c. By FREDERICK CROWEST. Seventh Edition. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

BIOGRAPHY.

BY DEAN HOOK.

LIVES of the ARCHBISHOPS of CANTERBURY, from ST. AUGUSTINE to JUXON. By the Very Rev. WALTER FARQUHAR HOOK, D.D., Dean of Chichester. Demy 8vo. The following Volumes sold separately as shown:—Vol. I. 15*s.*; Vol. II. 15*s.*; Vol. V. 15*s.*; Vols. VI. and VII. 30*s.*; Vol. VIII. 15*s.*; Vol. IX. 15*s.*; Vol. X. 15*s.*; Vol. XI. 15*s.*; Vol. XII. 15*s.*

MR. W. FRASER RAE'S BIOGRAPHY OF

RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN: including much Information derived from New Sources. With an Introduction by Sheridan's Great-Grandson, the MARQUESS of DUFFERIN and AVA, K.P. G.C.B. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. with Portraits and other Illustrations, 26*s.*

BY M. DE BOURRIENNE.

MEMOIRS of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. By LOUIS ANTOINE FAUVELET DE BOURRIENNE, his Private Secretary. Edited, with Preface, Supplementary Chapters, and Notes, by Colonel R. W. PHIPPS, late Royal Artillery. 4 vols. crown 8vo. with Illustrations, 36*s.*

BY FIELD-MARSHAL LORD WOLSELEY.

The LIFE of JOHN CHURCHILL, FIRST DUKE of MARLBOROUGH. Vols. I. and II.: To the Accession of Queen Anne. By Field-Marshal Viscount WOLSELEY, K.P. G.C.B. G.C.M.G. Demy 8vo. With Portraits of the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough, James II., William III., the Duke of Monmouth, Duchess of Cleveland, and other Illustrations or Plans. Fourth Edition. 32*s.*

BY THE DUKE OF TARENTUM.

The RECOLLECTIONS of MARSHAL MACDONALD, during the Wars of the First Napoleon. Translated by STEPHEN LOUIS SIMEON. A New Edition, with Notes, Portrait, and Engraving of Courcelles. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

BY M. GUIZOT.

The LIFE of OLIVER CROMWELL. From the French of M. GUIZOT, by Sir ANDREW SCOBLE, Q.C. Ninth Edition, with 4 Portraits. Cr. 8vo. 6*s.*

"M. Guizot has unravelled Cromwell's character with singular skill. No one, in our opinion, has drawn his portrait with equal truth."—Quarterly Review.

BY M. MIGNET.

The LIFE of MARY, QUEEN of SCOTS. From the French of M. MIGNET, by Sir ANDREW SCOBLE, Q.C. Seventh Edition, with 2 Portraits. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

BY MADAME CAMPAN.

The LIFE of MARIE ANTOINETTE. By JEANNE LOUISE HENRIETTE CAMPAN, First Lady-in-Waiting. With Memoir of Madame Campan by MM. BARRIÈRE and MAIGNE. New and Revised Edition, with Additional Notes and Portrait. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

TRAVEL AND NATURAL HISTORY.

BY MR. SELOUS.

A HUNTER'S WANDERINGS in AFRICA: Nine Years amongst the Game of the Far Interior of South Africa, with Full Notes upon the Natural History and Present Distribution of all the Large Mammalia, and including Accounts of Explorations beyond the Zambesi, on the Chobé, and in the Matabele and Mashuna Countries. By FREDERICK COURTENAY SELOUS. With Map and 19 Full-Page Illustrations by Smit and Whymper. Fourth Edition. Demy 8vo. 18*s.*

BY MR. BALDWIN.

AFRICAN HUNTING and ADVENTURE from NATAL to the ZAMBESI, including Lake Ngami, the Kalahari Desert, &c., from 1852 to 1860. By WILLIAM CHARLES BALDWIN, F.R.G.S. With numerous Illustrations by Joseph Wolf and J. B. Zwecker. A Third and Cheaper Edition, with Portrait of the Author and Map. Demy 8vo. 18*s.*

BY FRANK BUCKLAND.

CURIOSITIES of NATURAL HISTORY. By FRANCIS TREVELYAN BUCKLAND, late Her Majesty's Inspector of Fisheries. Popular Edition, with a few Illustrations. Four Series, each separately, small 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

BY MAJOR FISHER.

OUTDOOR LIFE in ENGLAND. By ARTHUR T. FISHER, Major late 21st Hussars, Author of 'Through the Stable and Saddle Room,' 'Rod and River,' &c. Demy 8vo. 18*s.*

BY MR. DIXON.

OUR RARER BIRDS. By CHARLES DIXON, Author of 'Rural Bird Life.' With numerous Illustrations by Charles Whymper. Demy 8vo. 14*s.*

FICTION.

BY JANE AUSTEN.

The STORIES of JANE AUSTEN. The only Complete Edition. In 6 vols. crown 8vo. 6*s.* each.

BY T. L. PEACOCK.

The STORIES of THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK: including his Fugitive Pieces, Poems, Criticisms, &c. Edited by Sir HENRY COLE, K.C.B. With a Preface by LORD HOUGHTON, and a Biographical Sketch by EDITH NICOLLS. In 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31*s.* 6*d.*

BY MISS FERRIER.

The STORIES of SUSAN EDMONSTONE FERRIER. In 6 vols. small crown 8vo. 30*s.*

BY RHODA BROUGHTON.

The STORIES of RHODA BROUGHTON. In 13 vols. crown 8vo. 6*s.* each.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,

Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, March 6, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3620. SATURDAY, MARCH 13, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

BRITISH ARCHÆOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.—The EIGHTH MEETING of the SESSION will be held at 32, Sackville-street, Piccadilly, W., on WEDNESDAY, March 17, at 8 P.M., when Antiquities will be exhibited, and the following Papers read:—
1. 'The Old Church and Glass at Mead Windermere,' by Mrs. COLLIER.
2. 'On Mead and Mead Vessels,' by H. SYER CUMING, Esq., F.S.A. (Scot.).
GEO. PATRICK, A.R.I.B.A., Hon. Sec.

ROYAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY.
(Incorporated by Royal Charter.)
Patron—HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
President—The Right Hon. Sir M. E. GRANT-DUFF, G.C.S.I.
THURSDAY, March 18, 5 P.M., at the Museum of Practical Geology, Jermyn-street, S.W., the following Paper will be read:—'Goree, a Lost Possession of England,' by Mr. W. FREWEN LORD.
HUBERT HALL, Director and Hon. Secretary.
115, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

THE FOLK-LORE SOCIETY.
The NEXT EVENING MEETING of the Society will be held at 22, ALBEMARLE-STREET, PICCADILLY, on TUESDAY, March 16, at 8 P.M., when Papers will be read—
(a) By Mr. R. E. DENNETT 'On the Death and Burial of the Fiote (French Congo)'; and
(b) By Miss M. KINGSLEY 'On the Fetish View of the Human Soul.'
Miss KINGSLEY will also exhibit some Fan Charms, and Mr. P. MANNING will exhibit a number of objects illustrating some Oxfordshire Festivals, and will read a short Explanatory Paper.
F. A. MILNE, Secretary.
11, Old-square, Lincoln's Inn.

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTER-ETCHERS.—ANNUAL EXHIBITION of the Society NOW OPEN at the Society's Gallery, No. 5A, Pall Mall East, from 10 to 6.
A. STEWART, Secretary.

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.
PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C.,
Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

PALL MALL CLUB.
(Established 1893.)
The Committee propose (prior to entering on New and Larger Premises) to elect FIVE HUNDRED NEW TOWN MEMBERS and ONE THOUSAND NEW COUNTRY MEMBERS at the Original Subscription of 3l. 3s. and 1l. 1s. per annum respectively.
The Subscription for Future Members will then be raised to 5l. 5s. (Town) and 2l. 2s. (Country).
For further particulars apply to the HON. SECRETARY, Pall Mall Club Offices, 60, Haymarket, S.W.

THE SESAME CLUB, for Ladies and Gentlemen, is of the usual character of Social Clubs. It is also intended as a centre for those interested in Literature, Science, Art, and especially in improved methods of Education, but is pledged to no religious, social, or political party.
The Club, which was founded in 1895, will move at Easter to 29, DOVER-STREET, PICCADILLY, where a larger house, with fine Reception-Rooms (and Bed-Rooms for accommodation of Ladies) has been secured.
The SESAME is not a commercial speculation, and is under the management of a Committee, consisting of an equal number of Men and Women, in whom is vested the election of Members. No Entrance Fee as yet. Special terms for Country Members.—Apply to THE SECRETARY, 171, Victoria-street, S.W.

WANTED, EASY LITERARY WORK for spare hours—CANTAB., care of A. J. Isard, Esq., Solicitor, 14, Queen-street, Cheapside, E.C.

GOOD WRITER, Bookkeeper, fluent German (acquired in Germany), some French, SEEKS WORK AT HOME or position as Private Secretary.—Write STAR, 295, Strand, London.

MUSICAL CRITIC can supply Weekly or Fortnightly LONDON LETTER to Provincial or Colonial Journal.—Address BATON, care of Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, W.

A PROFESSIONAL MAN, who is a Graduate of London University, will be glad of LITERARY OCCUPATION for spare hours.—Address B. A., Fairlight, Gleneldon-road, Streatham, S.W.

EXPERIENCED SCIENCE MISTRESS, B.Sc. London, REQUIRES WORK either in Schools or with Private Pupils. Botany, Zoology and Physiology, Geology and Physical Geography, Mathematics, Physics, Elementary Chemistry.—MISS ADA RAISIN, 41, Drakefell-road, Nunhead, S.E.

OFFICE and SERVICES of intelligent REPRESENTATIVE OFFERED genuine Association or Enterprise—Philanthropic, Literary, Commercial, or Professional—by a business-like Woman having Secretarial and Journalistic experience. N.B. Services of Gentleman Representative when needed.—Particulars, in confidence, to CO-OPERATION, Box 500, Willing's, 125, Strand.

INDIA OFFICE, February 25, 1897.
A PROFESSOR of NATURAL SCIENCE is REQUIRED for the THOMASON ENGINEERING COLLEGE, KURKI, in the North-West Provinces of India. He should be a Practical Electrical Engineer, and qualified to lecture in and teach Electricity, Magnetism, Heat, Sound, Light, and the Elements of Chemistry, Geology, and Mineralogy. He should understand Telegraph Engineering.
The salary will be Rupees 500 a month in the first year, rising by Rs. 50 a year to Rs. 700. If retained on termination of five years' agreement salary Rs. 750 a month rising to Rs. 1,000, with benefit of Leave and Pension Rules from date of first appointment.
Applications should be addressed to the Secretary, Judicial and Public Department, India Office, London, not later than the end of March.
A. GODLEY, Under-Secretary of State for India.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE (for LADIES), 43 and 45, Harley-street.
The ARNOTT PROFESSORSHIP of NATURAL PHILOSOPHY will SHORTLY BECOME VACANT.
For particulars apply to the LADY RESIDENT.

MALE TRAINING COLLEGE (Undenominational), KINGSTON, JAMAICA.—PRINCIPAL and VICE-PRINCIPAL WANTED for JANUARY 1, 1898. Salaries 350l. (rising to 400l.), with house, lights, and medical attendance.—Apply to REV. J. W. GEDGE, 29, Victoria Park-square, E.

ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE, Cooper's Hill, Staines.—The Course of Study is arranged to fit an Engineer for Employment in Europe, India, and the Colonies. About 40 Students will be admitted in September, 1897. The Secretary of State will offer them for Competition Twelve Appointments as Assistant Engineers in the Public Works Department, and Three Appointments as Assistant Superintendents in the Telegraph Department.—For particulars apply to the SECRETARY, at the College.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

THE SCHOOL of LITERARY ART. Conducted by FLORENCE MARRYAT. For instruction in Composing and Writing Fiction, Journalism, and the Drama.—Apply to SECRETARY, 26, Abercorn-place, N.W.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BREVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

A GENTLEMAN of literary taste REQUIRED in a well-established COUNTRY BUSINESS. Must invest 1,500l., or be able to introduce this amount by subscription for Shares in Company. Exceptional and genuine opening. Salary and profits about 400l. Investment can be doubled.
MR. WATT, Partnership Agent, 33, Paternoster-row, E.C.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, 1d. per folio of 72 words. References to Authors.—Miss GLADDING, 23, Lansdowne-gardens, South Lambeth, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—1s. per 1,000 words. Large quantities by arrangement. Examination Questions Reduplicated. Dramatic Work advised upon (and arranged) by experienced S.M.—FAUCIT DARLISON, 88, Iverson-road, West Hampstead, N.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses E. B. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

THE EXCEL TYPE-WRITING CO.,
49, BROAD-STREET HOUSE, OLD BROAD-STREET,
WANTS YOUR TYPE-WRITING.
SPECIAL TERMS TO AUTHORS, LITTÉRATEURS, AND PLAYWRIGHTS.

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters, Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing.
INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10d. per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6690. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W., Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—
AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.
And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

NORTHERN NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE, KENDAL.

LITERARY AGENTS.
FICTION, SERIES OF ARTICLES, WEEKLY SERVICES.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MSS. in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

9, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.
MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS. ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY, Established 1879. Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

TO AUTHORS.—Messrs. DIGBY, LONG & CO. (Publishers of 'The Author's Manual,' 3s. 6d. net, Eighth Edition), INVITE AUTHORS to FORWARD their MSS. (Fiction, Travel, Poetry, &c.) for prompt consideration.—Address 18, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

SOCIETY of AUTHORS.—LITERARY PROPERTY.—The Public is urgently warned against answering advertisements inviting MSS., or offering to place MSS., without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society. By order, G. HERBERT THRING, Secretary.
4, Portugal-street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.
N.B.—The AUTHOR, the organ of the Society, is published monthly, price 6d., by HORACE COX, Bream's-buildings, E.C.

Catalogues.
ELLIS & ELVEY, Dealers in Old and Rare Books, Manuscripts, and Engravings.
NEW CATALOGUE (No. 85) OF CHOICE BOOKS AND MANUSCRIPTS,
Including a Remarkable Collection of RARE BOOKS on MUSIC,
now ready, post free, Sixpence.
29, New Bond-street, London, W.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,
14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.
CATALOGUES on application.

FOREIGN BOOKS and PERIODICALS promptly supplied on moderate terms.
CATALOGUES on application.
DULAU & CO. 37, SOHO-SQUARE.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth; Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. Catalogues issued and sent post free on application. Books bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

PLAYBILLS of the LONDON and PROVINCIAL THEATRES, 1781-1870.—CATALOGUE of a COLLECTION ON SALE by FRANCIS EDWARDS, Bookseller, 83, High-street, Marylebone, London, W., gratis.
CLEARANCE CATALOGUE of 5,000 Volumes, Part II., now ready.

ALL OUT-OF-PRINT BOOKS speedily procured. Acknowledged the most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants to BAKER'S Great Bookshop, Birmingham.—Books Bought, Lent, or Exchanged.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD, (The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)
Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each. 5s. per dozen, ruled or plain.

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY.

FORD MADOX BROWN.
DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI.
FREDERIC J. SHIELDS.

A Series of AUTOTYPE REPRODUCTIONS of the Chief Works of these Masters is now ON VIEW at the GRAFTON GALLERIES. They include the chief Cartoons made by Ford Madox Brown for stained glass his 'Cordelia's Portion' 'English Boy,' 'Shakespeare,' 'Homer,' &c.; Rossetti's 'Beata Beatrix,' 'Lamp of Memory,' 'Monna Rosa,' 'Proserpine,' 'The Annunciation,' 'The Blessed Damozel,' 'Studies for the Oxford Frescoes,' &c

Particulars on application.

A NEW PORTRAIT OF ROBERT BROWNING.
Painted by D. G. ROSSETTI in 1855. REPRODUCED in AUTOGRAVURE from the Original in the possession of C. Fairfax Murray, Esq. Size of work, 4¾ by 4¼ inches. Proofs on Vellum, 21s.; on Japanese, 10s. 6d.; Prints, 5s.

THE WEST FRONT OF PETERBOROUGH CATHEDRAL.
From a Negative specially taken before the erection of the scaffolding by R. G. SCRIVEN, F.S.I. Printed in Sepia or warm black, 18 by 15 inches, price 10s. 6d.

G. F. WATTS, R.A.
A large Series of the Chief Works of this Master, including the great Allegorical Designs and many others.

Full particulars on application.

FRENCH PAINTERS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
PERMANENT CARBON REPRODUCTIONS of WORKS by JEAN FRANÇOIS MILLET, THÉODORE ROUSSEAU, JEAN BAPTISTE COROT, DAUBIGNY, JULES BRETON, DAGNAN BOUVERET, W. BOUGUEREAU, MEISSONIER, CAROLUS-DURAN, CABANEL, DEBAT-PONSAN, E. ADAN, &c., in various sizes.

THE ENGLISH SCHOOL OF LANDSCAPE PAINTING.
Including the Chief Works of JOHN CONSTABLE, R.A., J. M. W. TURNER, R.A., THOMAS GAINSBOROUGH, R.A., R. P. BONINGTON, OLD CROME, W. J. MÜLLER, DAVID COX, GIRTIN, SAMUEL PROUT, &c.

ABRIDGED CATALOGUES ON APPLICATION.

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,
74 NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

(nearly opposite the National Gallery).

Inspection invited.

REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7l. 10s.
[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5l. 5s.

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
Books can be exchanged at the residences of Subscribers in London by the Library Messengers.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S FOREIGN LIBRARY.
All the Best Works in French, German, Italian, and Spanish are in circulation.

CATALOGUES of English or Foreign Books, 1s. 6d. each.

Prospectuses and Clearance Lists of Books on Sale, postage free.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, Limited,
30 to 34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, London.

BRANCH OFFICES:—
241, Brompton-road; and 48, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. (Mansion House End).

Also 10–12, Barton Arcade, Manchester.

CHOICE OLD ENGRAVINGS in COLOURS, Rare Sporting Prints, Theatrical and other Portraits, Americana, Scarce Books, Autographs, Drawings, &c., ON SALE by FRANK T. SABIN, 118, Shaftesbury-avenue, W.

TWELVE MORTGAGE DEBENTURE BONDS and FIFTY SHARES in KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO., Limited and Reduced, FOR SALE, price 1,250l., or offers.—Apply MR. GEORGE REDWAY, 9, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, London.

TO LITERARY MEN and others.—Experienced M.D. OFFERS HOME to RESIDENT PATIENT or BOARDER. Good house in sheltered part of Harrogate. Hunting, Golf, Fishing, &c. Special advantages for Photography, and exceptionally good Library. No children. Close to Baths and Wells. References given and required.—Apply M.D., Social and Literary Club, Prospect Hotel, Harrogate.

WORCESTERSHIRE, six miles from Malvern.—PHYSICIAN, married, has a VACANCY for LADY or GENTLEMAN, Mental, Nervous, or Spinal Disease. Large Garden, Conservatory, Carriage, Bath Chair. Terms from 200 Guineas per annum.—Address VICTOR, M.D., care of Willing's, 162, Piccadilly.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c.; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS. South aspect, good view, three minutes' walk from the town and common.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

Sales by Auction.

MESSRS. HODGSON beg to announce the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C. (commencing at 1 o'clock each day):—

On WEDNESDAY, March 17, valuable LAW BOOKS, including the LIBRARIES of TWO BARRISTERS, comprising the New Law Reports, 1865-6 and 1878—Law Times and Reports, New Series, 177 vols.—Moore's Privy Council Cases, 24 vols.—House of Lords Cases, by Dow and C. Clark, 18 vols.—Beavan's Reports, 36 vols., and other Modern Equity Cases—Irish Reports, 54 vols.—Law Journal Reports—Year-Books by Maynard, 11 vols.—good Selection of Modern Practical Works and Books of Reference.

On THURSDAY, March 18, and Following Day, DUPLICATES from the LIBRARY of a NOBLEMAN, and other Properties, comprising Martial and Naval Achievements, 2 vols.—Chronicles of Holinshed, Grafton, &c., 12 vols.—Evelyn's Works, 5 vols.—Heiss Médailles de la Renaissance, 3 vols.—Hefner-Alteneck, Ironwork of the Middle Ages—Sheraton's Cabinet-Maker—Glasse's Cookery—Bewick's Works, 5 vols.—Badminton Library, 8 vols. Large Paper—Burton's Arabian Nights, 16 vols.—Boccaccio's Decameron, 4 vols.—La Fontaine's Tales, 2 vols.—Wordsworth's Works, 11 vols.—Productions of the Kelmscott Press—The Border Waverley Novels, 48 vols. Large Paper—Dickens's Works, Library Edition and Edition de Luxe, 30 vols.—Burns's Poems, &c., 4 vols.—Dyce's Shakespeare, 9 vols.—Knight's Portraits, 7 vols.—Smith's Mezzo-Portraits, 5 vols.—Modern Artists, Proofs—Heidelon's Gallery of Fashion, 6 vols. in 3, and others on Costume—Books relating to Napoleon—French Tracts and Plays—Books of Travel—Early Manuscripts, &c.

[To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

THE MONTAGU COLLECTION OF COINS.
Final Portion of the Greek and Roman Series.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No 13 Wellington-street Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, March 15, and Four Following Days, the FINAL PORTION of the GREEK SERIES, together with a Small Series of Roman, Silver, and Bronze Coins and Medallions of the late H. MONTAGU, Esq.

May be viewed. Catalogues, illustrated with Autotype Plates, may be had, price 5s. each.

The Valuable Library of the late JAMES PARLANE, Esq., J.P., of Rusholme, Manchester.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, by order of the Executors, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on SATURDAY, March 20, and MONDAY, March 22, at 1 o'clock precisely, the VALUABLE LIBRARY of the late JAMES PARLANE, Esq., J.P., of Appleby Lodge, Rusholme, Manchester, including Rare Works on the Scots Colony at Darien—an extensive Collection of Civil War Tracts—Valuable Tracts and Books relating to Scotland—Archæological Publications—First Editions of Works by Defoe—Gaelic and Scottish Dictionaries—Old Tracts on Theology—Black-Letter Bibles—Reprints of Rare Books &c., and comprising Burns's Poems, First Edinburgh Edition, 1787, Third Edition, 1787, Second Edinburgh Edition, 1793—Froude's History of England, 10 vols.—Dictionarium Scoto-Celticum, 2 vols.—Jamieson's Scottish Dictionary, with Supplement, 5 vols.—Swift's Gulliver's Travels, 2 vols., First Edition, &c. Also the REMAINING PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late Sir G. W. DASENT, D.C.L., &c., including Rare Works of Icelandic Literature, Sagas, Folk-lore, &c., many of which are Translated and Edited by Sir G. W. Dasent—Thackeray's The Snob and the Gownsman—Swinburne's Atalanta in Calydon, First Edition—Black-Letter Books, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Etchings, Oil Paintings, and Water-Colour Drawings of the late W. J. GALLOWAY, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION (by order of the Executors), at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 23, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of ETCHINGS, OIL PAINTINGS, and WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS, the Property of the late W. J. GALLOWAY, of Islington, comprising Etchings by Rajon, Waltner, Brunet Debaines, F. Seymour Haden, H. Herkomer, R. Macbeth, C. Méryon, J. F. Millet, S. Palmer, &c.; Drawings by H. Herkomer, S. Prout, Sir J. E. Millais, Neuhuys, W. Hunt, Varley, T. B. Hardy, R. W. Macbeth, De Wint, Cattermole, J. M. N. Whistler, Sir E. Burne-Jones, &c.; Paintings by Joseph and Albert Neuhuys, W. Maris, T. Lloyd, T. Hines, Lord Leighton, and others.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Drawings, the Property of a well-known Amateur and the Collection of Engravings of JOSHUA WILSON, Esq., of Tunbridge Wells.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 24, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, valuable DRAWINGS, the Property of a well-known AMATEUR, comprising fine Examples by Copley Fielding, David Cox, T. Girtin, Cruikshank, Rowlandson, Bartolozzi, James Hearne, and other Masters of the English Schools; also valuable ENGRAVINGS, including the Collection of JOSHUA WILSON, Esq., of Tunbridge Wells, comprising Works by Bartolozzi, Kauffmann, Cipriani, Ward, S. Reynolds, Morland, Cousins, V. Green, J. Smith, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Coins and Medals of the late Rev. THOMAS CALVERT, of Sandysike, Cumberland.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION (by order of the Executors), at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, March 26, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of COINS and MEDALS of the late Rev. THOMAS CALVERT, M.A., F.S.A., of Sandysike, Cumberland, including the following: Greek Silver, Roman and Byzantine Gold, Roman Brass and Denarii—an important series of Mohammedan Coins in Gold, Silver, and Copper—British Anglo-Saxon, and English, Colonial, and Foreign Coins in Gold and Silver—a few War and other Medals, including a rare Dublin Regimental, 1780, &c.—Persian Talisman, Seals, Gems, &c.—Coin Cabinets and Numismatic Books.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Portion of the Library of the late F. W. SMITH, Esq., of Belfast.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 30, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS, including the Property of G. B. WORTHINGTON, Esq., comprising Sporting Works—Voyages—Topography, &c., the Property of a LADY, consisting of Biographical Works—Illustrated Books—Travels—Galleries—Fine-Art and Scientific Publications—Dictionaries &c., a PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late F. W. SMITH, Esq., of Belfast, consisting chiefly of French and Italian Works, the Property of an AUSTRIAN NOBLEMAN, comprising scarce Sporting Works, the Property of J. C. CROWDY, Esq., consisting of the Writings of Dickens, Surtees, Thackeray, and others, Caricatures by Heath &c., and other Properties, in which will be found Works by Swinburne, R. L. Stevenson, Doyle, Bewick, Geo. Meredith, Audsley, and Bowes, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Engravings by Masters of the English School, the Property of the Right Hon. the EARL of CRAWFORD.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 31, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS, including Fancy Subjects by Masters of the English School, some finely printed in Colours, comprising Master Philip Power and the Age of Innocence, both after Sir Joshua Reynolds—and Thoughts on Matrimony after J. R. Smith, all in the finest condition, the Property of the Right Hon. the EARL of CRAWFORD, also other Properties, comprising Mezzotint Portraits after Sir J. Reynolds, &c.—the 'Cries of London,' after Wheatley—Lady Kenyon, after Hoppner—Miss Farren, after Sir T. Lawrence—and others; also the Series of Six Original Water-Colour Drawings by R. Caldecott illustrating 'The Mad Dog,' by Oliver Goldsmith, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

MONDAY NEXT.

The Valuable Collection of Shells formed by the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq., removed from Condover Hall, Shrewsbury, including many Fine and Rare Species, especially in Murex, Conus, Voluta, Pecten, and Spondylus, &c.; also the Beautiful Ebonized Plate-Glass Cases in which they were contained.

MR. J. C. STEVENS has received instructions to SELL the above by AUCTION at his Great Rooms, 38 King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY NEXT, March 15, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the Saturday prior 12 till 3 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

FRIDAY NEXT.—Important Sale.

Expensive Photographic Apparatus, including first-class Camera Sets, with all the latest fittings; Lenses in many sizes, Shutters, Stands, Cases, Plates, &c.; Optical Goods, Microscopes, Opera Glasses, Electrical Apparatus, Books, Equatorial and other Telescopes, Cooke's Micrometer, Transit Instrument, Sidereal Chronometer, Theodolite, &c.; also Four Type Registering and Advertising Cash Tills, &c., and Miscellaneous Property.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, March 19, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, March 15, the COLLECTION of PORCELAIN, PLATE, and DECORATIVE OBJECTS of the late Sir CHARLES BOOTH, Bart.; and SHERATON, PAINTED and INLAID SATINWOOD FURNITURE, CHIPPENDALE and MAHOGANY FURNITURE, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

On MONDAY, March 15, and Following Days, the COLLECTION of the ENGRAVED WORKS of Sir JOSHUA REYNOLDS, formed by FREDERIC, Third EARL of BESSBOROUGH, the Property of the Hon. ASHLEY PONSONBY.

On THURSDAY, March 18, COLLECTION of PORCELAIN and OLD ENGLISH FURNITURE of a LADY, deceased, and DECORATIVE FURNITURE, TAPESTRY, and OBJECTS of ART from numerous sources.

On FRIDAY, March 19, the REMAINING WORKS of the late G. A. FRIPP, R.W.S.

On SATURDAY, March 20, the COLLECTIONS of MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of J. NUTTALL, Esq., and of the late J. A. BACCHUS, Esq.

On MONDAY, March 22, the COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of JOHN BAYLISS, Esq.

On TUESDAY, March 23, and Following Days, the COLLECTION of the WORKS of FRANCIS BARTOLOZZI, R.A., formed by FREDERIC, Third EARL of BESSBOROUGH, the Property of the Hon. ASHLEY PONSONBY.

On FRIDAY, March 26, PORCELAIN, DECORATIVE OBJECTS, and OLD ENGLISH SILVER of the late HENRY JENKINS, Esq.

On SATURDAY, March 27, the COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of the late HENRY JENKINS, Esq.

On MONDAY, March 29, and Following Days, the COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS after Sir E. LANDSEER of Sir HUMPHREY DE TRAFFORD, Bart.

On THURSDAY, April 1, the CONDOVER HALL LIBRARY of the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq.

On SATURDAY, April 3, the REMAINING WORKS of the late HAMILTON MACALLUM.

Postage Stamps.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 16, and Following Day, at half-past 5 o'clock precisely, rare BRITISH, FOREIGN, and COLONIAL POSTAGE STAMPS.

Catalogues may be had on receipt of stamp.

Library of the late Admiral BAUGH (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 17, and Two Following Days, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Admiral BAUGH, and other Properties, amongst which will be found Punch, Complete Set—Henry Irving Shakespeare, 8 vols.—Fielding and Thackeray's Works, Édition de Luxe—George Eliot's Works—Morris's Views of Seats—Rogers's Italy, Large Paper—Bourke's History of White's, 2 vols.—English Dance of Death—Gillray's Works—Lacroix's Works—Whitaker's Leeds and Craven—Brown's Annals of Newark—Whymper's Scrambles and Great Andes—Hoare's Ancient Wiltshire—Dickens's Works, Original Editions, bound in 13 vols. calf gilt—Horæ, printed upon vellum, 1515—Pasquine in a Traunce, 1584—Palmerin d'Oliva, The Mirrour of Nobilitie—Blake's Silver Drops, &c.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

Miscellaneous Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, March 25, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY, comprising China—fine old Cut Glass—Miniatures—Coins and Medallions—old and modern Silver—Sheffield and other Plate—and a few Lots of Antique Furniture.

Catalogues on application.

Musical Instruments, including the Collection of the late WM. HENRY EDWARDS, Esq., and a Musical Library formed by an Amateur.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 30, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, GRAND and COTTAGE PIANOFORTES, HARMONIUMS, and ORGANS—Double and Single Action Harps—Violins, Violas, and Violoncellos, including the Collection of the late WILLIAM HENRY EDWARDS, Esq. (by order of the Executors)—a large quantity of American and Zither Banjos, Mandolines, and Guitars—Brass and Wood-Wind Instruments, &c. Also the valuable MUSIC LIBRARY, collected during the past twenty-five years by an AMATEUR, consisting principally of Solos, Duets, Trios, Quartets, and Quintets for Stringed Instruments.

Catalogues in preparation.

Scarce Engravings and Paintings, the Property of the late E. P. LOFTUS BROCK, Esq., F.S.A.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 2 at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of scarce ENGRAVINGS and PAINTINGS formed by the late E. P. LOFTUS BROCK, Esq., F.S.A. (by order of the Executrix).

Catalogues in preparation.

Collection of Ex-Libris and Armorial China.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 9 at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of EX-LIBRIS, comprising Examples in the Early English, Jacobean, Chippendale, and Bartolozzi styles, many of which are dated.

Catalogues on receipt of three stamps.

Further Portion of the Library of H. J. FARMER-ATKINSON, Esq., F.S.A., removed from Ore.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, April 7, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a FURTHER PORTION of the LIBRARY of H. J. FARMER-ATKINSON, Esq., F.S.A., consisting chiefly of valuable Examples of Biblical and Liturgical Literature in various Languages.

Catalogues on application.

Valuable Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 8, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a valuable COLLECTION of BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising many choice Examples of Early Foreign and English Printing—Works of Elizabethan and Jacobean Authors—Scarce Editions of the Bible—Manuscripts on Vellum, with Illuminated Capitals and Miniatures—fine Examples of Bindings, some with Arms; also a remarkable Collection of Early Playbills from the Vienna Exhibition, &c.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

CONTINUATION of SALES, March 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20.

MR. JOHN PARNELL respectfully announces that the Royal Victorian, Antiquarian, Topographical, Literary, Print, Art, and other SALES by AUCTION, advertised by him in this Paper last week, will be CONTINUED, at 1 o'clock, on similar days as named above, with the addition, on St. Patrick's Day, of special Irish Items, old Papal Portraits, and Views of Rome; on THURSDAY, the 18th, the old American Newspapers and Cuttings (A.D. 1821 to 1824) collected by the then British Ambassador (Canning) at Washington; and on FRIDAY, the 19th, of valuable Unpublished Works of the "Kew Bee" Literary Society and existing Copyrights, at his Rooms, 12, Rockley-road, Shepherd's Bush-green, London, W.

JUST PUBLISHED.

HINDU ASTRONOMY.

By W. BRENNAND.

With numerous Illustrations and Diagrams.

PRESS NOTICE.—See the Leading Article on this Work in Nature, v. 55, n. 1418, of December 31, 1896.

Royal 8vo. price 21*s.*

London: Chas. Straker & Sons, Limited, Bishopsgate-avenue, E.C.

DAVID NUTT,

270–271, STRAND.

FOLK-LORE.

Transactions of the Folk-lore Society.

A QUARTERLY REVIEW OF MYTH, TRADITION, INSTITUTION, AND CUSTOM.

(Incorporating the Archæological Review and the Folk-lore Journal.)

Vol. VIII. No. 1. MARCH, 1897. 5*s.* net.

Contents.

NEAPOLITAN WITCHCRAFT. J. B. Andrews.

SOME NOTES on the PHYSIQUE, CUSTOMS, and SUPERSTITIONS of the PEASANTRY of INNISHOWEN, co. DONEGAL. Thomas Doherty.

ANNUAL REPORT of the COUNCIL.

Presidential Address:—The FAIRY MYTHOLOGY of ENGLISH LITERATURE: its ORIGIN and NATURE.

REVIEWS.—H. Clay Trumbull, 'The Threshold Covenant'—C. Horstman, 'Richard Rolle,' vol. i.—Mrs. K. Langloh Parker and Andrew Lang, M.A., 'Australian Legendary Tales'—Daniel G. Brinton, 'The Myths of the New World'—Franz Boas, 'Indianische Sagen von der Nord-Pacifischen Küste Amerikas'—Italo Pizzi, 'Le Novelle Indiane di Visnusarma (Panciatantra)'—Frank Byron Jevons, M.A. Litt.D., 'An Introduction to the History of Religion.'

CORRESPONDENCE. — Staffordshire Superstitions. MABEL PEACOCK.—The Staffordshire Horn-Dance. MABEL PEACOCK. — The Hood-Game at Haxey. MABEL PEACOCK.—Hob Thrust. LELAND L. DUNCAN.—All Souls' Day. DOROTHEA TOWNSHEND.—Dozzels. W. CROOKE.—Irish Funeral Customs. W. CROOKE.—The Ten Wazirs. L. GOLDMERSTEIN.

MISCELLANEA.—Balochi Tales (concluded from vol. iv.), Nos. 19, 20. M. LONGWORTH DAMES. — The Part played by Water in Marriage Customs. L. GOLDMERSTEIN.—Marks on Ancient Monuments. CHAS. GODFREY LELAND.—The Straw Goblin. CHARLES GODFREY LELAND. — Charms from Siam. M. C. FFENNELL.—More Staffordshire Superstitions. CHARLOTTE S. BURNE.—Charm for the Evil Eye. MARY H. DEBENHAM.—Marriage Superstitions. E. SIDNEY HARTLAND.—The Swiss Folk-lore Society.

OBITUARY: W. A. Clouston.—BIBLIOGRAPHY.—LIST of MEMBERS.

 Mr. NUTT will shortly issue for the Folk-lore Society the Extra Volume for 1896, The PROCESSION and ELEVATION of the CERI at GUBBIO. By HERBERT M. BOWER Illustrated.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

STORIES of EVERYDAY LIFE in MODERN CHINA. By T. WATTERS. 3*s.* 6*d.*

CAOBA, the GUERILLA CHIEF. A real Romance of the Cuban Rebellion. By P. H. EMERSON. 6*s.*

The CELTIC CHURCH of WALES. By J. W. WILLIS BUND. 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

ELEMENTS of HEBREW GRAMMAR. By the Rev. M. ADLER. 1*s.* net.

MAORI TALES and LEGENDS. By K. M'COSH CLARK. 6*s.*

FROM

A. & C. BLACK'S LIST.

Demy 8vo. cloth, price 30*s.* net.

A DICTIONARY of BIRDS. By ALFRED NEWTON, M.A. F.R.S., Professor of Zoology and Comparative Anatomy in the University of Cambridge. Assisted by HANS GADOW, F.R.S., Strickland Professor and University Lecturer in Advanced Morphology, Cambridge. With Contributions by RICHARD LYDEKKER, B.A. F.R.S.; CHARLES S. ROY, M.A. F.R.S.; and ROBERT W. SHUFELDT, M.D. (late United States Army).

Demy 8vo. buckram, price 21*s.*

ARTISTIC and SCIENTIFIC TAXIDERMY and MODELLING. A Manual of Instruction in the Methods of Preserving and Reproducing the correct form of all Natural Objects, including a Chapter on the Modelling of Foliage. By MONTAGU BROWNE, F.G.S. F.Z.S., &c., Curator of the Leicester Corporation Museum and Art Gallery. With 22 Full-Page Illustrations and 11 Illustrations in Text.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5*s.*

The EVOLUTION of BIRD-SONG; with Observations on the Influence of Heredity and Imitation. By CHARLES A. WITCHELL.

Demy 8vo. cloth, price 14*s.*

INTRODUCTION to the STUDY of FUNGI: their Organography, Classification, and Distribution. For the Use of Collectors. By M. C. COOKE, M.A. LL.D. A.L.S. With 148 Illustrations in the Text.

Demy 8vo. cloth, price 18*s.* net.

ZOOLOGY of the INVERTEBRATA. A Text-Book for Students. By A. E. SHIPLEY, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Christ's College, and Demonstrator of Comparative Anatomy in the University of Cambridge. Illustrated with 263 Figures.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

MILK: its Nature and Composition. A Handbook on the Chemistry and Bacteriology of Milk, Butter, and Cheese. By C. M. AIKMAN, M.A. D.Sc. Illustrated.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.* each.

An INTRODUCTION to STRUCTURAL BOTANY. Part I. FLOWERING PLANTS. Illustrated with 113 Figures. Part II. FLOWERLESS PLANTS. Illustrated with 114 Figures. By D. HENRY SCOTT, Ph.D. F.R.S., Honorary Keeper of the Jodrell Laboratory, Royal Gardens, Kew.

Demy 8vo. cloth, price 18*s.* net.

INVESTIGATIONS on MICROSCOPIC FOAMS and on PROTOPLASM. Experiments and Observations directed towards a Solution of the Question of the Physical Conditions of the Phenomena of Life. By O. BÜTSCHLI, Professor of Zoology in the University of Heidelberg. Authorized Translation by E. A. MINCHIN, B.A. Oxon., Fellow of Merton College, Oxford. Illustrated with 12 Lithograph Plates and 23 Woodcuts.

Demy 8vo. cloth, price 12*s.* 6*d.*

MAMMALS LIVING and EXTINCT. By Sir WILLIAM HENRY FLOWER, K.C.B. F.R.S. D.C.L., and RICHARD LYDEKKER, B.A. Illustrated with 357 Figures.

Demy 8vo. price 12*s.* 6*d.*

The STUDY of FISHES. By Albert C. L. G. GUNTHER, M.D. Ph.D. F.R.S. Illustrated with 320 Figures.

A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, London.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

2 vols. 8vo. 24s.

MEMOIRS OF BARON LEJEUNE,

Aide-de-Camp to Marshals Berthier, Davout, and Oudinot.

Translated and Edited from the Original French by Mrs. ARTHUR BELL (N. D'ANVERS).

With an Introduction by Major-General MAURICE, C.B.

"There was almost no form of experience in the career of a soldier under Napoleon which this extraordinary and wonderful creature did not see. In reading these memoirs of a life so chequered and of experiences so rich in drama, in variety, in strange situations, one is constantly tempted to think of what the elder Dumas would have made of such an opulent story."—Graphic.

THIRD EDITION, with 6 Portraits, 8vo. 18s.

PICKLE THE SPY;

Or, the Incognito of Prince Charles.

By ANDREW LANG.

"In this brilliant study of the betrayal and extinction of Jacobitism, Mr. Andrew Lang has triumphantly solved a mystery which once baffled all Europe."—Times.

"Mr. Lang has unmasked a dead traitor, who has lain unsuspected in his Highland grave for close upon seven score years. It was right it should be done, and he has done it well."—Athenæum.

"'Pickle the Spy' will be one of the books by which the general reader may remember the year 1897."

Manchester Guardian.

VITA MEDICA: Chapters of Medical

Life and Work. By Sir BENJAMIN WARD RICHARDSON, M.D. LL.D. F.R.S. 8vo. 16s.

"A fascinating book."—Daily News.

"Marked by all the fluency and lucidity of style which made Sir Benjamin Richardson so popular an expounder of medical teachings."—Standard.

NEW BOOK BY PROF. MAX MÜLLER.

CONTRIBUTIONS to the SCIENCE of MYTHOLOGY. By the Right Hon. Prof. MAX MÜLLER, K.M., Member of the French Institute. 2 vols. 8vo. 32s.

CABINET EDITION OF BISHOP CREIGHTON'S 'PAPACY.'

A HISTORY of the PAPACY from the GREAT SCHISM to the SACK of ROME (1378-1527). By M. CREIGHTON, D.D. Oxon. and Camb., Lord Bishop of London. New and Cheaper Edition. In 6 Monthly Volumes. Vols. I. and II. crown 8vo. 6s. [Now ready.

"Those who heard little of Dr. Creighton's merits as an historian till he became a bishop will be well advised to read this work; while those who knew it already may value it the more for the rise of its author in the ecclesiastical world."—St. James's Gazette.

The ANNUAL CHARITIES RE-

GISTER and DIGEST for 1897. Being a Classified Register of Charities in or available for the Metropolis, together with a Digest of Information respecting the Legal, Voluntary, and other Means for the Prevention and Relief of Distress, and the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor. With an Introduction by C. S. LOCH, Secretary to the Council of the Charity Organization Society, London, and an Elaborate Index. 8vo. 4s.

ARISTOTLE and the EARLIER

PERIPATETICS: being a translation from Zeller's 'Philosophy of the Greeks.' By B. F. C. COSTELLOE, M.A., and J. H. MUIRHEAD, M.A. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 24s.

"All serious students of Greek philosophy will welcome this translation of a work which belongs to the first rank of Aristotelian literature."—Times.

The STAPELTONS of YORKSHIRE:

being the History of an English Family from very Early Times. By H. E. CHETWYND-STAPYLTON, Author of 'The Chetwynds of Ingestre.' With 55 Illustrations. 8vo. 14s.

NEW ROMANCE BY MR. WILLIAM MORRIS.

The WELL at the WORLD'S END:

a Tale. By WILLIAM MORRIS, Author of 'The Earthly Paradise.' 2 vols. 8vo. 28s.

The PRINCESS DÉSIRÉE: a

Romance. By CLEMENTINA BLACK. With 8 Illustrations by John Williamson. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"An uncommonly amusing and skilful adventure."

Pall Mall Gazette.

"The reader is carried along without pause to the very last page. It is a stirring and well-written story of the quasi-historical sort."—Literary World.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
London, New York, and Bombay.

MR. MURRAY'S NEWEST BOOKS.

Demy 8vo. 18s.

THE DAWN OF MODERN GEOGRAPHY:

A History of Travel and Geographical Science from the Conversion of the Roman Empire to 900 A.D., with an Account of the Achievements and Writings of the Early Christian Arab, and Chinese Students and Explorers.

By C. RAYMOND BEAZLEY, Fellow of Merton College, Oxford.

With Reproductions of the Principal Maps of the Time.

"Mr. Beazley has devoted to his difficult task an amazing amount of diligent and painstaking research.....and his literary skill in condensing such a mass of material has enabled him to make a very interesting volume."—Times.

With Map, crown 8vo. 5s.

THE DEFENCE OF THE EMPIRE;

Or, the Protection of British Ships, Ports, and Commerce.

A Selection from the Letters and Speeches of

HENRY HOWARD MOLYNEUX, FOURTH EARL OF CARNARVON.

Edited by Lieut.-Col. Sir GEO. SYDENHAM CLARKE, R.E. K.C.M.G. F.R.S.

"To Lord Carnarvon the nation owes a deep debt of gratitude for his efforts in the cause of Imperial defence. When we read the few speeches and letters here collected we cannot but feel respect for the energy and pertinacity which led him to press the fortification of our coaling-stations in the face of a thousand rebuffs and delays; sorrow that he has not been permitted to see the almost complete realization of the aim which he set himself to accomplish."—Pall Mall Gazette.

2 vols. crown 8vo. 18s.

NOTES FROM A DIARY, 1851-72.

Kept by the Right Hon. Sir MOUNTSTUART E. GRANT DUFF, G.C.S.I., Sometime Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies; Governor of Madras, 1881-86.

"This is a charming book, full of good things. It consists of the lighter reminiscences of a singularly accomplished man of the world, who in the course of a varied and active life has come in contact with a vast number of distinguished people in many countries."—St. James's Gazette.

With Maps, 8vo. 14s.

THE NAVY AND THE NATION.

By JAMES R. THURSFIELD, M.A., and Lieut.-Col. Sir GEORGE SYDENHAM CLARKE, R.E. K.C.M.G. F.R.S.

"We have called this volume a text-book, it is therefore, perhaps, needful to add that there is not a dry or a dull page in it. Whether it is Mr. Thursfield dealing with the statistics of our seaborne commerce, or Sir George Clarke explaining the relation of submarine mines to war, the subject is so dealt with that not only is it made intelligible to any average Englishman, but attention is riveted by the charm of literary style."—Times.

With Maps and Plans, 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12s.

HERODOTUS. The Text of Canon Rawlinson's Translation, with the Notes Abridged for the Use of Students. By A. J. GRANT, M.A., of King's College, Cambridge, Professor of History, Yorkshire College, Leeds, Author of 'Greece in the Age of Pericles.'

"The delightful pages of the old Greek, whose flavour has been so admirably presented by Canon Rawlinson, will thus be made accessible to a far wider circle than heretofore. There is no better introduction to Greek history and literature than Herodotus, and the English reader gets him here under the best possible conditions."—Literary World.

Crown 8vo. 9s.

EUROPE in the MIDDLE AGE. By Oliver J. Thatcher, Ph.D.,

and FERDINAND SCHWILL, Ph.D.

This work has been written, by men who have had long experience in teaching, to supply the want of a compendious History of Mediæval Europe, from the middle of the fourth to the close of the fifteenth century, which has been long felt in Universities and schools. A distinguished Professor of Modern History in one of our leading Universities, to whom a copy has been sent, writes:—"The book covers ground on which it has always been hard to get a suitable book for educational purposes, and, so far as I can judge—I have as yet only examined the German History of the tenth century—it is thoroughly sound and clear."

BOOKS FOR LENT.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The SERMON on the MOUNT: a Practical Explanation. By the Rev. CHARLES GORE, Canon of Westminster.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The WORK of the CHURCH in LONDON: a Series of Lectures delivered in St. James's Church, Piccadilly, during the Summer of 1896.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

SOME THOUGHTS on the TEXTUAL CRITICISM of the NEW TESTAMENT. By Prof. GEORGE SALMON, D.D., Provost of Trinity College, Dublin.

2 vols. crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. net each vol.

The EPISTLES of ST. PAUL to the THESSALONIANS,

GALATIANS, and ROMANS. With Notes and Dissertations by the late B. JOWETT, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

SOME of the CHIEF FACTS in the LIFE of OUR LORD; and the Authority of the Evangelical Narratives. Lectures preached in St. James's, Westminster. By HENRY WACE, D.D.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

INTRODUCTION to the STUDY of the GREEK TESTAMENT:

comprising a Connected Narrative of Our Lord's Life, from the Synoptic Gospels in the Original Greek. With Concise Grammar, Notes, &c. By THEOPHILUS D. HALL.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW AND FORTHCOMING BOOKS.

CECIL RHODES.

By IMPERIALIST and Dr. JAMESON.

WITH CHAPTERS ENTITLED

MY REMINISCENCES OF CECIL RHODES.

By Dr. JAMESON.

With Portraits and Map of South Africa. Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* [Next Monday.

This book deals with the personal and political life of Mr. Rhodes, contains very important unpublished facts, and is the only extant biography.

A NEW WORK ON THE SULTAN AND THE TURKS.

The SULTAN and his PEOPLE. By Richard DAVEY. With Portraits, Maps, and Plans. 2 vols. demy 8vo. [In a few days.

NEW WORK BY W. S. LILLY.

ESSAYS and SPEECHES. By W. S. Lilly, Author of 'Ancient Religion and Modern Thought,' 'A Century of Revolution,' &c. Demy 8vo. 12*s.* [Next week.

NEW WORK BY COL. G. B. MALLESON.

The RIVERS and LAKES of AUSTRIA, BAVARIA, and HUNGARY (with a Sketch of the Ambleve and Lignenville in Rhenish Prussia). By Col. G. B. MALLESON, C.S.I. With Map. Crown 8vo. [Next week.

A NEW BOOK ON MECHANICAL ENGINEERING.

FIRST PRINCIPLES of MECHANICAL and ENGINEERING DRAWING. A Course of Study adapted to the Self-Instruction of Students and Apprentices in Mechanical Engineering in all its Branches, and for the Use of Teachers in Technical and Manual Instruction Schools. By H. HOLT BUTTERFILL, M.E., formerly a Member of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers and Institution of Naval Architects. With upwards of 350 Diagrams in illustration of the principles of the subject. Demy 8vo. [Shortly.

A NEW TREATISE ON PRACTICAL GEOMETRY.

PRACTICAL PLANE and SOLID GEOMETRY: a Treatise containing Solutions to the Honours Questions set at the Examinations of the Science and Art Department (1887–1896 inclusive). By T. J. EVANS and W. W. F. PULLEN (S.W. London Polytechnic Institute). Crown 8vo. [Shortly.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'LORD EDWARD FITZGERALD.'

WHITE MAGIC: a Novel. By M. McD. Bodkin, Q.C., Author of 'Lord Edward Fitzgerald: an Historical Romance.' Crown 8vo. [In a few days.

THIRD EDITION IN A FEW DAYS.

The WAY of MARRIAGE. By Violet Hunt. With Three Woodcuts. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

FOURTH EDITION IN A FEW DAYS.

The STORY of ALINE. By Mrs. Edward Ridley. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

CHAPMAN'S DIAMOND LIBRARY

OF OLD AND MODERN ENGLISH LITERATURE.

A COLLECTION of OLD BALLADS. Collected and Edited by ANDREW LANG. With Introduction and Copious Notes, and Three Woodcut Illustrations by Simon Harmon Vedder. Paper, 1*s.* 6*d.*; cloth and gilt top, 2*s.*; limp calf, 4*s.*

TO BE FOLLOWED BY

ENGLISH SONNETS. Collected and Edited by A. T. QUILLER COUCH. With Introduction and Notes and Full Index, and Three Woodcut Portrait Illustrations by Simon Harmon Vedder. Paper, 1*s.* 6*d.*; cloth and gilt top, 2*s.*; limp calf, 4*s.* [Next week.

Messrs. CHAPMAN & HALL, who are the owners of the Copyrights of the Works of Charles Dickens and Thomas Carlyle, are the only Publishers who can issue Complete Editions of their Writings.

NEW EDITIONS OF DICKENS AND CARLYLE.

FULL DESCRIPTIVE PROSPECTUSES ON APPLICATION.

"Messrs. Chapman & Hall might fairly claim the publishers' Victoria Cross, if such a thing there were. They have had the rare courage to bring out almost at the same moment two large and costly ventures. We have already spoken of their admirable Carlyle, and to-day we have to speak of their equally admirable Dickens."—Guardian.

THE GADSHILL EDITION

OF

CHARLES DICKENS'S WORKS.

Edited by ANDREW LANG.

In 32 Volumes, square crown 8vo. price 6*s.* each Volume.

In issuing the GADSHILL EDITION of the Works of CHARLES DICKENS, Messrs. CHAPMAN & HALL, who are the owners of the copyright, and therefore are alone able to publish an entire edition of his works, are making this, the Gadshill Edition, the most complete that has ever been published.

MR. ANDREW LANG has undertaken to write an Introduction to each work; also Notes to each volume. A General Essay on Dickens's works, by Mr. Lang, will appear in one of the later volumes.

In this edition will be included 'SKETCHES of YOUNG COUPLES and YOUNG GENTLEMEN,' 'SUNDAY UNDER THREE HEADS,' and 'The MUDFOG PAPERS,' hitherto not issued in any existing uniform edition of Dickens's works. 'MASTER HUMPHREY'S CLOCK' will be issued in the form in which it was originally published—viz., with 'The OLD CURIOSITY SHOP' and 'BARNABY RUDGE.'

All the Original Plates of Cruikshank, Seymour, and Hablot Browne, &c., will be given, chiefly from unused duplicate plates in very fine condition in the possession of the publishers. In some of the later works, where the artists are not so closely connected in public estimation with the author, new illustrations will be employed by the best available artists of the day.

The PICKWICK PAPERS. 2 vols. with 43 Illustrations by Seymour and Phiz. [Now ready.

The ADVENTURES of OLIVER TWIST. 1 vol. with 24 Illustrations by Cruikshank. [Now ready

The next Volumes will be—

NICHOLAS NICKLEBY. 2 vols. with 39 Illustrations by Phiz, and Portrait of Charles Dickens by Maclise, engraved by Finden.

THE CENTENARY EDITION

OF

THOMAS CARLYLE'S WORKS.

Edited by H. D. TRAILL.

In 30 Volumes, square crown 8vo. price 3*s.* 6*d.* each Volume.

The CENTENARY EDITION, now being brought out, is under the supervision of Mr. H. D. TRAILL, D.C.L., who contributes a general Introduction to the first volume, and a short Preface to each succeeding work.

With a view of making the CENTENARY EDITION as complete as possible, the Publishers intend to add another volume to the already well-known works, comprising some Essays and Minor Writings never before published in a collected form.

The CENTENARY EDITION is being printed from the Text of the last Edition collated and arranged by Carlyle himself.

The Illustrations will consist mainly of Portraits, which, including some of THOMAS CARLYLE, have never appeared in any existing edition.

Maps and Plans will also be given.

 A LIMITED and NUMBERED EDITION is printed from the same type on Larger Paper, with extra Illustrations, 10*s.* 6*d. net each. 300 only printed.

SARTOR RESARTUS. With a Steel Portrait of Carlyle by Samuel Lawrence, engraved by Armitage. [Ready.

The FRENCH REVOLUTION: a History. 3 vols. With Photogravure Portraits of Louis XIV., Mirabeau, Lafayette, Marie Antoinette, Necker, Madame Roland, Danton, Charlotte Corday, Robespierre. [Ready.

ON HEROES, HERO WORSHIP, and the HEROIC in HISTORY. With 3 Photogravure Portraits of Shakespere, Rousseau, and Napoleon. [Ready.

OLIVER CROMWELL'S LETTERS and SPEECHES, with Elucidations. Vol. I. With an Introduction by H. D. TRAILL, and a Steel Portrait of Cromwell, and Photogravure Portraits of Charles I. and Prince Rupert. [Ready this day.

Other Volumes at regular intervals.

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED, London.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE TERRITORIAL TYRANNY OF THE TURK.
1453-1896.

A Coloured Map with Tabular Statement showing at a glance the date of conquest, and period of subjection, of the various Turkish dependencies past and present, with their proper relative grouping, and geographical distribution.

By ARTHUR PAUL, M.A. (Lond.),
Lecturer in English, King's College, London.

Price, folded in cover, 1s.

MR. GLADSTONE writing to the Author says:—"Allow me to thank you for your interesting map, and to express the hope that it may aid in quickening the attention of the public to the Eastern Question, the curse and shame of Christendom."

THE FOUNDATIONS OF SUCCESS.
A Plea for Rational Education.

By STANLEY DE BRATH, M.Inst.C.E.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

The aim of this book is to make a practical suggestion towards supplying the admitted demand for Systematic Secondary Education by showing the natural principles on which it should be based. These principles, underlying all sound thought, are the 'Foundations of Success' for individuals and nations.

"For comprehensive treatment of his subject, for thorough acquaintance with what has been previously written, and for lucid statement of common-sense principles, this little work deserves the highest commendation."
Prof. RAMSAY, F.R.S., in the Academy.

ENGLISH MAPS FOR ENGLISH READERS.

"It is, we are afraid, true that many of the current phrases of patriotic support to home products are honoured, even by those who utter them, in the breach rather than the observance. Those who patronize foreign in preference to English articles not seldom enter the excuse that the former are the cheaper, and if inferior yet serve their turn. We are the more pleased to be able to call attention to a publication which at once meets the needs of the time, is of English origin and manufacture, and is produced at a price which, when the value of work and the excellence of its execution is considered, is strikingly small. Lord Rosebery once, to the indignation of Mr. Labouchere, prided himself that the little England party was dead. As regards the cranks of individuals the legitimate congratulations perhaps came too soon. Taken in its broad sense the verdict is a true one, and irrespective of political parties British hearts beat proudly at the thought of the mighty empire over which the flag of England waves. Each morning brings news from every quarter of the globe of the doings of England's sons. The colonies, with their vigorous life, are pressing on from strength to strength. Level laws and even justice are daily gaining wider rule in lands where barbarism and savage tyranny have reigned supreme. The advance of civilization into the dark places of the earth has progressed with leaps and bounds. Lord Salisbury's wise advice to statesmen wishful to appreciate properly international questions to study large maps is received as a leading rule. But not less is it incumbent on all citizens of a world-wide empire to study on the map the dominions linked with the destiny of the race. Even to follow the 'little wars,' which it is the pride of England that her naval and military forces can, when called upon, carry out so brilliantly, it is essential that an up-to-date atlas should be at hand. Never, perhaps, was the need more in evidence than in the last few years. It is excellently met by the 'New Handy General Atlas,' just published by George Philip & Son, of 32, Fleet-street, at a cost, according to the binding, of 2*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* or 2*l.* Not the least of the merits of this production is that it is entirely of English origin and manufacture. Edited by Mr. George Philip, jun., F.R.G.S., it has been specially designed with reference to the requirements of the British public, and after a careful examination of its contents it appears to us to admirably provide what is wanted. The British colonies and dependencies are shown in great detail. Railways, means of communication, and so forth, are set out, and the clearness of the plates and the exhaustive means of reference render all its mass of information instantly available."
Morning Advertiser.

 Illustrated Prospectus of PHILIP'S NEW HANDY GENERAL ATLAS gratis on application.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON, 32, Fleet-street, London,
Liverpool:
PHILIP, SON & NEPHEW, 45-51, South Castle-street.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

MRS. HUNGERFORD'S LAST NOVEL.

LOVICE,

The NEW NOVEL by Mrs. HUNGERFORD, Author of 'Molly Bawn,' is now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

A NEW EDITION of The OUTSIDER, by HAWLEY SMART, will be ready on March 18.

A CHEAP EDITION of Sir WALTER BESANT'S Romantic Story, BEYOND the DREAMS of AVARICE, is now ready. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

"'Beyond the Dreams of Avarice' is a striking example of the power which Sir Walter Besant possesses, beyond any other of our novelists, of investing a subject with romance while keeping it strictly to reality and proportion. The action of this engrossing story of immense wealth.....is quite real and circumstantial; every person introduced is living, and full of character. But it is a romance nevertheless; there is even a mystic touch in it. The picture of Lucian's mind.....is one of the boldest and best things Sir Walter Besant has ever done."—World.

BEYOND the PALE: an Irish Romance. By B. M. Croker,
Author of 'Diana Barrington.' Crown 8vo. buckram, 6s.

"A picturesque as well as interesting tale."—Morning Post.
"The unflagging vivacity and brisk naturalness of Mrs. Croker's style have rarely been more happily displayed than in her latest novel.....This capital story.....Almost every character in the story is typical, and all the types are true."—World.
"A thoroughly vivacious and attractive novel.....Sure to have a run at the circulating libraries."—Leeds Mercury.
"In 'Beyond the Pale' Mrs. Croker is once more on her native heath, and quite at her best.....All this, and much more, is told by Mrs. Croker with that unflagging vivacity, that lightness of touch, and that keen sense of humour which entitle her to occupy among the women novelists of the day very much the same place that Charles Lever held among his brother writers in a former generation."—Spectator.

WITH the RED EAGLE: a Romance of the Tyrol. By William WESTALL. THIRD EDITION just ready. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s.

"A fine historical romance."—Pall Mall Gazette.
"A rattling tale of military adventure, with a pleasant undercurrent of romance.....full of exciting incident."—Spectator.
"Marked by an originality and a dash that hold you like a spell from first to last.....Fresh, vigorous, and altogether delightful."—Black and White.
"Such a series of hairbreadth escapes as should move Mr. Stanley Weyman, and even Mr. Anthony Hope, to jealousy."
Graphic.
"A refreshing story altogether, which depends for its success on its intrinsic interest and the universal sympathy with courage, audacity, and hard fighting."—Leeds Mercury.

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. Waller. With 9 Full-Page Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"Steeped in mystery is Mr. Waller's romance.....There are passages that are delightful.....It will please readers who love mystery and would escape for a while from the tedious round and common light of workaday life."—British Review.

A MISSING WITNESS. By Frank Barrett, Author of 'The Sin of Olga Zassoulich.' With 8 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The history of the struggles of the three young dressmakers is described with wonderful spirit and convincingness, and the 'little mother' of the volume is a delightful study."—Morning Leader.
"Written in Mr. Frank Barrett's best manner.....The interest is well maintained from the opening to the closing chapters."—Daily Telegraph.

NEW TWO-SHILLING NOVELS.—Post 8vo. picture boards.

LADY PATTY. By Mrs. Hungerford. [March 18.
AT MARKET VALUE. By Grant Allen.
The PRINCE of BALKISTAN. By Allen Upward, Author of 'Secrets of the Courts of Europe.'

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.—Crown 8vo. cloth extra.

ROUGHING IT; and The INNOCENTS at HOME. By Mark Twain. With 200 Illustrations. [March 18.
The PRINCE and the PAUPER. By Mark Twain. With 200 Illustns.
BY WOMAN'S WIT. By Mrs. Alexander.
The MASTER of TRENANCE. By T. W. Speight.
APRIL'S LADY. By Mrs. Hungerford.

An ANXIOUS MOMENT. By Mrs. Hungerford, Author of 'Molly Bawn.' SECOND EDITION. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Teems with the same delightful qualities that have won for her previous volumes the warm admiration of pleasure loving people."—Morning Leader.
"In the happiest style of the author of 'Molly Bawn.'"—World.

PHIL MAY'S SKETCH-BOOK. Fifty-four Humorous Drawings. CHEAP EDITION. Crown folio, cloth, 2s. 6d.

The FIFTH EDITION, with a NEW PREFACE, of ENGLISH SURNAMES: their Sources and Significations, by the Rev. C. W. BARDSLEY, M.A., Hon. Canon of Carlisle, will be ready on March 18. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S LIST.

THE FIRST VOLUME IN THE NEW AND IMPORTANT SERIES,

LITERATURES OF THE WORLD,

Edited by EDMUND GOSSE,

IS NOW READY.

Price SIX SHILLINGS.

A HISTORY OF ANCIENT GREEK LITERATURE.

By GILBERT G. A. MURRAY, M.A., Professor of Greek in the University of Glasgow.

TO BE FOLLOWED BY—

FRENCH LITERATURE. By Prof. EDWARD DOWDEN, LL.D. [June 1.

ITALIAN LITERATURE. By RICHARD GARNETT, C.B. LL.D., Keeper of Printed Books in the British Museum. [Sept. 1.

ENGLISH LITERATURE. By the EDITOR. [December 1.

The absence of any collection of summaries of the literature of the world has led the Publisher and the Editor of the present series to believe that a succession of attractive volumes, dealing each with the history of literature in a single country, would be not less welcome than novel. The Editor has had the good fortune to interest in this project a number of scholars whose names guarantee a rare combination of exact knowledge with the power of graceful composition. He has the pleasure of being able to announce that this interest has taken a practical shape, and that already there is being prepared for the press a considerable series of volumes, most of them composed by men pre-eminently recognized for their competence in each special branch of the subject. Great care will be taken to preserve uniformity of form and disposition, so as to make the volumes convenient for purposes of comparison, and so as to enable the literatures themselves to be studied in proper correlation.

In preparing these books, the first aim will be to make them exactly consistent with all the latest discoveries of fact, and the second to ensure that they are agreeable to read. It is hoped that they will be accurate enough to be used in the class-room, and yet pleasant enough, and picturesque enough, to be studied by those who seek nothing from their books but enjoyment.

 Professor Gilbert Murray's HISTORY of ANCIENT GREEK LITERATURE.—The treatment and development of the subject are individual and original; the author's aim being at once to set before the scholar the results of the most modern research and criticism in small compass, with an absence of any needlessly minute descriptions of "laboratory work," and at the same time to realize for the general reader something of the life, atmosphere, and mode of thought which gave to the Literature of Ancient Greece its essence and its characteristics.

THE OUTGOING TURK.

Impressions of a Journey through the Western Balkans.

By H. C. THOMSON, Author of 'The Chitral Campaign.'

1 vol. demy 8vo. fully illustrated, 14*s.* net. [March 23.

THE NEW AFRICA.

A Journey Up the Chobé and Down the Okovango Rivers.

By AUREL SCHULZ, M.D., and AUGUSTUS HAMMAR, C.E.

1 vol. fully illustrated, demy 8vo. [Shortly.

ROMANTIC INDIA.

By ANDRÉ CHEVRILLON.

1 vol. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

TIMES.—"We are made to see the scenery and incidents of a winter trip to India in a new light—the light in which they present themselves to an amiable and spirituel Frenchman."

THE WORKS OF LORD BYRON.

Edited by W. E. HENLEY.

POEMS. Vol. I.

With a Portrait after Sanders. Small crown 8vo. 5*s.* net.

BEAUTY AND ART.

By ALDAM HEATON.

1 vol. 6*s.*

Contents:—Taste—Beauty in Form and Colour—High Art for Shallow Purses—Decoration of the House, &c.

SEVENTEENTH CENTURY STUDIES.

By EDMUND GOSSE.

Uniform with 'Critical Kit-Kats,' &c. 1 vol. buckram, 7*s.* 6*d.*

TIMES.—"Equipped with full knowledge, sound critical instinct, and an interesting, easy style, Mr. Gosse appeals to the student and to the general reader alike."

FLAMES: a London Phantasy.

By ROBERT HICHENS, Author of 'The Green Carnation,' &c. 1 vol. 6*s.*

THE SPOILS OF POYNTON.

By HENRY JAMES, Author of 'The Other House.' 1 vol. 6*s.*

NATIONAL OBSERVER.—"A work of brilliant fancy, of delicate humour, of gentle satire. A polished and enthralling story."

THE MAN OF STRAW.

By EDWIN PUGH, Author of 'A Street in Suburbia.' 1 vol. 6*s.*

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"Every stroke of his pen brings conviction with it. He writes with the instinct of an artist: he selects his incidents with marvellous skill."

THE LITTLE REGIMENT:

And other Episodes of the American Civil War.

By STEPHEN CRANE, Author of 'The Red Badge of Courage.' "Pioneer Series." Cloth, 3*s.* net; paper, 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

ACADEMY.—"The most finished, the most complete piece of work Mr. Crane has given us; brimful of the reality of war. 'The Little Regiment' is truly wonderful."

A PINCHBECK GODDESS.

By Mrs. J. M. FLEMING (ALICE M. KIPLING). 1 vol. 3*s.* 6*d.*

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Very bright, witty, and amusing. A clever and entertaining story."

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS.

By FLORA ANNIE STEEL, Author of 'The Potter's Thumb,' &c. 1 vol. 6*s.* Twentieth Thousand.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"Mrs. Steel has managed to set the Mutiny before us till it is more like a personal recollection of our own than a tale told to us."

McLEOD OF THE CAMERONS.

By M. HAMILTON, Author of 'A Self-denying Ordinance.' 1 vol. 6*s.*

STANDARD.—"Not only more promise but more achievement than in any novel by a comparatively new writer that we have read for a long time. It is well constructed and well thought out."

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

SECOND EDITION.

NOW READY.

QUEEN OF THE MOOR.

A Tale of Dartmoor in the Days of Waterloo.

By FREDERIC ADYE.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

GRAPHIC.—"It is long since we have read a novel with so much unbroken pleasure."

MORNING POST.—"Since 'Lorna Doone' the natural features of an English district have not been described with such a vigorous touch as is Dartmoor and the country that surrounds it in Mr. Adye's novel.....His delightful romance, which has the freshness of the wild moors it so vividly paints."

FOREIGN STATESMEN.—New Volumes.

Edited by Prof. J. B. BURY.

Crown 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.* each.

MARIA THERESA. By Rev. J. FRANCK BRIGHT, D.D., Master of University College, Oxford.

JOSEPH II. By Rev. J. Franck BRIGHT, D.D.

 These two volumes supplement one another as a History of the Period.

EVERSLEY SERIES.—New Volumes.

Globe 8vo. 5*s.* each.

Now ready, in Two Volumes.

PROSE WORKS of WILLIAM WORDSWORTH. Edited by Prof. KNIGHT. With Portraits and Vignettes etched by H. MANESSE.

ESSAYS CLASSICAL. By F. W. H. MYERS.

8vo. 10*s.* net.

EPIC and ROMANCE. Essays on Mediæval Literature. By W. P. KER, Fellow of All Souls' College, Oxford, Professor of English Literature in University College, London.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"A very notable contribution to a branch of literature that has rarely received adequate treatment."

BY EDWIN A. ABBOTT.

8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

The SPIRIT on the WATERS. The Evolution of the Divine from the Human. By EDWIN A. ABBOTT, Author of 'Philochristus,' &c.

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.—"The book is one of no little interest.....Full of most instructive matter, put with the force and clearness of a past master in the art of teaching.'

8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

ELEMENTS of THEORETICAL PHYSICS. By Dr. C. CHRISTIANSEN, Professor of Physics in the University of Copenhagen. Translated by Prof. W. F. MAGIE, Ph.D.

Extra crown 8vo. 6*s.*

A STUDY of the SKY: a Popular Astronomy. By HERBERT A. HOWE, Professor of Astronomy, University of Denver.

SCOTSMAN.—"Professor Howe's love of the science shows itself in every page, and his book is one which is well calculated to impart some portion of it to the reader."

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

NEW STORY BY THE AUTHOR OF 'DIANA TEMPEST.'

A DEVOTEE.

By MARY CHOLMONDELEY,

Author of

'Diana Tempest,' 'The Danvers Jewels,' &c.

Cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

A DEVOTEE.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'DIANA TEMPEST.'

DR. DONALDSON SMITH'S IMPORTANT NEW WORK.

THROUGH UNKNOWN AFRICAN COUNTRIES.

The First Expedition from Somaliland to Lake Rudolf and Lamu.

A Narrative of Scientific Exploration and Sporting Adventures.

By A. DONALDSON SMITH, M.D. F.R.G.S.

With nearly 30 Full-Page Plates and numerous Smaller Illustrations by A. D. McCormick, Charles Whymper, &c., and detailed Maps of the Countries Traversed.

Super-royal 8vo. One Guinea net.

Daily News.—"This is a most important as well as original contribution to the literature of African discovery, ethnology, and international problems of the black continent. Lovers of sport will find in it much to captivate them. But perhaps the majority of readers will care most for the information he gives them on the native tribes and their characteristics, and the relations between Abyssinia and the countries on her borders."

Standard.—"We are sorry to lay down this most interesting and pleasantly written volume. It tells, in clear, succinct, and well-chosen language, the tale of a very adventurous journey; it is well illustrated, and contains a series of excellent route-maps."

Times.—"The narrative never lags and is full of interest throughout. Dr. Smith has sporting anecdotes on almost every page, and they are unusually well told. The general result is that, so far as exploration and natural history and other collections are concerned, this must be reckoned one of the most successful of recent African expeditions."

Daily Chronicle.—"The book is clearly written and well illustrated and is full of interesting points."

SOLDIERING AND SURVEYING IN BRITISH EAST AFRICA, 1891-1894.

An Account of the Survey for the Uganda Railway, and the various Campaigns in the British Protectorate during the last few years. By Major J. R. MACDONALD, R.E. Illustrated from Sketches and Photographs by the Author and numerous Plans and a Map. Demy 8vo. 16*s.*

ON VELDT and FARM: in Cape Colony, Bechuanaland, Natal, and the Transvaal. By FRANCES McNAB. With Map. Crown 8vo. 300 pages, 3*s.* 6*d.*

Pall Mall Gazette.—"This work will assuredly open our eyes to the position of affairs in South Africa. 'On Veldt and Farm' will, I am sure, be considered a valuable book."

Scotsman.—"Intending emigrants and settlers, as well as students of South African affairs at a distance, will find in the volume much to guide and instruct as well as to amuse and interest them."

FISH TAILS and SOME TRUE ONES. By BRADNOCK HALL, Author of 'Rough Mischance.' With an Original Etching by the Author, and 12 Full-Page Illustrations by T. H. McLachlan. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The BEGGARS of PARIS (PARIS QUI MENDIE). Translated from the French of M. LOUIS PAULIAN by LADY HERSCHELL. Paper boards, 1*s.*

Times.—"Not only contains a great many amusing and instructive anecdotes, but formulates a definite scheme for the entire suppression of begging as a trade. Lady Herschell's excellent translation should be read by all who are interested in the vexed question of charity-giving, and even to those who read but for amusement it will prove vastly entertaining."

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street.
New York: 70, Fifth Avenue.

J. & A. CHURCHILL'S LIST.

MENTAL PHYSIOLOGY, especially in its RELATION to MENTAL DISORDERS. By THEO. B. HYSLOP, M.D. With Illustrations. 8vo. 18*s.*

MOODS: their Mental and Physical Character. New Treatise on Moods as PHYSICAL. By F. PHILLIPS. Crown 8vo. 1*s.*

A CONTRIBUTION to the HISTORY of the RESPIRATION of MAN: being the Croonian Lectures delivered before the Royal College of Physicians in 1895, with Supplementary Considerations of the Methods of Inquiry and Analytical Results. By WILLIAM MARCET, M.D. F.R.C.P. F.R.S. With Diagrams. Imperial 8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.*

A TREATISE on HYGIENE and PUBLIC HEALTH. Edited by THOMAS STEVENSON, M.D., and SHIRLEY F. MURPHY. In 3 vols. royal 8vo. fully illustrated. Vol. I. 28*s.*; Vol. II. 32*s.*; Vol. III. 20*s.*

The writers of the various articles of this work are leading authorities on their respective subjects.

HANDBOOK of HYGIENE and SANITARY SCIENCE. By GEORGE WILSON, M.D. D.P.H. F.R.S.E. Seventh Edition. Crown 8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.*

PHYSICAL EDUCATION. By F. TREVES, F.R.C.S. Exercise, Fatigue, Training, Walking, Running, Jumping, Skating, Riding, Swimming, Fencing, Boxing, Boating, Cycling, Gymnastics, Games, &c. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

ON the NATURAL and ARTI- FICIAL METHODS of FEEDING INFANTS and YOUNG CHILDREN. By EDMUND CAUTLEY, M.D., Physician to the Belgrave Hospital for Children. Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

ILLUSTRATED AMBULANCE LECTURES in accordance with the Regulations of the St. John Ambulance Association for Male and Female Classes. By JOHN M. H. MARTIN, M.D. Fourth Edition, with 60 Engravings. Crown 8vo. 2*s.*

PRACTICAL AMBULANCE TABLETS. By SYDNEY PARTRIDGE, M.D. Fourth Edition, with Engravings. 1*s.*

A MANUAL of CHEMISTRY, THEORETICAL and PRACTICAL. By WILLIAM A. TILDEN, D.Sc. F.R.S., Professor of Chemistry in the Royal College of Science, London, Examiner in Chemistry to the Department of Science and Art. With 2 Plates and 143 Woodcuts. Crown 8vo. 10*s.*

WAGNER'S MANUAL of CHEMICAL TECHNOLOGY. Second English Edition. Translated and Edited by WM. CROOKES, F.R.S., from the Thirteenth Enlarged German Edition. With 596 Engravings. Royal 8vo. 32*s.*

BLOXAM'S LABORATORY TEACHING; or, Progressive Exercises in Practical Chemistry. Edited by A. G. BLOXAM. Sixth Edition, with 80 Woodcuts. Crown 8vo. 6*s.* 6*d.*

VALENTIN'S QUALITATIVE CHEMICAL ANALYSIS. Edited by W. R. HODGKINSON, Ph.D. F.R.S.E. Eighth Edition. 8vo. 8*s.* 6*d.* (The Tables separately, 2*s.* 6*d.*)

HANDBOOK of VOLUMETRIC ANALYSIS. By FRANCIS SUTTON. Seventh Edition, with 112 Engravings. 8vo. 18*s.* 6*d.*

FRESENIUS' QUANTITATIVE ANALYSIS. Translated from the Sixth German Edition by CHARLES E. GROVES, F.R.S. Vol. II., Parts I. to IV. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.* each.

London: J. & A. CHURCHILL,
7, Great Marlborough-street.

ILLUSTRATED LIMITED EDITION

OF THE

NOVELS OF CHARLES LEVER.

Edited by his DAUGHTER.

THE FIRST COMPLETE UNIFORM ILLUSTRATED EDITION OF

CHARLES LEVER'S NOVELS.

Messrs. DOWNEY beg to announce the publication of an entirely New and Copyright Edition of LEVER'S Novels in Thirty-seven Volumes, the First Volume of the Series to appear on March 19 and the final Volume in March, 1899.

The Publishers have been fortunate enough to secure all the ORIGINAL PLATES—over Six Hundred in number—etched by

"PHIZ" AND GEORGE CRUIKSHANK

for the First Editions.

In addition to the large number of Etchings and Engravings by "Phiz" and George Cruikshank, several of the later volumes are illustrated with Wood Engravings by LUKE FILDES, R.A., M. E. EDWARDS, and other Artists, all of which will be included in this Edition

All the interesting Prefaces written by Lever shortly before his death will be included.

The printing of this Edition has been entrusted to Messrs. T. & A. CONSTABLE, of Edinburgh, who have had a new bold clear type specially cast for the work.

The size of the page is octavo. The volumes will be printed on laid paper specially made for this Edition. Each volume will contain, on an average, about 500 pages, and will be exceedingly light to handle. The Books will be uniformly bound in art canvas and with gilt top.

The Edition will be strictly limited to 1,000 copies for sale in Great Britain and America, and the type will be distributed after printing.

The price of each volume will be Ten Shillings and Sixpence net, and the books will be sold in sets only.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE SERIES,

THE CONFESSIONS OF HARRY LORREQUER,

WITH TWENTY-TWO ETCHINGS BY "PHIZ,"

Will be ready on FRIDAY NEXT.

FULL PROSPECTUS POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

DOWNEY & CO., Limited, 12, York-street, Covent-garden, London.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

FIFTEENTH EDITION READY THIS DAY.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 36*s*.

FORTY-ONE YEARS IN INDIA.

From Subaltern to Commander-in-Chief.

By FIELD-MARSHAL

LORD ROBERTS of KANDAHAR, V.C.

Besides Maps and Plans, the Volumes contain PORTRAITS on STEEL and COPPER of Sir JAMES OUTRAM, General NICHOLSON, Sir HENRY LAWRENCE, Sir ABRAHAM ROBERTS, Sir COLIN CAMPBELL, Sir WILLIAM MANSFIELD, LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA, Sir DONALD STEWART, Sir SAMUEL BROWNE, the AMIR OF AFGHANISTAN, Sir ARTHUR HARDINGE, and Field-Marshal LORD ROBERTS.

"A vivid and simple narrative of things actually seen by a fighting man who, during forty-one years of Indian service, saw more hard fighting than almost any other Englishman of our time. It also records the experience of a military administrator who has conducted historical campaigns and been the presiding genius in the re-organization of a great army. But to the general reader perhaps its chief charm will be glimpses which it gives, with a certain Cervantes-like naïveté, of the personality of the author. A hundred unconscious touches, in the camp, on the battlefield, and at the Council table, reveal to us the veritable hero of the British private, and the fearless leader of men whom every native soldier would follow to the death."—Times.

"It would be difficult to overstate the service which the author renders to the British nation by reminding it of the true temper and trustworthiness of one of its greatest weapons of security, the army.....The story of Lord Roberts's life should be studied by every young soldier.....The peculiar charm of the book is the modest and generous spirit which, like a golden thread, runs through it."—Athenæum.

A NEW NOVEL

AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

THE CAREER OF CLAUDIA.

By F. M. PEARD,

Author of 'The Rose Garden,' &c.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

SOME STANDARD WORKS FOR THE LIBRARY.

BY MADAME JUNOT.

The COURT and FAMILY of NAPOLEON. By the DUCHESS D'ABRANTÈS (LAURE JUNOT). A New and Revised Edition. 4 vols. crown 8vo. 36*s*.

BY MAJOR FISHER.

OUTDOOR LIFE in ENGLAND. By ARTHUR T. FISHER, Major, late 21st Hussars, Author of 'Through the Stable and Saddle-Room,' 'Rod and River,' &c. Demy 8vo. 14*s*.

BY MRS. BISHOP.

A MEMOIR of MRS. AUGUSTUS CRAVEN (PAULINE DE LA FERRONNAYS), Author of 'A Sister's Story.' With Extracts from her Diaries and Correspondence. By MARIA CATHERINE BISHOP. Third and Cheaper Edition. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 7*s*. 6*d*.

BY MR. JAMES.

The NAVAL HISTORY of GREAT BRITAIN. By WILLIAM JAMES. 6 vols. crown 8vo. with 12 Portraits on Steel, 42*s*.

BY THE DEAN OF WINCHESTER.

The LIFE of DEAN HOOK. By the Very Rev. W. R. W. STEPHENS, F.S.A., Dean of Winchester. In crown 8vo. with Portrait, 6*s*.

BY DR. DUNCKER.

The HISTORY of ANTIQUITY. From the German of the late Professor MAX DUNCKER, by EVELYN ABBOTT, M.A. LL.D. 6 vols. demy 8vo. Each Volume can be obtained separately, 21*s*.

BY MR. CROWEST.

The STORY of BRITISH MUSIC; from the Earliest Times to the Tudor Period. By FREDERICK JAMES CROWEST, Author of 'The Great Tone Poets,' &c. Demy 8vo. with numerous Illustrations, 15*s*.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

THE PEOPLE'S EDITION.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

The First Printing of 50,000 copies is now exhausted. A SECOND PRINTING of 50,000 copies is now in the press and will be ready in a few days.

In medium 8vo. paper cover.

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN.

By Mrs. CRAIK.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6*s*.

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR SHIPS

and their COMMANDERS. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"Pleasantly written and readable as it is, it cannot but prove welcome to a large number of readers who have no access to the heavier naval literature from which it is drawn."—Scotsman.

UNDER THE ESPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY.

NOW READY, SIXTY-SIXTH EDITION.

1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved, 31*s*. 6*d*. bound, gilt edges.

LODGE'S PEERAGE AND BARONETAGE FOR 1897.

CORRECTED BY THE NOBILITY.

"That compendious and admirably printed guide to the peerage and baronetage of the British Empire has reached its sixty-sixth edition with the volume for 1897. The usefulness of this concise and carefully-edited book is enhanced by the excellent and stout paper on which it is printed."

Pall Mall Gazette, December 29, 1896.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MISTRESS BEATRICE COPE.'

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

SWORN ALLIES. By M. E. Le CLERC, Author of 'A Rainbow at Night,' &c.

ALL IN ALL. By Corinna A. Bruce. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The SOUND of a VOICE. By Linda GARDINER, Author of 'His Heritage,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, 6*s*.

"An exceedingly able story."—Scotsman.

"The plot of Miss Gardiner's novel is stirring and sensational enough. But it is well worked out, and the interest which it arouses at the very outset is cleverly maintained to the end."—Glasgow Herald.

The WOOING of a FAIRY. By GERTRUDE WARDEN, Author of 'The Sentimental Sex,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"A clever, well-written story, which has this merit, that the key of the well-constructed plot is hidden until the last chapter."—Pall Mall Gazette.

An AUSTRALIAN DUCHESS. By AMYOT SAGON, Author of 'A Fair Palmist,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"Mr. Sagon's brightly written romance."—Daily Telegraph.

GENTLEMAN GEORGE: a Story without a Heroine. By Mrs. HERBERT MARTIN, Author of 'Britomart,' 'Her Début,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"Mrs. Herbert Martin has produced an excellent story of country life which loses nothing in interest from the fact that it has no heroine."—Scotsman.

BLIND BATS. By Margaret B. CROSS, Author of 'Stolen Honey,' 'Newly Fashioned,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"Miss Cross has a delightful style, fresh, crisp, and witty, without straining after epigrams, and her portraiture is throughout lifelike without being photographic."

Pall Mall Gazette.

The YOKE of STEEL. By C. J. WILLS, Author of 'The Pit Town Coronet,' &c., and GODFREY BURCHETT, Author of 'Dominic Penterne,' &c.

"The dialogue throughout is spontaneous and natural without lapsing into trivial platitudes or idle chatter. On the whole a capital novel."—Daily Telegraph.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

Messrs. METHUEN beg to announce that they have ready for immediate publication Mr. MACLAREN COBBAN'S New Novel, WILT THOU HAVE THIS WOMAN? Crown 8vo. 6*s*.; also the New Library Edition of The SOUL of LILITH, by MARIE CORELLI, large crown 8vo. 6*s*. They have just published GUAVAS the TINNER, by S. BARING-GOULD, with Illustrations by Frank Dadd, crown 8vo. 6*s*.; A HANDFUL of EXOTICS, by S. GORDON, crown 8vo. 3*s*. 6*d*.; and A MAN WITH BLACK EYELASHES, by H. A. KENNEDY, crown 8vo. 3*s*. 6*d*.

RECENT NOVELS.

Six Shillings each.

S. Baring-Gould.—The BROOM-SQUIRE

S. Baring-Gould.—DARTMOOR IDYLLS.

S. Baring-Gould.—GUAVAS the TINNER.

J. A. Barry.—IN the GREAT DEEP: Tales of the Sea.

J. F. Brewer.—The SPECULATORS.

J. Bloundelle-Burton.—DENOUNCED.

Marie Corelli.—A ROMANCE of TWO WORLDS.

Marie Corelli.—VENDETTA.

Marie Corelli.—THELMA.

Marie Corelli.—ARDATH.

Marie Corelli.—WORMWOOD.

Marie Corelli.—BARABBAS.

Marie Corelli.—The SORROWS of SATAN.

L. Cope Cornford.—CAPTAIN JACOBUS.

J. H. Findlater.—The GREEN GRAVES of BALGOWRIE.

Anthony Hope.—PHROSO.

Lucas Malet.—The CARISSIMA.

Arthur Morrison.—A CHILD of the JAGO.

W. E. Norris.—CLARISSA FURIOSA.

M. A. Owen.—The DAUGHTER of ALOUETTE.

Gilbert Parker.—The SEATS of the MIGHTY.

Ronald Ross.—The SPIRIT of STORM.

Stanley Weyman.—UNDER the RED ROBE.

Three-and-Sixpence each.

Bertram Mitford.—The SIGN of the SPIDER.

P. B. Neuman.—The SUPPLANTER.

S. Gordon.—A HANDFUL of EXOTICS.

H. A. Kennedy.—A MAN with BLACK EYELASHES.

A. Shield.—The SQUIRE of WANDALES.

The SIN of ANGELS.

METHUEN & CO. 36, Essex-street, W.C.

SATURDAY, MARCH 13, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Mr. Goldwin Smith's Essays on Religion and Science	339
Early Records of John Company	340
Selections from De Brosses's Letters	341
Mr. O'Leary's Recollections of the Fenians	342
New Novels (Phroso; The Quest of the Golden Girl; Glamour; Charity Chance; The Old Ecstasies; The Village and the Doctor; The Man of Straw; Jean d'Agrève)	343—344
Books of Travel	344
Syriac Philology	345
Military and Naval Literature	346
Our Library Table—List of New Books	346—347
Parables concerning Ilyas the Prophet; Cromwell's Speeches; Lord Brougham on Literary Agents; 'English Schools at the Reformation'; 'The Sacred Tree'; The Destruction of the Spanish Armada; The Spring Publishing Season; Sale; The Rev. N. Pocock	347—349
Literary Gossip	350
Science—Atlases and Gazetteers; The Spring Publishing Season; Societies; Meetings	351—352
Fine Arts—Ford Madox Brown; Sale; Gossip	352—354
Music—Dictionary of Music; The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week	354—356
Drama—The Week	356

LITERATURE

Guesses at the Riddle of Existence, and other Essays on Kindred Subjects. By Goldwin Smith. (Macmillan & Co.)

In his introduction to this remarkable little volume Mr. Goldwin Smith expresses a fear that it may be thought presumptuous in a layman to touch on questions which involve dogma, even though he may have as great an interest in them as any of the clergy. His modesty is out of place. A writer who has done excellent work in many departments of literature and history is under no obligation to apologize for venturing on ground that is common to all thoughtful men everywhere, especially if he can form his opinions with clearness and courage, and deliver them with the force and lucidity which distinguish these pages. The study of history, and of some of the great men who have made history, ought to be a particularly efficient means of developing such insight into human nature as the student may possess; and without that insight who is there that can deal with fundamental religious problems in a way likely to attract average readers, or can say what will come home to their business and bosoms? It is easy for the mere speculator to spin his theories, or for the dreamer to indulge his fancy, and some writers proceed upon the supposition that religion is a matter of theory alone or of sentiment alone. Mr. Goldwin Smith is fully aware of the fact that it is a matter of the highest importance in its bearing on individual conduct and social welfare. He finds, as most of us find, that the supports of faith are loosened. He is not a little troubled as to the eventual outcome of this discovery. It may lead, he thinks, to a moral interregnum. Meanwhile it is the duty of all honest men to face the situation, and to refuse to be put off with sham solutions of the difficulty. It is his endeavour to present a plain case for a practical purpose, to avoid all recondite speculations, to ask straight questions, and finally, in his own words, to urge that nothing is to be gained by clinging to what is untenable, or in shutting our eyes to what cannot honestly be denied. He says what he has to say, not in a spirit of agnosticism, if agnosticism means a despair of spiritual truth, but in that of free and hopeful inquiry.

The first essay, which gives its title to the book, is a review of Prof. Drummond's 'Ascent of Man,' of Mr. Kidd's 'Social Evolution,' and of Mr. Balfour's 'Foundations of Belief,' or rather of the general positions assumed by those writers. He finds little to praise in any of them—so little, indeed, that it is difficult not to feel that he fails to distinguish between the respective claims which they possess on the attention of the thoughtful reader. But it must also be acknowledged that with singular precision he puts his finger on the faults of their arguments. He points out that among Prof. Drummond's other fantastic doctrines, his conviction that evolution is not only the sole method of creation, but is also identical with love, implies that Providence could only attain its end at the expense of wholesale carnage and suffering. He shows, too, that this conviction requires us to recognize the paramount value of a type which is destined one day to perish with the world itself, and that this is a recognition which bears hardly on our hearts and intellects. In examining Mr. Kidd's theory that progress is due to the subordination of reason to the extra-rational sanction of religion, Mr. Goldwin Smith has an easy task in proving that no man acts in conscious opposition to his reason; that social considerations are far from being extra-rational; that self-interest is not the less real or effective because it takes a sympathetic, domestic, or social colour; and that a good deal of nonsense is talked about altruism. Nor does he consider that an attempt, like Mr. Balfour's, to bring the world back to faith by showing the consequences of scepticism, is likely to be successful, or that the faith which is the product of ecclesiastical pressure or intellectual despair is anything but veiled unbelief. He challenges the opposition in which Mr. Balfour places reason and authority; he rightly observes that the psychic process of deference to authority, of whatever kind, is capable of being presented in a rational form, and cannot be called non-rational; and he pertinently asks for some analysis of authority itself which shall distinguish it from venerable imposture.

Having thus noticed some recent attempts to throw light into the dark places of religious controversy, Mr. Goldwin Smith passes to the consideration of the special doctrines of Christianity. He points out that many liberal theologians have renounced their belief in the historical character of the Pentateuch. From that he concludes that they have surrendered their belief in the Fall; and he argues that this also involves a surrender of belief in the doctrines of the Incarnation and Atonement, a consequence, however, which theologians, liberal and other, strenuously resist. He denounces, with great warmth and some asperity, what he calls the subterfuge of "partial inspiration," and the scheme by which literal truth is exchanged for truth that is merely figurative or symbolical. Here he is a little too severe on the theologians, who use the words "figurative" and "symbolical" when they often mean no more than "moral." To understand their point of view more strictly, Mr. Goldwin Smith might, perhaps, do well to read a sermon by Canon Gore on the bearing of the doctrine of evolution on the story of the Fall, where that eminent Churchman contrives to find in that story a testimony to the truth of the doctrine of moral responsibility. How Mr. Goldwin Smith would receive this explanation, and what account he would give of it, may be inferred from a passage in which he asks, with Voltairean candour, how Providence could allow such narratives to be received as literal truths for ages, how it could let them stay the advance of science, and when science at last prevailed, how it could suffer revelation to be discredited by the exposure of their weakness.

The two essays on 'The Church and the Old Testament' and 'The Miraculous Element in Christianity' form a good popular statement of the difficulties which confront the adherents of the traditional creed. Mr. Goldwin Smith does not mince matters. He believes that the world has passed the point at which frank treatment of religious questions can be regarded as a wanton disturbance of faith. The theologians themselves, he observes, have abandoned much that was previously thought essential; and all that he is doing is to carry certain arguments to their logical conclusions. A reader must be careless, however, who does not detect some inconsistency in the way in which the task is discharged. Mr. Goldwin Smith admits that as "a manifestation of the divine" the Hebrew books may keep a place in our love and admiration. He admits, too, that hardly anywhere is there to be found a moral force equal in intensity to that of the Hebrew prophets. But he has no contempt too bitter for the opinion that modern religion and modern life are to be governed by Jewish thought or take their colour from it, because it has little geniality or humour, and no share in science or art. It is assuredly not by its humour or by its scientific qualities that Hebrew literature has kept its place in the world or continues to make its appeal, but by its moral earnestness. Nor, again, is it quite fair in Mr. Goldwin Smith to ridicule the theologians who hold that the Old Testament contains both a human and a divine element, and to ask them for the test which shall distinguish the one from the other, if he himself looks upon the Hebrew books as in any sense a manifestation of the divine, and fails to indicate the reasons which prevent him from asserting that they are entirely human. If it is tampering with the intellect and the conscience to attempt, like the theologians, to hold on and also to let go, how is a process to be described which clings to a word, and then empties it of all its meaning?

In his observations on the question whether there is or is not another life, and on the relation between morality and theism, Mr. Goldwin Smith shows clearly that he is in no wise content with a negative attitude towards religious faith and hope. To what his positive attitude leads him, however, it is not easy to say. He reviews some of the usual arguments in support of the doctrine of immortality, and finds them insufficient; but ultimately he seems to think that we must listen to any intimation of nature which may whisper that death is not the end, even though the intimation cannot possibly be brought to the usual tests. Some such intimation he seems to discover in the dictates of our moral nature. A good and beautiful character, he says, may be prized by the soul of the universe, if the universe has a soul. But when Mr. Goldwin Smith uses this language—and he uses it in all sincerity—by what right does he condemn mysticism in such unsparing terms? If, he says, there is a Supreme Being, as our hearts tell us, he cares for us; he knows our perplexities. Our moral nature gives us certain indications. The good that we do to others yields us more satisfaction than the good we do to ourselves: a fact which seems to him to show that the author of our nature has a purpose with us. All this Mr. Balfour recognizes when he declares that "mysticism is an undying element in human thought"; and yet Mr. Goldwin Smith, criticizing that statement, takes all the value out of his own suggestions by saying roundly that the mystic merely imposes on himself, and creates by a subtle sophistication of his own mind the cloudy object of his faith and worship. Then, again, he maintains that if the belief in God should be withdrawn, a fair substitute for theism in its moral effect would be provided by the thought of the impenetrable mystery of existence and the immensity of the universe. But at the same time he lays it down as an elementary proposition that the re-established religion, whatever it may be, must make such an impression on uncultivated minds as will exhibit itself in worship; and that unless it can influence the mind, for instance, of a coalheaver, it will be of no avail. What satisfaction or consolation will a coalheaver find in contemplating the impenetrable mystery of existence?

These are blemishes in a book which deserves to be widely read. In the prosecution of that free and hopeful inquiry of which the author speaks it is needful that much should be destroyed; but an excess of zeal in the work of destruction is apt to frustrate the attempt to rebuild.

Letters received by the East India Company from its Servants in the East.—Vol. I. 1602–1613. With an Introduction by Frederick Charles Danvers. (Sampson Low & Co.)

The history of the Company which founded an empire greater than that over which the Roman eagle held sway remains yet to be written. Materials are not lacking, for the men who founded that empire left behind them careful record of how the foundation-stones of the huge fabric were laid: Court Books, Factory Diaries, Consultations, and books of general correspondence. But the custodians of these priceless historical materials never sufficiently appreciated their worth, and many of them have been lost and some destroyed by the ravages of time. However, by rare good fortune, a few of the oldest escaped destruction, and these having attracted the notice of Mr. Stevens, of Vermont, U.S., the first volume (1599–1603) of the Court Books was carefully transcribed, edited, and printed by him—and no work was ever edited with greater care and accuracy. Mr. Stevens intended to write an exhaustive introduction, but he was unfortunately prevented by failing health and the pressure of other work. The task was undertaken by Sir George Birdwood, and he furnished the volume with a preface in which he not only called attention to the particular points of interest in the papers, but discussed, in words glowing with enthusiasm, the hopes and ambitions of the strong men who were the pioneers of England's supremacy in the East.

Soon after the publication of 'The Dawn of British Trade to the East Indies,' Mr. Bernard Quaritch offered in most generous terms to bring out a second volume of the records, if Sir George Birdwood would select the contents and edit them for the press. Sir George accepted the offer, and at first thought of the second volume of the Court Books, but ultimately settled on the folio generally known as the 'Miscellaneous Court Book,' chiefly because of the obscurity it had lain in for three hundred years, whereas the Court Books had been made familiar to us through Mr. Noel Sainsbury's invaluable Calendars. The 'Miscellaneous Court Book,' edited by Sir George Birdwood and Mr. W. Foster of the India Office, was published under its proper title, 'The Register of Letters, &c., of the Governour and Company of Merchants of London trading into the East Indies.' The volume is a model of good work, and is worthy to rank with the Calendars of State Papers issued from time to time by the Rolls Office. The text was a rigidly accurate copy of the MS., and in order that no liberty might be taken with the originals, even the blunders were reproduced. Most of these are self-evident, but where they might possibly prove misleading an explanatory note was appended. In the same spirit of scrupulous adherence to Mr. Henry Stevens's plan of reproduction, the original punctuation was preserved, and the notes supplied by Mr. Foster were of the greatest service on account of the wide reading and research which they contained. The preface by Sir George Birdwood, though marred by the introduction of some irrelevant matter, was delightful reading, and contained much new information on the subjects to which the documents related.

Mr. Frederick Danvers, Registrar and Superintendent of Records, India Office, informs his readers in his preface that "the present work may be considered as in continuation of the 'First Letter-Book of the East India Company,' printed by Mr. Quaritch in 1893." The volume, we are also told, is printed under the authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council, and therefore has received official recognition. The circumstances of the case would, therefore, justify scholars in hoping that the book would be a trustworthy link in a chain, a worthy contribution to a good series. But such expectations are swiftly dispelled by the preface. We are told:—

"Some changes have been made in the form of its production, the principal being that it has been thought advisable, firstly, to modernise the spelling of the manuscripts (except as regards place-names, which are given as in the original, but with the modern names within brackets), and, secondly, to refrain from any attempt at annotation, the introduction and glossary having rendered the latter unnecessary."

To modernize the spelling or in any way tamper with ancient documents is rightly regarded by experts as a cardinal sin. It destroys their picturesqueness and old-world flavour, and renders them useless to the serious student of history. Calendars are of the nature of guides to the original papers, and are of chief service to those who visit the depositories where they are stored; but selections are meant for those who cannot have access to the documents, and, to be of any service, must be a reproduction, verbatim et literatim, of the original evidence. Modernized spelling is of service only to persons who wish to acquire a superficial knowledge of the contents of the papers without the trouble of studying them; but this is a class not to be encouraged. In Mr. Sainsbury's Calendars (of which no mention is made in the preface or introduction) all the important matter found in the present volume is printed with the old spelling retained, and some of the documents have been already printed in extenso in other works. Sir George Birdwood was wise in his decision not to go over ground which had been trodden by so experienced an antiquary as Mr. Sainsbury. He extracted the best ore from the mine, and while the new matter in the present volume can hardly fail to be of interest to those who appreciate the minutiæ of historic detail, we doubt whether the papers are of sufficient worth to justify their publication in extenso. Sir Henry Yule, who examined the Court Books, declared their publication would be an endless task. There are forty volumes, and it would take a century to edit them as they should be edited, and as Sir Henry Yule would have edited them. Mr. Danvers modestly proposes to issue "a first series which will, it is estimated, occupy ten volumes and contain a narrative of events from 1603, the date of the earliest document extant, to about July, 1619." These volumes will take at least ten years to issue. If the records of the India Office are to be edited on this scale, the future historian of the Indian empire will have to reach the ripe age of Methuselah before he can commence his work. A comprehensive account of the rise and progress of the British dominion in India is greatly and urgently needed, but the work can only be accomplished by the Secretary of State extending, to use the words of Sir George Birdwood, "the utmost possible assistance to trained scholars of recognized literary capacity" willing to select and edit the important papers relating to well-defined epochs, and to preface them with introductions in which the principal results are sifted.

In the introduction to the volume before us sufficient effort is not made to analyze the papers. Mr. Danvers merely attempts to exhibit in a broad and general form the dawn of our trade with the East, and he seems unable to recognize the fact that there are some historical events which men of ordinary intelligence and education are presumed to know. We are told:—

"Alexander the Great destroyed Tyre and made himself master of Egypt (B.C. 332), where he founded the city of Alexandria, to serve as a commercial port on the Mediterranean for the Eastern trade which passed up the Red Sea. On the death of Alexander, Egypt fell to the Ptolemies, under whom arts, commerce, manufactures, agriculture, and navigation obtained a most extraordinary development; Alexandria became the first mart in the world, and its importance in that respect was carefully nurtured when Egypt became a Roman province."

We are further informed that

"Carthage waged a long struggle with Rome, but it was impossible that they should both continue to prosper, and the Punic wars at length sealed the doom of the former."

A meagre summary is given of the wonderful voyages which the daring seamen of the spacious times of Elizabeth made year by year in those small sea-tubs the Red Dragon, the Hector, the Ascension, the Susan, the Trade's Increase, and the Peppercorn. The preface lacks the enthusiasm which made Sir George Birdwood's history of Europe's early trade with the East so profoundly interesting.

It is impossible to agree with Mr. Danvers that the introduction and glossary have rendered any attempt at annotation unnecessary. Short biographical and geographical notes might with advantage have been added, commodities explained, and perplexing terms made more clear. The glossary is compiled from books which are easily accessible—Yule's 'Hobson-Jobson,' Whitworth's 'Anglo-Indian Glossary,' and Webster's English dictionary. We have, for example:—

"Bonnet, an addition to a sail, or an additional part laced to the foot of a sail, in moderate winds."

In Webster we have:—

"An addition to a sail, or an additional part laced to the foot of a sail, in small vessels and in moderate winds."

Why "in small vessels" should be omitted it is hard to tell. If Webster is copied he should be copied accurately. If 'A New English Dictionary' had been consulted, the compiler would have found that bonnet is, it is true, an additional piece of canvas laced to the foot of a sail to catch more wind, but also

"it appears to have been formerly laced to the top of the sail, or to have been itself a top-sail. Hence 'To vale [or vail] a bonnet.' ....'Then let them vale [or take off] a bonet of their proud sayle.'"

The following can hardly be regarded as a necessary or instructive note: "Beeves, cattle." Most men are supposed to have read their Bible and their Milton. Again, we have:—

"Bilboes, a sort of stocks or wooden shackles for the feet, used for punishing offenders at sea."

Here it would have been better to adhere to the text of Webster.

Again:—

"Base, the smallest kind of ordnance in use at this period."

'The First Letter-Book' gives:—

"Base, the smallest kind of cannon used in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. It weighed about 200 lb., had a bore of an inch and a quarter, and threw a ball ½ lb. in weight."

Taffeta, the glossary informs us, is "a silk cloth with a wavy lustre." But this is Webster sadly mutilated. He states it to be "a fine smooth stuff of silk, having usually a wavy lustre imparted by pressure and heat, with the application of an acidulous fluid to produce the effect called watering."

The volume is well printed on good paper, and this enhances the regret that the original manuscripts were not reproduced in faithful typography. In fact, as we had to point out when reviewing a former publication of Mr. Danvers's, 'The List of Marine Records of the late East India Company' (Athen. No. 3604), Mr. Danvers does not rise to the level of his opportunities. His position at the India Office confers on him the control of a set of documents full of romantic adventure and peculiarly interesting to Englishmen, yet by his manner of publishing them he goes far to deprive them of their native attractiveness, and transmutes his silver into lead with a steady persistency painful to observe. It seems almost vain to hope that he will yet learn to better his methods.

Selections from the Letters of De Brosses. Translated by Lord Ronald Gower. (Kegan Paul & Co.)

We had certainly supposed De Brosses's 'Lettres Historiques et Critiques sur l'Italie,' from which the selection before us is taken, to be more generally known than their translator says. Nor do we understand why he should give 1839 as the date of their first appearance, for the edition with which we are acquainted was published in 1799. The tour itself was made in 1739–40, and, as recorded by the light-hearted young lawyer, is in great part interesting. The sightseer's catalogue of achievements is relieved by a peculiarly jaunty style, which might almost enable De Brosses to boast with Addison of having "mentioned but few Things in common with others that are not either set in a new Light, or accompany'd with different Reflections." This tinge of individuality is needful, as Misson, who for the preceding fifty years had already been well utilized by tourists, was De Brosses's vade-mecum as far as Rome, where the book, being naturally enough upon the Index, was confiscated by the Inquisition.

Though Lord Ronald in his work of selection has omitted, amongst other matters, numerous lengthy disquisitions on painting, still enough of such criticisms remain to show that in art fashion changes more completely than in any other subject, theology perhaps excepted. And it is for this reason that amongst the descriptions of Italy in the eighteenth century we ourselves, though amused by De Brosses, prefer the works of Dupaty, of Duclos, and of the Abbé Richard, men who, unlike mere virtuosi, partook of the newly awakened curiosity in the social condition of the people, and inquired into the administration of justice, finance, and charity; the state of hospitals and galleys; the management of government monopolies; the number of the population, &c. Yet it must be confessed that there is a certain monotony in such investigations, for, except in Tuscany, they generally lead us to conclude with Gorani that to the omnipotent aristocracy "the people were of no more account than the cattle on a farm," and to accept as a reason for their quiescence Dupaty's assertion: "La mesure de l'oppression qu'on peut supporter n'est pas encore à son comble. .....On croit cependant la goutte de trop inévitable: la patience du peuple est lasse." Perhaps the very fact that the house of Lorraine had, as Duclos assures us, the grateful people and peasants for panegyrists ('Œuvres de Duclos,' vol. vii. p. 172), explains why De Brosses, mixing with none but the wealthy classes, represented the then newly imported family as despised, and the Florentines as living only in the hope of getting for their ruler Don Philip of Spain, son-in-law of the French king.

No diversity of opinion, however, existed as to the supremacy of Florence over all Italy in the cultivation of "literature, art, philosophy, and mathematics," whilst the society, "brighter and cleverer than elsewhere," exhibited "incredible luxury" in equipages, dress, and furniture. But "the only town which looks like a capital city is Naples; the life, the number of the people, the noise in the streets, the endless carriages, combined with a brilliant Court.....give a look of Paris or London for which one seeks in vain in Rome"; nevertheless "there is an air of constraint in the society, the assemblies are not agreeable, and there is a kind of varnish of artificiality and superstition that pervades the whole place." The Neapolitan populace is denounced as "the most abominable, the most disgusting vermin that have ever crawled on earth." But neither in these selections nor yet in the original letters do we find De Brosses tracing the demoralization of high and low to its source, the preponderance of the ecclesiastical element. In proportion to the population, the number of persons dedicated to the Church in the kingdom of Naples in 1766 was three times as large as in France (Duclos, vol. vii. p. 108).

Though De Brosses was amiable enough to esteem Rome as "the most beautiful city in the world, Paris not excepted," he found that the juxtaposition of hovels and palaces "makes one think that Rome is still suffering from its burning by the Gauls, and that when it was rebuilt after the fire every person put up his dwelling in the first vacant space that came to hand." The Tiber was "rarely crossed except by the bridges of St. Angelo and Sixtus, for the other bridges are more or less ruinous"; quays were much needed, whilst the Jews' quarters by the river bank were "a perfect kennel." Travellers in those days invariably sought accommodation in the Piazza di Spagna or its immediate neighbourhood, and as invariably complained with De Brosses of the wondrous scarcity of good hotels; in fact, a guide-book of 1774 tells us: "A Rome il n'y a point d'auberge comme dans les autres endroits" ('Portefeuille à qui font le Tour d'Italie'). The English swarmed, and won favour by their liberality; but the thorough detestation entertained throughout Italy for the French was as palpable to De Brosses as it had been early in the century to Addison. Still, the Frenchman made his way in society well enough to be able to give good sketches of some of the leading figures of the Papal Court—of Cardinals de Tencin, Passionei, and Aquaviva; of Clement XII. and of his immediate successor, Cardinal Lambertini, better known as Benedict XIV., "a capital fellow, without any kind of pre-tension.....witty, gay, and possessed of literary talent.....apt to use certain expletive particles not of a strictly orthodox kind," who told "most amusing stories of the Bolognese ladies and gossip about the Court of Rome."

Having previously made acquaintance at Florence with Baron de Stock, who had been "sent out of Rome as being a spy of the Pretender's," De Brosses now appears as the welcome guest of the royal exile, who, with his young sons, was living in "a huge but ugly building" "in the Piazza of the SS. Apostoli" — "an ultra dévot," looking "not only sad but silly," and passing his mornings in prayer at the grave of his wife in the neighbouring church. Such information as De Brosses could retail about the Chevalier and his family was eagerly received by the English visitors in Rome, as, he declares, they were "forbidden, on pain of capital punishment, to enter the palace of the Stuarts." We do not know why, having permitted his author to record the large sums granted to the Pretender by France, Spain, and the Papal Court, Lord Ronald does not let De Brosses finish his story and describe how, in recognition of De Tencin's efforts to get the French annuity of 100,000 livres replaced on its former footing, and in gratitude, moreover, for a gift of 500,000 livres from the ecclesiastic's own purse, "le prétendant lui a donné sa nomination au chapeau de cardinal" (De Brosses, vol. ii. p. 358, ed. 1799). The right to make such a nomination had, Duclos tells us, been conferred by the Pope in 1712 on the Chevalier St. George, who ever after used his privilege in favour of Frenchmen, receiving from each a present of 100,000 écus (Duclos, vol. vii. p. 72).

There is no need to dwell on De Brosses's sojourn in Bologna, where, under the Papal Legate, "the most essential of all duties is to go thrice a week to the opera"; nor to refer to his visit to "the minute republic" of Lucca; nor to Leghorn (here rendered as "Livorno"), "a little pocket town, quite new, pretty enough to put into one's snuff-box," where "every nation can exercise its religion freely"; nor to Ferrara, "vast, spacious, and deserted"; nor to Milan, whose "people are the most delightful in Italy," for "their habits closely resemble" those of the French; nor to Genoa, which he treats rather disdainfully; nor even to Venice, where he fully enters into all the joyousness of "the revel of the earth, the masque of Italy." We would note, however, that when De Brosses writes of Genoese nobles, "gens de 400,000 livres de rente, qui n'en mangent pas 30,000" (vol. i. p. 65), Lord Ronald renders the latter sum as "thirty livres in the year" (p. 3). According to the references given in the index (p. 317), the Procurator Tiepolo, librarian of St. Mark's Palace, and Giambatista Tiepolo the painter (both contemporaries of De Brosses) become one and the same person, who, moreover, is said to be represented in Paul Veronese's 'Wedding of Cana.' The book is most meagrely annotated.

If it be worth while to issue this handsomely got-up translation, we wonder the honour of publication has never been accorded to the travels in Italy of Comte de Caylus, a contemporary of De Brosses. The manuscript, which we saw a few years ago in the Laurentian Library in Florence, appeared interesting, though difficult to decipher.

Recollections of Fenians and Fenianism. By John O'Leary. 2 vols. (Downey & Co.)

"Here at last we have a really exciting Irish book!" is the exclamation with which, no doubt, many readers have opened Mr. O'Leary's recollections; for to those who are past thirty years of age Fenianism was a vague, romantic terror in childhood, and later we have all been told to believe in the immense moral superiority of the Fenian movement over the agitations which have succeeded it. Compared with the modern Nationalist, the Fenian was a fine fellow: he dealt in deeds, not words; he risked his skin, and cheated nobody; he was a rebel, but he was a man of action. We know exactly what he wanted, and know, too, that he never had the slightest chance of getting it. Viewed from the safe distance of a quarter of a century, the Fenian is a somewhat romantic figure, who may be cast either for the hero or villain of the piece at will. And among Fenians none has been more respected than Mr. O'Leary. It may be that he is regarded as a picturesque relic rather than a living force; but those who differ from him most (and even those who differ from him least) have always accepted him as an honourable opponent and a person of literary tastes. It is, then, no proof of sympathy with Fenianism to take up this reminiscence of the Hillside men with the expectation of reading an exciting, well-told tale. But, alas! Mr. O'Leary is a disappointed man, and he now repays disappointment with disappointment. Life is a sad and soured affair to him in these later days. He is bitter and disillusioned, and his book is written on grey paper with a leaden pen dipped in gall, so that we say to ourselves on every page, Can this be John O'Leary? Can the high-couraged rebel of '66 be the carping, sneering critic of '96? It may be that disappointment can make a great soul small and a sweet nature sour, but disappointment is only less sure than death: it is the common lot, and not to one human being in a nation does life fulfil the dreams of youth: the man who lets himself be soured by a fate so universal is little of a philosopher.

True, it does not befall us all to pass the best years of life in gaol; but then we are not all rebels. Mr. O'Leary's fate was no harder than the fate which commonly befalls soldiers; it is no worse to suffer imprisonment for a beloved cause than to lose an eye, a nose, a leg, or a lung, for your country's honour. Yet multitudes of maimed and mutilated soldiers grow into genial old men, and, happily, the majority of those who intend to write their name in fire, but leave it writ in water, accept their destiny with the quiet heroism called patience.

Not so Mr. O'Leary: he is too proud and too well bred to say, to hint, even to feel, that his own fate is hard; but he is disillusioned—as he himself says, is "certainly very little in love with the present," and there are few men, measures, or countries at which he does not sneer. That the rebel of the sixties should view the agitator of the nineties with disfavour is natural enough: we can understand Mr. O'Leary's dislike of "the union of hearts, fools, and rogues," and "these men of no property with a vengeance, our wonderful 86 [Nationalist M.P.s], to mention no others. No one would accuse them of means any more than merit or birth." Most men whose day has gone by mistrust those who have succeeded them: it is natural that the newspaper editor of a generation ago should bemoan the "general decay and degradation of the so-called National press," and that the leader who strove to sever Ireland from the empire should despise the "patriotic Boycotters and Plan of Campaigners, quite willing that England should rule, but wanting to get as much as they could out of their landlords, and, indeed, out of everybody else," especially as the modern programme proved more successful than the policy of "thorough" practised by Mr. O'Leary and his associates. Thus we understand and forgive his too frequent laments at the degeneracy of this age; it is the universal tendency of the old, and would move sympathy if contrasted with a generous appreciation of the giants who walked the earth some thirty years ago; but Mr. O'Leary views the past with the same glass as the present, and Thomas Davis, whom he never knew, and John Martin, who was never a power in politics, are almost the only persons of whom he writes with affection. We say "almost," for we find one man always alluded to most kindly as a garrulous, well-meaning fellow who can talk an infinite deal of nothing—more than any man in all Ireland. But then Mr. O'Leary is of that large minority among Irishmen who have a theoretic contempt for the spoken or written word; though, so far as we can find from these volumes, the orthodox high-class Fenians talked and wrote about rebellion and did not rebel, while the agitators of the eighties, if they relied on a war of words only, did really reduce the country to a condition which differed in name only from civil war. As often happens, the advice "Don't hold him under the pump" has proved more provocative of action than more warlike counsel. In the matter of rebellion the Land Leaguers did what they could to the extreme limit of their power, while the Hillside men, unable to do what they would, did nothing; for the dynamiters of a later day are either not Fenians at all, or "Fenians seduced by the Land League." On Mr. O'Leary's own showing the Fenian movement was never really popular, and was always in want of money, and, with a candour amazing in a conspirator, he lets us see how frail the antagonist of England really was:—

> "Up to the starting of the paper, towards the close of the year '63, the organization was comparatively limited in numbers, and more or less confined to certain localities.....The limitation, both as to number and place, was, I am thoroughly convinced, altogether due to the lack of money."

Nor has he more illusions or more subterfuge in regard to the leaders; he does not hide from us the common clay of which the arch Fenians were made. O'Mahony, though excellent and lovable, "had no very striking or salient qualities of mind," and was distinguished by "morbid sensibility" (surely an undesirable trait in a rebel!), and was, moreover, "somewhat suspicious—an unpleasant consequence of a fit of temporary insanity."

This O'Mahony, of handsome person and upright character, was the leader of Fenianism in America, and was always at loggerheads with the Irish leader Stephens, who is clearly no favourite with our author. "Amiable he never could be: he was vain, arrogant, with a most inordinate belief in his own powers and proportionate contempt for others," "without a trace of charity or humility in his composition." Worse than all, "it was impossible to disentangle fact from fancy in his talk; you often could not in the least believe what he said," and much more to the same effect. On the other hand, "Stephens had not a good word to say for any of the Young Ireland party," and Mr. O'Leary himself has very few, his praise of those whom he liked being of the faintest—for Lalor's "nature had contracted a sort of moral twist"; "Mr. Smith O'Brien was without any soldierly quality except personal courage"; Duffy, "if he had not abandoned the national programme, was at least inclined to put it into the background"; and B. Dillon is passed over in eloquent silence. Meagher was "weak of will"; and of Mitchel "I did not take away so favourable an impression as I had expected; I cannot say that I ever found him what I should at all call genial or particularly sympathetic." He "grew dissatisfied most certainly with the prospects and very much with the personnel of Fenianism. Stephens he could never endure, and the dislike was mutual." In short, Mitchel appears to have been another soured and disappointed man.

But while the Young Irelanders displeased the Fenians on one hand, A. M. Sullivan and the priests were even more odious on the other, and a good part of the second volume is filled with an account of the struggle between the Irish People, of which Mr. O'Leary was editor, and "prevaricating priests and contradictory bishops." Mr. O'Leary's antagonism to the priest in politics is one with which most people sympathize, even though they have less reason than he for resenting clerical interference. His book clearly demonstrates that the opposition of the Roman Catholic clergy was the most formidable antagonist with which Fenianism had to contend; and whatever our opinion on the sincerity of the alliance between the "patriotic Boycotters and Plan of Campaigners" and the clergy, there is no doubt that the latter-day patriots profited by the experience of their fathers when they secured the priests on their side.

That Mr. O'Leary should hate England is natural enough; he would be a poor creature if he did not, for it is impossible to read this book without feeling how theoretic was the high treason for which the sentence of twenty years' imprisonment was passed on him. This harsh treatment he passes over almost in silence, whereby he proves the sincerity of his bad opinion of "the prejudiced and brutal English mind." England behaved, as he felt sure she would behave, without intelligence or generosity; and he says no word of the dreary years of captivity, and very few of his trial, but what he does say is not at all violent or, from his point of view, unfair:—

"Then came what I thought at the time the ablest speech against me. This was the charge of the judge, Mr. Justice Fitzgerald, who..... took upon himself the rôle of advocate, and, as it seemed to me, of a not over fair one. For instance, dwelling on what was called the 'Executive document,' where it said 'show this to Charles and John,' Mr. Justice Fitzgerald read to the jurors 'show this to Charles Kickham and John O'Leary,' giving no inkling at first of the fact that he was interpreting and not quoting, and when this was pointed out to him, at my suggestion, by Dowse, he simply said that what he read (or rather read into it) was what the thing meant."

Here Mr. O'Leary takes leave of us; of his imprisonment he says only incidentally:

"I am not a man to mourn over the loss of a cravat any more than of breeches; nor, of course, am I at all desirous, or I hope capable, of in any way following in the wake of any of our late plank-bedded, two-monthed (or even six-monthed) martyrs."

NEW NOVELS.

Phroso. By Anthony Hope. (Methuen & Co.)

For the moment Anthony Hope appears to have lost some of his cunning. Of course, this book is not dull—nothing he writes could be; but in the form of adventure which he has chosen he does not seem to have hit upon a subject suited to his talents. Anthony Hope succeeds chiefly in delineating the play of a highly civilized and hypertrophied passion, in the subtlety of delicate and courtly innuendo, and in the kindly cynic's observation of the comedy of manners. Here he has attempted the thoroughgoing novel of adventure, with its irretrievable villain, its peerless heroine, and its Bayard of a hero; the hairbreadth escapes, the plentiful effusion of gore, and the satisfactory ending. 'The Prisoner of Zenda' succeeded where this does not, because in that the tragedy constantly staggered on the edge of burlesque: it was, in fact, perfected by its unreality. But in 'Phroso' the undercurrent of satire is wanting, and the critical moments, which are numerous, are not quite real enough to stand on their own merits. In all of them is felt, not the inspiration of a Dumas or a Scott, but the ingenuity of a brilliant writer who conscientiously piles on the agony with a cleverness which extorts admiration, but no conviction. For example, the great scene where the hero and the villain are brought face to face before the multitude is a marvel of construction; but the alternating fortunes of the two disputants, while at first exciting, end by wearying from excess of smartness. Moreover, it seems to us a grave fault of construction that the book should be cut into two such distinct halves as it is at the end of that scene. Here seems a very natural ending for the book, and with the appearance of the Pasha almost a new story is begun. The hero himself in this book is not nearly so pleasing as the hero in 'The Prisoner of Zenda.' He relates the story himself, and in so doing is too ostentatious in his avoidance of appearing priggish; he is not actually a prig, but he is something very like it; in fact, he is an exaggeration of Anthony Hope's favourite type of hero. On the other hand, whenever a dialogue takes place the book is charming, especially in the half-fencing, half-ironic kinds of dialogue in which the author delights. Some of Lord Wheatley's conversations with the Pasha are entirely worthy of the author, but the gem of the whole book seems to us a conversation near the end between Lord Wheatley and Mrs. Hipgrave, a bit of comedy full of happy turns of expression quite worthy of the 'Dolly Dialogues.' In conclusion, it must be said that if almost anybody else but Anthony Hope had written this book, one would have been delighted with it.

The Quest of the Golden Girl. By R. Le Gallienne. (Lane.)

Life was to R. L. Stevenson a road on which he walked in boyish quest of adventure, and this attitude of his has been adopted by younger writers with irritating frequency. Here the idea of a walking tour in search of the Golden Girl (or ideal wife) suits the desultory and fanciful irresponsibility of Mr. Le Gallienne's style. The adventures of the hero, related in the first person, are very loosely strung together, with little confidences to the reader, and reflections on the lack of progress in the story, which smack of "padding." At other times the author is fluent to excess. His reflections on a single look are:—

"Similarly in that moment I seemed to have dived into this unknown girl's eyes, to have walked through the treasure palaces of her soul, to have stood before the flaming gates of her heart, to have gathered silver flowers in the fairy gardens of her dreams. I had followed her white-robed spirit across the moonlit meadows of her fancy, and by her side had climbed the dewy ladder of the morning star, and then suddenly I had been whirled up again to the daylight through the magic fountains of her eyes."

There is more yet, but this will probably suffice. And surely oaths, barmaids, and whiskey-and-soda were out of place in a fanciful and frankly impossible idyl such as this. Mr. Le Gallienne has enough wit and fancy to do without these wearisome adjuncts of some modern humour. The plain sensuality of many pages, the insistence on details modern taste has agreed to leave unmentioned, is a much more serious matter. Sentimental journeys nowadays should surely leave out some of Sterne's effects. There is here, not to mince matters, much of that "odd and most uncomfortable coarseness" which, we are told on good authority, distinguishes "the bright boy of fiction." Mr. Le Gallienne can write a good deal better than he has done in 'The Quest of the Golden Girl.'

Glamour. By Meta Orred. (Lane.)

In spite of interesting and even brilliant passages, 'Glamour' is not a successful story. It is often picturesque, but it is never satisfactory. There is too much about people who "have power over one another"; a theme is suggested and is even developed, but is suddenly found to have no importance in the story; the grammar is often faulty, and the "double-shotted" epithets are too numerous. In places the story suggests that some radical change has been made in the plot, and that the alterations necessitated thereby have escaped attention. The scene is laid partly in an old English country house and partly in Italy, the time is nearly that of to-day, and yet the hero says :—

"'Perhaps we are ghosts, perhaps we live to be ghosts before we die; ghosts of our former selves, ghosts of what we might have been.' 'That is a hard saying,' said Lady Noell quietly, 'bitter to say and bitter to feel.'"

So far as we can judge it is not bitter, but simply silly. Fortunately the passage is one which does not characterize the whole volume.

Charity Chance. By Walter Raymond. (Bliss, Sands & Co.)

Babblecombe, the scene of Walter Raymond's story, will be easily identified by those who know the Somersetshire and Devonshire coast of the Bristol Channel. The scenery and the life of the quiet village and harbour are excellently described, and the story has just sufficient momentum to carry the reader to the end. The heroine is a young lady who would gladly exchange her rich and lazy fiancé for one with whom she might share a struggle for existence; and she possesses the courage of her opinions. The story, slight as it is, is well and carefully told. The author, like his heroine, might have taxed himself with something more substantial.

The Old Ecstasies. By Gaspard Trehern. (Bellairs & Co.)

That the question of sex is of paramount importance is a truth so obvious that it may fairly be called a truism. Mr. Trehern, however, thinks that there is still something left for him to say about it, and his views are expressed ad nauseam and with much similarity by his four principal characters. Two of these being early ejected from the scene, the interest of the book, such as it is, centres entirely upon the evolution of the "dancing girl" after her marriage with the inventor. The experiences of the latter (narrated by himself, as is the whole story) have obviously a solid foundation of truth, and bear testimony to the faithful study of one class of women, and to the results, acting upon a morbid imagination, of the society of one of that class. This is all that can be said, except that the author could hardly have chosen a more slovenly or unimpressive manner of delivering himself. The sentences are either ostentatiously short or unduly long, interlarded with slang and besprinkled with adjectives of which "brainy" is a fair specimen. It is to be hoped that before he attempts another psychological treatise—novel it can hardly be called—Mr. Trehern will learn to discriminate between the use and misuse of the English language.

The Village and the Doctor. By James Gordon. (Methuen & Co.)

The village doctor is breaking down in health; he has a large family to support, and a quantity of bad debts, for the rustic community, which agrees that "it 's al'ays best to call the doctor," seldom pays him except with a load or two of hay for his overworked horse. Finally, when he has been goaded to death by village censure, there is an outburst of affectionate gratitude for his memory. This, briefly, is the picture, probably true enough, supplied in the present volume, and it is one, like others from the pen of those who know, which does not impress the reader in favour of the English villager. There is, however, sufficient pathos and humour in the telling, and a sufficient comprehension of the rustic mind, to atone in some measure for the sadness. Moreover, all the scenes in the book are not concerned with the doctor, and the majority of them are certainly meant to entertain us; and in this laudable intention they would succeed better if they were less long-winded. As it is, 'Bishop Allsop,' which deals with the election of a wife to the Parish Council, is really amusing, whereas 'The Unknown Beast' and 'The Wooing of the Churchwarden' are very tedious. The 'Hermit of the Whispers' is a chapter as disagreeable as it is unlikely, but we are bound to say that it is the only one of the eight sketches of which this may with truth be said.

The Man of Straw. By Edwin Pugh. (Heinemann.)

"A murderer of women's souls and a woman's body, self-confessed," is the subject of Mr. Pugh's narrative. His wife, described as everything that is admirable, finally acts as his executioner in order that he may not be identified and tried for murder, and she may save her children from such a hideous memory. The whole course of this man's career is carefully traced for the reader's delectation. No detail of horror is suffered to stand unrecorded. The author is so anxious to preserve the fidelity of his story that some of the worst words in the language are to be found in this volume. The fashion of the day is said to permit fiction of this class, and is even thought to encourage its production. On the other hand, Mr. Pugh at times shows considerable literary skill, and here and there we meet with a graphic and well-described scene. But the gruesome narrative soon comes to the surface again and effaces every pleasant impression. A sense of humour is rarely to be met with. The hero is one John Coldershaw; we should be surprised if his name ever became famous in fiction. Some of Mr. Pugh's readers may perhaps be puzzled by such an expression as "the Asiatic half of the Mediterranean."

Jean d'Agrève. Par le Vicomte M. de Vogüé. (Paris, Colin & Cie.)

An Academician is expected to be able to describe in excellent French, and both love passages and the scenery of Hyères and its islands lie well within M. de Vogüé's powers; but he does not, perhaps, possess the gift of romance. However that may be, there is no action and little development of character in his new book.

BOOKS OF TRAVEL.

The Constantinople described in Mrs. Max Müller's Letters from Constantinople (Longman), though the description is only three years old, seems already to belong to another world. There is no sound or anticipation of the coming horrors. The author speaks with keen appreciation both of the architectural glories, structural and decorative, of the principal mosques, tombs, and fountains—whatever the demerits of the Turk, he belongs to a great building race—and of the beauty of the surrounding scenery, intensified for the party by enjoyable picnics; her account, too, of the picturesque old Byzantine walls is duly seasoned with historical allusions. All this is no doubt familiar ground to many of her readers, but even for these it will be pleasant to have such scenes recalled by a sympathetic and intelligent writer. More than one imposing spectacle is also well described. For most readers, however, the chief interest of these letters will lie in the glimpses (not often vouchsafed to the passing traveller) of the private life of the upper-class Turk, which, as far as they go, seem to prove some real refinement and culture. A paper by Prof. Max Müller (for a few of the "Letters" bear his initials) contains some account of the labours of Hamdi Bey, the well-known Turkish archæologist, and of the treasures he has collected. The skill and energy he has shown in exhuming the great Syrian sarcophagi, and establishing a museum for them at Constantinople, are decidedly remarkable, though, as the Professor hints, the European archæologist perceives something grotesque in the destination of these important finds, and thinks their natural resting-place would be the British Museum or the Louvre. But behind Hamdi Bey is the influence of the Sultan Abd el Hamid, always active, we are told, in support of culture and learning. Recollecting the events of the last two years and the Sultan's apparent complicity with them, we rub our eyes as we read his portraiture in these pages. Not that much weight need be attached to his hospitality and condescending politeness, or even to his bestowal of the "Order of Mercy" on Mrs. Max Müller, by all which she, naturally enough, is greatly impressed; but his love of children, his interest in literature, his active encouragement of education—a whole system of elementary schools, for girls as well as boys, was initiated, we are told, by him, and is supported from his private resources; these are hardly the characteristics of a gloomy and murderous fanatic. And "nemo repente fuit turpissimus." The Professor in one letter speaks of Turkish religious fanaticism as a thing of the past, and anyhow under control of the law, as in other countries. And he says in a note, "I do not alter this, for it was true at the time." Both writers, indeed, insist that the hatred felt towards the Armenians is purely racial and political, and they attribute much evil to the action of the Powers in limiting their efforts to the relief of the Christian populations, instead of working for a general reform of the Government. But these great questions are beyond our present scope.

If ephemeral books of travel must be written, the writers may take some useful hints from Mr. R. H. Russell in The Edge of the Orient (Kegan Paul). He possesses a sense of the humorous as well as of the picturesque aspects of things, and a feeling of proportion, so that he is never dull. He cannot really, as the result of a coasting voyage in an Austrian Lloyd's steamer down the east side of the Adriatic, impart much information; but he leaves you with the pleasant impression of some really beautiful scenery, quaint old towns, and picturesque costumes; a climate superior to that of the Riviera, and a region of historic interest—although one would like to know more about the "guns captured in the seventh century from the Turks by the Venetians"; also about "Juno Augusta, consort of Emperor Augustus." Half the volume is, wisely, devoted to the voyage from Trieste to Montenegro, which to the tourist is comparatively unfamiliar ground. The rest of his tour embraces Constantinople, Smyrna, Damascus, and Egypt, but on this well-beaten track—though he seems to have travelled leisurely enough—he confines himself to a few salient reminiscences and chatty impressions. The volume is liberally illustrated—indeed, quite one-third of it consists of illustrations, most of them the produce of the author's kodak, which are well chosen, and often decidedly successful. As author and printer are American it is useless to complain that the spelling is not English.

Over the Andes, from the Argentine to Chili and Peru, by May Crommelin (Bentley & Son), is a specimen of a type of book which is now familiar: a mixture of description and gossip such as pleases the taste of the present day. Miss Crommelin was a guest at the British embassy in Buenos Ayres; she was taken to see all the sights, and was informed, among other things, that butter was made by the easy process of putting milk into a can and riding into town with it—the jolting doing the churning. Then, under the most favourable auspices, she took the train for six hundred miles across the Pampas to Mendoza; thence, always under distinguished protection, she continued as far as the Trans-Andine railway was laid in 1894; crossed the Uspallata Pass on a mule, sleeping one night at Las Vacas; reached Juncal, where her "room was one of three in a new wooden building apart, kept sacredly for superior travellers; our English Minister and his wife, crossing lately from Chili, had occupied these"; and then bowled merrily down by train, passing Santa Rosa de los Andes, to Valparaiso. Very pleasantly written are her experiences of the foregoing and of all that she saw in Chili, and somewhat amusing, as well as illogical, are a few of the things that she must have been told; for instance, that "while the corruption of morals among the men, not excepting the priests, is proverbial, and said to be even worse than in the Argentine, never did I hear a word of reproach breathed against the conduct of the gentle Chilenas." The fact that some of the Chilian ladies are admirers of Miss Crommelin's numerous novels may possibly account for this statement. After a visit to Santiago she took steamer for the north, furnished with letters of introduction from "our Minister in Chili to the chief British representatives in Peru," and landed at Callao, the port of Lima, in the grey drizzle of an August morning. One of the biennial revolutions was going on, and Miss Crommelin was thereby prevented from making an excursion to the summit of the Cordillera by the Oroya railway; but she reproduces a great deal of gossip about the Chilian invasion and the fratricidal strife, while she seems to have thoroughly enjoyed "the City of the Kings," especially its cemetery. She gloats over the "shapeless horrors" surrounding the "thing" which was exhibited in the cathedral as the embalmed body of Pizarro, remarking, "That is all that remains of the cruel conqueror's heart and brain"; but we may comfort her with the assurance that there have been many corpses of Pizarro, and a cynical relic-hunter (still living) only left off collecting when he had amassed five great toes of the Conquistador. The descriptions of Lima society, as the author saw it, are clever, and readers who are not well informed will have their minds improved by the rubbing-in of the fact that the greater part of the coast of Peru, although in the tropics, is shrouded for several months of the year in a damp mist, which takes the place of rain, and exercises a decidedly unpleasant effect upon the temperature. The book contains upwards of twenty illustrations, most of them good and to the purpose; but we must object to the insertion of a plate of Cuzco, where Miss Crommelin never was, and to the libel conveyed on a very ugly woman by calling her a "cannibal from the Pérené region." When nothing is known of savage and hostile Indians, it is easy to call them cannibals; but if any addicted to such diet exist in the montaña of Peru, which is open to doubt, a delicacy like human flesh is reserved for warriors, even the flesh of monkeys being denied to women among some of the friendly tribes. The Spanish is fairly correct, though with a tendency to run into Italian; and the slang term for a Frenchman is not "gabocho," but gavacho, an ugly word likely to be followed by a blow. On the whole Miss Crommelin has produced an agreeable book of travel; but as regards her advice to her lady friends to "go and do likewise," we would suggest that the journey might prove less uniformly pleasant to those who were unprovided with similar credentials.

M. Taine's posthumous volume, Carnets de Voyage: Notes sur la Province, 1863–1865 (Hachette), dates from an interesting and happy period in his life. After his years of solitary work when he reached manhood, followed by his conflicts with the authorities of the Second Empire, who, wishing to keep well with the Church, worried him out of the professorial career, Taine arrived at a remarkable position during the decade before the war, and though still young he became the chief of a school, his principles of criticism and philosophical doctrines exercising a strong influence both on his contemporaries and the generation which was growing up. It was at this epoch, after his travels in England and the appearance of his 'Histoire de la Littérature Anglaise,' that he was appointed itinerant examiner of candidates for the military college of St. Cyr—a post which was particularly agreeable to him as the modest salary was for one of his simple habits a comfortable competence, earned by only three months of assiduous official work, which, though it took him from his literary labours, afforded him the opportunity of making intimate acquaintance with the provinces. For ten years he had always had in his mind the idea of his great treatise on the 'Origins of Contemporary France,' which was not quite completed when he died in 1893, and these forced provincial journeys allowed him to make a minute investigation into the composition of French society, department by department. Thus in this volume we find him interrogating his old college friends whom he found established as country schoolmasters or as functionaries, and eliciting information from bourgeois, peasants, and artisans. The existence of the rough notes was always known by his friends, as in his correspondence he often expressed the intention of founding upon them a book on the model of his 'Notes sur l'Angleterre'; but the idea was never carried out, so his family came to the good resolution of publishing them just as he left them in his unrevised memorandum books, often written in pencil. The result is a little volume of high interest, and Taine was such a keen observer, such a master of accurate expression, and possessed such a rapid faculty for classification that the book gives the impression of being a finished literary work rather than a collection of uncorrected notes. He takes his readers all over France, from Brittany, with its Catholic peasantry, to the Nord, with its calm Flemish population. We have glimpses of the modest prosperity of provincial bourgeoisie, of the faded and penurious pretension of the noblesse of Poitou; the blithe alertness of the Bordelais is contrasted with the more exuberant southern types of Toulouse and Marseilles; and at Strasbourg one can incidentally see how struck Taine was with the German temperament in Alsace, and how little effort was made by the French authorities to gallicize the population. To the student and the traveller the book is equally attractive, and the family of M. Taine is much to be thanked for giving to the world the impressions of the great philosopher on the people which he knew better than any of his countrymen, recorded before his view was saddened by the war, the Commune, and the harsh conditions of the peace of 1871.

SYRIAC PHILOLOGY.

We notice with great pleasure the appearance of the first fasciculus of the Compendious Syriac Dictionary (Oxford, Clarendon Press), by Miss J. Payne Smith (Mrs. Margoliouth), founded upon the 'Thesaurus Syriacus' of her father, reaching from a (alef) to the eighth letter (cheth). The compiler is known to have been the right hand of the late Dean of Canterbury in his 'Thesaurus,' which, happily left by him nearly complete, is being carried through the press by Prof. and Mrs. Margoliouth. We can only confirm the opinion expressed in the Athenæum upon the specimen which came to our hands. The author is concise, clear, and has well chosen the sentences in which the words are explained, which are derived mostly from Biblical passages. The explanations being in English, this work will certainly be more handy to English students than Dr. Brockelmann's, which was brought out somewhat hurriedly, and is, therefore, not always clear. More will be said of it when it is finished (we believe in four fasciculi), and the preface will explain its methods.

The Rev. R. H. Charles, after having issued the translation of the Book of Enoch from the Ethiopic, and his edition of the Ethiopic text of the Book of Jubilees, accompanied by a provisional English version, now continues his series with the English translation of The Apocalypse of Baruch (Black), from the Syriac. The Greek translation and the Hebrew original of it are at present lost, except some short sentences quoted in rabbinical literature "and in a late Apocalypse of Baruch recently discovered in Greek and in Slavonic." "Happily," says Mr. Charles in his introduction, "the Syriac has been preserved almost in its entirety in a sixth century MS., the discovery of which we owe to the distinguished Italian scholar Ceriani," who published a Latin translation of it in 1866, and the Syriac text in 1871 and 1883. Mr. Charles has made his translation directly from the Syriac, emending the text by the underlying Hebrew, which the translator often did not rightly understand, as can be seen by referring to the notes to the translation. But before saying a word concerning the Hebrew which Mr. Charles supposes to underlie the text, we shall give some account of the preface, or rather the introduction. This contains the following sections: (1) A Short account of the book; (2) other books of Baruch; (3) the Syriac MSS.; (4) previous literature on the Apocalypse of Baruch; (5) the Syriac—a translation of the Greek; (6) the Greek—a translation from a Hebrew original. This chapter is most important, for it shows that the original of Baruch was Hebrew and not Greek, as some still hold. Mr. Charles's arguments are the following: (a) The quotations from the Old Testament agree in all cases but one with the Masoretic text and not with the LXX. (b) Hebrew idioms survive in the Syriac text. (c) Unintelligible expressions in the Syriac can be explained and the text restored by retranslation into Hebrew. (d) Many paronomasiæ discover themselves on retranslation into Hebrew. (e) One or two passages of this book have been preserved in rabbinic writings. Mr. Charles's chief argument for his theory is the many paronomasiæ which must have occurred, as, for instance, in xlviii. 35, "strength humiliated into contempt" (עז יורד אל בוז), and "beauty will become a scorn" (יופי יהיה לדפי). It is interesting to note that the play on the name of Hezekiah in Ecclus. xlviii. 22, conjectured by Mr. Charles in support of his retranslation of Baruch lxiii. 7, is confirmed by the newly discovered Hebrew original of Ecclesiasticus, which reads, נבי עשה יחזקיהו את הטוב ויחזק ברדכי דוד. Other paronomasiæ proposed are less plausible. It is, however, questionable whether the writer of the Apocalypse of Baruch would, at a period so late as 50 A.D. (the date accepted by Mr. Charles), have used classical Hebrew, while the Sentences of the Fathers (Pirqê Aboth) of that time and even earlier are already tinged with rabbinic. The rest of the introduction will be interesting even for those who deny the main conclusion of a Hebrew original, which, in our opinion, can hardly be questioned. The indices also are carefully compiled and will prove useful. Scholars should be glad to have the critical Syriac text of the Epistle of Baruch (chap. lxxviii. to the end), based on the authority of ten manuscripts, many of them collated now for the first time. Previous editions were derived from a single MS. In conclusion, it may safely be asserted that in this book Mr. Charles fully maintains his high standard of scholarship, and every one will be glad to know that he continues to work in the field of apocryphal literature, in which he has already made himself one of the leading authorities.

It is but a short time since the Keeper of the Egyptian and Assyrian Antiquities in the British Museum gave to Semitists the Ethiopic version of the history of Alexander the Great, with an English translation and copious notes. Dr. Wallis Budge now goes back to his old love, viz., Syriac literature, and has hit upon a treatise as useful as it is amusing, viz., the collection of stories entitled The Laughable Stories (Luzac & Co.), compiled by the famous Mâr Gregory John Bar-Hebræus about 1313, to which he has added an English translation and notes. In the preface there is a description of the MSS. of which the editor made use, and the life of the compiler of the stories follows in the introduction. The laughable stories are ethical sentences which are attributed to philosophers of the various nations of antiquity, Greek, Persian, Indian, Hebrew, Christian, Mohammedan, &c., in Syriac with an English translation and copious notes, containing quotations from other sources. Dr. Budge's book will be welcome as a handy reading-book for advanced students of Syriac, but in the mean time the stories will be an addition to the literature of gnomes and proverbs, of which so many are found in India, and in Persian, Hebrew, and Arabic, although not yet published. Dr. Budge traces this literature back to about 3800 B.C. He says in the preface :—

"Lists of proverbs and moral and religious aphorisms have been the normal product of the writers of the East from the time when Kaqemna, who flourished in the reign of Huni, King of Egypt, about B.C. 3800, wrote his 'Book of Instructions'; but the work of Bar-Hebræus differs considerably from them all, inasmuch as the soundest and best teaching, both as regards the present and the future life, is successfully inculcated by means of a series of concise sayings and stories culled from some of the best literatures of the world."

We are happy to say that Dr. Budge's new book is well edited and translated as far as we can judge.

MILITARY AND NAVAL LITERATURE.

We have received the second volume of the Life of Napoleon Bonaparte, by Prof. W. M. Sloane, of Princeton University, published in New York by the Century Company and in London by Messrs. Macmillan & Co., and we find it up to the high level which the first volume had inclined us to expect. At the same time it is to be regretted that the volume covers a very long period, and shows that the history is not to be on so extended a scale as the first volume had led the reader to anticipate. The present instalment carries him from the Directory in 1797 to Auerstädt in 1806, and covers, of course, the Egyptian expedition, the whole Consulate, the Peace of Amiens, the declaration of the Empire, Trafalgar, Austerlitz, and Jéna. It is magnificently illustrated, as was the first volume, although the inclusion of some inferior depictions of persons and scenes, and the exclusion of some which would have been superior, are again noticeable. Some of the cuts from great or celebrated pictures are unfortunately bad, as, for example, the reproduction of the Gérard 'Josephine,' which is a caricature of the picture—a picture which is already well known in this country from much better reproductions. Of criticisms of detail, we have to suggest that it is difficult to understand what Prof. Sloane means by saying that the fleet which convoyed the Egyptian expedition was "nearly the equal of any which France had ever launched." It was not a fleet to compare with the French fleet which had disputed the command of the seas with England in the eighteenth century, nor, relatively, to compare with the French fleet of the time of Charles II. The domestic life of Bonaparte is not much touched upon in the present volume, which is, if a fault, perhaps a fault on the right side in a day the Napoleonic literature of which has been over full on the personal side and too little concerned with historical matter of more real moment. On the question of the invasion of England the author pronounces a confident opinion that Napoleon was perfectly aware that the command of the sea was outside his reach. We confess to the belief that there is no proof that this is so, and that, while Napoleon often made the statement, his actions do not seem to have pointed conclusively in either the one or the other direction. We are inclined to doubt whether he even thoroughly realized what the command of the sea meant.

We so often have to deal with incompetent translation and misleading notes when French memoirs are in question that it is a pleasure to welcome the Memoirs of Baron Lejeune, aide-de-camp to Berthier, translated into English and edited by Mrs. Arthur Bell, and published in two volumes by Messrs. Longman. There is an excellent introduction by General Maurice, and the military notes are done with so much care that we are inclined to think that, although they are signed "Trans.," General Maurice must have had a hand in them. We do not consider Lejeune interesting, but his memoirs are more valuable memoirs, and far more trustworthy, than many of those with which the public has lately been regaled.

M. Léon Chailley, of Paris, publishes, under the general title of Les Guerres de la Révolution, an eleventh part, Hondschoote. The operations of the French Army of the North, which are described in it, are not of much historical interest, and they are hardly told in a style which will make them valuable to soldiers.

M. Calmann Lévy publishes Guerre et Marine, a reprint of some articles which have lately appeared in the Revue de Paris and other French magazines on the naval power of England, the proposed French colonial army, the battle of the Yalu, the strategy connected with the Kiel Canal, and the expedition to Madagascar. The article on the naval power of England is chiefly made out of British authorities, and does not contain any original French view of our situation. It is said of our reserve, "They never can be sure of getting them"; and of our lieutenants, "They are 800 short at least"; while of our mobilization it is asserted that it is "buoying" ourselves "up with false hopes" to suppose that the ships which we are told will be ready in either twenty-four or forty-eight hours will be ready in anything like the time, and our annual manœuvres are pressed into the service to prove the case.

Au Drapeau! (Hachette), by M. Maurice Loir, is a selection from the memoirs of numerous generals and the writings of various authors detailing incidents in the history of the colours of the French army and the capture of the flags of their opponents from 1793 to 1896. The tendency, as in similar English volumes, is to encourage chauvinism. The illustrations are first rate; some of them, indeed, are really admirable. — A work of more intrinsic value which Messrs. Hachette have sent us is an excellent life of Vauban by M. Georges Michel. A better biography of a great soldier for popular reading we have not seen, and the cuts are excellent. This handsome volume, bound in cloth, costs only four francs.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Messrs. Isbister & Co. publish The Book of Parliament, by Mr. Michael Macdonagh, a most vivid and generally accurate account of the House of Commons and the House of Lords and their manners and customs. The book is thoroughly readable, and ought to have a success with the general public. We somewhat wonder to find the Queen's Speeches of recent years, ascribed to Mr. Gladstone and Lord Salisbury, called "graphic, terse, and forcible." The Queen's Speeches of Lord Beaconsfield are said to be "ornate in style"; but the first of two examples given is not, we believe, to be found in such a document, and is taken from a speech of Mr. Disraeli delivered in the House of Commons, and not put into the mouth of Her Majesty the Queen.

Those who are interested in the Jameson raid have long since read the writings on the subject of Mr. E. Garrett, the editor of the Cape Times, which have appeared in South Africa. Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co. now publish The Story of an African Crisis, by Mr. E. Garrett and Mr. E. J. Edwards, his assistant editor and special correspondent. The book as reprinted here is, in fact, the Christmas number of the Cape Times, with the addition of some new matter. The introduction, by Mr. Garrett, has reference to the inquiry by a Committee of the House of Commons now pending. It attacks the officers who were put in prison, and especially Sir John Willoughby, and declares that "the 'cowards' held their tongues and took their beating: it was the 'heroes' who peached!" It is stated that Sir John Willoughby and his friends tried to shelter themselves behind Mr. Chamberlain. When the War Office were intending to take away the commissions of Sir John Willoughby and his friends they were confronted by "this plea":—

"What Lord Lansdowne did was simple and obvious.....To Mr. Chamberlain the whole story traced back: to Mr. Chamberlain he referred it. .....Lord Lansdowne communicated with him, told him the story, and asked plainly whether there was anything in it. Mr. Chamberlain replied by telegram, with equal plainness, that there was absolutely nothing in it whatever.....One zealous lawyer carried on a correspondence with Mr. Chamberlain which almost took on a tone of threatening. Mr. Chamberlain is a bad man to bully, and he broke the correspondence off after what he indignantly described as a 'blackmailing letter.'"

M. Calmann Lévy publishes La Véritable Histoire de 'Elle et Lui,' by the Vicomte de Spoelberch de Lovenjoul. We believe that the public is a little tired of (certainly the British public is long since disgusted at) the perpetual revival of the never-ending controversy over the unedifying connexion between Alfred de Musset and George Sand. Those who can still feel any interest in the question have already read what has appeared in Cosmopolis, in the Revue de Paris, and in the Figaro, and this volume gives us virtually nothing else. The particular circumstances under which George Sand deceived Musset with the young Italian doctor, who has lived to write in our time his own account of the matter, may now, we hope, be allowed to rest in oblivion.

The Official Year-Book of the Church of England (S.P.C.K.) of course contains a great mass of facts and figures, but Mr. Burnside still persists in encumbering his pages with matters sermoni propriora—properer for a sermon. He should avoid hortatory phrases, and try to give his information in a succinct form and in natural language. There are a few mistakes under the head of "University Settlements." No mention is made of the recent change of Trinity Court, and by some oversight it is implied on p. 51 that the new church of St. Frideswide cost 700*l*. In the summaries on p. xxiii we see it stated that between 1875 and 1885 643,291*l*. were expended upon the fabrics of cathedrals. It would be within the mark to say that 500,000*l.* of this large sum was misspent, wasted by ill-informed deans and canons in destroying the buildings they ought to preserve, and benefiting only Mr. Five-per-Cent. The half million thus squandered might have been usefully employed in raising the narrow incomes of the parochial clergy. This is a good annual, but a practical editor would have reduced it by some fifty pages with much advantage.—The Annual Charities Register and Digest (Longmans) was formerly issued once in four years, but has become a yearly publication. Mr. Loch's introduction, filling 180 pages, is somewhat too lengthy, and overweights the book. The rest of the volume is fairly concise.

THE first number of The Encyclopædia of Sport (Lawrence & Bullen) is extremely promising. The illustrations are excellent, and the articles on "Athletics" are written by distinguished authorities on the various branches included. "Angling" and "Archery" are also treated with fulness.

THE new volumes of the imposing edition of Mr. Meredith's novels which Messrs. Constable are issuing contain Vittoria, which first made its appearance in the Fortnightly Review under the auspices of G. H. Lewes. As we said when it appeared in three volumes in 1867, it "evinces knowledge on the part of the author of Italian life as well as of Italian revolutionary politics." Indeed, in truth of atmosphere no story of modern Italy, except 'La Chartreuse de Parme,' can compare with it, and it has the advantage of dealing with a nobler period.

WE have on our table Moab, Ammon, and Gilead, by Algernon Heber-Percy (Simpkin),—English Essays, with an Introduction by J. H. Lobban (Blackie),—Poems, by Matthew Arnold, edited by G. C. Macaulay (Macmillan),—Supplement to Hamlet, Questions and Notes, by S. Wood (J. Heywood),—Shakespeare's Heroes on the Stage, by C. E. L. Wingate (Gay & Bird),—Reminiscences of Walt Whitman, by W. S. Kennedy (Gardner),—New Thoughts on Current Subjects, by the Rev. J. A. Dewe (Stock),—Life Assurance Explained, by W. Schooling (Cassell),—Photography Annual, by H. Sturmey (Iliffe & Son),—Journal and Proceedings of the Royal Society of New South Wales, Vol. XXIX. (Robertson),—History of Oratory and Orators, by H. Hardwicke (Putnam),—A Stormy Past, by May St. Claire (Digby & Long),—Very Funny Stories told in Rhyme (S.S.U.),—Half-Holidays at the Zoo, by C. Morley and H. Friederichs (Routledge),—and Stormy Days, by L. Burdett (C.E.T.S.).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Bread from the Holy Place, Words of Testimony and Counsel, compiled by M. A. Coleby, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Cambridge Greek Testament: Philippians, with Introduction and Notes by H. C. G. Moule, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Pigott's (Rev. R. H.) The Martyr Crown, or the Seed of the Church, illustrated, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Stott's (G.) Twenty-six Years of Missionary Work in China, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Thomas's (Rev. J.) The Ideal City, the Crowning Vision of Patmos, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Watson's (J.) Christianity and Idealism, cr. 8vo. 5/ net, cl.

Fine Art.

Brown's (C.) The Horse in Art and Nature, Part 4, 4to. 2/6
Heaton's (A.) Beauty and Art, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
White's (G.) English Illustration, "The Sixties," 1855-1870, illustrated, imp. 8vo. 42/ net, cl.

Poetry and the Drama.

Dawson's (E.) The Pierrot of the Minute, a Dramatic Phantasy in One Act, 4to. 7/6 net, cl.
Symons's (A.) Amoris Victima, cr. 8vo. 6/ net, cl.

History and Biography.

Bright's (Rev. J. F.) Maria Theresa; Joseph II., cr. 8vo. 2/6 each, cl. (Foreign Statesmen.)
Carlyle's Works, Centenary Edition: Cromwell's Letters and Speeches, Vol. 1, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Chesney's (Major A. G.) Historical Records of the Maltese Corps of the British Army, 8vo. 25/ net, cl.
Innes's (Lieut.-General M.) The Sepoy Revolt, a Critical Narrative, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.

Geography and Travel.

Smith's (A. D.) Through Unknown African Countries, illustrated, royal 8vo. 21/ net, cl.

Philology.

Boissier's (G.) Cicero and his Friends, translated by A. D. Jones, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Chaucer's Canterbury Tales: The Prologue and The Man of Law's Tale, edited by A. J. Wyatt, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
MacCauley's (C.) An Introductory Course in Japanese, 10/6
Semitic Studies in Memory of Rev. Dr. A. Kohut, edited by G. A. Kohut, Portraits and Memoir, royal 8vo. 24/ cl.

Science.

Crapper's (E. H.) Practical Electrical Measurements, 2/6 cl.
Wilson's (W.) Investigations into Applied Nature, 2/ net, cl.

General Literature.

Adye's (F.) The Queen of the Moor, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Anstey's (F.) Puppets at Large, Scenes and Subjects from Mr. Punch's Show, illustrated, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Besant's (W.) Beyond the Dreams of Avarice, 12mo. 2/ bds.
Bruce's (C.) All in All, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Burdett's Official Intelligence, 1897, 4to. 50/ half bound.
Cobban's (J. M.) Wilt Thou have this Woman? cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Cooper's (E. H.) Mr. Blake of Newmarket, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Crockett's (S. R.) Lad's Love, illustrated, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Cuthell's (E. E.) Sweet Irish Eyes, a Novel, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Directory of Directors, 1897, cr. 8vo. 15/ cl.
Foreign Office List, 1897, 8vo. 6/ cl.
Gerard's (D.) A Spotless Reputation, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Hardy's (T.) The Well-Beloved, a Sketch of a Treatment, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl. (Wessex Novels.)
Hichens's (R.) Flames, a London Phantasy, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Holland's (C.) A Writer of Fiction, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Hungerford's (Mrs.) Lovice, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Kenyon's (E. C.) The Squire of Lonsdale, illus. cr. 8vo. 3/6
Le Clerc's (M. E.) Sworn Allies, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Mackie's (J.) They that Sit in Darkness, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Pain's (A.) St. Eva, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Penderel's (R.) As a Roaring Lion, a Romance, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Pickering's (S.) Margot, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Raffalovich's (A.) Self-Seekers, a Novel of Manners, 4/ net.
Sale Prices of 1896: Sales by Auction of Objects of Artistic and Antiquarian Interest, Vol. 1, 8vo. 27/ net, cl.
Wood's (Mrs. H.) The Story of Charles Strange, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Dünner: Glossen zum babylonischen u. jerusalemischen Talmud, Part 2, 4m.
Koenigsberger (B.): Hiobstudien, 2m.
Renesse (E. v.): Die Lehre der zwölf Apostel, 5m.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Kaufmann (C. M.): Die Jenseitshoffnungen der Griechen u. Römer nach den Sepulcralinschriften, 2m.
Malatier (L.) et Sallès (A.): Au Pays d'Hamlet, Instantanés Scandinaves, 35fr.
Wachsmuth (C.): Neue Beiträge zur Topographie v. Athen, 3m.

Poetry.

Jacob (G.): Studien in arabischen Dichtern: Part 4, Altarabische Parallelen zum Alten Testament, 1m.

Philosophy.

Joseph (M.): Die psychologische Grundanschauung Schopenhauer's, 3m. 60.

History and Biography.

Ingold (A. P.): Bossuet et le Jansénisme, 5fr.
Laborie (L. de L. de): Mémorial de J. de Norvins, Vol. 3, 7fr. 50.
Marquart (J.): Fundamente israelitischer u. jüdischer Geschichte, 3m.
Pierling (Le P.): La Russie et le Saint-Siège, Études Diplomatiques, II., 7fr. 50.
Strack (M. L.): Die Dynastie der Ptolemäer, 7m.

Geography and Travel.

Curtius (E.) u. Kaupert (J. A.): Karten v. Attika, Part 9, 6m. 40.

Philology.

Pischel (R.) u. Geldner (K. F.): Vedische Studien, Vol. 2, Part 2, 4m. 50.

Science.

Neumann (B.): Theorie u. Praxis der analytischen Elektrolyse der Metalle, 7m.

General Literature.

Annuaire de la Marine pour 1897, 7fr.
Beaume (G.): La Rue Saint Jean et le Moulin, 3fr. 50.
Blaize (J.): Saison Divine, 3fr. 50.
Fort (P.): Ballades Françaises en Prose, 3fr. 50.
Lebey (A.): Les Premières Luttes, 3fr. 50.
Pacheu (J.): De Dante à Verlaine, 3fr. 50.
Paris (G.): L'Anneau de la Morte, 2fr.
Rachilde: Les Hors Nature, 3fr. 50.
Simon (J.): Derniers Mémoires des Autres, 3fr. 50.

PARABLES CONCERNING ILYAS THE PROPHET.

No. 2.*

THE SLAVE GIRL'S PROGRESS TO PARADISE.

Although the Koran refers three times to the wives of the just accompanying them into Paradise (Sura xiii. 36-42), and although there is a tradition of a Paradise apart from the men reserved for the few good women whom Mohammed did not see in his vision of perdition, the popular notion in some Mohammedan countries is that women have no souls to be either blessed or damned.

[Beneath the cypress overhanging her lover's tomb the slave girl lies stretched on the stone. In the shadow thrown by the tree are seen the "wide black eyes" and the sombre wings of Azraeel, the Angel of Death.]

THE SLAVE GIRL.

Angel of Death! Hearken in yonder wood
How turtle and nightingale are murmuring "Pity";
"Pity," yon slave-girls moan who brought me food
And milk and shawls, to soothe my solitude:
See how they weep, returning to the city.

[Ilyàs the Prophet, who is passing the tomb, stops to listen.]

ILYÀS.

What sorrow, child, hath made thee fain to die?

THE SLAVE GIRL.

I would not die: this frame of mine remembers
Each touch of his which gave it sanctity,
Flickering within the body's memory,
As come and go the sparks in slumbering embers.

Save me from Azraeel—him whose sword divides
Love's dearest bonds—whose malice struck to sever
My life from one who loves me, though he bides
Where never slave girl stood, with houri brides.
I would not die, but live and weep for ever.

ILYÀS TO AZRAEEL.

Yea, Love is strong! This child would spend her days
Here on this tomb with cypress boughs for cover,
While travellers whisper as they stop and gaze
Across the graveyard, "See how love can craze!
She lives upon the tomb where sleeps her lover."

THE SLAVE GIRL.

Death knows I have no soul, and never more
Those lips shall touch the widowed lips that quiver
With memories of the light which once they wore.
Death knows I have no soul with wings to soar
To one who stands beside the Holy river.

[A spirit resembling the slave girl herself in form and feature, but winged like a Peri, descends from the sunset clouds, leaving an iridescent track behind it.]

ILYÀS TO AZRAEEL.

Lo, Allah sends a vision down the air
That leaves a rainbow track o'er thy dominions

THE SLAVE GIRL.

What shape is that which treads the Peris' stair?
It stands beside me now with shining hair,
I breathe the musk of Aidenn from its pinions.

ILYÀS.

No soulless Peri this whose eyes illume
With mirror'd radiance of celestial glory
The cypress branches round thy lover's tomb,
And flush the wings of Death with such a bloom
That Evening's rosy brow seems wan and hoary.

THE SLAVE GIRL TO THE VISION.

Spirit whose tears are falling on the stone,
Doth sorrow stamp an angel's forehead human?
Thou speakest not, but as a sight half known,
Within a dream, thy face seems like mine own,
And eyes that weep must needs be kin to woman.

AZRAEEL.

Thy lover waiteth by the Holy Lote.

THE SLAVE GIRL.

With houris?

AZRAEEL.

Nay, he loveth still a maiden.

THE SLAVE GIRL.

That maiden hath no soul to ford the moat.

ILYÀS.

Thou 'rt loved of Allah!

THE SLAVE GIRL.

Yet his servant smote
Him whom the houris dare not clasp in Aidenn.

[The spirit stoops and kisses the slave girl's forehead.]

ILYÀS.

I think the spirit's kiss upon thy brow
Seals Allah's promise of a blissful morrow.

THE SLAVE GIRL TO THE VISION.

Morrow for me! Speak, spirit, who art thou?

ILYÀS.

'Tis thine own soul—the spirit with thee now
Is thine own soul new-lit by love and sorrow.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON.

* For Parable No. 1 see Athenæum, No. 2785, p. 364, March 12th, 1881.

CROMWELL'S SPEECHES.

I SHOULD like to suggest that if Sir Reginald Palgrave's idea of a new edition of Cromwell's speeches is carried out, the editor should not content himself with searching amongst English manuscripts. There are many speeches and conversations in the reports of the Dutch ambassadors printed in the seventh volume of De Witt's 'Briever,' and a most important suppressed passage in the opening speech to the first Protectorate Parliament is only known from a mention of it in one of Bordeaux's despatches. SAMUEL R. GARDINER.

LORD BROUGHAM ON LITERARY AGENTS.

Garrick Club, February, 1897.

THE intermediaries which stand between the author and the reader are subjects of frequent discussion. The first Lord Brougham may be quoted as an instance of an early view of these questions, and I know of no other place in his writings where he expresses the same opinions as those quoted below. Speaking of Göttingen and its literary life a few years before the outbreak of the French Revolution, Lord Brougham says:—

"One of the first things that struck me in their literary condition with which my avocations naturally brought me most acquainted [sic] was the mechanical state into which authorship was come, and the recklessness with which authors would undertake works.....A middleman between the publisher and author, like a regrater between the hop-grower and the hop-merchant or the brewer, a verlager they call him, would come round to make bargains, buying up the MS. which was ready written, or else setting authors to write. Those who wanted a vent for their written works or sought employment and could not wait till applied to, being unemployed, would go to some verlager and make their bargains. When an offer was made to an author by the verlager, he only seemed to regard the terms allowed and the money to be paid for his work, never to consider whether he could well do it or not; while the verlager, on his part, though he would try to find persons capable of doing the work he wanted, yet continually made mistakes; and when there was a demand for a particular book, would not be very nice as to the qualifications of the writer he engaged with, knowing that if he got it less well done he paid the less for it. I have repeatedly seen men undertake in this way to write, let me rather say to make books, on subjects they knew hardly anything of."

'Albert Lunel' was finished by the late Lord Brougham about the year 1844. I quote from an edition printed in London in 1872, in three volumes. The only other edition (3 vols. 12mo., 1844, London) was suppressed before publication, and a few copies only were given to friends. It is not a clever novel, though in places it is interesting; it is romantic, clumsily constructed, and often carelessly written. Characters well known to the author are described in it, and one of the ladies of the story is so graphically depicted that she would not wish to be identified. Lord Brougham probably gives an account of himself and his opinions as "The Baron." His views on publishing quoted above are probably those which he held about the date of the composition in question. The old edition of the book is, of course, very rare, and the reprint is not often met with; consequently it may not be out of place to quote from it.

A. B. BENCE-JONES.

'ENGLISH SCHOOLS AT THE REFORMATION.'

MR. LEACH writes regarding our review of his book:—

"So long as he confines himself to such generalities as 'The depth of Mr. Leach's historic insight may be measured by a passage' in which I have described the ascetic outburst of the tenth and eleventh centuries as of the same kind as that of the Indian fakir, the reviewer is on safe ground. He knows, as well as I know, that the remark has nothing to do with historic insight (whatever that may mean), but with the ethico-religious point of view which is taken of asceticism in general. But when he condescends to particulars he cuts a sorry figure.

"1. As to my speaking of the boys at Ipswich School proceeding to 'Donatus, Valla, and other ancient Latin writers,' the attempt to impute error misses fire. The words are only a shortened translation of the statutes of Ipswich School, 'ad figuras a Donato præscriptas, ad Vallæ elegantias, et ad linguæ Latinæ quoslibet veteres auctores.' If your reviewer is displeased because Wolsey chose to mix the ancient Donatus and others with the mediæval Valla, he must have that out with Cardinal Wolsey, not with me.

"2. Next comes a serious matter. Your reviewer says: 'It is, perhaps, not his [i.e., my] own invention that secular canons were "ordinary clergymen who, like the canons of our cathedrals now, married and gave in marriage." We do not know by what law these persons were exempted from the canons which attempted to enforce sacerdotal celibacy.'

"Why does the unhappy man rush upon his fate like that? 'Invention' is not a nice word to use unless it can be completely justified. In this case there is not a tittle of justification. The reviewer is quite right in thinking that the historic fact in question is not my invention. So far as the knowledge of it can be credited to any individual, it is the invention, in the sense of discovery, of Bishop Stubbs. But the innuendo is a wanton one. At p. 12 of the book he was reviewing the reader is referred to a book of mine, 'Visitations and Memorials of Southwell Minster,' Camden Society, 1891. There he would have found a fact or two bearing on the point, and a reference to the locus classicus on the matter in Bishop Stubbs's 'Inventio Crucis' or 'Foundation of Waltham Abbey.' This was originally a college of secular canons of Harold's foundation, where son succeeded father as schoolmaster and chief officer of the church down to the reign of Henry I.

"But has the reviewer never seen the long list of married and hereditary priests of Hexham from the tenth to the twelfth century, or the account of the expulsion of the secular canons from Winchester by Bishop Ethelwold because they would not give up their wives? Has he never heard how Canon Greenwell dug up in the Close at Durham masses of the bones of the married canons who preceded the monks there, of their wives and children? Has it never reached him, even through the 'Encyclopædia Britannica,' that the celibacy of the clergy was not attempted to be enforced in England until after the Conquest, and was not effectively enforced until the middle of the twelfth century?

"3. Another innuendo. 'We do not know on what authority Fox is called head master of Stratford-on-Avon Grammar School.' Well, I do. It is a contemporary record of the governing body of the school, which shows him schoolmaster in 1476–7, and shows that he was no longer schoolmaster in 1483, about which time we know that he was with Henry of Richmond abroad."

1. It was, of course, not our intention to deny that Valla was read in schools. We objected to the use of the word other, and our objection is not removed by the quotation from the Ipswich statutes, which shows clearly enough that the mistake is of Mr. Leach's invention.

2. We reasonably took exception to Mr. Leach's definition of secular canons, because it is inapplicable to the whole of the period during which the canons on the question of sacerdotal celibacy were accepted or enforced.

3. We are glad that Mr. Leach has adduced authority for this statement, as it is important new material for the biography of Fox's early years.

'THE SACRED TREE.'

March 9, 1897.

MAY I ask you to insert a few lines in reply to Mr. Farnell's letter in your last issue? Mr. Farnell, commenting on your review of 'The Sacred Tree,' objects to my statement that in his opinion "the chief gods of the Greeks were in their origin deities of vegetation." Mr. Farnell's invaluable treatise did not come into my hands until my MS. was ready for the press, and I am free to admit that the conclusion quoted may have been too absolute. But that it was not altogether without justification the following brief extracts from 'The Cults of the Greek States' will show: "If Cronos was originally a divinity of vegetation, as seems most probable....." (p. 29); "The Zeus of Attica was originally a god of agriculture" (p. 57); "This sombre character of Zeus was probably derived, in Attica at least, from his functions as a deity of vegetation" (p. 66; v. also p. 48, note a). Athena "acquired certain functions as a deity of vegetation" (p. 289). "This affinity of the goddess [Athena] with the divinities of vegetation....." (p. 327). "The aboriginal Artemis was.....an independent divinity connected with the waters and with wild vegetation and beasts" (p. 427; v. also 523). Of Aphrodite Mr. Farnell says (p. 624):

"But these facts are explained if we suppose that the great goddess of anterior Asia came at an early date to the shores of Greece with the character of a divinity of vegetation."

V. also pp. 642 and 693.

In conclusion, may I point out to your reviewer that to say that a certain god was originally a deity of vegetation is widely different from the proposition that he sprang directly from the tree; that Dionysus, for instance, was, in Mr. Pater's phrase, "the spiritual form of the vine"? I certainly thought I had guarded myself from appearing to enlist Mr. Farnell as a supporter of the latter view.

I. PHILPOT.

THE DESTRUCTION OF THE SPANISH ARMADA.

IN the interests of accuracy in matters of history may I ask for space in your columns to make a few remarks upon a recent publication?

The inscription on its title-page is "A Letter written on October 4th, 1589, by Captain Cuellar of the Spanish Armada, to His Majesty King Philip II., recounting his misadventures in Ireland, and elsewhere, after the wreck of his ship. Translated from the original Spanish by Henry Dwight Sedgwick, jr. London, Elkin Mathews, Vigo Street. New York, George H. Richmond & Co. 1896."

The little book is neatly got up, in ancient fashion, to suit the subject of which it treats; but the title is misleading, unless the translator has made some new discoveries among the archives of the Academy of History in Madrid, conveying information not previously known to the public. If he has done so, he is entitled to be congratulated upon the success attending his researches; though it is to be regretted that he has not clearly stated the fact, and given his authority for asserting that Capt. Cuellar's letter was written to the king. Without strong proof to support such a statement, those of his readers who can investigate the matter for themselves in the pages of Capt. Duro's book entitled 'La Armada Invencible' will find it difficult to accept as a fact what both internal and external evidence combine to make most improbable.

It is strange, indeed, if the information lay before him, that such a careful compiler as Capt. Duro should have failed to discover that Cuellar's letter was intended for the king, and should insert it under the indefinite heading: "Letter of one who was in the Armada of England, and an account of the expedition"; while in the case of the other letters to the monarch he describes them properly as such. It is also difficult to believe that a captain in the Spanish navy would have written in such familiar terms as those contained in the letter in question to his king, who was one of the most punctilious of sovereigns.

If, however, the present translation is based upon the Spanish text, as printed in Capt. Duro's book, and not upon new documents, then it appears to me that the statement on the title-page as to the letter having been written to Philip II. is due to a misconception on the part of the translator about the meaning of some of the abbreviations made use of.

This becomes manifest in the opening sentence of Capt. Cuellar's letter, where the initials "V.m." are translated as "Your Majesty," an expression which is repeated wherever the same letters occur again, some eight or nine times throughout its pages. The explanation of the matter is that these letters—the capital V followed by a small m—stand for "Vuestra merced," which was a polite paraphrase of the personal pronoun "You," that is still current in the composite abbreviation "Usted," now represented in writing by V. It was used for untitled persons only, those of exalted rank being addressed by some other expression indicating the possession of higher dignity, as, for example, "Vuestra Excelencia" (Your Excellency), or, in contracted form, "V.E."; "Vuestra Majestad" (Your Majesty), or, in contracted form, "V.M."; the initials being always capitals in such cases.

Here I will leave this phase of the matter, merely remarking that it will be wiser for the present to keep to the view previously adopted with regard to Cuellar's letter — that it was not known to whom it was written—than to accept without sufficient proof the theory now set up of its having been addressed to King Philip II.

With reference to the subject generally, there are various places where modifications and alterations of the translation would seem desirable; but space, upon which I fear I have already trespassed too much, will not permit me to deal with them all. There are, however, two that I conceive to be mistranslations of some importance, which ought not to be passed over unnoticed, as they tend to obscure the meaning of the passages in which they occur. They will be found at the bottom of p. 79, and relate, respectively, to the position of "Manglana's" (MacClancy's) Castle, and that of the village in which his retainers lived. The castle was built in a lake, and is described by Mr. Sedgwick as being "inaccessible both by water and by the strip of land that runs up to it." This should be that it could not be taken by water nor by the shore of the land that is nearest to it. In the other he mentions that the village was built on "solid ground." "On the mainland" would be the more correct translation. Tierra firme, which are the words used, may, no doubt, be rendered literally as "solid ground," but the translator should have borne in mind the nature of the context; and I think the ordinary meaning of tierra firme, which is a very common idiomatic expression in Spanish for designating a mainland in contrast to an island, is clearly the sense it was intended to bear in this case. Robert Crawford.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

Mr. W. Heinemann's spring announcements include in History, Biography, and Travel: a translation of K. Waliszewski's 'Peter the Great,'—'The Outgoing Turk,' by Mr. H. C. Thomson,—'The New Africa: a Journey up the Chobé and down the Okovango Rivers,' by Dr. A. Schulz and Mr. A. Hammar,—'Rhodesia,' by Mr. D. F. Du Toit,—and 'Spanish Protestants in the Sixteenth Century,' compiled from Dr. Wilken's work by Miss Challice. In Belles-lettres: the first volume of the poems in Mr. Henley's edition of 'The Works of Lord Byron,'—and two volumes of the "Literatures of the World," 'A History of Ancient Greek Literature,' by Prof. Murray, of Glasgow, and 'A History of French Literature,' by Prof. Dowden. In Fiction: 'Flames: a London Phantasy,' by Mr. Hichens,—'The Fourth Napoleon,' by Mr. Charles Newbold,—'The Captain of the Parish,' by Mr. J. Quine,—'Marietta's Marriage,' by Mr. W. E. Norris,—'The War of the Worlds,' by Mr. H. G. Wells,—'The Gadfly,' by E. L. Voynich,—'Cottage Folk,' by Mrs. Comyns Carr,—'Mr. Blake of Newmarket,' by Mr. E. H. Cooper,—'The Outspan: South African Yarns,' by Mr. P. FitzPatrick,—in the "Pioneer Series," 'Love for a Key,' by G. Colmore; 'Yekl,' by A. Cahan; and 'The Freedom of Henry Meredith,' by M. Hamilton,—in "Heinemann's International Library," 'Niobe,' from the Norwegian of Jonas Lie,—in the uniform edition of Björnson's novels and tales, 'Captain Mansana and Mother's Hands' and 'Absalom's Hair and A Painful Memory,'—and 'Phantoms' in the uniform edition of Ivan Tourguénief's novels. Miscellaneous: 'Beauty and Art,' by A. Heaton,—translations of 'The Agnosticism of the Future,' by M. Guyau, and 'Lumen,' by M. C. Flammarion,—and 'Admiral Guinea' and 'Macaire,' plays by Mr. Henley and Mr. R. L. Stevenson.

Messrs. Putnam promise, in the series styled "Heroes of the Nations," 'Robert the Bruce,' by Sir Herbert Maxwell, M.P.; 'Hannibal,' by Mr. O'Connor Morris; and 'The Cid Campeador,' by Mr. Butler Clarke,—'The Nicaragua Canal and the Monroe Doctrine,' by Lindley M. Keasbey,—the third volume of 'American Orations,' edited by the late Prof. Johnston, of New Jersey, and re-edited by Prof. Woodburn, of Indiana: 'The Anti-Slavery Struggle,'—'Little Journeys to the Homes of Famous Women,' by Elbert Hubbard,—'Lawns and Gardens,' by Nils Jönsson Rose,—'The Literary Movement in France during the Nineteenth Century,' by M. G. Pellissier, translated by Anne G. Brinton,—'The Tower of the Old Schloss,' by J. P. Rudd,—Vol. III. of 'Italian Painters of the Renaissance,' by Mr. Bernhard Berenson: 'The Central Italian Painters,'—a memoir of 'Edward Hodges, Doctor in Music,' by his daughter, Miss F. H. Hodges,—'Old Dorset,' chronicles of a New York country-side, by Mr. Cameron Rogers,—'Household Economics,' by Helen Campbell,—and 'The Majestic Family Cook-Book,' by M. Adolphe Gallier.

Messrs. Swan Sonnenschein & Co. announce in Philosophy and Theology: a translation of the 'De Anima' and 'Parva Naturalia,' by Prof. Hammond, of Cornell University,—a translation of Prof. W. Wundt's 'Ethics' and of his 'Physiological Psychology,'—a translation of Prof. Külpe's 'Introduction to the Study of Philosophy,'—'Ecclesiastical Registers of the Diocese of London,' edited by the Rev. G. Hennessy,—'The Essence of Christianity,' three sermons by the late Rev. W. Bellars,—and 'Notes of Lessons on the Church Services,' adapted for Sunday-school teachers, by Mr. F. W. Hackwood. In History: 'A History of England to the Death of Stephen,' by Sir James Ramsay,—a translation of Dändliker's 'History of Switzerland,'—several new volumes of the "Social England Series,"—and 'The Evolution of the Aryan,' by Rudolph von Ihtring, translated by Mr. Drucker. In Belles-lettres, Travel, &c.: 'Specimens of Bushman Folk-lore,' by Dr. W. H. J. Bleek and Miss L. C. Lloyd,—'Round the British Empire,' by Dr. Hill, Master of Downing College, Cambridge,—'The History of England in Verse,' edited by Mr. Brimley Johnson,—'A Dictionary of Quotations (Greek and Latin),' by Mr. Harbottle,—'A Princess of Islam,' a novel by Mr. J. W. Sherer, B.C.S.,—'Poems,' by the late Mr. E. F. M. Benecke, arranged by his brother,—and 'Steps to the Temple of Happiness,' by Mr. H. Smith. In Social Economics and Politics: Vol. II. of Karl Marx on 'Capital,'—'The Social Side of the Reformation,' by Mr. Belfort Bax, Parts II. and III.,—in the "Social Science Series": 'The Progress and Prospects of Political Economy,' by Prof. J. K. Ingram; 'University Extension,' by Mr. M. E. Sadler; 'Labour Colonies,' by Prof. Mavor; and Rodbertus's 'Theory of Crises,' translated by Mr. Fabian Franklin,—Karl Marx on 'The Eastern Question,' collected and edited by his daughter, Mrs. E. Aveling,—and 'Children under the Poor Law,' by Mr. W. Chance. In Education: 'The Kindergarten System, its Origin and Development,' an adaptation of the work of Dr. A. B. Hanschmann by Fanny Franks,—'A Student's Text-Book of Universal History,' by Dr. E. Reich,—'Atlas of Modern History,' also by Dr. E. Reich,—'School Method,' based on Herbartian principles, by C. J. Dodd,—a translation of Herbart's 'Lectures on Pedagogy' and of his treatise on 'The Application of Psychology to Education,'—'An English Latin Gradus,' by Mr. S. C. Woodhouse,—'The Teacher's Manual of Phonetics: the Sounds of English,' by the late Laura Soames, edited by Prof. Vietor, of Marburg,—and two volumes of the "Parallel Grammar Series": 'Fourth French Reader and Writer,' by M. Berthon, of Nottingham; and 'A Welsh Grammar,' by Prof. E. Anwyl.

Mr. Elkin Mathews makes the following announcements: 'An Attic in Bohemia: Essays and Sketches,' by Mr. Lacon Watson,—'The Wind among the Reeds,' by Mr. Yeats,—'Essays upon Matthew Arnold,' by Mr. A. Galton,—'Fancy's Guerdon,' by Anodos ("Shilling Garland Series"),—'Spanish Idylls,' by Mr. J. Walker,—'The Canon,' by Mr. L. Hartley, with an introduction by Mr. Cunninghame Graham,—'The Joy of my Youth,' by Claud Nicholson,—'Thames Sonnets and Semblances,' by Margaret Armour and W. B. Macdougall,—and 'More Songs from Vagabondia,' by Mr. Bliss Carman and Mr. R. Hovey.

SALE.

Messrs. Sotheby sold on Monday and Tuesday last the following books: Nash's Mansions, fourth series, plates coloured and mounted like drawings, 18*l.* 10*s.* Roberts's Holy Land, subscriber's coloured copy, 29*l.* Drawings and sketches relating to Warwickshire, by T. Fisher and others, 10*l.* Whitaker's Richmondshire, large paper, india proofs of the Turner views, 14*l.* 15*s.* Ainsworth's Jack Sheppard, first edition, in the original cloth, 10*l.* 15*s.* Dibdin's Bibliotheca Spenceriana, complete, bound by Bedford, 24*l.*; Bibliographical Decameron, 3 vols., by Riviere, 14*l.* 10*s.*; Tour in France and Germany, 3 vols., by Riviere, 12*l.* 5*s.* Dickens's Sketches by Boz, the three series complete in original cloth, 29*l.* 10*s.* J. H. Jesse's Works, original editions, 20 vols., bound by Bedford, 33*l.* 10*s.* Charles Lamb's Essays of Elia, both series, first editions, by Bedford, 23*l.* Egan's Book of Sports, extra illustrated, 12*l.* 10*s.* Carey's Life in Paris, first edition, 10*l.* 10*s.* Arrian on Coursing, Bohn, 1831, extra illustrated, 10*l.* 15*s.* The Cocker, by W. Sketchley, extra illustrated, 12*l.* 5*s.*

THE REV. N. POCOCK.

We regret to hear of the decease, after a long illness, of our valued contributor Mr. Nicholas Pocock. Born in 1814, he was the grandson of the well-known marine painter Nicholas Pocock, who was one of the founders of the Old Water-Colour Society, and the cousin of George and Alfred Fripp. He went to Oxford at the early age of seventeen, obtained a First Class in Mathematics and a Second in Classics in 1834, and carried off the University Mathematical Scholarships in succession (in 1835 and 1836). He continued to reside in the University and take pupils, besides acting as a University examiner till 1852, when he married and removed to Clifton. At Clifton he remained during the rest of his life, except for a twelvemonth when he visited Codrington College in the Barbados and made a tour in the United States and Canada. For some time he continued to receive pupils; but attracted by the history of the Reformation in England, he gradually devoted his whole time to the study of it, and became one of the chief authorities on the subject. He published in 1864 an edition of Burnet's 'History of the Reformation,' and he followed this up by two volumes of 'Records of the Reformation' and a monograph on 'The Principles of the Reformation.' For the Camden Society he edited Harpsfield's 'Narrative of the Divorce' and 'Troubles connected with the Prayer Book of 1549.' Besides contributing to these columns, he wrote for the Guardian, the Saturday Review, the Edinburgh Review, and the Church Quarterly. A kind-hearted, painstaking man, he was much liked by the circle of friends who surrounded him at Clifton.

Literary Gossip.

The new volume of the 'Dictionary of National Biography,' to be published on the 26th inst., extends from Russew to Scobell. Mr. T. F. Henderson writes on Alexander and John Ruthven, the chief actors in the Gowrie plot; Mr. J. A. Hamilton on Dudley Ryder, first Earl of Harrowby; Mr. Sidney Lee on Thomas Rymer, critic and archæologist, and on Thomas Sackville, first Earl of Dorset, author of 'Gorboduc'; Mr. Lionel Cust on John Michael Rysbrack, the sculptor; Col. Vetch on General Sir Edward Sabine, P.R.S., and on Major-General Sir Robert Sale; the Rev. William Hunt on Henry Sacheverell; Sir George Sitwell on William Sacheverell, "the first Whig"; Mr. F. T. Marzials on Charles de St. Évremond; Mr. Leslie Stephen on Henry St. John, Viscount Bolingbroke; Mr. C. H. Firth on Oliver St. John, Chief Justice; Mr. H. Thomson Lyon on George Sale, translator of the Koran; the Rev. W. H. Hutton, B.D., on Archbishop Sancroft; Mr. Cosmo Monkhouse on Paul Sandby; Mr. Graves Law on Nicholas Sanders; Mr. Henry Craik, C.B., on Lord Sandford; Mr. A. F. Pollard on Sir Edwin Sandys; Mr. Richard Bagwell on Patrick Sarsfield, Earl of Lucan; Mr. E. Irving Carlyle on Richard Savage; Mr. Thomas Seccombe on Thomas Savile, Marquis of Halifax; Mr. William Carr on Sir Henry Savile; Dr. Norman Moore on Sir William Savory, the surgeon; Major Broadfoot on Tom Sayers, the prize-fighter; Col. Henry Knollys on General Sir James Yorke Scarlett; Mr. F. M. O'Donoghue on Sir George Scharf; Mr. Robert Dunlop on the Duke of Schomberg; Mr. G. C. Boase on Sir R. H. Schomburgk, who delimitated British Guiana, and on Lady Charlotte Schreiber; Dr. A. W. Ward on the Duchess of Kendal, George I.'s mistress; and Canon Leigh Bennett on C. F. Schwartz, Indian missionary.

The annual dinner of the Royal Literary Fund will take place at the Whitehall Rooms on the 5th of May. Lord Lister will preside, and he will doubtless be well supported by the many members of his own profession who are authors as well as surgeons and physicians.

The historical work to which we recently referred, in our obituary notice of General Meredith Read, as having occupied him for years, was left substantially complete, and will be shortly published by Messrs. Chatto & Windus. It is in two volumes, the full title being 'Historic Studies in Vaud, Berne, and Savoy, from Roman Times to Voltaire, Rousseau, and Gibbon.' The work, which will be preceded by a portrait and brief memoir of the author, contains original documents discovered by personal researches in family archives and elsewhere. Indeed, the author conversed with the daughter of Dr. Schöll, Gibbon's physician, and other aged persons whose parents were acquainted with the historian and his friends. Local developments attending the rise of the Reformation receive fresh light. The romance of Rousseau and Madame de Warens is reviewed in the light of new facts, and there are some curious statements concerning the love affair of Gibbon and Mlle. Curchod. Among the unpublished letters, the most numerous and remarkable are those of Gibbon, Voltaire, and Allamand. Others are from Euler, Huber, the youthful Napoleon, Tissot, Frederick the Great, Malesherbes, Philip Stanhope, Madame de Staël, Madame Necker, Madame de Montolieu, &c. A large part of the work is devoted to Gibbon and his circle at Lausanne, and among the illustrations with which the volumes are well provided is a fine engraving of a portrait of the historian in early life, found in his old home at Lausanne, La Grotte, and also a picture of this historic mansion made for the General before it was pulled down.

The report read at the meeting of the Newsvendors' Institution on Tuesday last, when Lord Glenesk took the chair, was highly satisfactory. During the past year 550*l.* has been added to the capital, which now exceeds 15,000*l.* The committee are making every effort to obtain a good sum for the Victoria Pension Fund, and hope to receive sufficient to enable them to establish several Victoria Pensions for the benefit of widows of newsvendors. Mr. Hance, the manager of the Daily Chronicle and Lloyd's News, was elected trustee in the place of the late Joseph Newstead.

We are requested by Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co. to announce that the verses appearing on the title-page of Miss Edith Johnson's novel 'A Sunless Heart' were from the pen of Mr. F. E. Kappey, and they regret that, owing to an oversight, credit was not given to him for them in an earlier edition.

Mr. T. Bailey Saunders writes from Eastbourne:—

"Reference was made in last week's Athenæum to the forthcoming celebration of the centenary of Rosmini's birth. I have been asked by Count Bossi-Fedrigotti, the chairman of the Centenary Committee at Roveredo, Rosmini's native place, to obtain the names of such Englishmen as take an interest in the philosopher and his writings, and approve of the general proposal to honour his memory. May I request them to send their names to Count Bossi-Fedrigotti, Roveredo, Süd-Tirol, Austria?"

We regret to hear of the deaths of the Dean of St. David's and Canon Heaviside of Norwich. The former was in early life Senior Mathematical Master at St. Peter's School, York, and when Warden of Llandovery made the school, which had hitherto languished, efficient and successful, and this it has continued to be. He also did much for education at Aberystwith. Canon Heaviside, who was Second Wrangler in 1830, was for several years Professor of Mathematics at Haileybury.

The prices paid on Wednesday at Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge's for the Keats MSS. were almost startling. The MS. of 'Endymion,' at 695*l.*, works out at nearly 4*l.* per page of MS., there being 181 pages in all. But the price paid for the 'Lamia,' twenty-six leaves in all, was, comparatively speaking, far higher than that paid for the 'Endymion,' inasmuch as the twenty-six leaves realized 305*l.*, or nearly 12*l.* per MS. page. It may be mentioned that of the two MSS. of William Morris also sold on Wednesday, the original holograph MS., a single-page folio of 'Mine and Thine,' a poem, realized 10*l.* 5*s.*, whilst the MS. of a story extending to six pages was appraised at 18*l.* 5*s.*

The appointment of Col. John Hay to be U.S. Ambassador at the Court of St. James's has led Messrs. Routledge to bring out a new edition of his 'Pike County Ballads.'

Early last year the Société d'Histoire et d'Archéologie de Chalons-sur-Saône selected from among its members a committee which should report upon the best means to be taken to set up a monument in honour of the memory of François Chabas, the famous French Egyptologist. The committee having obtained the support of the Municipal Council of the city, the Minister of Public Instruction was next approached on the subject, and as the result of his adhesion to the scheme a large and influential committee—which comprises most of the honoured names of the French school of Egyptology, and a few eminent foreign Egyptologists such as MM. Wiedemann, Pleyte, Lieblein, Naville, and Schiaparelli—has been formed, and steps have been taken to carry this widely-felt wish into effect. It is proposed to set up a bust of Chabas in Chalons-sur-Saône, the town of his adoption, where for more than twenty years he pursued his unremittent studies. Subscriptions may be sent to M. E. Leroux, 28, Rue Bonaparte, Paris.

Prof. G. Hoffmann, of Kiel, will contribute a paper to the forthcoming number of the Zeitschrift für Assyriologie on some Aramean inscriptions from Nêrab, near Aleppo, which are probably as old as the seventh or eighth century before Christ.

Dr. Kerler, of the University of Würzburg, has succeeded in discovering in the Neumünster of that town the place where Walther von der Vogelweide was buried about 1230. The tombstone which marked the exact spot as late as sixty years ago has unfortunately disappeared. It contained four cavities, in which, as tradition has it, the poet directed before his death that food and drink should be provided for the birds—on which legend, by-the-by, Justinus Kerner has a pretty poem. A new monument worthy of the greatest Minnesänger of Germany is expected to be erected before long in the open place between the cathedral and the Neumünster.

South Africa is attempting the solution of a problem similar in some respects to that which faces us in connexion with the University of London. The Cape University was incorporated in 1873 as an examining body, and many of its friends now seek to complete it by the addition of teaching faculties. Another proposal, commended by Chief Justice De Villiers, is to hold the examinations in the Dutch as well as in the English language.

The lyric poet Emil Rittershaus, born April 3rd, 1834, at Barmen, died there after a lingering illness on the 8th inst. Having completed his studies at the Realschule of his native town, he devoted himself to a commercial career, but appeared at an early stage as a poet. His poems at once attracted attention by their freshness and healthiness of tone and by their liberality and largeness of view. He was not quite so stormy as Freiligrath (whose intimate friend he was), nor so idyllic as Geibel, but occupied a middle position. His 'Gedichte,' first published in 1855, have gone through eight or nine editions, and his 'Freimaurerische Gedichte,' his 'Buch der Leidenschaft,' &c., have also been frequently reprinted.

The German papers report the death of Prof. August Köhler, of Erlangen. He was born at Schmalenberg, in the Palatinate, in 1835, was professor at Jena and Bonn, and had held the Chair of Old Testament Exegesis at Erlangen since 1868. He contributed largely to the last edition of Herzog and Plitt's 'Real-Encyklopädie für protestantische Theologie' and also wrote books, a 'Lehrbuch der biblischen Geschichte des Alten Testaments' and a monograph on the post-exilic prophets. The latest work from his active pen was issued a few months ago.

The Parliamentary Papers of the week include a Report on the Finances of Edinburgh University (2*d.*); two New Ordinances made by the Scottish Universities Commissioners (1*d.* each); Declaration of the Catholic Laity of Ireland on the Subject of University Education (1*d.*); and Reports on the Royal Military Colleges at Woolwich and Sandhurst (2*d.*).

SCIENCE

ATLASES AND GAZETTEERS.

The Victoria Regina Atlas. (Johnston.)—A pretentious title-page and three pages of showily coloured reproductions of national arms, flags, and so forth form an unpromising introduction to 'The Victoria Regina Atlas,' and matters are not much improved by eight celestial charts and a map of the world in two hemispheres, with comparative tables of the rivers of the world represented by straight lines above, and the mountains represented by sugar-loaves below. These old-fashioned conventionalities produce an impression that the well-known publishers of this work are not moving with the times as much as they should; and though the treatment of India in seventeen maps and the American continent in no less than thirty-seven is a decided advance on older methods, various details confirm the impression. So in the map of British East Africa it is plain that Dr. Donaldson Smith's discoveries in the neighbourhood of Lakes Rudolf, Stefanie, and Abaya have not been duly recorded; in the map of the Upper Nile the Egyptian frontier is placed far north of Dongola; no indication is given of a certain much-discussed strip of territory on the west of the Transvaal; it is impossible to trace out the journeys of Capt. Younghusband and Sir Martin Conway; and no indication at all is given of the fact that the Pamirs are no longer a terra incognita. Instances of similar omissions might be added, but those quoted are, perhaps, enough to show that the present work has not been properly brought up to date. In minor matters, too, this atlas is not what it should be. The maps of England, for example, are neither clear nor pretty. Many of the names are nearly illegible, and the railways are marked so heavily as almost to obliterate all natural features. The map of Switzerland is positively ugly, and the ignorant reader might suppose that the Aletschhorn and the Jungfrau were separated by a valley comparable to that of the Rhone. To give separate maps of, say, South Bombay and Hyderabad is a mere waste of space; and it is almost worse to cut up the maps of the United States into maps of which one contains nothing but Maine, and another only New York (West). In all the American maps, too, the railways are assigned even more prominence than they have in the maps of England, and there appears to be a considerable error in the geological and altitude maps of the North American continent. To supply two hundred maps in a most handy form is a considerable feat; but in this case we fear that their quality is decidedly below their quantity.

Philips' Handy Reference Atlas. By E. G. Ravenstein. (Philip & Son.)—The title of this work is a fair indication of its merits. Handy it certainly is, and its contents are legible and correct as far as they go. For an atlas with no pretensions to elaboration of detail it is very fairly up to date. Nansen's furthest is duly recorded, though his track is unmarked, which is a pity, as there is plenty of room for it. Jackson's discoveries in Franz Josef Land are not noticed, and we find no trace of the Siberian railway. On the other hand, the result of the Dongola expedition is made the most of, though a veil is thrown over late Italian losses in the same part of the world. The work, however, may fairly claim not to be judged by its detail; and if the reader wants to discover the position of any important place in a hurry, this atlas will be exceedingly useful if no larger one is at hand. Recent events have supplied rather difficult tests for atlases; but a moderately intelligent reader will find both Canea and Bida with the least possible waste of time; and if the exact location of the Ilorins escapes him, we do not know that he is justified in complaining of that. The maps are all distinctively and agreeably coloured, they are both numerous and well selected, and what they have to tell they tell quite plainly.

Cassell's Gazetteer. — Vol. IV. Kilteel–Newchapel. (Cassell & Co.)—The fourth volume of this excellent work has all the merits which mark its predecessors. A careful examination reveals one omission only, that, namely, of a certain Mount Pleasant which includes a railway station, a post office, and what the editor terms a "seat"; it does not, however, boast itself a parish or even a township, so we are doubtful if it properly falls within the scope of the work; moreover, six other places of the same name are included. The editor is called on to deal with London, Liverpool, and Manchester, and acquits himself creditably in each case, though the subjects are not well suited to the capacity of the work. As is, perhaps, inevitable, the accounts of certain progressive localities are not absolutely up to date. Thus it is incorrect to suggest that Merthyr Tydfil is still the principal seat of the iron manufacture in the kingdom, and Cyfartha Castle ought at least to be noticed. Again, Llanwonno is for many purposes a disintegrated parish, which fact is passed over in silence. However, these are trifling blots of very small practical importance. To the honour of Ireland it may be observed that Llan-, with only thirty-six pages, has to yield pride of place to Kil-, with fifty-six; a further and unmerited discredit is done to the nomenclature of the Principality by cutting down its champion place-name to merely Llanfairpwllgwyngyll, and omitting the euphonious termination of "ygogo." We cannot, however, suggest any additions to the forty-two Llanfihangels, whether spelt with an Anglicized v or with the correcter f. The Cambrian archæologist will note with pleasure that suitable justice is done both to Llanmihangel and Llantwit Major, the particulars relating to the latter being brought well up to date. Llangorse Lake we miss, but perhaps it may be reserved to be treated of under its Welsh name, which begins with S. All the Moels we can call to mind and a good many more are named. Mentmore we find, and a slight indication of its famous contents, but why is the name of its distinguished owner omitted? The popular associations with Medmenham Abbey, Mortlake, and Market Bosworth are not overlooked, but our reasons for remembering Mitchelstown find no place, perhaps because a gazetteer properly avoids politics. On the other hand, we are reminded that Maynooth is known to the politician. A very suitable description of Mayfair is given. The maps are of the usual merit, and in this volume are concerned with the extreme north of the United Kingdom, though the claims of London and Liverpool to special treatment in this respect are not overlooked. It may be the effect of use, but we are more reconciled to the pictures inserted in this volume than to those which lighten previous ones. The view of the Town Hall of Longton is perhaps superfluous, but those of Medmenham and Minehead are really quite pretty. So is the portrayal of Llanthony Abbey, only it is a pity that it does not represent the building generally known by that name.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

Messrs. Whittaker & Co. promise 'Central Station Electricity Supply,' by Messrs. Gay and Yeaman,—a series of 'Electrical Engineering Designs,' by Mr. G. Kapp,—'Horseless Road Locomotion,' by Mr. A. R. Sennett,—'A Railway Technical Vocabulary (French, English, and American),' by M. L. Serraillier,—a translation of MM. Loppé and Bouquet's 'Practical Treatise on Alternating Currents,'—'The Alternating Current Circuit,' by Mr. Perren Maycock,—'Railway Material Inspection,' by Mr. G. R. Bodmer,—'Organic Chemical Manipulation,' by Mr. J. T. Hewitt,—'Industrial Electro-Chemistry,' by Dr. Hoepfner,—'Whittaker's Engineers' Pocket-Book,'—'Practical Electrical Measurements,' by Mr. E. H. Crapper,—Vol. II. of 'Electric Lighting and Power Distribution,' by Mr. P. Maycock,—and 'A School Geography,' by Mr. C. Bird, of Rochester.

Messrs. Sonnenschein's scientific publications include a 'Text-Book of Palæontology for Zoological Students,' by Mr. T. T. Groom, of the Yorkshire College, Leeds,—Vol. I. of a translation of Drs. Korschelt and Heider's 'Text-Book of Embryology: Invertebrates,' by Mr. E. Pritchard,—a translation of Prof. Detmer's 'Practical Plant Physiology,'—'A Student's Text-Book of Zoology,' by Mr. A. Sedgwick, of Trinity College, Cambridge,—a translation of 'The Young Beetle-Collector's Handbook,' by Dr. E. Hofmann,—'Introduction to the Study of Organic Chemistry,' by Mr. Wade, of Guy's Hospital,—some volumes of the "Young Collector Series": 'Among the Wild Flowers,' Vol. I. (Spring), Vol. II. (Summer), by the Rev. H. Wood; 'Fishes,' by the Rev. H. A. Macpherson; 'Handbook of Grasses,' by Mr. Hutchinson; 'Mammalia,' by the Rev. H. A. Macpherson; and 'Birds' Eggs and Nests,' by Mr. Ruskin Butterfield,—and 'Radiation,' by Mr. H. H. F. Hyndman and Mr. C. H. Cribb, with an introduction by Prof. S. P. Thompson.

Messrs. L. Reeve & Co. have in the press a work on 'Respiratory Proteids,' by Dr. A. B. Griffiths, author of 'The Physiology of the Invertebrata,' &c.

SOCIETIES.

Royal.—March 4.—The President in the chair.—The Secretary read the list of candidates for election into the Society.—M. Amagat, Prof. F. Cohn, Prof. J. W. Gibbs, Prof. Rudolph P. H. Heidenhain, and Dr. R. Koch were elected Foreign Members.—The following papers were read: 'Experiments on the Absence of Mechanical Connexion between Ether and Matter,' by Prof. Lodge.—'Second Report on a Series of Specimens of the Deposits of the Nile Delta,' communicated by desire of the Delta Committee, by Prof. Judd,—'The Palæolithic Deposits at Hitchin and their Relation to the Glacial Epoch,' by Mr. C. Reid,—and 'Luminosity and Photometry,' by Prof. J. B. Haycraft.

Geological.—Feb. 24.—Dr. H. Hicks, President, in the chair.—Capt. A. R. Dwerryhouse, Messrs. P. Emary, W. D. Ferguson, C. Olden, and G. de Wolf were elected Fellows.—The following communications were read: 'On the Nature and Origin of the Rauenthal Serpentine,' by Miss C. A. Raisin, communicated by Prof. T. G. Bonney,—'On Two Boulders of Granite from the Middle Chalk of Betchworth, Surrey,' by Mr. W. P. D. Stebbing,—and 'Coal: a New Explanation of its Formation; or the Phenomena of a New Fossil Plant considered with reference to the Origin, Composition, and Formation of Coal-beds,' by Mr. W. S. Gresley.

Society of Antiquaries.—Feb. 25.—Viscount Dillon, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. H. J. F. Atkinson exhibited a number of Roman and other antiquities found at Baden (Suisse).—Mr. C. H. Read read a note on a small bronze prow of Roman date found in London.—Mr. F. Gann exhibited a number of stone implements of remarkable shapes found in British Honduras, and coloured drawings of a series of figures painted on the outer wall of a temple in the same locality.—Mr. C. E. Keyser read the first part of a paper on the panel paintings of saints, &c., on the Devonshire screens. He mentioned that a large number of churches in the county, especially in the district to the south and south-east of Dartmoor, still retained their screens with a series of Scripture subjects or saints depicted on the lower panels, and he detailed the numerous instances where, even in recent times, these panel paintings had been destroyed or removed or brown-painted over, or in too many cases renovated by well-meaning but incompetent amateur artists. A common representation is a series of apostles and prophets arranged on the alternate panels, of which good examples remain at Chudleigh, Kenton, Bovey Tracey, Ipplepen, and elsewhere. Portraits of the twelve Sibyls occur at Bradninch and Ugborough, and of one or more of them at Heavitree, Ipplepen, and probably on one or two other examples. In some instances, as at Ashton and Buckland in the Moor, the paintings appear on both faces of the screen. The very late date of many of the screens and some of the painted figures was also alluded to. The discussion on the subject was deferred till the completion of the paper.

March 4.—Sir A. W. Franks, President, and afterwards Lord Dillon, V.P., in the chair.—This being an evening appointed for the election of Fellows, no papers were read. The following gentlemen were elected Fellows: Sir F. Pollock, Revs. J. Kennedy, F. Hancock, and W. Haworth, Messrs. W. J. Kaye, R. C. Graham, T. Preston, C. A. Tennant, W. O. Roper, F. Cavendish Bentinck, and B. C. A. Windle.

British Archæological Association.—March 3.—Mr. Compton, V.P., in the chair.—A paper was read by Mr. T. Blashill, entitled 'Some Certificates as to Recusants in Holderness.' These certificates, which were about the same date, A.D. 1606, shed considerable light upon the operation of the law in the centre of Holderness, which at that time, as the author remarked, "was by its remoteness and by the absence of good roads more than usually secluded from the outside world." The church services were held twice a day on the Sabbath, morning and afternoon usually, but sometimes in the evening, and all persons were expected to attend or to produce a valid excuse. Good excuses were recognized in old age, sickness, the care of sick persons or young children, or absence from home. Failing such accepted excuses, persons absent from church were certified by the churchwardens to the justices of the peace, and were fined accordingly. Some of the certificates stated how the fines were disposed of. The recusants appear to have been mostly women of the Popish faith. The penalties were not always limited to small fines—4*s.* in one case is the amount, in other cases the offenders were excommunicated. It would appear that, taken as a whole, the people of Holderness were fairly good churchgoers.—In the discussion following the paper, the Chairman, Mr. Rayson, Mrs. Collier, Mr. Patrick, and others took part.

Archæological Institute.—March 3.—Chancellor Ferguson in the chair.—Mr. H. Wilson exhibited a small bronze image lately found at Sidcup, Kent, in digging the foundation of a house.—Mr. Ely identified the figure as probably Dionysus or Bacchus wearing a nebris or fawn's skin.—Mr. H. P. Fitz-Gerald Marriott read a paper 'On Family Portraits at Pompeii.' He endeavoured to show that all the pictures containing faces of men and women were not attempts at the delineation of heroic and mythological characters, as had previously been surmised, but were family portraits of the owners and inhabitants of the houses. Mr. Marriott stated that many of the paintings were in a very dilapidated state, by reason of their age as well as by their being injured by a small snail which works behind the painting; but of the more perfect specimens about fifty-one have been copied. Mr. Marriott exhibited photographs of about half that number, and criticized the different styles. Portraits are never found in the first or relievo style of decoration of the pre-Roman epoch. It was doubtful if they existed in the second, or period of the Republic; but in the third and delicate style of the first emperors, about A.D. 1-50, several portraits, all enclosed in square or oblong borders, but never round, are to be found. One of the earliest of these is that in the house of Marcus Epidius Sabinus. The great mass of the portraits are to be found in the fourth style, and most of these have been inserted in the walls after having been painted on an easel or on horizontal surfaces. Mr. Marriott gave a critical description of many of these in support of his theory.—In the discussion that followed Mr. Talfourd Ely and Mr. Fox, although admitting that several of the paintings were in all probability intended for portraits, yet could not but believe that the others were merely conventional subjects.

Zoological.—March 2.—Dr. W. T. Blanford, V.P., in the chair.—The Secretary exhibited two specimens of a viper recently discovered by Capt. A. H. McMahon during the survey of the Indo-Persian frontier, and named Eristicophis macmahoni (gen. et sp. nov.) by Dr. Alcock. This snake had been met with only in the sandy portions of the desert between Mushki and Persia, where it was almost impossible to detect its presence, owing to its habit of lying buried in the sand with only its head visible.—A report was read, drawn up by Mr. A. Thomson, on the insects bred in the insect-house during the year 1896, and a series of the specimens was exhibited.—Mr. G. Bolton gave an account of a recent visit to the Bird Islands in Saldanha Bay, South Africa. The photographs illustrated the life of the black-footed penguin (Spheniscus demersus) on these islands, showing these birds in groups, nest-building, sitting on their eggs, and moulting. Mr. Bolton also gave an account of the guano and egg industry carried on by the Cape Government in the Bird Islands and other adjacent islands.—Mr. W. B. Tegetmeier exhibited and made remarks upon a specimen of a starling (Sturnus vulgaris) with enormously elongated mandibles.—Mr. H. M. Wallis read a paper entitled 'The Growth of Hair upon the Human Ear, and its Testimony to the Shape, Size, and Position of the Ancestral Organ.'

Chemical.—March 4.—Mr. A. Vernon Harcourt, President, in the chair.—Fifty-seven gentlemen were elected Fellows.—The following papers were received: 'Some Hydrocarbons from American Petroleum: I. Normal and Iso-pentane,' by Dr. S. Young and Mr. G. L. Thomas,—'The Vapour Pressures, Specific Volumes, and Critical Constants of Normal Pentane, with a Note on the Critical Point,' by Dr. S. Young,—'On the Freezing-point Curves of Alloys containing Zinc,' by Messrs. C. T. Heycock and F. H. Neville,—'The Oxides of Cobalt and the Cobaltites,' by Messrs. A. H. McConnell and E. S. Hanes,—'A New Synthesis in the Sugar Group,' by Mr. H. J. H. Fenton,—'The Di-Nitrosamines of Ethylene Aniline, the Ethylene Toluidines, and their Derivatives,' by Dr. F. E. Francis,—'Contributions to the Knowledge of the β-Ketonic Acids, V.,' by Dr. S. Ruhemann and Mr. A. S. Hemmy,—and 'A Synthesis of Citric Acid,' by Dr. W. T. Lawrence.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

Mon. Victoria Institute, 4½.—'Creation or Evolution,' Dr. W. Kidd — Society of Arts, 4½.—'Alloys,' Lecture I., Prof. W. C. Roberts-Austen. (Cantor Lecture.)
— Institute of British Architects, 8
Tues. Royal Institution, 3.—'Animal Electricity,' Prof. A. D. Waller.
— Statistical, 5
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Progress of the British Colonies of Australasia during the Sixty Years of Her Majesty's Reign,' Mr. J. Bonwick.
— Folk-lore, 8.—'Death and Burial of the Fiote (French Congo),' Mr R. E. Dennett; 'Fetish View of the Human Soul,' Miss M. Kingsley.
— Civil Engineers, 8.—Further Discussion on 'The Main Drainage of London' and 'The Purification of the Thames.'
— Zoological, 8½.—'Malagasy Rodent-genus Brachyuromys and its Affinities,' Dr C. I. F. Major; 'Collection of Mammals from North and North-West Australia,' Dr R. Collett; 'Vertebrate Palæontology in South America, Notes of a Recent Tour,' Mr. A. S. Woodward; 'Distribution of Marine Mammals,' Mr. P. L. Sclater
Wed. United Service Institution, 3½.—'The Professional Study of Military History,' Col. I. Hale — Meteorological, 7½.—'Meteorological Observations in 1837 and 1897,' Mr G. J. Symons.
— Entomological, 8
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Music in England at the Queen's Accession,' Mr J. S. Curwen
— British Archæological Association, 8.—'The Old Church and Glass at Mead, Windermere,' Mrs. Collier; 'Mead and Mead Vessels,' Mr. H. Syer Cuming
— Microscopical, 8.—'On the Formation and Structure of Dental Enamel,' Mr. J. L. Williams; 'On a New Method of measuring and counting Microscopic Objects,' Mr. A. E. Wright
Thurs. Royal Institution, 3.—'Greek History and Extant Monuments,' Prof. P. Gardner.
— Royal, 4½
— Historical, 5.—'Gorce, a Lost Possession of England,' Mr. W. Frewen Lord.
— Numismatic, 7
— Linnean, 8.—'Further Observations on Stipules,' Sir J. Lubbock; 'The Origin of Transfusion-Tissue in the Leaves of Gymnospermous Plants,' Mr W. C. Worsdell
— Chemical, 8.—'The Atomic Weight of Carbon' and 'A New Series of Miscosulphates of the Vitriol Group,' Mr A. Scott; 'The Action of Alkyl Haloids on Aldoxtimes and Ketoxtimes,' Messrs W. R. Dunstan and E. Goulding
— Civil Engineers, 8.—'Bacteriology,' Dr. G. Sims Woodhead. (Fifth "James Forrest" Lecture.)
Fri. Antiquaries, 8½.—'Observations on some Works hitherto unnoticed' executed by Holbein during his First Visit to England,' Mr F. M. Nichols; 'Two Hoards of Bronze Implements from Middlesex and Essex,' Mr C. H. Read
— Royal Institution, 9.—'Greek and Latin Palæography,' Sir E. M. Thompson
Sat. Royal Institution, 3.—'Electricity and Electrical Vibrations,' Lord Rayleigh.

FINE ARTS

Ford Madox Brown: a Record of his Life and Work. By F. M. Hueffer. Illustrated. (Longmans & Co.)

(Second and Concluding Notice.)

Naturally a work compiled as this is from the personal recollections and memoranda of an artist who had friends among all classes, and had gone through many experiences, must abound in personal anecdotes told in Brown's characteristic vein, which was not always so good-humoured, nor even so charitable, as one could wish, but never failed to convey an idea of the sincerity, vigour, and originality of the man. It puts before the reader Brown's sentiments towards Rossetti and many of his friends, excepting Millais, who, indeed, stood somewhat more apart from him than any other of the set. In this crowd two or three figures are partly revealed of whom the present generation neither knows nor is likely to know much, although the work of their lives was by no means inconsiderable, nor without an influence upon those about them and their successors.

It is right to say that (despite sundry lapses from good taste, from which, doubtless, closer acquaintance with his grandfather would have saved him) Mr. Hueffer has, on the whole, treated the more difficult and delicate parts of his subject remarkably cleverly; at any rate, he shows spirit and a sense of humour which is refreshing. His task must have been all the more onerous because he could not be expected to possess any direct and personal knowledge of the most interesting and most important part of Madox Brown's career, and this has doubtless been the cause of that unreasonable prolixity to which we have already referred. A number of trivial letters are printed at length, although all that is of any value in them might have been incorporated in a few words of summary. Thanks, however, to the abundance of the materials in his possession, Mr. Hueffer has safely navigated his bark over those quicksands on which Mrs. Esther Wood ran aground when she took it into her head to write about Dante Rossetti. For instance, he is right in saying that Pre-Raphaelitism had nothing whatever in common with the "Catholic art" which at Munich and Rome was fostered by Overbeck. Indeed, with this curious revival the English Brotherhood had so little to do that it is safe to say that not more than two of the seven brethren had real knowledge of it. It was Collinson's connexion with the Church of Rome that led to this error. But our biographer is wrong in accepting Brown's idea that the P-R.B. was founded in the "winter of 1848–9," against Mr. W. M. Rossetti's statements assigning that event to September, 1848. The latter is unquestionably right, and the date fixes the point when Pre-Raphaelitism crystallized, that is, when Mr. W. M. Rossetti's duties as secretary to the society began. Its tenets, such as they were, had, of course, been discussed informally for some time. Mr. Hueffer, again, is "inclined to believe that Madox Brown was never asked to become a P-R.B." The fact is that he was never formally invited, but the names of those who sounded him, and to whom he replied that he could not accept one of the short-lived canons of the society as it then existed, are at Mr. Hueffer's service. Much the same thing happened with Deverell. He was never elected, and a rule was passed forbidding all invitations of the kind in future. Two of the three reasons which Mr. Hueffer adduces against those who assert that Brown was invited to become a P-R.B. are absurd. Of course, in his 'Holman Hunt, a Memoir,' printed in 1860, Mr. Stephens regarded Madox Brown as outside the movement. What else could he do? And where is the discrepancy Mr. Hueffer has discovered between this view and the same writer's statement in the Portfolio of 1893 that Brown, being invited, declined to join the body? Finally, a letter from Brown, now lying before us, distinctly states that what the Portfolio said concerning his relations with Rossetti and his companions is strictly correct.

What Mr. Hueffer says about the canon mentioned above, "that a model should be painted exactly, hair for hair," shows that he has not fairly weighed the phrase, which is not discredited by the instances in Rossetti's and Millais's practice that he quotes to the contrary. Surely it is one thing to lay down a canon and another to follow it invariably. Nevertheless, it was to a more than sufficient adherence to the dictum that the world owed what was at the time the most faithful and unflinching likeness of Rossetti in existence —we mean the head of Rienzi in Mr. Holman Hunt's famous picture; and to it is due the fidelity of Millais's head of Ferdinand to his model, and the thorough verisimilitude of all the heads in his 'Lorenzo and Isabella.' That Rossetti altered the colour of his sister's hair when she sat to him for the Virgin in the picture now in the National Gallery is to a great extent true; but no one, till now, supposed that he meant the lovely head to be anything else than a highly spiritualized ideal, "not a portrait of Christina Rossetti," as Mr. Hueffer calls it. The queer little girl Millais painted in his well-known illustration of Patmore's 'Woodman's Daughter' is a striking, if not happy example of what was then meant by "sticking to your model."

In another point of some importance Mr. Hueffer's book is incomplete — we mean as regards Brown's influence upon the Pre-Raphaelites, which was undoubtedly considerable, especially upon Rossetti. In our obituary notice of Brown (Athen., October 14th, 1893, p. 527) we spoke of this. 'Wickliff reading his Translation of the Bible to John of Gaunt' greatly impressed Rossetti. It brought him into personal contact with Brown, and led to an appeal to his senior for instruction in technique — an appeal made in the almost boyish letter which Mr. Hueffer quotes. The story has been often repeated that Brown — unaccustomed to such enthusiastic praise— thought the letter must be a piece of "chaff" on the part of an Academy student, such as Rossetti declared himself to be, and armed himself with a thick stick, which, if need be, he intended to employ when, by way of reply to the letter, he went to Charlotte Street. In connexion with this visit Mr. Hueffer introduces his readers to Brown's long-maintained and, it must be admitted, somewhat wrong-headed antagonism to the Royal Academy. It assumed a great place in Brown's mind, and took a morbid form that injured his relations with other men. He came, in fact, to believe that the Academicians rejected his pictures when they could, and when that was impossible hung them badly. To have reason to complain of want of appreciation is, after all, the common fate of innovators; but Brown had more than that to complain of, and it cannot be denied that his best works deserved better treatment than they received. Yet at the same time let us remember that, apart from Westminster Hall, Brown exhibited sixteen pictures before the London public, and that of these, six found places at the Academy, including the "gigantic picture," as Mr. Hueffer calls it, "of Chaucer at the Court of Edward III.," to which the Academicians allotted a large space on the walls in Trafalgar Square. It was hung in a fairly good light and a prominent place; it was, too, by far the largest picture at the Academy in 1851, and there was no chance that any visitor entering the Middle Room could overlook it.

'Christ washes Peter's Feet' is the best painting Brown sent to Trafalgar Square, and he bitterly resented the treatment it received; his version of the facts has been widely circulated, much talked about, and much misrepresented. Mr. Hueffer says:—

"The same year saw the exhibition at the Academy of the 'Christ and Peter' and the 'Pretty Baa Lambs.' The skying of the pictures and the reception awarded to them by the semi-official press proved so exasperating to Madox Brown as to bring about not only the scene with Grant, but the decision never to exhibit again at the Academy."

But so far was 'Christ and Peter' from being "skied," that it hung on what is sometimes called an "accommodated line," i.e., so that its lower margin was not more than six feet from the floor of the West Room, the room in which Millais's 'A Huguenot' and 'Ophelia,' Mr. Watts's portrait of Sir Henry Taylor, and Mr. Holman Hunt's 'Hireling Shepherd' were hung. Neither was 'The Pretty Baa Lambs,' a small and, as Mr. Hueffer truly says, "not singularly attractive picture," "skied"; it hung in the Octagon Room in a fairly good light and on the lowest line, about two feet from the floor, and close to the jamb of the door. We know nothing about the misdeeds of the "semi-official press" if such a press existed. If anything was needed to confirm our recollection of the place allotted to 'Christ and Peter,' which Mr. Hueffer (p. 85) says "hung next the ceiling," it is "the scene with Grant." As to this we have the authority of a distinguished and still living ear- and eye-witness, who says that on the Academicians' varnishing day some wet paint or oil fell on 'Christ and Peter' from above, while another picture was being operated on. "On the morning after, when the outsiders came to touch up," he adds,

"Sir Francis Grant walked up to Brown in front of the picture and told him of the accident, and how it had been immediately rectified, the picture being well dry, and that it was cleansed at once, and no harm done, and he [Grant] very nicely apologized, as he well could do, for the mishap. Brown listened to the end, and then suddenly, without a word, turned about and presented his back to Grant"!

This fully proves that the picture was not skied, and it seems to suggest that a work of some member of the Academy hung higher, so that his oil or paint fell upon 'Christ and Peter.' It seems, too, that part of Grant's motive in addressing Brown was to congratulate him on the merits of his work. Of course, had the picture been "skied" this was about the last thing Sir Francis would have ventured to do. So far was Brown from never sending again to the Academy that in the very next year his 'Waiting' (otherwise called 'An English Fireside') was No. 557 in Trafalgar Square. It hung within a foot or two of Mr. Holman Hunt's 'New College Cloisters.' What, therefore, does our author mean by saying, "Madox Brown sent no more pictures to the Academy, and saw Academic hands in every misfortune or check that he experienced throughout the rest of his life"? It is a pity Mr. Hueffer did not ascertain the facts before he wrote this. A little later he remarks:—

"The fact that Madox Brown was one of the Iconoclasts was sufficiently evident on the faces of his canvases. There seemed to be no chance of his returning to the flock of Academic lambs."

Certainly Brown was but a timid Iconoclast compared with the P-R.B. of those days, and yet the same exhibition (1852) which contained 'Christ and Peter' was enriched with Millais's 'Mrs. Coventry Patmore,' 'A Huguenot,' and 'Ophelia'; Mr. Hunt's 'Hireling Shepherd'; W. S. Burton's 'The Puritan' and two others; Mr. Arthur Hughes's 'Ophelia'; Charles Collins's 'May,' 'Convent Thoughts,' and 'St. Elizabeth of Hungary'; and works by Mark Anthony, T. Seddon, J. S. Clifton, J. W. Inchbold, and W. Cave Thomas. The first five of these had places on the line; and the next year Millais was elected an Associate, on account of his works of 1852. The fact is that, despite his extraordinary vigour, frequent generosity, and heroic devotion to his art, Brown, to whom, of course, are due most of the allegations we find in this volume, was much too ready to think that whoever disagreed with him was his enemy. And yet in very many cases it was not the malice, but the stupidity, of his "enemies" which offended him, and Mr. Hueffer has a tolerably correct notion of this. He is quite right when he says of his grandfather:—

"Of officials, and particularly of Royal Academicians, he was profoundly distrustful, but a great proportion of his quite preposterous prejudices were, as he was well enough aware, the mere emanation of persistent wrong-headedness."

To conclude, we may remark that the "Leward" of pp. 120 and 121 should be Luard, i.e., John Luard, a clever painter and dear friend of Millais. Millais's 'Syr

Isumbras' was not at the Academy in 1858, as Mr. Hueffer thinks. To the list he prints of subscribers to the fund, with a remnant of which 'Christ and Peter' was bought for the National Gallery, he ought to have added the names of Leighton and Armitage. The giving of the cartoon to the gallery at Camberwell ought also to have been mentioned in this connexion.

SALE.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 6th inst. the following pictures, from the Condover Hall and other collections: Anonymous, Portrait of Queen Elizabeth, 141*l.* Sir T. Lawrence, Miss Farren, Countess of Derby, 2,415*l.* G. F. Watts, Paolo and Francesca, 294*l.* J. D. de Heem, A Plate of Oysters, Fruit, and Glass of Wine, 315*l.* Lucas de Heere, Queen Mary, 105*l.* Mabuse, Portrait of a Gentleman, 483*l.* Jan Van der Meer (of Haarlem), An Extensive Bird's-Eye View over a Landscape, 840*l.* D. Mytens, Portrait of a Young Girl, 110*l.* Sir Antonio More, Portrait of La Belle Isabel, daughter of Henry II. of France, 556*l.* Pantoja de la Cruz, The Infanta Maria Theresa, 126*l.* Velazquez, The Back Door of a House, with a peacock and dead game above, 1,407*l.*; Portrait of a Spanish Princess, 273*l.*; Portrait of the Duke of Medina, bust, 399*l.* G. Bellini, Portrait of a Gentleman, 126*l.* A. Borgognone, The Madonna, with the Infant Saviour seated on a ledge before her, 157*l.* A. Bronzino, Portrait of a Lady, 141*l.* Jacopo da Empoli, Portrait of a Young Lady, 336*l.* Giorgione, The Resurrection, 110*l.* G. B. Moroni, Portrait of a Youth, 100*l.*; Portrait of a Lady and Child, 257*l.* Palma Vecchio, The Repose of the Holy Family in Egypt, 168*l.* Venetian School, A Senator, in crimson robe, 199*l.* Leonardo da Vinci, The Madonna and Infant Christ, seated in a rocky cavern, 105*l.* Ludovico Mazzolini di Ferrara, The Passage of the Red Sea by Pharaoh and his Host, 105*l.* Sir J. Reynolds, Mrs. Robinson (Perdita), 126*l.* F. Guardi, A View of the Doge's Palace and the Piazzetta of St. Mark's, 635*l.* Watteau, Fêtes Champêtres (a pair), 152*l.* Titian, The Repose of the Holy Family, 131*l.* F. Boucher, Hymen and L'Amour, 152*l.* Jan Steen, The Sick Lady, 204*l.* Andrea del Sarto, Carità, 141*l.* Orcagna, The Madonna and Child, 199*l.* Andrea Verrocchio, Two Saints, 204*l.* Cosimo Roselli, A Triumphal Procession of Vanity, 199*l.* Marco d'Oggione, Two Angels, 157*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

The private view of the exhibition of the Institute of Painters in Water Colours being appointed for yesterday (Friday), the public is, according to the custom of the society, admitted to the galleries to-day.—Messrs. Clifford & Co. have on view at 21, Haymarket drawings of "Country and Cottage Life," by Miss (or Mrs.) A. Nordgren.—At the Goupil Gallery, 5, Regent Street, may be seen a collection of selected works by Heer J. Maris.—Messrs. Cassell & Co. exhibit at Stationers' Hall, Ludgate Hill, a collection of original designs for pictorial posters.

The second and final portion of the Greek series of coins collected by the late Mr. Hyman Montagu, together with a small series of Roman silver and bronze coins and medallions, will occupy Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge five days from Monday next. This portion is far less important than the earlier, yet it contains objects of more than ordinary interest. The more notable are the didrachm of Naxos by Procles; the decadrachm of Syracuse, a very fine medallion; a very fine specimen of the tetradrachm of the first issue of Alexander the Great, of which only two others are believed to exist (one in the Bibliothèque Nationale and the other at the British Museum); the extremely rare tetradrachm of Lacedæmon; and a tetradrachm of Tripolis circa B.C. 200. The Roman series includes some unpublished examples. Mr. Montagu's collection is nearing its complete dispersal, for Messrs. Sotheby will sell the English medals in May next, and a few weeks later the series of English copper coins and patterns, finishing up in November with the reserved portion of the English series. The five autotype plates in the catalogue of the portion to be sold next week excellently represent some of the choicer specimens.

The exhibition of Mr. Watts's pictures in the New Gallery will be closed on the 10th of April next, and the ordinary general exhibition in the same place will be opened about a fortnight later.

The Princess of Wales has consented to become President of the Royal Amateur Society. Its loan exhibition, on behalf of the Parochial Mission Women's Fund of the East London Nursing Charities, will this year consist of portraits by Count D'Orsay, A. E. Chalon, R.A., old English enamels—Battersea, Bilston, &c.—and marcasite jewellery. Any one willing to lend any of the above would oblige by communicating with Lady Stephenson, 46, Ennismore Gardens, S.W.

Mr. Batsford's spring announcements are: 'Later Renaissance Architecture in England,' by Messrs. Belcher and Macartney,—'Windows: a Book about Stained and Painted Glass,' by Mr. Lewis F. Day, fully illustrated,—a facsimile reproduction of Hepplewhite's 'Cabinet-Maker and Upholsterer's Guide,'—'Examples of Greek and Pompeian Decorative Work,' by Mr. J. C. Watts,—'Plastering, Plain and Decorative, a Practical Treatise on the Art and Craft of Plastering,' by Mr. W. Millar,—also 'A Text-Book on Sanitary Engineering,' by Mr. C. E. Moore.

The decease of Canon Scott Robertson, the well-known antiquary, who for many years edited Archæologia Cantiana, is announced. He wrote a 'History of the Crypt of Canterbury Cathedral,' 'Gleanings from the Annals of Folkestone,' and monographs on Strood, Cobham Hall, 'Church Plate in Kent,' &c.

The Count of Aquila, brother of the late King of Naples, who was an occasional exhibitor of sea pieces at the Salons, died lately in Paris, aged seventy-three years.

The French journals record the death last week of M. Charles Henri Pille, born at Essommes (Aisne) in 1845. He became a pupil of Félix Barrias, and, beginning as a painter of anecdotic genre and historical subjects, achieved considerable reputation by 'Frédéric de Saxe jouant aux Échecs pendant que le Duc d'Albe lui annonce sa Condamnation à Mort'; and 'L'Automne,' which we admired while reviewing the Salon of 1872. 'L'Entrevue du Matin' of 1876 (again exhibited in 1878) considerably enhanced his reputation. Pille obtained his first medal in 1869, a Second Class Medal in 1872, the Legion of Honour in 1882, and a Gold Medal at the Exhibition of 1889. In 1896 he contributed to the Salon 'Le 12 Mai, 1588,' and 'Portrait du Docteur M. Laffont.' He was well known as a painter of portraits, and still better as a designer of book illustrations.

MUSIC

Dictionary of Music. By Dr. Hugo Riemann. New Edition, with many Additions by the Author. Translated by J. S. Shedlock. (Augener & Co.)

This dictionary of music, which was first published in 1882, has long been highly esteemed by musicians, and Messrs. Augener are to be commended for securing Mr. Shedlock's services as translator. Sir George Grove's dictionary of the art is unfortunately too costly a work to be within the reach of many students and others to whom a work of reference is necessary. The present issue of Dr. Riemann's compilation may, therefore, be said to supply a widespread requirement. One of the most important factors of a dictionary is trustworthiness, and in this respect the volume attains a very high standard. The original edition not only seems to have been carefully revised, but also has received several additions which greatly increase its value. Sundry mistakes have crept in, but all these appear to have been corrected in the brief appendix. The sins of omission are, indeed, greater than those of commission. We look in vain for the name of Bruneau, who is one of the most prominent French composers of to-day. No mention is made of Frederick Cliffe, Edward German, Lee Williams, and several other English musicians whose compositions and reputation certainly entitle them to a place amongst the "additions." Señor Arbos is also omitted; and amongst Russian musicians should certainly have been included Moussorgsky and Glazounoff. On the other hand, we find interesting paragraphs concerning John Walker and Joseph Casper Walker, who are omitted in Grove's dictionary. Another name not to be found in Grove's work is Andries Werckmeister, a celebrated organist and theorist of the seventeenth century, whose writings include a treatise on equal temperament. A number of living American composers are also mentioned. Dr. Riemann's peculiar system of harmony makes the articles on this subject somewhat hard reading, and the translator's manifest desire to give the exact meaning of the German has sometimes led to the English text being stiff and turgid. Amongst the most noteworthy articles is an admirable summary of the history of the art from the earliest times, so arranged in columns that an excellent bird's-eye view is presented of its progress and development. The notices of important composers are excellent, and, considering the size of the dictionary, the lists of their works are remarkably complete. The criticism of Mascagni is certainly severe, but in the majority of instances the remarks on the work of the great composers are admirable. Most musicians will agree, for instance, that

"Brahms depicts moods in a masterful manner; not only has he at his command, and more so than any of his contemporaries, the strikingly sombre tone, the particular feature of the serious art of to-day, but, equally so, the redeeming euphony, the mild reflection of undying light, which fills the soul with peace and devout feeling."

Again, in regard to Berlioz it is said that the French composer

"materially helped to remove many prejudices, but the greatest service that he rendered was to enrich the orchestra with new effects and to suggest entirely new treatment of the same."

The life-work of Franz Liszt is admirably summarized, and his influence on the development of musical form duly acknowledged. Some six columns are devoted to Wagner, and they may be profitably read by all. Wagner's writings are divided into three classes :—

"The period of learning, in which he wrote without pronounced independence and originality (up to and including 'Rienzi'); the period of fresh, happy creation, in which he did not allow his musical forms to be influenced by reflection ('Der Fliegende Holländer,' 'Tannhäuser,' 'Lohengrin'); and the period of his logical carrying out of his ideas of reform ('Tristan und Isolde,' 'Die Meistersinger,' 'Der Ring des Nibelungen,' and 'Parsifal'). By this it is not meant that the music of his third period is of less value than that of the second; on the contrary, so far as intensity of expression, wealth of harmony, characteristic rhythm, and refinement in orchestration are concerned, it is immeasurably superior to the former; but it has almost entirely lost the capability of producing effect away from the stage, as absolute music. Some few numbers, true masterpieces of melodic formation (the 'Preislied' in the 'Meistersinger,' the 'Liebeslied' in the 'Walküre'), must be regarded as exceptions. In this, however, Wagner only achieved what he desired; his music was not intended to produce effect per se, but only in union with poetry and scenic effects."

From these quotations it will be gathered that the dictionary has an artistic value in addition to its claims as a work of reference. English musicians owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Shedlock for the conscientious and painstaking manner in which he has carried out his exacting task.

THE WEEK.

Crystal Palace.—Saturday Concerts.
St. James's Hall.—Popular Concerts.
Highbury Athenæum.—Highbury Philharmonic Society.

The German composer Herr Richard Strauss is unquestionably clever, and it is unfortunate that he should have a predilection for illustrating morbid and unpleasant subjects in his music. There is no great harm in his humorous rhapsodical piece 'Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks.' It may be silly; just worth a smile and no more. Condemnation, however, must be pronounced on the far more elaborate work performed for the first, and, we fervently hope and believe, for the only time at the Crystal Palace last Saturday afternoon. This is founded on F. Nietzsche's fantastic prose poem 'Thus spake Zarathustra: a Book for All or None.' We should say for none, at any rate in this country. The book is painfully pessimistic in character, as the following quotation will show :—

"I teach you beyond-man. Man is a something that shall be surpassed. What have ye done to surpass him? Beyond-man is the significance of earth. Your will shall say: Beyond-man shall be the significance of earth. I conjure you, my brethren, remain faithful to earth, and do not believe those who speak unto you of super-terrestrial hopes! Poisoners they are, whether they know it or not. Man is a rope connecting animal and beyond-man.....I love those who do not seek behind the stars for a reason to perish and be sacrificed, but who sacrifice themselves to earth in order that earth may some day become beyond-man's."

To the ordinary reader this would seem arrant nonsense, but Herr Richard Strauss apparently thought it an appropriate theme for the exercise of his ability as a musician. "C. A. B.," in his masterly analytical notice of the literary and musical aspects of the work, says :—

"It may be surmised that Strauss was led to this adoption of Zarathustra as a suitable subject for musical illustration by a perusal of Nietzsche's work, and that on undertaking the task it was not his aim to glorify Nietzsche's heretical and anti-Christian doctrines, but on the contrary to refute and counteract them."

This may well be, but, at any rate, it did not prevent the "tone-poem" from being received with significant signs of disapprobation, in spite of the ponderous orchestration, which included an organ and a deep-toned bell. When Mr. Manns returned to the platform he was received with loud applause, showing that the dissentient voices were not intended to apply to him, for he had only done his duty in bringing before the English public a composition by a musician from whom much may be expected of value when he has sown his wild oats. Haydn's Symphony in E flat, one of the six composed for Paris in 1786, and rarely performed, though quite worthy of the genial composer; Schumann's Pianoforte Concerto, neatly played by Mlle. Ilona Eibenschütz; and Grieg's 'Peer Gynt' Suite, No. 1, were included in the programme. The vocalist was Mr. Plunket Greene, who won much applause for his rendering of Purcell's fine air "Ye twice ten hundred Deities," and songs by Schubert and Holländer.

Signor Piatti is unfortunately still indisposed, and was unable to appear at the Popular Concerts last Saturday and Monday, Mr. Paul Ludwig being again an able substitute. The concerted items on Saturday were Mozart's Quartet in G, No. 1 of the set dedicated to Haydn, and Beethoven's Pianoforte Trio in E flat, Op. 70, No. 2. Of course these familiar works require no comment, nor does their performance on this occasion, as it was perfect. Mr. Leonard Borwick was the pianist, and his interpretation of Chopin's Fantasia in F minor was very praiseworthy. Herr Joachim furnished two solos from his own pen, the expressive and dignified andante from the Third Violin Concerto in G, which had not been heard before at these concerts, and the Romance in C. Miss Kate Lee was the vocalist, rendering in a pleasant manner Lieder by Schubert, Franz, and Rubinstein.

Monday's programme commenced with Schumann's lively and tuneful Quartet in F, Op. 41, No. 2, dating from 1842, the year in which nearly all Schumann's masterpieces in the domain of chamber music were written; and it concluded with Beethoven's splendid Sonata in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2, finely played by Mlle. Eibenschütz and Herr Joachim. Mlle. Eibenschütz might have selected some more appropriate work for her solo than the hackneyed transcription of Bach's Organ Prelude and Fugue in A minor, for which pianists seem to have a positive mania. Mr. Charles Phillips, a pleasant-voiced baritone, contributed songs by Handel and Jensen, and also a tasteful song, "Like to the damask rose," by Mr. Elgar.

We sincerely trust the Highbury Philharmonic Society will see its way to perform Mendelssohn's 'Athalie' (in the manner in which it was interpreted last Tuesday evening) next winter in one of the concert halls in Central London, for the performance was of quite unusual interest. Discarding the ordinary concert-room version of Racine's Biblical play with one reciter, Mr. G. H. Betjemann restored a quantity of Racine's original dialogue, and engaged several artists, each allotted to one of the characters. The principal part was taken by Miss Rose Dafforne (Mrs. G. H. Betjemann), who declaimed it admirably, though suffering from a severe cold. Mr. Charles Fry was very impressive as the Jewish High Priest Joad, this being the hundredth occasion on which he has recited in 'Athalie.' The part of the young king Joash was nicely spoken by Miss Neill, and as Mr. Jacques says in his preface to the book of words, there is no impropriety in this course, for in the Bible it is said, "Joash was seven years old when he began to reign." The declamation needed for the delivery of Racine's eloquent lines found able exponents in the other reciters engaged, the principal parts (for female voices) were in competent hands, and Mr. Betjemann's chorus and orchestra discharged their duties in a manner beyond reproach.

Musical Gossip.

There will be a festival service in Salisbury Cathedral early in June to commemorate the 1,300th anniversary of the baptism of the Saxon King Ethelbert and the "Diamond" year of the Queen's reign. The musical arrangements will be carried out by the Diocesan Choral Association, and will be on a large scale.

A new symphony by Mr. F. H. Cowen will be produced at one of the forthcoming Richter Concerts, most probably on May 31st. Mr. Cowen is also composing a vocal scena with orchestral accompaniment for the Philharmonic Society. The title of the piece will be 'The Dream of Endymion.'

Beethoven's Septet was well rendered at Herr Theodore Werner's fourth violin recital on Thursday afternoon last week by competent artists. Another feature of the programme that may be mentioned was a Violin Sonata by Nardini, a gifted pupil of Tartini. It is in D, a convenient key for violinists, and is an extremely effective example of the old violin school. It was well played by Herr Werner.

In their last song and pianoforte recital for the present at St. James's Hall, on Friday afternoon last week, Messrs. Plunket Greene and Leonard Borwick offered an admirable programme. Both in selection and execution it was almost faultless. These concerts are entertaining and instructive, and they should be resumed when opportunity permits, as the large audiences show that the public can now appreciate something higher than shop songs and flimsy pianoforte pieces.

A third performance in oratorio form of Saint-Saëns's 'Samson et Dalila' was given by the Queen's Hall Choral Society last Saturday afternoon, under the direction of Mr. Randegger, and the work continues to grow on the hearer as familiarity with its beauties increases. The interpretation was the best of the series, and there can no longer be any question that the work has established itself in the favour of metropolitan amateurs.

A tasteful 'Liebeslied' for orchestra by Miss Dora Bright was performed for the first time at the Promenade Concert at the Queen's Hall on Saturday evening last week, and proved to be an agreeable and well-scored piece. The principal feature of the programme was Tschaïkowsky's 'Symphonie Pathétique,' which was commendably played under the direction of Mr. H. J. Wood. There were other instrumental items of minor importance; and the solo contributions by Miss Helen Jaxon, Mr. Philip Brozel, and Mr. Percy Frostick won deserved favour.

Miss Amy Hare, whose pianoforte recital on Tuesday afternoon at St. James's Hall was well attended, is an accomplished executant with a delicate touch and style. She was perhaps a little overweighted in Schubert's 'Wanderer' Fantasia in c, Op. 15, but she played Haydn's 'Andante con Variazioni,' Liszt's 'Ricordanza,' and trifles by Scarlatti with much charm. M. Johannes Wolff was associated with Miss Amy Hare in Grieg's Sonata in c minor, Op. 45, for pianoforte and violin.

The afternoon concert which took place under the auspices of Herr Robert Hausmann and Miss Margaret Wild at St. James's Hall on Thursday this week was enjoyable, and there was a large audience. Two sonatas for pianoforte and violoncello—being those in F by Brahms and in c by Beethoven, Op. 102, No. 1, both works being rarely played—were given at this concert with noteworthy refinement and purity of intonation, if not with great power. Mrs. Speyer-Kufferath, who essayed Lieder by Schumann and Brahms, has a small but sweet and well-trained voice.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Sun.	Orchestral Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
—	National Sunday League, 'Elijah,' 7, Queen's Hall.
—	String Quartet Concert, 7.30, Queen's Small Hall.
Mon.	Bohemian String Quartet, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Popular Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Musical Artists' Society, 8, St. Martin's Town Hall.
Tues.	Mr. Willem Coenen's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Guildhall School of Music.
—	M. H. Rawalsky's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Walenn Quartet Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Musical Guild Concert, 8, Kensington Town Hall.
—	Concert for the Benefit of Madame Annie Fowler, 8, St. Martin's Town Hall.
—	Wagner Concert under Herr Felix Mottl, 8.15, Queen's Hall.
Wed.	Miss Clara Blackburne's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	St. Patrick's Day Irish Concert, 7.30, Queen's Hall.
—	St. Patrick's Day Irish Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	St. Patrick's Day Irish Concert, 8, Albert Hall.
—	Messrs. H. and G. Saint George's Concert, 8, Trinity College.
Thurs.	Herr Brousil's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Mr. Henschel's Symphony Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Queen's Hall Choral Society, 8, Berlioz's 'Faust.'
Fri.	Herr Theodore Werner's Violin Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss Ida Aldrige's Vocal Recital, 3.15, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Royal College of Music Orchestral Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
Sat.	Crystal Palace Concert, 3.
—	Mozart Society's Concert, 3, No. 26, George Street, Hanover Square.
—	Popular Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Mr. Ernest Meads's Recital, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Symphony Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Orchestral Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Promenade Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

Comedy.—'The Saucy Sally,' a Farce in Three Acts. From the French by F. C. Burnand.

Olympic.—'The Mariners of England,' a Drama in Four Acts and Two Tableaux. By Robert Buchanan and Charles Marlowe.

The thirteen years which have elapsed since 'La Flamboyante' of MM. Ferrier, Cohen, and Valabrègue saw the light at the Paris Vaudeville have given to the motive a certain aspect of antiquity, but have not otherwise injured the piece. As a means of bringing a peccant husband face to face with his responsibilities the machinery of 'The Saucy Sally' is as good as any that has been subsequently employed. The make-believe captain of a non-existent merchantman, he makes pretended voyages to remote countries, from which he returns laden with the spoils of adventure, and with the character among his woman-folk of a hero. In point of fact, the weeks during which he is supposed to be at sea are spent in the society of a facile fair one, and the trophies of research or prowess with which he decorates his house have been purchased at an East-End emporium. The discovery, on the part of his mother-in-law, that these things are shams leads to a species of scrutiny and cross-examination, in presence of which he shuffles and quails. When next he proceeds accordingly to join his ship, his wife and her mother insist on accompanying him. Behold him then in Southampton with a wife in one room and a mistress in the other, bound to produce a ship or to account for its absence, and to keep separate women always on the point of meeting, who, if they knew the truth, would fly at each other's throat or at him; bound, moreover, to face all the unexpected contingencies which dramatic ingenuity can invent. Quite as good as any other device is this, and the situations, though familiar as they can be, are effective and diverting. Mr. Burnand has done fairly well with his original, both as regards translation and addition. He has an idea of a book of his hero's adventures written by the mother-in-law, which is droll, but of which nothing comes. An opportunity of which no use is made is afforded in the second act, when the heroine and her mother visit the cabin of a ship they suppose to be the hero's, and bring away nothing but a not very compromising feminine photograph. Regarding the room as their own, they might have "annexed" valuables, the possession of which would have embroiled the mock captain with the real. So much merriment, real, if slight, is obtained from the situations which arise, that these suggestions are made in no spirit of carping. Mr. C. H. Hawtrey plays the hero of this farce with a serenity, an ease, and an aplomb that have already won for him a high and well-merited reputation. It is doubtful whether any other living actor—certainly not Dieudonné, the original of the character—could have played it so well. Mr. Lovell, Mr. Hendrie, Miss Jessie Bateman, and Miss Maud Abbott contributed to a moderately successful interpretation.

Primitive almost beyond precedent is the melodrama in which Mr. Buchanan and his associate have chosen to enshrine some events, real or fictitious, of the career of Nelson. Every character in the play has been seen before in 'Black-Eyed Susan' or other nautical dramas. The piece is intended, however, for a primitive public, and is exactly suited to that at the Olympic. That it would make a strong impression upon a more sophisticated audience is improbable. It is well placed, however, and is in a sense well shaped and well written, and will probably have an enduring success in the country towns for which presumably it is intended. To see Nelson kidnapped or murdered by spies—one of them a naval captain—in the interest of Napoleon, and a plotted invasion, is a bold idea, not, however, very cleverly worked out. The introduction of a mimic battle of Trafalgar, in which Nelson is wounded, and the presentation of the death scene in the cabin of the Victory are concessions to modern taste, and may well help the fortunes of the piece. Abundant absurdities might be pointed out, and the loudly avowed affection of the daughter of an admiral for a common sailor has a distinctly Gilbertian ring. Mr. W. L. Abingdon was well made up as Nelson, and in the less emotional scenes looked the character to the life. In the death scene, where strong facial play was used, the resemblance was lost. Mr. Charles Glenney gave a conventionally powerful rendering of a sailor hero, and Mr. Sleath showed decided talent as the villain.

To Correspondents.—C. L.—E. W. B.—received.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

TO BE READY THIS MONTH.

OUIDA'S NEW NOVEL.

THE MASSARENES.

By OUIDA.

1 vol. crown 8vo. nearly 600 pages, 6s.

The novel is in some respects a new departure on the part of this popular writer. Those who have read the manuscript pronounce the Novel the best Ouida has written.

N.B. The Trade are requested to send their orders in at once, to secure copies of the First Edition.

NOW READY,
FIRST ISSUE AT HALF-A-CROWN.

WOLFENBERG.

By Mr. WILLIAM BLACK.

Forming the latest addition to the New Uniform Edition of this popular Novelist's Works.

TO BE FOLLOWED BY MR. WILLIAM BLACK'S
The HANDSOME HUMES. [April 1.
HIGHLAND COUSINS. [May 1.
AND OTHERS.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITIONS OF
TWO NOVELS BY ALFRED CLARK.
Uniform crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

A DARK PLACE OF THE EARTH. [Ready.

"Fresh, powerful, and extraordinarily vivid in presentment."—Athenæum.

THE
FINDING OF LOT'S WIFE.
[Immediately.

"A very fine piece of imaginative work—a night's entertainment of modern Arabian adventure."—Scotsman.

NOW READY, PRICE 3d.,
The FEBRUARY MONTHLY PART of
THE ENGLISH CATALOGUE OF BOOKS FOR 1897.

Giving FULL TITLES, classified under Author and Subject in one strict Alphabet, with particulars of the Size, Price, and Name of Publisher, of the Books issued in Great Britain and Ireland during the Month of FEBRUARY.

THIRD EDITION READY NEXT WEEK.
THE ENGLISH CATALOGUE OF BOOKS FOR 1896.

Royal 8vo. over 220 pp. cloth limp, 5s. net; or half-roan limp, 6s. 6d. net. It contains over 7,000 Titles of New Books and New Editions, and over 6,000 Duplicate Titles, forming the Index in one continuous alphabet.

FOURTH EDITION (SIXTH THOUSAND).
HEALTH and CONDITION in the ACTIVE and the SEDENTARY. By Dr. N. E. YORKE-DAVIES, Author of 'Foods for the Fat.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Those who desire a long and healthy life will perhaps find their best means of attaining it in the study and observance of such rules as are laid down here.....Practical guide to 'Health and Condition.'"—Morning Post.

NOW READY, PRICE ONE SHILLING.
SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.
MARCH NUMBER.

Contents.

The MASTER of the LITHOGRAPH—J. McNEILL WHISTLER. Elizabeth Robins Pennell. With Reproductions from Twelve of Mr. Whistler's Lithographs.
ESMOND and the PRINCE. Drawn by Howard Pyle. SCENES from the GREAT NOVELS. III. Engraved by Florian. Frontispiece.
LONDON as SEEN by C. D. GIBSON. II. LONDON AUDIENCES. Written and illustrated by Mr. Gibson. (The Second of Six Illustrated Papers.)
The BANDERIUM of HUNGARY. Richard Harding Davis. Illustrated by Drawings after Photographs.
The STORY of a PLAY. Chaps. 1-3. W. D. Howells. To be continued.
The BUSINESS of a FACTORY. Philip G. Hubert, jun. The CONDUCT of GREAT BUSINESSES. Third Paper. Illustrated.
SOLDIERS of FORTUNE. Chaps. 5-8. Richard Harding Davis. Full-Page Illustration by C. D. Gibson. To be continued.
A LOOK into the GULF. Charles Edwin Markham.
The ART of TRAVEL. First Paper. Lewis Morris Iddings. BY LAND. Illustrated.
CUPID STUNG by the BEE. Elizabethan Songs. IV.
LIVER'S RESPONSIBILITY. Wolcott Le Clear Beard.
&c. &c.

London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Ltd.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND RAILWAY BOOKSTALLS.

BENTLEY'S FAVOURITE NOVELS.

Each Work can be had separately, uniformly bound, price 6s.

LATEST ADDITIONS.

DEAR FAUSTINA. By Rhoda Broughton. [In the press.

THE MISTRESS OF BRAE FARM. By Rosa N. Carey.

By Rosa N. Carey.
The Mistress of Brae Farm.
Sir Godfrey's Grand-daughters.
Basil Lyndhurst.
Nellie's Memories.
Barbara Heathcote's Trial.
Heriot's Choice.
Queenie's Whim.
Mary St. John.
For Lilias.
Not Like Other Girls.
Only the Governess.
Robert Ord's Atonement.
Uncle Max. | Wee Wifie.
Wooed and Married.
Lover or Friend?

By Mary Linskill.
Between the Heather and the Northern Sea.
The Haven under the Hill.
In Exchange for a Soul.
Cleveden.
Tales of the North Riding.

By Jessie Fothergill.
The "First Violin."
Borderland. | Kith and Kin.
Probation. [Reprinting.
From Moor Isles. | Aldyth.

By Florence Montgomery.
Misunderstood.
Thrown Together.
Seaforth.

By Mrs. Augustus Craven.
A Sister's Story.

By Mrs. Notley.
Olive Varcoe.

By Rhoda Broughton.
Scylla or Charybdis?
Mrs. Bligh.
Cometh Up as a Flower.
Good-bye, Sweetheart.
Joan. | Nancy.
A Beginner.
Not Wisely, but Too Well.
Red as a Rose is She.
Second Thoughts.
Belinda. | Alas!
"Doctor Cupid."

By Mrs. Annie Edwardes.
Leah: a Woman of Fashion.
A Girton Girl.
Susan Fielding.

By Hawley Smart.
Breezie Langton.

By Mrs. W. K. Clifford.
Aunt Anne.

By Helen Mathers.
Comin' thro' the Rye.

By Mrs. Alexander.
The Wooing o't.
Her Dearest Foe.

By J. Sheridan Le Fanu.
Uncle Silas.
In a Glass Darkly.
The House by the Churchyard.

By W. E. Norris.
Major and Minor.
Miss Shafto. [Reprinting.
A Bachelor's Blunder. [Reprinting.

By Maarten Maartens.
My Lady Nobody.
An Old Maid's Love.
The Sin of Joost Avelingh.
"God's Fool."
The Greater Glory.

By Mary Cholmondeley.
Diana Tempest.
Sir Charles Danvers.

By E. Werner.
Success.
Fickle Fortune.

By Anthony Trollope.
The Three Clerks.

By Lady G. Fullerton.
Too Strange Not to be True.

By Baroness Tautphœus.
The Initials.
Quits!

By Marcus Clarke.
For the Term of his Natural Life.

By Jane Austen.
(The only Complete Edition.)
Emma.
Mansfield Park.
Lady Susan, and The Watsons.
Northanger Abbey, and Persuasion.
Pride and Prejudice.
Sense and Sensibility.

By Mrs. Riddell.
George Geith of Fen Court.
Berna Boyle.

By L. Dougall.
The Madonna of a Day.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

NOTICE—THOMAS HARDY'S NEW NOVEL, announced for publication in February, will be issued NEXT TUESDAY, March 16th. The demand being so exceptionally heavy the Publishers were compelled to delay the issue.

THE WELL-BELOVED.

By THOMAS HARDY.

In 1 vol. uniform with the AUTHOR'S FAVOURITE EDITION.

With Frontispiece Etching, crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s.

NOTE.—Hundreds of thousands of these Novels have been sold.

THOMAS HARDY'S NOVELS.

AUTHOR'S FAVOURITE EDITION.

With Frontispiece Etchings. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s. each.

"Thomas Hardy is at the summit of British novelists. His brilliant triumphs in fiction have fairly raised him to this position."—Fortnightly Review.

TESS OF THE D'URBERVILLES.
FAR FROM THE MADDING CROWD.
THE MAYOR OF CASTERBRIDGE.
A PAIR OF BLUE EYES.
TWO ON A TOWER.
THE RETURN OF THE NATIVE.
THE WOODLANDERS.
DESPERATE REMEDIES.
THE HAND OF ETHELBERTA.
THE TRUMPET MAJOR.
UNDER THE GREENWOOD TREE.
A LAODICEAN.
A GROUP OF NOBLE DAMES.
LIFE'S LITTLE IRONIES.
WESSEX TALES.
JUDE THE OBSCURE.

NEW NOVELS.

IMPORTANT WORK BY A NEW AUTHOR.

THE DESCENDANT.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, gilt, 6s.

There are strong and tragic elements in this realistic story of human life and passion. The hero is at odds with society, his birth and training having combined to embitter him. The story of his alliance with the forces that make for anarchy and of his defiance of law and order is absorbing. The pendulum swings from the height of aspiration to the depth of despair, and the final gloom would be almost overpowering were it not for the unfailing light of a woman's love.

SAINT EVA.

By AMELIA PAIN (Mrs. Barry Pain).

With Frontispiece Engraving from Drawing by Sir Edward Burne-Jones. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

Mrs. Pain's characters are interesting and true to life. The dialogue is easy, vivid, and sprightly, while the plot is simple, artistic, and strongly developed.

AN AFRICAN ROMANCE.

THE IVORY QUEEN.

By JOHN PENDLETON,
Author of 'The Romance of our Railways.'

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Far beyond the Soudan, in the heart of Africa, is a white race, attended by curious dwarfs."
'A CARAVAN TRAVELLER'S TALE.'

STIRRING HISTORICAL NOVEL.

FOR FREEDOM'S SAKE. By Arthur PATERSON, Author of 'A Man of his Word.' Crown 8vo. buckram, 6s.
"A powerful and animated romance."—Times.

BESS. By Helen M. Boulton. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.
"New and daring. Most powerfully worked out."
Guardian.

A VENETIAN LOVE STORY. By BLANCHE LOFTUS TOTTENHAM. Crown 8vo. buckram, 6s.
"Intensely interesting and exciting."—Pall Mall Gazette.

CHIMMIE FADDEN. By Edward W. TOWNSEND, Author of 'A Daughter of the Tenements.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
"More than sixty thousand copies of 'Chimmie Fadden' have sold in America alone."—Daily News.

A KENTUCKY CARDINAL. By James L. ALLEN. Illustrated by Albert E. Sterner. Cloth, 3s. 6d.
"There is delicate humour in every page, a humour so quaint and so tender that it melts continually into pathos, whilst through it all runs a strong vein of romance."
Speaker.

 New Catalogue post free on application.

London: OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO.
45, Albemarle-street, W.

JAMES CLARKE & CO.'S BOOKS.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

CHRISTIAN INSTINCTS AND MODERN DOUBT.

Essays and Addresses in aid of a Reasonable, Satisfying, and Consolatory Religion.

By Rev. ALEXANDER H. CRAUFURD, M.A.,
Formerly Exhibitioner of Oriel College, Oxford,
Author of 'Enigmas of the Spiritual Life.'
[Just ready.

PROPHETS of the CHRISTIAN FAITH. By the Very Rev. F. W. FARRAR, D.D., Dean of Canterbury; the Very Rev. W. H. FREMANTLE, D.D., Dean of Ripon; the Rev. A. M. FAIRBAIRN, D.D., Principal of Mansfield College, Oxford; and others as below. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 5s.

Contents.—1. What is a Prophet? By Dr. Abbott.—2. Isaiah as a Preacher. By Dr. Brown.—3. The Apostle Paul. By Dr. Matheson.—4. Clement of Alexandria. By Dr. Marcus Dods.—5. St. Augustine as a Prophet. By Dr. McGiffert.—6. John Wycliffe. By Dean Fremantle.—7. Martin Luther. By Prof. Harnack.—8. John Wesley. By Dean Farrar.—9. Jonathan Edwards. By Dr. Fairbairn.—10. Horace Bushnell. By Dr. Munger.—11. F. D. Maurice. By Dr. Allon.—12. Can We Be Prophets? By Dean Farrar.
[Now ready.

The BIBLE and the CHILD. By Dean FARRAR, Dean FREMANTLE, Dr. HORTON, Professor ADENEY, Professor PEAKE, Dr. MUNGER, Dr. LYMAN ABBOTT, and Dr. WASHINGTON GLADDEN. Pott 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

SMALL BOOKS ON GREAT SUBJECTS.

Pott 8vo. buckram cloth, 1s. 6d. each.

1. WORDS by the WAYSIDE. By GEORGE MATHESON, D.D. [Ready.
2. FAITH the BEGINNING, SELF-SURRENDER the FULFILMENT of the SPIRITUAL LIFE. By JAMES MARTINEAU, D.D. D.C.L. [Ready.
3. RECONSIDERATIONS and REINFORCEMENTS. By J. M. WHITON, Ph.D., Author of 'Beyond the Shadow,' &c. [In the press.

JAMES CLARKE & CO.
13 and 14, Fleet-street, London.

J. NISBET & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

LETTERS FROM ARMENIA. By J. RENDEL HARRIS and HELEN B. HARRIS. With an Introductory Letter from Mr. Gladstone. With a Map and 8 Illustrations. Extra crown 8vo. 6s.
"A timely, valuable, and interesting book."—Daily Chronicle.
"Cannot be read without....profound feeling....The impression is all the deeper from the tone of studious moderation....of these courageous and noble-hearted members of the Society of Friends."
Scotsman.

LORD STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE. By A. L. LEE. With an Introduction by W. E. H. LECKY, M.P., and Portrait. Small crown 8vo. 1s. 6d.

An ANCIENT PEOPLE. A Short Sketch of Armenian History. By ELIZABETH S. LIDGETT. With Map. Small crown 8vo. 1s.

The LIFE of QUEEN VICTORIA. By Rev. W. W. TULLOCH, D.D. Personally Revised by H.M. the QUEEN. New Edition. With Portrait. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.; gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

The USE of SCIENCE to CHRISTIANS. By E. M. CAILLARD. Long fcap. 8vo. 1s. paper; 1s. 6d. cloth. [Shortly.

LECTURES on ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY. A Series of Scholarly Studies of the Fathers of the Church. By Bishop BARRY, Dean FARRAR, Principal MOULE, Prof. INCE, &c. Edited by the DEAN of NORWICH. Extra crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.
"All of high character and real value."—Record.
"The Dean of Norwich may be warmly congratulated on having enlisted the services of so many scholars of repute."
Manchester Guardian.

GEORGE SMITH of COALVILLE. By EDWIN HODDER, Author of the 'Life of Lord Shaftesbury.' Extra crown 8vo. 5s.
"This biography is well named 'the story of an enthusiast.'"
Daily News.
"A faithful record of a high ambition and a noble persistence."
"A very interesting book."—Daily Chronicle. Scotsman.

The SISTER-MARTYRS of KUCHENG. By Canon BERRY, of Melbourne. Illustrated. Crown 8vo. 5s. Third Edition.
"It is a long while since we have read a missionary book of more absorbing interest."—Record.

J. NISBET & CO., LTD., 21, Berners-street, W.

THE METAPHYSICAL MAGAZINE.

Devoted to Occult Philosophy and Scientific Research, Mental Healing and Psychic Phenomena

Conducted by LEANDER EDMUND WHIPPLE

FEBRUARY Number now ready. Price 1s. 6d. net

Contents

DUALITY of MAN and NATURE. C. Staniland Wake
INTUITION. B. F. Underwood
The KABBALA and "BEING." NIX. C. H. A. Bjerregaard
ANALYSIS of ANGER. Part II. Aaron M. Crane
RELIGIOUS SCIENCE. Paul Avenel
The SUBJECTIVE of PSYCHIC EXPERIENCES: a Psychological Study of Delirium. Frederick A. Cushing, A.M., M.D.
DEPARTMENT of HEALING PHILOSOPHY—
Power of the Imagination. Helen I. Manning
Is Faith Omnipotent?—He had no Apparatus. Notes, &c.
The WORLD of THOUGHT, with Editorial Comment

London: Gay & Bird, 22, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL.

Contents MARCH 2s.

The Nansen Meeting in the Albert Hall.—Explorations in Mysia. By J. A. R. Munro and H. M. Anthony.—Geographical Work of the Survey of Canada, 1896. By Dr. G. M. Dawson, C.M.G., F.R.S.—On the Formation of Sand-dunes. By Vaughan Cornish, M.Sc. (Vict. Univ.), F.G.S.—Ancient Trading Centres of the Persian Gulf.—Egypt and Abyssinia. By Professor Leo Reinisch.—The Monthly Record.—Correspondence: Popocatepetl. By O. H. Howarth.—Obituary: Frederick J. Mouat, M.D., LL.D.; Sir J. B. Thurston, K.C.M.G.; Admiral Sir Alexander Milne, G.C.B.; John Lowe Nichol.—Meetings of the R.G.S.—Geographical Literature of the Month.—New Maps.—Numerous Maps and Illustrations, including Portraits of Dr. Nansen and his Officers.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, S.W.

CARDIFF ARCHITECTURE.—See the BUILDER of March 13 (4*d.*; by post, 4½*d.*) for fully illustrated Article on Cardiff, being the Fifth of a Series, appearing at intervals, on the Architecture of our large Provincial Towns.

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

MR. ARTHUR A. SYKES'S NEW BOOK NOW READY.

WITHOUT PERMISSION: a Book of Dedications. Art canvas. 3s. 6d. post free; or may be ordered through any Bookseller.

The Roxburghe Press, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, S.W.

Post 8vo. strongly bound, price 7s.

CAREY'S GRADUS AD PARNASSUM. With the English Meanings Revised, Corrected, and Augmented by a Member of the University of Cambridge. London: published by the Stationers' Company, Stationers Hall, Ludgate-hill.

Crown 8vo. with 40 Woodcuts, price 3s. 6d.

A FEW CHAPTERS in ASTRONOMY. By CLAUDIUS KENNEDY, M.A.

Chap. 1. On a Visual Illusion affecting certain Astronomical Phenomena. 2. The Effect of the Earth's Rotation on certain Moving Bodies. 3. Deviation of Projectiles from the Rotation of the Earth. 4. Foucault's Pendulum. 5. On the Position of the Dynamical High Tide relatively to the Celestial Tide-Producing Body. 6. The Horizontal Pendulum. 7. The Moon's Variation. 8. The Moon's Parallactic Inequality.

"This gives some ingenious and intelligible explanations of various well-known phenomena which are not treated of fully in the usual text-books."—Observatory, February, 1895.
"The idea of this book is a very good one....This little work will be found of great assistance to students of mathematical astronomy, and we can strongly recommend it to their attention."
Philosophical Magazine, March, 1895.
"In these 150 pages are discussed some of the numerous problems in astronomy, and these are handled in such a manner as to make them full of interest both for the general reader and for the student....As a supplement to the ordinary text-books on astronomy, this small volume will be found especially useful."—Nature, March 21, 1895.
"Several subjects, which most text-books necessarily ignore or dismiss with a few paragraphs, are here treated very copiously and instructively, e.g., the deviation of projectiles caused by the rotation of the earth."—American Journal of Science, June, 1895.
"A valuable work, which deserves to be better known."—CHARLES DAVISON, D.Sc., Sec. of the Brit. Assoc. Committee, on "Earth Tremors" in Natural Science, April, 1896.

Taylor & Francis, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, price Fourpence,

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY. By W. T. LYNN, B.A., F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Kentish Mercury.

G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo. cloth, price Sixpence,

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES: a Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times. By W. T. LYNN, B.A., F.R.A.S.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

NEW EDITION, price Two Shillings,

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Ninth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A., F.R.A.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached a ninth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

W. C. BENNETT'S POEMS.

The GOLDEN LIBRARY.—Square 16mo. cloth, 2s.

CONTRIBUTIONS to a BALLAD HISTORY of ENGLAND.

Athenæum.—"These ballads are spirited and stirring; such are 'The Fall of Harald Hardrada,' 'Old Benbow,' 'Marston Moor,' and 'Corporal John' (the soldier's name for the famous Duke of Marlborough, which is a specially good ballad. 'Queen Eleanor's Vengeance' is a vividly told story. Coming to more modern times, 'The Deeds of Wellington,' 'Inkermann,' and 'Balaklava' are excellently well said and sung. As a book of ballads interesting to all who have British blood in their veins, Dr. Bennett's contribution will be welcome. Dr. Bennett's ballads will leave a strong impression on the memory of those who read them."

London: Chatto & Windus, 110 and 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

Ready on March 15.

Post 8vo. with 20 Maps, price 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

ACHIEVEMENTS OF CAVALRY.

BY

General Sir EVELYN WOOD, V.C. G.C.B. G.C.M.G., &c.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, York-street, Covent-garden.

Now ready, CHEAP EDITION, illustrated, 1 vol. demy 8vo. cloth, 10*s.*

THE ORDER OF THE COIF.

By Mr. SERJEANT PULLING.

Containing the Early History of the Order, together with an Account of the Aula Regis, and the Courts at Westminster Hall derived from it—The Justiciar—The Judges and Serjeants of the Coif—The Apprenticii ad legem—The Inns of Court—The Forms, Solemnities, and Usages kept up by the Bench and the Bar—Records and Memoirs of the Old Order, and its many Distinguished Members—Their Legal and Social position, and the gradual Innovations on the Old Institution.

"A monument of well-digested research.....An important contribution to the history of the Bench and Bar of England."—Illustrated London News.

London: WILLIAM CLOWES & SONS, LIMITED, Law Publishers, 27, Fleet-street, E.C.

Messrs. SEELEY & CO. beg to announce the Publication of a New Work by the late P. G. HAMERTON, entitled

THE MOUNT:

Narrative of a Visit to the Site of a Gaulish City on Mont Beuvray, with a Description of the Neighbouring Town of Autun.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

CONFIDENCES of an AMATEUR GARDENER. By A. M. DEW-SMITH. With Illustrations, 6*s.*
"Sparkling, racy, sunny papers."—Daily News.
"To those who love a garden..... we can recommend no more pleasant book."—Field.
"A book for every one who has a garden."—Church Times.

SECOND EDITION.

ANIMALS at WORK and PLAY: their Emotion and Activities. By C. J. CORNISH, Author of 'Life at the Zoo.' With Illustrations, large crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*
"Presents in a fascinating form a great deal of highly interesting and original information."—Times.
"One of the most fascinating books of the hour."—Leeds Mercury.

WORKS BY P. G. HAMERTON.

The LIFE of J. M. W. TURNER, R.A. New and Cheaper Edition. With an Entirely New Set of Illustrations. Large crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

IMAGINATION in LANDSCAPE. With many Illustrations. New and Cheaper Edition. Cloth, 6*s.*

CHAPTERS on ANIMALS. With 20 Etchings by Veyrassat and Bodmer. Cloth, gilt edges, 12*s.* 6*d.* Cheaper Edition, 5*s.*

The SYLVAN YEAR. Second Edition. With 20 Etchings, 8vo. cloth, gilt edges, 12*s.* 6*d.* Cheaper Edition, 5*s.*

PARIS in OLD and PRESENT TIMES. With many Illustrations. New Edition, 6*s.*

ROUND MY HOUSE: Rural Notes in France in Peace and War. New and Cheaper Edition. Cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

London: SEELEY & CO., LTD., 38, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

The VOLUME, JULY to DECEMBER, 1896,

With the Index, price 10*s.* 6*d.*, IS NOW READY.

 The Index separately, price 6*d.*; by post, 6½*d.* Also Cases for Binding, price 1*s.*; by post, 1*s.* 3*d.*

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

JARROLD & SONS' LIST.

MAURUS JOKAI'S NEW NOVEL,
ENTITLED

The GREEN BOOK; or, Freedom under the Snow. Translated by Mrs. WAUGH (ELLIS WRIGHT). With Engraved Portrait of Dr. Jókai (Authorized Edition). Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6*s.*

FOURTH EDITION NOW READY.

"The author has given us a group of striking personalities, of every one of whom it is not too much to say that it is brilliantly drawn and vividly presented. From every point of view 'The Green Book' is a book to be read. It is a work of fine art."—Daily Chronicle.

MR. COURTNEY says in the Daily Telegraph:—"It is truly an astounding book. In force and fire and prodigal variety he reminds one of the elder Dumas."

"Altogether a great book, and worth all the novels of native growth we are likely to see this season."
Pall Mall Gazette.

BY MAURUS JOKAI.
(Uniform with the above.)

BLACK DIAMONDS. By Maurus JOKAI. THIRD EDITION. Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6*s.*

"It is so well written, so abounding in all sorts of special knowledge, and displays so much real literary power, that we never feel tempted to leave any of its pages unread. There are some extremely fine descriptive passages in the book.....Maurus Jókai is absolutely original in thought and treatment."—Daily Chronicle.

OTHER POPULAR WORKS BY DR. MAURUS JOKAI.

Authorized Editions, crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 5*s.* each.
Translated from the Hungarian by R. NISBET BAIN.

'MIDST the WILD CARPATHIANS. SECOND EDITION.

"A thrilling Hungarian historical novel. Jókai's extraordinary dramatic and descriptive powers have full play."
Truth.

PRETTY MICHAL. Second Edition.

"It is part of the high art of the story that the author has kept the whole atmosphere free from the complexity, the subtle motives of a later and more sophisticated age. Maurus Jókai's novel is a book to be read."—Saturday Review.

London: JARROLD & SONS, 10 and 11, Warwick-lane, E.C. At all Libraries and of the Booksellers.

NEW EDITION, pp 324, cloth, 1*s* post free.

HOMŒOPATHIC FAMILY INSTRUCTOR. By Drs. R. and W. EPPS. Describes fully and Prescribes for General Diseases.
London: James Epps & Co., Limited, 48, Threadneedle-street, and 170, Piccadilly.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.
Made in Three Sizes.
10*s.* 6*d.*, 16*s.* 6*d.*, and 25*s.* each, post free.
Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen
A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce.
We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.
Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to
MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS.
ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.
ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.
ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.
West Strand, London. Discount 10 per cent.

EPPS'S COCOA.
THE MOST NUTRITIOUS.
EPPS'S COCOA.
GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.

WM. & GEO. LAW.
COFFEE—
SUGAR—
TEA.
104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION,
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.
DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

CLARENDON PRESS LIST.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 9s. 6d.; or Part I., 6s. 6d.; Part II. 3s. 6d. JUST PUBLISHED. With 11 Maps.

SOUTH AND EAST AFRICA.

Being Vol. IV. of a HISTORICAL GEOGRAPHY of the BRITISH COLONIES.

By C. P. LUCAS, B.A., of Balliol College, Oxford, and the Colonial Office, London.

The First Part giving a History of South Africa down to the Present Day.

The Second including Geographical Chapters on the British South African Colonies, together with an Account of British Central Africa and British East Africa.

ACADEMY.—"Mr. Lucas enjoys access to materials of the first importance; and he can deal with those materials with the skill which comes of daily practice."
SOUTH AFRICA.—"A better geographical treatise could scarcely be desired."

Crown 8vo, with Maps, 7s. 6d.

GEOGRAPHY of AFRICA SOUTH of the ZAMBESI. By the Rev. W. G. Greswell, M.A., under the auspices of the Royal Colonial Institute.

TIMES.—"A very useful and opportune publication by a very competent writer.....Few men are better qualified than Mr. Greswell to furnish the student or the traveller with the latest and most authentic information."

The EUROPEAN CONCERT in the EASTERN QUESTION. A Collection of Treaties and other Public Acts. Edited, with Introductions and Notes, by T. E. HOLLAND, D.C.L. 8vo. 12s. 6d.

FOURTH EDITION, REVISED, 8vo. 22s. 6d.

A TREATISE on INTERNATIONAL LAW. By the late W. E. Hall, M.A., Author of 'A Treatise on the Foreign Powers and Jurisdiction of the British Crown.'

NOW READY, VOL. I., PART II., WEST AND WEST-CENTRAL PHRYGIA.
With Illustrations. Royal 8vo. linen, 21s. net.

The CITIES and BISHOPRICS of PHRYGIA: being an Essay of the Local History of Phrygia from the Earliest Times to the Turkish Conquest. By W. M. RAMSAY, D.C.L. LL.D.

Part I. The LYCOS VALLEY and SOUTH-WESTERN PHRYGIA, has been already published, price 18s. net.

ATHENÆUM.—"Professor Ramsay grasps with a sure hand epigraphy, numismatics, philology, geography, and bends all to his purposes. Every inscription that he reproduces in this volume gains in lucidity and authority by his handling of it; and of every city which he treats we rest assured that we now know all that is to be known at the present moment, and far more than has been known at any previous moment since the East shut out the West from Anatolia."

SECOND EDITION, Revised, extra fcap. 8vo. half-buckram, 3s. 6d. net.

The PRINCE. By Niccolo Machiavelli. Translated from the Italian by Ninian Hill Thomson, M.A.

JUST PUBLISHED, crown 4to. cloth, 8s. 6d. net.

A STUDENT'S DICTIONARY of ANGLO-SAXON. By Henry Sweet, M.A.

GLASGOW HERALD.—"Compiled with the greatest care, and laudably free from those more than doubtful forms which have found their way into the earlier dictionaries. Besides being critical in his selection of material, Dr. Sweet has been very judicious in his arrangement."

NOW READY, small 8vo. buckram, 10s. 6d. net.

A DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE of the MAIOLICA and KINDRED WARES in the ASHMOLEAN

MUSEUM, OXFORD. With Introduction, Notice, and Illustrations by C. DRURY E. FORTNUM, Hon. D.C.L.

TIMES.—"We are glad to welcome this literary completion of a noble gift.....A charming book, with excellent photographic reproductions of the best pieces in the collection."

Small 4to. 2l. 2s. net.

MAIOLICA: a Historical Treatise on the Glazed and Enamelled Earthenwares of Italy, &c., with Plates, Marks, &c. By C. DRURY E. FORTNUM, D.C.L.

JUST PUBLISHED, pp. 560, demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.

A CRITICAL DISSERTATION on the ATHANASIAN CREED: its Original Language, Date,

Authorship, Titles, Text, Reception, and Use. By G. D. W. OMMANNEY, M.A., Prebendary of Wells.

JUST PUBLISHED, with Two Facsimiles, demy 4to. 10s. 6d. net.

The ORIGINAL HEBREW of a PORTION of ECCLESIASTICUS (XXXIX. 15 to XLIX. 11), together with the Early Versions and an English Translation. Followed by the Quotations from Ben Sira in Rabbinical Literature. Edited by A. E. COWLEY, M.A., and AD. NEUBAUER, M.A.

JUST PUBLISHED, Part VI., completing the Work, 21s.

A CONCORDANCE to the SEPTUAGINT, and the other Greek Versions of the Old Testament

(including the Apocryphal Books). By the late EDWIN HATCH, M.A., and HENRY A. REDPATH, M.A., assisted by other Scholars. Parts I.-V. (already published), 4to. 21s. each.

EXPOSITORY TIMES.—"This is, and will remain, the Concordance of the Septuagint, and not to the Septuagint only, but to all the Greek versions of the Old Testament and the Apocrypha."

Small 4to. with Five Plates, stiff boards, 12s. 6d. net. GREEK PAPYRI. Series II.

NEW CLASSICAL FRAGMENTS and OTHER GREEK and LATIN PAPYRI. Edited by BERNARD P. GRENFELL, M.A., sometime Craven Fellow in the University of Oxford, Fellow of Queen's College; and ARTHUR S. HUNT, M.A., Craven Fellow, late Scholar of Queen's College.

FULL CLARENDON PRESS CATALOGUES WILL BE SENT POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

London: HENRY FROWDE, Clarendon Press Warehouse, Amen Corner, E.C.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, March 13, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3621. SATURDAY, MARCH 20, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL INSTITUTION of GREAT BRITAIN, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W.

Professor W. BOYD DAWKINS, M.A. F.R.S. F.S.A., will on THURSDAY NEXT, March 25, at 3 o'clock, begin a Course of THREE LECTURES on 'The Relation of Geology to History: (1) The Incoming of Man; (2) The Frontier of History in Britain; (3) Roman Britain.'

Subscription to this Course, Half-a-Guinea; to all the Courses in the Season, Two Guineas.

PRINTERS' PENSION CORPORATION.—The ANNIVERSARY FESTIVAL on TUESDAY, April 6, at the WHITEHALL ROOMS, Hôtel Métropole, under the Presidency of the Right Hon. GEORGE FAUDEL-PHILLIPS, Lord Mayor.

Tickets, price 1*l.* 1*s.* each, can be had of the Stewards or the Secretary, of whom may be had Forms for Contributions in aid of the Funds.

J. S. HODSON, F.R.S.L., Secretary.

Gray's Inn Chambers, 20, High Holborn.

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C., Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

MUSICAL CRITIC can supply Weekly or Fortnightly LONDON LETTER to Provincial or Colonial Journal.—Address BATON, care of Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, W.

WANTED, EASY LITERARY WORK for spare hours.—CANTAB, care of A. J. Isard, Esq., Solicitor, 14, Queen-street, Cheapside, E.C.

TO EDITORS of NEWSPAPERS.—Experienced JOURNALIST offers PARIS LETTER—Racing, Cycling, Drama, Literature, Fashions, Society Gossip, &c.—Address CHRONICLER, The Galignani Library, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

LITERARY READER to LONDON PUBLISHER (now deceased) DESIRES SIMILAR POST. University man, Journalist. Translations, MSS. Revised, Prepared for Press.—Box 1241, Sell's Offices, Fleet-street, E.C.

YOUNG LADY (experienced) wishes post as SECRETARY. Has had sound English education; French; German (acquired abroad); Shorthand; Type-Writing; used to reading aloud. Good references.—Address A. L. P., care of Messrs. Reynell & Son, 44, Chancery-lane, W.C.

AN ENGLISHMAN, aged 26, educated abroad, with a thorough command of both French and German and a knowledge of Italian, wishes for a post as SECRETARY. Business training.—S. T. W., care of Messrs. A. D. Innes & Co., 31 and 32, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

OFFICE and SERVICES of intelligent REPRESENTATIVE OFFERED genuine Association or Enterprise—Philanthropic, Literary, Commercial, or Professional—by a business-like Woman having Secretarial and Journalistic experience. N.B. Services of Gentleman Representative when needed.—Particulars, in confidence, to CO OPERATION, Box 500, Willing's, 125, Strand.

LITERATURE.—To AUTHORS, PUBLISHERS, and OTHERS.

A Literary Man with a successful experience, but now invalided, needs to add to a small income, as well as occupying his mind, by Work at Home. Will be glad to undertake anything from writing up MSS. from Notes or Instructions, &c., to Transcribing, Compiling, or the like. May be implicitly trusted.

LEX, 8, Brathway-road, Southfields, S.W.

INDIA OFFICE, February 25, 1897.

A PROFESSOR of NATURAL SCIENCE is REQUIRED for the THOMASON ENGINEERING COLLEGE, KURKI, in the North-West Provinces of India. He should be a Practical Electrical Engineer, and qualified to lecture in and teach Electricity, Magnetism, Heat, Sound, Light, and the Elements of Chemistry, Geology, and Mineralogy. He should understand Telegraph Engineering.

The salary will be Rupees 500 a month in the first year, rising by Rs. 50 a year to Rs. 700. If retained on termination of five years' agreement salary Rs. 750 a month rising to Rs. 1,000, with benefit of Leave and Pension Rules from date of first appointment.

Applications should be addressed to the Secretary, Judicial and Public Department, India Office, London, not later than the end of March.

A. GODLEY, Under-Secretary of State for India.

FOYLE COLLEGE, LONDONDERRY. (Constituted by Foyle College Act, 1896.)

The Governors are about to appoint a HEAD MASTER, who will be required to enter on his duties on the 1st day of August, 1897.

The salary offered is 300*l.* per annum, with a Capitation Fee of 1*l.* and One-fourth of the Result Fees earned at the Annual Examinations of the Board of Intermediate Education in Ireland, in addition to the Profits accruing from Boarders.

A Residence, free of rent and taxes, with adequate accommodation for Boarders, is provided.

It is estimated that the Pupils will exceed 150.

The Governors will pay the salaries of the Assistant Masters.

Candidates, who must be Graduates in Arts of some University in the United Kingdom, must send their applications (with copies of their testimonials) not later than the 17th day of April, 1897 (upon a form which will be supplied), to the undersigned, from whom further information can be obtained. C. R. TILLIE.

Secretary to Governors, Ship Quay-street, Londonderry.

ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE, Cooper's Hill, Staines.—The Course of Study is arranged to fit an Engineer for Employment in Europe, India, and the Colonies. About 40 Students will be admitted in September, 1897. The Secretary of State will offer them for Competition Twelve Appointments as Assistant Engineers in the Public Works Department and Three Appointments as Assistant Superintendents in the Telegraph Department.—For particulars apply to the SECRETARY, at the College.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

MANCHESTER COLLEGE, OXFORD.

An OPEN THEOLOGICAL SCHOLARSHIP, of the annual value of 75*l.* (tenable for one, two, or three years), is offered by the Dr. Daniel Jones's Trustees for competition.

For particulars apply to the SECRETARY, 1, St. James's-square, Manchester.

THE SCHOOL of LITERARY ART. Conducted by FLORENCE MARRYAT. For instruction in Composing and Writing Fiction, Journalism, and the Drama.—Apply to SECRETARY, 26, Abercorn-place, N.W.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

EXPERIENCED COACHES and VISITING TEACHERS.—University Women, with Distinctions in Literature, History, French, German, Classics, Mathematics, and Science, are recommended by the UNIVERSITY ASSOCIATION of WOMEN TEACHERS.—HON. SEC., 48, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

GOVERNESSES for PRIVATE FAMILIES.—Miss LOUISA BROUGH can RECOMMEND several highly qualified English and Foreign GOVERNESSES for Resident and Daily Engagements.—Central Registry for Teachers, 25, Craven-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL MEDICAL SCHOOL, Albert Embankment, S.E.

The SUMMER SESSION will COMMENCE on MONDAY, May 3. Students entering in the Summer are eligible to compete for the Science Scholarships of 150*l.* and 60*l.* awarded in October.

A SCHOLARSHIP of 50*l.*, open to University Students, and other Prizes and Scholarships of the value of 500*l.*, are offered for annual competition.

All Appointments are open to Students without extra payment.

SPECIAL CLASSES for the Examinations of the University of London are held throughout the year.

TUTORIAL CLASSES are held prior to the Second and Final Examinations of the Conjoint Board in January, April, and July.

A REGISTER of approved Lodgings, and of private families receiving Boarders, is kept in Secretary's Office.

EXCELLENT DAY CLUB accommodation is provided in the School building.

Prospectuses and all particulars may be obtained from the Medical Secretary, Mr. G. RENDLE.

H. P. HAWKINS, M.A. M.D. (Oxon.), Dean.

TYPE-WRITER.—AUTHORS' MSS., Plays, Reviews, Literary Articles, &c., COPIED with accuracy and despatch. 1*d.* per folio. Manifold or Duplicate Copies.—Address Miss E. TIGAR, 23, Maitland Park-villas, Haverstock-hill, N.W. Established 1884.

TYPE-WRITING by CLERGYMAN'S DAUGHTER.—Authors' MSS. 1*s.* per 1,000 words. Circulars, &c., by Copying Process.—Miss SIKES, West Kensington Type-writing Agency, 13, Wolverton-gardens, Hammersmith, W.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, 1*d.* per folio of 72 words. References to Authors.—Miss GLADDING, 23, Lansdowne-gardens, South Lambeth, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses E. B. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing.

INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6690. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

TO AUTHORS.

PROPOSALS for WORKS in GENERAL LITERATURE and BOOKS for YOUNG READERS INVITED by a LONDON PUBLISHER of old standing.—Full particulars in first instance (before sending MSS.) to P. S. R., care of Mr. G. C. Mault, Advertisement Contractor, 17, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879. Proprietor, Mr A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The Interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.

And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MSS. in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

9, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.

MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS. ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above.

TO AUTHORS.—Messrs. DIGBY, LONG & CO. (Publishers of 'The Author's Manual,' 3*s.* 6*d.* net, Eighth Edition), INVITE AUTHORS to FORWARD their MSS. (Fiction, Travel, Poetry, &c.) for prompt consideration.—Address 18, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

NORTHERN NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE, KENDAL.

LITERARY AGENTS.

FICTION, SERIES OF ARTICLES, WEEKLY SERVICES.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W., Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.

12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Catalogues.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,

14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.

CATALOGUES on application.

Now ready,

CATALOGUE of FRENCH BOOKS, at greatly reduced prices. I. PHILOSOPHY. II. RELIGION. III. HISTORY. IV. POETRY, DRAMA, MUSIC. V. BEAUX-ARTS.

DULAU & CO. 37, Soho-square, London, W.

ELLIS & ELVEY, Dealers in Old and Rare Books, Manuscripts, and Engravings.

NEW CATALOGUE (No. 85) OF CHOICE BOOKS AND MANUSCRIPTS,

Including a Remarkable Collection of RARE BOOKS on MUSIC, now ready, post free, Sixpence.

29, New Bond-street, London, W.

BOOKS, A CATALOGUE of SECOND-HAND, pertaining to Annuities, Finance, and Political Economy in general, post free.—C. HERBERT, 333, Goswell-road, London, E.C. LIBRARIES PURCHASED.

OLD COLOURED VIEWS of LONDON—Shipping—Caricatures—Costume—Proof Sets of Illustrations to Books—Naval and Military Subjects—Etchings—Portraits, &c.—Just published, a CATALOGUE (post free) by JAMES REMELL & SON, 91, Oxford-street, London, W.—Old Books and Engravings bought for Cash.

NOW READY, CATALOGUE, No. 20.—Drawings of the Early English School—Engravings after Turner, Constable, Reynolds, &c.—choice states of Turner's Liber Studiorum—Illustrated Books—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

ALL OUT-OF-PRINT BOOKS speedily procured. Acknowledged the most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants to BAKER'S Great Bookshop, Birmingham.—Books Bought, Lent, or Exchanged.

THE TIMES.—WANTED, the File of the TIMES Newspaper for 1827 (and 1815-18 inclusive).—State price, bound or unbound, to the LIBRARIAN, Univ. Union Society, Cambridge.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

(nearly opposite the National Gallery).

Inspection invited.

REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7*l.* 10*s.*

[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5*l.* 5*s.*

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY.

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

REPRODUCTIONS IN PERMANENT PHOTOGRAPHY

(the Carbon process) of the Chief Treasures of the Great Continental Galleries, including

The PUBLIC and PRIVATE GALLERIES of ROME.

The UFFIZI and PITTI GALLERIES, FLORENCE.

The ROYAL MUSEUMS of BERLIN and DRESDEN.

The MUSEUM of the LOUVRE, PARIS.

The PICTURE GALLERIES of HOLLAND and BELGIUM.

The MUSEO del PRADO, MADRID.

&c. &c. &c.

This almost exhaustive series of Autotypes includes nearly every work of Art of interest to the Artist, to the Historical Student, and to the Lover of Pictures. The selection of Works to be reproduced has, in every instance, been made under the advice of eminent Authorities and of the Official Directors of the respective Collections. By the aid of the most recent improvements in Photographic Science, absolutely faithful and Permanent Copies have been secured, on a scale which adequately represents the Original Paintings. These are printed in rich brown pigments, on specially prepared paper, size 18 by 15 inches, and are sold at a uniform price of Twelve Shillings each.

G. F. WATTS, R.A.

SIR EDW. BURNE-JONES.

DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI.

A large series of the Chief Works of these Masters, reproduced in various sizes, at prices ranging from 3*s.* 6*d.* to Three Guineas.

Full particulars of the Collection of Autotype Reproductions of the Works of Old and Modern Masters will be sent post free on application to

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

FOR THE CIRCULATION AND SALE OF ALL THE BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE in ONE SUBSCRIPTION and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

Town and Village Clubs supplied on Liberal Terms.

Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books gratis and post free.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS

NOW OFFERED AT

GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST

(100 PAGES)

Sent gratis and post free to any address.

The List contains POPULAR WORKS in TRAVEL, SPORT, HISTORY, BIOGRAPHY, SCIENCE, and FICTION.

Also NEW and SURPLUS COPIES of FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

Books Shipped to all parts of the World at Lowest Rates.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,

30–34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.;

241, BROMPTON-ROAD, S.W.;

48, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C.; and at

BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

LONDON LIBRARY,

ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.

Patron—H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

President—LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.

Vice-Presidents—Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, The Very Rev. the Dean of Llandaff, Herbert Spencer, Esq., Sir Henry Barkly, K.C.B.

Trustees—Right Hon. Sir M. Grant Duff, Right Hon. Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P., Right Hon. Earl of Rosebery.

The Library contains about 170,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in various Languages. Subscription, 3*l.* a year; Life Membership, according to age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country and Ten to Town Members. Reading-Room open from Ten to half-past Six. Catalogue, Fifth Edition, 2 vols. royal 8vo. price 21*s.*; to Members, 16*s.* C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.

ART EXPERT gives ADVICE or INFORMATION on PICTURES, &c., and on all matters connected with Art, by Visit or Correspondence. Collections arranged. Terms moderate.—C. COLE, Mayland, Sutton, Surrey.

TO BE SOLD, a range of OAK BOOKCASES, 7 ft. high, enclosed with glass doors; simple Tudor style; in all 24 ft. run.—Apply to MESSRS. CRACE, 38, Wigmore-street, W.

TO LIBRARIANS and BOOKBUYERS.—FOR SALE, a COLLECTION of RARE BOOKS, English and Foreign, of Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries.—Catalogue on application to G. POWELL, 2, Thanet-place, Strand, W.C.

CHOICE OLD ENGRAVINGS in COLOURS, Rare Sporting Prints, Theatrical and other Portraits, Americana, Scarce Books, Autographs, Drawings, &c., ON SALE by FRANK T. SABIN, 118, Shaftesbury-avenue, W.

WORCESTERSHIRE, six miles from Malvern.—PHYSICIAN, married, has a VACANCY for LADY or GENTLEMAN, Mental, Nervous, or Spinal Disease. Large Garden, Conservatory, Carriage, Bath Chair. Terms from 200 Guineas per annum.—Address VICTOR, M.D., care of Willing's, 162, Piccadilly.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c.; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD. (The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)

Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each 5*s.* per dozen, ruled or plain.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS. South aspect, good view, three minutes' walk from the town and common.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

Just published, 3 vols 8vo price 2*l.* 2*s.*

THE WILDERNESS and its TENANTS: a Series of Geographical and other Essays illustrative of Life in a Wild Country. By JOHN MADDEN

London: Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Limited.

Sales by Auction.

The Collection of Etchings, Oil Paintings, and Water-Colour Drawings of the late W. J. GALLOWAY, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION by order of the Executors, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 23, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of ETCHINGS, OIL PAINTINGS, and WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS, the Property of the late W. J. GALLOWAY of Islington, comprising Etchings by Ian Walter Brunet Debaines F. Seymour Haden, H. Herkomer, R. Macbeth, C. Méryon, J. J. Millet, S. Palmer, &c.; Drawings by H. Herkomer, S. Prout, Sir J. E. Millais, Neuhuys, W. Hunt, Varley, T. P. Hardy, R. W. Macbeth, De Wint, Cattermole, J. M. S. Whistler, Sir E. Burne-Jones, &c.; Paintings by Joseph and Albert Neuhuys, W. Maris, T. Lloyd, T. Hines, Lord Leighton, and others.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Drawings, the Property of a well-known Amateur; and the Collection of Engravings of JOSHUA WILSON, Esq., of Tunbridge Wells.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 24, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, valuable DRAWINGS the Property of a well-known AMATEUR, comprising fine Examples by Copley Fielding, David Cox, T. Girtin, Cruikshank, Rowlandson, Bartolozzi, David Hearne, and other Masters of the English Schools; also valuable ENGRAVINGS, including the Collection of JOSHUA WILSON, Esq., of Tunbridge Wells, comprising Works by Bartolozzi, Kauffmann, Cipriani, Ward, S. Reynolds, Morland, Cousins, V. Green, J. Smith, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Coins and Medals of the late Rev. THOMAS CALVERT, of Sandysike, Cumberland.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, by order of the Executors, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, March 26, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of COINS and MEDALS of the late Rev. THOMAS CALVERT, M.A., F.S.A., of Sandysike, Cumberland, including the following: Greek Silver, Roman and Byzantine Gold, Roman Brass and Denarii—an important series of Mohammedan Coins in Gold, Silver, and Copper—British, Anglo-Saxon, and English, Colonial, and Foreign Coins in Gold and Silver—a few War and other Medals, including a rare Dublin Regimental, 1780, &c.—Persian Talisman, Seals, Gems, &c.—Coin Cabinets and Numismatic Books.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Portion of the Library of the late F. W. SMITH, Esq., of Belfast.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 30, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS, including the Property of G. B. WORTHINGTON, Esq., comprising Sporting Works—Voyages—Topography, &c.; the Property of a LADY, consisting of Biographical Works—Illustrated Books—Travels—Galleries—Fine-Art and Scientific Publications—Dictionaries, &c.; a PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late F. W. SMITH, Esq., of Belfast, consisting chiefly of French and Italian Works, the Property of an AUSTRIAN NOBLEMAN, comprising scarce Sporting Works; the Property of J. C. CROWDY, Esq., consisting of the Writings of Dickens, Surtees, Thackeray, and others, Caricatures by Heath, &c., and other Properties, in which will be found Works by Swinburne, R. L. Stevenson, Doyle, Bewick, Geo. Meredith, Audsley, and Bowes, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Engravings by Masters of the English School, the Property of the Right Hon. the EARL of CRAWFORD.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 31, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS, including Fancy Subjects by Masters of the English School, some finely printed in Colours, comprising Master Philip Yorke and the Age of Innocence, both after Sir Joshua Reynolds—and Thoughts on Matrimony, after J. R. Smith, all in the finest condition, the Property of the Right Hon. the EARL of CRAWFORD; also other Properties, comprising Mezzotint Portraits after Sir J. Reynolds, &c.—the 'Cries of London,' after Wheatley—Lady Kenyon, after Hoppner—Miss Farren, after Sir T. Lawrence—and others; also the Series of Six Original Water-Colour Drawings by R. Caldecott illustrating 'The Mad Dog,' by Oliver Goldsmith, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A valuable Collection of Engravings formed prior to the year 1850.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 1, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS formed prior to the year 1850, comprising fine Mezzotint and other Engravings after Gainsborough, Hoppner, Sir J. Reynolds, Romney, and other celebrated artists, including Portraits of eminent Statesmen, Authors, Military Commanders, Nobility and Gentry, Theatrical Celebrities, &c.—Fancy Subjects by F. Bartolozzi—five different Portraits of Lady Hamilton, after Romney and Sir J. Reynolds—a very interesting series of Portraits of the Lord Chancellors and other Dignitaries of the Law, &c., nearly all being in very fine states both as to impression and condition, several with the handwriting of Horace Walpole upon them.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Botanical Library of the late FREEMAN C. S. ROPER, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 2, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely (by order of the Executors), the LIBRARY of the late FREEMAN C. S. ROPER, Esq., F.L.S., F.R.M.S., &c., of Palgrave House, Eastbourne, comprising valuable Works on Botany and the other Branches of Natural History—Cooke's Handbook of British Fungi, Illustrations of British Fungi and British Fresh-Water Algæ—Dibdin's Tour in France and Germany, with extra Illustrations—Greville's Scottish Cryptogamic Flora—Greville's—Harvey's Phycologia Britannica—Lindley and Hutton's Fossil Flora of Great Britain—Harris's Game and Wild Animals of Southern Africa—The Grete Herbal—The Phytologist—Saccardo, Sylloge Fungorum—Sowerby's English Botany, with Four unpublished Plates—Sowerby's Mineral Conchology, complete Set—Stephens's Illustrations of British Entomology—Sussex Archæological Collections—Musée Français et Musée Royale—Sowerby's Coloured Figures of English Fungi, &c.—Manuscript Horæ on Vellum, with finely painted Miniatures—Graduale MS. on vellum, with Initial Letters, Miniatures, and elaborate Borders, Sæc. XV.—and Miscellaneous Works of General Literature, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Miscellaneous Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, March 25, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY, comprising China—fine old Cut Glass—Miniatures—Coins and Medallions—old and modern Silver—Sheffield and other Plate—and a few Lots of Antique Furniture.

Catalogues on application.

Musical Instruments, including the Collection of the late WM. HENRY EDWARDS, Esq., and a Musical Library formed by an Amateur.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 30, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, GRAND and COTTAGE PIANOFORTES, HARMONIUMS, and ORGANS—Double and Single Action Harps—Violins, Violas, and Violoncellos, including the Collection of the late WILLIAM HENRY EDWARDS, Esq (by order of the Executors)—a large quantity of American and Zither Banjos, Mandolines, and Guitars—Brass and Wood-Wind Instruments, &c. Also the valuable MUSIC LIBRARY, collected during the past twenty-five years by an AMATEUR, consisting principally of Solos, Duets, Trios, Quartets, and Quintets for Stringed Instruments.

Catalogues in preparation.

Scarce Engravings and Paintings, the Property of the late E. P. LOFTUS BROCK, Esq., F.S.A.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 2, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, scarce ENGRAVINGS and PAINTINGS, including a fine Collection of Portraits, after Cosway, by Condé, in proof states.

On view two days prior. Catalogues on application.

Collection of Ex-Libris and Armorial China.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 6, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of EX-LIBRIS, comprising Examples in the Early English, Jacobean, Chippendale, and Bartolozzi Styles, many of which are dated.

Catalogues on receipt of three stamps.

Further Portion of the Library of H. J. FARMER-ATKINSON, Esq., F.S.A., removed from Ore.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, April 7, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a FURTHER PORTION of the LIBRARY of H. J. FARMER-ATKINSON, Esq., F.S.A., consisting chiefly of valuable Examples of Biblical and Liturgical Literature in various Languages.

Catalogues on application.

Valuable Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 8, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a valuable COLLECTION of BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising many choice Examples of Early Foreign and English Printing—Works of Elizabethan and Jacobean Authors—Scarce Editions of the Bible—Manuscripts on Vellum, with Illuminated Capitals and Miniatures—fine Examples of Bindings, some with Arms; also a remarkable Collection of Early Playbills from the Vienna Exhibition, &c.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

Antique Furniture, the Property of the late E. P. LOFTUS BROCK, Esq., F.S.A.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 13, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the CHINA and ANTIQUE FURNITURE of the late E. P. LOFTUS BROCK, Esq., F.S.A.

THURSDAY and FRIDAY NEXT.

Original Old Newspapers—17th, 18th, and 19th Centuries—of Europe, Asia, Africa, America, and New Zealand.

MR. JOHN PARNELL will SELL by AUCTION, at his Antiquarian, Literary, and Art Sale-Rooms, 12, Rockley-road, Shepherd's Bush Green, London, W., on THURSDAY and FRIDAY NEXT, March 25 and 26, at 1 o'clock, Early New Zealand (Auckland) Papers—1842) printed in a mangle; others of the periods of and relating to Sheridan, Burke, Pitt, Court of Charles II. (1668), Order of the Garter, London City, East India Company, United States (1821), Duke of Wellington, Mr. Gladstone, Charles II., Queen Anne, George II., III., and IV., Napoleon I. and III., Franco-Prussian War, Highland Rebellion, Queen Caroline, First French Republic, British Naval Engagements, American War of Independence, Fox, John Wesley, Warren Hastings, Tippoo Saib, the Stage, William Penn, Titus Oates, Junius, Prince Charles Edward Stuart, William IV., Queen Victoria, Wilberforce, Queen Charlotte, Robert Burns, Sir Walter Scott, Robert Emmett, Admiral Benbow, Mr. Macaulay, Presidents Washington, Adams, Monroe, Jackson, Jefferson, Madison, Brand, Benjamin Franklin, the Anglo-American and Anglo-French Wars, the First Duke of Marlborough, the Corporations and Sees of the Cities of London, Canterbury, York, Bristol, Durham, and Salisbury, Benjamin Disraeli, Lord Nelson, Charles Dickens, Mrs. Siddons, Eliza Cook, Blomfield's Widow, Tennyson, Lord Brougham, David Garrick, Cobbett, Daniel O'Connell, Talleyrand, Marmont, the Prince of Wales, Porson, Lafayette, Hazlitt, Mrs. Fitzherbert, the Chevalier de St. George, Tom Hood, Malibran, Miss Farren, Edmund Kean, Lord Cochrane, T. F. Buxton, Macready, Thomas Bewick, Sir Humphry Davy, Tom Moore, Princess Victoria, Duchess of Kent, John Ruskin, Josiah Wedgwood, James II. and the Prince of Orange, Louis XIV., Royal Zoological Society, the Union with Ireland, and many other notable Persons and Events, Coronations, Early Christie Advertisements, Royal Funerals, Literary Souvenirs, Embassies, Metz Newspapers during and after the Siege, and many rare Portraits of the persons named, and finely impressed Early Newspaper Duty Stamps—Portraits of famous Editors, Authors, Journalists, Printers, and Letter-Founders—Early Water-Marks, Letters, Borders, Designs—Literary Prints, and Autograph Letters of famous Authors, Actors, and Admirals

On view every day until days of Sale.

MESSRS. HODGSON beg to announce the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C. (commencing at 1 o'clock precisely on each day):—

On WEDNESDAY, March 24, and Two Following Days, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, including the Library of an Eminent Theologian, comprising Roberts's Holy Land, coloured copy, 6 vols.—Collectio Wedge-iana, 2 vols.—Camden's Britannia, by Gough, 3 vols.—Britton's Antiquities, 5 vols.—Nichols's Literary Anecdotes, &c., 17 vols.—Dibdin's Decameron, &c., 9 vols.—Scott's Waverley Novels, Library Edition, 25 vols., and Author's Edition, 48 vols.—Athenian Society's Publications, 6 vols.—Vecellio, Costumes, 2 vols.—Lovell Reeve's Conchologia Iconica, about 250 Parts—Elements of Conchology, &c., 4 vols.—Sowerby's Thesaurus Conchyliorum, pub. 5l. 5s.—S. Augustini Opera, 15 vols., and the Benedictine Edition, 18 vols.—the Works of Prescott, Grote, Gibbon, Mahon, Burton, May, Campbell, Carlyle, Froude, Coleridge, Lamb, Lever, Dickens, Thackeray, &c.

On WEDNESDAY, March 31, and Following Days, a LARGE PORTION from the well-selected STOCK of BOOKS of Messrs. HILL & SON, of No. 1, Holywell-street, Strand, W.C., consequent on the death of Mr. H. R. Hill, comprising the usual Standard Works in the various Branches of Literature. The whole in excellent condition, and many in neat bindings.

EARLY in APRIL, the valuable LIBRARY of the late LORD CHIEF BARON POLLOCK removed from Hatton House, Feltham, Middlesex. Further particulars will be announced, and Catalogues are preparing.

Catalogues will be forwarded on application.

MONDAY NEXT.

A Choice Collection of Tropical Lepidoptera in superb condition, the Property of a Gentleman going Abroad; a Collection of British Lepidoptera including many rarities; Store Boxes; Butterflies in Papers; a 52-Drawer Mahogany Cabinet, &c.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY NEXT, March 22, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the Saturday prior 12 till 3 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

FRIDAY NEXT.

400 Lots of Miscellaneous Property, including Photographic and Electrical Apparatus, Scientific Instruments, Books, Pictures, Furniture, Lanterns and Slides, &c., from various Private Sources.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, March 26, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

MONDAY, March 29.

A Collection of Native Curiosities, Weapons, &c., from New Guinea, consigned direct; also a General Collection of Natural History Specimens, Jewellery, Antiquities, China, Pictures, &c.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY, March 29, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the Saturday prior 12 till 3 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, March 22, the COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of JOHN BAYLISS, Esq.

On TUESDAY, March 23, and Following Days, the COLLECTION of WORKS of FRANCIS BARTOLOZZI, R.A., formed by FREDERIC, Third EARL of BESSBOROUGH, the Property of the Hon. ASHLEY PONSONBY.

On FRIDAY, March 26, PORCELAIN, DECORATIVE OBJECTS, and OLD ENGLISH SILVER of the late HENRY JENKINS, Esq.

On SATURDAY, March 27, the COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of HENRY JENKINS, Esq., deceased; also MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of S. H. PERKS, Esq., and the late JAMES HOPGOOD, Esq.

On MONDAY, March 29, and Following Day, the COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS after Sir E. LANDSEER of Sir HUMPHREY DE TRAFFORD, Bart., sold in consequence of the Sale of Trafford Park and Hall.

On WEDNESDAY, March 31, and Following Day, the CELLAR of WINES at Easton Park, the Property of the late DUKE of HAMILTON, K.T.

On THURSDAY, April 1, the CONDOVER HALL LIBRARY of the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq.

On FRIDAY, April 2, OLD CHINESE PORCELAIN.

On SATURDAY, April 3, the WORKS of the late HAMILTON MACALLUM, R.W.S. R.I.

On MONDAY, April 5, the COLLECTION of ANCIENT and MODERN PICTURES of the late MICHAEL ABRAHAMS, Esq.

On THURSDAY, April 8, Valuable CASKET of JEWELS, the Property of Miss ELLEN FARREN, the accomplished and popular Actress.

On FRIDAY, April 9, the COLLECTION of OLD NANKIN PORCELAIN of the late GEORGE JAMES, Esq.

On SATURDAY, April 10, the GEORGE JAMES COLLECTION of High-Class MODERN PICTURES and WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS.

THE PENDER COLLECTION.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will SELL by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, on SATURDAY, May 29, and MONDAY, May 31, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock, precisely, the very extensive and valuable COLLECTION of PICTURES formed by that well-known Amateur Sir JOHN PENDER, M.P., K.C.M.G., deceased, late of Arlington-street and Footscray-place, comprising upwards of 100 Ancient and Modern Pictures and Water-Colour Drawings, including the Celebrated Engraved Chef-d'Œuvre of J. M. W. Turner of Mercury and Herse, and many other Masterpieces of the British and Continental Schools.

Illustrated Catalogues will be ready shortly, price One Guinea. Further notice will be given.

PARIS.—Maitre P. CHEVALLIER, Auctioneer, 10 Rue de la Grange Batelière, assisted by MM. MANNHEIM & SON, Experts, 7 Rue St. Georges, will SELL by PUBLIC AUCTION, in PARIS, at the HOTEL DROUOT, Room No. 1, from March 29 to April 10, the OBJECTS of ART and FURNITURE of the Sixteenth, Seventeenth, and Eighteenth Centuries, Paintings, Water-Colour Drawings, Pastels, belonging to the Estate of the BARON JÉROME PICHON.

On the 15th of each Month, price 1s., Annual Subscription, 12s.

THE ZOOLOGIST. Edited by W. L. DISTANT. Contents for MARCH.

The OSTRICH. By S. C. Cronwright Schreiner. Full Details of Habits from Personal Observation. Illustrated from Instantaneous Photographs. The Norfolk Ornithological Record for 1896, by J. H. Gurney, F.Z.S. Illustrated Notes on Mammals, Birds, Insects, &c.

London: West, Newman & Co. 54, Hatton-garden.

No. 1 MARCH 24, price 1d.

PITMAN'S FRENCH WEEKLY.—An entirely New, High-Class French-English Semi-Comic. Charmingly illustrated and daintily got up. Sixteen large pages of amusing, interesting reading (French and English side by side), crisp jokes, easy conversation, Hints for Society or Arts Exams., advice by experts, "How to learn French in a few weeks." Revised by the native French staff of Pitman's Metropolitan School.

Price One Penny, of all Newsagents and Bookstalls.

Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Limited, 1, Amen-corner, London, E.C.

STUDIES

OF THE

GREEK POETS.

BY

JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS.

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION,

WITH A CHAPTER ON HERONDAS.

2 vols. post 8vo. price 25*s.*

AN INTRODUCTION

TO THE

STUDY OF DANTE.

BY

JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS.

THIRD EDITION.

Large crown 8vo. price 7*s.* 6*d.*

OUR LIFE IN THE SWISS HIGHLANDS.

BY

JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS

AND HIS

Daughter MARGARET.

Large crown 8vo. price 7*s.* 6*d.*

EARLY GREEK PHILOSOPHY.

BY

JOHN BURNET, M.A.,

Professor of Greek in the University of St. Andrews.

Demy 8vo. price 10*s.* 6*d.*

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY'S SPRING ANNOUNCEMENTS.

READY IN A FEW DAYS.

NEW WORK BY CAPTAIN A. T. MAHAN.

THE LIFE OF NELSON THE EMBODIMENT OF THE SEA POWER OF GREAT BRITAIN.

By Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N., Author of 'The Influence of Sea Power upon History,' &c.

2 vols. demy 8vo. about 900 pages, illustrated with 12 Battle Plans, 8 Lithographic Maps, and about 20 Photogravure Plates, cloth extra, gilt top, 36s. net.

FULL PROSPECTUS POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

The Trade are requested to send in their orders at once, as the First Edition is limited.

VOLUME I. NEARLY READY.

A HISTORY OF THE ROYAL NAVY FROM THE EARLIEST TIMES TO THE PRESENT.

By W. LAIRD CLOWES, Fellow of King's College, London; Gold Medallist, U.S. Naval Institute; Hon. Member R.U.S. Institution.

Assisted by Sir C. R. MARKHAM, K.C.B. P.R.G.S., Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N., Mr. H. W. WILSON, Mr. THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Mr. E. FRASER, &c.

5 vols. each containing 5 Photogravure Plates, and many Full-Page and other Illustrations, Maps, Charts, &c., royal 8vo. cloth extra, 25s. each net.

The First Volume of the History, bringing the narrative to the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, will be published immediately, and the remaining four volumes will appear at intervals of about Six Months.

PROSPECTUS OF THE WORK POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

Ready immediately, OUIDA'S NEW NOVEL.

THE MASSARENES.

By OUIDA, Author of 'Moths,' 'Under Two Flags,' &c. Crown 8vo. nearly 600 pages, 6s.

The Novel is in some respects a new departure on the part of this popular writer. Those who have read the manuscript pronounce the novel the best Ouida has written.

WILLIAM BLACK'S NOVELS.

Bound in cloth, HALF-A-CROWN each. The NEW UNIFORM EDITION. Price 2s. 6d. each Volume. 27 Volumes already published.
The New Volumes, now in preparation, bringing the Series down to date, are:—

1. WOLFENBERG. [Now ready.
2. The HANDSOME HUMES. [Ready April 1.
3. HIGHLAND COUSINS. [Ready May 1.
4. BRISEIS. [Ready June 1.
5. MAGIC INK. [Ready July 1.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION OF MR. H. M. STANLEY'S GREAT WORK.

Carefully Revised throughout by the Author, with a New Preface, and somewhat Abridged by the omission of matter no longer of interest.

IN DARKEST AFRICA; or, the Quest, Rescue, and Retreat of Emin Pasha, Governor of Equatoria. By H. M. Stanley, M.P., D.C.L., &c. Crown 8vo. with Map and all the Original Illustrations, cloth, 5s. [Shortly.

WAR, FAMINE, and OUR FOOD SUPPLY. By R. B. Marston. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.; boards, 2s. [Immediately.

The work is on the lines of Mr. Marston's article 'Corn Stores for War Time,' which appeared in the Nineteenth Century for February, 1896, and attracted a good deal of attention, both in this country and abroad.

The FIRST BATTLE: a Story of the Campaign of 1896. By William J. Bryan. Together with a Collection of his Speeches and a Biographical Sketch by his Wife. Illustrated with Portraits, &c. Demy 8vo. cloth. [Shortly.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE on ORGAN BUILDING. By F. E. Robertson. The Text in 1 vol. demy 8vo. cloth, and numerous Plates in a royal 4to. vol. * Prospectus on application. [In the press.

"PREACHERS OF THE AGE" SERIES.—NEW VOLUME.

The GOSPEL in the EPISTLES. By Dr. J. Guinness Rogers. With Photogravure Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [Shortly.

CHEAP REISSUE OF THE WELL-KNOWN "BAYARD SERIES."

Uniform post 8vo. volumes, cloth, 1s. 6d. net per volume.

Vol. I. The CHEVALIER BAYARD. | Vol. II. LORD CHESTERFIELD'S LETTERS.

OTHER VOLUMES WILL BE DULY ANNOUNCED.

TWO ADDITIONS TO LOW'S 2s. 6d. LIBRARY OF TRAVEL AND ADVENTURE.

Uniform crown 8vo. volumes, fully illustrated, cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

HAUSALAND; or, Fifteen Hundred Miles through the Central Soudan. By the Rev. C. H. Robinson, M.A., with Map, Portrait, and numerous Illustrations. [Next week.

TWO KINGS of UGANDA; or, Life by the Shores of the Victoria Nyanza. By the Rev. R. P. Ashe, M.A. With Map and Illustration. [Ready.

HEROIC JAPAN: an Authentic and Complete Description of the War between China and Japan, from the Inception of Hostilities up to the Treaty of Shimonoseki. By Dr. F. W. EASTLAKE and Mr. YAMADA YOSHI-AKI, President of the Chautauquan Association of Japan. With 3 Maps and numerous Illustrations. 8vo. 400 pp. cloth, 18s. [Ready.

TALES from CANTERBURY CATHEDRAL, told to Children. By Mrs. FREWEN LORD, Author of 'Tales from Westminster Abbey,' &c. With Plan and View of the Cathedral.' Crown 8vo. boards, 1s. [Shortly.

HANDBOOK to BRITISH MILITARY STATIONS ABROAD. Compiled and Edited by L. C. R. DUNCOMBE-JEWELL. With a Map showing the British Military Stations in both Hemispheres. Crown 8vo. limp cloth, 3s. 6d. [In the press.

THIRD EDITION NOW READY.

The ENGLISH CATALOGUE of BOOKS for 1896. Royal 8vo. over 220 pp. cloth limp, 5s. net; or half-roan limp, 6s. 6d. net. It contains over 7,000 Titles of New Books and New Editions, and over 6,000 Duplicate Titles, forming the Index in one continuous Alphabet.

JOSEPH THOMSON, the AFRICAN EXPLORER. By his Brother, the Rev. J. B. THOMSON, of Greenock. With 6 Maps and many Illustrations. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.
"A worthy and substantial memorial of a noble character."—Scotsman.

The RUINED CITIES of CEYLON: being a Description of Anuradhapura and Polonnaruwa. By HENRY W. CAVE, M.A., Queen's College, Oxford. Illustrated with 50 Full-Page Woodburygravures, from Photographs taken by the Author. 1 vol. small 4to. Roxburghe, gilt top, 38s. net.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LIMITED, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, Fleet-street, E.C.

BLISS, SANDS & CO.

NEW NOVEL BY S. R. CROCKETT.

LADS' LOVE:

An Idyll of the Land of Heather.

By S. R. CROCKETT,

AUTHOR OF 'BOG MYRTLE AND PEAT,' &c.

Fully illustrated by Warwick Goble. With Frontispiece Portrait of the Author by Frank Richards.

Large crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s. [Now ready.

NEW COPYRIGHT WORKS.

NOVELS.

JUST PUBLISHED.

WALTER RAYMOND.

CHARITY CHANCE.

A Novel by WALTER RAYMOND. With Frontispiece by T. H. Robinson. Large crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

OLIPHANT SMEATON.

OUR LADDIE.

A Novel by OLIPHANT SMEATON. Fully illustrated. Large crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

ARABELLA KENEALY.

BELINDA'S BEAUX,

And other Stories. By ARABELLA KENEALY, Author of 'Dr. Janet of Harley Street. Large crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s. [Now ready.

FREDERIC CARREL.

THE ADVENTURES OF JOHN JOHNS.

A Novel by FREDERIC CARREL, Author of 'The City.' Large crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s. [Now ready.

STANDARD NOVELS.

A MAN OF MOODS. 6s.
By H. D. LOWRY.

A TALE OF THE THAMES. 6s.
By J. ASHBY STERRY.

OZMAR THE MYSTIC. 6s.
By EMERIC HULME BEAMAN.

BOG MYRTLE and PEAT. 6s.
By S. R. CROCKETT.

ROBERT URQUHART. 6s.
By GABRIEL SETOUN.

NEW WORK BY THE REV. H. R. HAWEIS, M.A.

THE DEAD PULPIT.

By Rev. H. R. HAWEIS, M.A.

7s. 6d.

A Volume of Sermons containing an estimate of the New Archbishop of Canterbury (Dr. Temple) and the New Bishop of London (Dr. Creighton).

With Personal Notices of A. P. Stanley (Dean of Westminster), F. D. Maurice, F. W. Robertson, and the Doctrine of Restatement.

Large crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Uniform with the Falstaff Shakespeare.

THE LIFE OF SAMUEL JOHNSON, LL.D.

And a Journal of a Tour to the Hebrides.

By JAMES BOSWELL, Esq.

Edited, with Notes, and a Biographical Dictionary of the Persons named in the Work,

By PERCY FITZGERALD, M.A. F.S.A.,

Author of 'The Life of James Boswell,' 'Boswell and Croker's Boswell,' &c.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

PORTRAIT of SAMUEL JOHNSON (Photogravure).
PORTRAIT of JAMES BOSWELL.
"The ROUND ROBIN."
FACSIMILES of JOHNSON'S WRITING.
BOSWELL'S MAP of the TOUR.

In one large, handsome, and well-designed Volume.

SIZE: Large super-royal 8vo. 10¼ by 7¼ inches, uniform with 'Shakespeare.'
TYPE: Reset from NEW BOURGEOIS TYPE, and printed with Large Margins.
PAPER: Choice antique laid.
BOUND in dark green cloth of the best quality, with label in green and old gold.

Price 3s. 6d. Offering absolutely unique value.

CHEAPEST BOOKS IN THE WORLD SERIES.

2s. per vol. NEW VOLUMES. 2s. per vol.

The HISTORY of TOM JONES: a Foundling. By HENRY FIELDING. A Verbatim and Unbowdlerized Reprint of the First Edition (1749), 512 pages, with Frontispiece of the Author, uniform with 'Robinson Crusoe.'

The ROMANCE of WAR. By James Grant. With Frontispiece Portrait of the Author. 480 pages, uniform with 'Robinson Crusoe.'

 The above Works are all reset from New Type, with Title-Pages in Red and Black, and are printed on choice antique laid paper.

PREVIOUS VOLUMES.

The ARABIAN NIGHTS.	BURNS'S POETICAL WORKS.
ROBINSON CRUSOE.	SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON.
UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.	The COUNT of MONTE CRISTO.

THE APOLLO POETS.

A SERIES OF ÉDITIONS DE LUXE OF THE CLASSIC POETS.

THE TEXTS HAVE ALL BEEN COLLATED WITH THE UTMOST CARE.

The Following is a list of the Five Volumes which will be published this Spring:—

The POETICAL WORKS of ROBERT BURNS. [Now ready.

The POETICAL WORKS of HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW. [Next week.

The POETICAL WORKS of JOHN MILTON.

The POETICAL WORKS of LORD BYRON.

The POETICAL WORKS of WILLIAM WORDSWORTH.

SUMPTUOUSLY PRODUCED IN EVERY PARTICULAR.

Each Volume contains a Frontispiece Photogravure Portrait.

Each work is reset from New Type. Title-Pages and other Ornaments in Red and Black, designed by M. H. Robinson.

SIZE: Extra large demy 8vo. 6¾ by 9 inches.
PAPER: White high-class antique laid.
BINDING: Solidly bound, with heavy bevelled boards, in red buckram specially manufactured for the purpose, with inlaid panel on the front, and richly decorated with gold on front and back, and gilt top.

Price 3s. 6d. per Volume.

London: BLISS, SANDS & CO. 12, Burleigh-street, Strand, W.C.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

FOURTH THOUSAND NOW READY.

MISS KINGSLEY'S TRAVELS IN WEST AFRICA.

By Miss MARY H. KINGSLEY.

With 16 Full-Page and numerous Text Illustrations.

Demy 8vo. 21*s.* net.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

THE QUEEN OF THE MOOR.

A Tale of Dartmoor in the Days of Waterloo.

By FREDERIC ADYE.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

MANCHESTER EXAMINER.—"Reminds us very forcibly of some of the most characteristic romances of Charles Kingsley and Mr. Blackmore. The 'Queen of the Moor' is, like 'Westward Ho!' and 'Lorna Doone,' full of nature and of human nature."

BY FRANCIS T. PALGRAVE.

Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

LANDSCAPE in POETRY, from HOMER to TENNYSON. With numerous representative Quotations. By FRANCIS T. PALGRAVE, late Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford.

TIMES.—"They are the work of a critic whose knowledge of the poetical literature of many countries is both wide and minute."

FIFTH EDITION, now ready, 8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.*

INTRODUCTION to the STUDY of the LAW of the CONSTITUTION. By A. V. DICEY, Q.C. B.C.L., of the Inner Temple, &c.

FOREIGN STATESMEN.—New Volumes.

Edited by Prof. J. B. BURY.

Crown 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.* each.

MARIA THERESA. By Rev. J. FRANCK BRIGHT, D.D., Master of University College, Oxford.

JOSEPH II. By Rev. J. Franck BRIGHT, D.D.

 These two volumes supplement one another as a History of the Period.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"A very lucid and comprehensive survey of the history of Austria during a critical period."

EVERSLEY SERIES.—New Volumes.

Globe 8vo. 5*s.* each.

Now ready, in Two Volumes.

PROSE WORKS of WILLIAM WORDSWORTH. Edited by Prof. KNIGHT. With Portraits and Vignettes etched by H. MANESSE.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"Promises to be a final edition of one of the greatest and certainly of one of the most voluminous of modern poets."

ESSAYS CLASSICAL. By F. W. H. MYERS.

THE MODERN READER'S BIBLE.

New Volume. Pott 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

ISAIAH. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by RICHARD G. MOULTON, M.A. (Camb.). The Text is that of the Revised Version. It is used by special permission of the University Presses of Oxford and Cambridge.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' NEW PUBLICATIONS.

PERIODS OF EUROPEAN LITERATURE.

Edited by Professor SAINTSBURY.

This day is published.

The FLOURISHING OF ROMANCE AND THE RISE OF ALLEGORY.

(Twelfth and Thirteenth Centuries.)

By GEORGE SAINTSBURY, M.A., Professor of Rhetoric and English Literature in Edinburgh University.

Crown 8vo. 5*s.* net.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

LIFE OF VICE-ADMIRAL

SIR GEORGE TRYON, K.C.B. By Rear-Admiral C. C. PENROSE FITZGERALD. With 2 Portraits and numerous Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 21*s.*

"He has drawn the portrait of a remarkable seaman with a seaman's frankness and directness of delineation."—Times.

EIGHTH EDITION NOW READY.

BEATRICE HARRADEN'S

HILDA STRAFFORD AND THE REMITTANCE MAN.

Two Californian Stories.

Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

"Strong and sad stories, throbbing with human warmth, alive with intense sympathy."

Daily Mail.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

IN VARYING MOODS. Twelfth Edition. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

This day is published.

MAN'S PLACE in the COSMOS, and other Essays. By ANDREW SETH, LL.D., Professor of Logic and Metaphysics in Edinburgh University, Author of 'Scottish Philosophy,' 'Hegelianism and Personality.' Post 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

DOROTHEA GERARD'S NEW NOVEL.

At all Libraries.

A SPOTLESS REPUTATION. By DOROTHEA GERARD (Madame Longard de Longgarde), Author of 'Lady Baby,' 'The Wrong Man,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

PROFESSOR STORY'S NEW WORK.

The APOSTOLIC MINISTRY in the SCOTTISH CHURCH. The Baird Lecture for 1897. By ROBERT HERBERT STORY, D.D. (Edin.), F.S.A.Scot., Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the University of Glasgow, Principal Clerk of the General Assembly, and Chaplain to the Queen. Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

"Dr. Story has admirably succeeded.....He can speak with the authority which abundant and competent knowledge imparts."—Scotsman.

CHEAP REISSUE IN SHILLING VOLUMES.

Bound in limp cloth.

ANCIENT CLASSICS for ENGLISH READERS. Edited by Rev. W. LUCAS COLLINS.

HOMER.—ILIAD. By the Editor. [Ready.
HOMER.—ODYSSEY. By the Editor. [Ready.
HERODOTUS. By G. C. SWAYNE. [Next week.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S LIST.

NEW VOLUME OF 'THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.'

On MARCH 26, 15*s.* net, in cloth; or in half-morocco, marbled edges, 20*s.* net.

Volume L. (RUSSEN—SCOBELL) of the DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.

Edited by SIDNEY LEE.

Volume I. was published on January 1, 1885, and a further Volume will be issued Quarterly until the completion of the Work.

THROUGH LONDON SPECTACLES.

By CONSTANCE MILMAN. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

"A bright, stimulating, leisurely written collection of nondescript papers."—Manchester Guardian.

"Pleasantly written essays on literary topics and arcadian scenes."—Pall Mall Gazette.

On MARCH 26, with a Portrait, large crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

The AGE of the DESPOTS. By the late JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS.

 This is Volume I. of a NEW and CHEAPER EDITION of "The RENAISSANCE in ITALY," in 7 vols. large crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* each. The remaining volumes will be published at intervals.

On MARCH 26, crown 8vo. 6*s.*

FROM GRAVE to GAY: being Essays and Studies concerned with certain subjects of serious interest, with the Puritans, with literature, and with the humours of life, now for the first time collected and arranged. By J. ST. LOE STRACHEY.

SECOND AND COMPLETING VOLUME OF THE 'HISTORY OF THE HEBREW PEOPLE.'

On MARCH 26, with Maps and Chart, crown 8vo. 6*s.*

A HISTORY of the HEBREW PEOPLE, from the Division of the Kingdom to the Fall of Jerusalem in 586 B.C. By CHARLES FOSTER KENT, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Biblical Literature and History, Brown University.

SIX NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

CAPTAIN CASTLE: a Tale of the China Seas. By CARLTON DAWE, Author of 'Yellow and White,' 'Mount Desolation,' 'Kakemenos,' &c. With a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo. 6*s.* [On March 26.

The YOUNG CLANROY: a Romance of the '45. By the Rev. COSMO GORDON LANG. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"Told with a breezy and healthy vigour, as well as with simplicity."—Observer.

OUT of the DARKNESS. By Percy FENDALL and FOX RUSSELL. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

GILBERT MURRAY. By A. E. HOUGHTON. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"It is a welcome relief when the flood of fiction brings to the reviewer's door such a story as 'Gilbert Murray.'"

Speaker.

UNDER the CIRCUMSTANCES. By ARCHIE ARMSTRONG. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"A capital romance, exciting, lively, and sensational to exactly the right degree."—Black and White.

The BORDERER. By Adam Lilburn. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"A powerful novel."—British Weekly.
"A clever story."—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE

For APRIL. Price ONE SHILLING.

Contents.

The ENGLISHMAN'S CALENDAR (April).
A DAY of CELEBRATION: an Anniversary Appeal. By Walter Besant.
The STORY of SCOTT'S RUIN. By Leslie Stephen.
DUELS of ALL NATIONS: German Duels and their Punishments. By James Pemberton-Grund.
The COST of COUNTRY HOUSES. By C. J. Cornish.
MORRANT'S HALF-SOVEREIGN. By Eden Phillpotts.
An OLD GREEK ROMANCE. By Charles Elton, Q.C.
The PATRIOT'S PROGRESS. By Stephen Gwynn.
The MOON'S MIRACLE. By Walter Ramal.
RECOLLECTIONS of FREDERICK DENISON MAURICE. By Sir Edward Strachey, Bart.
PAGES FROM a PRIVATE DIARY.
IN KEDAR'S TENTS. Chapters 10-12. By Henry Seton Merriman, Author of 'The Sowers,' &c.

READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' NEXT FRIDAY.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & CO.'S
NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.
WITH SOME EXCEPTIONALLY FAVOURABLE REVIEWS.

BY FRANKFORT MOORE.

The JESSAMY BRIDE. With Illustrations by A. Forestier.

 The large First Edition has been much oversubscribed and this will delay the publication until early next week.

A NEW HISTORICAL ROMANCE.

The FALL of CONSTANTINOPLE. By A. Wall. [Immediately.

BY A NEW NOVELIST.

"We linger over it as we do over very few of the books that pass before us."—Bookman.

TATTERLEY. By Tom Gallon.

"A touching and charming story."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"An idyll such as Dickens himself might not have been ashamed to conceive. Once taken up, there is little likelihood that it will be laid down until the last page has been turned."—St. James's Gazette.

"Mr. Gallon has accomplished a work which many experienced writers would be only too glad to acknowledge."—New Saturday.

"We believe in 'Tatterley' through thick and thin; we could not recommend a better story."—Academy.

"A book which is conceived in a powerful and touching way, not with life's little ironies, but its great. It is a beautiful book, and the man who wrote it is capable of making us all his debtors yet to a much greater extent." Leeds Mercury.

"The story is strong in human nature and sentiment, and the author should have no reason to complain of the reception that will be accorded to 'Tatterley.'"—Manchester Courier.

"'Tatterley' is a novel of great power. In striking originality of plot and power of sketching character the novel is unique among modern productions." Liverpool Post.

 A Second Edition in the press.

BY ELLA MACMAHON.

The TOUCHSTONE of LIFE. By the Author of 'A New Note.'

"Mr. Rhodes in 'The Touchstone of Life' appears as the great pioneer of new countries, the creator of novel empires, the man on whose nod depends the fate of territory three or four times the size of France. The story is vigorous and well told; the incidents are exciting in themselves and prophetic of the issue. 'The Touchstone of Life' is an eminently readable story; the final dénoûment is characteristically clever and true."—Daily Telegraph.

"The story is worthy of the strongest recommendation."—Scotsman.

"Miss MacMahon's new novel more than fulfils the promise shown in 'A New Note' and 'A Pitiful Passion'; and to say this is to say a good deal, for both those works displayed a remarkable amount of incipient ability. In the present story the characterization is as keen as before, but it reaches a deeper depth of analysis, and the brilliance of the dialogue is enhanced by a new smoothness and ease of style. Perhaps the most delightful personality in the whole book is the character of Lady Honoria Mildmay, a charming study. Miss MacMahon has shown that she possesses a fine power for dramatic effect. Altogether the novel is a powerful one, the plot is adequate, the interest is well sustained throughout, and the style is effective."—New Saturday.

BY S. R. KEIGHTLEY.

The LAST RECRUIT of CLARE'S. With Illus-trations by Paul Dare. By the Author of 'The Cavaliers,' 'The Crimson Sign,' &c. [Second Edition.

"It was prophesied in these columns that the author of 'The Cavaliers' would take first rank among our historical novelists, and he is proving the truth of the prediction. Every page of the book is full of fire and spirit." Pall Mall Gazette.

"It is, indeed, a tale of extraordinary power, full of subtle characterization and strong situations, and distinguished by a finish of style and reserve of force."—Manchester Guardian.

BY FLORENCE MARRYAT.

A PASSING MADNESS. [This day.

BY RICHARD PRYCE.

ELEMENTARY JANE. By the Author of 'Miss Maxwell's Affections,' &c. [Immediately.

BY MORLEY ROBERTS.

MAURICE QUAIN. [Immediately.

BY MRS. ORPEN.

PERFECTION CITY.

"'Perfection City' is an extremely well-written and interesting story, and we should have been sorry to have missed reading it."—Daily Chroniele.

"In Olive Weston Mrs. Orpen has realized a personality which is fresh and charming, and the manner in which she has made this girl instrumental in the downfall of the Utopian dream is original and convincing. The young husband is also cleverly conceived, and Uncle David, the simple old American who believes in everybody and everything until the last moment, is a delightful character. The story is, moreover, full of incident, which is graphically described, the accounts of the prairie fire and the trial by jury in the little backwoods town being especially good. Altogether 'Perfection City' is a novel to be read."—New Saturday.

"The story is instructive, entertaining, and admirably related."—Scotsman.

A NEW AUSTRALIAN ROMANCE.

THEY THAT SIT in DARKNESS. A Story of "the Never Never Land." [This day.

A NEW HISTORICAL ROMANCE.

A PEARL of the REALM. By A. C. Glyn.

"A clever and original book. The story is remarkably interesting from start to finish. Marjorie is a very pearl of womanhood in her sweetness, courage, and loyalty, and her hairbreadth escapes from her brutal guardian are really thrilling.....The style is at once bright and controlled, and the characters are subordinated to the events. A fresh and delightful novel." Pall Mall Gazette.

"The novel in all respects, in the cleverly constructed dialogue, in expressions peculiar to the age, in the bright descriptive scenes, and in the ingeniously devised situations, is one of conspicuous merit."—Scotsman.

"Among the season's literature 'A Pearl of the Realm' should take high rank."—Manchester Courier.

A SECOND LARGE EDITION OF ADELINE SERGEANT'S NOVEL.

The IDOL MAKER.

"'The Idol Maker' is entitled to rank among the best fiction of the Victorian age. In conception and execution alike this story displays the wholesome qualities which, at different times, conferred world-wide and lasting popularity upon 'The Mill on the Floss' and 'Diana Tempest.' Miss Sergeant's literary masterpiece."—Daily Telegraph.

"The story is interesting from first to last."—Daily News.

"The novel will rank among the author's best, which is saying a great deal."—Liverpool Post.

"Miss Sergeant has done nothing that will be read with greater interest or with greater satisfaction."—Academy.

BY VICTOR CHERBULIEZ.

WITH FORTUNE MADE. Translated by M. E. SIMKINS. In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s.

"It would be well for English readers of French fiction if the novels of Victor Cherbuliez were as well known in England as are those of M. Zola." Daily Mail.

"One of the most delightful of the tales of Victor Cherbuliez. The reader will find humour and human nature, a great deal of the comedy of life, and something of its tragedy, in this delightful and most amusing story." Speaker.

London: HUTCHINSON & CO. Paternoster-row.

MR. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

THE OUTGOING TURK.

Impressions of a Journey through the Western Balkans.

By H. C. THOMSON,
Author of 'The Chitral Campaign.'

In 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Illustrations from Original Photographs, 14s. net. [Tuesday.

This book is the record of a journey through the outlying districts of Bosnia and the Herzegovina, and a comparison of their present condition with the condition they were in before the Austrian occupation. The author has added a brief summary of the causes that have led to the present situation in Turkey, and a consideration of the effect likely to be produced upon it by the impending insurrection in Macedonia.

LITERATURES OF THE WORLD.

Edited by EDMUND GOSSE. Vol. I.

A HISTORY OF ANCIENT GREEK LITERATURE.

By GILBERT MURRAY, M.A., Professor of Greek in the University of Glasgow. Large crown 8vo. 6s.

SEVENTEENTH CENTURY STUDIES.

By EDMUND GOSSE. A New Edition, uniform with 'Critical Kit-Kats,' &c. 1 vol. buckram, 7s. 6d.

Times.—"Equipped with full knowledge, sound critical instinct, and an interesting, easy style, Mr. Gosse appeals to the student and to the general reader alike."

BEAUTY AND ART. By Aldam HEATON. 1 vol. 6s.

British Architect.—"Mr. Heaton is an artist and a craftsman who has done much good work, and his book is a refreshing exposition of the practical application of sound principles.'

ROMANTIC INDIA. By André CHEVRILLON. 1 vol. 7s. 6d. net.

Times.—"We are made to see the scenery and incidents of a winter trip to India in a new light—the light in which they present themselves to an amiable and spiritual Frenchman."

NOVELS.

THE OUTSPAN: Tales of South Africa. By J. PERCY FITZPATRICK. 1 vol. 3s. 6d. [Tuesday.

FLAMES: a London Phantasy. By ROBERT HICHENS, Author of 'The Green Carnation.' 1 vol. 6s.

Daily Telegraph.—"It carries on the attention of the reader from the first chapter to the last. Full of exciting incidents, very modern, excessively up to date."

THE SPOILS OF POYNTON. By HENRY JAMES, Author of 'The Other House.' 1 vol. 6s.

National Observer.—"One of the finest works of the imagination, if not actually the finest, that has come from the press for several years."

THE MAN OF STRAW. By Edwin PUGH, Author of 'A Street in Suburbia.' 1 vol. 6s.

Daily Telegraph.—"Every stroke of his pen brings conviction with it. He writes with the instinct of an artist: he selects his incidents with marvellous skill."

THE LITTLE REGIMENT. By STEPHEN CRANE, Author of 'The Red Badge of Courage.' Pioneer Series. Cloth, 3s. net; paper, 2s. 6d. net.

Times.—"Graphic descriptions, pathetic pictures, exciting situations."

A PINCHBECK GODDESS. By Mrs. J. M. FLEMING (Alice M. Kipling). 1 vol. 3s. 6d.

Daily Chronicle.—"Very bright, witty, and amusing. A clever and entertaining story."

ON THE FACE OF THE WATERS.

By FLORA ANNIE STEEL, Author of 'The Potter's Thumb,' &c. 1 vol. 6s. Twentieth Thousand.

Pall Mall Gazette.—"Mrs. Steel has managed to set the Mutiny before us till it is more like a personal recollection of our own than a tale told to us."

LOVE FOR A KEY. By G. Colmore,

Author of 'A Daughter of Music.' Pioneer Series. Cloth, 3s. net; paper, 2s. 6d. net. [Wednesday.

London:
WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

NEW STORY BY THE AUTHOR OF 'DIANA TEMPEST.'

A DEVOTEE.

By MARY CHOLMONDELEY,
Author of
'Diana Tempest,' 'The Danvers Jewels,' &c.

Cloth, 3s. 6d.

A DEVOTEE.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'DIANA TEMPEST.'

DR. DONALDSON SMITH'S IMPORTANT NEW WORK.

THROUGH UNKNOWN AFRICAN COUNTRIES.

The First Expedition from Somaliland to Lake Rudolf and Lamu.

A Narrative of Scientific Exploration and Sporting Adventures.

By A. DONALDSON SMITH, .D. F.R.G.S.

With nearly 30 Full-Page Plates and numerous Smaller Illustrations by A. D. McCormick, Charles Whymper, &c., and detailed Maps of the Countries Traversed.

Super-royal 8vo. One Guinea net.

Pall Mall Gazette.—"Will be of the greatest interest to sportsman, traveller, and man of science."

Standard.—"Tells in clear, succinct, and well-chosen language the tale of a very adventurous journey."

Daily News.—"A most important as well as original contribution to the literature of African discovery and the natural history, ethnology, and international problems of the Black Continent. Lovers of sport will find in it much to captivate them. Perhaps the majority of readers will care most for the information he gives them on the native tribes and their characteristics, and the relations between Abyssinia and the countries on her borders."

Globe.—"A book which really has a reason for existence. A solid and permanent contribution to the literature of African exploration."

Manchester Guardian.—"An excellent and extremely readable and vivacious contribution to the geography of the almost unknown northern districts of British East Africa."

SOLDIERING AND SURVEYING IN BRITISH EAST AFRICA, 1891-1894.

An Account of the Survey for the Uganda Railway, and the various Campaigns in the British Protectorate during the last few years. By Major J. R. MACDONALD, R.E. Illustrated from Sketches and Photographs by the Author and numerous Plans and a Map. Demy 8vo. 16s.

Pall Mall Gazette.—"No country in the world has had greater need of an impartial historian than Uganda, and, strange to say, though the bitter feelings engendered by the struggles of the past ten years have not had time to cool, one has been found among the actors in these stormy scenes, Major Macdonald.....No one who reads this exciting book of adventure can regret that we are spending 3,000,000*l.* on the railway. Major Macdonald writes with considerable literary and historical skill, and his sketches and maps are excellent."

ON VELDT and FARM: in Cape Colony, Bechuanaland, Natal, and the Transvaal. By FRANCES McNAB. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Saturday Review.—"Well worth the study of those interested in the agricultural and general development of South Africa."

Globe.—"A delightful book, and we can confidently recommend it as far more worth a reading than many a work of infinitely greater pretensions."

FISH TAILS—and SOME TRUE ONES.

By BRADNOCK HALL. With Etched Frontispiece by the Author, and 12 Full-Page Illustrations by T. Hope McLachlan. Crown 8vo. 6s.

SIR ALFRED MILNER'S STANDARD WORK.

ENGLAND in EGYPT. By Sir ALFRED MILNER, K.C.B., Governor of Cape Colony, and High Commissioner to South Africa. Popular Edition. Large crown 8vo. with Map, cloth, 7s. 6d.

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street.
New York: 70, Fifth Avenue.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON'S LIST.

POPULAR ASTRONOMICAL PUBLICATIONS.

1. An ATLAS of ASTRONOMY. A Series of 72 Plates. With Introduction and Index by Sir ROBERT S. BALL, LL.D. F.R.S. Small 4to cloth, gilt edges, 15s.

"Sir Robert Ball has always found time to do very much for the amateur astronomer besides his more serious work, but it is doubtful whether any of the very many books which bear his name will excel in popularity and utility the latest. Small in size it is yet admirable in detail and so clear, well arranged and comprehensive that not only the beginner, but the far more advanced student, will find it of extreme value."—Daily Graphic.

2. The MOON. A Full Description and Map of its principal Physical Features. By THOMAS GWYN ELGER, F.R.A.S. Royal 8vo. 5s. net. The Map may be obtained separately, in sheet, 2s. 6d. net; mounted on millboard and varnished, 4s. net.

"The world will be doing itself an injustice if the book does not become popular."—Daily Chronicle.

3. POPULAR TELESCOPIC ASTRONOMY. How to Make a 2-inch Telescope and what to See with it. By A. FOWLER, A.R.C.S. F.R.A.S. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. Second Edition, cloth, 2s.

"The book is practicable as well as practical, every instruction in it can be carried out, every observation described bears the impress of experience. Astronomy will gain more by the publication of this little volume than by the issue of a score of works of a descriptive character."—Nature.

4. ASTRONOMY for EVERYDAY READERS. By B. J. HOPKINS, F.R.A.S. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. Second Edition, boards, 1s.; cloth gilt, 1s. 6d.

"This book contains accurate and interesting accounts of the phenomena of the heavens, and will especially commend itself to those who regard the ordinary science text-book as dry reading."—Journal of Education.

5. PHILIPS' REVOLVING PLANI-SPHERES. Showing the Principal Stars visible for every hour in the year. Printed in colours. Edition for Northern Hemisphere, 2s. net; ditto, Transparent, 2s. 6d. net. Edition for Southern Hemisphere, 2s. 6d. net.

This novel Planisphere consists of a circular disc on which the principal Stars visible from our latitude are clearly indicated. By means of an exceedingly simple arrangement the disc may be made to revolve in such a way as to show only those stars visible at any given time. In addition to this the varying time of sunrise and sunset during the whole year may be shown.

"Useful for those who desire to learn the principal stars and constellations, and handy also for amateur astronomers, who may often wish to ascertain at a glance what part of the stellar sky is visible at an hour when they purpose to look for some special celestial object."—Athenæum.

6. PHILIPS' REVOLVING ORRERY. Invented and patented by J. G. PARVIN. 4s. 6d. net.

For indicating the position of a Planet, the Moon, or a Fixed Star, and for telling at what hour they will rise, south, and set; it will indicate also the Phases of the Moon and when Eclipses will take place. This simple invention, in principle is exactly the same as Philips' "Revolving Planisphere," but only the stars forming the Zodiacal Belt are indicated on the circular disc, within which the motions of all the planets are performed; above this are mounted two brass fingers, divided into degrees, and carrying pointers running in a slot, both fingers and pointers can be set to any desired position and made to revolve across the Horizon with the card.

Illustrated Catalogue of Astronomical and Geographical Apparatus post free on application.

PHILIPS' POPULAR ANATOMICAL MODELS.

The Models consist of Coloured Charts bound up with Explanatory Letterpress, in strong cardboard binding, the whole measuring 7½ by 12½ inches.

1. The HUMAN BODY. Edited by W. S. FURNEAUX. 2s. net.
2. The HEAD and NECK. Edited by W. S. FURNEAUX. 2s. 6d. net.
3. The EYE and its AUXILIARY ORGANS. Edited, with an Introduction on Eyesight, by JOHN BROWNING, F.R.A.S. F.R.M.S. 2s. 6d. net.
4. The HORSE. Edited by George FLEMING, C.B. LL.D. 3s. 6d. net.
5. The OX. Edited by Prof. G. T. BROWN, C.B. 3s. 6d. net.
6. The SHEEP. Edited by Prof. G. T. BROWN, C.B. 2s. 6d. net.

"These models, which are not so well known as they deserve to be, consist of a series of cardboard sections carefully drawn and coloured and carefully explained....Together with each chart are exhaustive and lucid explanations."—Daily Graphic.

PHILIPS' POPULAR TECHNICAL MODELS.

1. MODEL of a HORIZONTAL STEAM ENGINE, furnished with Meyer's Variable Expansion Gear. With a brief Description of the Parts and the Method of Working, and a Discussion and Explanation of Zeuner's Valve Diagrams. For the Use of General Readers and Elementary Engineering Students. Edited by ARNOLD PHILIP, B.Sc. 2s. 6d. net.

"The ingenious method of representation is likely to prove as valuable in illustrating the structure of machines as it has proved in the case of anatomy."—Scotsman.

Detailed Illustrated Prospectus gratis on application.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON, 32, Fleet-street, London.
Liverpool:
PHILIP, SON & NEPHEW, 45-51, South Castle-street.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO., LIMITED.

SELECTIONS FROM THE WORKS OF SIR LEWIS MORRIS.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth, plain, 4*s.* 6*d.*; watered silk, gilt edges, 5*s.*

NEW FICTION.

THE WAY OF THE WIND.

By CHARLES KENNET BURROW.

Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

"Infinitely pathetic.....The finale is distinctly original and unexpected."
Pall Mall Gazette.

THE FAULT OF ONE.

By EFFIE ADELAIDE ROWLANDS.

Crown 8vo. [Immediately.

THE GARDEN OF ROMANCE.

Edited by ERNEST RHYS.

With a Cover Design by LAURENCE HOUSMAN.

Fcap. 4to. cloth gilt, 6*s.*

"A successful book of romantic tales which everybody who wishes to know the best ought to know.....There is not one of these pieces of imagination that is not, in its way, a masterpiece."—Scotsman.

HEROD THE GREAT: an Historic Drama.

By the Rev. H. SOLLY. 8vo. 6*s.*

"It presents clearly and vividly the conception of a strong nature endowed with many noble qualities."—Manchester Guardian.

"It is full of vivid and picturesque writing."—Liberal Budget.

COMMENTARY ON THE EPISTLES TO THE SEVEN CHURCHES IN ASIA.

Sixth Edition, Revised and Improved. Demy 8vo. 5*s.*

INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

WHAT IS ELECTRICITY?

By JOHN TROWBRIDGE.

With many Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 5*s.*

THE ART OF MUSIC.

By C. HUBERT H. PARRY.

Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 5*s.* Also cloth, gilt top, crown 8vo. 6*s.*

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE PRIG,' 'THE LIFE OF SIR KENELM DIGBY,' &c.

THE PLATITUDES OF A PESSIMIST.

A collection of light and witty essays upon literary, social, and general topics, some of which appeared originally in the Saturday Review.

Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.* [Shortly.

THE LETTERS OF DE BROSSES.

Translated by Lord RONALD GOWER.

Fcap. 4to. 10*s.* 6*d.*

"The humanity of the first President of the Burgundian Parliament imparts a flavour to his letters that time cannot remove."—Black and White.

THE HISTORY OF THE POPES.

By Dr. LUDWIG PASTOR.

Translated from the German by FREDERICK J. ANTROBUS.

Volumes I. to IV. 8vo. 48*s.* net.

PLEA FOR A SIMPLER FAITH.

By GEORGE S. KEITH, Author of 'Plea for a Simpler Life.'

Crown 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

THE FLORENTINE ILLUSTRATED BOOKS OF THE XVth AND XVIth CENTURIES AND THEIR WOODCUTS.

By Dr. PAUL KRISTELLER, of Berlin,

Whose services the Italian Government has now secured for the Galleria Nazionale at Rome.

Printed at the Chiswick Press.

The Edition limited to not more than 350 copies. [Shortly.

A NEW EDITION.

BOOK PLATES.

By W. J. HARDY.

New and Revised Edition. With many Illustrations, post 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

Mr. Hardy has added new material, and made certain emendations in this new cheaper edition of one of the most successful of 'Books about Books.'
[Immediately.

THE HISTORY OF THE LAST QUARTER-CENTURY IN THE UNITED STATES, 1870–1895.

By E. BENJAMIN ANDREWS

With more than 350 Illustrations. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 30*s.*

"They will often be consulted with advantage by English readers who desire for any purpose to recall details soon forgotten and often very imperfectly apprehended at the time."—Times.

THE PAMPHLET LIBRARY.

Edited by ARTHUR WAUGH.

With a Cover Design by Laurence Housman. Crown 8vo.

This Library is an attempt to collect, in handy and well-looking volumes, and to illustrate by introduction and annotation, all those pamphlets which have, apart from their possessing the saving grace of literary distinction, exercised an important influence upon the current of events. The volumes, it is conceived, should be of use as text-books for examination, no less than as a treasure-house of vigorous and effectual literature.

POLITICAL PAMPHLETS. Selected and Arranged, with an Introduction and Notes, by A. F. POLLARD, late of Jesus College, Oxford. [Ready end of March.

RELIGIOUS PAMPHLETS. Selected and Arranged, with an Introduction and Notes, by the Rev. PERCY DEARMER, late of Christ Church, Oxford. [Ready May.

LITERARY PAMPHLETS. Selected and Arranged, with an Introduction and Notes, by ERNEST RHYS, Editor of 'The Camelot Classics,' 'Lyric Poets,' &c. [Ready April.

DRAMATIC PAMPHLETS. Selected and Arranged, with an Introduction and Notes, by THOMAS SECCOMBE, late Scholar of Balliol College, Oxford. [Ready June.

PATERNOSTER HOUSE, CHARING CROSS-ROAD, LONDON.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

SIXTEENTH EDITION READY THIS DAY.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 36s.

FORTY-ONE YEARS IN INDIA.

From Subaltern to Commander-in-Chief.

By FIELD-MARSHAL

LORD ROBERTS of KANDAHAR, V.C.

Besides Maps and Plans, the Volumes contain Portraits on Steel and Copper.

"To those who love records of daring and adventure, or who have not yet learned or tired of learning anew what the British soldier is, this thrilling story may be commended as second to none."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"It is not every one who can be trusted to write his own life; but some great men have successfully accomplished the feat, and to their number must be added Lord Roberts. Nothing could well improve upon these volumes. The story is told with the modesty which is a part of the author's nature; it is of the highest interest from the first page to the last, and the style is admirably clear."—Guardian.

A NEW NOVEL

AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

THE CAREER OF CLAUDIA.

By F. M. PEARD,

Author of 'The Rose Garden,' &c.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

FLORENCE MONTGOMERY'S STORIES.

I.

MISUNDERSTOOD. Twenty-fifth Edition. With 6 Illustrations by Du Maurier. Crown 8vo. 6s.

II.

THROWN TOGETHER. Twentieth Thousand. Crown 8vo. 6s.

III.

SEAFORTH. Ninth Thousand. With Frontispiece. Crown 8vo. 6s.

IV.

The BLUE VEIL, and other Stories. Small crown 8vo. 3s.

The HEAVENS. An Illustrated Handbook of Popular Astronomy. By AMÉDÉE GUILLEMIN. Edited by J. NORMAN LOCKYER, F.R.S., and RICHARD PROCTOR, F.R.A.S. Demy 8vo. with over 200 Illustrations, 12s.

CURIOSITIES of NATURAL HISTORY. By FRANCIS TREVELYAN BUCKLAND, late Her Majesty's Inspector of Fisheries. Popular Edition. With a few Illustrations. Each Series separately, in small 8vo. 2s. 6d.

The MODERN COOK. By Charles ELMÉ FRANCATELLI, late Maitre d'Hôtel to Her Majesty. Demy 8vo. Thirtieth Edition. Containing 1,500 Recipes and 60 Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

The COOK'S GUIDE. By the Author of 'The Modern Cook.' Sixty-fourth Thousand. Small 8vo. containing 1,000 Recipes. With Illustrations, 5s.

"An admirable manual for every household."—Times.

A YOUNGER SONS' COOKERY BOOK. By a YOUNGER SON'S DAUGHTER. Crown 8vo. 6s.

THE NEW ISSUE OF THE NOVELS OF MRS. HENRY WOOD.

THE STORY OF CHARLES STRANGE

(Fifteenth Thousand)

IS NOW READY.

In red cloth, gold lettered on side, similar to the 3s. 6d. Edition, 2s. 6d.

In green cloth, gold lettered on back, but with a plainer binding, 2s.

To be followed at regular intervals by the other Stories in the Series.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,

New Burlington-street,

Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

THE PEOPLE'S EDITION.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

The First Printing of 50,000 copies is now exhausted. A SECOND PRINTING of 50,000 copies is now ready at all Booksellers'.

In medium 8vo. paper cover.

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN.

By Mrs. CRAIK.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6s.

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR SHIPS and their COMMANDERS. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"Pleasantly written and readable as it is, it cannot but prove welcome to a large number of readers who have no access to the heavier naval literature from which it is drawn."—Scotsman.

UNDER THE ESPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY.

NOW READY, SIXTY-SIXTH EDITION.

1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved, 31s. 6d. bound, gilt edges.

LODGE'S PEERAGE AND BARONETAGE FOR 1897.

CORRECTED BY THE NOBILITY.

"That compendious and admirably printed guide to the peerage and baronetage of the British Empire has reached its sixty-sixth edition with the volume for 1897. The usefulness of this concise and carefully-edited book is enhanced by the excellent and stout paper on which it is printed."

Pall Mall Gazette, December 29, 1896.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MISTRESS BEATRICE COPE.'

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

SWORN ALLIES. By M. E. Le CLERC, Author of 'A Rainbow at Night,' &c.

LOVE AGAIN LIFE AGAIN. By V. MUNRO FERGUSON, Author of 'Betsy,' 'Music hath Charms,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

ALL IN ALL. By Corinna A. Bruce. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

The SOUND of a VOICE. By Linda GARDINER, Author of 'His Heritage,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, 6s.

"An exceedingly able story."—Scotsman.

"The plot of Miss Gardiner's novel is stirring and sensational enough. But it is well worked out, and the interest which it arouses at the very outset is cleverly maintained to the end."—Glasgow Herald.

The WOOING of a FAIRY. By GERTRUDE WARDEN, Author of 'The Sentimental Sex,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"A clever, well-written story, which has this merit, that the key of the well-constructed plot is hidden until the last chapter."—Pall Mall Gazette.

An AUSTRALIAN DUCHESS. By AMYOT SAGON, Author of 'A Fair Palmist,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"A pleasant book about pleasant people who fully deserve the pleasant places in which their lots fall."—Guardian.

"Mr. Sagon's brightly written romance."—Daily Telegraph.

GENTLEMAN GEORGE: a Story without a Heroine. By Mrs. HERBERT MARTIN, Author of 'Britomart,' 'Her Début,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"Mrs. Herbert Martin has produced an excellent story of country life which loses nothing in interest from the fact that it has no heroine."—Scotsman.

BLIND BATS. By Margaret B. CROSS, Author of 'Stolen Honey,' 'Newly Fashioned,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"Miss Cross has a delightful style, fresh, crisp, and witty, without straining after epigrams, and her portraiture is throughout lifelike without being photographic."

Pall Mall Gazette.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,

13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

2 vols. 8vo. 24s.

MEMOIRS OF BARON LEJEUNE,

Aide-de-Camp to Marshals Berthier, Davout, and Oudinot.

Translated and Edited from the Original French by Mrs. ARTHUR BELL (N. D'ANVERS).

With an Introduction by Major General MAURICE, C.B.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"There are books of such surpassing interest, which impress the mind so deeply, that one must be careful, in speaking of them, to keep within bounds of a becoming restraint. And to this high class the 'Memoirs of Baron Lejeune' undoubtedly belongs."

8vo. 16s.

VITA MEDICA:

CHAPTERS OF MEDICAL LIFE AND WORK.

By Sir BENJAMIN WARD RICHARDSON, M.D. LL.D. F.R.S.

STANDARD.—"Marked by all the fluency and lucidity of style which made Sir Benjamin Richardson so popular an expounder of medical teachings."

NEW BOOK BY PROF. MAX MÜLLER.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE SCIENCE OF MYTHOLOGY.

By the Right Hon. Prof. MAX MÜLLER, K.M., Member of the French Institute.

2 vols. 8vo. 32s.

LEEDS MERCURY.—"This book will nobly help forward the work of progress in relation to the clearer elucidation of the origin and evolution of human myth, cults, superstitions, and highly spiritualized and beautifully humanized religions."

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

In 6 Monthly Volumes.

A HISTORY OF THE PAPACY FROM THE GREAT SCHISM TO THE SACK OF ROME (1378-1527).

By M. CREIGHTON, D.D. Oxon. and Camb., Lord Bishop of London.

Vols. I. and II. crown 8vo. 6s. [Now ready.

ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"Those who heard little of Dr. Creighton's merits as an historian till he became a bishop will be well advised to read this work; while those who knew it already may value it the more for the rise of its author in the ecclesiastical world."

VOLUME FOR 1897.

8vo. 4s.

THE ANNUAL CHARITIES REGISTER AND DIGEST.

Being a Classified Register of Charities in or available for the Metropolis, together with a Digest of Information respecting the Legal, Voluntary, and other Means for the Prevention and Relief of Distress, and the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor. With an Introduction by C. S. LOCH, Secretary to the Council of the Charity Organization Society, London, and an Elaborate Index.

With 55 Illustrations, 8vo. 14s.

THE STAPELTONS OF YORKSHIRE:

Being the History of an English Family from very Early Times.

By H. E. CHETWYND-STAPYLTON, Author of 'The Chetwynds of Ingestre.'

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION.

Crown 8vo 2s. 6d. net.

STRAY THOUGHTS FOR MOTHERS AND TEACHERS.

By LUCY H. M. SOULSBY, Head Mistress of Oxford High School.

Contents:—The Religious Side of Secular Teaching—Home Education of Girls from 14 to 17 (List of Poetry to Learn by Heart; List of Books to Read Aloud; List of Books for Elder Sisters)—A Missing Link—Plain Living and High Thinking—The Salic Law—Mothers and Teachers; or, Division of Labour—Home Rule; or, Daughters of To-day—Mothers and Day Schools—Early Religious Education—School Work—The Teaching of History (List of Historical Novels)—"We've got no Work to do!"—Wanted: Moral Training—"For their Sakes."

NEW ROMANCE BY MR. WILLIAM MORRIS.

THE WELL AT THE WORLD'S END: a Tale.

By WILLIAM MORRIS, Author of 'The Earthly Paradise.'

2 vols. 8vo. 28s.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.

London, New York, and Bombay.

SATURDAY, MARCH 20, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Dr. Donaldson Smith's African Travels	371
Reprinted Papers of Prof. Skeat	372
A Hebrew Fragment of Ecclesiasticus	372
A Book on the Sporting Dukes of Richmond ...	373
New Novels (Clarissa Furiosa; Under the Circumstances; The Speculators; Out of the Darkness; A Modern Judas)	374—375
Books on Greek Literature	375
Scottish Fiction	376
Books on English Literature	376
Our Library Table—List of New Books	377
'The Centenary Burns'; Two Prothalamia; Sale; The Spring Publishing Season; St. Patrick	378—381
Literary Gossip	381
Science—Elementary Mathematical Books; Prof. Sylvester; Astronomical Notes; Prof. H. Drummond; Societies; Meetings	382—384
Fine Arts—The Institute of Painters in Water Colours; The Serangeum in the Piræus; Sales; Gossip	384—386
Music—The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week	387—388
Drama—Gossip	388

LITERATURE

Through Unknown African Countries. By A. Donaldson Smith, M.D. Maps and Illustrations. (Arnold.)

Hitherto Americans have not taken a particularly prominent part in the scientific exploration of Africa, and it is, therefore, all the more gratifying that in Dr. A. Donaldson Smith they should have found a representative whose labours have considerably enlarged our knowledge of the geography and natural history of that continent. Like all men who have been successful in exploration, Dr. Smith underwent a careful preparation for the task he had set himself. This was no less an achievement than reaching Lake Rudolf from the east. The difficulties of such an undertaking were sufficiently formidable, and there were not wanting persons well acquainted with Somali and Galla Land who looked upon them as insurmountable in the case of a small caravan, such as Dr. Smith proposed to organize. These difficulties, moreover, were unduly increased by the violent conduct of Prince Ruspoli and Capt. Bòttego, who had preceded the author in the same region.

"The lines of march of the two abovementioned travellers were marked by continual attacks upon the natives, and naturally, therefore, the Dagodi fled as we approached the Web."

Dr. Smith, too, had to do some fighting; but in his case the natives were evidently the aggressors, and he had to act in self-defence. In the end he always made peace with his foes, and his fair dealings, like those of his countryman Mr. Chanler, have smoothed the path for future travellers. The narrative is likely to please a large circle of readers, for Dr. Smith experienced the adventures inseparable from a journey through a wild country; proved himself a formidable sportsman in a region still heavily stocked with big game; brought home an invaluable natural history collection, a portion of which is described by specialists in half a dozen appendices; and last, not least, achieved considerable success as a geographical explorer and discoverer.

One of the most interesting spots visited by him is the settlement of the descendants of a Sheikh Husein, in the country of the Arusi Galla. This Mohammedan missionary settled in the country two hundred years ago, and seems to have established a family of the faithful in the midst of a population of Kafirs by taking unto himself numerous Galla wives, a method of propagating the faith not open to Christian missionaries. Even in the short space of two centuries this "saint" has become a legendary personage, and the fine stone tomb which covers his remains is supposed to have sprung into existence in a single night. The visit to this region, lying half way on the direct road from Berbera to Kafa, brought Dr. Smith into contact with the Abyssinians, who had raided the country as far east as Ogadon:—

"The Gallas told us of great atrocities perpetrated by the Abyssinians, who had completely subjugated them four years previously, carrying off their boys and girls as slaves, and capturing all their cattle and sheep.....We passed many villages from which all the people had fled, but we had made good enough friends of two youthful Gallas now to trust one of them to run ahead and tell their people that friends were coming—not Abyssinians, but white people from a far-off country who wished to travel peacefully and make friends with every one; when we wanted food, we told them, we would pay for it, as we were rich in cloth and many things the natives would find useful.....On reaching some water-holes called Roko, a chief of a village near by rushed out to meet us, and implored us to recover a lot of sheep and cattle the Abyssinians had just carried off, and which, he said, had belonged to his dead brother."

Walda Gabra, the Abyssinian governor, treated our author most hospitably, but permission to go on to Kafa was courteously refused, and Dr. Smith had reluctantly to retrace his steps to the east. But before leaving this portion of Gallaland he was able to visit a remarkable underground channel of the river Web, within which the action of the water has worn the coral limestone into columned chambers, one of which the natives seem to have used as a place of sacrifice for generations past.

"There was an enormous fireplace on one side, over and about which were hung various offerings that had been made to Wak, consisting principally of wooden vessels, strings of cowry shells, sheepskins, and leather straps."

A wide sweep through the pastoral regions of the southern Gallas brought our author to the fertile mountain districts lying to the north of Lakes Stephanie and Rudolf. Here he trod new ground, for although Prince Ruspoli had reached the Sagan, called Amara Galana by Dr. Smith, no traveller had ever penetrated beyond. The first agricultural tribes with whom our author came into contact were the Amara and Konso, who are well known on the east coast, being visited by trading caravans from the Benadir ports. Léon des Avanchers, some forty years ago, was told that they were white, had books, and were Christians. None of these things is applicable to the "negroes" visited by Dr. Smith, but the Konso, certainly, are the most civilized and intelligent people in this part of Africa. They weave excellent cloth, and cultivate coffee, tobacco, and cereals.

Even more interesting is Dr. Smith's account of the Dume "pigmies." A dwarfish race, contemptuously called "Doko," had long been known to exist to the south of Abyssinia, and individuals of the tribe had been seen and described by D'Abbadie, Dr. Krapf, and others; but it was reserved for Dr. Smith to visit them for the first time in their native homes. His account of them is all too short:—

"They were remarkably uniform in size, reaching about 5 ft. in height. I did not measure them accurately for fear of frightening them. Their chief characteristics were a black skin, round features, woolly hair, small oval-shaped eyes, rather thick lips, high cheek bones, a broad forehead, but not remarkably receding, and very well formed bodies. Their lips were rather broad, and the lumbar vertebræ curved a little farther forward than is usual, even in black races; but their features were not very prominent, and did not disfigure them as they do in the case of the Hottentots. They reminded me very much of a dog in the expression of their eyes—sometimes timid and suspicious looking, sometimes very amiable and merry, and then again changing suddenly to a look of intense anger.....Formerly they lived principally by hunting, and they still kill a great many elephants with their poisoned arrows; but by the gradual encroachment of other tribes most of the game in the neighbourhood of the Dume has been driven away."

The Dume now number only a thousand souls, and the time when they will be merged in their taller neighbours is approaching rapidly. Ample evidence of this gradual absorption is furnished by Dr. Smith, for the Bunno, Kuli, and Mela, in the same region, are apparently of pigmy origin, although there are "many good-sized individuals among them."

Dr. Smith failed to solve one of the few great problems remaining in African geography, namely, the course of the Omo. It is now more than four hundred years ago that Fra Mauro, trusting to information received from Abyssinian Christian pilgrims, made that river flow through Gallaland into the Indian Ocean. Many hypotheses have been started since, and whilst some adhered to the ancient idea, others looked upon the Omo as one of the head-streams of the Nile or made it the principal source of supply of Lake Rudolf or of Lake Stephanie. The problem is a problem still. Dr. Smith seems inclined to connect the Omo with the Jub, but the available head-streams of this river have been traced by Bòttego and Grixoni until they dwindle into mere mountain torrents. The Sobat seems to be quite out of the question as the lower course of the Omo. The Omo may possibly lose itself in Lake Abala, seen from a distance by M. Borelli, and lying far to the north of Lake Abaya, first visited by Dr. Smith. For the present, at all events, the evidence in favour of its finding its way to Lake Rudolf is still the strongest. The Nianam, a comparatively small river as described by Dr. Smith, would scarcely enable a lake covering 4,000 square miles and lying for the most part within a rainless region to maintain its level. Dr. Smith saw this river in July; its appearance after the heavy rains of October and November is likely to be much more formidable.

At all events, this is a problem the solution of which merits a serious effort, and no one is better qualified for such an undertaking than the author of the volume before us. If he succeeded in reaching the scene of his recent exploits by starting from Kisimayu, the tribes around which have recently entered into friendly relations with the British authorities, he would not only be enabled to reveal to us the mysteries of the broad plains of the Boran country, but might also succeed in diverting to British East Africa the trade which now finds its way to Barawa and other northern ports.

Dr. Smith on his return followed the eastern shore of Lake Rudolf, as had been done before him by Count Teleki, and has been done since by Mr. Neumann; but between that lake and the Upper Tana he again passed through a region not visited before. This brought him into the country of the Rendile, a tall and handsome people, "with complexions as light as the Somalis and strong Hamitic features." They had "camels by the thousands, and camels of a far superior breed to the Somali animals, and, what was better for us, they were anxious to sell their animals." In the midst of this barren and dry region of bush there rises a splendid mountain group called Marsabit.

"According to European ideas nothing could be more charming than this Marsabit. Surrounded by a large forest, and lying on the top of the mountain, is a lake a mile square, clear and deep. The jagged walls of a crater form a semicircle about it, while from another side a broad road leads out from the forest to the open meadows beyond. The atmosphere is moist and cool. In the early morning dense clouds are swept along by invigorating blasts of cold air, combining with the dew of night to freshen up the plants and trees. Outside the forest the view is superb. For five miles you see a series of green meadows sloping gradually downward, on which are grazing many sheep and goats; while far off to the west, beyond the yellow plain, rises rugged Kulol, and a still greater mountain below it—Mount Nyiro."

The appendices dealing with Dr. Smith's natural history collections have already been referred to, nor should a short mention of the maps be omitted. They are excellent of their kind, and satisfactorily record the main geographical results of one of the most successful expeditions ever undertaken in North-Eastern Africa. The book is printed on fine-looking paper, unfortunately covered with some adhesive material, which necessitates its being carefully guarded against moisture.

A Student's Pastime: being a Select Series of Articles reprinted from 'Notes and Queries.' By the Rev. Walter W. Skeat, Litt.D. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)

Prof. Skeat greatly enjoys a game at etymology — indeed, he probably prefers such sport to football or golf, and he is a good player, and what is more a good playfellow, though, it would seem, mostly too strong for his antagonists in Notes and Queries, who often fail to score. Still these gentlemen have served his turn; they have set the ball agoing, and enabled the Professor to make some highly effective hits. Perhaps their feelings have at times been sorely tried to find themselves left so completely in the lurch. It may have required some effort to bear the situation with a good-tempered acquiescence. To see one's pet theories knocked all to pieces and to have all attempts at their protection utterly scorned and routed—this must be a vexatious experience; and one can gather now and then from Prof. Skeat's volume that it was not usually relished. But if people will put forward statements that are baseless and hypotheses that are purely foolish, they must look out for squalls when such a keen-eyed critic as Dr. Skeat is in the neighbourhood. He is a true dunces' hammer. Or he may be compared to Talus in the 'Faerie Queene' with that terrible flail of his. Every week, to speak metaphorically, the field of his "prowess" must have been strewn with bodies and fragments of bodies—a gruesome spectacle; and there in the middle of it must have been seen the Professor, altior insurgens, looking round fiercely for some one else to "come on," his learned gown trailing its tail on the ground to tempt yet another trespasser to his destruction. Happily in the volume before us the remains of the victims have been nearly altogether removed, and the arena has been smoothed and resanded. And the author is quietly jubilant and smiling, looking as if he had never smitten or could smite any offender.

Certainly his foes have proved serviceable. They have led him to investigations which he might never have made, and which were worth making; they have forced him to conduct these investigations with special care and precision lest he should find himself tomahawked instead of being the tomahawker; and no doubt they have sometimes at least brought before him slips and errors in his own previous work. For the distinction of Prof. Skeat is not that he has not made mistakes and never been bold and "previous" to the degree of rashness, but that he has always been so alert to pick himself up when he has stumbled, and to walk more warily — that he has so readily and frankly acknowledged himself in error when he has found himself so. Thus: "I regret that in [the first edition of] my Dictionary the account of deal in the sense of 'deal board' is utterly wrong," &c. It is this admirable docility that has made Prof. Skeat so eminent a scholar. Fas est et ab hoste doceri, as well as ab amico. It may confidently be said of him that he has fought not for victory or merely to glorify himself, but for the truth's sake—from an earnest desire to ascertain the real facts of each case and to arrive at a warrantable conclusion. And fighting with adversaries haud impares Achilli has not resulted in his demoralization, as it might well have done. For not often can he have felt > —— the stern joy which warriors feel

> In foemen worthy of their steel, though that χάρμη was, it seems, not altogether denied him by the gods. For the most part his opponents—"Mr. P.," "Mr. M.," "W. B.," &c. — seem to have been mere minnows by the side of a Triton —persons who cling to the belief that etymology is mere guesswork, and that one man's guess is pretty much as good as another's, and that to interfere with the right of guessing is an outrage on their natural rights. The reign of law in phonetics is not an idea that has yet occurred to these people, nor the idea that history must be heard when we trace the descent of words. It is amazing what gulfs of ignorance are made darkly visible by Prof. Skeat's pages; they "cannot be sounded"; they have "an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal." However, Prof. Skeat is equal to the occasion. Like Beowulf, he plunges into the abyss and does deadly execution.

The literary result is a volume of not unmixed, but on the whole of very considerable value, a volume that ought to be perused by all "general readers," and certainly deserves a place in every student's library. It is now and then entertaining, for Prof. Skeat has a dry humour of his own; and it is often a ludicrous sight to see him carefully "fixing" some culprit in the stocks or the pillory. He cannot help smiling himself in a certain grim manner, indignant as he is with audacious misstatements and fondly hugged absurdities; for, indeed, he is never malignant, and it is the sin rather than the sinner that he "goes for." And, with some few exceptions, the result is informing and instructive. There are few who would not learn something from notes so various and often so erudite. Here is knowledge in the making. Several of Prof. Skeat's conclusions as here stated are now generally accepted as trustworthy; and what he writes is always suggestive and useful one way or another. He deserves well of the republic for this as for many other contributions to scientific progress, that is, to the progress of scientific etymology. "It is a pleasure to observe," he writes near the end of his introduction,

"that, in spite of recurring outbreaks, guesswork is no longer adored with that blind admiration which it once evoked. Its ancient glory is waning, and its acceptance is transitory and hesitating; towards which hopeful change in public opinion I claim to have contributed somewhat by means of the very articles which are here collected and reprinted."

Unquestionably this claim must be heartily conceded.

No doubt by this time Prof. Skeat has gained fresh light on some of the points he discusses. Thus, as to "the pound of flesh" story, he may have learnt that Miss Toulmin Smith had already noticed it in the 'Cursor Mundi.' In discussing the Old Eng. æstel he does not seem conscious of the Lat. hastula. He speaks of Robert of Gloucester with, perhaps, too unfaltering assurance. And now and then, perhaps, a slight change in the phrasing would give a less "schoolmastery" and dogmatic tone to certain passages, as, e.g., where we read as to caterwaul: "I hope I have now made this sufficiently plain, and that we may be spared any further discussion of this matter." But, on the whole, the Professor deserves credit for producing a highly interesting and valuable book, and it is to be hoped that he may find its reception "sufficiently encouraging" to persuade him "to produce another volume or even two more of a like kind," as he tells his readers it would be easy to do.

The Original Hebrew of a Portion of Ecclesiasticus (xxxix. 15 to xlix. 11), together with the Early Versions and an English Translation. Edited by E. A. Cowley and Ad. Neubauer. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)

It was a right decision on the part of the ruling theological authorities at Oxford not to delay the publication of the newly discovered Hebrew fragments of Ecclesiasticus longer than was absolutely necessary. It will be remembered that the announcement of this interesting find was only made in June last. Mr. Schechter, Reader in Rabbinic at the University of Cambridge, first identified one leaf of Ben Sira's original composition among a number of fragments brought by Mrs. Lewis, of Sinaitic fame, from the East. Almost simultaneously nine other leaves of the same MS. arrived at the Bodleian Library, Oxford, whither they had been sent by Prof. Sayce from his quarters in Egypt. To Dr. Neubauer, the guardian of the newly acquired treasure, was naturally assigned the editorship of the fragments, and it was quite as natural that Mr. Cowley, his younger colleague at the great Oxford library, should become the co-editor. Dr. Driver, who from the first evinced a most sympathetic interest in the subject, accorded the editors a very helpful amount of assistance, and several other Oxford scholars have also rendered willing service. It would under such circumstances have been a wonder if the work had not prospered and progressed apace, and if much cause for complaint and fault-finding had been left to the reviewer, who has now the privilege of furnishing some account of the book.

The value of the new discovery is threefold: it will, as far as it goes, help us to a greatly improved understanding of several of Ben Sira's sayings; secondly, it provides us with an undoubted specimen of Hebrew written not much later than 200 B.C.; and it is, moreover, sure to throw some not inconsiderable light on various problems connected with the criticism of the canon of the Old Testament.

With regard to the first point our hopes must not run too high. If the whole of the recovered portions of the original had been preserved in a pure and uncorrupt state, scholars would have been much better off. Such is, however, far from being the case. A considerable number of the extant lines are most undoubtedly corrupt. The eleventh or twelfth century scribe to whose penmanship the fragments are due wrote a clear and bold hand, but the MS. from which he copied must have been of a very unsatisfactory nature. The editors have done their best with what was before them, but they find themselves compelled to state that "passages occur which, from whatever cause, are obscure," and that they cannot feel confident that they "have seized the sense of all of them." Another cause of difficulty in the correct mastery of Ben Sira's original meaning lies in the singularly numerous variants which another hand or other hands have placed in the margin of several portions. But even when all the necessary deductions have been made, the gain will be found to be considerable, and more especially so in chaps. xliv.–xlix. 11, which are the best preserved portions of the whole, and where the variants gradually diminish and finally disappear altogether.

Next comes the question of Ben Sira's Hebrew.* From the book of Ecclesiastes, which is generally supposed to have been written about the same time, or perhaps a little earlier, scholars would have expected a much less pure classical style than is now before them in the original of Ecclesiasticus. In some portions, and especially in the "Praise of the Patriarchs," they are conscious of finding themselves under the spell of a musical parallelism which strongly reminds them of the Psalms, although it would perhaps be too much to suggest that some of Ben Sira's compositions actually found their way into the Psalter. The hypothesis would be a most enticing one; and if a large number of the Psalms are, as many critics believe, of Maccabæan origin, may we not also suppose Psalms from the pen of Ben Sira, who flourished about forty or fifty years before Judas Maccabæus so valiantly fought the Greeks? But Ben Sira unfortunately betrays some decidedly unclassical modes of thought. The phrase "a prophet like fire" as applied by him to Elijah may, perhaps, be defended, but it is certainly not a Biblical figure of speech; and Ben Sira's pious desire that the bones of the twelve minor prophets may "flourish out of their places" is still more striking as a mark, not of poetic inspiration, but rather of the paucity of it. The author of Ecclesiasticus, indeed, writes, apart from several late Hebrew words and some Syriacisms, fine and pure Hebrew. His verse also flows sweetly and gently for the most part; but a poet of the first rank he does not appear to have been, and he undoubtedly occupies a lower position than the singers whose verses have been adopted into the canon of the Old Testament. He is inferior to the Psalmists in point of fervour and elevation, and in comparison with the author of Ecclesiastes he lacks depth. The "Preacher," whose work forms a part of the Hebrew Bible, had a message to deliver. His task was to demonstrate the hopelessness of determined scepticism and the vanity of mere enjoyment. He also succeeded in showing the human soul what she is like when devoid of the higher light of faith. One of Heine's remarks about the author of 'Faust' was that "nature wanted to know how she looked, and she created Goethe." And so it might also be said that the human soul, desiring to know what she is without a sufficient realization of the divine, awoke to the consciousness of such a condition in the pages of Ecclesiastes. Ben Sira, on the other hand, can lay no claim to a special message. He writes beautifully and instructively; but he is only a writer of wise and helpful sayings, and nothing more.

We must, however, hasten on to some remarks on the critical value of the new discovery. In this respect our new knowledge will no doubt cut both ways. The fragments before us show conclusively that classical Hebrew could be written, and written well, about 200 B.C., and, moreover, that the severe rhythmic measures of Greek and Latin verse had at that time not found their way into Hebrew poetry. There is, therefore, no reason to doubt that other poets may have risen to even greater heights of inspired religious utterance and composed hymns which may have found their way into the Psalter; and if such compositions were possible early in the second century B.C., why not also fifty years later, during the struggles and the young glories of the Maccabees? On the other hand, however, Ben Sira's work contains a considerable number of allusions to passages in different books of the Old Testament canon. Several phrases can be shown to be reminiscences from the Psalms, and it is possible that Ecclesiastes was also already before Ben Sira. It is, therefore, not improbable that the new find will thus unexpectedly establish a "terminus ad quem" for compositions (especially in the Psalter) which some critics were disposed to date later than the time of Ben Sira.

That the editors have accomplished their task with great skill and thorough critical tact will, we believe, be acknowledged by all. If they have erred at all, it is on the side of self-restraint. They might have emended more than they have done without either risk or presumption. This would also have removed several uncomfortable lines in the translation. But they have chosen the path of self-repression, and may fairly claim credit for not putting their own ideas too much forward. Their sole object has been to provide the necessary materials for scholars to work upon, and it must be allowed that they have succeeded admirably. Besides the Hebrew text with translation, they give us the Greek, Syriac, and Old Latin versions, which have been respectively revised by Mr. J. F. Stenning, of Wadham College, Mr. E. N. Bennett, of Hertford College, and the Rev. F. E. Brightman, of the Pusey House, Oxford. Dr. Driver has done even more for the work, for he not only revised the translation throughout, but also prepared a glossary which will be a considerable help to students. Moreover the book is adorned with two photographic plates, which fill one with respect for the scribe's fine bold hand; and besides 'Ben Sira's Proverbs preserved in Talmudic and Rabbinic Literature' and the so-called 'Alphabets of Ben Sira,' a full list of the many works quoted in the book is added. The publication is thus complete in itself, having received at the hands of the editors and their friends the careful and elaborate treatment which it deserved.

* It does not lie within the scope of this notice to produce systematic evidence that we indeed have the original Hebrew before us, and not a Hebrew translation from one of the versions. It is sufficient to remark that the following are the main points to consider: (1) the style of the Hebrew, (2) its relation to the versions, (3) the marginal variants, (4) the fact that Saadyah Gaon in the tenth century had the original before him.

Records and Reminiscences of Goodwood and the Dukes of Richmond. By John Kent. (Sampson Low & Co.)

This illustrated volume is creditable to everybody concerned in its production, and especially to the author or compiler, for the excellent spirit to which it bears witness, and for the appropriately unpretentious fashion of its literary composition. Mr. Kent has already won for himself, by his 'Racing Life of Lord George Bentinck,' a prominent position among those trainers or ex-trainers who in these latter days, to the great advantage of persons interested in horse-racing and its concomitants, do not consider their life's work complete until they have appeared before the public in the capacity of authors. In his new work Mr. Kent is free from one great difficulty with which he had to contend in the earlier, for among those Dukes of Richmond who have had more or less personal connexion with horse-racing there is none whose name is associated with the outrageous betting, and the sometimes questionable proceedings resulting therefrom, which told more in favour of Lord George Bentinck's astuteness than of his generosity. Mr. Kent, in fact, does not fail to point out how curious it is that there should have been so intimate a friendship and so cordial an understanding between Lord George, to whom racehorses were little more than mere instruments of gambling, and the fifth Duke of Richmond (the most horsey of all his line), who regarded betting and bettors with a dislike bordering upon abhorrence.

Mr. Kent, of course, has nothing to say about the Duke of Richmond of the first creation, that promising Henry FitzRoy who should have been "Marcellus" had he lived, and not much about the Stuart dukes, for none of them had anything to do with Goodwood. It is not unworthy of notice, however, that both the first and the last creation should have been in favour of an illegitimate scion of royalty, as if the title had been set aside, in a manner, for contingencies of that description. The first duke of whom Mr. Kent treats at any length is Charles Lennox, son of Charles II. and of Louise de Quérouaille, Duchess of Portsmouth, whose very name is unmentioned by Mr. Kent, though, on the other hand, he shows little regard for the memory of Mary, Queen of Scots. It was this duke who settled at Goodwood, then described as "a place near Charlton," whereas the description would now be exactly the reverse; and it was he who was invested by Louis XIV. with the Dukedom of Aubigny with remainder to his mother, through whom the title descended to the second Duke of Richmond at her death in 1734. The French dukedom was confirmed to the fifth Duke of Richmond by Louis XVIII. in 1816; and as the Dukedom of Gordon was revived in the person of the present (the sixth) duke, whose father succeeded to the estates of the fifth and last Duke of Gordon, and took the name of Gordon in addition to Lennox, he presents, as Mr. Kent duly observes, a rare, or even unique, example in this country of four dukes rolled into one—Richmond, Lennox, Gordon, Aubigny.

Mr. Kent's work, as the title indicates, is made up from public records partly and from private reminiscences partly. There is nothing derogatory to him and to his volume in saying that, as he evidently has discharged his task rather like a faithful and grateful admirer than a critical biographer, readers will attach comparatively small importance to the pages in which he deals with the public and historical life of the various dukes, records of whom are to be found elsewhere, and will turn with greater curiosity, if not confidence, to those which are concerned with the more private matters. Among the latter may be included whatever relates to horse-racing, which, though in a certain sense a public affair, belongs undoubtedly to the category of private enterprise and expenditure. It is not, therefore, to be regretted that the personal reminiscences greatly preponderate over the matter compiled, although with praiseworthy care and general accuracy, from records not at all inaccessible.

It will be understood quite easily, after what has been said of the commendable spirit in which Mr. Kent, as an old servant of the ducal family, set about his "labour of love," to use his own words, that he cuts very short indeed his biographical account of the first of the "Goodwood" dukes, not even mentioning a horse-match between him and the first Duke of Grafton, which, according to the researches of the indefatigable Mr. J. B. Muir, was run at Newmarket when the dukes were mere children. Nor does he care to notice the romantic story about the second duke's marriage, which is said to have been arranged for the settlement of a gambling debt, or about the divorce of his daughter, Lady Sarah Bunbury; or to retell the old anecdote concerning the third duke, the founder of Goodwood races, and Lord Thurlow, to the effect that the former reproached the latter with humble origin, whereupon the latter retorted, before the assembled peers, that the former was but "the accident of an accident." Of the fourth duke—who nearly shot the Duke of York in a duel, whose wife gave the memorable ball at Brussels, and who died lamentably of hydrophobia—Mr. Kent furnishes a lively and readable account, as well as of the fifth duke, who, when Earl of March, distinguished himself in the Peninsula and at Waterloo; but of the present duke he, naturally enough, says but little, though he is somewhat more communicative about the Earl of March.

Mr. Kent differs on a few points of detail from the usual authorities, and is probably more correct than they sometimes; but he has fallen into an occasional error apparently. "Buckingham" (p. 29) is, of course, an ordinary misprint for Rockingham; but, as neither name appears in the index, a good opportunity for making the required correction was lost. Again (p. 98), Admiral Rous is said to have been "half brother to the Earl of Stradbroke"; but they were surely full brothers, else the genealogists agree to differ from Mr. Kent, who, however, may possibly, but quite against commonly received opinion, be right. It was the generally accepted close relationship between the two brothers which was considered to give piquancy to their wide divergence of views concerning the degeneracy of the modern thoroughbred horse, and, as they were both members of the Jockey Club, concerning certain rules of racing. Then "that eminent reformer and political economist, Mr. John Hume," refers, no doubt, to the celebrated Mr. Joseph Hume. Moreover, it is stated (p. 192) of the present duke that "the meetings of the Jockey Club, when held in London, take place at his residence." Not invariably; the very last, only a few weeks ago, was held at Lord Derby's, but that, of course, was since the publication of the book. Nor ("List of Illustrations") does it seem quite correct to describe James (who died in 1655) as the "last" of the Stuart Dukes of Richmond; for how about the Charles who died in 1672, when the dukedoms of Richmond and Lennox reverted to King Charles II.? As regards the important question concerning the actual "bodily weight" of the jockey Kitchener when he won the Chester Cup on Red Deer for the fifth duke, Mr. Kent, who ought to know, repeats his statement, made in his 'Lord G. Bentinck,' that it was 3 st. 4 lb., instead of 2 st. 12 lb. as is doggedly asserted about once a week, or, at any rate, over and over again, by a certain sporting paper for the information of anxious inquirers.

Of illustrations there are thirteen, mostly portraits. The frontispiece is a portrait of the present Earl of March, and is remarkable for a strange, faint apparition—whether of a poodle or of a baby it is not easy to decide—among the ornamental fringe of foliage. The book has the unusual equipment of two silken "markers," one yellow and the other scarlet; whereof the explanation is to be found in the "racing colours" of the family. In many of the most readable portions the contents are so largely made up of quotations that they savour of having been served up more than once; but the following list of treasures preserved at Goodwood House may be new and attractive:—

"A beautifully worked shirt worn by Charles I.; a tray which held his clothes when an infant; a watch which he wore; even a lock of the unfortunate king's hair and the cup and boat used at his christening.....also a blue cushion, beautifully bordered, upon which Queen Victoria knelt at her coronation; a cockade and marshal's bâton, borne by the Duke of Wellington; and a silver breakfast-plate used by Napoleon on the morning of his last fight, and taken from his carriage by our soldiers at Waterloo."

Far too long for reproduction is the entertaining reprint of a pamphlet relating to the "Charlton Hunt," wherein the reader will come upon the trail of a Monsieur St. Victor, who no doubt was the French gentleman to whom England was indebted for the famous "St. Victor's Barb," and upon a short account of a "banqueting room" called Foxhall, whence the celebrated American racehorse, naturalized in England, most probably derived his name.

NEW NOVELS.

Clarissa Furiosa. By W. E. Norris. (Methuen & Co.)

Mr. Norris's novels are always pleasant reading, and his latest is no exception. Indeed, one cannot imagine the severest critic finding anything unkind to say about it, except that the title is hardly a fair guide to the story, which developes rather upon the lines of Clarissa's restoration to what her creator would doubtless hold to be sanity than upon those of her original aberration. We are not sure after all that 'Clarissa Innamorata' would not have been nearer the mark. Were it not that Mr. Norris is above all things urbane, one would be tempted to suggest that he had written this book as a kind of reductio ad absurdum of a novel which had a considerable success some years ago (perhaps owing more to certain accessories than to any merits in its essentials), the drift of which was to impress upon ladies about to marry that the man of their choice was as likely as not to be a profligate. Here, he seems to say, you have a young woman of exalted ideas who falls in love much like others; marries a man whose past has not been marked, to put it mildly, by any ascetic interpretation of the limits imposed by conventional morality; finds that even after marriage he is capable of enjoying himself in the society of other ladies; and tries the experiment of living apart from him—an experiment rendered easier by the fact that she has the money, and he, being at least a man of fastidious delicacy in such matters, accepts his dismissal all the more meekly when he realizes his dependence on her in this respect. How far the experiment succeeded may be learnt from the book. Of course the merits of a novel as such have little to do with the view of social problems expressed in it, and no reasonable person's view of such problems will be affected by his opinion of a novel dealing with them. "Hard cases make bad law," and a novel is bound by the law of its existence, if it is to be interesting, to propound a hard case. The real point is, Has the author imagined his people well, and developed his story intelligently? and this test Mr. Norris passes very satisfactorily. Possibly the child's illness strikes a note rather too grave for the key of the story; and it certainly suggests a little consciousness that the argument, if argument there be, needs the support of incidents outside of the daily round. Would not Clarissa, being what she is meant to be, inevitably have "come round" without an imminent catastrophe? On the other hand, the little touch, after she has ceased to be "Furiosa": "If I have done some mischief—as I daresay I have—it is not too late, I hope, to undo it. I can't admit that I was quite wrong, and Guy.....says that he agrees in principle with a great deal of what I used to urge," —this little touch is human feminine nature all over, as also is the judgment pronounced upon her change of view by her sister-in-law and disciple, who seems at the moment to have lost the "place for repentance" of which Clarissa has been able to avail herself. We note with some amusement that the perversity of the French language in interchanging the meaning of "balls" and "bullets" has entrapped even so good a French scholar as Mr. Norris, unless he means satirically to suggest that the average French officer believes cannon to form part of the equipment of African nomads.

Under the Circumstances. By Archie Armstrong. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

It is refreshing to come across an intelligent novel which can be pleasurably read by young and old. This is a well-told story of to-day, written in good English and devoid of those features which render modern fiction too frequently objectionable to a portion of the public. If Mr. Armstrong can continue to supply literature of this type he will rapidly become a popular author. This novel seems to be his first publication. Some of the character sketching is good. The lady who finds fault with the children and the servants "when she feels well enough," and the baronet who is ready to "lay you any odds you like, either way," are good instances of his skill. The faults we have noted are few. There is too much in one portion of the story about "drifting" into love. Such expressions as "smashed to smithereens," otherwise than in conversation, are best weeded out. The book is, however, too good to suffer materially from such considerations; but the title is unlucky as, like 'Our Mutual Friend,' it is doubtful English.

The Speculators. By John Francis Brewer. (Methuen & Co.)

If Mr. Brewer has any originality of mind, which, indeed, seems to be the case, there is the more reason to regret the intolerable coating of affectation and coarseness under which he conceals it. The "Perfect Man," the "Philosopher," the "Earth Maiden," and the "Demon" are the names playfully applied to some of his characters, amongst whom the young men are occupied in speculating upon their own identity under the name of ethics, and the young women in the equally speculative pursuit of the young men. When Lady Colborne's daughter, with a view to effect, receives her cousin in her presentation dress, train and all, she cuts his head open, like any fishwife, because she finds he loves another. Later she resorts to yet stronger measures, while the "Demon," who is less violent in her mode of attack, is also more vulgar and more successful. As for the young men, we can only say that the author has chosen to caricature types which, if they ever existed, we hope will speedily cease to do so.

Out of the Darkness. By Percy Fendall and Fox Russell. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

At the moment when Sir Eustace Bevan, Q.C., married man, and Monica Stanforth, spinster, are making the "Great Renunciation," and sealing it appropriately with a tender embrace, the unfortunate and disloyal Lady Bevan is expiring from failure of the heart, the result of a stormy interview with her lover, Gonzalo, who has announced his intention of deserting her to marry an heiress, Miss Haidée E. Slatter, from 'Frisco. It will be seen that the interest of this work turns upon permutations and combinations in which sex is the important factor. It is for the most part fairly written, but its literary merit is insufficient to commend the unpleasant and rather exhausted material of the plot. Sir Eustace is a good deal to be pitied, but it is unworthy of a man of his force of character to allow Monica to perceive an attachment which is no compliment to her, and but for the freak of fortune above indicated, and the unusually propitious courses of the stars, must have ended in her lasting sorrow. Nor can we sympathize with his conduct to his wife. It is her misfortune to have married him at a time when the occupations and ambition of his profession afforded him no leisure, and to have been separated from him by years of indifference when his enforced leisure makes him open to the influence of love. There is a certain comic admiral whose heavily shotted discourse is intended for a relief, and an imbecile curate who sits down through a cucumber frame at the operative part of a declaration of love; but these devices fail to compensate for the inherent weakness of the theme. It is fair to say that the lawyer and his lady-love are well described, and that an incidental run with the hounds reads not unnaturally.

A Modern Judas. By John F. Causton. (Digby, Long & Co.)

Literary grace of style is not a prominent feature in Mr. J. F. Causton's story. The volume consists of a long narrative based on a hackneyed theme; and it would have greater interest for the general reader were the writing of a higher quality. It is harmless and innocent reading; but it is not a book that will readily engage attention, still less admiration. The author does not seem to have studied the art of narrative with any success.

BOOKS ON GREEK LITERATURE.

Women in Greek Poetry. By E. F. M. Benecke. (Sonnenschein & Co.)—This volume consists in the main of two essays, which were originally intended, doubtless not without alteration and condensation, to form part of a larger work "on the origin of the romantic element in literature." The first essay deals chiefly with love between man and woman as it appeared to the Greek lyrists and tragedians; the second with the position of women in Greek comedy. A number of detached notes are added in an appendix. The author, who perished untimely by an Alpine accident in 1895, is concerned to maintain the following propositions, which are set out on pp. 104 and 114 of the book. (1) Love, in the modern sense (or "romantic love"), as existing between men and women, was unknown in early Greece. (2) Such love on the part of men for men was not only a fact, but was generally recognized as a social, and in some cases a national, institution. (3) In extant Greek poetry there is no trace of romantic love poetry addressed to women prior to the time of Asclepiades and Philetas. (4) In the works of these writers this element suddenly appears, not in the nature of an experiment, but as a leading motive—an almost sure proof that they were not the originators of it. (5) The 'Lyde' of Antimachus was a work of such a kind, both in nature and in circumstances of production, that there is every reason to believe that it was a romantic love poem. (6) Philetas and Asclepiades were notoriously admirers of the 'Lyde' of Antimachus. (7) Therefore there is reason to believe that the romantic element appearing in their poems was due to the influence of Antimachus, who may thus be regarded as the originator of the romantic element in literature. The essay on comedy, which is here for the moment ignored, is to the same effect, and attempts to show that the idea of romantic love, crowned by marriage, which is the main theme of Athenian new comedy, was derived by Menander, through Philetas or Asclepiades, from the same Antimachus. The book is described on the title-page as "printed for the use of scholars," and the argument, of course, so far as it is fully treated, involves the citation of many passages in the original Greek and the discussion of the plots of many plays. In these matters the author is at his best. He possesses a considerable fund of learning, and writes with humour and discernment. But his one novelty, the suggestion that Antimachus of Colophon effected, by a single poem, a great revolution in morals and literature, is an extravagant piece of speculation. Exceedingly little is known about Antimachus, and nothing at all about the Lyde whose loss he bewailed. The poem which he dedicated to her memory has perished, and, though we are given to understand that it was very long, there is reason to doubt whether it was equally great. Supposing, too, that it was entirely admirable, there is still no evidence to show that it affected the moral character of Philetas or Asclepiades or Menander, or that any one of these three affected the other two. The success of Menander, on the contrary, indicates a general progress in sentiment, for his love stories must have been congenial to his audience, and it is unlikely that this general progress was either of recent or of literary origin. It may well be that the early post-Homeric literature, mostly written by men for men, gives as false an idea of Greek society as French novels do of French society. Certainly Euripides and Aristophanes and Plato are witnesses that women, in spite of their seclusion, had opinions of their own, exercised considerable influence, and had opportunities of exhibiting many talents; and it is not improbable that, when the men had failed in their own domain of war and politics, the women took advantage of the times to improve their position. Even without any effort on their part, there were abundant reasons why the charm of "domus et placens uxor" should have been more highly appreciated in B.C. 320 than in 420.

Apollonius of Perga. By T. L. Heath, M.A. (Cambridge, University Press.)—Mr. Heath, who published some years ago a valuable work on the 'Arithmetica' of Diophantus, has devoted a still larger volume to the 'Conic Sections' of Apollonius of Perga, whom his contemporaries and successors loved to call "the great geometer." The greater part of the book consists, not indeed of a translation, which would be intolerable, but of a reproduction in a condensed form, with some slight rearrangements, of the veritable treatise of Apollonius, so far as it is now extant. In fact, only a small part of it, the eighth book, is lost; the rest exists partly in the original Greek and partly in an Arabic translation of the ninth century, and was published, with a Latin version, by Halley in 1710. Halley, like many other geometers of his time, attempted to reconstruct the eighth book too, but Mr. Heath confines himself to the authentic text. His work is, of course, not for the multitude, which in such matters is apt to prefer the half to the whole, and even a leisured mathematician will probably dwell less on Apollonius himself than on Mr. Heath's elaborate and excellent introduction. Here, along with some other learning which was sufficiently accessible before, even in English, he will find several interesting chapters which, if not entirely new, are at least much fuller and more accurate than any treatment of the same subjects that we have seen elsewhere. The best of these are, perhaps, one which contains a collection of all the propositions on conics found in the works of Archimedes, and another, on the methods of Apollonius, which gives many remarkable examples of the Greek geometrical substitutes for algebra. On the whole, if Mr. Heath cannot hope to entertain a large audience, he may at least expect the hearty applause of the few who are experts and enthusiasts.

Cyrus: a Tale of the Ten Thousand, by H. A. D. Surridge, M.A. (Skeffington & Son), is a curious mixture of romance and history. A company of Saxons, who reached Athens in B.C. 421, there make the acquaintance of Xenophon, who ultimately induces them to join the army which Cyrus was collecting at Sardis. After visiting Delphi, where Xenophon consults the oracle, the party sails for Ephesus. Here one of them, Adolf by name, has the misfortune to interrupt a procession of the votaries of Diana, and is condemned to fight with beasts in the arena. He does so with great adroitness, of course, but is surpassed by his brother Baro, who, for no apparent reason, resolves to tackle the last animal, a raging bull. Baro, seizing the bull with one hand, gives it so vigorous a thump in the ribs with the other that it is compelled to lie down exhausted. After this, the heroes pursue the tenor of their way pretty evenly until the battle of Cunaxa, with which the book ends. A sequel, however, is promised, which will deal with the retreat. Mr. Surridge assures us that he has consulted the latest and most learned authorities, and is of opinion that his narrative will enable young readers to understand many passages in the Acts and to imagine the state of society among the Ephesians and Colossians whom St. Paul knew. The illustrations, which are conspicuously labelled "Drawn by G. Richards: Manchester," are of the same simplicity as the story, and do not call for serious criticism.

SCOTTISH FICTION.

THE Green Fire of Miss Fiona Macleod (Constable & Co.) is the fire of life that kindles in the spring, beloved of Angus Og, son of the sun, "from the meeting of whose lips are born white birds, which fly abroad and nest in lovers' hearts till the moment comes when, on the yearning lips of love, their invisible wings shall become kisses again." Miss Macleod has rarely poured herself out more fully in profuse strains of rhythmic prose than in this Celtic tale, which draws its inspiration from the remotely kindred districts of Brittany and the Hebrides. Alan de Kerival, himself of Highland stock, has been brought up by his aunt Lois and her husband Tristan, whose ancestral name he bears, though there is a mystery about his birth on which a tragedy depends. Besides his aunt, the Marquise, "who loved the language of her people and spoke it, as she spoke English, even better than French," her ancient servitor Ian Macdonald—known among the Bretons as Yann the Dumb, being vocal in no language but his own—maintained in Alan the knowledge and love of Gaelic in addition to the tongue of Armorica, the familiar vernacular of Kerival. What a wealth of poetic tradition is open to one thus bilingual it does not need a Fiona Macleod to recapitulate. Yet in many an apt allusion and citation we are reminded of the romance and magic of old Armorica, the ballad history of the ancient Gael. We are too appreciative of the gift our author undoubtedly possesses to cavil greatly at such digressions, and to our thinking her English style gains much from the Celtic exuberance of her vocabulary; but in the interests of sound writing we appeal to her for self-restraint in certain mannerisms. We prefer innumerable to "innumerous," though the latter has authority; we cannot away with the fashionable "thrid" for thread; "forwardly inclined" is more precious, but not so clear as inclined forward; and "wind-wavered" and "litten" are strained and unnatural. Unburdened of these groans, we can unreservedly praise the poetic beauty of the tale. The Breton part deals with the love of Alan and his cousin Ynys, the Marquis's daughter, and with the tragic circumstances which surround the revelation of the hero's real birth. The "green fire" seems to have something to do with the passion of Alan and his dark-haired cousin; for a betrothal to a prosaic Andrik on the lady's part, and certain passages between her lover and her sister, the tawny-haired Annaik de Kerival, count for nothing to the enamoured pair. There are some vivid scenes in the woods around the old Breton manor-house; the duel between the relentless Marquis and his old companion in arms, and the prowling visit of the half-savage Judik Kerbastiou to the cypress glade where Annaik strays at midnight, are among impressions to be retained. At Rona, in the Hebrides, Alan and Ynys find themselves the objects of superstitious doubt and terror to the Gaelic inhabitants. This part of the story is realistic enough. We will not attempt to solve the mystery of the Buachaille Bàn. Enough that all spells at length are lifted, and the lovers enter on a life of happiness, in which the Celtic mystic Alan sees the earnest of transcendental joys. We are never quite sure how far the writer understands the vernacular. The translations here are not very literal, and the printer has had his Sassenach will in some of the spelling.

There is a good deal of nobility in Mrs. Tom Kelly's story of a Highland gamekeeper and his granddaughter, who turns out to be also A Leddy in her Ain Richt (Hurst & Blackett). Jaquetta is brought up in ignorance of her condition, but has been educated in an atmosphere of family love and refinement, and on her parents' death is fitted for the part either of an affectionate grandchild to old Niel MacCrinn, or of a worthy mate to the gallant young cousin whom she has innocently supplanted in the family honours. There is rather an extreme dearth of incident in the tale, which is simplicity itself in the matter of plot; but the honest and stately aristocrats of the Karmore family are of a type unusual in fiction, and there is a free atmosphere of hillside heather about their surroundings which seems conducive to high thoughts and generous sentiments. Next to the charming heroine, Niel, with his picturesque piety, his Celtic sympathy with nature, and his latent capacity for moral indignation, is the most interesting study in the book.

"Man, Andra, but ye gat fower oot for ye're [sic] jokes," is one of the few good things in the very pedestrian story which has been christened, with some moral courage, In Oor Kailyard. This addition to the crowd of conventional imitations three degrees removed from Galt is the work of Mr. W. G. Tarbet, and is published by Messrs. Arrowsmith of Bristol.

The Young Clanroy. By the Rev. C. G. Lang. (Smith, Elder & Co.)—The title of Mr. Lang's book, which is printed by request, and founded on a story told to the boys of Magdalen School, is rather suspicious to an ear at all attuned to Celtic surnames. The author, however, in his modest introduction lays no claim to accuracy of detail, and the chieftainship of the youthful partisan of the Chevalier, as well as his connexion with Clanranald, may be accepted without criticism. That his father, a Jacobite in arms, should in the height of the war receive protection and reinstatement in his estates (?) through the personal favour of Cumberland is in every way more hard of digestion than the hero's fancy name. For the rest, there is plenty of adventure, a touch of the mysterious in the telepathic powers of the Black Priest, and a sufficient family spook in the wielder of "the Mighty Hand of the Clan Macroy." Dorothy is a pleasant heroine, and the only serious drawback from our enjoyment is the imbecility of the hero, who is perpetually being delivered by his friends from the consequences of some impulsive folly. An idiot retainer, who, for linguistic reasons, has been imported from the Lowlands, is generally the deus ex machinâ. But there is considerable animation in this tale "of the '45," and it may well have pleased an audience of uncritical English schoolboys when related orally.

BOOKS ON ENGLISH LITERATURE.

The Tale of Thrond of Gate, commonly called Færeyinga Saga. Englished by F. York Powell. (Nutt.) — This, the second volume of the "Northern Library," is distinctly inferior in interest and importance to the first volume, which contained the engrossing and epically dramatic story of King Olaf Tryggwason. Still, it is not without a real interest of its own, and Prof. Powell has done well in rendering it into English for the first time. The strong point of the saga lies in the vivid characterization of the principal actors in its pages. The grim, cunning, and base, but resourceful and tenacious Thrond is a fine foil to the truly heroic figure of his noble-minded rival, Sigmund Brestison, and there are few tragedies so pathetic as the foul murder of the latter for the sake of his big gold bracelet, as he lay exhausted among the seaweed on the beach of Southray after his famous swim from Scufey, so homerically described. This episode would be sufficient of itself to redeem the saga from insignificance. For the rest, the 'Færeyinga Saga,' to give it its legitimate name, is somewhat unimportant from an historical point of view. There are, however, many interesting genealogical details relating to the leading Færoe men. Prof. Powell's translation is clear, simple, straightforward, and commendably correct. There is some discrepancy, indeed, between text and preface as to the wraith-raising scene in chap. xl., which should be corrected, but otherwise we have no fault to find.

Yorkshire Writers: Richard Rolle of Hampole and his Followers. Edited by C. Horstman. Vol. II. (Sonnenschein.)—This second volume of Dr. Horstman's collection of the mystical writers of the north of England in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries contains 500 pages of small print. Of these more than forty are occupied by the introduction, continued from the preceding volume, and including an account of Richard Rolle's life and writings. We cannot quite sympathize with the enthusiasm which leads the editor to consider Rolle as "one of the greatest of Englishmen"; and even the contention that he represents the very highest type of saintship seems to us somewhat extravagant. Nor do we admit that the author of 'Incendium Amoris' and 'The Prick of Conscience' "has hitherto been doomed to oblivion" among his own countrymen. However, there is no doubt that Rolle is a deeply interesting person, both on account of his own character and the powerful influence he exerted on English religious thought for two centuries; and Dr. Horstman's account of him, based as it is on unequalled familiarity with his writings, will be welcome to many readers, even though its substance may not be so entirely novel as the writer supposes. The bibliography of Rolle's genuine and attributed writings, given as an appendix to the introduction, is of great value, as nothing of the kind has hitherto been attempted. If Rolle wrote all the works, Latin and English, which are accepted as unquestionably genuine by his editor (not to speak of many others which are allowed to be possibly his), his productiveness is indeed astonishing. The number of works erroneously ascribed to him, and showing strong traces of his influence, is also extraordinarily large. The volume includes many pieces which hardly come within the scope of the book as indicated by its title; e.g., there are several poems in Southern dialect, which show no evidence of having been transcribed from Northern originals. The so-called 'Surtees Psalter' also seems somewhat out of place here, since, although it may well belong to Yorkshire, it is almost certainly the work of a writer somewhat earlier than Rolle. However, we do not complain of its inclusion, as Stevenson's text is notoriously insecure, and it is a great advantage to have the work re-edited in a trustworthy manner. It is, however, vexatious to find that, instead of following the verse-numbering of the Vulgate, the editor has numbered the paragraphs of the text before him, so that his figures are almost useless for reference. We have long learnt not to expect a book edited by Dr. Horstman to contain a glossary or an index; but the absence of a table of contents is really too bad, especially in the case of a miscellaneous collection of pieces by many authors, which are not even arranged according to any intelligible plan. However, Dr. Horstman's painstaking work is valuable enough to deserve our gratitude in spite of all these trying perversities.

The Age of Wordsworth, by C. H. Herford (Bell & Sons), is an attempt to provide a handbook of English literature from 1798 to 1830. Written with an especial view to Romanticism, it suffers from a strong bias, which has led to an undue emphasis being laid on some writers. Coleridge, in particular, and his influence dominate the book too much, and Romanticism is credited with many elements which could be found in earlier writers. Thus Carlyle's ideas of criticism in the essay on Goethe, quoted as characteristic of Romanticism, could be paralleled almost word for word from a French contemporary of Voltaire's. It often appears as if a writer who does not conveniently fall into line with the pervading ideas of Romanticism is underrated by Prof. Herford or too briefly noticed for that reason. And questions of style seem often untouched. Nothing is said of Scott's, which, in spite of his undoubted pre-eminence as a novelist, was often painfully below what it ought to have been. Lamb was surely more than fourteen (p. 59) when he entered on his office work; and Byron, as he "classed himself with Scott" (p. 221), should be grouped with that poet, and not with Shelley and Keats. It is surprising to find more than two pages devoted to the pseudo-Elizabethan Beddoes, and less than one to the perfect prose of Southey. At times, as on Jane Austen and Peacock (whose verse, however, deserved some special notice), Prof. Herford writes admirably, but we doubt if his comparisons and epigrams are not often too clever to be quite suitable for the purposes of a handbook. The index and general arrangement of the volume are decidedly good.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Messrs. Chapman & Hall publish the much heralded Cecil Rhodes, by Imperialist, with personal reminiscences by Dr. Jameson, the tone of which may be judged from the fact that no less than four of the comparatively few chapters apply the phrase "a great statesman" to Mr. Rhodes. Now Mr. Rhodes is undoubtedly a strong man, and a man very capable—perhaps more capable than any one else now living—of doing certain work. But how far can it be said that he is a statesman, let alone "a great statesman"? Of the two matters in which he has been concerned which called for statesmanship, the one is at present the subject of political dispute, and will be, therefore, left aside by us. But take the other: the imperial federation (including Irish Home Rule) proposals discussed with Mr. Parnell, and never since abandoned by Mr. Rhodes! We confess that we have failed to find in those crude suggestions any trace of the qualities which are generally known as statesmanship.

M. Lavisse contributes a preface to La Politique du Sultan, a volume on the Armenian question by M. Victor Bérard, whose articles in the Revue de Paris, based on the Blue-books of our Foreign Office, have recently had a success. The book is published by M. Calmann Lévy.

Les Anglais dans la Méditerranée, 1794-1797: un Royaume Anglo-Corse, published by M. Léon Chailley, is an account, from the pen of M. Jollivet, of the expulsion of the French from Corsica, of its government by us, and of its loss. The book is not very well put together, and the author is not at home with British names, relating, for example, the intrigues of the Marquess of "Hunkley."

The Foreign Office List appears in the usual form, and still, we are happy to see, bears the name of the veteran Sir Edward Hertslet. It is published by Messrs. Harrison & Sons, and we need not remind our readers of the contents of this useful and accurate handbook to the British and foreign diplomatic services and to the British consular service.

Of their admirable "Gadshill Edition" of 'The Works of Charles Dickens' Messrs. Chapman & Hall have sent us the third instalment, containing Oliver Twist. Mr. Lang's introduction is full of common sense, and his remarks on the weaknesses of the plot are just; but then it was, it should be remembered, Dickens's first attempt of the kind, for 'Pickwick' had no plot at all. Mr. Lang's notes are scanty, and, although we have no liking for abundant annotation, he might, we think, have added one on the London of 'Oliver Twist'—Jacob's Island, for example, and Pentonville, which elderly gentlemen in comfortable circumstances no longer inhabit. Talking of Mr. Lang's notes, may we suggest that the term of endearment in chap. xxxii. of the 'Pickwick Papers,' "My Prooshan Blue," may have had its origin in Blücher's popularity with the London mob in 1814?

The nineteenth and twentieth volumes of the handsome edition of Capt. Marryat's works which Messrs. Dent are publishing contain The Mission and The Children of the New Forest. Mr. Brimley Johnson rightly remarks that 'The Mission' lacks a central interest. As he says, it has never been much in vogue. Perhaps a story of South Africa sixty years since may now find more readers.

We have received the catalogues of Mr. Baker (theological), Messrs. Bull & Auvache, Mr. Daniell (topographical engravings), Messrs. Ellis & Elvey (rare and musical books, good), Messrs. Gowans & Sons, Mr. Higham (two catalogues of theology and one general, interesting), Mr. Menken, Messrs. Rimell & Son (engravings and etchings), Mr. Waller (autographs and documents), and Messrs. Wesley & Son (botany, good). We have also the catalogues of Mr. Wilson of Birmingham, Messrs. George's Sons of Bristol (good), Messrs. Lupton Brothers of Burnley, Mr. Murray of Nottingham (good), and two catalogues from Mr. Blackwell of Oxford (classical and general books, interesting). Messrs. Baer & Co. have sent us two catalogues from Frankfort (topography and German economics), and Mr. Olschki a valuable illustrated catalogue of early printed books from Venice.

We have on our table How to Visit the Mediterranean, edited by Henry S. Lunn (Horace Marshall & Son),—The Education of Children at Rome, by G. Clarke (Macmillan),—Simple Object Lessons from Nature, by Jane B. Dickens (Philip),—The Story of the Chemical Elements, by M. M. Pattison Muir (Newnes),—The Elements of Physics, by E. L. Nichols and W. S. Franklin: Vol. II. Electricity and Magnetism (Macmillan),—The Special Kinesiology of Educational Gymnastics, by Baron Nils Posse (Gay & Bird),—Genius and Degeneration, by Dr. William Hirsch (Heinemann),—The Mystery of Handwriting, by J. H. Keene (Gay & Bird),—For Stark Love and Kindness, by N. Allan Macdonald (Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier),—Adventures of Martin Hewitt, by Arthur Morrison, Third Series (Ward & Lock),—Smirched, by A. Ingram (Digby & Long),—Songs and Rhymes and Simple Verses, by B. W. J. Trevaldwyn (Stock),—The Ethics of Temperance, by A. E. Garvie (S.S.U.),—The Four Pillars of the Home, by R. F. Horton, D.D. (Isbister),—and The Lessons of Holy Scripture, by the late Rev. J. H. Wanklyn, Vols. I. to IV. (Bemrose). Among New Editions we have Animal Magnetism, by the late W. Gregory, M.D. (Redway),—Controversial Catechism, by the Rev. S. Keenan, revised by the Rev. G. Cormack (Burns & Oates),—The Golden Gate, by the Rev. S. Baring-Gould (Skeffington),—Happy-go-Lucky, by Ismay Thorn (Innes),—Poems, by Johanna Ambrosius, translated by Mary J. Safford (Boston, U.S., Roberts Brothers),—The Strange Story of my Life, by John S. Winter (F. V. White),—and Ueber Lesen und Bildung, by A. E. Schönbach (Graz, Leuschner & Lubensky).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Augustine's Confessions, 2/6 cl. (Books for the Heart.)
Baring-Gould's (Rev. S.) The Lives of the Saints: Vol. 1, January, cr. 8vo. 5/ net, cl.
Gasquet's (Rev. F. A.) The Old English Bible, and other Essays, 8vo. 12/ net, cl.
McChesney's (L. S.) Under Shadow of the Mission, 6/ cl.
Morris's (Rev. D.) The Growth of Sacrificial Ideas connected with the Holy Eucharist, 18mo. 2/ cl.
Murphy's (Rev. E. G.) The Larger Life, Sermons and an Essay, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Robert Boyle Lectures, Vol. 1, with Preface by Sir H. W. Acland, 8vo. 6/ net, cl.
Royal Way, or the Christian's Hours of Sufferings, adapted from the German by M. F. Drew, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
St. Bartholomew's Church Tracts, by H. N. T., 2/6 cl.
Stosch's (Pastor G.) The Origin of Genesis, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Hamerton's (P. G.) The Mound, Narrative of a Visit to the Site of a Gaulish City, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

Tsountas (Dr. C.) and Manatt's (J. A.) The Mycenæan Age, 4to. 24/ cl.

Poetry.

Benecke's (E. F. M.) The Cross beneath the Ring, and other Poems, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Coleridge's (S. T.) The Raven, a Poem, with Illustrations by E. Halleward, folio, 5/ net, cl.
Green's (S. G.) Jennified, and other Verses, 12mo. 5/ cl.
Morris, Sir Lewis, Selections from the Works of, cr. 8vo. 4/6

History and Biography.

Andrews's (W.) England in the Days of Old, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Bailey's (M. B.) A New Industry, with a Sketch of Events in the Life of its Founder, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Barrère, B., Memoirs of, translated by De V. P. Payne, 4 vols. 8vo. 42/ net, cl.
Jowett, B., Life and Letters of, by E. Abbott and L. Campbell, 2 vols. 8vo. 32/ cl.
Maxwell's (Sir H.) Robert the Bruce, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl. (Heroes of the Nations.)
Rhodes, Cecil, a Biography, by Imperialist, with Personal Reminiscences by Dr. Jameson, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Wintle's (W. J.) The Story of Albert the Good, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Wood's (General Sir E.) Achievements of Cavalry, 7/6 net.

Geography and Travel.

Collins's Complete Atlas, 80 Full-page Maps, &c., folio, 6/ cl.
English Topography, ed. F. A. Milne, Part 9, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Macdonald's (Major J. R. L.) Soldiering and Surveying in British East Africa, 1891-1894, 8vo. 16/ cl.
Malleson's (Col. G. B.) The Lakes and Rivers of Austria, Bavaria, and Hungary, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

Science.

Blaine's (R. G.) Hydraulic Machinery, 8vo. 14/ cl.
Lachlan's (R.) The Elements of Algebra, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Seager's (H. W.) Natural History in Shakespeare's Time, 8/6
Stewart's (R. W.) Advanced Heat, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

General Literature.

Atherton's (G.) Patience Sparhawk and her Times, 4/6 net.
Bremner's (C. S.) Education of Girls and Women in Great Britain, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Chapman's (E. R.) Marriage Questions in Modern Fiction, and other Essays, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net.
Clarke's (I.) The Episode of Alethea, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Craig's (G. C.) The Federal Defence of Australasia, 5/ cl.
Diehl's (A. M.) A Last Throw, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Erskine's (Mrs. F. J.) Lady Cycling, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Essays in Liberalism, by Six Oxford Men, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Ferguson's (V. M.) Life Again, Love Again, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Green's (A. K.) That Affair Next Door, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Hall's (B.) Fish Tails—and some True Ones, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Henham's (E. G.) God, Man, and the Devil, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Hillis's (N. D.) A Man's Value to Society, Studies in Self-Culture and Character, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Hope's (A.) Ivan Alexandrovitch, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Hurton's (W.) The Doomed Ship, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Kidson's (E.) Allanson's Little Woman, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Lytton's Last Days of Pompeii, illus. by L. Speed, 2/6 cl.
Marryat's Poor Jack, illus. by F. Pegram, cr. 8vo. 3/6; Uniform Edition, The Mission, The Children of the New Forest, cr. 8vo. 3/6 each, net.
Moore's (F. F.) The Jessamy Bride, illus. cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Our Commerce in War, by Author of 'Our Next War,' 8vo. 3/6 net, cl.
Rabelais's (F.) Works, translated by Urquhart and Motteux, with the Notes of Duchat, 5 vols. 12/6 net, cl. in box.
Scott's Ivanhoe, illustrated by C. E. Brock, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.; Standard Edition, Vol. 17, Redgauntlet, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Sims's (G. R.) The Coachman's Club, or Tales told out of School, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Smith's (H.) Steps to the Temple of Happiness, Thirty True Moral Stories, illus. 4to. 5/ cl.
Stearn's (A.) Sindbad Smith & Co., illus. cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Street's (J. C.) The Hidden Way across the Threshold, royal 8vo. 15/ net, cl.
Swan's (A. S.) Mrs. Keith Hamilton, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Thomas's (A.) Essentially Human, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Upward's (A.) Secrets of the Courts of Europe, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Who's Who, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net, cl.
Willdey's (C. J.) The Book of Humbug, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Yonge's (C. M.) The Pilgrimage of the Ben Beriah, 6/ cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Cornely (R.): Commentarius in S. Pauli Apostoli Epistolas: Epistola ad Romanos, 11m. 20.
Wernle (P.): Der Christ u. die Sünde bei Paulus, 2m. 50.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Chatelain (É.): Paléographie des Classiques Latins, Part 12, 15fr.
Grand-Carteret (J.): La Crète devant l'Image, 2fr.
Heitz (P.): Der Initialschmuck in den elsässischen Drucken des XV. u. XVI. Jahrh., Part 2, 6m.
Palliot (P.): La Vraie et Parfaite Science des Armoiries, 120fr.
Reinach (S.): Clarac de Poche, 5fr.

Poetry and the Drama.

Dollfus (L.): Romancero de Roncevaux, 3fr.

Bibliography.

Aus der Ex-Libris-Sammlung der Bibliothek des Börsenvereins der deutschen Buchhändler, 18m.
Dressel (A.) u. Hilbert (A.): Vollständiges Bücher-Lexicon, Sach- u. Schlagwortregister zum 27 u. 28 Bde., Vol. 2, Part 2, 5m.
Schmidt (C.): Répertoire Bibliographique Strasbourgeois jusque vers 1530: Part 8, Matthias Schürer, 1508-1520, 15m.

Philosophy.

Bülow (G.): Des Dominicus Gundissalinus Schrift v. der Unsterblichkeit der Seele, 5m.
Picavet (F.): Gerbert, un Pape Philosophe, 6fr.

Political Economy.

Vignes (J. B. M.): La Science Sociale, 2 vols. 16fr.

History and Biography.

Altmann (W.): Regesta Imperii XI.: Die Urkunden Kaiser Sigmunds, Vol. 1, Part 2, 11m. 20.
Goron: Mémoires, Part 1, 3fr. 50.
Lemaitre (E.): Arsène Houssaye, 12fr.

Geography and Travel.

Daubeil (J.): Notes et Impressions sur la Tunisie, 4fr.
Jara (S.) (Kalvun): Araukanische Märchen u. Erzählungen, 2m. 50.

Philology.

Corpus Inscriptionum Atticarum: Appendix, Defixionum Tabellæ Atticæ, ed. R. Wuensch, 9m.
Prosopographia Imperii Romani Sæc. I. II. III., Part 1, ed. E. Klebs, 24m.; Part 2, ed. H. Dessau, 20m.
Reitzenstein (R.): Geschichte der griechischen Etymologika, 18m.
Vliet (J. van der): Lucii Apulei Metamorphoseon Libri XI., 3m.

Science.

Krafft-Ebing (R. v.): Arbeiten aus dem Gesammtgebiet der Psychiatrie u. Neuropathologie, Part 1, 4m. 50.

General Literature.

Alexis (P.): La Comtesse, 3fr. 50.
Annuaire de la Noblesse de France, 1897, 10fr.
Claretie (J.): La Vie à Paris, 1896, 3fr. 50.
Daniel (A.): L'Année Politique, 1896, 3fr. 50.
Drumont (É.): Mon Vieux Paris, Series 2, 3fr. 50.
Franklin (A.): La Vie de Paris sous la Régence, 3fr. 50.
Kist (H.): La Confession d'un Autre Enfant du Siècle, 3fr. 50.
Lermina (J.): Le Fils de Monte-Cristo, 3 vols. 7fr. 50.
Lesueur (D.): Invincible Charme, 3fr. 50.
Rossel (V.): Histoire de la Littérature Française hors de France, 8fr.
Scheffer (R.): Le Prince Narcisse, 3fr. 50.

'THE CENTENARY BURNS.

1. In common with everybody (excepting the late Mr. Lowell), we have the greatest possible respect for Dunbar; and had we been talking merely of "the old Scottish world" before Scotland was devastated by the Reformation and the Covenant, we should not have thought of ignoring his claim to pre-eminence, though we should certainly have coupled his name with that of Robert Henryson. But, our expression being something inexact, we are content to accept your critic's very mild reproof.

2. Again, we are in no wise disposed to take exception to your critic's attitude towards us in the matter of Highland Mary. But we should like to make a little explanation. What we have "subjected to depreciatory criticism as 'a figment of the general brain'" is, not Mary Campbell, but "the Mary Campbell of tradition." Further, we have not endeavoured to identify her with a "Mary Campbell of indifferent repute," &c. Our sole contention would be that if you will positively have a Mary Campbell of whom "anything definite is known," you cannot choose but take the indifferently reputed one. As for "vindicating" Highland Mary, in the sense of proving that she was not this particular ill-famed Mary Campbell, that were but to touch the fringe of the subject. Moreover, the more powerfully you "vindicate" your Highland Mary, the more feeble must your "vindication" be of Burns. Indeed, if you make a kind of "bare-legged Beatrice" of her, you make any "vindication" of him impossible; for the more thoroughly you sift such facts as are available, the less you can believe him inculpable. And this brings us to our "faint praise" of "Thou Ling'ring Star." The reputation of that song—mannered, inexpressive, laced with expletives—is, as we believe, a pure effect of the "bare-legged Beatrice" theory of Mary Campbell. Unless that theory be discarded, our opinion will not so much as win a hearing. But once that theory is discarded—and we rejoice to note that your critic has advanced thus far on the way to grace—our conclusions are, as we deem, inevitable. The song itself, as we read it, is no expression of grief for the death of Beatrice, bare-legged or other, but an expression of grief which is very intimately and copiously tinctured with remorse.

3. Your critic is vastly mistaken in supposing that we lay any claim to any sort of originality for our translation of "lyart" in 'The Jolly Beggars,' for it is identical with that in the larger and later Jamieson. Your critic is the innovator here—not we; and it is with a certain satisfaction that we have appropriated his "subrident joy." His derivation is hopelessly wrong, and is given in the teeth of all possible authorities, whether Scots or English; while the translation "wan" not only does violence to the theory of origin which is universally recognized, but is in flat contradiction to all such examples of the use of the word as are known.

4. As regards M'Pherson, has not your critic reposed too guileless a confidence in 'The Gazetteer of Scotland' and 'In Gipsy Tents'? M'Pherson, though a kind of cateran, was apprehended as "an Egyptian and a vagabond"—he was, in fact, a half-breed who had left his father's kin to harbour in the tents of that mother's despised and hated race, which was his; he was hanged at Banff, which is not a characteristically Highland town; it is impossible to suppose that any special indulgence would be granted to an "Egyptian"; as matter of fact, this particular Egyptian was known for such a desperado that before his execution the gaol in which he was lodged was guarded by a posse of nine men and a captain; it would have been tempting Providence to give him a fiddle—there is never a word of one in the original ballad—which he would certainly have broken, not "over his knee," but on the heads of his escort. Further, even had M'Pherson been a Highland gentleman, and not a base-born gipsy, we should not have credited the legend. "Lastly and to conclude," his story is proved a myth in Cramond's 'Annals of Banffshire,' an authority which, inexplicably enough, has been quoted in its support.

W. E. Henley,
T. F. Henderson,
Editors of 'The Centenary Burns.'

TWO PROTHALAMIA.

On a summer day in 1896, toiling wearily—in a vain search for a piece of local history—through the pages of Hearne's edition of 'Leland's Itinerary,' my attention was suddenly arrested by the appearance of a poem entitled 'A Tale of Two Swannes,' for it was about the last book in the world in which one would have expected to find anything in the nature of poetry, much less such lines as these:—

No sooner was this message knowne abroad,
But there resorted to their being place
Such troupes of milke-white Swannes, as well beseem'd
The royall state of two such Princes great.
Among which troupes the King and Queen made choise
Of fortie Swannes of high and royall bloud,
For to attend upon their Majesties.
Then looke how Cynthia with her silver rayes
Exceedes the brightnesse of the lesser starres,
When in her chiefest pompe she hasteth downe
To steale a kisse from drousie Endymion:
So doe these princes farre excell in state
The Swannes that breede within Europa's boundes.

In a moment the words of Spenser's 'Prothalamion' rushed into my mind, each stanza of which ends always with the same refrain:—

Sweet Themmes! runne softly, till I end my song.

The first consideration was how a poem of this description should be found embedded in Leland's work at all. The explanation was at once apparent. Hearne had found the poem accidentally (he describes the circumstances in the preface to vol. v. of his book) in the chambers of a student in the Temple, and inasmuch as it contained valuable information relative to a number of places and towns in Hertfordshire (amongst them Verolane, Whethamsted, "so called of the corne," Bishop's Hatfield, Alwine, the river Bene and Beneghoo, &c.) he inserted it, as he was accustomed to do other extraneous matter that had a bearing on archæology, in the midst of Leland's work. Of its merits as a poem he says nothing, and possibly they never occurred to him at all.

Further examination of the 'Tale of Two Swannes'—the only existing print of which is, as appears, now to be found in vol. v. p. viii of Hearne's edition of the 'Itinerary'—and a close comparison of it with the 'Prothalamion' have resulted in the formation of an opinion that we are indebted to the 'Tale of Two Swannes' for the fine poem of the 'Prothalamion'—that if the 'Tale of Two Swannes' had not first been written the 'Prothalamion' would never have appeared at all.

It is strange that not one of the many commentators on Spenser's work—not even Warton, who had both Vallans's and Spenser's work before him when writing the 'History of English Poetry'—should have noticed the indebtedness of Spenser to Vallans for the plan and scheme of his poem, for some of its finest passages, and in some cases its words.

In the 'Prothalamion'—an allegorical poem—is described the triumphal progress down the river Lee, and then the Thames, of the two Ladies Somerset, and their reception at the stairs of their father's palace next the Temple. The ladies are pictured to us in the story in allegorical form as two swans.

In the year 1590 (six years before the date of the 'Prothalamion') there was printed at London another "Prothalamion," entitled 'A Tale of Two Swannes,' by W. Vallans, intended to celebrate (in the form of an allegory) the marriage of the two rivers—the Thames and the Lee. Writing of this poem as late as the year 1711, Hearne says of it (as his reason for printing it at full length):—

"'Twas printed at London (in three sheets in quarto) by Roger Ward for John Sheldrake, in the year 1590, but 'tis so great a rarity that I had scarce so much as heard of it till of late, when 'twas sent to me out of the well-furnished study of Thomas Rawlinson of the Middle Temple, Esq.; who gave me leave (if I thought proper) to reprint it. I shall therefore here prefix it to this volume."

So the poem appears first to have become known even to so great an antiquary as Thomas Hearne by its discovery in Mr. Rawlinson's "well-furnished study in the Temple" as late as about 1711.

Yet Spenser must have read the poem, and read it much and known it well — a startling illustration of the strange irony of fate that the one poem should remain one of the finest in the English language, and that the other, to which it owes its existence, should be practically unknown. For to see it even now it must be searched for in the midst of the 'Itinerary,' buried there as in a grave.

In the 'Tale of Two Swannes' the heroines (if one may so call them) are two cygnets who, at the command of Venus, were fetched surreptitiously by Mercury from Cayster—"a river in Boëtia, where the fairest and largest swans do breed"—and they were brought by Mercury to Venus, who was reclining on the banks of the river Lee at a town in Hertfordshire, Ware:—

Where Venus, like the goddesse of great Love,
Sate lovely, by the running river's side
Tuning her lute unto the water's fall.
* * * * *
The present come, she layeth down her lute
And takes these Cignets of so great esteeme,
Throwing them both into the River Lee.

Then, at the request of Venus, Jove ordained that the cygnets should be the king and queen of the river, and that "all the swannes—yea, the verie Thames"—should be replenished for ever by their princely race. This was, according to the story, the origin of all the English swans. From them were descended all the swans that live in Severn, Humber, and the Trent—"the chiefest floods that water English ground." And three times, the poem tells us, did Venus use them to draw her ivory chariot through the air.

Next the poet describes the assembling of the swans for the purpose of the procession down the river, and thus the story is told:—

Now as these Swannes began to waxen old,
As time outwears eche creature that doth live:
It pleased them to send throughout their realme
For all their subjects of the highest bloud:
With full intent to make a progresse cleane
Throughout their land to see the bounde thereof,
And ev'ry brook that harbours anie Swans
With all the Isles that unto them belong.
* * * * *
No sooner was this message knowne abroad,
But there resorted to their being place
Such troupes of milke-white Swannes, as well beseem'd
The royall state of two such Princes great.

Then there is the beautiful passage already referred to, that as Cynthia, the moon, excels the stars in brightness, so did these princes far excel in state all other swans that dwelt within Europa's bounds.

And so assembled the swans repaired together to the river-head

Whence Lee doth spring not far from Kempton Town.

And thence they passed in state down the river. There is not in the 'Tale of Two Swannes' any such picturesque procession of water nymphs and birds (except, of course, the procession of the swans) as is contained in the 'Prothalamion,' but, in place of this, charming descriptions are given of the various towns and places that are passed by the procession. To select a few out of many:—

By Bishop's Hatfield then they came along,
Seated not far from ancient Verolane,
His City, that first spent his blessed life,
In just maintaining of our Christian faith.

These lines refer, of course, not to the great Sir Francis Bacon, Lord Verulam, who, at the time this poem was written, was not thirty years of age and but beginning his career, but, as Vallans tells us in his note, to Albon, Lord of Verolane, martyred in the time of the Emperor Diocletian, the first Christian martyr of this land. The abbey of St. Albans was built in his honour by King Offa about 793.

Next Welwyn is thus described:—

And then to Welwyn, passing well beknown
And noted for a worthy stratagem;
I meane the Danes, who on S. Bryce's night
Were stoutly murdered by their women foes.

At the town of Ware the swans were received in wonderment by the people, and one of them addressed his fellows thus in a speech:—

Among the which a man whose silver hairs
Seemed to excel the whiteness of the rest
Bespake them thus—
"Long have I lived, and by this bridge was born,
Yet never saw I such a company
So well beseen, so ordered, and so fair.
Nay (as I think) the age that is by-past,
Nor yet the same that after shall ensue
Never beheld, nor looked upon the like."
The people listened to this aged man
As one they loved and held in reverence.

Hatfield is then passed:—

Now see these Swans the new and worthy seat
Of famous Cecil, Treasurer of the land,
Whose wisdom, counsel, skill of Prince's state
The world admires.

Then a description is given of the locks in the river at Waltham Abbey, probably among the first locks constructed in the country:—

—— A rare device they see,
But newly made, a water work: the locke
Through which the boats of Ware do pass with malt.
This lock contains two double doors of wood,
Within the same a cistern all of plank,
Which only fills when boats come there to passe
By opening of these mighty doors with sleight
And strange device, but now decayed sore.

From Enfield:—

From hence by Hackney, Leyton, and Old Ford
They come to Stratford, called also the Bowe.

At last they came into the mouth of river Lee, and here, we are told, the whole surface of the river and the fields alike were covered by swans. And then

A Swan of Thames invites the King and Queen
Upon a day prefixt, to see and celebrate
The marriage of two rivers of great name.
Which granted every one departs his way,
The King and Queen again into their Lee.

And so the tale ends with the marriage of the rivers, as ends the 'Prothalamion' with the marriage of the bridegrooms and the brides.

It now remains only to submit comparisons of a few passages in the 'Prothalamion' with corresponding passages in the 'Tale of Two Swannes,' to show the indebtedness of the 'Prothalamion' to the earlier poem.

In the beautiful passage in the 'Tale of Two Swannes' where the king and queen of the river are said to excel all other swans in beauty as doth the moon the stars, Vallans writes thus:—

Then looke how Cynthia with her silver rayes
Exceedes the brightnesse of the lesser starres,
When in her chiefest pompe she hasteth downe
To steale a kisse from drousie Endymion:
So doe these princes farre excell in state
The Swannes that breede within Europa's boundes.

Spenser must have had these lines before him when he wrote:—

And all the fowl which in his flood did dwell
Gan flock about these twaine, that did excel
The rest, so far as Cynthia doth shend
The lesser starres.

It is probable that for the beauty of the poetry some may even prefer to Spenser's the passage that has just been quoted from Vallans's poem.

Then the commencement of the procession of the swans down the river is described in the 'Prothalamion' very much as it had been in the earlier poem. Thus in Vallans:—

And in this pomp they hie them to the head
Whence Lee doth spring, not far from Kempton Towne
And swiftly coming down through Brook Hall Park, &c.

In Spenser:—

With that I saw two Swans of goodly hue
Come softly swimming down along the Lee.

Again:—

So forth these joyous birds did pass along
Adown the Lee—that to them murmur'd low.

In a very fine passage in Vallans's poem the beauty of the country on a May day and the flowers of the field are thus pictured to us:—

When Nature, nurse of every living thing,
Had clad her charge in brave and new array;
The hills rejoiced to see themselves so fine:
The fields and woods grew proud thereof also:
The meadows with their partie-colour'd coats,
Like to the rainbow in the azur'd sky,
Gave just occasion to the cheerful birds,
With sweetest note, to sing their nurse's praise:
Among the which, the merrie nightingale
With swete—and swete—(her breast again a thorn)
Rings out all night the never ceasing lauds
Of God, the Author of her nurse and all.

In the 'Prothalamion' the river banks are described as —— painted all with variable flowers

And all the meads adorned with dainty gems.

But little distinction can be made between meadows with "partie-colour'd coats" and river banks painted with "variable flowers" and "meads adorned with dainty gems."

The word "nurse"—not a very usual one in poetry—thrice used by Vallans in the passage that has just been quoted, and the word "merry" in the same passage—also not a very usual word in poetry—are both adopted by Spenser in the same passage of his own poem. Thus:—

At length they all to merry London came,
To merry London, my most kindly nurse.

Then those beautiful lines in the opening of Vallans's poem that have just been quoted may be compared with the opening lines of the 'Prothalamion,' and in feeling they are the same:—

Calme was the day, and through the trembling ayre
Sweete breathing Zephyrus did softly play,
A gentle spirit, that lightly did delay
Hot Titan's beams, which then did glyster faire.

Again:—

In sweetest season, when each flower and weed
The earth did fresh array.

Then in Vallans's poem the swans are used by Venus to draw her chariot through the sky:

Three times had Venus used them for to draw
Her ivory chariot through the lofty air.

Spenser repeats this in the 'Prothalamion thus:—

Them seem'd they never saw a sight so fayre
Of fowles, so lovely that they sure did deeme
Them heavenly borne, or to be that same payre
Which through the skie draw Venus silver teeme.

In both poems one finds very similar references to the Queen. Thus in Vallans's poem:—

By her the only mirror of the World
Our gracious Queen and Prince Elizabeth.

In the 'Prothalamion':—

And great Elisaes glorious name may ring
Through all the World.

One more comparison will, perhaps, suffice. In Vallans's poem the swans are likened to a covering of the world by snow, thus:—

At last
They come unto the mouth of River Lee,
Where all the Swans of that part of the Thames
Attend to see this royal companie:
So that from Woolwich to Blackwall was seen
Nor water, nor the meadows thereabout.
For look how in a frostie night or day,
When snow hath fallen thick upon the ground,
Each gazing eye is dazzled with the sight,
So Lillie-white was land and strand beseen
With these faire Swans.

In the 'Prothalamion' also the swans are compared to the snow that envelopes Mount Pindus, thus:—

Two fairer birds I yet did never see:
The snow which doth the top of Pindus strew
Did never whiter show,
Nor Jove himself when he a swan would be

For love of Leda whiter did appear,
Yet Leda was (they say) as white as he,
Yet not so white as these, nor nothing near
So purely white they were.

There can be no question as to the date of the two poems. That the 'Tale of Two Swannes' was published in 1590, and written earlier, is quite clear from the documents that are printed with it by Hearne in the fifth volume of his book. It is besides stated to be of that date in Warton's 'History of English Poetry,' section xxii. That the 'Prothalamion' was not published till 1596 is well known. Besides, the 'Prothalamion' itself fixes its date as not being any earlier than 1595, thus:—

When I, whom sullen care
Through discontent of my long fruitless stay
In Princes Court, and expectation vain
Of idle hopes, which still do fly away
Like empty shadows, did afflict my brain
Walk'd forth to ease my pain
Along the shore of silver streaming Themmes.

It was in 1595 that Spenser returned, in a discontented and disappointed condition, to London from Ireland, where the greater part of his life had been spent, and where his home, "my house of Kilcolman," was—hence the reference in the poem to his walk on the banks of the Thames, which must presumably have been after he returned to and settled finally in London in 1595.

It will be seen from these comparisons, and will be more and more evident on a close comparison of the two poems, that as far as plan is concerned the 'Prothalamion' is derived from the 'Tale of Two Swannes,' and that to a great extent the former poem is indebted to the latter for some of its finest passages and even for the wonderful beauty of its words.

The name Spenser has not taken, but even in this respect he but makes a distinction without a difference, for in truth the poems are both prothalamia, both are tales of two swans: the one the prelude or prologue, so to speak, to the double marriage of the beautiful daughters of the Earl of Worcester, the other a prologue to the marriage of the two beautiful rivers, the Thames and the Lee.

Instances many and often occur to one of the practice of the great writers of the sixteenth century of appropriating without permission the work of other writers who had gone before them or who were of their time. Shakspeare frequently did this. Even the chivalrous Earl of Surrey did not hesitate, in his translation of the Æneid, to appropriate whole pages of the earlier work of Gavain Douglas, the famous Bishop of Dunkeld. But in truth it was no wrong that the old writers were guilty of in imitating or borrowing from the work of others, but rather a mark of homage or respect in times when that which had once been written and given to the world was thought to be as much public property as are now the flowers of the fields and the hedgerows—the sands on the seashore. And so it happens that England is richer, and the world the richer, by the possession of the 'Prothalamion.' The misfortune is that for more than three hundred years the 'Tale of Two Swannes,' that should have gone with it, has been hidden away and lost; the earlier poem is as remarkable for its learning, its rich conceit, and the beauty and dignity of its language, as is the later for its exquisite form and picturesqueness, and for the soft, continued, whispered stream of melody that flows with it throughout.

The 'Prothalamion' has no rival, later or earlier, or of its day, says Prof. Palgrave. It has fine and beautiful passages, and great sweetness and force; and Spenser's wedding hymn, the 'Epithalamion,' is one of the richest and most magnificent compositions of the kind in any language in the opinion of the late Dean Church. It was a fortunate thing then, and for the public good, that Spenser should have taken what was not his own from Vallans. Equally for the public good is it that this poem of Vallans should now be disinterred from its grave.

In the days of the Renaissance, in Spenser's time and that of Vallans, it was the custom for the friends and admirers of a poet (his fellow workmen) to preface or endorse his work by commendatory verses of their own. And of these, and crowns of laurel, and the bay leaves, and the palm, Spenser has had enough; Vallans, with a single but very pretty and quaint exception that has been bound up by Hearne with the 'Tale of Two Swannes,' absolutely none. And now the leaves are long since withered that should have been accorded to Vallans, and they who should have written the commendatory verses are—with the leaves.

Yet it cannot be even yet too late to accord to Vallans in some manner the recognition his beautiful poem is entitled to at the hands of his countrymen, and whilst adding it—as it is to be hoped it will now be added—to the pages of English literature in a form that is accessible to all (for to many or most Leland's great work is a book that is quite inaccessible), let there be placed with it, in remembrance of the gift and of the tardiness of its acknowledgment, this motto, "Palmam qui meruit ferat."

Wickham Flower.

SALE.

On Wednesday, the 10th inst.—the same day on which were sold the Keats MSS., to which we referred last week—Messrs. Sotheby sold the following books: Barclay's Ship of Fools, Cawood, 1570, 27*l.* Early Tracts on Turkey, 13*l.* 10*s.* Beaumont and Fletcher, first (collected) edition, 10*l.* Latin Vulgate, XIV. Sæc., MS., 40*l.* Cronycles of Englonde, Notary's edition, 1515, 29*l.* 10*s.* Froissart's Chronicles, Myddylton and Pynson, 1525, 35*l.* Higden's Polychronicon, W. de Worde, 1495 (with all faults), 46*l.* 10*s.* Pierce Egan's Real Life in Ireland, original boards, 1821, 27*l.* Goldsmith's Vicar of Wakefield, first edition, 1766, 60*l.* Horæ on vellum, French MS. with miniatures, 31*l.* 10*s.* Indian MS., Sæc. XVIII., 19*l.* 10*s.* Daphnis et Chloé, with the Regent's plates, 35*l.* 10*s.* Amours de Faublas, 1798, proofs before letters of the plates, 31*l.* George Meredith's Poems, original edition, 17*l.* 10*s.* Milton's Poems, 1645, 24*l.* 10*s.* Officium B.V.M., illuminated Italian MS., Sæc. XV., 132*l.* Card. de Luxemburg, Le Livre de Clergie, Paris, J. Treperel, n.d., 16*l.* 5*s.* Thackeray, unpublished autograph poem of two verses, 1826, 14*l.*; The Fox and the Cat, an Irish fable by the same, with MS. alterations by him, 45*l.* Thos. Bancroft's Two Bookes of Epigrams, &c., 1639, uncut, 42*l.* Coryat's Crudities, 1611, 21*l.* Henry VIII.'s Necessary Doctrine, 1543, 16*l.* 10*s.* Rousseau, Œuvres, 3 vols., bound by Padeloup, Brux., 1743, 37*l.* Navigation du Roy Jacques V., 1583, 39*l.* Spenser's Complaints, 1591, 29*l.* Mallermi's Italian Bible, 1490, 245*l.*

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

Among the books in active preparation at the Clarendon Press are: Fasc. V. (completing Part I.) of the Bishop of Salisbury's edition of St. Jerome's version of the New Testament,—Part I. of Mr. Gwilliam's edition of 'The Peshitto Version of the Gospels,'—Mr. Horner's edition of 'The Memphitic Version of the Gospels,'—Mr. Cowley's 'Samaritan Liturgies,'—Mr. Turner's 'Latin Versions of the Canons of the Greek Councils of the Fourth and Fifth Centuries,'—'Sancti Irenæi Novum Testamentum,' edited by Prof. Sanday,—'The Key of Truth: a Paulician Ritual and Catechism,' edited and translated by Mr. F. C. Conybeare,—'Legenda Angliæ,' edited by Dr. Horstman,—Part III. of the 'Old Testament History for Schools,' by Dr. Stokoe,—Vols. III. and IV. of 'The Politics of Aristotle' (completing the work), edited by Mr. Newman,—'Sources for Greek History between the Persian and Peloponnesian Wars,' edited by Mr. G. F. Hill,—'Indices to Andocides, Lycurgus, and Dinarchus,' by Dr. L. L. Forman,—'Horace,' a miniature text, edited by Dr. Wickham,—Ovid's 'Heroides,' edited by Dr. A. Palmer,—Cæsar's 'Gallic War,' edited by Mr. St. George Stock,—Fasc. X. of Payne Smith's 'Thesaurus Syriacus,'—Part II. of 'An Abridged Syriac Lexicon,' by Mrs. Margoliouth,—Part VI. of the new edition of Gesenius,—Part II. of Prof. Ethé's 'Catalogue of the Turkish, Hindústání, and Pushtû MSS. in the Bodleian,'—Dr. Baronian's 'Catalogue of the Armenian MSS.,'—'Johnsonian Miscellanies,' edited by Dr. Birkbeck Hill,—Vol. IV. of Mr. Madan's 'Catalogue of Bodleian MSS.,'—'The Church of St. Mary the Virgin, Oxford,' with illustrations, by Mr. T. G. Jackson,—'Ætolia,' by Mr. Woodhouse,—'A Catalogue of the Antiquities in the Cyprus Museum,' by Mr. Myres and Dr. Ohnefalsch Richter,—Vol. II. of Mr. Payne's 'History of America,'—Vols. I. and II. of Mr. Airy's edition of Burnet's 'History of my Own Time,'—Aubrey's 'Brief Lives,' edited by Mr. A. Clark,—'Selections from the Whitefoord Papers,' edited by Mr. Hewins,—'The Landnáma-Bóc,' edited by Vigfússon and Mr. York Powell,—Vols. VII. and VIII. of Thorold Rogers's 'History of Agriculture and Prices,'—'Manners, Institutions, and Ceremonies of the Hindus,' by the Abbé J. A. Dubois, translated by Mr. Beauchamp,—Part II. of Mr. Macray's 'Catalogue of the Rawlinson MSS. (D) in the Bodleian Library,'—Part VI. of the 'Historical Atlas of Modern Europe, from the Decline of the Roman Empire,' edited by Mr. R. L. Poole,—Part IV. Sect. II. of 'Bosworth's Anglo-Saxon Dictionary,'—further portions of D and of F in the 'New English Dictionary,'—'King Horn,' edited by Mr. J. Hall,—'Chaucerian and other Pieces,' edited by Prof. Skeat,—'Part I. of King Henry the Fourth,' edited by Dr. Aldis Wright,—the 'Opus Majus' of Roger Bacon, edited by Dr. Bridges,—'The Flora of Berkshire,' by Mr. G. C. Druce,—and in "Sacred Books of the East," 'The Satapatha-Brâhmana,' translated by Mr. J. Eggeling, Part III.; and 'The Contents of the Nasks,' Part II., by Mr. E. W. West.

Messrs. Dent include in their spring announcements 'The Crown of St. Awdry: a Handbook to Ely Cathedral,' by the Dean of Ely,—'The First Crossing of Spitsbergen,' by Sir Martin Conway,—'Picturesque Burma,' by Mrs. Ernest Hart,—'Richard Wagner,' by H. S. Chamberlain,—'Of Dandyism and of George Brummell,' translated from J. A. Barbey d'Aurevilly by Mr. D. Ainslie,—'Tales from the Isles of Greece: Sketches of Modern Greek Peasant Life,' from the Greek of Argyris Ephtaliotis, translated by Mr. W. H. D. Rouse,—'Jinny Blake,' a novel by Miss Hannah Lynch,—"The Ethics of the Surface Series": No. 2, 'A Homburg Story,' by Gordon Seymour,—'The Master Beggars: a Romance,' by Mr. L. Cope Cornford,—a translation of Prof. Legouis's 'Early Life of William Wordsworth: 1770–1798,' by Mr. J. W. Matthews,—'Bon Mots of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Century,' selected and edited by Mr. W. Jerrold, illustrated with grotesques by Alice B. Woodward,—'Shakespeare's London,' by Mr. Fairman Ordish, illustrated with pen-and-ink sketches and a map of old London ("Temple Shakespeare Manuals"),—'The Lyric Poems of Beaumont and Fletcher,' edited by Mr. Rhys ("Lyric Poets Series"),—'Grains of Sense,' by Lady Welby,—in the "Temple Classics Series," Malory's 'Morte Darthur,' 4 vols.; Florio's 'Montaigne,' 6 vols.; Carlyle's 'French Revolution,' 3 vols.; Chapman's 'Homer's Odyssey,' 2 vols.; and Boswell's 'Johnson,' 6 vols.,—in the "Temple Dramatists Series," 'Doctor Faustus'; 'Woman Killed with Kindness'; 'The Merry Devil of Edmonton'; 'The Two Noble Kinsmen'; and 'Philaster,'—'The School for Scandal,' edited by Mr. Aitken,—and several new volumes of the translation of Balzac's "Comédie Humaine": 'The Lily of the Valley'; 'Lost Illusions'; 'A Distinguished Provincial at Paris'; and 'Seraphita.'

Messrs. Digby, Long & Co.'s spring announcements include 'Francesca Halstead,' by Reginald St. Barbe,—'In the Name of Liberty,' by Miss Florence Marryat,—'A Last Throw,' by Mrs. A. M. Diehl,—'The Kestyns of Cather Castle,' by R. F. Eldridge,—'Ballyronan,' by R. Alexander,—'My Yarns of Sea-Foam and Gold-Dust,' by Capt. Chas. Clark,—'Fate's Fetters,' by Jean de la Brète, translated by Mrs. F. Hoper-Dixon,—'Dinner for Thirteen,' by John Bridge,—'A Troth of Tears,' by C. A. Mendham,—'Major Carlile,' by Hattil Foll,—'Sybil Fairleigh,' by S. E. Hall,—'A Lady's Confessions,' by T. Molyneux,—'A Short Innings, a New Story of Public School Life,' by Tivoli,—'Circumstantial Evidence,' by J. H. Swingler,—'Pro Patria,' by Mrs. Castle-Leaver, illustrated,—'The Devil's Daughter,' by Val. Nightingale,—'Small Concerns,' by Frances England,—cheap editions of various other novels,—'The Birds of our Country,' by Mr. H. E. Stewart, with illustrations by various artists,—'Is Natural Selection the Creator of Species?' by Mr. D. Graham,—'Glimpses of Life in Bermuda and the Tropics,' by Margaret Newton, with illustrations by the author,—'The Story of Jephthah, and other Poems,' by Mr. W. Thead,—'Word Sketches in Windsor,' by Mr. A. Buckler,—'The Magic Key,' a fairy drama in four acts, by Mr. I. Willcocks,—and 'Odds and Ends,' by an Odd Fellow.

ST. PATRICK.

Bardwell, Bury St. Edmunds, March 16, 1897.

Mr. Olden does not notice that in a note in tom. ii. p. 346 Mr. Plummer goes some way to retract his scepticism on p. 25 as to the existence of St. Patrick.

If Mr. Plummer replies, it would be kind if he would say how he disposes of the evidence contained in the hymn in praise of St. Patrick, usually known as the 'Hymn of St. Sechnall,' of which a seventh century copy exists in the Antiphonary of Bangor. He does not, I think, refer to it in his edition of Bede.

F. E. Warren.

Literary Gossip.

Mr. S. R. Gardiner is preparing a reply to Father Gerard's monograph on the Gunpowder Plot which will blow that ingenious Jesuit's theory to atoms. Mr. Gardiner's title is 'What the Gunpowder Plot Was.'

In the April number of Macmillan's Magazine will be published the narrative of a journey from Hebron to Petra by the late Edward Lear, made at a time when travelling in Palestine was by no means the safe and easy affair it has now become. The number will also include an article on the Prince of Wales's Hospital Fund, by Mr. C. S. Loch, secretary to the Charity Organization Society, and one on the famine in India, by Col. Trevor, C.S.I., late Agent to the Governor-General in Rajputana.

A volume of 'New Poems,' by Mr. Francis Thompson, will be issued this spring by Messrs. Constable & Co. The contents will be more numerous and more varied than they were in the same author's first volume of 'Poems,' now in its fifth edition. The volume has five sections, entitled 'Sight and Insight,' 'A Narrow Vessel,' 'Miscellaneous Odes,' 'Miscellaneous Poems,' and 'Ultima.' The dedication to Mr. Coventry Patmore was written before that poet's death; but Mr. Thompson has decided that it shall stand.

Messrs. Macmillan & Co. will shortly publish a volume on 'The Christian Ecclesia,' consisting of a course of lectures and four sermons by the late Prof. Hort. The lectures contain a careful survey of the evidence to be derived from the literature of the apostolic age for the solution of a fundamental problem. The title "Ecclesia" was chosen expressly for its freedom from the distracting associations which have gathered round its more familiar synonyms, and is in itself sufficient indication of the spirit of genuine historical inquiry in which the study was undertaken. The sermons to some extent supply the gap in the original scheme, which the writer did not live to complete, dealing from different points of view with the early conceptions of the Ecclesia.

Mr. Austin Dobson has written a poem of some length, which will be read at the Omar Khayyám Club on the occasion of its dinner (when Lord Wolseley will be the guest of the club) next Thursday. Mr. Dobson's poem will be issued immediately afterwards, in pamphlet form, in a strictly limited edition.

To the April number of the Cornhill Magazine Sir Walter Besant contributes a vigorous appeal for the establishment of a day of celebration which is designed to focus the sentiment of the Anglo-Saxon race, the day suggested being the anniversary of Shakspeare's birth and death, April 23rd; Mr. Leslie Stephen gives an elaborate account of the causes which led to Sir Walter Scott's financial failure; and Mr. C. J. Cornish discourses on the cost of great country houses à propos of Lord Carrington's recent speech upon the subject.

Mr. J. A. Blaikie, who has acted as assistant-editor of the British Review since that journal was established, will cease to have any connexion whatever with the National Observer and British Review after the 10th of April next.

Mr. A. P. Graves writes:—

"Your readers will be interested to learn that a grant of 150*l.* has been made by the Treasury out of the Royal Bounty Fund to Mrs. Fox and Mrs. Brush, the two surviving daughters of William Carleton, the Irish novelist. These ladies desire to express through your columns their sincere thanks to the Irish men of letters who supported the memorial thus favourably dealt with by Mr. Arthur Balfour."

The annual meeting of the Selden Society will be held in the Council Room, Lincoln's Inn Hall, on Wednesday next. Lord Herschell will preside. The number of the society's members has increased during 1896 to 256, from 223 for 1895. Volume X. of the publications, 'Select Cases in Chancery, A.D. 1364–1841,' edited by Mr. W. P. Baildon, representing the issue for 1896, has now been published. Volume XI., for 1897, will form a second volume of 'Select Pleas in the Court of Admiralty,' edited, as the first volume, by Mr. R. G. Marsden. It is nearly through the press. Volume XII., for 1898, will be a volume on the Courts of Request by Mr. I. S. Leadam. This is almost ready for press. The Council has had before it a proposal to reprint the year-books of the reign of Edward II. The project would in no way conflict with the plan laid down by the Government for the publication in the Rolls Series of year-books which have never yet been printed, for the proposal is to produce a standard specimen reprint of some of those year-books already published, of which the text is known to be inaccurate and misleading. A revised and collated text, a sufficient reference to the records to elucidate the arguments and judgments, and a careful translation are the chief things aimed at. It is calculated that the year-books of Edward II. so treated would require from seven to ten volumes, and they might be published every second or third year, while the intervening years might still be occupied with such varied subjects as have been hitherto undertaken; or the year-books might be published occasionally, as funds will allow, as additional volumes. It is proposed to make the offices of president and vice-president triennial, as is the case with membership of the Council.

Abbot Bergh, of St. Augustine's Benedictine monastery at Ramsgate, is about to issue, through Messrs. Burns & Oates, 'A Study of the Life of St. Augustine.' The St. Augustine in question is, of course, the apostle of England, the fourteenth centenary of whose landing on the Kentish coast is to be commemorated this year. Abbot Bergh has made a special study of Augustine's relations with St. Gregory the Great and with the Welsh representatives of the old English Church.

Mr. Bryce, M.P., has undertaken to distribute the prizes, certificates, and diplomas of the College of Preceptors on the last day of March.

A story entitled 'The Devil's Head,' by Mr. Fitzgerald Molloy, will begin its serial course early in spring through Messrs. Tillotson's syndicate of newspapers. The same syndicate will run later on a series of biographical studies called 'Some Women Writers of the Victorian Era,' specially written by Mr. Molloy for Messrs. Tillotson.

There is little to note in the annual report of the Society for the Preservation of the Irish Language. The number of pupils who have passed in Irish in the schools of the National Board has increased by about fifty, and there is a slight increase in those who have been successful in the Intermediate examinations in Irish.

Archbishop Benson's book on 'The Life and Times of St. Cyprian' is now all but ready, and will be issued by Messrs. Macmillan before Easter.

The Hon. Stuart Erskine has in the press a satirical romance entitled 'Lord Dulborough.'

Mr. Carlton Dawe, the author of a volume of studies of life in the far East, 'Yellow and White,' has written a romance of the China seas, entitled 'Capt. Castle,' which will be published by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. Mr. Carlton Dawe, who writes from personal experience, has spent a considerable time on the Chinese and Japanese coasts.

We ought to have recorded last week the decease of Dr. Cobham Brewer, brother of the well-known historian, and the compiler of 'Guide to Science,' 'The Dictionary of Phrase and Fable,' 'The Reader's Handbook,' and other works which showed the author's omnivorous appetite for books, but, unfortunately, were somewhat uncritical and inexact.—This week the decease is announced of Mr. H. M'Call, author of 'Ireland and her Staple Manufactures' and 'The House of Downshire.'

We hear that the second volume of the 'Schriften zur Kritik,' by the late Prof. M. Bernays, about which we expressed the hope a fortnight ago that it had been completed by the author, is actually in the press, and is expected to appear shortly at Leipzig. A considerable portion of the work is devoted to German literature in Switzerland in recent years.

Teutonic philology has sustained a serious loss by the death of Dr. Daniel Sanders, on the 11th inst., in his seventy-seventh year. After having completed his university career and conducted successfully for some years a school at his native town Alt-Strelitz, he devoted himself entirely to philological and lexicographical work. A complete list of his writings would fill several columns of this journal, and so we will confine ourselves to mentioning his great 'Wörterbuch der deutschen Sprache' in three volumes, supplemented in 1885 by his 'Ergänzungs-Wörterbuch.' These two Wörterbücher were subsequently combined by him in a corrected and completed form, the manuscript of which has been secured, to the chagrin of patriotic Germans, by the British Museum. For the last ten years he edited the periodical Zeitschrift für deutsche Sprache, which he recently gave up in order to devote himself exclusively to the compilation of the German-English part of Muret's 'Encyklopädisches Wörterbuch.' Dr. Sanders was also the author of a 'Neugriechische Grammatik,' and in conjunction with M. A. R. Rangabé he wrote a 'Geschichte der neugriechischen Litteratur.'

Mr. Teubner, of Leipzig, announces an edition, in ten volumes, of the 'Lexicographi Græci,' which was one of Bentley's projects, under the general editorship of Prof. Uhlig and Dr. Wentzel. The same publisher promises in his well-known series of Greek and Latin texts an edition by Dr. Gleye of the chronicle of John Malalas (which Bentley, it may be remembered, made the subject of his famous letter to Mill), and one by Dr. Kroll of the Greek romance of Alexander.

The Parliamentary Papers of the week include Statutes made by Balliol, New, and University Colleges, Oxford, and by Clare College, Cambridge (1*d.* each); Queen Anne's Bounty, Annual Report (3*d.*); the Annual Statistical Report of St. Andrew's University (1*d.*); Wellington College, Report for 1895 (1*d.*); and Evening Continuation Schools, Return (2*d.*).

SCIENCE

ELEMENTARY MATHEMATICAL BOOKS.

The Elements of Applied Mathematics. By C. M. Jessop, M.A. (Bell & Sons.)—The author tells us that he has founded this treatise on an uncompleted manuscript left by his father, of which he has considerably extended the scope. The work, as it is now presented, is decidedly above the average run of mathematical text-books. We have not often come across a book that more successfully combines clearness and simplicity with reasonable brevity. It treats of kinetics, statics, and hydrostatics, and (following the arrangement now most approved) deals with these subjects in the order stated. The problems for practice are abundant, as are also those worked out as examples, so that the book will be especially appreciated by students who have to dispense with the aid of a teacher.

Elementary Algebra. By J. W. Welsford, M.A., and C. H. P. Mayo, M.A. (Longmans & Co.)—This is a well-written work on a subject which it is difficult to treat with much originality. The most distinguishing feature is what the authors call "review exercises." These are collections of easy questions at the end of each chapter, which are intended to impress upon the mind of the learner the principles previously explained. A single example will suffice: "If a gain of 1*l.* is the unit, what is understood by $-x+y$, and what by $-x-y$?" But even this is hardly original, for we have seen something very similar in other text-books which have appeared earlier, as, for example, that written by Messrs. Hall and Knight. The four pages of logarithmic tables might, without disadvantage, have been omitted, as they are nothing like enough to afford sufficient practice. For that a complete table would be necessary.

Mensuration for Senior Students. By Alfred Lodge, M.A. (Longmans & Co.)—We can highly recommend this book, not only to engineering students—for whom it appears to be more especially intended—but to other mathematicians. The author justly lays great stress on the importance of Simpson's rule for finding the volume of a solid, deducing from this one general rule all the other formulæ for the simpler cases. The book presupposes in the student a rudimentary knowledge of trigonometry up to the solution of triangles.

Longmans' Junior School Mensuration. By W. S. Beard. (Longmans & Co.)—Of this little manual there is really nothing to say except that, as far as we have examined it, Mr. Beard has accurately stated the customary simple rules, and given plenty of examples for practice. The compilation is intended "to meet the requirements of the Oxford and Cambridge junior local examinations, the College of Preceptors, &c."

Euclid's Elements of Geometry, V.–VI. By H. M. Taylor, M.A. (Cambridge, University Press.)—Mr. Taylor treats the subject of proportion with as much clearness as the restrictions which he has imposed upon himself by adopting Euclid's cumbrous definition allow. But why did he thus fetter himself? He might have accurately defined the proportion A : B = C : D as meaning that B can be subtracted as many times from nA, for all values of the integer n, exactly as many times (not necessarily without a remainder) as D can be subtracted from nC. This simple definition implies Euclid's, and, like his, applies to commensurables and incommensurables alike. Should it be objected to it—as may also be objected to Euclid's—that it cannot apply to angles without taking account of angles greater than the sum of four right angles—a class of magnitudes which Euclid does not recognize—we may substitute the following definition: A is said to have the same ratio to B that C has to D when $\frac{1}{n}$ B can be subtracted from A exactly as many times (not necessarily without a remainder) as $\frac{1}{n}$ D can be subtracted from C, for all values of the integer n. This definition, like the former, will apply to incommensurables as well as commensurables; and it will still hold good if (in order to keep within Euclid's unnecessary restrictions in the matter of postulates) we limit n to the integers 2, 4, 8, 16, and the other powers of 2. This limitation would turn the difficulty (a wholly arbitrary and unnecessary one) about trisecting an angle without departing from Euclid's postulates.

Woolwich Mathematical Papers. By E. J. Brooksmith, B.A. (Macmillan & Co.)—The title is almost a sufficient explanation of this book. It contains the problems set to candidates for admission to Woolwich from 1885 to 1894 in the various branches of mathematics, including arithmetic. The answers are given at the end, but no solutions are worked out.

Handbook of Mental Arithmetic. (Blackwood & Sons.)—This is a compilation of which we do not very clearly see the utility. It is an extensive collection of examples "suited to the requirements of the English and Scotch Codes," and is graduated from Standard I. to Standard VI. The answers are given in the margin to the right of the questions. Lazy and unintelligent teachers may conceivably find the book useful; those who do not deserve these epithets will not require it.

Geometry for Kindergarten Students, by Mrs. Adeline Pullar (Sonnenschein & Co.), is not intended for students who have had the advantage of a previous mathematical training, and consequently assumes an aspect which is strange to readers of older text-books of geometry. And although it will be useful in many ways to advanced Kindergarten students, it is at once apparent that its usefulness will be greatly increased if its perusal be preceded by a course of closely reasoned geometry. This course of 'Geometry for Kindergarten Students' really resolves itself into a course of geometrical drawing, combined with an extensive series of skilfully planned illustrations of geometrical truths by means of the Froebelian apparatus. We can hardly recommend it as of much educative value by itself unless it be the sequel to a more logical and accurate study of geometry. Those who wrestled in boyhood with old-fashioned editions of Euclid will remember that the language of the propositions was, if cumbersome, accurate, and the reasoning cogent. It seems to us that many of the propositions given by the author contain statements which are incomplete, and therefore puzzling if not misleading; and in several cases statements are accepted as proved when the proof is by no means apparent. This loose treatment of a subject like geometry deprives it of much of its educational profit, and tends to foster not only the habit of inexact expression, from which the author is not free, but the habit of inaccurate and languid thinking. Mrs. Pullar herself supplies an illustration of this evil tendency: in describing the solids of which Froebel's Gift II. consists, she places before the reader the statement, "The cylinder is equal in breadth and height." This statement is vicious, and, so far as we can make out, meaningless. The text is amply supplied with diagrams, but several of them are carelessly executed, and many of the reference-letters are illegible. The Kindergarten illustrations which close most of the chapters are skilfully chosen and explained, and will be useful to students, to whose attention we also recommend the practical advice in modelling, both in clay and cardboard.

PROF. SYLVESTER.

Prof. Sylvester, who died on Monday, was a mathematician of European reputation, one of those whose investigations are understood by only a small band of specialists. Along with Cayley and Clifford he occupied himself with problems which are unintelligible to the mass of mankind. He had, however, been widely honoured. He had been a Fellow of the Royal Society for nearly fifty years; he had received from it two medals, and also the De Morgan Medal of the London Mathematical Society; he was a corresponding member of the Institute of France, and a foreign member of learned societies at Berlin, Boston, Göttingen, Naples, Rome, and St. Petersburg.

He was born in London in 1814, educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, and came out Second Wrangler in 1837, when the Johnians occupied the first three places in the Tripos. On account of being a Jew he could not take his degree, but he immediately became Professor of Natural Philosophy in University College, Gower Street, and afterwards he held for some years the Chair of Mathematics in the University of Virginia. On his return to London he, like De Morgan, got called to the Bar, but he never practised, and in 1855 he became a professor at the Military Academy, Woolwich. In 1877 he was induced to accept a chair in the Johns Hopkins University, and there he led a singularly busy life for six years. It was the first time he had the opportunity of teaching anything beyond the rudiments, and he enjoyed the change greatly. In 1883 he was chosen Savilian Professor at Oxford in succession to Henry Smith, and held the post for ten years, when advancing age led him to retire. For some little time past his health had been failing.

Prof. Sylvester was fond of writing Latin epigrams and English verses, and in 1870 he published 'The Laws of Verse,' a somewhat whimsical and egotistical volume, illustrated by specimens of his own compositions, on which he, of course, prided himself as much as on his mathematical discoveries. Indeed, almost to the close of his life he continued to experiment in metres; but it cannot be said he possessed skill equal to his ambition. He was essentially a kind-hearted man, but with a quick temper and a strain of naïve vanity which made many people unjust to his extraordinary powers as a mathematician.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES.

D'Arrest's periodical comet is now passing in a north-easterly direction through the constellation Aquarius, its approximate place for next Monday being, according to M. Leveau's ephemeris, R.A. 20^{h} 40^{m}, N.P.D. 98° 1′. It will continue to increase in apparent brightness until the beginning of June.

Mr. C. Leeson Prince, F.R.A.S., of Crowborough Hill, Sussex, has sent his usual meteorological summary for 1896, a year the conditions of which were remarkable in several respects. The early part of it was exceedingly mild and dry, the mean temperature of January being more than two, and of March nearly four degrees above the average, while the rainfalls both of February and May were considerably less than half an inch. For several years past the latter has been the driest month in the year. The drought in the spring of 1896 terminated in the first week of June, but July was brilliant, with only occasional rainfall, and its mean temperature was exactly equal to the average of the last twenty-three years, the thermometer reading only twice exceeding 80°. August was showery and cold, with a mean temperature more than four degrees below the average, whilst September was remarkable for its low temperature and very heavy rainfall, amounting to more than eight inches. October was wet and cold, with a heavy snow shower on the morning of the 19th; November was, on the whole, pleasant, with more sunshine than usual, but the mean temperature was low; December was mild and rainy, except in the third week, and was remarkable for a very severe gale from the south-west on the 4th. The total rainfall for the year was 33·55 inches at Crowborough (four inches more than were registered at Lewes). The highest temperature recorded was 89°·2 in July, and the lowest 22°·6 in February.

The small planet, No. 422, which was discovered by Herr Witt at the Urania Observatory, Berlin, on October 8th, 1896, has been named Berolina.

Prof. E. C. Pickering communicates to Ast. Nach. No. 3400 a specimen of the results obtained with the Bruce photographic telescope, which was transported to Arequipa little more than a year ago, and has since been kept in constant use by Prof. Bailey. The stellar region depicted on the plate extends from R.A. 17^{h} 40^{m} to 18^{h} 10^{m} and N.P.D. 110°·8 to 116°·5. The trifid nebula N.G.C. 6514 and the larger nebula N.G.C. 6523 are included in the engraving, which represents about a tenth part of the above region.

PROF. H. DRUMMOND.

Prof. H. Drummond, who died last week, had for several years past been a favourite with the religious public. He was born at Stirling in 1851, where his father was an active publisher of tracts, and was educated at the University of Edinburgh, and he also studied divinity at the New College of the Free Church. Becoming Science Lecturer at the Free Church Seminary in Glasgow, he in 1879 accompanied Sir A. Geikie in a geological tour in the Rocky Mountains, and three years later he was dispatched by a speculative Scotsman on an expedition to Nyassaland. Just before starting on the latter journey he published 'Natural Law in the Spiritual World,' which enjoyed a large sale among that portion of the public which was alarmed by the spread of the Darwinian theories, as they thought they conflicted with Revelation. In 1888 he published 'Tropical Africa,' a well-written account of his brief experiences in that country. During the spring of 1890 he lectured in Australia, in 1893 he delivered the Lowell Institute lectures in Boston, and in 1894 he gave a number of addresses in American universities. In the last-named year he published his Lowell Lectures under the title of 'The Ascent of Man,' but the book did not achieve the same popularity as his earlier work, and was, indeed, suspected of heresy by the divines of the Free Kirk. His books do not exhibit, it must be confessed, any great grasp of scientific principles, and his dialectic ability was small; but he wrote pleasantly and easily, and his genuine religious fervour captivated a public that was neither critical nor competent. Personally he was an amiable and modest man whose head was not turned by his popularity.

SOCIETIES.

Royal.—March 11.—The President in the chair.—The following papers were read: 'The Comparative Physiology of the Suprarenal Capsules,' by Mr. S. Vincent,—'The Origin and Destination of certain Afferent and Efferent Tracts in the Medulla Oblongata,' by Dr. J. S. R. Russell,—'On the Orientation of certain Greek Temples and the Dates of their Foundation derived from Astronomical Considerations,' by Mr. F. C. Penrose,—'Some Experiments with Cathode Rays,' by Mr. A. A. C. Swinton,—and 'A Study of the Phenomena and Causation of Heat-Contraction of Skeletal Muscle,' by Dr. T. G. Brodie and Mr. S. W. F. Richardson.

Society of Antiquaries.—March 11.—Dr. E. Freshfield, Treasurer, in the chair.—Dr. Windle exhibited a collection of stone implements of the Neolithic period, found in the parish of Tardebigge, Worcestershire.—Mr. A. Bulleid read a paper, illustrated by lantern slides, 'On Further Discoveries at the Late-Celtic Lake-Village at Glastonbury.' This lake-village, which has been undergoing systematic exploration during the summer months since 1892, was constructed within the boundaries of a shallow and swampy mere. The site occupies some three and a half acres, and consists of seventy dwellings, two-thirds of which have been examined. The village was probably an artificial extension of a small area of swamp, and the foundation may be roughly described as composed of mounds of clay supported by a substructure of timber resting on the surface of the peat, and enclosed by a palisading. The palisading has been traced entirely round the site, and in some places the piles are arranged in a line four abreast, with as many as seventy in the space of ten feet. No trackway has been discovered at any part of the village circumference, and the causeway at the east side evidently led to a landing-stage, instead of the shore as is usually the case. Last season portions of a rectangular dwelling were uncovered; hitherto round huts only had been found. For various reasons, but chiefly on account of the unstable nature of the peat underlying the foundation, it was necessary from time to time to raise the floors by the addition of fresh layers of clay and timber. Some of the mounds opened have contained four, five, and six superimposed floors and hearths, and one mound last season consisted of nine layers. From the floors, as well as from the peat and débris outside the stockaded margin, numerous relics have been collected, the number under the various headings being as follows: amber, 3; worked bone, 300; worked horn, 240; bronze, 130; iron, 70; lead, 28; glass, 15; crucibles, 20; Kimmeridge shale, 15; querns, 26; spindle whorls, 128; human bones, chiefly skulls, 20. Wheel- and hand-made pottery is very abundant and often highly ornamented. Among the objects of wood, which form an important group, are a boat, a ladder, several wheel spokes, and pieces of the framework of two looms; fragments of a number of stave-made and solid-cut tubs, buckets, and cups varying from 6 in. to 2 ft. 6 in. high; portions of two baskets and a basin-shaped bowl; awl, spade, saw, reaping and bill-hook handles, and several ladles. The quantity of clay and stone used in the foundation is enormous, and both were brought from a distance. One of the most interesting features of the Glastonbury find is the uniform character of the relics, but how long the village was inhabited it is difficult to suggest even approximately; from the successive layers of clay in the dwelling mounds and from the accumulation of four or five feet of peat around the site, we may conclude the occupation extended over a considerable period. It appears to have terminated before the Roman power and influence had made itself felt so far west as the Somersetshire of to-day.

Entomological.—March 3.—Mr. R. Trimen, President, in the chair.—Mr. G. W. Bird, Mr. A. H. Martineau, Mr. Hubert C. Phillips, Mr. W. A. Vice, and Mr. Colbran J. Wainwright were elected Fellows.—Mr. Champion exhibited, on behalf of Messrs. Godman and Salvin, a portion of the Elateridæ and the Cebrionidæ and Rhipidoceridæ recently worked out by him in the 'Biologia Centrali-Americana.' The Elateridæ included 531, the Cebrionidæ 29, and the Rhipidoceridæ 14 species, a large proportion of which were described as new. He called attention to the excessive rarity of the males in the elaterid genera Chalcolepidius and Semiotus (the contrary being the case in the genus Scaptolenus of the Cebrionidæ, and also in many Elateridæ). One species, Meristhus scobinula, Cand., was common to Central America and China.—Mr. Jacoby showed a halticid beetle, taken in Mashonaland by Mr. G. A. K. Marshall, and remarkable for a prolongation of the hind tibia beyond the tarsal articulation into a very long serrated process.—Mr. Elwes showed a series of Papilionidæ of the Machaon group from North America, including P. machaon and P. oregonia from British Columbia, P. brucei, P. bairdii, and P. zolicaon from Glenwood Springs, Colorado, and the last-named species from British Columbia. He stated that there was a tolerably complete gradation from P. oregonia (=machaon) through P. brucei to P. zolicaon, that none of the characters which had been relied on for separation was of real value, and that the structure of the genitalia afforded no assistance.—Mr. O. H. Latter read a paper 'On the Prothoracic Gland of Dicranura vinula, and other Notes,' in continuation of his previous communications on the subject. A fresh use of the formic acid secreted by the larva was described; it was employed to alter the silk secreted in spinning the cocoon, in order to convert it into the well-known horny mass. If the acid was prevented from acting, as by supplying the larvæ with bits of blotting paper soaked in an alkali to be utilized in making the cocoon, the silk thus protected from the action of the acid retained its usual fibrous structure.—Sir George Hampson communicated a paper 'On the Classification of Two Subfamilies of Moths of the Family Pyralidæ—the Hydrocampinæ and Scopariane.'

Philological.—March 5.—Mr. B. Dawson Treasurer, in the chair.—Mr. I. Gollancz read a paper 'On an Alliterative Poem of the Middle of the Fourteenth Century,' which he is editing as Sir J. Evans's gift-book to the Roxburghe Club this year, viz., 'The Parliament of the Three Ages,' with a second poem, printed in an appendix, 'Winner and Waster.' They are in one of the Thornton MSS., Addit. 31,042, Brit. Mus.; a few mistakes of the former are corrected by a later incomplete and generally inferior MS., Addit. 33,991, which, for instance, rightly alters seemingly proper names like Demedon and Abbyot into demeden, judged, and a blyot, a mantle. Both poems are visions. In the 'Parliament' the author goes deerstalking—which he describes in detail, so as to teach his squire hearers the sport—as the writer of 'Gawain and the Green Knight' goes fox-hunting. He then sleeps, and sees three men on horseback, Old-Age, Mid-Age, and Youth, who argue on the advantages of their three states. Youth praises romances and girls; Mid-Age the possession of land and money; Old-Age the deeds of the past, bringing in the Nine Worthies collectively—three Christian, three pagan, three Jewish—for the first time in our literature. (In the earlier 'Cursor' they were scattered about. In French, Longyon's 'Alexandre' is the first to mention them, early in the fourteenth century, in part iii, on the "Vows on the Peacock.") The next English version of the French is to be found in the Scotch 'Alexander' in the fifteenth century. 'Winner and Waster' is a poetical political pamphlet on the state of affairs just after the first jubilee of Edward III. The writer has a vision of a plain and warriors ready for battle. On a cliff near is a heap of Garters, with the earliest known englishing of Honi soit qui mal y pense, "Hething [scorn] have the hathell [man] that any harme thynkes." The four orders of friars bear banners; but the author has confused the orders, for he makes the Austins "loven our Lady to serve," which was the special attribute of the Carmelites, and he makes the Austins wear white robes instead of black. King Edward III. orders a young knight (the Black Prince, after Cressy, 1346) to tell the folk they must not fight. They agree. The problem whether men should save or spend is then argued before the king. Allusion is made to the drought of 1349, and the discussion is full of interest. In one line is the phrase "if sharsull knew it"; and though this looked at first like Fr. escarcele, money-bag, niggard, it turned out to be Wm. de Sharshull (Shares Hill, near Stafford), a high Court official and head of the King's Bench, who at last joined the Franciscans, whom the author urged him to destroy. Mr. Gollancz then showed that the two poems were by the same writer, from their both using the participial -ande as a noun-ending, havande, possessions, makande; from their lines in common; and from their curious mistakes: the 'Three Ages,' when on Alexander, speaks of "gentle Jason, the Jew who won the fleece of gold," confusing Jason with the priest Joshua, who met Alexander in Jerusalem.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—March 16.—Mr. J. W. Barry, President, in the chair.—The paper read was 'On the Mond Gas-Producer Plant and its Application,' by Mr. H. A. Humphrey.

SOCIETY OF ARTS.—March 15.—The Hon. Sir C. Freemantle in the chair.—The first lecture of a course of Cantor Lectures 'On Alloys' was delivered by Prof. W. C. Roberts-Austen.

March 16.—Sir F. Young in the chair.—A paper 'On the Progress of the British Colonies of Australasia during the Sixty Years of Her Majesty's Reign' was read before the Foreign and Colonial Section by Mr. J. Bonwick.

March 17.—Sir W. C. F. Robinson in the chair.—A paper 'On Music in England at the Queen's Accession' was read by Mr. J. Spencer Curwen, and was followed by a discussion.

MATHEMATICAL.—March 11.—Prof. Elliott, President, in the chair.—The following were elected members: Messrs. P. J. Kirkby, F. W. Lawrence, and A. Young.—The President referred to a letter received from the President of the Royal Society with reference to the Victoria Research Fund, which it is proposed to institute in commemoration of Her Majesty's long reign, and commended the fund to the generous consideration of the members. He then spoke briefly on the loss the mathematical world had sustained by the recent death of Prof. Weierstrass.—Mr. Jenkins, V.P., having taken the chair, the President communicated a paper by Mr. J. E. Campbell 'On a Law of Combination of Operators bearing on the Theory of Continuous Transformation Groups.'—The President, from the chair, next read some notes on Symmetric Functions, by Mr. W. H. Metzler.—The senior Secretary communicated a note 'On a System of Circles associated with a Triangle,' by Prof. Steggall.—Lieut.-Col. Cunningham mentioned three high primes recently determined by him, and gave a sketch of the methods used.

PHYSICAL.—March 12.—Mr. S. Bidwell, President, in the chair.—Mr. W. Barlow read a paper 'On a Mechanical Cause of Homogeneity of Structure and Symmetry, Geometrically Investigated, with Special Application to Crystals and to Chemical Combination,' illustrated by models.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

Mon. Aristotelian, 8.—Symposium: 'Has Ethical Science a Practical or a Purely Speculative Aim?' Mrs. Bryant, Mr. J. H. Muirhead, and Mr. H. Stutt.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Alloys,' Lecture II., Prof. W. C. Roberts-Austen. (Cantor Lecture.)
— Surveyors' Institution, 8.—'Fruit Growing as an Auxiliary to Agriculture,' Mr. C. H. Hooper.
— Geographical, 8½.—'The North Polar Problem,' the President.
Tues. Royal Institution, 3.—'Animal Electricity,' Prof. A. D. Waller.
— Civil Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'The Mond Gas Producer Plant and its Application.'
Wed. Civil Engineers, 4.—'Fifth James Forrest Lecture on 'Bacteriology,' Dr. G. S. Woodhead.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Transmission of Power by Alternating Electric Currents,' Mr. W. B. Esson.
— Geological, 8.—'Notes on some Volcanic and other Rocks which occur near the Baluchistan-Afghan Frontier between Chaman and Persia,' Lieut.-General C. A. McMahon and Capt. A. H. McMahon; 'The Association of Glossopteris and Sigillaria in South Africa,' Mr. A. C. Seward; 'On Occurrence of Sigillaria, Glossopteris, and other Plant-Remains in the Triassic Rocks of South Africa,' Mr. D. Draper.
Thurs. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Relation of Geology to History: the Incoming of Man,' Prof. W. Boyd Dawkins.
— Royal, 4½.
— Electrical Engineers, 8.—Continued Discussion on 'Repairs to the South American Company's Cable off Cape Verde, 1893 and 1895,' Mr. H. Benest.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Cultivation and Manufacture of Rhea Fibre,' Mr. I. Barraclough.
— Chemical, 8.—'The Pasteur Memorial Lecture,' Prof. P. F. Frankland.
— Antiquaries, 8½.—'The Figures of Saints on Devonshire Rood-screens,' Part II., Mr. C. E. Keyser.
Fri. Civil Engineers, 8.—'The Resignalling of the Liverpool Street Terminus of the Great Eastern Railway,' Mr. W. J. Griffiths. (Students' Meeting.)
— Royal Institution, 9.—'Early Man in Scotland,' Sir W. Turner.
Sat. Royal Institution, 3.—'Electricity and Electrical Vibrations,' Lord Rayleigh.

FINE ARTS

THE INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

It is matter for congratulation that, after several partial experiments in that direction, the Institute has taken the advice of its friends—ourselves among the number—and reduced its exhibits from between seven and eight hundred to fewer than five hundred, and filled only two instead of three of its admirable galleries with works of which it is not too much to say that their merits are proportionately enhanced by the reduction of their numbers. It is true that the third room contains two hundred prizes of the Institute's Art Union—drawings, etchings, and photogravures; but, as they hardly call for much attention, what we have to say about the best of them may be confined to a few words. Many of them, too, are not novelties. The idea of establishing an art union of the kind is not entirely admirable, even if it is never made a means of getting rid of productions, otherwise unsaleable, of members.

The improvement is so manifest that, although there are many trivial works, very few of them are thoroughly bad, and there is but a small number of sketches such as heretofore formed the staple of the exhibition. This implies, of course, more studies, greater carefulness, and increased self-respect among the majority of the contributors, who hitherto were not remarkable for the amount of labour and knowledge they expended on potboilers. Apart from this, we regret to notice how much the exhibition suffers from the decease of one or two of its ablest supporters, such as the elder Mr. Hine, and also, we must add, from the absence of several others.

The first work the visitor encounters in the Central Gallery, Mr. H. Foskey's Harmony in White (No. 1), is a seated figure study, which justifies its title more than most harmonies are apt to do, and, despite the badness of its proportions, exhibits that rare quality in water-colour art, a real feeling for style. We have hardly heard the artist's name before.—Style is not Mr. Dadd's strong point, but he is a neat draughtsman; and his firm touch and his adroitness in depicting commonplace emotions and incidents in an attractive manner make of Who's There? (2) an excellent work in its way. The candlelight effect, however, is simply incredible, and still more so is the local colouring. The Squire's Portrait (146) tells its tale cleverly, but fails to prove that that tale was worth telling. Technically speaking, it is, despite the dexterous painting and the appropriate accessories, not up to Mr. Dadd's mark. Still, it is a good example of illustrated newspaper art, which is so frequent here as almost to give a character to the exhibition.—Mr. W. B. Wollen, another eminent professor of illustrated newspaper art, never invested the "art military," as Thackeray called it, with more spirit, character, motion, and variety than in

The drums begin to roll, my boys, the drums begin to roll

(38), a regiment and its band marching through a village; it is a little spotty and hard, as his work is apt to be, but it is less chalky and dry than usual.

In Mr. L. Block's group of old books, which he calls The Everlasting Tables of Right Reason (4), albeit these motives are of the humblest, there is more solidity and the motives are fresher. Mr. Block has for the first time condescended to arrange his "still life" with some regard to chiaroscuro, simplicity, and breadth of effect; when doing this another time he might study the beautiful flower groups of M. Fantin-Latour, not one of which is, we regret to find, on these walls. Mr. Block draws thoroughly, models like a sculptor, and paints more faithfully and elaborately than he used to do. His study of skulls called What Vast Regions hold the Immortal Mind (295) is an admirable subject, full of dignity, purpose, and some pathos, but the chiaroscuro and local colours are by no means adequately treated.

If any one can charm us with figures of dainty English girls it is Miss Kate Greenaway, whose Girl in Hat and Feathers (31) would be irresistible if she had not painted the same sort of thing many times before. Nobody but Miss Greenaway could continue to attract the public for so many years, yet even her faithful public may end by getting tired of her quaintly clad girls and her groups of children. Two Little Girls in a Garden (214), too, is ravishingly pretty, but it is "as before."—No. 36, Mr. W. E. Evans's picture of a pretty child Gathering Blackberries, is a little too smooth, but otherwise nice and harmonious, and pleasingly finished in the taste of Miss Greenaway, but without her "old-fashioned" mannerisms.—Very pretty, too, are the figures in Miss E. Lance's Capitalists (65) of the children standing at a stall and anxious about their investments. The draughtsmanship is spirited and neater than we usually meet with.—Mr. C. Green is well known as the clever, if not ambitious draughtsman of such works as The Miniature (103). In fact, we think we have seen this incident depicted before, perhaps, indeed, more than once, and we should like the picture better if the background were not so thinly painted; still the figure is decidedly good.—There is none of Mr. Green's timidity about Mr. L. Davis's sparkling girl looking from The Balcony (106). The treatment is clever and the face is lifelike.—Mr. H. E. James's pretty idyl of a rosy child feeding chickens at a cottage door, called In the Time of Roses (10), fairly justifies its title. It portrays the effect of bright sunlight, and thus contrasts with its neighbour, Mare and Foal (11), in which Mr. C. Low has painted rainy daylight, and painted it well.—Better still is Mr. J. Pedder's (the name is new to us) Berkshire Shepherd (23), a scene on the downs, in which sheep, a first-rate dog, a hut on wheels, and twilight effect are cleverly combined to make a picture that is more artistic than many round about it.—The best dog piece in the gallery is Mr. V. T. Garland's The Kennel Chant (30), a group of hounds in their kennel.—Mr. Green's Searching the Registers (129) depicts the interior of a Gothic church. It is a good study of light, and the drawing is nice.—Mr. E. Breun contributes a masculine example in A Brown Study (133), which is painted with breadth and firmness, and has a lifelike air; the execution is soft and the colour is good.—Mr. W. Simpson's The Well at Cawnpore (132) is a bright landscape, but rather flat and thin, and more meritorious as topography than as a painting. It represents the well as it appeared in November, 1860, long after the bodies of the English women and children were thrown into it.—In Lifeboat Service (143), a seascape with figures, Mr. J. Nash evinces energy, and his design is good; the incidents, too, are appropriate, and the painting of the billows is creditable. Indeed, we do not remember to have seen so praiseworthy a work as this by Mr. Nash, at least not of recent years. It is hoped he may paint more of the same kind. —One of the most solid and powerful pictures here is Sir James Linton's Wallflowers (158), a lady dressed in a stone-white satin gown, which is excellent. The drawing of her face and draperies and the harmony of the whole work leave nothing to be desired in the way of technical accomplishments; the shadows, too, are less black than usual in the President's paintings, but there is not much animation about the design nor in the attitude of the figure and the lady's expression. More ambitious as well as more difficult, No. 165, Shylock and Jessica, also by Sir James, comprises a first-rate figure of an ardent, voluptuous, and beautiful Jewess, more developed, by the way, than the figures one usually sees at the Institute, and as a whole this is one of the artist's best works; the only failure is the face of Shylock, and the want of life in the design is regrettable. Sir James's third contribution is much larger, and it illustrates his unusual power to paint the human figure at or about life size, with full tones, deep and strong colours, and in daylight. This work is called Rosalind (345), and depicts her standing near the entrance of a wood and holding a hunting spear. For the Rosalind of our fancy the fine and finely painted figure is rather too broad in the shoulders, therefore it looks too short, while the arms seem too heavy; but the design is the more commendable and refined because, if the beauty and espiéglerie of her face did not betray her, nothing else would reveal her sex. It seems to have no tale to tell, certainly it represents no incident.

On the other hand, there is plenty of incident and no lack of character and movement in Mr. J. C. Dollman's Dogma (175), a scene representing four specimens of the Georgian epoch, three clerics of different creeds and a jovial and portly squire, sitting at table after dinner, while two of the ecclesiastics are involved in a doctrinal dispute. This picture seems to us the most spontaneous, homogeneous, and complete, as well as the most appropriate and fresh, of Mr. Dollman's productions known to us; some parts of it are a little thin, but not excessively so. We should like it better if its colours were richer and its coloration stronger as well as in a higher key.—Mr. Mottram's large illustration of Hood's 'Song of the Shirt' (320), though in a pictorial sense creditable to him, is by no means such a work as any one would buy to live with. Apart from its painfulness, we are bound to admire the good and broad execution of the whole—the largeness of style and the suitability and pathos of the expression, which is as sad and sorrowful as that of a half-starved woman sitting in the cold can well be.—Mr. G. G. Kilburne's The Lady June (353) is much better than his contribution to the last gathering of the Institute. The face of the life-size figure is well drawn and the expression agreeable. The painting, as such, is remarkable, especially that of the lady's large hat. We care much less for the same artist's Auntie (227), although the head and face deserve praises.—"La Vida es Sueño" (368), large figures of a dashing Spanish woman and her lover, a guitarist, placed in adjoining chairs, has afforded Mr. A. Burrington an unusually good opportunity for painting with a good deal of pleasant chic, employing his skill in dealing with draperies in a profitable way, and imparting to the woman's face and demeanour abundance of animation and character. It is a powerful work; indeed, as a drawing in water colours, it shows much more élan and freedom of style than we are accustomed to look for in this gallery, or, for that matter, in Pall Mall or at the Academy. Mr. Burrington's style and methods of painting, fascinating as they are at present, are not unlikely to betray him, if he does not take care, into offensive mannerisms. Self-control will save him, but nothing else is on his side, consequently his position is a risky one.—The powerful, but melodramatic drawing in which Mr. C. E. Johnson takes a new departure, The Valley of Gloom (400), is a good composition, and the scene is expressive enough of itself to justify the introduction of the knight in armour riding away into the shadowy vale. This is the last of the pictures with figures to which it is necessary to draw any special attention.—A few other works of the same class need only be named: Mr. L. Davis's A Welcome Arrival (12) and The Last Basket (25); Mr. F. W. W. Topham's Spring Dreaming (28); Mr. G. Haité's In the Street (68); Mr. C. Green's Sancho Panza (82); Mr. E. Bundy's The Preacher (86); Miss M. Perrin's La Festa (124); Prof. H. van Bartels's Dutch Interior (119), a woman beside a stove; The Skipper's Wife (298), by Mr. W. H. Weatherhead, and his Home Beacon (361); and A Lesson in Tambour Work (348), by Mr. H. R. Steer.

Among the landscapes that seem to deserve praise are The Canon Gate, Chichester (34), by Mr. A. Evershed, which is solid and full of light, and his Salt Mill, Fishbourne (49), which is equally good, and is notable for an excellently painted atmosphere.—Mr. A. Kinsley's Breezy Afternoon off Flamborough Head (46), a vigorous and skilful study of a rough sea in a cold wind, but in the forewater rather deficient in solidity, and A Bit of the Hampshire Coast (87), should not be overlooked. — Mr. H. Pilleau's Gale at Biarritz (47), a capital, well-understood sketch of the sea breaking furiously on the rocky coast, and some other drawings of his are clever in their way—a good way, so far as it goes.—Nor should we omit to mention Mr. E. Bale's On the Italian Riviera (51), as it is true to the local colour and light, firmly drawn, and effective, although deficient in force and strength; Mr. J. T. Watts's well-drawn and carefully graded study of cloudy winter sunlight, A January Afternoon (56); nor Mr. A. Parsons's Warley Place (67), a house built by the Adams, and seen in spring weather, a clean picture, bright and brilliant, though rather harder than it need be.—We like, too, Mr. Parsons's In a Somersetshire Valley (286); Miss B. J. Spiers's King's Lynn, Norfolk (66), for it is crisp and neatly drawn, although it lacks toning, and would be the better for more force and more colour; and the Thistles (70) of Miss A. Gray, which is all that could be wished.—Were the columns of the foreground stronger and the colour a little more powerful, Mr. H. E. Tidmarsh's interior view of All Hallows, Barking (100), would be as stereoscopic as it is careful, firm, and otherwise solid.—In November (113) Mr. L. Fosbrooke has produced a picture of a pool and a wood, which is deftly drawn and homogeneous in all its qualities. The coloration and tonality suit the mournful nature of the scene. — The Fold (148), by Mr. Winter Shaw, is a capital study of cloudy moonlight on a meadow and of sheep grazing there.—Miss M. Brown's Silvery Moonlight (255) could hardly be improved.—Rainy daylight is well illustrated in Mr. M. Ludby's The Close of Day (154), and Mr. J. White has depicted The Village Street, Branscombe (157), in sunlight excellently and broadly.—Another sunny sketch is Mr. M. B. Huish's Where Tor and Torridge Meet (169).—Neatly drawn and also sunny are Mr. F. Walton's Whitesand Bay (237) and Land's End (238); the light upon the sea is excellently treated in the former, and the latter can boast a better painted sea than ordinary.—Mrs. E. F. Grey's From Bamburgh Sands (198) and Miss F. C. Methven's A Fan and some Knick-knacks (199), each of them a modest little contribution, are nevertheless highly praiseworthy.—Nothing could be better in style and taste, or more suitable to the subject, than Mr. J. Fulleylove's admirable Fountain Court, Trinity College, Cambridge (217).

The Art Union prizes we can speak favourably of are, among others, Oberstein (8), by S. Prout, and his Seaford (9); J. Holland's Mayence (14) and his Street Scene, Normandy (35); Turner's Italian Landscape (13); J. Varley's Lambeth Palace (17) and his Gateway at Norwich (44); P. Dewint's Corfe Castle (19) and his Chepstow Castle (23); J. S. Cotman's Malmesbury Abbey (45) and his son's Leidschiedam (108); G. Barret's Landscape, Evening (54); Mr. Y. King's On the Dart (72); Mr. G. G. Kilburne's The New Bonnet (96); Sir J. Linton's Portia (114); and Mr. G. Wetherbee's Pastoral (150).

THE SERANGEUM IN THE PIRÆUS.

Several authors speak of a place in the Piræus named the Serangeum. It is especially mentioned by lexicographers like Harpocration, Suidas, Photius, and in the 'Lexicon Seguerianum.' The earliest quotations are on the authority of Harpocration, Lysias, Aristophanes, and the orator Isæus. The last named (περὶ τοῦ Φιλοκτήμονος κλήρου 33) mentions τὸ ἐν Σηραγγίῳ βαλανεῖον, the bath in Serangeum, which belonged to a certain Eactemon, and cites 3,000 minæ as the price it fetched when sold to a certain Aristolochus. Photius speaks of Serangus as founder of the Serangeum, who was doubtless the eponymous hero of the place, as Photius also mentions a heroum, which he supposes at any rate to be dedicated to him. He gives only general indications of the position of the same in the Piræus. The whole passage runs: Σηράγγειον, χωρίον τι τοῦ Πειραιῶς, and shortly after: Σηράγγειον τόπος τοῦ Πειραιῶς, κτισθεὶς ὑπὸ Σηράγγου καὶ ἡρῷον ἐν αὐτῷ. The 'Lexicon Seguerianum' also mentions the same eponymous hero. No distinct details as to the position of this Serangeum with the heroum of Serangus were given by the authorities who mention it; it might lie at any point of the Acte peninsula. The name itself, however, clearly indicated some sort of hollow place, as σῆραγξ means a hole in a rock, and this may be the origin of the term Σηράγγειον, and the hero Serangus a subsequent explanation of the name, indicating a rocky piece of ground split up by cavities. Some such features were then naturally expected to mark the Serangeum. So Leake looked for it in the clefts of the rocks of Zea or on the neighbouring coast of the Aphrodisium, near the so-called grave of Themistocles. Ulrichs identified it with the Arethusa cave, of which I shall speak later, Bursian with the whole of Acte; and the name of Serangeum was in the Curtius-Kaupert 'Atlas of Attica,' part i. plate ii a, "The Piræus Peninsula," given to all the coast between the old harbour Zea and that of Munichia, between the promontories of Phreattys and the modern Kastella. The text to these maps, part i. (Berlin, 1881), p. 61, runs:—

"I agree with Hirschfeld in thinking it probable that the name Serangeum (including a heroum of Serangus and also a bath) belongs to this whole region with the coast, and indicates a piece of rocky ground split up by cavities."

This was all till recently that was known of the Serangeum and the hollow ground about Munichia. Then Jacob Dragatsis, a school teacher who has lately won himself a name by his archæological investigations in the topography of the Piræus, examined the question more closely. As far back as October, 1895, he referred several archæological friends at a meeting of the Parnassus Society at Athens to the well-known passage of Strabo (ix. 395) quoted in the text of the first part of the 'Atlas of Attica,' in which the hill Munichia is called κοῖλος καὶ ὑπόνομος πολὺ μέρος φύσει τε καὶ ἐπίτηδες ὥστ' οἰκήσεις δέχεσθαι. This passage he explained as referring to the cavities on the old hill of Munichia, which are apparently of artificial formation, or perhaps natural, but improved by human agency, and needed a closer investigation. Several of these were visible, and on closer examination proved to be artificial shafts; one had even received popularly the name of Arethusa's Cave (σπηλιὰ τῆς Ἀρετούσας). One of these was last summer investigated by Dragatsis, and the results he communicated to the Parnassus Society led to no definite conclusions as to the explanation of the chamber, which showed partly a cistern-like appearance. Then, however, the Serangeum was not in question. Since then Dragatsis has diligently followed up his studies on the cavities of the Munichia hill, and he conceived the idea of undertaking systematic excavations under the authority of the General Ephor of Antiquities. His plan was carried out, and these excavations have at last led to the discovery of the Serangeum.

The excavations were made on the east coast of the Munichia hill, on the sea side. There, near the modern seabaths of Paraskeuas, was found a subterranean chamber, which, when cleared out, led to the discovery of an opening in the cliffs in several directions. Up to a certain point the use of the chamber was dubious; then it proved to be a balneum. The first big room in the form of a cistern revealed itself to be a bathing-place; on the right of it came to light a cavity worked in the cliff, surrounded by a row of niches carved out of the rock, with a smaller row of similar cavities underneath. The upper row served as a place to put away clothing, the under as a place of deposit for the vessels used in the bath. The principal entrance on the sea side led to a round building on one side and the middle opening on the other. This has several partitions; in the depth of the same was found a door, which led to a rock-hole 10 mètres away from the street, 12 mètres long, and over 2 mètres high. The cavity leads, after a turning to the south and east, to the sea, where there is an outlet well worked in the rock.

The bathing chamber was supplied with a mosaic floor, which has been in some unknown way mostly demolished or removed. A portion of it which has been preserved represents a female going to the left, followed by two dogs. In front of this mosaic came to light another more important one. It represents a team of four horses, which move from left to right in a direction opposite that of the exit to the sea. The driver of the quadriga is a beardless young man, standing, who holds the reins in his right hand. The horses are represented in full gallop; before them is a dolphin swimming down beneath. Of the vehicle itself, besides the driver on it, only a single wheel has been preserved. The driver of the car, however, according to Dragatsis, is the eponymous hero of the Serangeum, Serangus himself. Both mosaics are of white stones on a ground of dark ones. In the heaps of earth accumulated were found various marble tablets with snakes represented in relief, clearly gifts dedicated to Zeus Milichius. This is not the first time that snake reliefs have been found here. Years ago, in the neighbourhood east of Zea, near the buildings of the street, a row of square and round votive tablets of marble came to light, which were all similarly adorned with snakes in relief, and seem to belong to the neighbouring votive niches. These snake tablets have long been rightly connected with the cultus of Zeus Milichius, especially a Berlin relief of the sort inscribed Διὶ Μειλιχίῳ. Zeus Milichius is especially a god of propitiation, and it has been rightly remarked that his salutary powers have won him a great deal of reverence in the Piræus. It is not then surprising to find in a place of bathing proofs of the veneration paid to the god of healing, and these reliefs have, perhaps, rolled or slipped from the neighbouring votive niches.

It seems doubtful if these finds belong to that building which Isæus named τὸ ἐν τῷ Σηραγγίῳ βαλανεῖον. But the discovery of a stone inscribed Ἡρῳου ὅρος shows that the Heroum united with the Serangeum was in connexion with the same. The rest of the finds are, however, no longer to be clearly distinguished, as when the street on the coast was opened up a large number of them were evidently unobserved and destroyed.

In connexion with these interesting finds and communications from Dragatsis the director of the coin cabinet, M. Johann Svoronos, has put forward a view that the hero who bore, as inhabiting a cleft, the name of Serangus, was no other than the widely travelled Argonaut Euphemus, who was at home in many parts of Greece. But as Euphemus elsewhere appears in connexion with the Minyans, the Serangeum must also be connected with this prehistoric race and their wanderings. His views cannot be more closely examined till he has published them. But it has already been objected with reason that the prehistoric date of these places, which, according to his view, have been further worked over in later times, must be proved. And this is a large question. Svoronos has, at any rate, brought no proofs to support his theory. His prehistoric date for the grotto-chambers is a mere assumption.

Spyr. P. Lambros.

SALES.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 9th inst. the following engravings: After F. Wheatley, Morning and Evening, by W. Barney, a pair, 34*l.*; The Woodman's Return and The Itinerant Potters, by J. Whessell, a pair, 32*l.*; and in the series of "Cries of London," New Mackerel, by N. Schiavonetti, jun., 30*l.*; Turnips and Carrots, by T. Gaugain, 30*l.*; Gingerbread, by Vendramini, 34*l.*; Primroses, by L. Schiavonetti, 39*l.* After G. Morland, A Tea Garden and St. James's Park, by F. D. Soiron, 68*l.*; Fishermen on Shore, by W. Hilton, 28*l.*; Gathering Nuts, Birdsnesting, Juvenile Navigators, and Blind Man's Buff, by W. Ward, a set of four, 77*l.* After J. Ward, The Citizen's Retreat and Selling Rabbits, by W. Ward, a pair, 34*l.* Alinda, by W. Ward, 52*l.* After J. R. Smith, Retirement (Mrs. Brudenell), by W. Ward, 47*l.* After Sir J. Reynolds, The Hon. Mr. Leicester Stanhope, by F. Bartolozzi, 25*l.*; Jane, Countess of Harrington, and her Children, by F. Bartolozzi, 50*l.* After G. Romney, Nature (Lady Hamilton), by J. R. Smith, 29*l.* After Huet Villiers, Mrs. Q., by W. Blake, 30*l.* After Angelica Kauffman, Lady Rushout, by T. Burke, 38*l.*; Rinaldo and Armida, by Burke, 25*l.* After Hamilton, The Months, by Bartolozzi and Gardiner, a set, 175*l.* After Downman, Mrs. Siddons, by P. W. Tomkins, 29*l.*; The Duchess of Devonshire, by Bartolozzi, 25*l.* After Gainsborough, Georgiana, Duchess of Devonshire, by Barney, 28*l.* After J. Hoppner, The Daughters of Sir T. Frankland, by W. Ward, 294*l.*

The same auctioneers sold on the 13th inst. the following, from the collection of the late Sir C. Booth. Drawing: Birket Foster, A View in Surrey, with old cottages, 77*l.* Pictures: R. Ansdell, The Coming Storm, 420*l.* C. Baxter, Gleaners returning Home, 111*l.* W. Collins, A Coast Scene, with two fishermen in conversation, 204*l.* E. W. Cooke, The Port of Venice, 120*l.*; The Entrance to Calais Harbour, 262*l.* T. S. Cooper, Summer, fifteen sheep in a landscape, 215*l.* T. Creswick, A Welsh River Scene, with figures by Marcus Stone, 113*l.* H. W. B. Davis, A Shepherd with Sheep in a Landscape, 131*l.* J. Faed, Scene from 'Woodstock,' Dr. Rochecliffe in his study, 152*l.* W. P. Frith, John Knox reproving Queen Mary, 157*l.* W. P. Frith and R. Ansdell, The Pet Fawn, 336*l.* J. C. Hook, Sailors starting for the North Sea Fishing, 535*l.*; A Shepherd, with sheep, 111*l.* Sir E. Landseer, A Piper and a Pair of Nutcrackers, 1,627*l.* F. R. Lee and T. S. Cooper, Canterbury Meadows, 546*l.* J. Linnell, A Landscape, with cattle going down to a river, 325*l.* W. J. Muller, A Landscape, view at Gillingham, on the Medway, 1,176*l.* H. O'Neil, Eastward Ho! and Home Again, 110*l.* J. Phillip and R. Ansdell, The Fair at Seville, 546*l.* D. Roberts, Sidon, looking towards the range of Lebanon, 157*l.*; Ruins of Tyre, 231*l.* C. Stanfield, The Worm's Head, Bristol Channel, 325*l.*

The same auctioneers sold on the same day the following pictures, from the collection of the late Mr. S. Henry: R. Ansdell, Craft and Confidence, 199*l.*; The Gossips at an Old Moorish Well, Granada, 183*l.* E. W. Cooke, Scheveningen Pincks, low water, 162*l.* T. S. Cooper, Sheep in Canterbury Meadows, 162*l.*; Cows on the Banks of the Stour, Evening, 189*l.* J. Faed, The Crockery-Seller, 110*l.* T. Faed, The Offer, 199*l.* W. P. Frith, Sterne and the French Innkeeper's Daughter, 131*l.* P. Graham, The Cradle of the Sea-Bird, 871*l.* Sir E. Landseer, The Eager Terrier, 567*l.*; In the Rabbit Warren, 215*l.* J. Linnell, The Emigrants, 840*l.*; A Roadside Nibble, 346*l.* Sir J. E. Millais, My Second Sermon, 351*l.* D. Roberts, View from the Gardens of the Villa Barberini at Rome, 399*l.* C. Stanfield, Cittara, in the Gulf of Salerno, 462*l.*; Oude Scheld, Texel Island, 162*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

This year the President of the Academy will probably be represented at Burlington House by a picture of exceptional charm and importance, the title of which, 'The Beginning of the End,' is justified by the design. It depicts the interior of a summer-house lined with various splendid marbles and paved with mosaics of rich colours, its roof supported by stately columns of purple serpentine, and shining pilasters of Algerian onyx. The walls are inlaid with slabs of porphyry and stones of different tints. There is a white marble bench or ambo at the foot of the wall which faces us, and it goes all round. Upon it are placed groups of comely and sumptuously clad ladies, some of whose forms are more or less visible through the semi-diaphanous tissues, while their expressions and attitudes suggest the luxuriousness of their lives, and make manifest that in the voluptuous ways of the Roman ladies the "beginning of the end" was indicated. Among these groups several nearly naked children are seen. All the company are looking with intense enjoyment while a lovely girl, who is placed near the middle of the composition, dances before them. She moves with evident delight in her own beauty, the elegance of her attitude, and the charm of the music of a performer on double pipes who, on our left, stands between two of the columns of serpentine. Turning on one foot, and holding up with both hands her rose-coloured skirts, she makes them swing in accord with the music and her own steps. Her long and thick brown tresses float behind her shoulders, and move as she moves. The picture is extremely brilliant and pure in colour; it is strongly lit, yet softer, more limpid, and more harmonious than anything we remember of Sir Edward Poynter's painting. This purity and limpidity are more particularly manifest in the shadow (an element which may be ominous of "the end") hanging in the roof, as if it impended over the groups below. Among the ornaments of the wall is a shrine of porphyry containing a silver statuette of Fortune standing on a globe. She is the only divinity in the place.

We are glad to learn that the First Commissioner of Works has hung in Committee Room 10 of the Houses of Parliament three of the leading pictures of the famous Westminster Hall competition of 1847, being (1) Mr. Watts's 'Alfred inciting the Saxons to resist the Landing of the Danes by encountering them at Sea,' for which the artist obtained a prize of 500*l.*; (2) John Cross's 'Richard Cœur de Lion forgiving

Bertram de Gourdon,' to which a prize of 300*l.* was awarded, a fine and masculine, though almost forgotten picture to which we have more than once referred as suitable for the National Gallery; and (3) Mr. F. R. Pickersgill's 'Burial of Harold,' a capital example of his art, with which he won the first prize, 500*l.* If these works cannot be fairly exhibited in the Parliament House, for the adornment of which they were painted, it would not be difficult to hang them in Westminster Hall, at least temporarily, if not permanently, and until room can be found for them elsewhere. In the same competition, 1847, several other pictures of merit appeared. Among these was Mr. J. C. Horsley's 'Henry V., believing his Father to be Dead, crowning Himself'; to this work, now, we think, at South Kensington, 200*l.* was awarded. Armitage's 'Battle of Meeanee,' which won a 500*l.* prize, was, we understand, in the artist's possession at his death; the same may be said of P. F. Poole's 'Edward's Generosity to the People of Calais, 1346,' which won 300*l.* These works might well be employed to decorate Westminster Hall. With them were Mr. Watts's delightful 'Echo,' which he still retains, and Millais's picture of 'The Widow's Mite,' which was cut in half, so that one half is now somewhere on the other side of the Atlantic; the other we last heard of at Tynemouth. Besides these, there were at Westminster in 1847 a considerable number of hideous performances no one would desire to see again. Previous exhibitions in the Hall, however, included noble works, some of which might, no doubt, with a little trouble, be recovered. Among them were works of E. Armitage, Mr. Watts, C. W. Cope, H. J. Townsend, P. F. Poole, F. M. Brown, J. Cross, D. Maclise, A. Egg, T. Woolner, W. Dyce, Mr. W. E. T. Dobson, and W. Linton.

Messrs. Scott, of Edinburgh, are about to invite subscriptions for a projected reproduction of the principal portraits in the Scottish National Portrait Gallery. Their intention is to facsimile the pictures in black-and-white by means of photography; and they exhibit as a specimen of their workmanship a portrait of Lady Arabella Stuart. The work will be issued in six quarterly parts, containing in all from sixty to seventy portraits, accompanied with brief biographical notes.

The Berlin Photographic Company is about to publish a photogravure of Miss M. L. Gow's charming picture called 'Your Majesty.' It represents the then Archbishop of Canterbury (Howley) and the Lord Chamberlain of that day (the Marquis of Conyngham) announcing to the Queen her accession to the throne immediately after the death of William IV. Miss Gow had the advantage of the Queen's own approval of the work during its progress. The Queen graciously inspected the painting and made some corrections. On the first copy of the print the Queen wrote "1837—Victoria R.I.—1897," and "by command." This signature is to be repeated in facsimile on every published impression.

The April number of the Art Journal will contain the first of a series of illustrated articles by Mr. Claude Phillips upon the pictures at Longford Castle, a large proportion of which have been exhibited at the Royal Academy. Many of them have not hitherto been reproduced. In the same number will appear M. A. Alexandre's illustrated biography of Mr. Legros.

'The Three Cruikshanks' is the title of "a bibliographical catalogue of over 500 works by various authors illustrated by Isaac, George, or Robert Cruikshank," the compiler being Mr. Frederick Marchmont, author of 'A Handbook of Anonymous Literature.' Mr. Marchmont is giving, in addition to his "list," a reproduction of the picture in oils, 'A Mother's Love for her Child,' from the Burritt Collection, and painted by George Cruikshank in his eighty-fourth year; a long and interesting letter from George Cruikshank to Robins, the publisher of Grimm's 'German Stories'; and also an unpublished letter, with rough pen-and-ink sketches, from Robert Cruikshank to Benjamin Webster, the actor. The current auction prices, apparently on the plan of Mr. Slater's 'Early Editions,' will be added, and the work itself is to appear shortly.

The exhibition of water-colour drawings by Mr. C. E. Holloway at Messrs. Goupil's Gallery, New Bond Street, acquires a melancholy interest by the death of the artist on the 5th inst., after a painful and lingering illness. Mr. Holloway's most popular etchings were 'Abingdon Bridge' and 'Nelson's Ship the Victory at Portsmouth.'

The forthcoming number of the Reliquary and Illustrated Archæologist will contain 'Recent Cave-Hunting in Derbyshire,' by Mr. J. Ward; 'Discovery of Ancient Remains in Deep Dale, near Buxton,' by Mr. W. H. Salt; 'Florentine Crickets,' by Miss Beale; 'The Etruscan Ware of Wales,' by Mr. Turner; and 'Interesting Roman and Anglo-Saxon Finds at Rothley,' by Mr. Trueman Tucker.

We are glad that those who have the knowledge are taking the trouble to interest themselves in the proposed restoration of South Leverton Church, Notts. The first scheme provided for building a new chancel arch, pulling down the old porch in order that a new Decorated porch might be erected, and putting new Decorated pinnacles upon the tower. The chancel arch and, we believe, the porch have both wisely been abandoned; but why there is a desire for new pinnacles it is difficult to understand. There is no proof that the fourteenth century builders erected any, although they prepared for them. The tower looks well without them, and as most towers in the neighbourhood have pinnacles, their absence makes a pleasant variety.

In the April number of Middlesex and Hertfordshire Notes and Queries the account of the chantries and charities of Hertfordshire will be continued. Mr. J. C. Smith will correct sundry mistakes in various historical accounts of Twickenham, and Mr. Edward Salisbury will continue his list of members of the City companies in the reign of Henry VIII. The old signs of the Strand will be dealt with by Mr. Hilton Price, and the Rev. O. W. Tancock will give a further instalment of his valuable report upon the parish registers of Hertfordshire. 'Vanishing Landmarks' will, as before, be a feature in the magazine.

Mr. Henry Blackburn, the founder of 'Academy Notes,' died at Bordighera somewhat suddenly last week. He was on his way home from Naples.—The decease is also announced of Mr. Cochran Patrick, the well-known Scottish numismatist, author of 'Records of the Coinage of Scotland' and 'Catalogue of the Medals of Scotland.'

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

St. James's Hall.—Henschel Concerts.
Crystal Palace.—Saturday Concerts.
Queen's Hall.—Promenade Concerts. Mottl Concerts.

The programme of Mr. Henschel's seventh concert on Thursday last week was of the customary nature, that is to say, brief, but well varied. A new Idyl for orchestra by Mr. B. Luard Selby, an able musician, would seem to have been written under the influence of Wagner's 'Siegfried Idyl.' It is in the same key, E natural, and there are passages which distinctly resemble others in the Bayreuth master's piece. Though by no means ineffective, Mr. Selby's Idyl did not make much impression. M. Slivinski was not quite at his ease in the first movement of Schumann's Pianoforte Concerto. The rendering was cold, and not altogether note perfect. Subsequently the artist improved, and the last movement was brilliantly played. The most enjoyable feature of the evening was Mr. Henschel's delivery of 'Saul's Dream' from Dr. Hubert Parry's oratorio, conducted by the composer. The performance commenced with Weber's Overture to 'Euryanthe,' and finished with Beethoven's C minor Symphony.

Mr. Hamish MacCunn, who conducted a new suite entitled 'Highland Memories' at the Crystal Palace Concert last Saturday, has not been much in evidence of late. The three brief movements of the new work are respectively entitled "By the Burnside," "On the Loch," and "A Harvest Dance." They are so piquantly scored and so delicately suggestive of Scottish music that, as "G." observes in his usual felicitous terms, the suite "might recall the most charming holiday which any of us ever enjoyed in the Highlands." The engagement of Herr Joachim of course ensured a large audience, and the Hungarian violinist was as grand as ever in Beethoven's Concerto and Bach's Chaconne. The vocalist was Mrs. Hutchinson, who may be thanked for bringing forward Nos. 4 and 5 of the 'Brautlieder' by that neglected though gifted composer, Peter Cornelius.

A quotation may be made from the programme of Mr. Robert Newman's Promenade Concert last Saturday evening. He says that under his direction alone "one hundred concerts in which a full orchestra has been employed have been given in Queen's Hall since August 29th last—that is to say, in less than seven months." Mr. Henry Wood's orchestra may now be regarded as a permanent body of instrumentalists, and a finer could not be desired. There were two items marked "first time," one being a 'Fantaisie Hongroise' by an Italian composer who adopts the nom de guerre of "J. Burgmein." This is a cleverly written piece in the style of Liszt's Rhapsodies, and is neither better nor worse than the best of them. Far greater praise, however, may be bestowed on a Ballade in B flat for violin and orchestra, by Miss Maud Matras, who was born in London in 1876, and is the daughter of a French father and an English mother. Miss Matras studied music under Mr. Albert Fox, and although still in her twenty-first year has already penned various instrumental and vocal pieces. Her Ballade is not only well constructed and orchestrated, but the themes are pleasant and tasteful. The solo part was excellently played by Mr. Arthur W. Payne. The scheme included Sullivan's overture 'Di Ballo,' Schubert's 'Unfinished' Symphony, Grieg's 'Peer Gynt' Suite, No. 1, and the Overture to 'Tannhäuser.'

Herr Felix Mottl is not only an extremely able conductor, but a musician of wide sympathies. He has done much to popularize Berlioz at Carlsruhe, and he can give highly interesting readings of Wagner's advanced works. That he is also in touch with Mozart was shown at the first concert this season in London on Tuesday evening, for a finer interpretation of the Symphony in

G minor could not be imagined. The piquant duet from Berlioz's opera 'Béatrice et Bénédict,' "Vous soupirez, Madame," was excellently sung in German by Frau Mottl and Fräulein Tomschik, and the same artists, with Mr. Lempriere Pringle, took part in a lengthy selection from Wagner's 'Götterdämmerung.' This included "Hagen's Wacht," Siegfried's "Rheinfahrt," the impressive scene between Brünnhilde and her sister Waltraute, and the "Trauermarsch."

Musical Gossip.

Mr. Hillier's chamber concert at St. James's Hall on Friday afternoon last week was by no means wanting in interest. Russian music dominated the programme, including the first movement of a String Quartet by Borodin, a concise and genial Quartet in C, No. 1, by V. Ewald, and a Novelette in the Hungarian style by Glazoumow. Of these we must speak in critical terms, if necessary, on another occasion. Praise, however, may unhesitatingly be bestowed on Miss Bertha Balhaser, a well-trained and intelligent child pianist, aged twelve; on the vocalists, Miss Marie Cabrera and Miss Constance Bolton; and on the accomplished violinist, Mlle. Irma Sethe.

Little has to be said concerning the Popular Concerts of last Saturday and Monday. On the former occasion the concerted items were Brahms's String Sextet in G, Op. 36, and Nos. 1, 2, and 4 of Schumann's 'Stücke im Volkston' for pianoforte and violoncello, played by Mlle. Eibenschütz and Lady Halle, who resumed her place at the first desk, as Herr Joachim was engaged at the Crystal Palace. Lady Halle introduced for the first time a 'Sérénade Mélancolique' for violin, by Tschaïkowsky, most characteristic of the composer. Miss Sarah Berry was the vocalist.

On Monday a familiar scheme was provided, opening with Beethoven's Quartet in E minor, Op. 59, No. 2, and closing with Haydn's bright Quartet in C, Op. 33, No. 3. That clever young pianist Miss Katie Goodson proved herself quite equal to Mendelssohn's 'Variations Sérieuses,' and Mrs. Helen Trust was charming in well-selected vocal items.

The fourth performance of the Bohemian String Quartet was given at St. James's Hall on Monday afternoon, and a fifth is announced for Monday next. Distinction was given to last Monday's programme by the first performance in England of a Quartet in B flat, Op. 11, by Herr Josef Suk, the second violinist in the party. The work, if not altogether original, is distinctively Czechish in character. Quartets by Beethoven and Brahms were also given with the Bohemians' customary spirit and faultless ensemble.

Mr. Gerard Cobb's new Pianoforte Quartet in E, performed for the first time at the eightieth concert of the Musical Artists' Society at St. Martin's Town Hall on Monday evening, is one of the most genial works this earnest composer has penned. It does not in the least smell of the lamp, but is melodious in the subject-matter and musicianly in the thematic development. The quartet was well played by executants whose names are not yet familiar to the public.

M. Henri Kowalski, the principal executant at a concert in St. James's Hall on Tuesday afternoon, is a brilliant pianist, but his touch is somewhat hard. He played pieces (none of any great dimensions) by various composers, including himself; and Miss Rosa Bird, a soprano sfogato, was acceptable in songs by Schubert, Meyerbeer, Bishop, and Sullivan.

A new Pianoforte Concerto by M. Saint-Saëns will be introduced for the first time in England at the fifth Lamoureux Concert on Friday evening next week. The solo part will be played by M. Louis Diemer. This work will take the place of the French composer's gruesome 'Danse Macabre' and Dvorák's Serenade for strings.

Regret may be felt, but no surprise, at the announcement that the concerts of the Musical Guild are to be discontinued after the current series, owing to lack of support. We have said before, and we say again, that the Guild should have given their performances in a more central position. Perhaps, before it is too late, this advice may be taken and the enterprise continued.

Regret will be felt by musicians and amateurs at the death of Mr. Berthold Tours, which occurred on Thursday last week, after an illness lasting two years. The deceased was fifty-eight years old, and had led an active life. After assisting Sir Joseph (then Mr.) Barnby as editor and musical adviser as to publications for the firm of Messrs. Novello, Ewer & Co., in 1878 he took the principal chair in this department, and the correctness of the compositions emanating from the house named is, no doubt, due in great measure to his zeal and intelligence. As a composer of church music Mr. Berthold Tours was one of the most successful foreigners who have taken up their abode in this country, for he knew how to combine French grace with English solidity in ecclesiastical music.

A Correspondent writes:—

"'Fervaal,' action musicale, in three acts and a prologue, text and music by M. Vincent d'Indy, was produced at the Théâtre de la Monnaie, Brussels, on Friday, March 12th. The story, a legendary one, is symbolical of the rise of the Christian and decline of the Druidical religion. Wagner is the model of the talented French composer, yet he has much to say for himself. There are many representative themes, and whatever the value of the music per se, the masterly use made of them deserves full recognition. The work is abstruse, and demands more than one hearing. In the third act the composer rises to a very high level. The three rôles of Fervaal (a Celtic chief), Guilhen (a princess), and Arfagard (a Druid priest) were impersonated by M. Imbart de la Tour, Madame Raunay, and M. Seguin respectively. The orchestra was under the direction of M. Flon. At the close, artists and poet-composer were enthusiastically applauded."

Berlioz's 'Les Troyens à Carthage' is to be performed on the concert platform by the Liverpool Philharmonic Society on the 30th inst. We hope to refer in some detail to this interesting musical event.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Sun.	Orchestral Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall
—	National Sunday League, 7, Queen's Hall.
—	String Quartet Concert, 7.30, Queen's Small Hall.
Mon.	Bohemian String Quartet, 3, St. James's Hall
—	Messrs. H. Charles and W. H. Speer's Concert, 3, Steinway Hall.
—	Madame Marchesi's Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Popular Concert, 8, St. James's Hall
—	M. Lamoureux's Orchestral Concert, 8.30, Queen's Hall
Tues.	Trinity College Students' Concert, 8, St. Martin's Town Hall.
—	Walenn Quartet Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	M. Lamoureux's Orchestral Concert, 8.30, Queen's Hall.
Wed.	Mr. Philip Cathie's Violin Recital, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	M. Lamoureux's Orchestral Concert, 3, Queen's Hall
—	Messrs. G. and H. Saint-George's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Philharmonic Concert, 8, Queen's Hall
Thurs.	M. Lamoureux's Orchestral Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Miss Florence May's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Queen's Small Hall
—	Royal Choral Society, Spohr's 'Last Judgment' and Dr. Hubert Parry's 'Job,' 8, Albert Hall.
—	Mr. C. Sinkin's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
Fri.	Royal Artillery Band Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Miss Doris Dalton's Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	M. Lamoureux's Orchestral Concert, 8.30, Queen's Hall.
Sat.	Crystal Palace Concert, 3
—	Mozart Society's Concert, 3, No. 26, George Street, Hanover Square
—	Popular Concert, 3, St. James's Hall
—	M. Lamoureux's Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Mr. R. Ortmans's Violin Recital, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Saturday Orchestral Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.

DRAMA

Dramatic Gossip.

Mr. Mayer's new season of French plays will begin at the Adelphi on the 21st of June with Madame Bernhardt in the altered version of 'Lorenzaccio.'

The new theatre in the Haymarket is to be opened by Mr. Tree next month with a representation of 'The Seats of the Mighty,' to give way in due course to 'Julius Cæsar' and a new comedy by Mr. Henry Arthur Jones.

'Julius Cæsar' was played by Phelps at Sadler's Wells in May, 1846, and was given by the Saxe-Meiningen Company, with Herr Ludwig Barnay as Antony, at Drury Lane in the summer of 1881. There are comparatively few London playgoers who can have witnessed an English performance.

Miss Kate Santley has written to contradict a rumour, transferred from a theatrical paper to our columns, that she has parted with the lease of the Royalty Theatre.

'As You Like It' is among the Shakspearean plays that can now boast of a run of over one hundred performances, that number having been reached at the St. James's, from which house it is now withdrawn.

By his will the late Henry Thomas Betty leaves 5,000*l.* to the General Theatrical Fund and to the Dramatic and Musical Benevolent 500*l.*, both sums to be doubled on the death of Mrs. Betty. His residuary estate is to be ultimately devoted to a theatrical charity, to be called Betty's Fund, for poor actors and actresses.

'Secret Service' is the title of a play by Mr. William Gillette, dealing with the American Civil War, to be produced at the Adelphi on May 15th. The author will present the hero.

'On Leave' is, we are told, to be the title of Mr. Horner's version of 'Le Sursis' to be produced at Terry's Theatre at Easter. Miss Alma Stanley, Miss May Palfrey, Miss Esmé Beringer, Mr. Beauchamp, and Mr. Playfair will take part in the performance.

'The Alchemist,' a drama by Mr. E. Shillingford, will be produced tentatively at Birmingham on the 25th inst., and will be supported by a cast including Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Maude and Mr. Herbert Waring.

'Byeways' (sic) is the title of a one-act piece by Mr. G. S. Payne, which serves as curtain-raiser at the Comedy, and is played by Miss Gwynne Herbert, Miss Florence Haydon, Mr. Lovell, and Mr. Volpé. It is a "costume play," showing the manner in which the consent of a youth to marry a girl he has ruined is won by introducing her to his eminently undesirable parents.

Miss Marion Terry has been secured by Mr. Wyndham for the forthcoming production at the Criterion of Mr. Jones's 'Physician.' Miss Mary Moore, Mr. Wyndham, Mr. Alfred Bishop, and Mr. J. G. Taylor are also in the cast.

Miss Annie Rose will produce in May 'Truth and its Shadow' by Messrs. Edmund Gurney and Malcolm Carter.

The production at the Lyceum Theatre, Edinburgh, of 'Henry Esmond,' adapted by Mr. T. Edgar Pemberton, appears to have been a success. Mr. Compton was Esmond, Miss Virginia Bateman, Lady Castlewood, and Miss Gertrude Scott, Beatrix.

We hear of the death of Shiel Barry, a representative of character and Irish parts. His best-known performance in London was the Miser in 'Les Cloches de Corneville.'

Scenes from Tasso's 'Aminta' will be given at Queen's College, Harley Street, after Easter, with scenery and costumes. The music will be composed for the occasion by Mr. Henry Gadsby.

To Correspondents—S. J. A. F.—C. J. G.—E. M.—R. T.—J. P. G.—J. R. E.—received.

Enquirer.—You should send your inquiry to Notes and Queries.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

Erratum.—No. 3619, p. 307, col. 3, line 25 from bottom, for "Maine" read Mayne.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

MRS. HUNGERFORD'S LAST NOVEL.—Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

LOVICE. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD, Author of 'Molly Bawn,' &c.

ALSO BY MRS. HUNGERFORD.—SECOND EDITION, crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

An ANXIOUS MOMENT, &c.

"The beauty and grace and spirit of the daughters of the ancient Anglo-Irish families is proverbial the world over, but no one ever drew these women as Mrs. Hungerford did. One might almost think that she partly gave them this reputation. I do not think that any English author ever drew so many delightful heroines. Mrs. Hungerford makes you see and believe in the beauty and graces of these girls in their teens and the sweetest of their twenties. Her heroines, for all their family likeness, are so high-spirited, so generous, so witty, so gay, capable of such tenderness when the process of the taming of the shrew is finished, that one reads of them all with the old zest created by Molly Bawn."—Queen.

NEW EDITIONS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

The PROFESSOR'S EXPERIMENT. | NORA CREINA. | APRIL'S LADY. | A POINT of CONSCIENCE. [April 8.

MRS. CROKER'S NEW NOVEL.—Crown 8vo. buckram, 6s.

BEYOND the PALE: an Irish Romance. By B. M. CROKER, Author of 'A Family Likeness,' &c.

"The unflagging vivacity and brisk naturalness of Mrs. Croker's style have rarely been more happily displayed than in her latest novel.....This capital story.....Almost every character in the story is typical, and all the types are true."—World.

"Mrs. Croker is once more on her native heath, and quite at her best.....Told with that unflagging vivacity, that lightness of touch, and that keen sense of humour which entitle her to occupy among the women novelists of the day very much the same place that Charles Lever held among his brother writers in a former generation."—Spectator.

"A more alluring, romantic, and energetic story we have not read for a long time.....All who read Mrs. Croker's delightful story will thoroughly enjoy its brilliant wit, its continuous succession of lively incidents, and will appreciate its excellent pictures of Irish life, and its unfailing sincerity of purpose."—Daily Mail

"Mrs. Croker is always at her best when the setting of her story is the Emerald Isle, and when the personages of her drama are the sons and daughters of Erin. In 'Beyond the Pale' we are in Ireland, and all sorts and conditions of Irish men and women play their part therein and are portrayed with the author's usual felicity of touch."—Daily News.

WILLIAM WESTALL'S NEW NOVEL.—THIRD EDITION just ready, crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

WITH the RED EAGLE: a Romance of the Tyrol. By WILLIAM WESTALL, Author of 'Sons of Belial,' &c.

"The environments of period and of place are instinct with a fascination that loses nought in Mr. Westall's skilled hands.....The story.....is marked by an originality and a dash that hold you like a spell from first to last. The novel is fresh, vigorous, and altogether delightful."—Black and White.

"Mr. Westall is one of the most resourceful writers of the day, but he has never exceeded in picturesqueness and interest the present story.....A story of unflagging interest.....The style of the story is excellent, vivid, and terse throughout, and especially adapted to the vigour of the numerous battle scenes."—Manchester Courier.

"Mr. Westall has rarely been better inspired than in his present story.....The author is especially happy in his portraits.....It abounds in striking pictures."—Morning Post.

"All his energy, all his pains, have gone to the recreating of the real men who figure in his pages; and here he is well and successfully employed. The Tyrolese struggle for liberty in the early years of this century is a stirring and an unhackneyed subject, and Mr. Westall treats it vividly and picturesquely.....Hairbreadth escapes and adventures abound, and they are for the most part excellently told."—World.

The TALE of the TEN. By W. CLARK RUSSELL. With 12 Illustrations by G. Montbard. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

AN ARTIST'S NOVEL.—Crown 8vo. cloth extra, gilt top, 6s.

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. WALLER. With 9 Full-Page Illustrations by the Author.

"Steeped in mystery is Mr. Waller's romance.....There are passages that are delightful.....It will please readers who love mystery and would escape for a while from the tedious round and common light of workaday life."—British Review.

MARK TWAIN'S LAST BOOK.—Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE; and other Stories. By MARK TWAIN. With a Photogravure Portrait of the Author.

"What more desirable lot could await the vast host of Mark Twain's admirers than to renew acquaintance with such characters as Huck Finn, Tom Sawyer, Aunt Sally, Uncle Silas, and Aunt Polly—five immortals from 'Huckleberry Finn'? In the tale which lends its title to 'Tom Sawyer, Detective,' we are delighted to pass the time of day with these old friends, and especially pleasant it is to follow the fresh adventures of the famous pair of scapegraces."—Literary World.

Also by MARK TWAIN.—NEW EDITIONS, crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

A TRAMP ABROAD. With 314 Illustrations.
MARK TWAIN'S LIBRARY of HUMOUR. With 197 Illustrations.
The STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT, &c.
The PRINCE and the PAUPER. With 190 Illustrations.
ROUGHING IT; and The INNOCENTS at HOME. With 197 Illustrations by F. A. Fraser.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

The NARRATIVE of CAPTAIN COIGNET, SOLDIER of the EMPIRE, 1776–1850. Edited by LOREDAN LARCHEY.

With 100 Illustrations by Le Blant.

"This is a long book, but every page of it is worth reading.....His account of the retreat from Moscow has the vivid realism and primal freshness which were to be looked for in the narrative of one who had taken part in it; and we get, in passing, many glimpses of the great Napoleon as he appeared to the eye of one of his loyal and admiring followers. Although merely the literal record of a veteran soldier's experiences, the book is as fascinating as a romance."—Daily Mail.

NEW TWO-SHILLING NOVELS.

AT MARKET VALUE. By Grant Allen.
*BEYOND the DREAMS of AVARICE. By Sir Walter Besant.
*LADY PATTY. By Mrs. Hungerford.
MOUNT DESPAIR. By D. Christie Murray. [March 25.
*The GOOD SHIP "MOHOCK." By W. Clark Russell. [April 1.
The PRINCE of BALKISTAN. By Allen Upward.

 Marked * are issued also in cloth, at 2s. 6d.

BY SIR WALTER BESANT.—NEW EDITIONS, crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

The REVOLT of MAN. With a New Preface.
The MASTER CRAFTSMAN. [April 13.
IN DEACON'S ORDERS, &c. With a Frontispiece by A. Forestier.

FRANK BARRETT'S NEW NOVEL.—Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

A MISSING WITNESS. By FRANK BARRETT. With 8 Illustrations by W. H. Margetson.

"The story of the struggles of the three young dressmakers is described with wonderful spirit and convincingness, and the 'little mother' of the volume is a delightful study."
"Written in Mr. Frank Barrett's best manner, the interest.....well maintained from the opening to the closing chapter."—Daily Telegraph. Morning Leader.

On March 25, NEW EDITION, the Two Series in One Volume, crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

CAVALRY LIFE and REGIMENTAL LEGENDS. By JOHN STRANGE WINTER. Handsomely printed in New Type.

A NEW EDITION, crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

ROGUES and VAGABONDS: a Novel. By GEORGE R. SIMS.

CHEAPER EDITION, crown folio, cloth, 2s. 6d.

PHIL MAY'S SKETCH-BOOK. Containing 54 Humorous Drawings by the Artist.

FOUNDED ON SARDOU'S PLAY.—Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

MADAME SANS-GENE. By EDMOND LEPELLETIER. Translated by JOHN DE VILLIERS.

NEW EDITIONS OF POPULAR NOVELS.—Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

BY MRS. ALEXANDER.
A LIFE INTEREST.
MONA'S CHOICE.
BY WOMAN'S WIT.

BY E. LYNN LINTON.
DULCIE EVERTON. [April 1.
BY MRS. OLIPHANT.
The SORCERESS.

BY HAWLEY SMART.
LONG ODDS.
The MASTER of RATHKELLY.
The OUTSIDER.

BY T. W. SPEIGHT.
The MASTER of TRENANCE.
BY MRS. CAMPBELL PRAED.
MRS. TREGASKISS.

MOTHS. By OUIDA. POPULAR EDITION. Set in New Type, medium 8vo. 6d.; cloth, 1s. [March 22.

A NEW EDITION, large crown 8vo. art linen, 7s. 6d.

MY FIRST BOOK. By TWENTY-TWO FAMOUS AUTHORS. With a Prefatory Story by JEROME K. JEROME, and 185 Illustrations.

FIFTH EDITION, with a NEW PREFACE, crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

ENGLISH SURNAMES: their Sources and Significations. By CHARLES WAREING BARDSLEY, M.A., Hon. Canon of Carlisle.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

THE

NATIONAL OBSERVER

AND

BRITISH REVIEW.

3d.

WEEKLY.

The PROPRIETORS of

THE NATIONAL OBSERVER

AND OF

THE BRITISH REVIEW

have arranged to amalgamate these two properties, and they will therefore appear in future as one paper under their joint title.

THE

NATIONAL OBSERVER

AND

BRITISH REVIEW.

3d.

WEEKLY.

The first amalgamated issue appears to-day, Saturday, March 20.

Mr. W. H. MALLOCK will be the Editor, supported by members of the staffs of both papers.

THE

NATIONAL OBSERVER

AND

BRITISH REVIEW.

3d.

WEEKLY.

THE PRICE WILL BE—

THREEPENCE Weekly.

The Paper is obtainable at all Messrs. Smith's Bookstalls, and of all Newsagents, or direct from the Offices—

37 AND 39, ESSEX-STREET, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

NEW AND RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

DOMESDAY-BOOK and BEYOND. Three Essays in the Early History of England. By F. W. MAITLAND, LL.D., Downing Professor of the Laws of England in the University of Cambridge, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. Royal 8vo. 15*s.*

ATHENÆUM.—"The advent of a new book from the pen of Professor Maitland is always an event of importance in the world of law and history.....There are points, no doubt, in the author's conclusions which are open to some question, and in a few—a very few—cases he may possibly be mistaken; but it is at least safe to say that Domesday students owe him a real debt of gratitude for his perfect and scrupulous candour."

TIMES.—"Prof. Maitland's volume is much more than a new contribution to the ever-growing, never-ending literature relating to Domesday. With a few alterations in form and contents, this collection of essays might stand for the first volume of Prof. Maitland's 'History of English Law,' of which they were originally intended to form part. That work took up the story after the Conquest. In this volume are traced, laboriously and ingeniously, the roots of the system which originated long before that event."

The HISTORY of ENGLISH LAW BEFORE the TIME of EDWARD I. By Sir FREDERICK POLLOCK, Bart., M.A. LL.D., Corpus Professor of Jurisprudence in the University of Oxford, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, and F. W. MAITLAND, LL.D. 2 vols. royal 8vo. 40*s.*

ATHENÆUM.—"The patient and most valuable researches on which the Downing and Corpus Professors are well known to have been long engaged have borne goodly fruit in the two volumes before us.....Of the scope and execution of their work we shall have to speak in detail; but we may say at once that there can be no question as to the magistral handling of their subject, the broad, luminous treatment of their materials, the frequent originality, yet unvarying soundness, of the conclusions at which they arrive."

NEW VOLUME OF JEBB'S SOPHOCLES.

CLASSICAL REVIEW.—"It is the rare combination of knowledge, accuracy, and judgment, with literary subtlety, poetic insight, and lucid and cogent exposition, which have made Prof. Jebb so masterly an interpreter of this great poet and finest of artists.....Of the Sophocles as a whole we can only add our mite to the general verdict of scholars, who place it in the first rank of extant editions of the classics."

GUARDIAN.—"The book has taken its place; it is the standard authority on Sophocles, and a marvel of literary finish and complete exposition."

SOPHOCLES.—AJAX. Part VII. of the PLAYS and FRAGMENTS. With Critical Notes, Commentary, and Translation in English Prose. By R. C. JEBB, Litt.D. M.P., Regius Professor of Greek and Fellow of Trinity College in the University of Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.*

SOPHOCLES.—Part VIII. The FRAGMENTS. [Preparing.

SOPHOCLES.—The TEXT of the SEVEN PLAYS. Edited by R. C. JEBB, Litt.D. M.P. Crown 8vo. [Preparing.

SOPHOCLES.—Translated into English by R. C. JEBB, Litt.D. M.P. Crown 8vo. [Preparing.

THREE NEW WORKS ON EDUCATIONAL SCIENCE.

CHAPTERS on the AIMS and PRACTICE of TEACHING. Edited by FREDERIC SPENCER, M.A. Phil.Doc., Professor of the French Language and Literature in the University College of North Wales, formerly Chief Master on the Modern Side in the Leys School, Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

TIMES.—"The essays are vigorous and suggestive, and display a command of the theory and practice of education which should secure the attention of all who are interested in educational progress and reform."

VITTORINO DA FELTRE, and OTHER HUMANIST EDUCATORS: Essays and Versions. An Introduction to the History of Classical Education. By W. H. WOODWARD, M.A., Christ Church, Oxford, Lecturer on Education in Victoria University. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

TIMES.—"THE FIRST MODERN SCHOOLMASTER.—Mr. Woodward has drawn a most engaging portrait of this great teacher—his aims, his methods, his rare personal qualities, and his disinterested devotion to high educational ideals.....We can very warmly commend the whole monograph as at once singularly attractive and full of instruction."

ARNOLD of RUGBY. His School Life and Contributions to Education. Edited by J. J. FINDLAY, M.A., late Scholar of Wadham College, Oxford, Principal of the College of Preceptors' Training College. [Nearly ready.

TEXTS AND STUDIES.—Contributions to Biblical and Patristic Literature.

Edited by J. ARMITAGE ROBINSON, D.D., Norrisian Professor of Divinity.

Vol. V. No. I. APOCRYPHA ANECDOTA. Second Series. By M. R. JAMES, Litt.D., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

The PHILOCALIA of ORIGEN. The Greek Text, Edited from the Manuscripts, with Critical Apparatus and Indexes, and an Introduction on the Sources of the Text. By J. ARMITAGE ROBINSON, D.D. Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

UNIFORM WITH THE ABOVE.

The COMMENTARY of ORIGEN on ST. JOHN'S GOSPEL. The Text Revised, with a Critical Introduction and Indices, by A. E. BROOKE, M.A. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 15*s.* net.

THE CAMBRIDGE GREEK TESTAMENT FOR SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.—New Volume.

The EPISTLE to the PHILIPPIANS. Edited by Rev. H. C. G. MOULE, D.D. 2*s.* 6*d.*

CAMBRIDGE GEOGRAPHICAL SERIES.

General Editor: F. H. H. GUILLEMARD, M.D., late Lecturer in Geography in the University of Cambridge.

A HISTORY of ANCIENT GEOGRAPHY. By the Rev. H. F. TOZER, M.A., Honorary Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford. Crown 8vo. with Maps, 10*s.* 6*d.* [Nearly ready.

ETHNOLOGY. By A. H. KEANE, F.R.G.S., late Vice-President Anthropological Institute, Corresponding Member Italian and Washington Anthropological Societies. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. Second Edition, Revised, 10*s.* 6*d.*

CAMBRIDGE NATURAL SCIENCE MANUALS.

BIOLOGICAL SERIES.—General Editor: A. E. SHIPLEY, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Christ's College.

A MANUAL and DICTIONARY of the FLOWERING PLANTS and FERNS. By J. C. WILLIS, M.A., Director of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Ceylon. Crown 8vo. 2 vols. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BOOKMAN.—"One of the most useful books existing for students of botany.....The student who has this book and the chances which Kew, or even one of the smaller gardens, affords him, will make a steady and really scientific progress."

The VERTEBRATE SKELETON. By S. H. REYNOLDS, M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.* [Nearly ready.

PITT PRESS SERIES.—New Volume.

BACON'S ESSAYS. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by ALFRED S. WEST, M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge, Fellow of University College, London. Cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*; half-parchment, 5*s.*

THE CAMBRIDGE MILTON FOR SCHOOLS.—New Volume. Completing the Edition of 'Paradise Lost.'

GUARDIAN.—"This edition will, we feel sure, long continue to be the standard school text of 'Paradise Lost.'"

PARADISE LOST. Books IX. and X. With Introduction, Notes, Glossary, and Indexes. By A. W. VERITY, M.A., sometime Scholar of Trinity College. 2*s.*

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria-lane.

WALTER SCOTT'S NEW BOOKS.

THE TWO CYCLING BOOKS OF THE SEASON.

Foolscap 8vo. cloth gilt, elegant, 2s. 6d.

LADY CYCLING. By Miss F. J. ERSKINE.

An eminently practical handbook which all women cyclists will find invaluable. It deals with the health and social aspects of cycling, cycling dress for town and country, with makes of machines, correct and incorrect methods of riding, with riding in towns, touring, hill-climbing, with bicycle gymkhanas, with the care of the machine, &c. The book is not only practical, but is issued in an elegant form which should adapt it for ladies' libraries or tables.

Foolscap 8vo. cloth gilt, elegant, 2s. 6d.

ALL ROUND CYCLING. By Sir B. W. RICHARDSON, G. LACY HILLIER, EVELYN EVERETT GREEN, C. RIVERS VINE, JOHN WATSON, F.C.S., P. A. THOMAS, B.A.

COUNT TOLSTOY'S LONGEST AND MOST MAGNIFICENT WORK.

IN TWO DOUBLE VOLUMES, 7s.

WAR and PEACE. By Count TOLSTOY. Contains 1600 pages, printed in very clear type.

This is not only one of the finest, but probably one of the longest novels ever written, occupying, as it does in this edition, 1600 large and closely printed pages. Notwithstanding its vast length, its multitude of figures, the number of events it deals with, the interest of 'War and Peace' is not only intense, but unbroken throughout the immense march of the story, so that no reader, great though the undertaking is, will fail to read to the end once he has started on the book.

THE CANTERBURY POETS.

IMPORTANT ADDITIONS.

WORKS BY ROBERT BROWNING.

THREE VOLS. NOW READY.

VOL. I.

PIPPA PASSES, and other Poetic Dramas. By ROBERT BROWNING. With an Introductory Note by FRANK RINDER.

VOL. II.

A BLOT in the 'SCUTCHEON, and other Poetic Dramas. By ROBERT BROWNING. With an Introductory Note by FRANK RINDER.

VOL. III.

DRAMATIC ROMANCES and LYRICS, and SORDELLO. By ROBERT BROWNING. To which is Prefixed an Appreciation of Browning by Miss E. DIXON.

BINDINGS.

The above Volumes are supplied in the following Bindings:

IN GREEN ROAN, Boxed, with Frontispiece in Photogravure, 2s. 6d. net.

IN ART LINEN, with Frontispiece in Photogravure, 2s.

IN WHITE LINEN, with Frontispiece in Photogravure, 2s.

IN BROCADE, 2 vols. in Shell Case to match (each vol. with Frontispiece), 4s. per Set, or 3 vols. 6s. per Set.

And in the ordinary SHILLING BINDINGS, green cloth, cut edges, and blue cloth, uncut edges (without Photogravure).

NEW VOLUME BY ERIC MACKAY.

The LOVER'S MISSAL. By Eric MACKAY, Author of 'Love-Letters of a Violinist.'

The 'Love-Letters of a Violinist,' by Mr. Eric Mackay, already included in the Canterbury Poets, having run into no less than ELEVEN EDITIONS, the appearance of a new volume of verse by Mr. Mackay, in the same Series, will doubtless be appreciated by his very large circle of readers.

THE CONTEMPORARY SCIENCE SERIES.

NEW EDITIONS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. With numerous Illustrations.

MAN and WOMAN: a Study of Human Secondary Sexual Characters. By HAVELOCK ELLIS. Second Edition.

"Mr. Havelock Ellis belongs, in some measure to the continental school of anthropologists, but while equally methodical in the collection of facts he is far more cautious in the invention of theories, and he has the further distinction of being not only able to think but able to write. His book is a sane and impartial consideration, from a psychological and anthropological point of view, of a subject which is certainly of primary interest."—Athenæum

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

FOURTH EDITION, COMPLETELY REVISED.

HYPNOTISM. By Dr. Albert Moll.

"Marks a step of some importance in the study of some difficult physiological and psychological problems which have not yet received much attention in the scientific world of England."—Nature.

London:

WALTER SCOTT, LIMITED, Paternoster-square.

GAY & BIRD'S LIST.

AN UP-TO-DATE STOCK EXCHANGE NOVEL.

The EARTH for a DOLLAR. By RUFUS RANDELL (Roof Rooter). Crown 8vo cloth gilt 6s.

Morning Post—"Well calculated to make the scales fall from the eyes that have been hitherto wilfully blind."

TARRAGAL; or, Bush Life in Australia. By E. T. HOOLEY. Crown 8vo. pp. 226. Nine Full Page Illustrations by R. H. Mather. Attractively bound, 3s. 6d.

ISBAN ISRAEL: a South African Story. By GEORGE COSSINS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The GROWTH of the AMERICAN NATION. By HARRY PRATT JUDSON, LL.D. Crown 8vo. pp. 359, with 71 Illustrations and 20 Maps. Cloth, 6s.

The cheapest and most compact history of the United States.

SOME FIRST STEPS in HUMAN PROGRESS. By FREDERICK STARR. Crown 8vo. pp. 305, with 34 Illustrations from Photographs, &c., cloth, 6s.

INDUSTRIAL EVOLUTION of the UNITED STATES. By CARROLL D. WRIGHT, LL.D. Crown 8vo. pp. 362, with 48 Illustrations and 38 Maps and Diagrams, cloth, 6s.

INITIAL STUDIES in AMERICAN LETTERS. By HENRY A. BEERS. Crown 8vo. pp. 291, with 8 Portraits, cloth, 6s.

THINKING, FEELING, DOING. By E. W. SCRIPTURE, Ph.D. Crown 8vo. pp. 304, with 110 Illustrations, cloth 6s.

EUROPE in the NINETEENTH CENTURY. By HARRY PRATT JUDSON, LL.D. Crown 8vo. pp. 343, with 70 Illustrations and 16 Maps, cloth, 6s.

BUILDING CONSTRUCTION and SUPERINTENDENCE. Part I. MASON'S WORK. By F. E. KIDDER, C.E., M.D. Large 8vo. pp. 409, with 264 Plans, Diagrams, &c., cloth, 20s.

SECOND EDITION, now ready, 6s.

MARM LISA. By Mrs. Wiggin, Author of 'Timothy's Quest,' 'Birds' Christmas Carol,' &c.

Baron-de-Book-Worms says:—"It is a story told with that rare combination of humour and pathos that is genius."

Daily News.—"It is unsurpassed by anything its gifted authoress has yet written....For English readers who have not yet made our authoress's acquaintance there is a pleasure in store. Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin's humour and pathos are as pure and true as any that America is producing nowadays."

ETIDORHPA; or, the End of the Earth. By JOHN URI LLOYD. Large 8vo. full of remarkable Illustrations, cloth gilt, 10*s.* net.

An Occult story of remarkable power.

SECOND EDITION, now ready, 3s. 6d.

The WORLD BEAUTIFUL. By Lilian WHITING. Fcap. tastefully printed by T. & A. Constable, bound in red or white buckram, gilt top, 3s. 6d.

H.M. the QUEEN has been pleased to accept a copy of this work.

DR. CLIFFORD writes:—"It is a delight and an inspiration to make its acquaintance."

New Age—"In a simple literary style the author treats of subjects which have for us always an indefinable charm."

Literary World—"Fancy, humour, sympathy, sense, mingle in its pages with the happiest results."

PRESIDENTS of the UNITED STATES, 1789-1894. Written by the most Eminent Writers, and Edited by JOHN JAMES WILSON. Large 8vo. illustrated with 23 beautiful Steel Engravings and over 100 Facsimiles of Autograph Letters, Portraits, and Views in the Text, cloth, gilt top, 12s. 6d. net.

The RULERS of the MEDITER- RANEAN. By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS. Crown 8vo. 36 charming Illustrations, cloth gilt, 6s.

Globe.—"A book of travel of more than ordinary interest and value."

Daily News—"He is a lively gossiping companion, and his observations and experiences are full of entertaining glimpses of Oriental life."

The BORDERLAND of CZAR and KAISER. Notes from Both Sides of the Russian Frontier. By POULTNEY BIGELOW. Crown 8vo. 60 charming Illustrations, being Reproductions of Drawings and Photographs taken on the Spot by F. Remington, tastefully bound, 7s. 6d. net.

Times—"Lively sketches, military, social, and political....Shrewd and well informed, and very skilfully illustrated."

THE METAPHYSICAL MAGAZINE.

Devoted to Occult, Philosophic, and Scientific Research, Mental Healing, and Psychic Phenomena

Conducted by LEANDER EDMUND WHIPPLE.

MARCH Number now ready, 1*s. 6d.* net.

Contents.

The DIVINE PARADOX. Hudor Genone.
The SPHINX and "BEING." XX. C. H. A. Bjerregaard.
WHAT SURVIVES in MAN? A. L. Mearkle.
The END, or GOOD. Josephus C. Lipes, B.S.
AFFINITY of SOULS. Marie Lahrmann Bird.
A PIVOTAL PHILOSOPHY. Charles B. Newcomb.
OUR PLACE in LIFE. L. Kneale Read.
The GARDENER and the CORN: an Allegory. Henry Seward Hubbard.
DEPARTMENT of PSYCHIC EXPERIENCES:—
Dream Visions. True and False. W. R. Gay and A. W. St. John.
Clairvoyance or Telepathy? Irene Safford.
DEPARTMENT of HEALING PHILOSOPHY:—
The Insanity of Fear. Eliza Calvert Hall.
'Peace, be still!' Adelaide E. Reed.
Rabia. Poem.
The WORLD of THOUGHT. With Editorial Comment.

London:

GAY & BIRD, 22, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

Agency for American Books.

THE SCIENTIFIC PRESS LIST.

NOW READY royal 8vo. cloth gilt, illustrated by a series of Original Micro-Photographs and many Illustrations in the Text, price 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

The MENOPAUSE and its DISORDERS. With Chapters on Menstruation. By A. D. LEITH NAPIER, M.D., M.R.C.P., late Editor of the British Gynæcological Journal, Author of 'Notes on Puerperal Fever,' 'The Thermometer in Obstetrics and Gynæcology,' &c.

JUST OUT. 12mo. Illustrated with 75 Engravings in the Text and 9 Coloured and Half-Toned Plates, price 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

PRACTICAL POINTS in NURSING. For Nurses in Private Practice. With an Appendix containing Recipes for Feeding the Sick, Recipes for Invalid Foods and Beverages, Weights and Measures, Dose List, and a full Glossary of Medical Terms and Nursing Treatment. By EMILY A. M. STONEY.

"Written especially for private nurses, thus dealing with a phase of work seldom, if ever, the theme of a text-book. . . . The hints given are excellent, and we hope they may be widely read."—British Medical Journal

Royal 8vo. Illustrated by Coloured Examples, cloth, price 2*s. 6d.*

HEAVY TRIAL BALANCES MADE EASY. A new method to secure the immediate agreement of Trial Balances without trouble. By J. G. CRAGGS, F.C.A.

READY SHORTLY, crown 8vo. profusely illustrated, cloth gilt, price 5*s.*

The MYSTERY and ROMANCE of ALCHEMY and PHARMACY. By C. J. S. THOMPSON, Author of 'The Chemist's Compendium,' 'The Cult of Beauty,' &c.

JUST PUBLISHED, price 1*s.*

CHARITY ORGANISATION and JESUS CHRIST. By Rev. C. L. MARSON, M.A.

This tractate is a plea for the needy and against the niggardly. It is addressed to such men and women as think that Scientific Almsgiving which conflicts with Scientific Theology or with Redeemed Humanity had better get out of the way as soon as possible.

"THE BURDETT SERIES" OF POPULAR TEXT-BOOKS ON NURSING.

Handy Pocket Size, bound in cloth.

No. 1. PRACTICAL HINTS on DISTRICT NURSING. By AMY HUGHES, Superintendent of Nurses, Linton Union Workhouse, late Superintendent of the Central Training Home, Queen Victoria's Jubilee Institute for Nurses for the Sick Poor, and of the Metropolitan and National Nursing Association. Price 1*s.*

No. 2. The MATRON'S COURSE. An Intro- duction to Hospital and Private Nursing. By Miss S. E. ORME, Lady Superintendent London Temperance Hospital. Price 1*s.*

No. 3. MIDWIVES' POCKET-BOOK. By Miss HONNOR MORTEN.

London: THE SCIENTIFIC PRESS, LTD., 28 and 29, Southampton-street, Strand, W.C.

In demy 8vo. strongly bound in buckram, and printed on good paper, with broad margin for Notes and Additions, 1*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

The New (Tenth) Volume of BOOK PRICES CURRENT.

Being a Record of the Prices at which Books have been Sold at Auction, with the Titles and Descriptions in Full, the Catalogue Numbers, and the Names of the Purchasers, from December, 1895, to November, 1896.

 The new Volume contains, for the first time in the history of BOOK PRICES CURRENT, a Subject Index of an extensive character; and a large number of entries have been carefully Annotated, either Bibliographically or Historically, and Collations of many of the books have also been given.

An INDEX to the first Ten Volumes of BOOK PRICES CURRENT is preparing. The names of intending subscribers should be sent to the Publisher without delay.

Now ready, in crown 4to. tastefully printed, handsomely bound in Roxburghe, with gilt top, 7*s.* 6*d.* post free.

THE VOLUME OF THE ANTIQUARY FOR 1896.

The ANTIQUARY is an illustrated Magazine devoted to the Study of the Past, and the Volume for 1896 contains, in addition to other valuable Articles, numerous Papers on Antiquarian Subjects and Records of Proceedings of the Archæological Societies.

A Set of Volumes of the ANTIQUARY.

The Volumes of the ANTIQUARY furnish a repertory of useful and interesting information to the Antiquary and Student. They fully record the Proceedings of the London and Provincial Antiquarian Societies during the years represented, contain a vast Collection of Articles on a great variety of subjects connected with English and Foreign Antiquarian Study by writers of eminence, and present a valuable record of Antiquarian Intelligence for the period they cover. Very few perfect sets are left.

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster-row, London.

WORKS BY THE LATE

PROF. HY. DRUMMOND F.R.S.E.

5th Edition, completing 22,000.

Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

THE LOWELL LECTURES ON THE ASCENT OF MAN.

"In none of his works is Mr. Drummond's literary skill more strikingly manifested. The style has even more of the writer's wonted grace and facility, and his command of analogy has never been employed with better effect, and productive of more varied and suggestive illustrations."—Saturday Review.

32nd Edition, completing 119,000.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

NATURAL LAW IN THE SPIRITUAL WORLD.

"One of the most impressive and suggestive books on religion that we have read for a long time. Indeed, with the exception of Dr. Mozley's 'University Sermons,' we can recall no book of our time which showed such a power of restating the moral and practical truths of religion so as to make them take fresh hold of the mind and vividly impress the imagination."—Spectator.

7th Edition, completing 34,000.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

TROPICAL AFRICA.

"Professor Drummond is a clear and accurate observer, and as he has had a sound scientific training, and has a real interest in the human side of African life, he is able to present us with pictures of a distinctness and originality not often met with in books of African travel."—Times.

PROFESSOR DRUMMOND'S BOOKLETS.

White leatherette, 1*s.*; cloth, gilt edges, 2*s.* 6*d.*

330th Thousand.

THE GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD.

130th Thousand.

PAX VOBISCUM.

89th Thousand.

THE CHANGED LIFE.

80th Thousand.

THE PROGRAMME OF CHRISTIANITY.

60th Thousand.

THE CITY WITHOUT A CHURCH.

FOR BOYS.

3rd Edition.

Fancy boards, 1*s.* 6*d.*; leather padded, 2*s.* 6*d.*

BAXTER'S SECOND INNINGS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

THE GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD, and other Addresses.

Containing:—The Greatest Thing in the World—The Programme of Christianity—The City without a Church—The Changed Life—Pax Vobiscum.

READY NEXT WEEK, crown 8vo. buckram, 5*s.*

4th Edition, completing 40,000.

MARGARET OGILVY.

By her Son, J. M. BARRIE.

With Etched Portrait by Manesse.

"In 'Margaret Ogilvy' everything has been set down, nothing is clouded, nothing concealed, nothing exaggerated....The record is without a jarring passage, and so real is the presentiment that it is hard to believe that it is not fiction."—Academy.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

In buckram, gilt top, crown 8vo. 6*s.* each.

15th Edition.

A WINDOW IN THRUMS.

7th Edition.

MY LADY NICOTINE.

10th Edition.

AULD LICHT IDYLLS.

10th Edition.

WHEN A MAN'S SINGLE.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

KATE CARNEGIE AND THOSE MINISTERS.

By IAN MACLAREN.

"Ian Maclaren has given us another delightful book, full of the same marvellous insight into character, and touching with even greater power the twin spring of laughter and tears."—Literary World.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6*s.*

11th Edition, completing 80,000.

BESIDE THE BONNIE BRIER BUSH.

Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6*s.*

4th Edition, completing 60,000.

THE DAYS OF AULD LANG SYNE.

London: HODDER & STOUGHTON, 27, Paternoster-row, E.C.

DAVID DOUGLAS'S LIST.

Just published, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 6*s.*

BY-WAYS OF HISTORY:

Studies in the Social Life and Rural Economy of the Olden Time.

By JAMES COLVILLE, M.A. D.Sc.,

Examiner in History, University of Glasgow.

Contents.—Lowland Scotland in the Time of Burns—An Antiquarian Ramble in Kintyre—The Bruce and Bannockburn—The Complaynt of Scotlande—Scottish Trade in the Olden Time—A "Familar Autocrat"—The Scottish Tour in the Days of Charles I.—Scotland under the Roundheads—The Covenanter Abroad—A new Statistical Account of Scotland—Town Life in the Eighteenth Century.

Just published, in 1 vol. demy 8vo. price 10*s.* 6*d.* net.

THE LIFE AND LEGEND OF MICHAEL SCOT, 1175-1232.

By the Rev. J. WOOD BROWN, M.A.

"Supplies us for the first time with a fairly complete and authentic record of the life and works of Michael the Scot, pieced together with much labour from authorities mainly Italian, and executed with sufficient care to satisfy the demands of the student."—Daily Chronicle.

"A valuable as well as interesting contribution to our knowledge of the thought and science and superstitions of the early thirteenth century."—Scotsman.

This day is published, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 6*s.*

MR. HOWELLS'S NEW NOVEL.

THE LANDLORD at LION'S HEAD.

By WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS,

Author of 'A Woman's Reason,' 'A Foregone Conclusion,' &c.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

Lately published, in 1 vol. (forming one of David Douglas's Series of "American Authors"), price 1*s.* in paper, or 2*s.* in cloth.

IDYLS IN DRAB.

By WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS.

Mr. Howells handles his theme with that masterliness which makes him the first of living American novelists..... A pregnant and pleasing study."—Glasgow Herald.

At present being issued in Parts at intervals of from Four to Six Weeks, folio, 11 by 15 inches, price 10*s.* 6*d.* net each Part.

AMONG BRITISH BIRDS in THEIR NESTING HAUNTS.

Illustrated by the Camera.

By OSWIN A. J. LEE.

Parts I., II., and III. are now ready.

"It would not be easy to exaggerate the patience, enthusiasm, ingenuity, and hard work that must have been employed in securing the plates, which are the great feature of the work; but the results are such as to fully repay from both the naturalist's and the artist's point of view the pains and labour expended."—Scotsman.

"As photographic representations of natural objects it is difficult to imagine anything more beautiful than many of these reproductions."—Field.

In 1 vol. royal 8vo. price 30*s.*

HELIGOLAND AS AN ORNITHOLOGICAL OBSERVATORY.

The Result of Fifty Years' Experience.

By the late HEINRICH GÄTKE,

Honorary Member of the British Ornithologists' Union, &c.

Translated by RUDOLPH ROSENSTOCK, M.A.Oxon.

"A volume which will ever remain famous in the annals of ornithology."—Field.

"One of the most original, most remarkable, and most valuable books ever written about birds."—Auk, New York.

"The most fascinating and important contribution to our knowledge of the ever marvellous phenomena of migration that has yet appeared."—Daily News.

Edinburgh: DAVID DOUGLAS, 10, Castle-street.

London: SIMPKIN MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT & CO., LTD.

J. & A. CHURCHILL'S LIST.

BLOXAM'S CHEMISTRY, Inorganic and Organic. Eighth Edition. By JOHN MILLAR THOMSON and ARTHUR G. BLOXAM. With 281 Engravings. 8vo. 18*s.* 6*d.*

A MANUAL of BOTANY. By J. REYNOLDS GREEN, Sc.D. M.A. F.R.S. 2 vols. crown 8vo.

Vol. I. MORPHOLOGY and ANATOMY. 7*s.* 6*d.*
Vol. II. CLASSIFICATION and PHYSIOLOGY. 10*s.*

The MICROSCOPE and its REVELATIONS. By the late W. B. CARPENTER, M.D. F.R.S. Edited by the Rev. W. H. DALLINGER, LL.D. F.R.S. Seventh Edition. With 800 Engravings in the Text and 21 Plates. 8vo. cloth, 26*s.*; half-calf, 30*s.*

